

14th Annual Carrizozo Street Fair Sept. 3, Labor Day

'Birdhouse Auction is Saturday, September 1st'

Each year Carrizozo features a birdhouse auction as part of the annual Labor Day Street Fair. Birdhouses, made by committee members, are passed out to be painted and decorated in an amazing variety of ways by the local townsfolk.

Saturday, September 1, the birdhouses will be auctioned off at the 4 Winds Restaurant beginning at 6 p.m.

Funds received from the auction go toward a continuing education scholarship. This year, the scholarship was in the amount of $1,000 and was awarded to Thomas Vincent, a working father of three who has just completed his sophomore year at

Check out the birdhouses - they're on display at Antique Liquidators / the Big Blue Auction House and at the 4 Winds Restaurant. Come join in the auction to help raise funds for two scholarships this year!

And be sure to come to the Carrizozo Labor Day Street

Fair on Monday, September 3. The fun starts at 10 a.m. with the annual Labor Day Street Fair parade and activities in McDonald Park end at 3 p.m.

Enjoy live music by several bands, sidewalk art contests along 12th Street, lots of arts and crafts in McDonald Park, as well as a wonderful selec-

VOLUME #102, NUMBER 31 THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 2007 CARRIZOZO, NM 88301

EMPLOYEES and VOLUNTEERS of several local agencies responded to an emergency medical call for help in the White Mountain Wilderness last Saturday morning. A Carrizozo man who was horseback riding with his family was thrown from his mount and broke a leg. The 911 call for aid came in at about 8:30 on Saturday morning, according to Tim Bertrand of the US Forest Service. Members of the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department, the Nogal and Bonito Volunteer Fire Departments and the Forest Service responded. Although the Forest Service granted special permission to land a medical helicopter in the Wilderness Area, the patient's location was not safe for landing and take-off, so responders hiked approximately two miles into the forest to rescue the man, who was carried down to the Pennsylvania Canyon camping area on a portable gurney. A Ruidoso Advanced Life Support ambulance and crew transported the man to an open field on private property in Nogal Canyon, where there was ample room for the air-ambulance to land and fly the patient to a hospital in El Paso. The Southwest Medi-Vac chopper had been staged in Alamogordo prior to the call, Bertrand said. (Photo by Patrice Brazile)

Heritage Preserve Hearings Continue

by Patrice Brazile

The review of the application and associated documents for the Heritage Preserve at Ruidoso, a planned subdivision and development of the 1,365-acre Mesa Ranch, will continue through the September 5th meeting of the Lincoln County Planning Commission. While the final decision to approve the application falls to the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners, that board relies on Curt Temple, the county's planning director, and the planning commission to make an informed recommendation regarding that decision.

The oddly coincidental and almost simultaneous resignations from three planning commissioners just days before the August 8th public hearing on the proposed subdivision prompted an agreement to continue that hearing on August 22, to allow newly appointed planning commissioners a chance to familiarize themselves with the proposal and the application process. Representatives of the subdivision agreed again on the 22nd that the planning commissioners could use a little more time to review the volumes of information included with the application and to consider the concerns of residents living near the proposed development.

Recently appointed planning commissioners Jennifer Dorgan, Wayne Stephens, Fred Hansen, Robert Moeller and Dave LaFave as well as chair Jim Crouse and vice-chair Jerry Carroll were all present for the public hearing on August 22nd. About 40 people attended, including residents of Loma Grande Estates and representatives of the developer.

At the opening of the public hearing, Stephens complained about having just received new information relating to the subdivision application. "I don't like receiving information and having to read it at the meeting," Stephens said. "I wish you'd present it to us at least a week in advance and make it available to the other members of the public," he told Desdre Shelley, a representative of the developer. "Makes the hair on the back of my neck stand up," Stephens added.

Shelley updated the planning commission on some issues, saying that certain engineering discrepancies in the plat map had been resolved, and that they are awaiting easements from the U.S. Forest Service before beginning the widening of Ranger Road, also called Forest Service Road 131.

"The right-of-way easements are owned by the Forest Service, not the county,"

County Wants To Keep Track of Mobile Homes

by Patrice Brazile

The Lincoln County Commissioners held a public hearing on August 21st to hear comments on a proposed new ordinance designed to track the movement of prefabricated, manufactured and mobile homes. County attorney Alan Morel acknowledged early in the hearing that the ordinance had grown some in its scope. "This ordinance does go a little bit beyond what we discussed at our last meeting," Morel said. "We have incorporated a number of different things into this ordinance to accomplish a number of different goals," he said.

Morel told the county commissioners that the primary goal of the ordinance was to create a method by which county officials can ensure that a mobile unit is not moved out of the county with an outstanding tax debt.

