

Nobody Knows! Questions Remain Unanswered

by Patrice Brazie

During last month's meeting of the Carrizozo Town Council, Carrizozo Police Chief Carrie Spencer raised questions about the town's employee overtime pay policy, after discovering that the town clerk Leann Weihbrecht had paid herself and her assistant for hundreds of hours of overtime work. By ordinance, the Carrizozo town clerk is not eligible for overtime pay. The money paid to the two employees amount to more than $18,000, according to reports.

Tuesday evening's meeting of the Carrizozo Town Council brought about 70 people to the town hall, with some mumblings about government oversight, accountability and transparency in the actions of their elected officials. The meeting got off to a slow start with the town trustees, clerk and attorney going into a closed executive session just after approval of last month's meeting minutes.

Mayor LeeRoy Zamora cited personnel and legal matters as the cause for the closed session, and told the attendees that it was necessary to hold the closed session before the public comments portion of the meeting began.

Before opening the meeting to audience participation, Zamora said that anyone with questions about the town budget would have to wait for the results of a state audit to get any real answers. "We have called for a state audit," Zamora said. Martin Ortega from the New Mexico Department of Finance and Administration will conduct the audit.

Carrizozo resident Joe Thornton was first to address the town council. "You may or may not know what grass roots activism is," Thornton told the trustees. "That's when your bosses show up, and your bosses are here tonight." Thornton asked the Carrizozo trustees why the town officials are unable to make monthly financial records available to the public, and said that the trustees should attempt to rebuild trust among their bosses. He said the quickest way to gain that trust would be to start "graciously and eagerly"

Plan Comm Gives OK to Heritage Preserve

by Patrice Brazie

After two public hearings and extensive discussions of the planned Heritage Preserve at Ruidoso subdivision, the Lincoln County Planning Commission voted last week to recommend approval of the project's preliminary plan to the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners.

Some new members of the planning commission expressed concerns about the limitations on that commission's ability to protect neighbors of the proposed development from possible detrimental effects on their wells and other issues that might affect the quality of life now enjoyed there.

Representatives of the development have proposed what amounts to the most ecologically friendly subdivision the area has seen, but there are few, if any, regulations to guarantee that the end product is equal to the proposal. Although new county subdivision regulations are in the works, new regulations cannot apply retroactively.

The Lincoln County Planning Commission meeting of September 5th began with commission member Bob Moeller asking for assurance from the county's planning director, Curt Temple, that the subdividers had met all of the requirements for approval of the preliminary plan.

County attorney Alan Morel suggested that there may be a need to further address the condition of the emergency access and exit routes for the subdivision. "The plan clearly reflects that some of these alternate roads, Juniper Springs or Pfingsten, are shown as emergency exits or emergency accesses," Morel said. "They have to be passable. You can't tell someone that there is an emergency route to leave the subdivision and then have it not be passable," he said.

Planning commission vice-chair Jerry Carroll questioned Jim Winder, of Heritage Preserve, regarding the liquid waste that would result from the housing of horses in a centrally located equestrian center in the subdivision. Carroll said he had been told that the bedrock below the equestrian facility was only about seven feet below the soil surface. "The urine will go into the bedrock and follow it downhill," Carroll said. "That will put it into Magado Creek, and I'm curious as to whether there's been any testing of that water," Carroll said. He acknowledged that the county's subdivision ordinance doesn't require that testing, but said it was a matter of the health and safety of people living downstream from the facility.

Regulations to provide some assurance that restrictive covenants continue to apply after parcels within subdivisions have been resold, or that limit the developer's ability to amend those covenants, are being addressed in revisions to the county's subdivision ordinance, but do not currently apply.

Planning commission chair Jim Crouse said that was a concern. "I can't put my finger on anything that would stop this according to the regulations," Crouse said. "However there is one thing, and that is that covenants cannot be changed without consent of the county commissioners," he said. Crouse told Winder that his main concern was the water usage spelled out in the subdivision's restrictive covenants. "You have a use of 68.2 (acre feet per year), I think," Crouse said. He suggested that under the current county law the subdivider could, in the future, amend the water restrictions in the covenants and eventually use the full amount of water allowed by state law, which Crouse said would be about 123 acre feet per year.

