

Carrizozo Sewer Rate Increase Proposed

by Patricia Brazie

Rates for water and sewer services in Carrizozo are destined for an increase. In an update presented to the Carrizozo Town Council on November 8th regarding the status of the town's new wastewater treatment facility, project engineer Rob Richardson said "as it currently stands right now, your wastewater budget is on the order of about $90,000 a year. Projected expenses for the new facility, because of our new treatment requirements, is going to be on the order of $140,000 to $150,00."

"I'm giving you approximate numbers," Richardson said and went on to explain that the new facility will present such a substantial difference in operations that it will take "a couple years" to quantify what the actual expenses will be.

"The project is due and ready to go on line, and one of the requirements with respect to funding was to have the rate structure completed as a part of the project," Richardson said. "I've got to complete the sewer rates so that you have something to put into an ordinance."

Town clerk Leann Weibrecht mentioned that many communities now base individual sewer rates on the amount of water consumption.

"The rate structure that we recommended was based on that philosophy," Richardson told her. "There are some substantial gaps in the data, unfortunately, but we can correct that in the course of the next couple of years." He explained that the rate structure is based on two components, the flow component and the organic loading component. "We tabulated those values in order to come up with a percentage contribution in each category," he said.

Richardson emphasized the fact that the proposed rates will be reevaluated when more accurate data is available from the new facility. "We estimated what the organic and volumetric loads are going to be, based on the best information we had at the time," Richardson said, "but as you know, we don't have the best data in terms of our

Fort Stanton Building is Selected for Restoration

U.S. Senator Pete Domenici today indicated that a well-known historical site in Fort Stanton will be restored with funding aimed at saving the nation's cultural and notable landmarks and artifacts.

The funds were awarded by the National Park Service and the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities. Fort Stanton, Inc. will receive $210,000 through the Save America's Treasures (SAT) grant program that combines several federal entities to preserve endangered historic properties and relics.

"Fort Stanton plays a unique role in New Mexico's history as it tracks years of cultural interaction all the way from cavalry soldiers and Mesquero Apache Indians to Japanese Americans during World War II," Domenici said. "I am very pleased Fort Stanton will have the opportunity to renovate this building, especially since the community will likely play host to new visitors eager to see the newly discovered Snowy River passage."

The $210,000 SAT award will help stabilize the foundation and exterior walls of the Fort Stanton Administration Building in preparation of a large-scale restoration.

The old building was raised in 1855 and served as an Army base in Apache territory until 1896.

It has since served the community as a Merchant Marine tuberculosis hospital, a citizen's conservation corps camp, and a World War II internment and relocation center.

SAT is a national effort to protect threatened cultural treasures, including historic structures, collections, works of art, maps and journals that document and illuminate the history and culture of the U.S. Established in 1998, SAT was originally founded as a public-private partnership that included the White House, the National Park Service and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Carrizozo Chamber Looks To Holidays, 2006 Goals

by Patricia Brazie

In her visitor's center-caboose report to the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce during their meeting November 8, Gail Major announced that long-time Carrizozo resident, author and local historian Johnson Stearns will be manning the caboose on Thursdays this winter.

Major also said she had received a call from someone from Home and Garden Television (HGTV) who was asking about people who had converted former business or commercial structures into private residences. Major said she told them about a home in Bingham that used to be a school house. She suggested that anyone living in a converted place of business might contact the television network and perhaps wind-up on TV.

Major went on to report that she regularly gets calls from people inquiring about the availability of apartments or houses for rent, and asked if anyone knew of a good source for that information.

Warren Malkerson, owner of Gallery 408 on 12th Street, said that people often check bulletin boards at the post office and local shops. "It's to our advantage to help these people," he said, and suggested the chamber offer the caboose as a place for local landlords to post rental notices. Posting information about rentals on the town's website, which had 883 users last month, was also offered for consideration.

Chamber president Dean

Lollar commended Korene and Frank Walker for a job well done on the recent fund-raising auction, and said he would like to see more chamber members attend those kinds of events.

Korene Walker offered a refreshing alternative to the usual Christmas party gift-giving concept. She asked the chamber to consider having each member bring a wrapped gift to the organization's annual holiday bash, then donate the gifts to the New Horizons Development Center.

County commissioner Eileen Lovelace, who manages the Christmas Eve luminarias display, said donations are down from last year. A lot of the money donated in the past came from cans set-up at Sturges grocery store, according to Lovelace. She said she plans to send letters to the town's business owners to ask for donations. The cost of the candles and paper bags for 5,000 luminarias will be about $1,400. Gary Lovelace, of Carrizozo Ready Mix, will donate the sand again this year.