"Secondarily, we also need to know where they're moving it," Morel said. "If they move it out into the middle of 160 acres, we don't have the ability to put them on the rolls for property tax assessment because we don't know where it is."

An element added to the proposed ordinance essentially requires that a mobile be registered with the county and issued an official address before utility companies may connect services to the unit. Utilities are defined as electrical service, natural or propane gas, delivery, water, sewer and land line telephone services.

After meeting with the county assessor, treasurer, clerk and rural addresser, Morel said, the draft ordinance was found to need further revision. He suggested that all of the county officials meet to complete the ordinance revisions, and that the document then be sent to utility providers for comment. He recommended placing the adoption of the ordinance on the county commissioners' agenda for September.

Jerry Carroll, of Oscura, asked the county commissioners if the ordinance would be retroactive, and if the board of commissioners actually had the authority to restrict the delivery of propane.

Morel said that the ordinance would not apply retroactively, and that he believed the county did have such authority.

K-Bob's Returning to Ruidoso in '08

After more than a year, K-Bob's Steakhouse, a favorite restaurant in the Ruidoso community, will be returning to the city with a brand new location.

The new restaurant, which is set to open in May of 2008, will be located in the new Avalon Town Center that is currently under construction on Highway 70, across the street from the new Wal-Mart store and overlooking Ruidoso Downs.

In addition to the new K-Bob's Steakhouse, the center, which is being developed by Avalon Properties is scheduled to include a design center featuring specialty building products, an art gallery, a hand-crafted furniture store and a GameStop, the world's largest video game retailer. "K-Bob's has been an integral part of the Ruidoso community and Lincoln County for 26 plus years," said Edward R. Tinsley, president and CEO of K-BOB'S USA, Inc. "We are thrilled to have the opportunity to come back to Ruidoso and serve the same great food that our customers have grown to know and love."

Heritage Preserve Hearings

Shelley explained. "So the county has to obtain the easements in order for us to do the improvements on the road." The New Mexico Department of Transportation (NMDOT) has requested construction drawings illustrating a left turn lane on Highway 37 at Ranger Road, Shelley said, and an engineer has been hired to prepare those drawings.

Crouse had some concerns about the disclosure statement, which indicated that the nearest town to the subdivision is Nogal. "There's nothing there," Crouse said, and explained that Nogal is not actually a town because it was never incorporated. He suggested that Capitan be named on the disclosure statement as the closest town, or possibly Carrizozo. He also suggested that wells downstream from the subdivision could be affected by the number of individual septic tanks draining into the underground water system, but acknowledged that there is nothing that can be done about that under current regulations. "We can't do much about that, even though it's really going to hurt the people downstream," Crouse said.

The developers of Heritage Preserve at Ruidoso will require each home in the subdivi-vision to be equipped with a rainwater collection and storage system to conserve water pumped from the ground, but Crouse objected to that requirement. "If I were Hondo Pecos Valley Water Association and I saw that going, I'd sue," Crouse said. He suggested that rainwater collection might be a violation of a state law that says you can't interfere with any stream. "If you interfere with a stream before it becomes a stream, I think you're interfering with a stream," he said.

Along with a left turn lane on Highway 37 at Ranger Road, Crouse would also like to see a right hand deceleration lane. "When Cora Dutton Road is paved, it's going to be horrendous, because that's going to be the main freeway to Capitan," Crouse said. "I would like to see the state department of transportation look at that again," Crouse said of the traffic study connected with the development. He said he'd also like to have a traffic count conducted over a weekend in the summer, instead of a weekday in November as was done for the subdivision's traffic study.

Shelley explained that the NMDOT incorporates data from other traffic studies when it makes an assessment, but Crouse said that any data gathered more than four years ago would probably be inaccurate. "I live right off that road, and I have to get on and off it all the time," Crouse said. "The traffic in the past two years has probably quadrupled."

The ongoing questions of how much water is underground, where it comes from and where it goes, and what existing wells might be affected by new ones was debated again, but there is still no defining information available to back up one point of view or another. Water studies being performed by the U.S. Geological Survey and Sandia Laboratories, in conjunction with Lincoln County and some residents, are a couple of years away from rendering comprehensive data.

Dorgan raised a question about the planned equestrian trail corridors in the subdivision, which she said appeared to be in the middle of the Magado Creek drainage system. "How are you going to manage people riding through those corridors if it's actually in the middle of a drainage ditch?" Dorgan asked Shelley.

Shelley said that the drainage would be managed through the use of culverts and widened paths.

When asked if there might be cost or depth triggers that would prompt the developer to allow individual wells rather than shared well systems, Shelley told the planning commissioners that Heritage Preserve has drilled wells as deep as 1,300 feet in other developments, but the Heritage Preserve at Ruidoso wells will range from 50 to 300 feet deep. She said that the only circumstance under which an individual well would be approved would be if the developers were unable to run water lines to a particular home site. "We don't see any issues with getting pipe throughout the entire development," Shelly said.