Attorney John Underwood, speaking on behalf of the developer, said that the developer has agreed to abide by the proposed but not yet adopted subdivision ordinance requirement that changes to the developer's disclosure statement must meet the approval of the county commissioners. Compliance with restrictive covenants is expected to be enforced by the developer until enforcement eventually falls to a homeowner's association.

One of several planning commissioners who were appointed just one or two days prior to the first public hearing on the Heritage Preserve project, Wayne Stephens, expressed frustration over the limits he faced in attempting to protect the rights of the citizens that already live here. "All the people that live around this new subdivision oppose it. How can we vote against the people?" Stephens asked. "This new subdivision will ad-

Nogal Water Users Assn. Request Colonia Resolution

by Patrice Brazie

At the request of Rick Rotert, president of the Nogal Domestic Water Users Association, the unincorporated settlement of Nogal was designated a colonia by a resolution adopted by the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners during their regular meeting on August 21st.

According to county manager Tom Stewart, Rotert made the request in order for the Nogal water users to qualify for loans and grant funding to make necessary improvements on the water system there. The system serves approximately 30 home sites in the village. Colonia status can be awarded to communities that are within 150 miles of the Mexican border, Stewart said.

The county commissioners also accepted bids for the tiling of the floors in the office of the District Attorney in Carrizozo and for a paving project at the Lincoln County Medical Center. A bid of $28,820 was submitted by Sombrero Construction Company of Capitan for the tile work. Star Paving of Albuquerque bid $679,014 for the construction of an expanded parking lot at the hospital and $119,985 to resurface existing parking areas there. The bids were approved unanimously by the county commissioners.

Only one request for Lincoln County Lodgers Tax funding was received by the county commissioners in August. The request from Partners in Preservation of the Lincoln State Monuments for $1,500 to advertise and promote Arts in the Orchard was also approved unanimously.

Nobody Knows Questions Remain

passing out a legitimate monthly financial report to anyone who requested it. Thornton's comments drew a round of applause.

Jamie Gieb, resident and former teacher at Carrizozo Schools, alleged that several laws have been broken in the course of paying overtime to wages to employees who are ineligible for that pay. "Most of the public is aware of at least two times that the trustees have broken the law," Gieb said. "The first time it was the sign ordinance and now it's the personnel ordinance." Gieb read from the town's personnel policy which states: Certain positions are designated by the Board of Trustees as being salaried positions on the basis of administrative, managerial or professional duties performed. Personnel in the positions of Town Clerk, Police Chief and Maintenance Director are not entitled to overtime.

Gieb pointed out that no public hearing to consider changes to the town's overtime policies was ever held, and asked how such a change could have occurred. "I would like to know how and when the ordinance was amended to allow overtime payment," Gieb said. When she suggested that Spencer was upholding the oath of her job by blowing the whistle on the budget improprieties, Gieb also drew applause from the crowd. "Maybe the citizens of Carrizozo need to adopt a motto similar to that of Verizon cell phones," she said. "Can you hear me now?"

Next to speak at the podium was Barbara Culler, resident, animal activist and artist, who told Zamora that the New Mexico Open Meetings Act states that officials should state the purpose of an executive session more specifically than to simply refer to personnel or legal issues. "Just saying it's for legal or personnel matters is not specific enough," Culler said. She asked Zamora to explain exactly what the town's overtime policy is and when it went into effect.

Zamora acknowledged that there had been no change in the town's overtime policy, and that the three mentioned salaried positions are not entitled to overtime pay.

When asked if the work for which Weibrecht received overtime pay was over and above her normal duties, Zamora said it was.

He told Culler that Weib-brecht had been working on assisting Zamora with revising the budget, which she did not have time to do during normal office hours. However, when the question was asked of Weibrecht a short time later, she said she received the overtime pay for working on minutes.