Volunteers willing to help assemble the luminarias will get a free lunch courtesy of the chamber. Lovelace asked that people come to the fire station at 9:00 a.m. on December 10th if they can help. Volunteers will be needed again on December 24th, to distribute the luminarias beginning at 9:00 a.m. and to light the candles starting at 3:30 p.m.

In new business, Lollar presented some goals for 2006 that put emphasis on the advancement of commercial elements that contribute to the area's growth, maintaining high employment levels and supporting civic, educational and recreational endeavors.

Malkerson recommended setting goals for increasing chamber membership as well as business growth in the community. "We need to dewater consumption and our wastewater use with the existing facility, so we had to make some assumptions and we had to make some estimates. It's as good a starting place as I can give you at this point."

According to Richardson, the town should expect the new treatment facility to reach "substantial completion" next week. There are two lagoons left to line, and that work is expected to be completed this week along with the final work on the aeration system.

"The facility will be operational and essentially ready to turn over to the town in a week or two," Richardson said. "We have to ensure that the revenue generated is at least 95 percent of our operating costs," Richardson said.

Weihbrecht read a letter from the town's attorney, David Stevens, describing the nature of an agreement with Lincoln County regarding the detection center.

"In effort to have the detection center located in Carrizozo, a number of incentives were offered to the county," the letter stated. One of those incentives was the provision of water and sewer services to the detection center at no cost to the county for an unspecified period of years. "As of this date," Stevens wrote, "the town of Carrizozo has provided water and wastewater treatment to the detection center for over five years." He also expressed his belief that the town's obligation to provide those services has been met. In the letter Stevens also encouraged the trustees to enter into dialogue with the county to reach an agreement on the payment of sewer services. Stevens reminded the trustees that the county was not asked to participate in the cost of the new treatment facility, and that the detection center is the system's largest single user.

"In a way I kind-of feel bad about it," mayor Manny Hernández said, "because that's the way I talked them into locating the facility here instead of putting it up on the mountain. But, we did also give them the land," he added. "I know this is not going to be popular with the county manager," Hernández said, "but we have to do something."

Richardson told the trustees that the design of the new treatment facility was substantially defined by the detection center contribution, both in volume and organic load. "We could have opted to go back to the detection center and say 'we've got to design a facility that meets the requirements of the town. Your loadings are in excess of that, you need to do something at your facility to bring your loading contribution down to meet a typical.'"

That approach might have required the detection center to build its own facility, and Richardson said that didn't make much sense. "A capital expense for them is just as hard as it is for the town. We thought it more appropriate for them to be able to budget a monthly expenditure."

"Based on the rate structure that we have right now," Richardson said, "the detection center contribution would be about $9,600 a year. If we're not going to charge the detection center, then we've got to make a decision about how to appropriate those costs through the rest of the users in order to cover our operating expenses."

A $9,600 annual contribution amounts to $800 per month, but a monthly fee to the detection center of $500 was also offered as an option to consider.

"Rates to the detection center will have to be negotiable between the town attorney and the county attorney," Hernandez said.

Under the new rates proposed by the trustees, residential users will see current fees of $14.50 per month increase to $19.00. Multiple-family dwellings, such as duplexes and apartment buildings that are currently billed a flat fee of $25.00 per month, will be asked to pay $19.00 for each residential unit. RV parks have been paying $25.00 per month with additional charges of $2.50 for each RV space used during the month. That rate will be adjusted to $19.00 per month plus $4.00 for each RV space, whether the space was used or not.

Motels will see similar adjustments, with a flat rate of $19.00 and additional fees of $2.50 per unit.

Convenience stores like Texaco, Allsup's and the Chevron station will face some of the highest increases, from $25.00 to $109.00 per month. The rates for restaurants and bars will grow from $25.00 to $57.00, and the Lincoln County Courthouse will face an increase from the current $25.00 to $45.00 per month.

Retail stores, business outlets and churches will be billed $25.00 per month, while the rates for hospitals and clinics will increase to $55.00. Originally, the new rates for commercial laundries was proposed at $19.00 per month plus $7.00 for each washing machine, but the per-machine fee might be adjusted to something like $3.50.

The highest proposed rate increases will affect the public schools and the Sierra Blanca Brewery on 12th Street. Both currently pay $25.00 per month, but the school's rate will climb to $182.00 and the brewery will be asked to pay $158.00.

"Breweries have a higher organic loading than is typical for the treatment plant, so that's incorporated into the rate structure," Richardson said.

Trustees unanimously approved a motion to recommend the rate adjustments as described.