A statement from the Office of the State Engineer (OSE) based water usage estimates for the subdivision on the assumption that 25 percent of the home sites will also have guest houses, for a total of 316 homes on the property. The OSE report estimates total domestic water use in the development to be 62.81 acre feet annually, but also says the estimate may be higher than actual usage because it assumes that guest houses will be fully occupied 365 days per year.

Dorgan pointed out that the OSE estimate does not include staff houses, which will be allowed on individual home sites.

Crouse said it would be nice if the planning commission could see where each of the subdivisions wells will be located, but Shelley told him they haven't doused the wells yet.

Dorgan asked if the developers would be willing to improve Pfingsten and Juniper Springs roads, as those would likely be the routes used by emergency vehicles to access the subdivision. She also asked if they would be willing to pay for the cost of building a fire station within the development, and Shelley said probably not.

Shelley said that she had been working with the fire chief in Nogal, Ken Cramer, and that the cost of a new station will be budgeted by the county because the area has grown rapidly and there is a need for additional fire stations.

Dorgan also expressed concern over the development company's right to amend its disclosure statement. She asked if they would be willing to file the disclosure statement as a deed restriction.

A representative of the developer said that some elements of the disclosure statement might require amendment if, for example, a hospital was some day built in Carrizozo, or if Cora Dutton Road ever gets paved. He also said that he thought the company would agree to comply with the revised subdivision ordinance on that particular issue.

Lincoln County's attorney, Alan Morel, told the planning commissioners that the county's subdivision ordinance is currently being revised, and that ordinance will require that any changes to a subdivision's disclosure statement be first approved by the board of county commissioners.

Three test wells were drilled on the ranch, and Dorgan asked why no test well was drilled on the western portion of the property. The hydrologist for the project said that the property is fed by a single aquifer and therefore he found three test wells to be adequate. He said the OSE agreed.

Dorgan, as well as several local residents, questioned the developer's ability to ensure enforcement of its own covenants, especially in future years when enforcement will become the task of a homeowners association.

Carroll said he thought the planning commissioners still needed time to further review the information provided by the developer.

Morel said that the commissioners should ask the developer to waive the time requirement that mandates a decision from the planning commission within 30 days of the initial presentation of the application.

All parties agreed to continue the review of the Heritage Preserve at Ruidoso subdivision application until the next regular meeting of the planning commission on September 5th.

Tales of the Chiefs

By Editha L. Watson

SPEMICALAWBA

The Indian boy, crouching in a corner, wished with all his wild young heart that he might be invisible. The white soldiers killed Indians, that he knew, but they were quick to see everything, and he was unable to run away without their seeing him. It was wrong to show fear, but all the same, the lad was afraid -- terribly afraid. His black eyes were the only part of him that moved, as he huddled into as small a space as possible, hardly daring to breathe.

General Logan, with his troops, was on an expedition against the Ohio tribes. The general was not a hardhearted man, and when he spied the young Shawnee, his impulse of kindness took practical form. The boy was made a captive, but he was well treated, and when the general returned to his home in Kentucky, the lad accompanied him.

Here he was given treatment such as the young Indian had not dreamed possible. He was taken into the Logan family and given the general's name -- an honor of itself. He went to school and received the education of a white boy. And when this was over, and the lad had grown into a youth, he was sent back to his people.

Although he was called by the Shawnee Spemicalawba, or "High Horn," to the whites he was known as Capt. James Logan. His life in the good general's household had implanted in him an ardent friendship for the white race, and he did all that he could to prove his loyalty, even to death.

He opposed Tecumseh, his uncle, when that brilliant orator flamed through the country trying to kindle the spark of resentment into the fire of war. Unable to dissuade Tecumseh from his plans, Logan did the next best thing; he enlisted in the War of 1812, and served the American forces well as scout and spy.

It was during this service that Logan proved his loyalty with his life. During an engagement against greater numbers, his party had been forced to retreat. While the move was a legitimate one under the circumstances, and such as they themselves would have made in a similar case, some of the thoughtless white soldiers questioned Logan's good faith. Some thought that he should have stood against the enemy, if he had died in the attempt; others felt that he had joined the army with the purpose in mind to delay and complicate matters. Who could tell what was in the mind of an Indian? And Logan, for all his education and training, was an Indian still.

Logan was hurt by this slander. He knew it to be unwarranted, and he determined to accomplish some deed which would clear his name and establish his honesty for all time.

With two Indian companions, he went down the Maumee river, hoping to find an enemy. This hope soon became a reality, for Captain Elliot of the British army, with five Indians, appeared, and at once declared Logan and his men prisoners.