Spencer has stated that Weibrecht told her she had worked overtime for the town of Carrizozo while on duty at her night job at the Lincoln County Detention Center.

John Tate, who said he lives a mile or so outside of Carrizozo, said that typical audits do not look for fraud or malfeasance, and that auditors assume that the numbers they are presented with are good numbers. "If you do not have a fraud auditor (or) a forensic accountant, you should have no confidence that anything nasty will be discovered," Tate said.

Zamora told the audience that he and the town council members were unable to specifically answer many of their questions because the case is currently under investigation by the District Attorney.

Speaking as the legal counsel for Carrizozo, attorney Liam Griffin said that there is no reason to assume that any criminal activity has occurred. "At the moment, I'm not aware of any criminal accusations," he said.

Zamora said that the trustees would wait on the audit results and a determination by the District Attorney before deciding how to proceed.

Culler asked to know when the town's expenses for April, May, and June were approved by the town council, and Weibrecht said those items were approved in August.

Spencer said that the expenditures for those months were never actually approved by the trustees. Minutes from the August meeting of the town council were ambiguous in stating what expenses had been reviewed and approved.

Carrizozo business owner Welda Grider, said she has attended all of the council meetings for several months. "There was a month when you said that the bills had not been paid yet because you'd been too busy," Grider told Weibrecht. "And we haven't had bills paid, until last month, for several months," Grider said. "The bill paying has been a problem," Grider added.

Carrizozo resident and pastor of the First Baptist Church Hayden Smith said that he submitted a request for public records regarding Carrizozo's budget in August. "I got no response for a week," he said. "Aren't you required to respond within three days?" he asked Weib-brecht. The clerk said that she had been too busy to respond to Hayden's request in the appropriate time period.

Recently appointed Carrizozo Trustee Dennis Dunnum, who was appointed by Zamora in August to fill a vacancy on the town council, said that he understood the distrust that many residents have in respect to their elected officials. "Now, having been sucked into this, I also am seeing where, in a lot of ways, our hands are sort of tied, restricted, and I think that we're going to find answers, hopefully, quickly," Dunnum said.

Zamora and the trustees agreed to make detailed financial records of the town's budget and expenditures available to the public every month prior to town council meetings.

Questions regarding whether or not the overtime pay was approved by the mayor in violation of the town ordinance remain unanswered.

Issues Unsettled by REA Mass Meeting

The mass meeting to discuss the advantages of the proposed sale of the Carrizozo power plant to REA which was held October 19 apparently did not clarify the situation too much. Out of approximately 150 persons present only 17 voted in the affirmative to bring it to a vote of the people provided certain other requirements can be met, including a satisfactory contract. The remaining members of the assembled group did not vote one way or another, and it's anyone's guess as to how they would vote in an election.

John Hall, Albuquerque, who previously practiced law in Carrizozo, was the moderator for the meeting and introduced REA representatives, which included Allan Walker, Alamogordo, attorney for the Otero County Cooperative; W.C. Cooper, Cloudcroft, manager for the co-op, and Wilbur Coe, a director in the organization.

The REA representatives discussed the advantages of a large area being able to have the comfort and convenience of power if Carrizozo would enter the organization. Then Mr. Hall asked for questions from the audience. Mayor Petty and members of City Council as well as Daniel Brenton, local attorney, took part in the discussion.

A number of pertinent points were brought out by the questions, including rates, outages, criticism of REA service elsewhere in Lincoln County, overall cost of the project, maintenance of a standby plant in Carrizozo and the area to be serviced.

Unfortunately, Mr. Cooper had left certain data including survey maps in his car and was unable to answer some of the questions, such as how many miles and how many ranchers would be served in the proposed project, and the location of the areas to be included in it.

The REA spokesmen seemed loath to commit themselves to definite statements concerning rates and outages and were not willing to predict when the rebuilding of the Capitan area will be completed. The subject of Capitan came up when it was pointed out that area had already been two years in the process of rebuilding.

