County Does Want Hwy. 70 Upgrades

by DORIS CHERRY

Before a room packed with people at their July 19 meeting in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo, Lincoln County Commissioners adopted a new resolution that urges the state highway department to upgrade Highway 70 through the Hondo Valley to improve safety conditions, and have the design and project take into consideration the agricultural custom and culture of the area.

On July 2 county commissioners, at an emergency meeting held in Ruidoso, adopted a resolution demanding the state highway department call a halt to current construction on Highway 70 west of Roswell, until the highway department resolved the design issues for the improvements through the Hondo Valley. At that emergency meeting, valley residents were concerned the improvements would disrupt water flow to many of the valley acequias during construction and could harm the river. Also there were concerns about the proposed design that had no turn lanes, and insufficient shoulders.

The county commissioners sent their strongly worded resolution to the state highway department, state highway commission, and the state secretary of the highway and transportation department.

On July 16, county commissioners received a letter from Pete Rahn, highway department secretary, in which he expressed his appreciation in the county's interest in the highway, and their comments on the draft Environmental Impact Statement (EIS). "I am concerned, however, that the Commission's position may be based on erroneous information," Rahn wrote. He further wrote that he wanted the opportunity to provide the commission with additional information on concerns about the lack of shoulders and turn lanes, and potential impacts to the Rio Ruidoso, Rio Hondo and associated acequia system.

Rahn in his letter wrote the preferred four lane design is based on accepted design guidelines for rural highways from the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials design guidebook with information based on decades of field work and data. He stated that the turn lanes are being addressed as well as concerns for impacts to the river and acequias.

In published reports, a state highway commissioner said if the highway project is halted through the Hondo valley now, the improvements would most likely not happen for many years.

At the July 19 county commission meeting, county commissioners Ray Nunley and Leo Martinez asked for reconsideration of the resolution about the highway improvements. The meeting room was packed with many of the same valley residents who attended the emergency meeting, plus some additional residents.

Nunley said transportation and the ability to transport has made this nation. He reminded everyone of how Highway 70 west through the Mescalero Reservation at one time had been one of the most dangerous highways in the state. Now it is Highway 70 east to Riverside that has become dangerous. Nunley said an improved Highway 70 is vitally important to the thousands who use Highway 70. "There may be design flaws for the road improvements, but these do not outweigh the need for

SCULPTOR LUIS JIMINEZ who lives in Hondo implores the Lincoln County Commissioners at their July 19 meeting in their chambers in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo to be very involved with the Highway 70 improvement project, to make sure the concerns of residents of the Hondo Valley are addressed in the highway design. At the meeting commissioners rescinded a resolution they passed on July 2 that called for the state highway department to halt all construction on Highway 70 westward from Roswell. Commissioners adopted a new resolution expressing their support of upgrading Highway 70 due to safety issues, while requesting the highway department address issues of water quality and availability in the river and ditches and other design problems.

Carrizozo Police Officer Eddie O'Brien Resigns

by DORIS CHERRY

Carrizozo Police Department is on the hunt for a police officer.

On Friday, July 20, officer Eddie O'Brien left the force to relocate out of the county, said Carrizozo Police Chief Angelo I. Vega.

"O'Brien gave a proper two weeks notice," Vega said. "It was not a sudden thing."

Currently the town is advertising for another officer, and Vega said applications for the position can be obtained at town hall during regular business hours. He said there have been a few inquiries.

Vega wished O'Brien the best of luck in his new endeavors. "During his tenure, officer O'Brien displayed very good professionalism and treated everyone with great respect," Vega said. "But he needed a change of pace. I thank him for his time spent with the Carrizozo Police Department. I wish him well."

Vega said officer William Green continues to serve with the department.

This week Green and Vega were busy with two major cases.

On Monday, July 23, Green and Vega referred a 13 year old male juvenile to the juvenile probation office for assault and battery to a 60 year old man. And a criminal summons has been issued to the juvenile's mother Rose Kratochvil of Carrizozo on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

According to Vega, the incident began when a cat belonging the Kratochvil kept going through a dog door into an outbuilding workshop/office belonging to neighbor Ray McCreight. Unhappy that the cat had left its scent and mess in the building, McCreight caught the feline on July 21 and advised the neighbors

Hondo Clinic To Open Full Time On August 1

by DORIS CHERRY

Lincoln County Commissioners approved the first step in a lease/management agreement with the Hondo Valley Public Schools board of education and a sublease agreement with La Casa de Buena Salud to provide medical services to the Hondo Clinic.

At their July 19 meeting held in their chambers in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo, county commissioners approved their side of the two agreements which will be forwarded to the Hondo school board and the board of La Casa de Buena Salud (La Casa) for review and approval by members of those two boards.

