planning process. Nunley said he wanted to give more time to give property owners notice. Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce executive director Brad Treptow asked how long it will take to adopt the new Comprehensive Master Plan. "30 to 45 days?" he asked. Village special projects director Cleatus Richards said in 1988 when the village did the first master plan it took five months of hearings before adoption. "If we start in July," Richards said. "I can't guess when it will be done."

Mayor Leon Eggleston said he went through the process with Richards and it took a long time. At that time Eggleston was a village employee.

Treptow said the word moratorium has negative connotations for a community with lodgers tax collections at an all time high. "This could impact the village over time," Treptow added.

Treptow suggested another recourse than moratorium, such as directing staff to give greater scrutiny for all proposed constructions until the Comprehensive Master Plan is adopted.

Rennick said Ruidoso is predicted to grow to more than 13,000 people in 25 years. Without annexing more land will require redevelopment to accommodate such growth. Most likely that would occur in the older areas in the southern part of the village, Rennick added.

On Camelot there are 525 single family dwelling lots, he continued. If the village grows development will be on Camelot or outside village limits.

Rennick said even the extreme terrain on Camelot is zoned for MFD.

Hardeman said one issue the Comprehensive Master Plan will address is in-fill versus sprawl. "That is one of the justifications for this moratorium," he added. "In my opinion there is sprawl potential in Camelot and I would like to see us approach it cautiously."

Nunley said he thought the village was asking for trouble if it adopts the moratorium because the property in Camelot is buildable now. He suggested a moratorium on all new MFD village wide till the Comprehensive Master Plan is adopted.

Councilor Williams said he thought a moratorium was in keeping with the techniques of in-fill versus outgrow and he agreed to the need for a moratorium on MFD in Camelot until the Comprehensive Master Plan is accepted.

Debbie Haynes, representative for a major natural gas supplier, said the moratorium gives the feeling of no growth attitudes. "Don't take a no growth attitude, there are already a lot of things to keep in check," she added.

Hardeman disagreed the moratorium was a no growth attitude, as it has a limited time, and does not affect single family dwellings.

Haynes said it is the perception Ruidoso is "closed in" and that is not forward thinking.

Hardeman said forward thinking is with the moratorium.

Camelot property owner and MFD developer Mario Seboni said he was currently in the process to begin approval of a 24 unit MFD development in Camelot, and he wanted to do another 10 to 20 units in the next 12 months. "It is not realistic to think 1,000 units will be done in a year," Seboni added. "The economics are not there."

John Russell said as for water issues, he thought the high village impact fee would take the water issues off the table. He also said most of the MFD lots on the lower parts of Camelot are not developable because of the terrain.

Russell then suggested Byars excuse herself from voting on the moratorium because she owned a MFD development on Nob Hill. Byars said she owns a 20 MFD units with lodging on Nob Hill. Williams made a motion to allow Byars to vote on the moratorium, Shaw seconded and all councilors but Nunley voted to allow Byars to vote.

Collins again asked councilors to postpone the moratorium a month, then he asked that the moratorium exclude MFD developments already in the process.

Saboni said he would be ready in 30 days with all the requirements to make application for his MFD units in Camelot.

Eggleston responded that with the moratorium until the Comprehensive Master Plan is adopted, Saboni would be "out of business."

Richards said the MFD unit proposed by Saboni was approved for site development of condominiums several years ago, yet only four of the 28 approved were constructed. Eggleston asked how the moratorium would affect the old approved site plan.

"If it was approved prior to the 1988 adoption of the village zoning ordinance, the plans are still approved," Richards said.

With that comment, Hardeman called for a roll call vote on the resolution that set the moratorium in place.

President Wilson's War Speech

When our fleet was making ready for the open sea, after the declaration of war on Germany, President Wilson, in his capacity of commander-in-chief of the army and navy, gave instructions to assembled naval officers on that occasion. It was on board the flagship Pennsylvania that the president gave to naval men his ideas of naval warfare, and the words uttered on that occasion have never been given to the public until one day this week in Washington. Events following the delivery of these instructions reveals a precision that can now be appreciated by reading the statement then made. The following is the text:

"Admiral Mayo and gentlemen: I have not come here with malice pretense to make a speech, but I have come here to have a look at you and to say some things that perhaps may be intimately said and, even though the company is large, said in confidence.

"This is an unprecedented war and, therefore, it is a war in one sense for amateurs. Nobody ever before conducted a war like this and therefore nobody can pretend to be a professional in a war like this. Here are two great navies, not to speak of the others associated with us -- our own, and the British, outnumbering by a very great margin the navy to which we are opposed, and yet casting about for a way in which to use our superiority and our strength.

"Now, somebody has got to think this war out. Somebody has got to think out the way not only to fight the submarine, but to do something different from what we are doing.

