

County Election Results

Lincoln County's three new county commissioners will be Donald A. Williams for district 2, Dave J. Parks for district 4, and Jackie M. Powell for district 5.

Unofficial results of the general election Tuesday also showed that Martha McKnight Proctor was the winner for Magistrate Judge Div. 2.

County results for the general election started later than in previous elections due to a change in the way the results were fed into the computer. Instead of precinct workers calling in the results, with those results being entered into the computer by staff in the Lincoln County Clerk's office, this year there was a longer wait for the results. Due to the paper ballots being used and different machines being used, there was a wait while the ballot boxes were brought to the Lincoln County Courthouse and the electronic cards from each machine were placed in the computer. Those results were sent electronically to Automated Election Systems (AES) and from there to the Secretary of State's web site.

There were a few delays, not at the local level, but at the Secretary of State level in getting the final tallies.

The only other glitch was when the electronic card in the early voting machines didn't break down the results by precinct. The absentee/early precinct board returned to the county courthouse Wednesday to reenter those votes through a re-certified machine to get the results. There were 1,960 early votes.

The following results will not be official until after the canvass today by the Lincoln County Commissioners during a special meeting at 4 p.m.

United States Senator:
Democrat, Jeff Bingaman 3,805; Republican, Allen W. McCulloch, MD, 2,826; Write-in..

US Representative Dist. 2:
Democrat, Albert D. Kissling, 1,966; Republican, Steve Pearce, 4,703; write-in 2.

State House of Representatives:
District 56: Democrat, Carolyn D. Provencher, 696; Republican, Dub Williams, 1,747.
District 57: Republican, Dan Foley, 2,525; Green, Cynthia G. Morrison, 715; Write-in 59.

Capitan Council Proposes Public Comment Policy

by Patrice Brazie

Capitan Mayor Sam Hammons and the village's council of trustees have taken some heat lately over a temporary moratorium on public input at council meetings.

After the village council approved the firing of former Capitan police chief Robert Bird at a recent meeting, some members of a large crowd in attendance grew disruptive, resulting in the temporary ban on public comment.

At the village council's October meeting, a group of organized protestors covered their mouths with tape or bandanas to silently demonstrate their displeasure with the ban.

Village officials have acknowledged the need to establish a definitive policy allowing for the public to be heard at council meetings, and held a workshop on November 1st to draft a village resolution to define the rules. The proposed resolution is expected to be adopted during the regular meeting of the village council on Tuesday, November 14th.

As currently drafted, the resolution will allow for a total of up to 30 minutes of each council meeting to be used to accommodate public input, but will limit individual speakers to three minutes. The portion of each meeting that will be dedicated to the public will come early in the meeting, following the approval of the meeting's agenda.

Members of the public will be asked to identify themselves, state where they live and restrict their comments to only those issues or items on the meeting's agenda. Speakers will not be allowed to defer a portion of their three minutes to another speaker, and groups of citizens will likely be asked to pick a spokesperson for the group to avoid time wasted in redundancy.

Regular Capitan Village Council meetings are held on the second Tuesday of the month at 6:30 p.m. at the village hall.

Carrizozo Landmark Closes Doors

by Patrice Brazie

Paul Ortiz was born in White Oaks 91 years ago. His family had originally settled a land grant homestead in the Carrizozo area, and Paul has spent his life as a Carrizozo resident. He quit school in 1933 after successfully completing the ninth grade, because he needed to work to help support his family. Ortiz remembers the hard times after the Great Depression and the welcome opportunities for employment through federal programs like the C.C.C. and the W.P.A. One of the projects he was called to work on was the construction of a school house in Corona. He eventually got a night job working for the railroad, and recognized a potential opportunity to earn some extra money by offering home cooked meals to the day shift railroad workers. He didn't realize at the time that he was beginning to build a legacy that would last for more than 50 years.

Ortiz began serving hot meals out of his garage, serving up the cuisine that he knew best, red chile enchiladas, tacos and beans with a uniquely New Mexican flavor. It wasn't too long before he was able to move the business onto the property next door to his home on what is now Aspen Street in Carrizozo.