The county had to lease the clinic to Hondo Schools, which the county commission had given to the Hondo Schools, then sublease the facility to La Casa, in order to legally provide hospital mill levy money for the clinic operation. Part of the agreement is how the county will provide the mill levy funds of $180,000 a year to be distributed at $15,000 a month to La Casa for its operations. The cost of the lease of the clinic from Hondo Schools to the county and the county's sublease to La Casa will be for $1 a year for each agreement.

Also at the request of the county attorney and county commissioner Leo Martinez, the county had solicited request for proposals (rfp). La Casa provided the only response to the rfp.

At the July 19 meeting Serefino Montano, director of La Casa, said their intent is to have a medical provider at the clinic eight safety," Nunley said. County commission chair Rex Wilson, from Ancho area on the west side of the county, said he thought the intent of the original resolution was to make sure the highway department considered the concerns of the valley residents. "The conception is we want to stop the improvements," Wilson said.

Martinez said that was why he had county attorney Alan Morel draft a new, more acceptable, resolution.

Martinez said they adopted the first resolution in reaction to the concerns voiced by the valley residents, without hearing from the other side.

County commissioner Bill Schwetzmenn agreed about the first resolution, that it was not their intent to not have the state rebuild the road, rather have those who will be impacted to be better informed and assured problems will be addressed. "If a spotted owl, or a bunch of old bones can make their bypass or stop a road, why can't humans be considered?" Schwetzmenn commented.

County commissioners then heard from state highway officials, and mayor of Red River Craig Swaggerty who said his community suffered from highway improvements for years, but now is finding the upgrade to be an economic boost.

Max Valerio, for state highway secretary Pete Rahn, said the Highway 70 improvement project has been identified as a top candidate for a "design build" project, the first to be done as such in the state. "We are extremely committed to doing it all right," Valerio said. He said that concerns about the impacts to the area from the highway improvements can be addressed in the contract. "All the concerns about the acequias, access, utilities and cultural resources must be spelled out carefully in the contract," Valerio said. He said certain damages to property during the project might be covered by the project insurance, but would not include loss of business.

Wilson said the highway improvements in the valley will not impact retail businesses very much, rather will impact farms that might lose their water and a whole year's crop. Simpson said insurance is good until land owners with damages try to fight the big insurance companies.

Valerio said there was no intent for the project to disrupt water during drought. Also with Valerio was the project environmental consultant Dave Pennington, and Luis Alba, highway department project team leader. Alba said the design-build process is primarily a procurement process that allows the state to hire the contractor who will coordinate with the designer to design and construct the project. As for having the project only 30 percent designed at this point, Alba said once the EIS is approved by the state highway commission and becomes a record of decision, then the design will be completed.

Wilson asked about the commission's concerns about consultation with the state engineer's office about the ditches and the cultural affairs office.

Pennington said they have been in contact with the offices from the start. Nothing in the state law prohibits the reconstruction and moving of ditches newer than 1851.

After considerable discussion about concerns for the highway, county commissioner Rick Simpson from the valley said most in the valley see the need for a better highway, but "they don't like to be steam rolled over."

County commissioners then brought in State Police Captain John Sena who told of traffic accidents on Highway 70. He said because of the many accidents and fatalities on Highway 70, the stretch from Roswell to Ruidoso has been dedicated as an area of primary concern for state police.

Earlier in the discussion, Martinez quoted highway statistics. He said on the two lane area of Highway 70 from Ruidoso Downs to the Chaves County line, there were 27 accidents from January 2001 to June. Of them 18 had no injuries, six were major accidents with injuries and three fatalities. Of those accidents, 19 were single vehicle and eight two vehicle. Of the accidents, nine involved residents and 19 involved nonresidents. One of the 27 was alcohol related. In that time, state police issued 269 speeding citations and 106 citations for other traffic related offenses such as following too close, etc.

In same time period, in the four lane portion of Highway 70 from the Mescalero Reservation (near Ruidoso) to Tularosa, there were 19 accidents. Of that 12 had no injuries, and seven with injuries. Seven involved residents and 12 involved nonresidents. There were three alcohol related accidents. State police issued 187 speeding citations and 62 other citations for traffic related offenses.

Sena said peak traffic season is May to September, primarily weekend Texas visitors.

County manager Tom Stewart said on July 9, a meeting was held with state highway department officials and several residents, including members of the newly formed Valley Community Preservation Committee (VCPC).

Debbie Bower, public relations officer with the state highway department, said Stewart had invited her to the July 9 meeting to help do outreach for the highway department. She said when the first scoping meetings were being held, there was not much interest in a citizens advisory committee. But at the July 9 meeting at Silver Dollar Restaurant in Tinnie, about 35 people came.

Some of the valley residents who spoke were Luis Jimenez from Hondo who said the design and construction could destroy the riparian area of the river near his home and studio, and run off from the highly traveled roadway would further pollute shallow wells.

Ira Mulligan of Glencoe said the difference in the figures from state police was the four lane road was divided, and the proposed design in the Hondo valley is not.