Then the question of the maintenance of a standby plant at Carrizozo was brought up, and REA representative appeared to reverse the more positive position they had taken in its regard at recent meetings of City Council. Although they admitted their previous statements they appeared to be in doubt as to whether their cooperative would approve it, and wanted to change that section of the contract to maintain it only as long as practical. Who was to decide upon the practicability of the matter was another subject, and it was evident the townspeople wanted assistance regarding it.

Although the REA are anxious to get an immediate decision concerning the proposed sale, it was pointed out at a previous council meeting that was the first time they had received concrete facts on the subject and they were interested in investigating.

City Council appears to be proceeding on the assumption that any deal that is good for the city will bear investigation, and they are of the opinion that in order to conscientiously and efficiently perform their duties of office, they must have complete and accurate information to lay before the public.

On this basis, Daniel Brenton, local attorney, will present a revised contract to embrace the necessary requirements, to City Council for further consideration.

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Answers or Double Talk?

By Ruth Hammond

A standing room only crowd attended the Carrizozo Town Council meeting Tuesday, wanting answers to their questions. A few were answered, others were not. There was little response to the notation that executive or closed session had to be more specific than blandly stating that the closed session was for limited personnel and threat of or pending litigation. Several years ago the State Attorney General said the agenda items had to be more specific. A few agendas for other governmental entities were more specific for a while but now bland agendas are used. It might be time for a new AG opinion to be issued about how executive sessions are to be listed on the agendas.

There is another interesting item. When the segment about the Carrizozo budget issue was shown on Channel 7 news at 10 p.m. Tuesday it was announced that the extra money spent by the town was for buying out vacation pay. Several people did not hear any mention of this at the town council meeting. Maybe some official was giving privileged information or something. This is all supposed to be announced at an open meeting for the benefit of the public, not kept secret until a later date.

The information given at the town council meeting is definitely different that what was told the TV reporter, because at one time it was stated the overtime was paid for working on the budget and at another time it was said that it was for working on the minutes of meetings. Then we hear on TV that it was "bought out vacation time." It would help if the comments would coincide, not disagree.

Another concern of many people is that the town laptop computer, which contains social security numbers and other supposedly confidential information is not being locked away in city hall after hours. Identity theft is more and more rampant and it seems the town especially needs to be extra careful with this confidential information. While we agree with the town attorney that there is no reason to assume that any criminal activity has occurred, we do believe the town laptop should be locked away after hours. This would reduce any skepticism.

Carrizozo officials will hopefully work to rebuild the trust that should have been there all the time between the officials and the public. Hopefully officials will come to meetings prepared and aware of what transactions have been made. Officials should be familiar with the budget, not shrug and say, "I don't know." They need to act as if they take their duties as town council members seriously.

Keeping trust between the public and officials is one of the most important duties they have. Thank goodness we have open government in the United States and as has been said, municipal governments are the grass roots. It was encouraging to see as many people attend Tuesday and hopefully this interest will continue for a long time.

"We Salute and Thank All of Our Service People."

Innocence is Priceless

One Sunday morning, the pastor noticed little Johnny standing in the foyer of the church staring up at a large plaque. It was covered with names with small American flags mounted on either side of it.