"We are hunting hornets all over the farm and letting the nest alone. None of us know how to go to the nest and crush it and yet I despair of hunting for hornets all over the sea when I know that the nest is breeding hornets as fast as I can find them.

I am willing for my part and I know you are willing because I know the stuff you are made of -- I am willing to sacrifice half the navy Great Britain and we together have, to crush that nest, because if we crush it the war is won.

"I have come here to say that I do not care where it comes from, I do not care whether it comes from the youngest officer or the oldest, but I want the officers of this navy to have the distinctions of saying how this war is going to be won.

"I am ready to put myself at the disposal of any officer in the navy who thinks he knows how to run this war, I will not undertake to tell you whether he does or not, because I know that I do not, but I will undertake to put him in communications with those who can fine out whether his idea will work or not. I have the authority to do that and I will do it with the greatest pleasure.

"I wish that I could think and had the brains to think in the terms of marine warfare, because I would feel then that I was figuring out the future history of the political freedom of mankind. I do not see how any man can look at the flag of the United States and fail having his mind crowded with reminiscences of the number of unselfish men, who have died under the folds of that beautiful emblem. I wonder if men who do die under it realize the distinction they have.

"There is distinction in the privilege and I for my part am sorry to play so peaceful a part in the business as I myself am obliged to play, and I conceive it a privilege to come and look at you men who have the other thing to do and ask you to come and tell me how this thing can better be done; and we will thank God that we have got men of originaive brains among us.

"We have got to throw tradition to the wind. "As I have said, gentlemen, I take it for granted that nothing I say here will be repeated and therefore I am going to say this:

"Everytime we have suggested anything to the British admiralty the reply has come back that viertually amounted to this, that it had never been done that way, and I felt like saying: "Well, nothing was ever done so systematically, as nothing is being done now." Therefore, I should like to see something unusual happen, something that was never done before; and inasmuch as the things that are being done to you were never done before, don't you think it is worth while to

Missoula Children's Theatre Auditions Set for July 19

Throughout the week of July 19 to July 23, the Spencer Theater will become a day camp for 60 children of all ages as they learn to sing and act in Missoula Children's Theatre's newest musical, "The Tales of Hans Christian Andersen."

Performance auditions will be held that Monday, July 19 at 9 a.m. at the Ruidoso Middle School gymnasium. No experience is necessary. Participation is free and open to all children ages 6 to 17. All that is needed is a commitment to rehearsals and the desire to have fun.

Parents or guardians must fill out some basic information (address, contact numbers), in order for your child to participate. The forms will be available on site just before the 9 a.m. audition. Children should wear sneakers during the audition. Rehearsal schedules will be handed out to all performers and/or their parents immediately following the 2 to 3 hour audition. All rehearsals will be held at the Spencer

Theater, with the first set for the afternoon of the 19th.

The culminating performance is at 7 p.m. Friday, July 23. For more information, call the Spencer Theater at 505-336-4800.

The original Missoula musical "The Tales of Hans Christian Andersen," is an original hour-long adaptation based on Denmark's greatest storyteller. Hans journeys back to his hometown of Odense, the birthplace of his inspiration and stories. As the villagers anxiously await Hans' return, they fondly remember his childhood and some of the tales that made him famous. The stories come alive with penny-pinching misers, a conceited emperor, a duckling that doesn't fit in, a bouquet of magical flowers and a girl no taller than your thumb.

This will be the Missoula Children's Theatre's seventh year to perform at Spencer Theater. The weeklong performance workshop has enhanced the lives of countless children in the Ruidoso area. Children often imagine themselves as stars, and the Spencer has helped make that a reality for many.

For more information regarding the July 19 audition and the July 23 performance of Missoula Children's Theatre's "The Tales of Hans Christian Andersen," please call the Spencer Theater at 505-336-4800.

Spencer Theater is a world-class performance hall located on Airport Highway in the Sacramento Mountain settlement of Alto, about 12 miles north of downtown Ruidoso. First opened in 1997, the $22 million facility was funded entirely by the late Jackie Spencer and her late husband Dr. A. N. Spencer. A nonprofit organization, the theater's mission is to enrich the cultural lives of south central New Mexico residents and visitors by praising life with impeccable style. The theater operates year-round, presenting 30-35 professional events in both a summer season (pop concerts, children's theatre, modern dance, comedy) and a winter season (ballet, Broadway, Christmas specials, symphony), plus a series of professional performances offered strictly for school children and their teachers. Unique architecture, outstanding acoustics, intimate seating and excellent artistry are the Spencer's celebrated features. The elegant hall seats 514, with no seats farther than 67 feet from the stage. From its Spanish mica-flecked limestone face to the crystal lobby and glass sculptures, the facility itself is a work of art. Free public tours are offered at 10 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays throughout the year.