The Vicious Struggle Which Ended the Lincoln War

"Siege of the McSween House"

By Rafaelita Pryor

Explanatory Note: Rafaelita Pryor is the granddaughter of Captain Saturino Baca of Lincoln, New Mexico. Her grandfather was in Lincoln during the terrible three days' battle and a witness to many of the things that occurred. Her brother's father-in-law, Yginio Salazar, was not only a witness but a participant and a survivor of that ordeal.

Thirty-six years ago, when Mrs. Pryor was a senior in high school, she asked Mr. Salazar for an account of that famous encounter and he gave a record of his experiences and observations.

Captain Baca was born in Valencia County in 1830. He was a member of the Territorial Legislature of New Mexico and in 1869 he introduced into it a bill which created Lincoln County, comprising all the territory which is now Lincoln, Chaves, Eddy, Roosevelt, Lea, and part of Otero counties. It encompassed almost one-fourth of the Territory of New Mexico. Friends wished to have the new county named for Baca but he insisted on naming it Lincoln.

His obituary records: "At the beginning of the Civil War, Baca offered his services to Gov. Henry Connelly, and in 1861 was made a first lieutenant in Co., E, First New Mexico Cavalry, which was under the command of Kit Carson... before the war was over Baca was Captain of Co., E and he remained at its head until his discharge in 1867. He participated in the battle of Val Verde on the Rio Grande."

Following the war Captain Baca served at Fort Stanton, Wingate, and Bascom, and also at Fort Defiance in Arizona. Captain Baca became the first probate judge in Lincoln County. He was elected sheriff in 1873 and served for three years. Later he was county commissioner. Captain Baca died at the age of ninety-four in Lincoln at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Frank Salazar. He was buried in Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Pryor's maternal grandfather was Bernardo Salazar; Yginio Salazar was her brother's father-in-law, whose life was saved by his pretending to be dead while he lay wounded in the dooryard of the McSween house. Both he and Captain Saturino Baca agreed on the following story.

Lincoln was settled in the early 1850s by Spanish pioneers who came from both the Rio Grande and northern New Mexico. They named the village La Placita del Rio Bonito -- "The Little Town by the Pretty River". It consisted of a few adobe houses built about a plaza, and El Torreón, the fortified tower built for protection against the Apaches.

In 1869 the name was changed to Lincoln and it became the county seat of a huge county which occupied almost one-quarter of the territory.

Because of the development of the great cattle ranges of the Southwest, rival factions were created. That on the Pecos was led by John Chisum; Tom Catron, leader of the infamous Santa Fe Ring, was the hidden power that controlled the faction led by Murphy,

Capitan Action Group Examines Resources

by Patricia Brazis

A recently formed community action group plans to present its findings and recommendations regarding the future of Capitan to the village council early next year. The group is headed by Eddie Tudor and guided by Hubert Quintana of the Southern New Mexico Economic Development District and Council of Governments (SNMEDD/COG), and includes members of the Capitan PTA, chamber of commerce, woman's club, planning committee, American Legion and Smokey Bear's Hometown Association. Mike Byrnes from the Small Business Development Center, who's office is in the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce building in Ruidoso, is also involved.

At a meeting on October 20, Quintana heard brief reports from members of Capitan's community organizations. Carolyn Shrader, owner of Southwest Book Round-Up, spoke of Smokey Bear's Hometown Association which, Shrader said, was set-up to encourage awareness of Smokey's fire concepts. She reported that the association had recently assisted in the funding of the new gazebo, fish feeder and additional plants for the Smokey Bear Park, and has plans to help with improvements to the playground and picnic area.

According to Eddie Tudor, the park attracts 25,000 visitors from around the world annually. He told the group that a greenhouse and outdoor public restrooms will be added soon, and that an old railroad depot that occupies part of the park property is in need of serious repair. Byrnes pointed-out that historic railroad depots are "economic magnets" and Quintana suggested that a timely assessment of the structure's roof, windows, foundation, etc. might be a good idea. "It might save money in the long run to repair it now," he said.

Mary Brothers addressed the status of the Capitan Chamber of Commerce and its goals. "We need more volunteers," she said. Brothers went on to tell that the chamber hosts a meet-the-candidates event and sponsors a scholarship program as well as assisting with the annual July 4th parade and the downtown Christmas lights. Also a member of the PTA, Brothers said the parents and teachers association gives personal behavior rewards to local children who do good deeds for others, and sponsors award banquets for the school's athletic teams.

Elizabeth Sinkovitz told the group about the new woman's club, formed one year ago. "Our mission is to help the children of Capitan," she said. The club is involved with the annual Halloween party for children and offers scholarships for the Lone Tree summer camp. "We also hand out dictionaries to the school's third-graders," she added.