Here was the opportunity for which the chief had longed. Watching their chance, the three Indians attacked their captors, made a brave fight, and succeeded in killing Elliot and two of his men. Logan was not unharmed, however -- he and one of his men were severely wounded.

Great was the surprise in General Winchester's camp, when the three Indians entered it, bringing with them the horses of their conquered enemies. Logan felt that he had vindicated his honor, and he was proud. His wounds, however, were deep and serious, and soon deprived him of his triumph. The agony was more than he could

PHS Donates Phase III Property to Lincoln County

Presbyterian Healthcare Services announced Monday that it will present a letter of commitment to the transfer of Presbyterian-owned property to Lincoln County.

Jim Hinton, president and CEO of Presbyterian Healthcare Services, presented Tom Battin, commissioner of Lincoln County, the letter of commitment.

The property is located adjacent to Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC) in Ruidoso and will be used in phase III construction, which includes building a center for rehabilitation services. The lot is more than a half of an acre and is ideally located to enhance the flow of outpatient activity.

"Presbyterian has been a partner with Lincoln County since 1973 to build and expand healthcare in the community," said Hinton. "It is our privilege to be here and help improve the health and also the quality of life to the citizens of Lincoln County."

Phase III construction was approved by the county commissioners on August 21 to go out for bid. Jim Gibson, administrator of LCMC, hopes that construction will begin by November 1, 2007.

"We could not have a better partner than Presbyterian as we look toward the future of Lincoln County," said Battin. "We face huge challenges with growth in our community and see no signs of a slowdown, but I am confident that through this partnership we will meet those challenges to continue to provide the excellent healthcare that exists today."

Presbyterian serves to improve the health of individuals, families and communities. Presbyterian Healthcare Services was founded in New Mexico in 1908, and is the state's only private, not-for-profit healthcare system. Presbyterian offers seven hospitals, a statewide health plan, and a growing multi-specialty medical group. Presbyterian employs more than 9,500 people throughout New Mexico.

THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Labor Day Weekend Ahead

By Ruth Hammond

When this three day weekend rolls around you might be lucky enough to not have to work, even though it is Labor Day weekend, but many people are scheduled to put in their time. Emergency workers will be busy, and this includes law enforcement, ambulance, fire and other necessary personnel. Please be safe and don't do anything to cause emergency people to have to come to your aid.

Other things will be happening before the hoopla and the Carrizozo Labor Day Street Fair activities. The county has a new visioning committee that meets today at 2 p.m. and it is interesting that the main reason given for this new committee was to consider a six month moratorium on new subdivisions but that is not on the agenda today. Yes, they do need to get organized, but it would seem that the purpose for this new committee would be uppermost.

Regardless of whether the county decides to impose a six month moratorium on subdivisions, not everyone will be happy. Some believe the moratorium is needed while others object and insist it would slow down growth in the county. Both sides have valid reasons for their opinions. Wait and see what the county commissioners finally do.

Keeping with the wait and see situations can be tricky at times. Tuesday, September 11 is the anniversary of the tragedy at Twin Towers, but here in Lincoln County there could be other volatile issues at municipal council meetings on that day. If you want first hand information about what happens, circle the date on your calendar and attend the meeting of your choice and ask questions. The responses you receive might not be what you want to hear but remember that you are the public and have a right to ask questions and you deserve to get an honest answer.

It is only with public involvement that government will continue to be open, as it should be. Legislation has been suggested at the state level to have their committee meetings open but for some (?) reason it never passes. It only makes sense that committee meetings should include the public, not a select few to testify. Deliberations by the legislators should be in the open for everyone to hear. That way more people would know what was happening.

Now that more politicians are announcing candidacy for office, with elections to be held in 14 months, maybe more candidates will be willing to discuss what should or should not be done, whether committee meetings should be open at the state level, and what changes need to be made at the national level as well as at the county level.

Getting to meet some of those candidate may begin at the Carrizozo Labor Day Street Fair. It is a good bet that some candidates will attend and ask for your vote. But if not, there will be other activities to keep you busy. Please attend, and enjoy and forget about work even if it is the Labor Day weekend. And above all, please be safe.

County Requests Loan for Lincoln Fire Station

by Patrice Brazie

During their regular meeting on August 21, the Lincoln County Commissioners approved a loan application for $200,000 to build an addition to the Lincoln Fire Station.

County commission chair Tom Battin reminded the board that Lincoln County requested state legislative funding for the project last year, but the request was denied.

Battin said the situation with the fire station has become critical because the fire department will soon be in need of a newer fire truck, and the new models won't fit in the old fire station.

Battin read from a memorandum from county manager Tom Stewart in which Stewart spelled out the plan to upgrade the Lincoln fire department. "The plan now is to obtain an NMFA (New Mexico Finance Authority) loan instead of legislative funding for the station addition and begin that project immediately," Stewart wrote. The manager said that the county will then request legislative funding for a new pumper/tanker truck for the Lincoln department.