C'zozo Denies Billboard

had told Brackum about the concerns.

"But he did not tell me to take down the sign," Brackum responded.

Brackum said town clerk Leann Weibrecht signed the letter of April 23, and he also asked in city hall about the process of putting up a sign, and "no body had a problem."

As for the sign being distracting, Brackum said he spoke with the man who rents an apartment near the sign and asked him if he would be bothered by an all night lighted billboard. Brackum said the man told him he would not be bothered, and the same man said he did not even hear when the trains wrecked this spring. When the audience asked how that was relevant to the discussion, Brackum said there has been a "lot of stuff in the paper that says the sign makes noise." "Yet the resident has no problem, and the trucks make more noise than the billboard," he added.

Brackum then told how the business the sign advertises provides lots of money to the state to help improve highways and putting out fires. When again asked how this is relevant, Brackum said he has been under a lot of mental anguish over the billboards.

Some in the audience responded that they have to live with the billboard.

"I have been angered and saddened by the lack of procedure followed by the town," said Diane Dean.

Town resident Barbara Culler asked Brackum when he knew about the problems with the sign. Brackum said last week, after the sign was put up.

Caroljine McCoy, a resident of Nogal who has protested another billboard that Brackum had intended to put up near the Nogal Post Office, said there was a mistake made. She suggested as a solution, that Brackum put up a smaller sign that would fit in the town ordinance. "You cannot ignore your ordinance and let it go by because that says all your laws are ineffectual," McCoy said to trustees and the mayor.

As for the proposed billboard in Nogal, Brackum said "once he found out the neighbors did not want that billboard he told the land owner he was not going to do that sign.

McCoy said a mistake was made and both the town and Brackum will suffer costs. "You need a solution," McCoy said.

Brackum said if it is a matter of no sign if he has to go with a smaller sign. With that the audience applauded.

"If you send a letter telling me to take it down there will be a lawsuit," Brackum added.

Someone asked Brackum if he had to get a permit from the town. Brackum said no because there was no permit to apply for.

Weibrecht said she already admitted her mistake.

The mayor said the property owners who applied for the conditional use variance, Diana and Chris Zamora who own Four Winds Restaurant behind which the sign was erected, will have to resubmit a request for a smaller sign that conforms to the town ordinance. "The way it is now we cannot act on it and feel we are doing the right," the mayor said.

The previous night, Carrizozo Planning and Zoning Committee had a special meeting and denied the conditional use or variance for the billboard. "But in hearing the public, their biggest con-

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Old Time Western Movies

By Ruth Hammond

Maybe you've heard the saying, "Everything I needed to know I learned in kindergarten," and you may agree or disagree, but there is a lot to be said about the things you learn as a child. Too often children are not aware they are learning anything, especially when doing things they like. Motor skills develop through learning to ride a tricycle or bicycle. Playing games can also teach children things.

Instead of pooh-pooing about children spending too much time playing, try to remember what you did when you were a child and put into perspective some of the things you learned and how you learned what you did. As you grew older you may have worked part of the time and had less time for pleasure, but you may have gone to the movies, that is in the days before TVs were in the house.

Some of you may have watched the old time western movies where the good guys, not necessarily wearing white hats, were victorious by the end of the movie. You knew the good guys might be injured, but the bad guys would get their comeuppance. Those old western movies sound hokey now, and you probably wonder why anyone would have made movies with simple good vs bad plots.

Desperados were easily identified by their swagger and their "me first" attitude, while the good guys were the plain guys who fought for doing what was right. And you probably enjoyed more of the movie than you remember. And you probably learned more than you can imagine.

Each of those old hokey western movies had a moral and whether you realize it or not, many of those morals are instilled in you and your everyday life. And it is those morals that are the basis of why you want governmental officials to do what is right and fair for everyone, not just a special few. It is those morals that nag at you when you see officials doing wrong things instead of right things.

Evidently not all people had the opportunity to watch those old time westerns and they didn't learn the lessons you learned, because not everyone does the right thing. Instead of making an effort to be fair, some officials are more intent on doing bad guy deeds for their own benefit.

Don't you wish you these officials would have to go watch some of those old western movies? It might not teach them anything but it could help them understand why you believe in doing the right thing and want fair play instead of what they are doing too much of the time.

Some of those officials may have watched those old time westerns and instead of learning from the good guys, they may have decided the bad guys, not always wearing black hats, could survive if given enough time. Aren't you glad you learned the things you did, and aren't you glad those old time western movies were more than just a pastime while you were growing up? Hi Yo Silver!

Public Awareness Campaign For Early Toddler Referrals

A new public awareness campaign for the Family Infant Toddler (FIT) Program titled "Ready! Set! Grow!" The campaign, was kicked off at a press conference recently at the Parents Reaching Out facility in Albuquerque. It aimed at encouraging earlier referrals of young children with or at risk for a developmental delay or disability.