According to his son Tony, Ortiz built and opened a little restaurant called The Shop sometime around 1949, and continued to work nights for the railroad. "He used to have a stone grinder, and cooked corn outside in a wash tub," Tony told The News in a recent interview. Tortillas and chiles were roasted and grilled on a large outdoor grill as well.

Four or five years after opening The Shop, as Tony recalls, Ortiz moved the business into a little building on the south end of town, and called it The Rocket. "In those days, they had begun developing missiles at White Sands," Tony explained. He said that the Nike bar, a former Carrizozo nightclub, was also named after a missile. "There were a lot of G.I.s over here in those days," he said, "because of the research they were doing at the missile range."

Tony said that his Dad closed-up The Rocket to go into business with a sister who had purchased a small establishment called the Coffee Cup in Carrizozo sometime around 1950. By 1957 Ortiz had bought out his sister and taken over the business himself. "He worked there and worked for the railroad at nights," Tony said of his father. "There were 11 kids in our family, so I don't know if he didn't want to be around the kids or just needed to make money," Tony quipped.

As those 11 children grew, the Coffee Cup became a real family affair. The girls worked as waitresses, boys as dishwashers; everyone took their turn helping out.

Tony admitted he didn't have much interest in the restaurant back then. "All the other kids were out playing, and I had to work," he said. "But it taught me how to work," he added.

Tony's older sister Francis took a turn at operating The Coffee Cup beginning in 1980, but turned it over to Tony and his wife Patsy in 1986. They ran the restaurant together for the past 20 years, until closing the doors permanently on October 27th. "We barely got by, but we managed to stay in business for 20 years," Tony said. "The business kind of picked up in the last few years," he said, "and we've outgrown the building."

Under the ownership of Tony and Patsy Ortiz, Paul's Coffee Cup continued to base the menu on traditional local cuisine, red chile enchiladas, tacos and rellenos. "That's

I am very pleased they received recognition for their efforts," said Senior Center site manager Denise Byrd. the basic stuff, besides the beans," he said. Tony said he used the same basic ingredients that his Dad did, but found the demand for green chile surpassed the taste for red in recent years, so he used a lot more of the green than his Dad did. "You can get it (green chile) year round now," he said. Although the senior Ortiz roasted his chiles on a big outdoor grill, Tony eventually opted for the pre-roasted and already peeled product for labor and cost efficiency. "We used to do it the old fashioned way, for years and years," he said, "and then I said, man, that's too much work." Green chile enchiladas were a favorite among The Coffee Cup's customers, who Tony said came from all over the country. Since the restaurant closed a few weeks ago, people have been calling Patsy and Tony at home asking them for salsa.

Tony told The News that he has purchased a piece of property on Highway 380 in Carrizozo and hopes to build a new building there to house his next restaurant. He said it will take some time, but he plans to call the new place Paul's New Mexican Cuisine. Even though his Dad's restaurant was named The Coffee Cup, people mostly always just called it Paul's, he said, and he doesn't want people to confuse the new restaurant with a coffee shop. He also wants people to understand that the cuisine will continue to be traditional New Mexican. "My family's been here for generations," Tony said. "We've never been to Mexico, so we don't know what they eat in Mexico. I've seen on TV that they make tamales out of ar-madillos."

Tony said it could be a while before he gets a new restaurant up and running, as there are lots of requirements at the state and the local level that must be met, but he's currently working on a blueprint for the building. One thing that is for sure is that the dedicated regular customers of the Coffee Cup will be anxiously awaiting the chance to once again feast on the comfort food that made the little restaurant famous throughout the county and beyond.

LCSWA to Offer Newspaper Buy/back

The Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (LCSWA)

will begin offering a 1 cent per pound buy-back incentive to increase newspaper recycling in Lincoln and Otero counties, the LCSWA Board learned at its November 3rd meeting. The incentive program will target school groups and other organizations seeking additional project funds.