Reginald Richey, member of the VCPC, said there was no logic in putting a widened road in the only irrigated bottom flat land in the county that sells for more than $15,000 an acre. "You want to pave over our most precious commodity because the road there is presently unsafe," Richey said. "Highway 70 was designed by the state highway department and now it's being redesigned by the highway department and they say if we don't like it, they'll take their money and we won't see any improvements in 25 years. And we're to feel confident."

"Design-build works good for the client because the architect is on the job, but not when you have a difficult project like this," Richey continued. "This is a recipe for trouble."

Louise Alvarado from Glencoe got emotional when she spoke about the highway department's lack of concern for the local people. She said many of the older residents never express their concerns. "My culture has been in the valley for a long time," she said. Alvarado said she thought the highway needed better speed enforcement.

Michael Hurd from San Patricio was concerned that secondary routes were being eliminated from the design, and he also asked that the project be given more time in the design phase.

Jackie Powell was concerned about the impacts to the ditches and water in the river. "There just isn't enough water in New Mexico, it's alarming to build roads and infringe on the water," she said.

Patsy Sanchez, county planning officer, said she was concerned about the additional Mexican trucks under the NAFTA having insurance. She also wanted traffic to be slowed, especially through Hondo. She said in her opinion Highway 54 by Oscura (south of Carrizozo) to be one of the most dangerous in the county. However, improvements to that highway will not be done, because the funding was put into Highway 70.

After more discussion about concerns and how many hearings the highway department has had county commissioners voted on a motion to retain the resolution that calls for a halt to the upgrade project. It failed with a tie of Nunley and Martinez voting no and Wilson and Simpson voting yes. County commissioner Bill Schwetzmenn had left the meeting before the discussion.

Martinez made the motion to accept the newer, more acceptable resolution that states the commission supports upgrades to Highway 70, but asks that all local issues be addressed. All commissioners voted unanimously for the resolution.

Of the accidents, nine involved residents and 19 involved nonresidents. One of the 27 was alcohol related. In that time, state police issued 269 speeding citations and 106 citations for other traffic related offenses such as following too close, etc.

In same time period, in the four lane portion of Highway 70 from the Mescalero Reservation (near Ruidoso) to Tularosa, there were 19 accidents. Of that 12 had no injuries, and seven with injuries. Seven involved residents and 12 involved nonresidents. There were three alcohol related accidents. State police issued 187 speeding citations and 62 other citations for traffic related offenses.

Sena said peak traffic season is May to September, primarily weekend Texas visitors.

County manager Tom Stewart said on July 9, a meeting was held with state highway department officials and several residents, including members of the newly formed Valley Community Preservation Committee (VCPC).

Debbie Bower, public relations officer with the state highway department, said Stewart had invited her to the July 9 meeting to help do outreach for the highway department. She said when the first scoping meetings were being held, there was not much interest in a citizens advisory committee. But at the July 9 meeting at Silver Dollar Restaurant in Tinnie, about 35 people came.

Some of the valley residents who spoke were Luis Jimenez from Hondo who said the design and construction could destroy the riparian area of the river near his home and studio, and run off from the highly traveled roadway would further pollute shallow wells.

Ira Mulligan of Glencoe said the difference in the figures from state police was the four lane road was divided, and the proposed design in the Hondo valley is not.

Reginald Richey, member of the VCPC, said there was no logic in putting a widened road in the only irrigated bottom flat land in the county that sells for more than $15,000 an acre. "You want to pave over our most precious commodity because the road there is presently unsafe," Richey said. "Highway 70 was designed by the state highway department and now it's being redesigned by the highway department and they say if we don't like it, they'll take their money and we won't see any improvements in 25 years. And we're to feel confident."

"Design-build works good for the client because the architect is on the job, but not when you have a difficult project like this," Richey continued. "This is a recipe for trouble."

Louise Alvarado from Glencoe got emotional when she spoke about the highway department's lack of concern for the local people. She said many of the older residents never express their concerns. "My culture has been in the valley for a long time," she said. Alvarado said she thought the highway needed better speed enforcement.

Michael Hurd from San Patricio was concerned that secondary routes were being eliminated from the design, and he also asked that the project be given more time in the design phase.

Jackie Powell was concerned about the impacts to the ditches and water in the river. "There just isn't enough water in New Mexico, it's alarming to build roads and infringe on the water," she said.

Patsy Sanchez, county planning officer, said she was concerned about the additional Mexican trucks under the NAFTA having insurance. She also wanted traffic to be slowed, especially through Hondo. She said in her opinion Highway 54 by Oscura (south of Carrizozo) to be one of the most dangerous in the county. However, improvements to that highway will not be done, because the funding was put into Highway 70.

After more discussion about concerns and how many hearings the highway department has had county commissioners voted on a motion to retain the resolution that calls for a halt to the upgrade project. It failed with a tie of Nunley and Martinez voting no and Wilson and Simpson voting yes. County commissioner Bill Schwetzmenn had left the meeting before the discussion.