The New Mexico Children's Cabinet has prioritized the need for a statewide system of quality early childhood services that promote healthy child development.

"The Children's Cabinet realizes the importance of quality education and positive influences in the first few years of children's lives," said Lt. Gov. Diane Denish. "Our administration is committed to creating and implementing a solid plan for early childhood development in New Mexico."

Department of Health Secretary Patricia Montoya said, "Brain research has shown the importance of providing intervention early. A baby's brain grows to 80 percent of adult size in the first three years of life. In fact, more synapses or connecting points form in a baby's brain than at any other time. A healthy beginning is critical to a healthy life."

The "Ready! Set! Grow!" campaign focuses on the importance of the first three years of life in a child's development. The new brochure lists typical developmental milestones from birth to age three, and offers suggestions on how to support children as they grow and learn. The brochure also includes family photos and clear language, in English and Spanish, to highlight the important role of parents and other caregivers in promoting the baby's healthy development. The campaign encourages physicians, childcare staff, social workers and parents themselves to refer the child for a developmental evaluation if they are concerned about his/her development.

The FIT-Program is a network of private and public agencies that provide an array of early intervention services including developmental instruction, speech and physical therapy, etc., that support parents' ability to promote their child's development.

In Fiscal Year 2003, the FIT Program served a total of 5,222 children birth to age three (5.2 percent or 1 in 20 children) across New Mexico. This was a nine percent increase over the previous year. The FIT Program has seen significant increase in the number of children identified with autism spectrum disorders, as well as increased referrals from Child Protective Services of infants and toddlers who are at risk for developmental delays.

Nationally, New Mexico ranks 37th in the percentage of children served birth to three, but 41st in birth to age one. The new public awareness campaign was recommended by the Senate Joint Memorial 16 Task Force,

"Billy the Kid's" Attorney; Could He Be Arrested for Withholding Evidence?

SANTA FE -- New evidence arrives almost daily proving that the quest to dig up Billy and his mom is the most bizarre case in the history of jurisprudence.

It is amazing that it still is in the courts, but the Village of Fort Sumner has filed a motion to dismiss the case and set out the issues in a manner that can't be avoided.

The situation would actually be comical if it didn't adversely affect two communities so strongly. Silver City and Fort Sumner face a loss of their part of the Billy the Kid legend if DNA analysis is unable to show a match between bones dug up in the two communities.

The state Office of the Medical Investigator says that is likely because of the lack of certainty about the exact location of the bodies and the low quality of DNA in corpses over 120 years old. Sentiment also runs high in both communities about the sanctity of their cemeteries and the impropriety of digging up bodies.

The scenario is playing out like an Old West melodrama with plenty of victims and villains (some of them dressed in 1880s sheriffs' outfits). Currently, however, the plot outline is too garbled for a good melodrama. It is playing out more like the Keystone Cops at this point.

The sheriffs involved in the case are running around, simultaneously conducting a criminal investigation of whom Pat Garrett shot and whether Billy had help escaping the Lincoln County Courthouse, while also trying to prove that Billy is buried in Fort Sumner and that his pretenders are fakes.

Add to that their efforts to help the governor decide whether to pardon Billy and also to help the governor promote tourism. Oh yes, and they're collecting antique furniture and shooting it.

What do all these cross-purposes have to do with each other? I promised to seek that out, but I can't tell you yet, I'm getting closer to discovering the thread that binds all this together, but still haven't found the universal truth.

And speaking of truth, that has become the mantra of the two spokesmen for the grave digging, Gov. Bill Richardson and the Capitan mayor, who also is a sometimes deputy sheriff. I've discovered, however, that he is only a reserve deputy, a volunteer, so to speak.

Like Fox Mulder in X-Files, Richardson, and the Capitan mayor know "the truth is out there" but evil forces prevent it from being known. In this case, it is the towns of Silver City and Fort Sumner, and although they may not be evil, they are anti-scientific and anti-historical in their determination to not let scientific grave robbers into their cemeteries.

But maybe the truth isn't "out there". Maybe it is here among us. The petition filed by Fort Sumner to dismiss the court action seeking to exhume Billy lists many truths.

Among them are:

- * The NM Supreme Court, in a previous decision, has expressed a strong predisposition against disinterment.

- * The petitioners have no legal relationship to Billy.

- * A dead person can't seek relief.

- * A governor can't appoint a lawyer, even for someone who isn't dead.

- * A coroner's jury already ruled in 1881 who shot Billy.

- * Reopening the case would be double jeopardy.

- * The statute of limitations for any criminal investigation expired long ago.

- * The job of the sheriffs is to protect the public. There is no criminal on the loose.