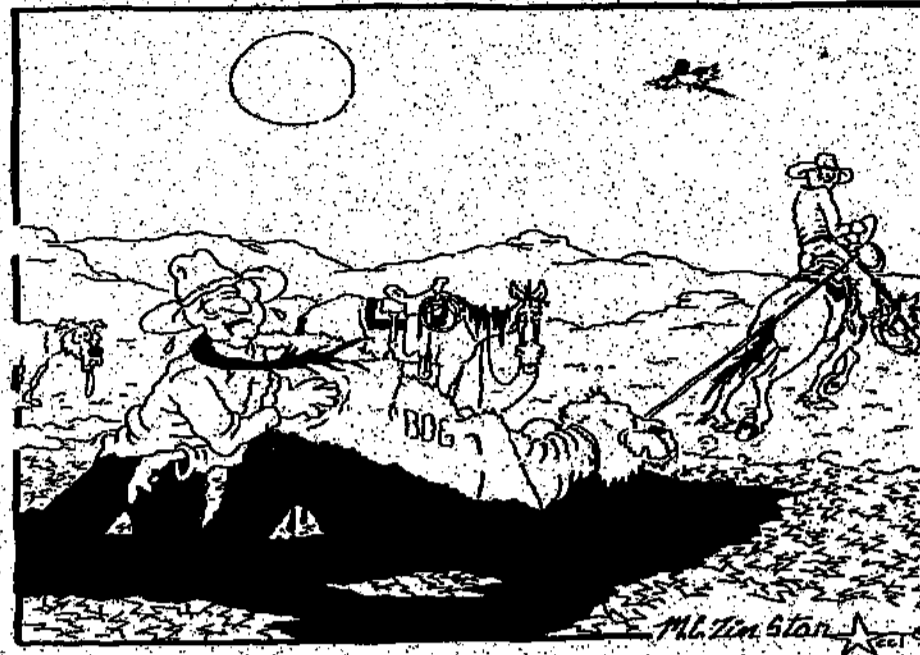

The seven-year-old had been staring at the plaque for some time, so the pastor walked up, stood beside the little boy, and said quietly, "Good morning Johnny."

"Good morning Pastor," replied little Johnny, still focused on the plaque. "Pastor, what is this?" he asked.

Pastor said, "Well, son, it's a memorial to all the young men and women who died in the service."

Soberly, they just stood together, staring at the large plaque. Finally, little Johnny's voice, barely audible and trembling with fear, asked, "Which service, the 8:30 or the 10:45?"

★ Inside the Capitol

by Jay Miller, Syndicated Columnist

SANTA FE -- Recent columns about some of New Mexico's famous conspiracies brought lively reaction, as expected.

Concerning the Army's conspiracy to cover up whatever happened at Roswell in 1947, I received complaints that I dismissed the possibility of extraterrestrials being involved.

I also received a call saying I was way off base assuming it was a group of military brass sitting around a conference table at Roswell Army Air Force Base who concocted the capture of a flying saucer.

That meeting did happen, I was told, and Gen. Roger Ramey, who issued the weather balloon explanation the following day from his headquarters at Fort Worth, Texas, was at the meeting.

But the flying saucer decision was made by top brass at the Pentagon. Had the decision been made in Roswell, the military careers of everyone at that table would have been over.

But those careers did not end. Col. William "Butch" Blanchard, who took the public rap for his elite bomber wing misidentifying a weather balloon as a flying saucer, went all the way to the top.

When he died of an unexpected heart attack in 1966, he was Army vice chief of staff and a sure bet to take over the top position. He also was a four-star general. That's as high as generals go, except in times of world wars.

Why top officials in Washington decided to handle the situation the way they did is still unanswered. My assumption is that with all the secret testing being done in the area, something had gone astray. But the door was left open for many other theories.

I thought I'd done a pretty good job of explaining the latest developments in the investigation to determine whether Sheriff Pat Garrett might have conspired with Billy the Kid to kill someone else and claim it was Billy. But Steve Sedervall, the chief investigator in that case, found so many areas of disagreement that I have offered him the opportunity to tell his story in a guest column.

There still isn't much more to tell you about new developments in the alleged conspiracy by the government to secretly remove gold bars and other treasure from Victorio Peak, just inside the White Sands Missile Range boundary from the future site of Spaceport America.

The one thing I can report is that 10 years after sending a Freedom of Information Act request to the U.S. Treasury Department for its records concerning Victorio Peak, I have received a response.

Despite being conscientious about filing accurate income tax returns, an unexpected 8 a.m. call from the general counsel's office of the Treasury Department is nevertheless disconcerting.

But the assistant for international affairs immediately began apologizing for the delay in answering my request. He said he had found 55 pages in the "Treasure" file relating to Victorio Peak and did I want him to copy and mail them to me.

I inquired about the cost and he embarrassedly said that in deference to the delay, there would be no cost. He also said I might not find anything very useful since only one name had been redacted in the entire 55 pages.