The group discussed its mission and goals, and individuals offered their opinions of what Capitan will hopefully be 10 years in the future. Maintaining the town's rural western personality and creating more recreational and educational entertainment for Capitan's kids were high on the group's wish-list.

Brothers said she would like to see further development of the downtown shopping district with more sidewalks and crosswalks.

Village trustee George Tippin brought-up the potential values of eco-tourism; others stated desires to see Capitan be more self-sufficient with less dependence on the Ruidoso area for jobs and services. Improvements to the town's infrastructure, with water and sewer facilities available to all, and the establishment of a recycling program were also suggested.

When asked by Quintana what the group's vision of Capitan's future economic base might be, most seemed to agree on wanting a tourism and agricultural-based economy. The group began to identify the town's marketable assets such as the Lincoln County Fair and rodeo, the Smokey Bear Museum and nature park, art and locally grown meats and produce. The wilderness area, cave systems and unique wildlife species were also listed as valuable assets.

Considering the promotion

Carrizozo Chamber

velop the strategies to reach our goals," he told the group.

Linda Rodriguez said the chamber needs to promote itself and call for more involvement from its inactive members.

Frank Walker suggested the chamber members should "get out and talk-up annexation, if it looks okay."

Lovelace made a phone call to the Otero County Electric Cooperative to find out when they planned to hang the town's Christmas decorations, and reported that the cooperative employees would help the chamber set-up the train decoration on the same day. She will notify members of the specific date, but it will definitely be December 5th, 6th, or 7th.

The Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a Christmas lighting contest again this year. All businesses and residences within two miles of town are qualified for judging. Prizes for residential lighting displays will be awarded in the form of gift certificates that can be spent at any Carrizozo business. First prize is worth $100, second prize $75 and third prize $50. The winning business will take possession of a traveling plaque for one year. Korene Walker said that winners of gift certificates often apply the prizes to their electric bills.

Malkerson announced that he would soon have six artist studios for rent in the old abstract building next to the Gallery 408 sculpture garden. The units will rent for about $150 a month; the building will also house a classroom and retail space.

The chamber traditionally does not hold a regular meeting in December, so the next meeting will be on January 10th.

of Capitan as a tourist destination, the group named some possible target markets, among them rodeo fans, Smokey Bear lovers, hikers and naturalists and service-men and women from Holloman Air Force Base. Some mention was made about attracting bird-watchers and people just passing through in exploration of the great southwest.

One attendee mentioned possibly attracting some of the thousands of EMS personnel that converge on Ruidoso each spring for the EMS regional conference. "More and more firefighters are required to be EMTs, and Smokey Bear is all about firefighters," she said.

The group has scheduled another meeting for November 10th and expressed the importance of attracting more community involvement as they get further into the planning process.

THOUGHTS
FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

The National Bird

By Ruth Hammond

There is one important thing to realize as you plan for your Thanksgiving dinner. Many of you will roast a turkey, though there are other favorite main dishes. But, did you know that the turkey was suggested as our national bird? As you know, the eagle won, but the turkey was suggested and had it been selected, Thanksgiving could very well be celebrated differently. Anyway, it makes sense that turkeys would not be the main dishes on Thanksgiving tables.

Ultimately, the turkey has become a pseudo symbol of Thanksgiving, which is a national holiday that is not only a day to give thanks but the start of a four day weekend for many people. And even if you choose another main dish for your Thanksgiving meal, you've probably seen all the pictures of turkeys and all the hoopla about turkey dinner.

Rarely do you see an actual turkey that resembles these pictures. The pictures depict turkeys with their tails spread and in a strutting position. But the turkeys you usually see are frozen, wrapped in a mesh or plastic cover, bereft of feathers, especially tail feathers. There is no fleshy wattle, mainly because the neck is not visible until it is removed from the innards of the poor turkey when it is thawed, and of course that colorful wattle has been adeptly removed.

Keeping the picture of the strutting turkey in your mind is difficult when preparing a thawed turkey for dinner. The most important thing to remember is that the gizzard and liver (sometimes one or both) are inside a paper bag that has been placed inside the turkey along with the long neck, and this paper bag MUST be removed before baking the turkey. When the paper bag is not removed prior to baking, it can cause all kinds of problems. The smell of burning paper will permeate the room, causing a flurry of concern as to what is on fire. And there is the inevitable search for the culprit of this burning paper smell. It took a long time to figure out what it was and where it was coming from.

Experts can tell you that it should never have happened, but it was a learning experience for a first time turkey cook. And the aroma of burning paper eventually left the room and there was no trace of burned paper smell or taste when the turkey was served for dinner. And not once during this entire episode did any of the people there think about the turkey as a strutting bird with tail feathers splayed out.