Actually the truth may be much nearer than we think. Billy's gubernatorially-appointed attorney has been speaking for him, making claims that Billy wants to be dug up and wants his mother dug up.

Since Billy is speaking from the grave, and since his attorney is communicating with him, the attorney has to know where Billy is buried. All he has to do is tell us and it's all over.

Case closed.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22) You may be tired, but you can't stop now. You could come up on a deal of a lifetime. Be sure to check anything that sounds too good to be true: You've waited this long, you can wait a just a little longer.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22) Your money may take a turn for the better when you decide once and for all what you really want and what is best for all around. You may have to share something to make sure you get what you want.

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sept 22) Don't let ego get in the way of love. You may not need it, or want it, but it could make your life so much better. Others will see a change in you once you allow yourself to be loved and let others make you happy.

Libra (Sept 22 - Oct 22) Don't discount what others are doing just because you haven't heard from them. Walk in someone else's shoes to know just how hard they have it before you allow yourself to get upset over something that isn't true.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21) If you're tired then don't fight the feeling to rest, or it will catch up with you when you need your good energy and it will not be there. Take a break from people that drain you. Don't feel guilty, just recharge to feel better.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21) It's time to play ball. If you're not in the game to win, then get out and let someone take your place. Find out what makes you happy and go for it 100%. Don't allow anyone to make you feel guilty.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19) You're going to get what you think you want. Your heart and brain are not talking to each other. Your heart knows the truth. You may have money, but that's not what keeps you warm at night.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18) When you have to say something you really don't want to say make sure you sleep on it before saying it. Ask yourself if this is good for you and all around or just getting you out of hot water. Be honest and loving.

Pisces (Feb 19 - March 20) This feeling you're having isn't anything new, it's just letting you know that you need to do something quick or what you really want and need might pass you by while you're trying to make up your mind.

Aries (March 21 - April 19) Money or happiness? You can have both if you play your cards right. Don't do both at the same time, or you could lose them. Detail is the key to happiness. Time and money go hand in hand. Have fun too.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20) You may have to let go of something to gain something else at this time. If you have to let go of yourself, then you may need to rethink what is important. Remember: When in doubt, don't. Take the time to feel again.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20) Your life as you know it will turn back to what you call normal soon. But why? You have the chance of a life time to do something you have never done. It's better to wear out, than to rust out. Give extra love.

try something that was never done before against those who are doing them to you?

"There is no other way to win. America is the prize amateur nation of the world, Germany is the prize professional nation of the world. Now, when it comes to doing new things and doing them well, I will back the amateur against the professional every time. He knows so little about it that he is fool enough to try the right thing. The men that do not know the danger are the rashest men.

Please leave out of your vocabulary altogether the word 'prudent' Do the thing that is audacious to the utmost point of risk and daring, because that is exactly the thing that the other side does not understand.

"I think that there are willing ears to hear this in the American navy and the American army because that is the kind of folks we are. We are getting tired of the old ways and covet the new ones."

"I am not discouraged for a moment, particularly because we have not even begun, and, without saying anything in disparagement of those with whom we are associated in the war, I do expect things to begin when we begin. If they do not, American history will have changed its course; the American army and navy will have changed their character. There will have to come a new tradition into a service which does not do new and audacious and successful things."

Court to Adjourn

District court will adjourn tonight or tomorrow, after a two weeks term. Judge Mechem will go to Estancia, Torrance county, Monday, to open court there; hence this week must see the end of the term here.

The civil docket has required the larger portion of the court's time, but a number of criminal cases have been disposed of as well. Some were continued on account of absent witnesses, two or three trials resulted in verdicts of not guilty, and some cases, on motion, stricken from the docket.

The great part of this week was devoted to the trial of a case in which Tina Supulver was plaintiff and Herndon, Gilchrist et al were defendants. The case grew out of a criminal prosecution in Grant county, wherein George Supulver was indicted for stealing money and goods from the Herndon-Gilchrist store amounting to almost $4,000. Supulver plead guilty to the indictment and was sentenced to the penitentiary.

The present suit was for the recovery of $2,619 15c, that amount of cash having been taken from the Supulvers at the time of arrest of George Supulver. The jury, after a day and night deliberation, returned a verdict in favor of plaintiff for the amount of money named above, less $250.20, which was otherwise disposed of or not accounted for in the evidence.

Yesterday a jury was secured in a case wherein Clarence Spence is plaintiff and the E.P. & S.W. Railway company defendant. The case arose from a shipment of cattle by the plaintiff about four years ago, the complaint alleging a loss of cattle to the value of $1,800. Judge Mechem was disqualified to preside and, by consent of the parties to the suit, Judge John Y. Hewitt is presiding. It is believed this will be the last jury trial for this term.