Stewart also wrote that he has received a ball park estimate on the cost of the addition, which should run at about $200,000. He said the Lincoln Fire Department holds that amount in its reserves, so any cost overruns above the requested loan amount can be absorbed by the fire department's budget. Any monies left in the department's fund after the addition is completed can be applied to paying off the pumper/tanker if necessary, Stewart added.

The county commissioners unanimously approved the loan application.

Also on August 21, the county commissioners approved a request from the Bonito Fire Department to pay off a NMFA loan early. According to Stewart, the Bonito department is currently making payments on four separate loans from the NMFA. The payments on a $128,206 loan for the Sonterra Fire Station, initiated in 1999, amount to about $15,000 per year and are scheduled for a final pay off date of 2009. Stewart said Bonito Fire Chief Carl Bartley would like to have the loan paid off early to make funds available to support another loan in the near future for a new truck. The $55,000 combined annual payments on the four NMFA loans left the Bonito department with an annual operating budget of about $120,000, Stewart said. A single payment of $24,660 will close out the Sonterra loan.

County commissioners approved the pay off unanimously.

SANTA FE -- New Mexico is a fun place to live. Our wide open spaces seem to attract adventure, mystery and wild notions about what causes the West to be wild.

The wildest notions of all involve flying saucers and visitors from outer space. Books and movies about space creatures usually take place in big cities but stories about claimed encounters invariably happen in the middle of nowhere.

New Mexico has more than its share of these encounters. Three crashes have been claimed near Roswell, one near Socorro, one near Magdalena and one near Aztec, which has since been recanted. But visitors still stop there on UFO treks through New Mexico.

Then, there is the monstrous, underground UFO base in northern Rio Arriba County, in the vicinity of reported cattle mutilations. And there are reports of alien abductions all over the place.

Why do space aliens prefer New Mexico? It all seemed to start in 1947 a little less than two years after, and a little less than 100 miles from, Earth's first nuclear explosion.

New Mexico also has the world's largest listening station for audio transmissions from outer space, located on the Magdalena Flats, not far from a reported UFO crash.

Ufologists say that the Roswell crashes are among the less believable encounters that have been reported. But until a spaceship lands somewhere and an alien says, "Take me to your leader," Roswell will remain the UFO capital of the world.

That's because Roswell is the only place a government ever has claimed to have captured a flying saucer. Sure, the story changed the next day and changed twice more 50 years later. You can bet the farm that none of the military top brass, sitting around a conference table at Roswell Army Air Force Base, on July 8, 1947, believed we had found a flying saucer. They figured it was something secret being developed at White Sands Proving Grounds, or some other secret site, that needed covering up. So an instance of governmental secrecy gave thousands of space nuts over the past 60 years their best opportunity ever to invent a whole wave of slightly believable conspiracy theories.

It has helped our tourism immeasurably. The state Tourism Department currently is using space creatures to promote New Mexico as the best place in the universe to visit. Roswell tourism has boomed for more than a decade and now appears to be turning into economic development.

The past few years have seen a focus on a possible conspiracy between Sheriff Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid for Garrett to shoot someone else and claim it was the Kid so Billy could sneak away and live a boring life in Arizona or Texas. The Texas claim is ludicrous. The Arizona claim is difficult to prove or disprove because no one ever got to interview John Miller. But the recent controversy over digging everyone up has led to an increase in magazine issues devoted to Billy.

Also there may be new information on the hundred tons of gold reputedly buried at Victorio Peak a few miles east of where Spaceport America will be located. The story of buried treasure has involved presidents, the Treasury Department, the CIA, digging by the Army, the Watergate hearings, P. Lee Bailey and some deaths.

Many stories tell of caverns under Victorio and nearby hills, filled with gold and treasure from nearby Spanish mines.

All legal activity ceased in the area after the Army took it over for White Sands Missile Range. The Army insists that there is no treasure there and that it has never even looked.

This may be New Mexico's greatest unsolved mystery.

Goathead Gold Mine

What is seen as a noxious weed by many can now be turned into a cash crop.

The seed pod of Tribulus terrestris, commonly known as goatheads, puncture vine or toritos, is readily available to the industrious soul to market to Chinese medicine practitioners.

"This plant, commonly considered a noxious weed, is a useful medicinal herb in Chinese and western medicine," said Charles Martin, New Mexico State University researcher working at the Sustainable Agriculture Science Center in Alcalde.

Martin is collecting the pods as part of an herb economic development program.