Other actions by the LCSWA board at its November 3rd afternoon meeting included:

--Adopted a resolution proclaiming November as Recycling Month and November 4th as Lincoln County Recycling Day

--Approved establishment of a county wide recycling committee with membership from across the county to advise the Authority on recycling issues. The board further recommended creation of additional incentives and educational efforts to improve recycling participation and rates.

--Approved removal of $18,13.65 in accounts receivable on vacated residential property verified by the county assessor.

--Heard the monthly operational supervisor report highlighted by development of a $246,000 economic development proposal through the State's Economic Development Department to underwrite Phase III of the Lincoln County recycling system. Four new jobs would be created in addition to equipment purchase if funded. Requests for the 2007 Legislature of $1.1 million to support construction of the new Greentree Transfer Station and Recycling Center in Ruidoso Downs have also been made.

--Approved purchase of roll off containers for the Chaparral waste disposal site in southern Otero County, with the bid going to Rolloff USA if delivered in five working days. The board stipulated upon advice of counsel that if delivery was not made within five days, the bid should be immediately re-issued to Waste Systems Inc. for a 10 working day delivery after a request and clarification from the audience by Mike Richardson of Waste Systems Inc.

--The next LCSWA meeting has been moved to Friday, November 17th.

Early Day Lincoln County Ranch Founded by W.M. Reily in 1892

The following article which appeared in the New Mexico Stockman yesterday will be of interest to many people who knew the Reily and Grey families in the early days of Lincoln county; and it will also be of interest to friends of Mrs. Reily and daughters who live here at present.

Many years before New Mexico was admitted to the Union as a state, W.M. Reily of Tunica, Louisiana, came to the territory of New Mexico to establish his ranch headquarters where the present town of Capitan in Lincoln county now stands. He came to Lincoln county in 1892 at the recommendation of his cousin Governor George Curry, who had spoken and written to him many times relative to the great possibilities of the livestock industry in the territory.

Two daughters of Mr. Reily continue in the ranch business today. They are Mrs. Will Ed Harris of Carrizozo and Mrs. Truman A. Spencer of Three Rivers.

The Reily ranch comprised thousands of acres in Lincoln county with ranch headquarters at Capitan. George Titsworth of Capitan today owns most of the original Reily holdings.

Running more than 3,000 sheep and 800 cattle, Reily made a great success in the ranch business in New Mexico. He lived in Lincoln county from 1892 until his death in March of 1931, and during that time did much to develop the country and civic improvement in the county.

He served as County Tax Assessor when the town of Lincoln was the county seat. He served as President of the Board of Regents of the New Mexico Institution for the Blind at Alamo-gordo for more than twenty years prior to his death.

Shortly after arriving in New Mexico he married Miss Nellie Grey, who came to the state in a covered wagon with her father, S.P. Grey, from Grapevine, Texas. Mrs. Reily now makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Harris of Carrizozo.

New Church for Tinnie

On Friday night November 2, the Baptist church at Tinnie with the help of the community, had a supper in the basement of the school building.

The charges were $1.00 per plate. The benefits went to the building fund of the Baptist Church. There were over three hundred tickets sold, and about 175 plates served. The amount taken in was $561.50.

Rocking R Subdivision Gets Summary Plat Approved

by Patrice Brazie

Lincoln County Commissioners heard a request for the approval of a summary review plat for the Rockin' R subdivision on October 17th during their regular monthly meeting. Located near the intersection of the east end of Paso Monte and State Highway 220 (Airport Road), the 15-acre tract of land will be subdivided into four parcels by Richard Sutton, of Lufkin, Texas. The smallest of the four parcels will be three acres in size.

In a report to the county commissioners, Lincoln County planning director Curt Temple said that he had reviewed the plat and supporting documentation and found them to be in compliance with the county's subdivision regulations.

Initially it was thought that the subdivision would require the construction of a road but, Temple reported, the New Mexico Highway Department has approved two accesses to the property from Highway 220, so a new road will not be necessary.