The New Mexico Oil Fields

Mountainair -- C.P. Chappel has in the window of the Farmers Trading company, a fine specimen of shale, rich in oil, and of which he says, "there is plenty more where that came from." When lighted by a burning match, this sample burns, giving off a strong odor of burning crude oil.

That there is shale in the mountains near Mountainair has long been known, but a specimen of such rich quality has made 'em sit up and take notice.

Artesia -- The past week has witnessed more than usual interest and activity in the oil fields near here, and when all the rigs which are being brought into the state are set up the city of Artesia will be encircled on three sides.

Roswell -- Never before has there been as much excitement in the eastern part of the state over oil as there is at the present time, much of it being caused by the purchase of large tracts of land in Chaves county by the National Exploration Company. This company, as at the present time more than $225,000 worth of casing in the local railroad yards, and more is on the road,

Camping Safety Tips

A. Pre Planning

1. Camper should know where he is going and the camp sites available in that area. If possible make an advance reservation for the site.

2. The camper has the responsibility of knowing the layout, the rules, and what is supplied at the site.

3. Once the facilities are known, the camper must select his type of shelter (tent or trailer), sleeping equipment (sleeping bag, cot, or blankets), and camping equipment (stoves, lanterns, coolers, and eating utensils).

4. Everything brought to the camp site should be in good operating order and should function properly. The time to make adjustments on equipment is before you start out.

B. The Site

1. Keep it safe, keep it clean.

2. Use a designated fireplace when possible; do not build a fire near tree trunks, fallen trees, or overhanging branches.

3. When extinguishing your campfire, first let it die down, then break up the coals for logs, spread the partly burned pieces, soak them thoroughly, then cover area with dirt or sand.

4. Unless water supply sources are known or certified safe by a competent authority, a camper should bring along sufficient drinking water for the camping party.

5. Ax. A small hand ax may help split kindling. Handle it with care and keep it sheathed and away from children.

6. Knife. A knife is often useful to a camper. A strong pocketknife will handle all your camp needs.

7. Flashlight. Make sure the batteries are in good condition. This piece of equipment is handy for emergencies on the road, around the campsite, and for signaling in the dark.

8. Cooking Utensils. Pans containing hot water or food should be hung or set securely over the fire so that jarring will not upset them and scald campers.

which included physicians, parents and early childhood providers, as one way to promote earlier referrals of infants and toddlers.

According to New Mexico parent Mathew Nelson, who has twins with autism, "getting started early with intervention for my kids made a huge difference in their learning." The US Department of Education reports that early intervention has been shown to result in the child; (a) Needing fewer special education and other services later in life; (b) Being retained in grade less often; and (c)

In some cases being indistinguishable from typically developing classmates.

Extreme Gardening

by Doris Cherry

Bugs Alive!

Summer arrived on June 21 as usual, hot and windy. The prolonged dry spell from April through June has taken its toll on gardens everywhere in the county, stunting growth and encouraging bug invasions.

Plants in their cloches are doing relatively well. All of the spinaches have gone to seed, the days too warm and long for these delicate greens. Lettuces are reaching their end also, but are still providing plenty of succulent leaves picked from the sides of the plant. Even in their snug cloches the greens had a close call. Cabbage loopers, in the innocent form of lovely little moths, visited the cloche and left eggs everywhere. Quietly, the eggs hatched into hundreds of green inch-worm loopers, furiously eating the tender lettuces especially.

Then just last week, the Harlequin bugs appeared, sucking on the leafy mustard greens, and swarming to mate within the comfortable cloche.

After losing a few plants and many leaves to the pests, the bugs are now under control. The loopers are in their larval stage, cocooned to become moths again although reduced in numbers by hand picking. The Harlequin bugs were also reduced in number by hand picking.

I choose not to use even organic repellents or poisons, mostly due to the cost but also because even natural insecticides break down slowly and can be toxic to certain animals. Also treated plants must be washed very well before eating. One of my favorite things is to graze in the garden, eating greens and whatever right from the plant. Such a treat is not possible when plants are treated with ANY type of insecticide, natural or synthetic.

So I stick with hand picking. The hardest part of hand picking is getting over the squeamishness of touching and squishing of bugs. The bugs have only been eating your produce, and neither loopers or Harlequin bugs have a bad smell. Grasshoppers can also be hand picked, but often pose a much bigger problem because of their numbers. This year there is not such a widespread presence of the very destructive Mormon cricket, but the common grasshoppers are always present.

Basically, the cloche should not have had bugs in it been properly screened to close in all outside exposure. When the temperatures got hot, the cloche was opened to prevent overheating of the greens. That also meant the ends were left open, without screening, inviting all sorts of bugs to visit the little lush world inside the cloche.