You may have similar remembrances of Thanksgiving holidays, and that is what next Thursday is supposed to be about, remembering and giving thanks for the mishaps as well as the non-mishaps. Your mishaps might not involve burning paper smell, but there is probably a situation that is somewhat similar. While they might be embarrassing at the time, they can be good stories to hand down to future generations and keep you in people's thoughts. But this year be extra thankful the turkey is not the national bird.

Inside the Capitol

SANTA FE

by JAY MILLER

SANTA FE -- Is keeping Cannon Air Force Base a Mission Impossible? The Clovis community, our congressional delegation and the governor are all putting on a happy face, but it will be a tough, uphill climb.

The Pentagon recommended Cannon be closed. The Base Realignment and Closing Commission amended that recommendation, downgrading Cannon to an "enclave" for the next four years, while requiring the secretary of Defense to seek other missions from all military services.

BRAC came close to keeping Cannon open, on a 4-3 vote. But five votes were required for a clear victory. Cannon supporters thought they had six votes, but late in the game a question of conflict was raised concerning two of Cannon's likely supporters on the commission, forcing them to rescue themselves.

Our two U.S. senators quickly moved to amend the defense appropriations bill to require the Pentagon to carry out BRAC's recommendation. That amendment has now reached the floor of the Senate.

The remainder of the congressional delegation, Gov. Bill Richardson and the Clovis area also are aggressively seeking the new missions that will keep Cannon open.

There seems little doubt that the Pentagon will want to keep Cannon's air space, because of its size and great flying weather. That may help in the long run, but the ranchers who have to put up with the jet noise, may not be so anxious to endure it without a base.

Many analysts don't see much hope for Cannon to remain open. Since the Defense Department recommended closure, it won't be interested in looking for new missions. As soon as the planes are moved to other bases, which could be as much as a year, all but a small maintenance and guard staff will be moved out.

The Air Force will not spend a dime on maintenance projects since it already decided to close the base. Cannon will slowly deteriorate and that will be used for justification to close it on December 31, 2009, say the pessimists.

If that view turns out to be correct, the effect will be worse than closing it outright, because it extends the uncertainty. And the deterioration of the base will reduce chances of finding private sector uses for the structures.

The president now has approved the BRAC recommendations and passed them on to Congress. A few see a hopeful sign that Congress may decide to junk the entire package. Many states are unhappy but Congress can't amend the BRAC recommendations, it is an up-or-down vote.

Some see hints in Congress that President Bush's proposal to put the Pentagon in charge of disasters may give Congress another excuse to kill the closure recommendations. The line between the Department of Homeland Security and the military is very fuzzy and the Pentagon's recommendations appear to further confuse the situation.

An argument can be made that this confusion should be resolved before closing and realigning bases. Others argue for waiting until the Iraq situation is resolved so we will know better what our foreign requirements will be.

Congress has 45 days to act on the BRAC recommendations after it received them from the president. That gives another month or so for a decision.

One other helpful factor may be disillusionment with previous rounds of base closings. Three projected savings from those closings never materialized. In fact, the last three rounds have resulted in more expenses, rather than savings. Personnel usually weren't decreased, just moved. And those moves resulted in unbudgeted expenses.

In addition, environmental cleanup of closed bases has been much more expensive than anticipated. The Pentagon is notorious for ignoring environmental safety restrictions. Some bases are so contaminated, they will never be closed.

Ironically, Area 51, part of Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada, is the biggest nightmare, despite the fact that it doesn't even officially exist.

"Good" NEWS Bulletin

Good Articles, Wrong Name.

Still not up to par at the NEWS production department. Had a couple of articles on front page last week that were written by 'Jeff Hammond' -- Ruidoso Concerned About and Contract is Approved for and we mistakenly gave the credit to someone else. But, being that was our first mistake ever, we'll just say... oops! sorry 'bout that.

Just another reminder to our customers and readers that next week's edition of the NEWS will be one day early, due to the Thanksgiving holiday observance.

And thinking about the many thankful things and/or persons we should be thankful for this year -- as always family comes first, and then you start thinking of the many friends and business people that you have been helpful throughout the year, we (THE NEWS) are thankful to many people that help us exist, like our many readers, and people that send in the many small articles that make our paper. Like the journalism class at Carrizozo High School, our many correspondents that turn in articles and photographs, pressmen like Tom Juarigue at the Las Cruces Sun that print our paper every week, people at Alamogordo Daily News that have been taking care of us for many a year, people like Bill and Chea Payne, and good friends at the Otero County Electric Co-op like Eddie Little and Jamie Shepperd, everyone at the County Courthouse, and not to forget the people at Carrizozo City Hall, and the many people that have worked at the NEWS at one time or another. Some of which are no longer with us today.