County commissioners

Rick Simpson and Tom Battin asked for clarification of the type of liquid waste treatment that will be used in the subdivision. Temple said that tracts of three acres or more can use standard septic tank systems, so long as the system can be located 100 feet from any wells and the soil structure will support that type of system.

"There's a (percolation) test that they have to do," Temple said. "They have to drill a hole and fill it with water and measure how quickly it absorbs, then refill it and measure it again," he said. The findings of the test are included with the application for a permit from the state, Temple said, and will identify any need to widen the drainage field or otherwise upgrade the planned system. Depending on the soil conditions, an advanced, or aerobic, septic system might be required, and Battin noted that there was mention of that potential requirement in the subdivision's disclosure statement.

A representative of the Rockin' R subdivision said that adding language to the disclosure statement regarding the possible need for advanced septic systems should not be a problem.

County commissioner Eileen Lovelace asked if each three-acre tract would have its own domestic well and, if further divided in the future, the additional tracts would also have individual wells.

THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Work Ahead for Election Winners

By Ruth Hammond

Listening to the negative video ads would give the impression that many of the politicians aren't credible, or rather that is what politicians for national office and a few state offices were saying about their opponents. If those ads are true, does that mean the incumbents will continue to do the same things they did to instigate the negativism? And what about the challengers who won their seats even though negative things were said about them. Will they rise above the accusations and do the best job they can when they take their oaths of office? The pay for those political offices is not that much compared to the millions of dollars spent campaigning, both locally and nationally.

Obviously there must be some perks somewhere. Why else would candidates subject themselves to ridicule at the national or state level? It would be nice to believe that they want the office to make decisions at the national or state level that benefits the majority of the population.

That would be nice to believe, but is it true? Some of those politicians will go through the same thing in two years and millions more will be spent. Is it worth it? Or would the money be best spent on research to save lives?

Diseases don't stop for political campaigns. And will the winners take actions to help promote further research?

One thing is certain though, there will be changes at the national level now that the other party will control the House of Representatives. There might possibly be changes in the US Senate also but it could be weeks before the final tallies. Hopefully the changes will be for the betterment of all the people, not more negativism.

When negativism rears its ugly head, common sense seems to skulk into the shadows. And common sense will be needed to reduce the gulf that has eroded between the party affiliations during this election campaign. Elected officials will need to do their work diligently, not mutely. They will need to make decisions based not on how much it will benefit their own personal lives but benefit all of the people in the nation. Their work is cut out for them.

Needless to say, state politicians will also have much work to do to help heal rifts. And here at the county level there will be three new county commissioners. They will have the task of rising above petty differences to make decisions in the best interest of the entire county. There are many issues that will need to be stabilized and there will be opposition to some decisions that will be made. It is hoped that these new commissioners will listen to what people say and take that into consideration when they are asked to vote on pertinent items on the agenda. It will be up to them to put past disagreements behind them and to proceed with providing the best county government that is possible. We wish them all luck, there is work to do.

Rocking R Subdivision Gets Summary Plat

She suggested that there should be a way to prevent the drilling of additional wells if the property is divided again in the future.

County attorney Alan Morel explained that there are 13 exemptions from the state's subdivision laws. "If somebody comes in and wants to divide this among their family or get a mortgage exemption, those are exempt from the state regulations," Morel said. "If they apply to the state engineer for a water permit, they're going to get one," he said.

Battin suggested that, once the county has adopted a comprehensive plan, it could also adopt subdivision regulations that are more restrictive than those handed down by the state, and perhaps limit the use of individual domestic wells. "But we can't do that today, obviously," Battin said.

Morel said that the county could require shared well systems in every subdivision, after the comprehensive plan is in place.

Lovelace, a self-professed advocate for private property rights, said that the county commissioners need to do something to restrict the number of domestic wells.

Temple responded, "That would come down to basically making it tougher for everybody," Temple said, "then they're not going to be real happy because you'll be restricting what they can do on their property. It's a two-sided coin," he added.