So for the lack of screens, hand picking of bugs became a daily event. Every morning the cloches would be inspected for bugs. Harlequin bugs can be caught by placing a cupped hand under them, for when they are barely touched they fall into your hand. Quickly dispose of them for they fly. If they fall to the ground while trying to catch them, look for them there and be quick.

Loopers also drop down when you try to catch them. After a while you will develop your own style of bug catching.

Catching bugs should be a routine chore in the garden. Mornings seem to be better because the bugs are slow from the night time coolness. Another important chore in controlling pests is to keep all dead-eaten-damaged leaves picked-up and removed to the distant compost pile. Also as plants get bigger and thus more crowded, thin them out. Use the thinning in a salad or stir fry. Give plants occasional showers to wash off bugs and their residue.

There are other methods to deter pests other than hand picking and planting in a properly enclosed and screened cloche. For loopers, try sprinkling flour or salt directly onto the worms. Or if you are unable to hand pick try using natural insecticides rotenone, pyrethrum/diatomaceous earth blend, sabadilla or predator insects Trichogramma wasps and bacillus thuringiensis.

For Harlequin bugs, other than hand picking, insecticides that deter the beetle are liquid rotenone, pyrethrum, sabadilla.

Squash bugs, which sometimes visit gardens in Lincoln County, can be hand picked, however they have a smell. To deter squash bugs use trellises to keep the plants off the ground, plant nasturtiums, marigolds or radishes nearby, and dust the plants with wood ashes or lime. As with all plants, use row cover to deter pests and provide a more balanced temperature range.

The same natural insecticides and insect predators work on squash bugs as for Harlequin bugs.

Regardless of the method you use in controlling pests, make it a habit to visit your garden on a very routine basis. By frequently checking your plants, you will detect problems early. For instance, when you see holes in leaves and bug droppings, look for what is causing this, especially under the leaves. Loopers are the same color as the plant they are eating and are often hard to spot. Harlequin bugs are colorful and easy to see.

Tomato pests also get pests, mostly white flies and horn worms. The loopers, Harlequin bugs and grasshoppers do not seem to like tomatoes. But the horn worm, the caterpillar of a beautiful butterfly, can devour a tomato plant before you know it. Again, that is where diligence and frequency in checking your garden is so important because horn worms are easy to spot and easy to pick off. White flies can be captured on a sticky yellow pad, or you can use the natural insecticides. Keep the tomato cloche closed or screened to the outside exposure.

If you are having trouble with sow-rollup-pill bugs on the ground, keep debris and dead leaves cleaned up and put out a cut in half potato, cut side down. The sow bugs love the potato and will be attracted to it.

To kill pests, you do not have to squash them with your fingers. You can carry a bucket or bottle of water, into which the pests are put to drown. As for the sow bugs, scoop up the potato and the immediate dirt under it, and dump this into a bucket of water. However, sow bugs have an uncanny ability to escape water, so watch to make sure they do not escape.

Usually I leave the sow bugs alone, unless they become a problem, as they do help break down the soil.

Sticky pads, natural insecticides and predator insects are available at nurseries and garden suppliers on the internet. Some internet sites are www.dirtworks.net, www.homeharvest.com. Or go to a search engine and put in "organic/natural pest controls". However even the natural insecticides of pyrethrum and Rotenone break down slowly and can be toxic to fish and other cold-blooded animals such as lizards.

If you get plant disease, such as a plant turns yellow and dies, remove it as soon as possible and compost it to avoid spreading the disease. Even though we are now getting rainfall, watering in the garden continues to be the most important of chores. Try to water in the morning, because night time moisture can lead to mold and mildew and other problems. Drip irrigation is an excellent way to water your garden without dragging hoses and can be left on throughout the day.

Water only when the soil is dry on top for most plants, although greens should be kept constantly moist. To keep in that precious moisture, mulch. Mulch is my garden mantra. Mulching plants helps insulate the soil and keeps roots cool. It acts like a shock absorber when it does rain and its slows evaporation. Mulch also keeps weeds in control.

As summer lawns are being mowed, look for grass clippings from a yard you know has not been treated with herbicide or other lawn care products. Let the grass clippings dry out, because fresh green clippings get very hot as they decay, then use them as mulch. The clippings have lots of nitrogen, if they are dried. If you use the clippings green as mulch in the garden, they could damage the plants from the decomposition heat. Oak leaves easily rot and the decomposition could take nitrogen from the plants being mulched.

Pine needles as mulch and they do not decompose easily. Plus they are very persistent in the forested areas around Ruidoso. Piles are everywhere for the taking. Spread the pine needles or any mulch around the edges of your plants and along rows. Extra mulch is very good for covering garden paths during muddy times.

cern is people do not want billboards in the community," the mayor said.

"We have no choice over signs if they are 300 square feet or less," responded Dean.