Our wish at the NEWS is that everyone has a blessed and bountiful Thanksgiving holiday !!

who owned the trading post in Lincoln. Alexander McSween, an attorney, who with his vivacious wife, Susan, moved to Lincoln, was employed by Murphy, former trader at Fort Stanton. J.H. Tunstall, an Englishman, had come into the country and purchased a ranch on the Feliz which he stocked with cattle. In 1877 he employed William Bonney, known as Billy the Kid, as a cowboy.

Lawrence G. Murphy, formerly a major at Fort Sumner, controlled the finances of the area largely through extending credit to ranchers who paid when they sold their year's products, usually hay or cattle. Murphy had the contracts to furnish and supply the cavalry with horses at the fort. Chisum had the beef contracts. Inevitably the factions clashed, Murphy had the support of the Santa Fe Ring; Chisum's adherents were McSween, many small ranchers, and William Bonney. Maurice Garland Fulton, outstanding historian of the Lincoln County War, said that the conflict was a contest between the two men with the Pecos Valley as the pawn.

The controversy culminated in a battle lasting three days. The McSween faction took refuge in the attorney's adobe house in Lincoln. Billy Bonney with some of his followers visited McSween for the purpose of planning their strategy, but was far-sighted enough to leave reserves under Chavez with a dozen of their best marksmen to act as a rear guard. These men took refuge in the Patron and Montano homes which at that time were in use as hotels.

Inside the McSween house were Billy the Kid, McSween, O'Folliard, French, Doc Scurlock, Ygnio Salazar, Harvey Morris, Zamora, Ignacio Gonzales, Mrs. McSween and her relative, Mrs. Ealy, wife of Lincoln's Presbyterian minister.

Murphy's henchmen learned of the party's being at McSween's and about twenty-five of his men surrounded the building. Deputy Sheriff Marion Turner yelled to the inmates, "Billy, the house is surrounded. Come out with your hands up."

Across the street in the Patron and Montano houses McSween's men were gathered for battle. Murphy's gunfighters were hidden in his hotel and store, ready to attack. Gunfire burst from the bushes and the Murphy 'hideouts', and bullets thudded against the thick adobe walls of the McSween home.

"The game is up," the Kid calmly announced. With his men he rushed to the windows and returned the fire. The streets of the little village were filled with whistling bullets.

Murphy sent two gunmen, Charlie Crawford and Lucio Montoya, to the Montano and Patron house in an effort to reduce the effectiveness of the McSween faction. They climbed to the roofs of the former where Fernando Herrera, one of the best shots of the Chavez men, with his first shot struck the head of Crawford who toppled from the roof. Montoya turned and tried to descend but Herrera fired at him and he too, plunged to the earth.

Throughout the day Lincoln roared with gunfire and screams for the wounded and dying echoed through the streets. A housewife sent a rider to Fort Stanton for help and the next morning Major Dudley, commanding arrived with detachments of Negro troops and two Gatling guns.

An ally of Murphy, he refused to stop the fight. Later he said that because the besieging party was a lawfully organized posse that he could not interfere unless requested to do so by the sheriff. He called for a momentary truce and spoke to those within the McSween house, suggesting that the Kid, McSween and the rest of the inmates surrender to Murphy. While he was parleying, Jimmie Dolan and Caleb Hall slipped to the rear of the adobe house, poured coal oil on the door and set it afire.

The Kid ordered Mrs. McSween, Mrs. Ealy, and Mrs. Shield, who had joined the other women, to leave. The latter obeyed, but Mrs. McSween refused to leave her husband. As Major Dudley finished his orders the Kid realized that the house was burning. He replied to the military commander with bullets.

Dudley turned the Gatling gun on the Chavez faction and sent them scurrying from the town. Next the Montano and Patron houses were riddled. The attack was then centered on the McSween place, which was burning. The inmates had withdrawn from one room to another, before the flames forced them to leave the building.

The Kid implored Mrs. McSween to go. As she bade farewell to her husband the boy yelled, "Lady coming out!", and all firing ceased until she reached a place of safety. Then he called to

Veterans Week at Carrizozo High

The fourth annual Veterans' breakfast, sponsored by Junior Rotary, was held on Thursday, November 10, at the Trinity United Methodist Church from 8:30 to 11:00. Several students cooked, others served, replenished coffee and juice, and still others cleaned up. Students wanted to "pamper" our nation's heroes. It was filled with scrumptious pancakes, scrambled eggs, ham, sausage, juice and coffee.