Martinez made the motion to accept the newer, more acceptable resolution that states the commission supports upgrades to Highway 70, but asks that all local issues be addressed. All commissioners voted unanimously for the resolution.

Jake Brakes Will Not Be Allowed In Lincoln County

by Doris Cherry

By late August, Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputies will have authority to cite large trucks that use their engine "Jake brakes" on highways in Lincoln County.

Due to numerous complaints about the noise of large trucks using their engine "Jake brakes" on highways in Lincoln County, the Lincoln County Commissioners adopted an ordinance prohibiting the use of the device during their meeting July 19 in their chambers in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo.

Although county commissioners adopted the ordinance unanimously after they heard from several citizens and owners of RV parks who did not like the noise of the brakes, county commissioner Rick Simpson, who has driven professionally, voted in favor of the ordinance with "reservations." Simpson said the trucks can slow down without the use of the Jake brakes, but sometimes Jake brakes can be a safety factor.

When first presented by the county attorney, the proposed ordinance was to be limited to one location on Highway 70 west coming in from the Mesquero Apache Reservation, and in the Lincoln Historic District on Highway 380. But Simpson said several valley residents during a recent highway improvement meeting said it would be nice to prohibit the Jake brakes all the way through Hondo Valley. Simpson suggested all of Highway 70 be included in the prohibition.

Several citizens and business owners also wanted the Jake brake ban. Edwin Calley, owner of an RV park on Highway 70 on the edge of Ruidoso supported the ordinance. Ann Templeton, a Hondo valley resident, said she is continually disturbed by the Jake brake noise on Highway 70. Gary Wells owner of an RV and camp park on Highway 37 at the corner to the Bonito Lake turnoff, wanted a prohibition at that location. Charles Reed of San Patricio also agreed on the need for a Jake brake ban on Highway 70.

Maury St. John of Cedar Creek said she was told the Jake brake was more of a convenience than a safety factor.

Simpson explained that the Jacob Engine Brake works on the truck's engine exhaust to help reduce wear on the primary brakes. "It can keep the brakes from overheating on a long downhill," Simpson said. "But Highway 70 isn't like coming off the Cloudcroft mountain (which is very steep grade)."

Other citizens wanted the Jake brake ban on Highway 70 east of Ruidoso Downs, on the Airport Drive and all of Gavilan Canyon Road. Finally county commissioner Bill Schwettmann suggested the ordinance prohibit the use of Jake brakes county wide.

Lincoln County Sheriff Tom Sullivan said the county will have to put up lots of signs about the ban. He said the sheriff's office gets lots of complaints about the Jake brake noise, and if the commission adopts the ordinance his officers will enforce it. "I will appeal to the state police to assist us with this also," Sullivan added.

Simpson said he thought the county wide ban was "overkill" because there are some areas where use of the Jake brake is a safety issue.

County commission chair Rex Wilson said the enforcement of the ordinance would have to be done with "common sense."

Ordinance not in effect yet

By Ruth Hammond

The Town of Carrizozo will consider a new mobile home ordinance starting with a public hearing during the regular town council meeting Tuesday, August 14. Apparently the town does not at this time have a mobile home ordinance, even though town officials and employees are quoting from some as yet unapproved ordinance and causing hardships for some people. The new ordinance, if approved after the public hearing, defines manufactured homes, lists several restrictions and the penalty for not complying. Restrictions include: it is unlawful to own, possess, maintain, keep, reside in or use any Manufactured Home within the Town limits except in compliance with the town ordinance.

Evidently the town assumes everyone can afford to pay $85,000.00 or more for a manufactured or mobile home because all mobiles will be required to meet HUD Title 2 requirements. The proposed ordinance also states that the bottom of the exterior edge of all dwellings and accessory buildings shall be skirted with masonry, metal, brick, block or plastic so that undercarriage is completely hidden from view. Apparently the town objects to wood being used for skirting. The town will also require all hitches and running gear (wheels) to be removed or hidden. (At this time the town is requiring that tongues of trailers be completely removed and that axles be removed, NOT hidden.)

Rich people may be able to afford new homes that cost $85,000.00 or more but the wording in the town's proposed ordinance could easily keep people from moving their older mobiles into town. And many of these older mobiles are well built and are paid for and have been homes for people for years. These older homes should not be excluded just because they don't meet the standards the town council wants. Yes, they should be neat, but not necessarily new.

Reasonable people know that the proposed ordinance is not that difficult to understand, but it is difficult to understand why the town is trying to enforce ordinances that are not in effect. The town required one person to skirt his mobile before the water tap would be installed. The town then said the water would be turned on Monday but that it would be turned off Wednesday. If the skirting AND the mobile were not painted by Wednesday. The proposed ordinance says nothing about utilities being withheld until after skirting is installed and painted to suit town officials.