Mrs. Brackum again said they were not told about the town ordinance. "We are not the bad guys," she said. "We did all we thought we were supposed to do."

"And the land owners approached us," she added.

Trustee Eileen Lovelace said the sign company owners are not to blame. "We are to blame," Lovelace said. "A wrong has been done by the Town of Carrizozo and we are here to right a wrong. You did what you thought you needed to do."

Mrs. Brackum then told how she has come to Lincoln County for 30 years and how Carrizozo is the route from Albuquerque to Ruidoso on a $8.9 million Highway 48 improvement. "It is progress," she added.

Chris Zamora said he and Diana signed the agreement for the sign with Brackum on April 5. He said Brackum called several times to find out what was needed to put up the sign. "We went through the motions and followed what you said," Zamora said to the trustees.

The mayor said the town blames itself because everyone should have paid attention, but didn't. He again suggested Zamora resubmit a permit for a smaller sign.

An audience member asked why the town code enforcement officer did not catch the error, because the code enforcement officer is supposed to know the town ordinances. "Does the enforcement officer know the code?" he asked.

The mayor did not answer rather asked for a motion to accept the P&Z recommendation to deny the conditional use, variance to the billboard. Trustee Wes Lindsay made the motion, and Lovelace, after hesitating, seconded it. On a roll call vote, Lindsay, Lovelace, David LaFave voted yes to uphold the P&Z recommendation to deny the variance, trustee LeeRoy Zamora voted no.

LaFave asked how much it will cost the town to have the billboard moved.

Brackum said he did not know until he had a chance to sit down and figure the cost with his attorneys.

Resident Patsy Sanchez suggested the trustees reinstate a practice of publicly reading all correspondence mailed out of the town offices. "If you were doing that you would have seen that letter to Brackum," Sanchez added.

Weihbrecht said she did tell the trustees and mayor about the letter to Brackum. "But we were unaware of the mistake," the mayor said. "And nothing was voted on."

Sanchez said she could not believe the town will send people certified letters about their weeds and not send a certified letter to the Zamoras about a billboard.

Lovelace said the billboard letter never came before the trustees. "This is the first time before the board," added the mayor.

Weihbrecht said at the time of the April 23 letter, there was no indication of any size of the billboard.

When someone asked if the sign would have to come down since the trustees voted to deny the conditional use, variance, Stevens advised the trustees to reserve their comments until executive session. "Because this is threatened litigation," Stevens added.

Gary Joe Lovelace said if the sign had been 299 square feet it would have been done and nothing could have been said.

It was then suggested the town begin working on a new ordinance that spells out the rules for billboards.

"There were mistakes made from the beginning to the end," trustee Lovelace said. "We are trying now to make it right, but we cannot change the past."

Although the mayor tried to close comments, Ray Dean said mistakes were made and everyone is human. He said he saw a positive solution for the situation which he thought could be done. "I hope I learned that in the future to ask more questions and come to more meetings and have more communication at these meetings," Dean said.

Frank Walker, businessman, said he thought the decision made by the trustees was "right for the city."

As of July 7, the 750 square foot billboard that can be seen at least one mile away is still standing and advertising casino, grill and "cheap gas" located 40 miles away.

C'zozo To Phase Town Hall

project. He suggested re-bidding the project in a "phased strategy."

Town attorney David Stevens said the town could not bid a whole project then only do it in "phases."

The mayor was also concerned that the legislators who helped get the town funding for city hall were not happy last year and claimed the town was not fair because the legislators thought the old city hall had burned down, not just damaged by an electrical fire.

Lovelace said getting money from the legislature is a gamble.

Trustee David LaFave said he wanted a constructed building.

Trustee Wes Lindsay first asked Collins how he would phase in the project. Collins suggested the first phase of 2,000 square feet would include the clerks' offices, Motor Vehicles Department (MVD), lobby and restrooms. The second 1,500 square foot phase would include the meeting room, store room, break room.

Originally designed, offices for the judge and his secretary were deleted in an effort to reduce the cost of the project. However, as trustees discussed the phasing in, Weihbrecht asked that all the original offices and spaces be designed back into the project because of the new municipal court rules for teleconferencing.

Resident Anne Serna suggested the town do a bond issue, or raise its gross receipt taxes to help pay for the town hall. But the mayor said people here live on fixed incomes and cannot afford higher taxes.

After considerable discussion, the mayor finally said he believed the best thing would be phase the project. "It may take two or three years, but if we don't use the money the state may take it back."

With that Lovelace made the motion to go with the original design, without the steel structure, to be constructed in two phases, with the first being 2,000 square feet in size. LaFave seconded the motion and all trustees voted yes.

Trustees also unanimously approved hiring Sam Chavez as the MVD clerk. There were 13 applications, seven of whom were interviewed. Chavez was to begin work that week.