Martin is buying the pods from 4-H clubs and other youth groups across the state to be included in sample packs that are to be distributed by the Medicinal Herb Consortium, directed by medicinal herbalist Jean Gilette of High Falls Gardens in Philmont, N.Y. The consortium of herb grower associations in five states, including New Mexico, makes domestically grown or wild-harvested plants used in oriental medicine available to acupuncturists and practitioners through a sample pack of about 35 herbs. Ci Ji Li - the Chinese name for the plant known in New Mexico as goathead - is one of them.

"The packets are to let Chinese medicine practitioners know the quality of herbs that are available from American farmers," Gilette said. "Charles Martin has been supplying us Tribulus terrestris for a couple of years."

To stimulate an interest among New Mexicans in providing the herb, Martin is encouraging 4-H clubs and other youth groups to collect and dry the pods. Goathead season is at its peak now as the tiny yellow blossom turns into a green pod, which is what herbalists like to use in various Chinese medicine formulas.

"This is a great opportunity for kids to earn some cash for school and to learn about underutilized plant species," Martin said. "Puncture vine or goathead is just one of many plants we consider to be weeds that have medicinal properties and therefore could be cash crops if more people just knew about them."

The right time to pick the goathead pods is when it is in its green, ripe stage, not brown, over-ripe or moldy. "Not when it is a woody stickler that attaches itself to anything it comes in contact with, including shoe soles or bicycle tires," he said, adding that the large whole pods are preferred.

Goathead Gold

Giblette said Tribulus terrestris is listed in the "Divine Farmer's Materia Medica," the oldest record of herbs used as medicinal in China. The book includes a wealth of historical information about early descriptions and usages of approximately 300 Chinese herbs. The ancient publication was created by Shen Nong, the Divine Farmer, who legend says, taught his country about agriculture and medicinal herbs.

Giblette said the ground, dried goathead pod is included in many of the Chinese medicine formulas used to address pathogenic changes in internal organ functions.

The use of Tribulus terrestris as a dietary supplement became recognized in western countries after the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, where it was revealed that the gold medal weightlifting team from Bulgaria had used the herb for a natural, endocrine system stimulant to boost testosterone production and thus increase their muscle mass. It boosts the endocrine system in both men and women.

"You see it on the market at health food stores selling for around $20 for a bottle of 60 capsules," Martin said. "That's why I am encouraging people to collect this plant as a cash crop. This is just one of many under-utilized plants we are trying to develop into a product with economic value. It's a matter of raising people's awareness to the potential that is out there."

For more information on collection, drying, quality control, grading and criteria for packaging, contact Martin at (505) 852-4241 or email cmartin@nmsu.edu.

New Principal

Mr. Robert Cobos was hired to be our new principal at Carrizozo Schools. He has taught math for nine years and has been a principal for 16 years at Mesa Middle School in Roswell. He plans on "increasing the athletic spirit, and help students recognize and take charge of their own learning." He believes that you must "know where you are so that you know where you are going."

Mr. Cobos is looking forward to getting to know the teachers and students. He feels strongly about students behaving well in class. His favorite school sports are football and basketball. He is "very ecstatic" about the upgrade in technology available and the learning possibilities. Also, he believes that there should be restrictions on homework. "I feel that the person better qualified to help the students with homework is the teacher that gave them the homework. Therefore, it should be class work." He feels that if homework is given it should be work students can do on their own. In addition, Mr. Cobos would like to see some landscaping improvements done for the use of our staff, students, and community.

He did make some changes in his old school. One change was a uniform requirement at his old middle school in Roswell, and another was he helped his teachers and students have a positive attitude about everything coming their way.

Mr. Cobos plans on staying in our school district for five years or more. He also plans on retiring and staying in this area. At this moment he does not see open campus as a problem. "If it causes tardiness to their fifth period, it will become a major problem."

The expectation Mr. Cobos has for us students is to "work hard and have a great time here in Carrizozo schools."

He originally came from Dexter. He has five sisters and one brother. He is the youngest. When he was younger, he wanted to be a singer or a movie star. His role model back then was his mother. His dad had passed way when he was nine; therefore, his mom became his everything. She had very positive influence and was there for him all the time. She was long suffering and caring.

Now his role model is his wife because she is the greatest person, compassionate, friendly and doesn't have a mean bone in her body. He is happily married and has four daughters and one son.

His favorite movies are Tombstone and Shawshank Redemption. His favorite animal is a Labrador. He likes to listen to oldies music and watch movies with a good message on life.

Three of his favorite quotes are "Don't get so busy making a living you forget to make a life," "Get it done," and "If you look for the bad in mankind you will surely find it." He currently lives in Ruidoso.

Recycling Plastic Plant Containers

They come in all sizes and shapes. Plastic plant containers for flowers, shrubs and trees, shaped in squares, flats, racks, or tubs. Generally colored blue, green, purple, or black, and in sizes all the way from pints to 25 gallons. Made of PET plastic grades 1 through 6. This "seasonal plastic," appearing mostly during the warmer time of the year, has a considerable impact on the solid waste stream in Lincoln and Otero counties. Toss no mas! Regardless of size, shape, or color, all of them are recyclable.