Obviously some town officials are enforcing different rules for different people, even if the town does NOT have a list of the rules they are trying to enforce. Why does one person have to put up skirting before getting water turned on and then having to take down the skirting to connect the water? Why does one person have to paint skirting before being able to obtain utilities? Is this harassment or not?

Reasonable people know that the water, electricity, and sewer should be put in before skirting goes up. One man has had to put skirting up five times and take it down each time to do work hooking up utilities for fear of having his water shut off, and threats of breaking the law. Maybe it is time for actual rules to be enforced instead of bogus rules.

Paint now, wash later

THE GOOD NEWS IS — THE PRESIDENT REALLY WILL CREATE THOUSANDS OF NEW JOBS...

THE BAD NEWS IS — THEY'LL ALL BE IN THE BUREAU-CRACY!

SANTA FE

INSIDE THE CAPITOL

SANTA FE - Why are cities banning cell phone use and not other inappropriate driver behavior? Santa Fe quickly followed the trend of Eastern cities that have made it unlawful to talk on a cell phone while driving. But why single out cell phones?

Why don't we pass a law that drivers can't light a cigarette, tune their radio, apply make-up, read a newspaper, eat a hamburger, turn around and chat with rear-seat passengers or pick their nose while they drive? Aren't police talking on their radios just as dangerous as someone on a cell phone? What about truckers and their CBs? Is this some sort of high-tech discrimination?

Some maintain that is the case, but I would argue strongly that cell phone users are discriminated against because they are some of the most irritating people on the planet. I'm not talking about everyone, of course. I use a cell phone occasionally and I'm not irritating.

It's all those idiots who carry on inane conversations at the top of their lungs. They intrude on my space in restaurants, shopping malls or just walking down the street. And their conversations never amount to a hill of beans. They usually go something like this: "Oh, nothing much. I'm at the mall and wondered what you're doing."

Even worse are the guys who try to sound as though they are having important conversations by giving orders in a very loud voice. And then there are the cell phones that go off in theaters, church or a quiet restaurant.

State lawmakers take a very narrow view of such things. They have signs warning lobbyists to turn off their cell phones and pagers before entering a hearing room or the gallery of either house. And those rules are obeyed. Lawmakers hold lobbyists' fate in their hands.

So if you visit the Capitol during a Legislative session, you will see people standing outside in the cold with a cell phone to their ear. Those are lobbyists, contacting their clients about the latest developments. Those folks have a reason to be using their cell phones. And cell phones are a great invention for that profession.

The Capitol has pay phones, some strategically placed outside the House and Senate galleries. But the Capitol's phones aren't private and sometimes calls to clients need to be confidential. So lobbyists will step out into the Santa Fe winter. In the old Capitol Building, which the Legislature vacated in 1987, lawmakers had to take a walk outside in order to have a private conversation, because only the top committee chairmen had offices. So they understand that need for privacy.

Are drivers distracted by cell phone use? Certainly. Most of us have nearly been run over by a driver with a cell phone in his or her ear. But the primary cause of motor vehicle accidents is reported to be driver distraction caused by police cars, fires, weather or traffic accidents along the road.

I don't own a cell phone because I don't particularly like them, but I don't think we need a law against talking and driving. A driver can be just as distracted by the passenger next to him as by someone on the phone. And judging by the looks of things, most drivers use only one hand to drive anyway.

There are other reasons not to have laws against drivers using cell ones. We have too few police and too much for them to do already. We need them watching out for the big stuff and not seat belts, cell ones and jaywalking. If it really were so important to protect us from ourselves, we should outlaw all alcohol and tobacco, all mountain climbing and bungee jumping and all auto racing. But somehow we think we can draw a line between acceptable and unacceptable hazardous behavior.

We have too many laws already restricting our rights. We need fewer laws and more personal responsibility for the results of our irresponsible actions.

Citizens & Employees Want Clinic Under County Control

by DORIS CHERRY

Despite pleas from citizens and the employees of the Carrizozo Health Clinic to put the clinic under county control, Lincoln County Commissioners made no commitment.

During their July 19 meeting in packed commission chambers in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo, county commissioners sent the clinic staff away with instructions to come back again, with real operational costs and figures. "Let's think this over," concluded commission chairman Rex Wilson after an hour long discussion about the clinic. He wanted a financial breakdown for the clinic operations under county control, in order to compare it with any possible management proposals submitted in response to a request for proposals (rfp).

But a major unresolved issue is if the county assumes operation and payroll of the Carrizozo clinic, who would bear the liability.

Discussions about the management of the Carrizozo Clinic started when the county was notified by the state attorney general's office the county had to issue an rfp to operate the Carrizozo and Corona clinics, instead of allowing Presbyterian Healthcare Services (PHS) to operate the clinics under the Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC) umbrella. For months county attorney Alan Morel listed the rfp on the meeting agenda and each time commissioners delayed any action on soliciting proposals.