The material contains letters from attorney F. Lee Bailey, Rep. Harold Runnels, investigative columnist Jack Anderson and presidential assistant John Ehrlichman. It also contains a map of the missile range showing Victorio Peak.

Further analysis may reveal items of interest. Meanwhile, I'm left to wonder why the international affairs division of the Treasury Department handles Victorio Peak questions. Does that validate stories of it being Aztec gold or Maximilian's gold or that the gold was shipped out of the country?

Ordinance(s)

An ordinance as defined in most dictionaries is: an authoritative rule; an order, decree, or law of a municipal body. So it would probably be safe to say that a municipality such as Carrizozo is governed by the ordinances that have been set, passed and approved by past councils acting as the governing body of our community. Think it would also be safe to assume that any newly elected official taking office would be subject to know and expected to follow the town ordinances in their attempt to govern their respective municipality.

I don't think and I have yet to see any ordinance that gives anyone in our governing body the right to stray from following the adopted town ordinances in the performance of their duties. Giving approval to the performance of someone's duties in a manner other than what is outlined in a town ordinance just because you are the mayor of said municipality is against the law. In short order, the town ordinances are the laws under which the town is supposed to be governed.

The ordinance which the town is currently using in determining the salaries for town employees says:

11.5 - Personnel in Positions Not Entitled to Overtime: Certain positions are designated by the Board of Trustees as being salaried positions on the basis of administrative, managerial, or professional duties performed. Personnel in the positions of Town Clerk, Police Chief and Maintenance Director are not entitled to overtime.

Carrizozo is not being governed by following our town ordinances, especially when it comes to spending tax payer's monies. Someone should be made to answer for this, and if the answer is "I didn't know" then they should remove themselves from office. "Easy".

Found out recently that our almost new city hall building is not yet paid for. Apparently there is an outstanding debt of $150,000.00 on it, which is owed the state of New Mexico. The payback on the loan from the state is approximately $8,000.00 per year. So in about 20 years, we might be able to call city hall ours. Many of us will never see the day. High price to pay for a burnt out electrical box.

Just a little extra on the golf course, which has been completely remodeled and should be opening soon. Our mayor and town trustees not only agreed to lease the place out for $1.00 per year, but the town also agreed to foot the electricity bill for running the water-well motors. And the hits just keep coming!!

Old Lincoln Town

by Rosalie Dunlap

I have been out of circulation and haven't gotten any news.

Belated condolences to the Fr. John Penn and family and to Sue Graham and family. Also to Pam Abbott and Serii Rogers.

The Art in the Orchard had lots of people Sunday. It was held at the Lincoln Visitor Center. There were 24 vendors showing their handmade crafts.

The pie contest had eight entries (none from Hondo). In the junior division Julianne Lamb, Ruidoso, placed first with her fruit pie. She has entered several times and finally won her first ribbon.

Jerrod Stampf, Ruidoso, won first place with his apple pie. He is also a repeat entrant.

In the adult pie division Debra Franks, Ruidoso, won both the fruit and apple.

David and Olga Elam moved to Florida last week. We haven't met our new neighbors who are renting the Elam's home.

The last two weeks have been busy. I ended up in the Heart Hospital of NM four days. All the family gathered around - although it wasn't critical. Lois and David Coleman, Portland, TX; Patricia, Jerry and daughter Corina, Phoenix, and Carol and Kenneth Dunlap, Wilcox AZ. The group enjoyed an evening at the Flying J. Lois and David were celebrating their 38th wedding anniversary and Wayne was celebrating his birthday.

Our backyard looked like a used car lot. Lois and Patricia cleaned up my house and cooked enough food to last us awhile so we wouldn't have to worry about meals. David did his thing, mowing the yard and cleaning up. Our appreciation to all of you.

regui, has been awarded an Air Medal for his achievement in the Korean war. The citation read in part, Corporal Jauregui distinguished himself by meritorious achievement while serving in the capacity of scanner-gunner on a search bomber -- on (10) separate and sustained rescue operational missions in direct support of personnel and aircraft engaged in combat activities in Korea from 16 July 1950 to 28 August 1950 which necessitated deep penetration into enemy held territory and over hostile waters adjacent to enemy held territory. Through his skill, ability and desire to serve the Air Force Corporal Jauregui has brought great credit upon himself and the United States Air Force.