The board of county commissioners approved the summary plat for the Rockin' R subdivision unanimously.

Inside the Capitol

by
MILLER

SANTA FE -- While much of the rest of the nation tried out electronic voting machines for the first time, New Mexico junked its machines and went back to paper ballots.

So, is New Mexico headed back to the dark ages or is the rest of the nation getting ready to learn what we already have? It depends on who you talk to.

New Mexico's return to the paper ballot is intended to boost confidence in the election system and to be sure there is a verifiable paper trail for recounts.

Gov. Bill Richardson, a supporter of the new system, leaned hard on the Legislature to move away from the current patchwork system to a uniform paper ballot system in every county. Eleven counties still used paper ballots. The remaining 22 had gone to various electronic systems.

And, as is typical for our fast-forward governor, he ordered it done immediately. He signed the legislation in March and said he wanted everything in place by November.

He got it, but the quick roll-out just might produce some of the same problems as the state's new computer system that is uniform for all of state government. Getting SHARE online in half the normal time has caused headaches throughout state government.

If the election ends up going fairly smoothly, Richardson and Secretary of State Rebecca Vigil-Giron can boast that New Mexico is one of the first states in the nation to meet all the requirements of the 2002 Help American Vote Act passed by Congress following the 2000 election debacle.

But it won't be easy. Many Republicans opposed the change to uniform paper ballots in the last legislative session. Sen. Pete Domenici calls them "an imposition on the people of this state." Pat Rogers, an attorney for Republicans, noted paper ballots can be manipulated through "low-tech fraud."

There is a genuine problem when one political party controls the election system. The other party always will have some mistrust of the process whether the change is to or from paper ballots. Canadians reportedly are pleased with the private contractor they use.

The primary fear about electronic voting machines is that votes are untraceable if they need to be rechecked.

New Mexico's razor thin presidential elections in 2000 and 2004 both had unexplained undercounts in the presidential race. One would expect that the vote for president would be the highest of any race on the ballot, but for some reason, it was the other way around.

Were electronic machines programmed incorrectly? Was there tampering? Did the machines just not count accurately? Those questions were never answered. So a lawsuit was filed by a liberal third-party group against the use of touch screen voting machines. The switch to a paper ballot system settled that suit.

churchyards lying,
Or in war's wildest wreckage -- still unfound
In these torn, piteous fields which they in dying,
Have for us all forever sanctified.
We cannot hallow more that holy ground;
All glory we would give them pales beside
The eternal splendor of those men, who thought
But of the sacred cause for which they fought.

And now, the battles done,
They who gave all, tis they alone who won.
In their great faith there was no
dark misgiving;
They saw no base self-seekers don the mask
Of high ideals, to batten on the living.
Their vision was a world secure and just Won by their victory -- their only task
To crush one heedeous foe;
and in that trust
They sped with eager feet, and paid the price,
Unstinting, of the last great sacrifice.

That faith they hold,
The peace for which they battled was pure gold,
And in their splendid zeal they died unshaken.
Knowing such sacred beauty fills their sleep,
Shall we yet mourn, or wish they might awaken
To find the golden peace so far debased?
Should we not rather pray that they may keep
Their shining vision spotless, undefaced,
Until the world, repentant and redeemed, Grow to the measure of the one they dreamed?

So let them rest,
They gave for us their dearest and their best,
They keep the holiest, Yet for their giving
Our fittest tribute is not grief and tears,
But the same ardent fision in our living As that which shone, compelling, in their eyes
Uncowed by Death and all his dreadful fears,
Then, when at least these glorious dreamers rise,
The world we keep for them might almost seem
The living, substances of their lofty dream.

Inside the Capitol

(Con't from P. 4)

We were told that paper ballots would mean shorter lines because there is little problem setting up extra voting stations for people to sit at and vote in private. But that hasn't been the case thus far.

One reason is the instruction that voters must completely fill in the oval next to their choice. In order to be sure their vote counts, many voters spent considerable time making sure there is no white space in those ovals.

lines is that the print on paper ballots is smaller than it is on electric screens, forcing us old timers to labor over the words.