In 2003, the US generated more than 26.7 million tons of plastic - 11.3 percent of solid waste generation. The amount has increased from less than one percent in 1960 to 11.3 percent in 2003. More than 1,800 businesses nationwide now handle or recycle post-consumer plastic, primarily HDPE (the plastic found in milk bottles) and PET (the plastic found in soda bottles and plant containers). Use of hard or soft plastic in manufacturing is growing rapidly as producers increasingly "light weight" larger, rugged new products like cars and appliances with plastic. Primary re-use markets are fiber for carpet and textiles, drink bottles, landscaping and garden products and house insulation.

Plastics should be recycled for both economic and environmental reasons. Plant containers don't ever decom-

"We have a fair number of patients from Alamogordo, Tularosa, and Roswell. They've heard that we provide good service."

Through a partnership with Dennis Worthington, MD, Lincoln County Medical Center offers a full range of gastrointestinal procedures.

What kinds of health problems do you treat?

Basically, I treat digestive problems like acid reflux, stomach ulcers, stomach cancer, colon polyps and colon cancer. I also treat people with hepatitis of various sorts including hepatitis B and C.

What health information do you wish your patients knew?

Wish they knew or wish they would do? I wish they would all eat a high fiber diet, because it will decrease the risk of colon cancer and help prevent many other digestive disorders.

What is a high fiber diet?

Basically a diet that emphasizes vegetables, fruits, nuts, and whole grains and, generally speaking, eating smaller portions of animal-based foods and junk foods, which don't have any fiber. Most of us don't get even half the fiber we probably were designed to have. A high fiber diet is also rich in antioxidants, which eat up the cancer-causing free radicals in your system.

Why is getting a colonoscopy so important?

Because 90 percent of colon cancer is preventable. Polyps - the bumps inside the colon that can grow into colon cancer - take anywhere from six to ten years to become cancerous. If we do colonoscopies every 5 to 10 years starting at age 50, we can remove the polyps before they go bad. Patients with a family history of colon cancer should start getting colonoscopies at age 40.

What can you say about the quality of LCMC?

It's very good. It's not a large hospital, but the statistics show that our care is absolutely excellent. The doctors stay on top of their game, and there's a lot of constructive peer review of the care that doctors provide. We have a really awesome crew in the operating room. There isn't a day that goes by that I don't have at least one patient say, "Man, what a terrific crew you have over there. They're so friendly and so efficient." They're just an excellent group.

Recycling Plastic

pose in landfills and can build up in garages, green houses and gardens for years.

How can you recycle plastic plant containers? After setting your plants in the ground, there are several options for recycling empty plastic plant containers. One is to return them to the original nursery or discount store where you shopped for recycling. Another is to return the empty plant containers to the green multi-product recycling dumpster in the Ruidoso Downs Wal-Mart parking lot. Or drop off empty plastic plant containers in designated cardboard recycling dumpsters, or specially marked plastic recycling blue or green dumpsters across Lincoln County. Residents in the Alto Village area or landscapers may drop off plastic plant containers at the new Alto Convenience station. In Otero County, clean plastic may be dropped off at the La Luz or LaVelle convenience sites.

County Wants To Keep Track of

Carroll told the county commissioners that Lincoln County used to be a county of freedom. "What we're headed into is a county the same as Dallas or Los Angeles where everything is regulated and you've got to have a permit to even breathe," he said. "I'm not opposed, in essence, to the registration or the paying taxes or having the permit to move," Carroll said. "When you toss in the rest of this stuff, you're restricting the ability of some people to actually live. I think that's a bit farther outside your range, even though the attorney says that's perfectly legal," Carroll added. He suggested that the county could get the job done without being quite so restrictive.

Carroll said that trailers can be used for purposes other than residential dwelling, and that many people owned by their parents. He suggested that an ordinance that simply required notification to the county whenever a unit was sold should remedy any problems the county might face.

Carroll said that trailers have them on their property simply for storage. He added that people use propane for farming, ranching and other purposes not associated with the operation of a dwelling, and that the ordinance might unfairly restrict one's access to propane. "Some people use wood for heat and you can't regulate that," Carroll said. He suggested that the ordinance might more appropriately restrict only those utilities that are physically attached to an active dwelling unit. The county commissioners agreed to further consider the ordinance and address it again during their meeting of September 18th.

endure, and after suffering for two days, he died.

The Indian captain was buried with military honors, to the envy of the other Indians in the camp. General Winchester and Major Hardin eulogized him as a man of courage, intelligence, and sincerity. The general wrote to General (afterward President) Harrison that "more firmness and consummate bravery have seldom appeared on the military theater. He was buried with all the honors due to his rank, and with sorrow as sincerely and generally displayed as ever I witnessed."