In April, clinic staff approached the county commission about taking them over as county employees. The reason was to keep the current staff, instead of having to go through a contract renewal process every four years.

Clinic staff were county employees until 1990. The county contracted the management of the clinic to Presbyterian Healthcare Services (PHS), which also operates Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso. Both the clinic and hospital are county owned.

When the staff first approached the county commissioners, they were instructed to develop a non-profit group, and to come back with some hard figures about the clinic operations in order to determine the costs for the county to operate the clinics.

At the Thursday, July 19 meeting, clinic dentist Dr. Dale Goad, said the packet the clinic staff presented to the county commission was asking the county to take over the staff as county employees. "So we can get out of the rfp and maintain our present staff, and allow us to do our jobs," Goad said.

"We believe we can run and maintain the clinic at no expense to the county, with mill levy support proceeds kept here and Corona," Goad added.

Such an arrangement would require the county to develop a new department within the county general fund. All proceeds from the clinic would go into the general fund from which the commission would allocate salaries and other costs to operate the clinic, said county manager Tom Stewart. "And we (the county) would be in charge," he added. There was some question whether the professional medical staff would be county employees or operate on a contract with the county.

As for billing, the clinic has its own billing system and software and bills for services at the clinic are sent by the clinic, Goad said and LCMC administrator Jim Gibson confirmed.

County commissioner Leo Martinez said he talked with clinic physician's assistant Ernie Gonzales and was concerned for their situation. "I think they do a great job," Martinez said of the clinic staff. "But in my opinion the county should not go into the medical business. Exactly what we should be doing is encouraging them to become non-profit to contract with the county."

Martinez asked Goad and Gonzales if they had looked into getting a nonprofit status. Both said they had not had time for that or even getting the entire staff together to discuss business options.

Stewart also said the staff on its own would not have financial ability to respond to an rfp.

Wilson said one of the detriments to the rfp is it creates a lack of stability for the providers.

Gonzales said all proceeds from the clinic go to PHS. "We've lost that income to the county," he added. Gonzales said the clinic personnel is concerned because they have heard that PHS plans to cut salaries and staff, but then they have been told that this will not happen.

Gibson said nothing is sure now since no rfp has been issued for the operation of the clinic. Under the current contract, PHS manages the clinic at its risk. Last year the clinic lost $36,000, Gibson said. And in the six months of this year, the clinic has lost $31,000. Gibson also said PHS does not charge a management fee.

Morel said all concerns and questions about the management will be addressed contractually.

Dr. Goad said in the years he was been at the clinic, every time the clinic went to rfp he would lose several thousands of dollars in retirement. If the staff goes with the county, it would no longer have the rfp's every four years hanging over them at all times.

Wilson said Lincoln was a unique county, because there are not many counties left that run their own clinic, or support a clinic. Wilson said the hospital mill levy which voters approved for the clinic helps maintain the personalized care at the clinic. However he said the county commission was not at a point to decide what to do with the clinic management.

Gonzales said it has been hard to get a medical staff to come to the clinic and stay.

"Does Carrizozo know how lucky it is?" asked county commissioner Ray Nunley.

To that the audience responded, "Yes we do!"

CONCERNED STAFF. Carrizozo Health Clinic Staff gathered at the Lincoln County Commission meeting on July 18 in the commission chambers in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo. The clinic staff are seeking to become county employees, as they were in 1990 before the county privatized the operation of the clinic. Even though staff said they would like to become county employees to assure they can keep the current people, commissioners made no commitment. Commissioner Leo Martinez said he did not think the county should get into the health care business and referred the staff to the La Casa de Buena Salud, Inc. for help in establishing a nonprofit organization.

July 9, 1951 at Christ's Church Christian.

Their son Greg was born in 1954 and daughter Roxane in 1956.

State Magistrate Judge. He is presently serving the State in the position of Magistrate Judge Pro-Temp.

Juanita worked at First National Bank, the Telephone Co., the City of Albuquerque, and Trans World Airlines before moving to the Ruidoso area. Jim and Juanita owned and operated a country store on the Bonito Lake Rd. They moved to Santa Fe in 1995 to care for Jim's mother.

Ruidoso Ordinance To Allow Police To Take Drunks Home

by Doris Cherry

Ruidoso Village Council at its meeting July 10, approved an ordinance that will allow Ruidoso police to deal with individuals under the influence of alcohol or other substances without having to jail them.

On a 5-1 vote, with councilor Ron Anderson voting no, councilors adopted the ordinance that amends Article II, Offenses Against Public Order and Safety Section 34 Disorderly Conduct, prohibiting public intoxication. During the hearing, Ruidoso Police Chief Lanny Maddox said the intent of the ordinance was to give police a way to deal with intoxicated individuals or those under the influence of substances without having to incarcerate these individuals. Also the ordinance would provide a means to criminally cite these individuals.