But, we are told, everything will work out for the best in the long run. The equipment and software is less expensive. There is less maintenance and storage space is reduced by 90 percent.

Obviously, technology will improve electronic voting machines to the point that more people eventually will come to trust them more. Will that mean New Mexico will then be in the horse and buggy days? Or will the rest of the nation come join us?

GRIZZLY

WEEKLY

by Carrizozo High School JOURNALISM CLASS

Sarah Ball, Instructor

Junior Rotary

Carrizozo High School's Junior Rotary took a service trip to the Valley of Fires State Park on Wednesday, October 18, to clean up the park and paint the fence. Eleven high school students painted about 1,500 feet of wrought iron fencing that follows the trail throughout the park. In addition, they swept the bathrooms, polished the stainless steel and mopped the floor.

Junior Rotary is a nonprofit service organization at the high school that helps the community. In the past they have conducted canned food drives, hosted a breakfast for veterans and various other activities to help the community and make it better for the people that live here.

The project was organized by Eco-Servants run by Steven Carter. Eco-servants are also a non-profit organization which helps groups get funding to conduct service activities.

Eco-Servants was founded in 2003 and achieved its non-profit status in 2004. During 2006, it employed 36 young people. According to Steven Carter, "The purpose of Eco-Servants is to nurture and restore the community and its resources." Eco-Servants now stretches from Lincoln County into Otero County.

Senior Robert Dutchover stated, "It was a good reason to get out of school and give back to the community. It was fun."

Junior Jessie Hansell also said, "More than likely I'll do another community service project because I was able to help out and had fun, and it made me feel good. We take and take so it feels good to give back to the community."

Friday, November 10, the Junior Rotary will be hosting a complimentary breakfast for veterans at the Methodist Church across the street from the high school from 8:00 a.m. till 10:30 a.m.

Old Lincoln Town

by Rosalie Duplap

Tuesday was election day and I hope everyone voted. I am so glad not to have any more political ads. They were so negative you hated to turn on your TV. But if we didn't vote we really can't complain about our legislators and congressmen.

We were in Roswell on business Monday and had to wait for some legal papers to be processed. Later it was still fairly early afternoon so we decided to see "Flag of our Fathers". Everyone needs to see it as it is so dramatic and gives you an insight into the lives of those who raised the flag on Iwo Jima in World War II.

There will be church services at San Juan's every Sunday once again. Rev. Fr. Stephen Baker will have communion services every second and fourth Sundays and regular services every first and third Sunday. All the services will be at 10:30.

We are still having unusual weather. It is so warm in the daytime and cool at night. The weather forecast seems to be for continued warm weather.

Wasn't the full moon beautiful Sunday and Monday nights? It certainly is the fall moon.

The church will start their building in the near future. Mr. and Mrs. Loren Counts, of Tinnie, have given the building site. Rev. C.E. Rouse is now pastor of the church.

A Turn-Down

Vice President Barnhart of the National Surety company of New York said the other day that the modern girl expects a man to spend $50 at least when he takes her out for an evening, whereas her mother was content with an expenditure of $5.

"The modern girl, I'm afraid, is extravagant," Mr. Barnhart went on. "A young bank clerk proposed to a modern girl the other night:

"Darling," he wound up anxiously, "You could live on $60 a week, couldn't you?"

"The girl laughed. "Yes," she said, "but no longer."

Cattle Shipments

The Gallachers delivered a bunch of calves to the local yards Tuesday, which they had sold to buyers. Ab Hunter inspected them.

T.A. Spencer loaded out about 1,450 head of Block cows yesterday, which were shipped to the Texas Panhandle by the purchaser. Dr. Freeman did the inspecting.

Not Even A Toot

"You say the motorist who grazed you was callous and didn't give a hoot?"

"Not a hoot, your honor; he didn't touch his horn once."

**It's easier to fall in love than it is to get out of debt.