And while the veterans munched down their breakfast, the youngsters from the elementary entertained them with gleeful singing and some soulful poetry of thanks.

Grades K-12 also wore yellow ribbons throughout the week with Veterans' names written on them to honor all those who have served our country and to show their appreciation for their dedication and service. The names were selected from the American Legion Post #57 and from names submitted by students and parents several years ago for our school's veterans' wall. Each student was given a yellow ribbon during first period, collected at the end of the day, and then repeated again the next day. Some students asked for more than one ribbon to honor a relative or someone close to them. One of the students, junior Kayla McClung, had asked for eight extra ribbons. "I decided to put eight ribbons on to support all my family members who had been in a war, or currently going off to war," explained Kayla.

The breakfast was made possible by the donations and cooperation of Ruidoso Wal-Mart, Carrizozo Rotary and Trinity United Methodist Church.

Memorial services were held for Hap Canning Sunday at his hangar on the Block Ranch Sunday. Hap's airplane crashed near Datil, NM last week. The cause of the crash is unknown.

Hap had many friends in both the ranching and horse racing businesses. He was such a sweet and gentle man, and will be sadly missed. The hangar was filled to capacity. Two friends did two fly-by's during the services.

A reception in honor of Charlotte Lee is being held today (Monday) at the Capitan Library from 4 to 6. She has her watercolors on display at the library.

We missed Ann Harvey's program last Friday.

Pam McArthur attended a conference in Albuquerque last week. She is a busy person too.

Dan Eagan attended another class reunion in PA. again.

The Museums hours are still 8:30 to 4:30. The Dr. Woods house and the Tunstall Store are closed for the winter.

The Hubbard Museum in Ruidoso is having a book signing by Max Evans December 3. Max's new book is the Making a Hand; Growing up Cowboy in New Mexico. Evans is also the author of Hi-Low-Country, Miss Millie and several other books and articles on NM cowboy history.

Thirty-five scrapbookers gathered at Ft. Lone Tree over the weekend. There were a lot of new scrapbooking items for everyone to check out.

Maybe with the wind we are having we will have a change of seasons, with the cold weather and everyone will feel better.

There are a lot of virus and bacterial infections, and strep throat going around.

Well it has been an interesting two weeks. We attended the Aggie Homecoming in Las Cruces. Ralph's cousin, Jim Dunlap of Farmington, received the Distinguished Cole Award for his work with the New Mexico and National Rural Water User's Assn.

We attended the football game that the Aggies lost by one point in two overtimes. But the team still hasn't won a game.

Others that we saw at the festivities from Lincoln County were Mr. and Mrs. Billy Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Connelly, Ruidoso; Mr. Henry Swickard, Oscura. Mr. Swickard is the uncle of Mike Swickard who was with the Lincoln County News several years ago.

Then on to to Albuquerque for my eye appointment and then a two day stay in the Heart Hospital. I had a stent put in the blocked kidney artery.

his good friend, Zamora, "All right, Amigo make a try."

Zamora kicked the door open and rushed out, shooting. He was followed by Harvey Morris who went through the opening and leaped high as bullets ripped into his body. He toppled over Zamora.

Then Vincente Romero raced out, shooting with both hands, only to fall upon the bodies. — McSween and the Kid stood in the doorway facing death. Billy handed the attorney a gun but McSween shook his head, "I've never used one," he said. He stepped through the door calling to Murphy. He, too, fell — and legend says, grasping a Bible.

Inside, the Kid turned to those remaining and said, "Let's go!" They rushed into the patio, firing straight toward their assailants as they ran, leaving Bob Beckwith, a Murphy adherent, dead, and two others of the enemy wounded. Billy made it to the low wall above the river, leaped over it and slid to safety down the steep bank.

Yginio Salazar, who had left the house with the Kid, said, "I had not run a dozen steps before I was struck by three bullets which hit my hand, my left shoulder, and my left side. The latter bullet passed through my body."

"I fell among the boddies of McSween, Romero, Zamora, and Morris. I lay unconscious awhile. When I realized where I was the fight was ended. The Murphy men were laughing, singing, and drinking. I thought my only chance was to play dead — I sprawled as motionless as possible."

"Andy Boyle kicked me to see if I was dead. His heavy boots struck my wounded side and the torture was so terrible that I could hardly restrain a scream. When I felt the muzzle of his rifle press against my chest I thought my time had come. Then I heard old man Pearce (Milo) tell Boyle not to waste a bullet on me for I was already dead."