Maddox said the ordinance would provide cost savings to the village because the police department would not have to transport them to the county jail, or house them in what is currently considered a "non-arrest protective custody."

Councilor Bill Chance asked under what circumstances would an individual be picked up, or cited under the new ordinance.

Maddox said the parameters of the amendment were the same as the state laws for detoxing, which include smell, disturbing the peace and quiet of the public, field sobriety testing or other means of determination.

Mayor Robert Donaldson said the only difference with the new ordinance was the ability for the police to cite an individual, then turn them over to someone else.

Councilor Anderson asked if the state statutes require police to pick up an individual who was intoxicated or under the influence without filing charges or giving the individual a ticket.

Maddox said if an officer is confronted, the officer is mandated to pick up the individual. The proposed ordinance provides a means to cite an individual as a deterrent.

Anderson wanted a provision in the ordinance to provide warnings for first time offenders. Maddox said police officers have the discretion to issue a citation or warning.

There were no comments from the audience. With no input, Chance made the motion to adopt the ordinance as presented, Councilor Bob Sterchi seconded the motion. Councilors Chance, Sterchi, Frank Cummins, Linda Flack and Leon Eggleston voted yes, Anderson voted no.

Councilors also held an extensive discussion on a resolution that identified and endorsed options from the Master Transportation Plan for Sudderth Drive. Comments from the public included a need for a bypass around the midtown area of Sudderth drive because the area is very congested, especially in the summer.

Joan Zagone, director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, expressed concerns that the proposed plans for Sudderth Drive were not protecting the goals of the Midtown Business Alliance. She said every survey or study done about the midtown area showed the midtown area should be a pedestrian tourist attraction. She said there is a preference for a bypass to that area. Zagone suggested the village monitor growth in the area by limiting density and preserving green space.

Resident Karon Petty agreed with Zagone and added that in the past land sales were canceled because of possible condemnation of land for a midtown bypass. She wanted something in writing about the midtown plans to be provided to realtors.

After extensive discussion, councilors adopted the resolution as presented, and voted to hold a public hearing to repeal the village Transportation Master Plan ordinance, and re-adopt it by resolution. All councilors vote in favor of the resolution that provides five options for the midtown area.

Councilors also approved the low bid of $664,829.45 with an $109,400 alternate for the Phase V Waterline Replacement Project to New Mexico Underground Contractors, Inc. of Albuquerque. There were four bids submitted. Phase V involves installation of 5,760 feet of eight inch waterline on Grindstone Resort Drive; 1,280 feet of six inch waterline on Barcus Road which will get two inches of asphalt overlay on the existing roadway; 400 feet of six inch waterline on Cliff Court with an asphalt overlay; 2,300 feet of six inch waterline on Swallow Drive with the asphalt overlay; 2,380 feet of six inch waterline on Mockingbird Lane plus the asphalt overlay; 500 feet of six inch waterline on Raven Place plus the asphalt overlay; 1,370 feet of six inch waterline on Skyvue Drive with the overlay on the road.

White Oaks and Jicarilla News

by Willa Lee Adkins

Well, the wedding bells were ringing loudly this last weekend, here in White Oaks. With two weddings -- both held at the Old School House Museum.

The betrothal of Daisy Chapman to Ben Davenport was held on Friday night and the betrothal of Sarah Chapman to David Carter was held on Saturday night. Combining the reception and dance with the annual family reunion of the Leslie family made for a lively weekend here in our small community.

My neighbors, the Thomases have been riding in their buggy, being pulled by their new Amish bred and trained horse. They look good as they go up and down White Oaks Ave., with the good looking four year old horse pulling them along, with "Ol Dog" riding happily in the back of the buggy.

Point of Interest: I have an 1870 census for all of Lincoln County, it is broke down into precincts and specifies Fort Stanton separately.

Remembering that in 1870 Lincoln County was greatly larger than it is today. I don't have a list of where the specific precincts were for this census, the precincts change periodically so I have to research them some more. The approximate population was 1,685. I will give more information in my next article.

If you have anything of interest or non-interest call me at 505-648-0056.

C'zozo Police Officer

the 13 year old came to the store and assaulted McCreight while he was in front of the store.

Vega said the incident occurred nearly in front of the police station and he intervened immediately. "But the assault had already occurred and the victim was scared and upset," Vega said. McCreight was not injured.

After consulting with the Assistant District Attorney, Vega referred the juvenile who was taken into custody by juvenile authorities for assault and battery charge, and a summons was issued in magistrate court on the charge of contributing to delinquency of a minor.

On the following day, Tuesday, July 24, Carrizozo police arrested Deborah D. Schoenwal, 39, from the 600 Block of D. Ave. on a child abandonment charge. Vega said his department received information on Monday that a 12 year old female was left without parental care or control for about 24 hours. Officer Green responded to the report and verified the information. Vega said Green then reported the incident to him and Assistant District Attorney Ken Wilson that same day. Vega contacted the Children Youth and Families protective services to arrange proper care for the child. Wilson approved a criminal complaint against the mother and an arrest warrant was signed and issued by magistrate judge Bill Butts.