The Sixth Nation

The Five Nations of Iroquois Indians occupied the best lands of New York state, and many are still found there. In 1712, another tribe moved up from North Carolina, asked to join the Iroquois, and were given land along the Chenango river. They were named Tuscaroras, meaning "shirt-weavers," and became one of the Iroquois Six Nations. The original Iroquois were the MOhaws, the Oneidas, the Onondagas, the Cayugas, and the Senecas.

The average cost per pupil for education in the Raton, NM schools was lower last year than the year previously, according to the report of the auditors, which was recently presented to the board of education. The average cost per pupil in the year just ended was $100.27, while the year before it was $107.56.

Negotiation for money to build roads in Indian country of northwestern New Mexico and northeastern Arizona are progressing rapidly. Supt. John G. Hunter of Fort Defiance was in conference with Navajo county officials at Holbrook, Ariz., to secure approval of a project from the state line to Orabi, Ariz.

Arizona is rich in semi-precious stones, according to experts who have estimated that at least 61 various kinds of gems can be found in the state. Many of the stones are of quality sufficient to give them commercial value. Perfect specimens of turquoise, amethyst, and other types of semi-precious stones of considerable value are available.

Additional hospital facilities for New Mexico veterans are made available by the opening of the new $1,250,000 hospital at Albuquerque. The 250-bed institution will be filled at an early date it is predicted, although no more than 20 patients per day will be received at the beginning. This new veterans hospital has been brought to New Mexico largely through the activity of the American Legion at Albuquerque, able assisted by our congressmen in Washington.

The anti-Chinese campaign is causing hundreds of Orientals to flee from the Mexican states of Sonora and Sinaloa to the safety of the American border, and deportation to their native land.

Payment of gasoline refunds provided by the New Mexico legislature has been ordered by the state supreme court.

The court held the refund measures was adequate and constitutional. The decision brings to an end a two year court fight over the constitutionality of the law. Applications totaling $25,000 will be paid immediately.

Carrizozo Public Schools

Carrizozo Schools start this year, Monday morning, September 5th.

Despite the forced entrenchment program in the public school system of our city, word comes from our local school authorities that the work and efficiency of the educational program this year will not be impaired.

The high standard for which our school is noted awaits the students who desire to continue their education in Carrizozo this year. Although enforcing the most rigid economy in all school expenditures, Carrizozo will still maintain schools fully accredited by both the New Mexico State Department of Education and the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of America.

We are anticipating the greatest year in the history of the Carrizozo Schools, and invite you to give your boys and girls the opportunity of an education justly due them.

County commission vice-chair Eileen Lovelace questioned how a penalty for non-compliance would be issued. "If they take utilities out there without permission, who pays the penalty, the landowner or the utility company?" Lovelace asked.

Morel said that either party could be penalized. The ordinance mandates a fine of up to $300 and/or incarceration of no more than 90 days.

Rick Silva, Lincoln County Assessor, said that when a mobile unit is purchased at a dealership, the dealer issues a permit and sends a copy to the county. "Bottom line is we have a lot of moonlighters out there," Silva said, "and those are the ones that we're trying to stop." Silva said that there is a benefit to getting a permit to move a mobile out of a municipality and into an unincorporated part of the county, because there would be reduced property taxes. He also said that when taxes are not collected on a mobile unit located in a school district, the school students are not getting their fair share of funding.

Lovelace defended an individual's right to set up a mobile home on his or her own property and live without utilities if they so wish. "I feel like government has gotten to the point where we are telling everybody what they can and cannot do, and it's got to stop somewhere," Lovelace said.

Silva said that it was important for emergency response teams to know the location of all occupied dwellings.

Former county commissioner Ken Nosker said that there are a lot of situations in the county where young people cannot afford to buy a home other than a mobile or modular, and they often move the unit onto property

K-Bob's Returning

The new restaurant will feature the same menu and atmosphere the restaurant's customers have known for years, but in a brand-new location and bigger building.

"The age of the old location led us to search for a way to build a bigger, better K-Bob's that would continue to serve this community for years to come," said Michael W. Myers, chief operating officer of K-Bob's USA, Inc. "This brand new building will allow us to provide our customers with the great food that K-Bob's is known for in a better atmosphere with more comfortable seating than the previous location."

According to Tinsley, who has owned the company since 1991 and who's family has operated a ranch in Lincoln County for nearly 50 years, things may be different in the new location, but customers can expect the same type of dining experience they're used to.

"The design and look will be exciting, new and fresh, but we will have the traditional great food, unbeatable steaks and our world famous Salad Wagon®," said Tinsley.