I silently thanked my guardian angel. For some time I still had to feign death, but when the crowd finally tired of their gruesome play, all left. I was the most thankful man in the world. I had lain there suffering about three hours. I crawled down by the river intending to go to the Montoya house but stopped when I saw the camp of the soldiers. I reached the home of Francisco Romero y Valencia and rapped on the door, but the inmates were afraid to open it. Then I crawled to the Ellis house; they, too, refused to admit me. Next I made my way to the swelling of Jose Otero where my sister-in-law, Nicolusita Pacheco, was staying. She recognized my voice and begged them to take me in. My shirt was stiff with blood — my sister-in-law began to cry, but helped get me to bed.

The next morning Terecita Tobasco drove me to Fort Stanton and brought Dr. Richard Wells. While he was dressing my wounds John Kenny and three other Murphy men walked in. They had come to finish the job but Dr. Wells talked them out of it. I stayed there two days, then Francisco Pacheco took me secretly to Las Tablas, a small settlement north of Capitan, now called Richardson. I was there some time, but was taken to Fort Sumner, where I lay in bed over six months.

As a result of the three-day battle which terminated the Lincoln County War, there were six dead; Romero, Zamora, and Crawford were buried in the old cemetery at Lincoln. Beckwith's body was taken to Seven Rivers, McSween and Morris are buried back of the McSween store near the grave of John Tunstall. Billy the Kid lived, but Murphy had won the war.

President Hayes was so shocked at the horror of the conflict that he had Governor Axtell removed and appointed General Lew Wallace Governor of New Mexico.

Dudley was called before a court because of not having used the military to enforce neutrality. His defense was that he had no authority to use military for anything other than difficulties involving Indians or to respond to the appeal of a legally constituted officer. But in Lincoln, where Billy the Kid was loved by the people, there was rancor because the besieged got no assistance from Dudley.

Nor did the local people approve of Wallace's failure to keep his promise to the Kid. The governor had said that so long as New Mexico was a battleground for gunfighters and lawless renegades, those who would lay down their arms and quit fighting would not be held accountable for their previous acts.

Billy the Kid had replied to the governor that it was too late for him to accept this offer, and that if he should attempt to ride out of Lincoln without his arms, he would be killed.

The Kid had refused this offer though many of his compadres did accept it, and were not tried.

And regardless of how people of today regard the Kid, to a lot of his contemporaries he was a hero.

AROUND CORONA

Corona High School student council, under the direction of Melinda Harvey, in cooperation with the American Legion Auxiliary, sponsored a flag retirement ceremony. Seven flags were retired at the football field Thursday morning, November 10, the 230th birthday of the Marines. Kelli West sang the Star Spangled Banner and Adam Bailey was MC with Juanita Romero, Dulcie Sultemeier and Alicia Palomarez reading patriotic poetry.

November 10, 1775, the 2nd Continental Congress performed one of the most insightful and far reaching acts of its existence. It authorized the establishment of two battalions of Marines.

Shortly thereafter and until the present day, the United States Marine Corps has proven itself to be the finest fighting organization the world has ever seen. From the American Revolution through the War on Terror, the United States Marine Corps has distinguished itself by its dedication to duty, esprit de corps, and positive "can do" attitude.

Leroy Pacheco, Marine Veteran, offered an original poem. Other Veterans honored at the retirement ceremony were Bob Burton, Henry Clements, Curtis Duke, Bill Harelson, Joe Mayhill, Fred Porter, Jerry Rasak, Jimmy Sheffield and Byron Yancey.

The ashes of the flags were ceremoniously buried in the

At the conclusion of the ceremony, the American Legion Auxiliary presented each student with a small American flag.

Peggy Keelin Owen called Saturday to say that her daughter, Rosemary Bly had succumbed to cancer. Mrs. Owen has been in Virginia with her daughter for several months. Arrangements for a memorial service here will be announced.

The American Legion Auxiliary met at the Corona Grill following the flag retirement ceremony. Plans were made to recognize Teacher Appreciation Week with small gifts.

Thirty-two cups holding pencils, candy and a pocket organizer with notes of appreciation were delivered early Monday morning.

Bo Thomas Tyree has arrived from Germany through Washington, D.C. and is now at home in a San Antonio military hospital. Tests will begin this week. His brother, who last week weighed five pounds seven ounces, is at home with his parents. Sergeant and Mrs. Richard Tyree have quarters not far from the hospital.

The regular board meeting of the Corona Lending Library was held November 14 at the Corona Village Hall. Plans were discussed for the Corona Christmas Craft Fair. Work on the calendars that will be available again this year is proceeding on schedule. The architectural plans for the renovation of the old telephone office were reviewed with great enthusiasm, especially when it was learned that a $1,000 gift has been received to help with renovation expenses.

Happy Thanksgiving!