Corporal Jauregui has been serving with the 3rd Air Rescue Squadron since October, 1949. This squadron has distinguished itself by saving lives of almost 400 United Nations personnel through their on the spot coverage during the Korean war. This figure includes front line evacuations of critically wounded personnel and pickups of American pilots who bailed out of their disabled aircraft.

These missions were performed by H-5 helicopters. In addition 3rd Air rescue's new amphibious aircraft the "Grumman Albatross", has picked up at sea eight airman who were forced to either ditch or abandon their aircraft in Korean waters. Numerous distressed aircraft have been intercepted and escorted to safe landings by the SB-17s and SB-29s. All in all the morale of airmen flying in the Korean theater has been vastly improved by the rescue coverage given by the 3rd Air Rescue Squadron, and men like Corporal Jauregui form the backbone of these dangerous operations.

Jauregui recently completed 16 combat air rescue missions over Korea.

A veteran of one year in Japan, he attended Carrizozo schools until his enlistment in the Air Force in January, 1949. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amado Jauregui, reside in Carrizozo.

San Patricio School to Receive $3,000 State Aid

The rebuilding program of the San Patricio School was spurred this week by the announcement from the office of Mrs. Elva S. Wilson, county schools superintendent, that almost $3,000 had been made available through the efforts of Charles L. Rose, superintendent of public instruction, and R.H. Grissom, chief auditor, educational budget. The latter is a candidate for state treasurer on the Democratic ticket.

After the San Patricio School was completely destroyed by fire last November, school officials received about $3,500 from the insurance company, and a bond issue for an additional $6,000 was voted.

At present only three rooms of the four-room structure are finished.

The building program was at a standstill because there were no funds for heating, wiring and plumbing facilities. Now that the additional $3,000 has been made available, school officials are of the opinion there will be sufficient funds to take care of these facilities, as well as complete the fourth room for which space was provided in the building.

The Anderson Lumber Company, Hollywood, are the general contractors for the construction of the school building. In addition, San Patricio residents donated much of the labor.

The Carrizozo schools cafeteria has been running into problems. One problem is lately there has been a shortage of food. Some students have not been getting the full course meal. At least three times since school started, a few of the high school students were left with eating the side dishes.

The principal, Mr. Cobos explained, "Kids have to eat. I don't care if I have to go to Allsup's to get it. I have been visiting the cafeteria staff about every week to keep an eye on this problem. But we don't have an accurate count when kids say they're not going to eat but change their mind later in the day." In addition to fixing the accuracy of the student count, Mr. Cobos plans to "introduce a salad bar in the cafeteria. That way there are healthier food choices."

Pertaining to "healthier" as of last year all outside drinks were banned from campus grounds because we're trying to keep a healthier school system. Mr. Castanon and Mr. Cobos explained why they put in a slushie machine. They both replied, "It is actually a nutritious fruit drink. That is why the state approved it; otherwise, they wouldn't have. It is also raising money for the cafeteria."

The state allots a certain budget per school for the cafeteria. The cafeteria should then be self-sufficient.

According to Mr. Cobos, it doesn't make money. It loses it because there is a higher cost to make the food than we get from the state. The budget right now is not adequate.

Mr. Cobos has two goals that he is wants to achieve. First, he is trying to keep everyone on campus for lunch. "It would help if I knew what they were interested in eating," said Mr. Cobos, "that way they could eat what they liked." Second, he would like everyone to get free lunches. That way no one will have to pay anymore. He is trying to do this through Provision 2, but he needs every parent in Carrizozo to sign it to do so.

So with Mr. Cobos and Mr. Castanon, there will be no one going hungry, and there will be a better outlook and options in the cafeteria.