Bond was set at $5,000 for Schoenwal who was booked into the Lincoln County Detention incident.

State Lifts Fire Restrictions

Because the recent precipitation has reduced the fire danger, the New Mexico Energy, Minerals and Natural Resources Department on July 20 lifted the fire restrictions imposed on June 14 for non-federal, non-municipal lands in Lincoln County and other counties within New Mexico.

Open fires are now permitted. However, to conduct a controlled burn a permit is required from the county and the state environment department.

Club Plans Car Show In Ruidoso

Fine Top Rod and Custom Auto Club met on July 7 to begin plans for the indoor car show September 21 and 22 in Ruidoso.

The fall show is the club's second major project. The club also sponsors the summer outdoor rod and car show both in Ruidoso.

Purpose of the local club is to promote interest in and knowledge of street rods, custom cars and antique automobiles. "It is fun and a camaraderie which draws many of the members," said club president Doug Babcock in a press release.

The group meets at 7 p.m. the second Wednesday of each month at the Texas-New Mexico Power Company office on Mechem Drive.

Anyone interested in hot rods, custom cars, or antique automobiles is invited to call 338-8451 for more information.

Ungarro suggested the clinic go under an independent authority, owned by the county, but run separate from the county. "We have a fantastic staff, we need to keep them. Running themselves is the key," Ungarro said.

When Wilson said the next step is to look into a special hospital district, Gibson said it can be done, but the central issue is who would be at risk for loss and liability. Wilson said it appeared they needed to go to rfp to see options in "black and white."

Dr. Luise Adenaul, retired physician who recently moved to the Nogal area, said she was willing to financially stand behind the clinic staff on a proposal.

"Another resident suggested the county seek grants for the clinic.

Kathy Perez, Corona village clerk, said she wrote a successfully funded Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) for a Corona clinic. "We would like the clinic staff to go back to the county," Perez said. "We depend on Ernie for advance care. We would like the county commission to research all avenues."

Corona area resident Jerry Rasak said by parceling out the management of the clinic every four years, staff may leave. "No one can say why the clinic went under private contract in 1990," Rasak said. "Next you'll be saying let's farm out the sheriff's department."

"It is your responsibility to support the citizens and crew who understand the problems in our part of the county," Rasak said to commissioners. "Put the staff back under county control!"

Mitzi Smith, a 19 year Corona resident and an EMT for three years, said the clinic on Tuesdays in Corona is usually the only medical care some Corona people get. "Ernie is the person who takes care of us," Smith said. "We need county support for the Corona clinic. No one knows where we are. We are people with ideas and thoughts and needs. It's rural America and we need your support. Our tax dollars belong to the county too and we want the people of Corona to be heard too!"

Martinez said the county has the mill levy to care for the Corona clinic.

"What we have here in the clinic cannot be bought," said Oscurro resident Jerry Carroll. "We have people who want to be here. We cannot neglect what we have with impunity. The county cannot afford to lose what we have in Carrizozo Clinic. This county should reach out and keep what we have!" The crowd applauded Carroll after his statement.

After more discussion about pay scales Wilson said the commission needs budget breakdowns for the clinic. He said the commission is not at a point to decide what to do for the staff. Nunley said they need better numbers from someone professional. Martinez wanted a workshop with clinic staff to work on these issues.

Carrizozo resident Arden Burd asked the commission to establish a committee to help the clinic staff work on a business plan and non-profit status.

Seferino Montano, executive director of La Casa de Buena Salud (La Casa) that operates the Hondo Clinic, was at the meeting for a different agenda item on the Hondo clinic. Martinez asked if Montano's group could help the Carrizozo clinic "as an umbrella" if the management goes to rfp.

Montano said he had talked with the Carrizozo Clinic staff about organizing a nonprofit group, but the clinic staff needs the financial operational figures from LCMC to make some business determinations. Montano did say that in talking with the staff he saw how it could be better to be county employees in terms of benefits and employment security.

Montano said there is a possibility of supporting the Carrizozo/Corona clinics with a special hospital district, which requires state legislative approval and a favorable election of the Carrizozo-Corona area voters. "With a community owned clinic you can be on your own, because county commissions change and so does their level of support," Montano said to the staff.

Gonzales said the special district option was worth looking at, Wilson said it should be given thought. Nunley thought both sides to the management issue need to discuss the options.

Stewart suggested said the clinic does have a Carrizozo Health Clinic Board, appointed by the LCMC hospital board. But clinic board president Joan Means said the clinic board is strictly advisory.

Once again the commission put off any decision on the clinic staffing. "Let us think it over," Wilson concluded.
