

Local Group Opposes Capitan Mining

By Patrice Brazier

A group of area residents calling themselves the Friends of Capitan are in the process of organizing an opposition to proposed exploratory drilling in the Capitan Mountain Range a few miles north of the village of Capitan.

Speaking before about 70 people in attendance at an informational meeting in Capitan last week, Ruidoso resident and Friends of Capitan organizer Debbie Higdon said that Marvin Kaiser, an FIC Capitan Precious Metals, Incorporated Board of Directors member, is the former Executive Vice President of the Doe Run Company.

Higdon alleged that, during Kaiser's employment with Doe Run, that company was cited with several violations of illegal toxic waste dumping and water and air pollution violations at its mining operation near Herculaneum, Missouri, and was also cited for 313 violations by the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

According to Higdon, "for mer Doe Run employees blew the whistle on the company, identifying illegal burying of hazardous waste and triggering a Grand Jury investigation" into company activities, which Higdon says Doe Run was ordered to cease and desist by the Missouri Department of Natural Resources. Higdon further alleged that 56 percent of the children living within a quarter-mile of the Doe Run facility, 2,200 in number, suffered lead poisoning, which she says was determined with 99.8 percent certainty to have been caused by Doe Run operations. "Caution signs have been placed on the residential streets of this small town to warn citizens of high lead levels and to instruct them not to play in their own city parks and public spaces," Higdon said. "Is this the type of neighbor that you want to share your forest with?" she asked.

Lincoln County resident Paulette Xenone, whose property is adjacent to the mining claims, expressed fears that a large mining op-

SMOKEY BEAR DISTRICT RANGER Buck Sanchez spoke about the role the Forest Service will play in this assessment and oversight of proposed exploratory drilling in the Capitan mountains during last week's public meeting on the subject.

Nuisance Ordinance Discussed

By Ruth Hammond

The proposed nuisance ordinance for Carrizozo was discussed at a special town council meeting February 22.

Mayor Bob Hemphill explained that it was a public hearing and no action would be taken. He said that comments would be taken under consideration and possibly implemented in the ordinance.

When asked why the town attorney was not present, Hemphill said it would save the town money to not have the attorney there, but that after more revisions are made to the ordinance it will be sent to the town attorney before action would be taken to approve the ordinance.

During the public hearing even people spoke with many concerns that violations of the nuisance ordinance should be cited into municipal court instead of Magistrate Court. That way the money would stay in the town instead of going to the state. Also as municipal court is not a court of record violators would not have it on permanent record of their violations.

In other business the town council agreed to allow Glen Mochel 60 days to finish the auto body work jobs he had started. Mochel's planned business location is not zoned commercial.

The town council approved two resolutions concerning the PERA, one for town employees and the other for police department employees. The state required that two separate resolutions be approved instead of the one resolution that had been approved at a prior meeting.

Pre-met board members were appointed for the municipal election that will be held March 4.

Public Gets the Dirt on Capitan Mine

By Patrice Brazier

About 70 people, most from the Capitan area, attended a meeting last week to learn more about the proposed surface mining of up to 600 acres of patented and Forest Service land a few miles north of the small village of Capitan.

An application has been submitted for exploratory drilling on 600 acres north of Capitan. The application is for exploratory drilling on a Corona resident B. B. Berglund, the local representative for FICapitan Precious Metals, Incorporated (FICapitan PM), opened the meeting and introduced company officials.

Buck Sanchez, fore ranger of the Lincoln National Forest Smokey Bear District gave the first presentation. "Normally, we don't require public meetings this early in the process, but I felt it was important and good representative from the mining company that offered an opportunity for folks to hear the company's side about where they are going with the plans for the future," Sanchez said. "I will only relay relevant information," he added.

He thanked the agency that the Forest Service take on the role as a regulatory instrument of the government and for staff who are present at the meeting. "I am glad to see the Forest Service taking the role of public hearing and well."

"We value much value in public service ethics and the need to solve our community and public issues," Sanchez said.

Sanchez said that he had approached him about the meeting, started to say they wouldn't want to be in his shoes, but the Ranger explained that there is a process that must be followed and that process will determine the decision made regarding the mine.

"It's a process, or a system that we'll follow to get to a decision," he said. "It comes back to the mission of the Forest Service, the greater good for the greatest number over the long term, and that change through time."

Sanchez stated the legal aspect of mining in New Mexico in simple terms.

The mine company does have mineral rights here, and they have a right to explore those rights within the laws and policies that govern mining operations," he said. Sanchez explained that the mining company will have to go through a permitting process with the state after it has completed the application and permitting process with the Forest Service. The National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) dictate much of that process.

The NEPA process is a project specific that is a hard process to follow. Sanchez said that the mining company will have to go through a permitting process with the Forest Service by policy and by law would provide reasonable access. "If a normally an individual or a company are making a decision, they would make a decision that would minimize or avoid an impact," Sanchez said.

He emphasized that the meeting was just the beginning of a process. "As we go, there are several steps along the way. We haven't worked out the agreement on how that process is going to be implemented," Sanchez said. "I am glad that we have a permit team with the Forest Service to help us through the process," he said.

B. B. Berglund, CEO of FICapitan PM, was next to address the crowd. The project is an exploration project, Paylich said. "Our primary interest is a 40 percent interest in the FICapitan deposit. The other 60 percent is held by a private company called Gold and Mineral, Inc. We are in the process of meeting with them, so in the first half of 2008, all of the mineral rights will be held by one entity, FICapitan PM," Paylich explained.

He made a point to further emphasize that changes in FICapitan PM's personnel have been made as well, since the company was found to be in violation of laws regarding mining activities and was fined by the Forest Service. "Law enforcement decision."

"There's been a big change in company management and Board of Directors in the last 12 months," Paylich said. "The mining industry, like every other industry, is complex. There is a lot of things that you need to know about. If you don't know about those things, you run the risks of making mistakes and there were quite a few mistakes made," Paylich admitted. "It was more a lack of knowledge than an intention to do something wrong," he said, and added that 15 FICapitan PM employees were fired after the investigation was completed.

The mistakes, including drilling holes on Forest Service land that were not properly permitted, as well as improperly disposing of waste. "We've worked very closely with the state agencies, and the federal agencies, to work through the problem of cleaning up the area," Paylich said. "We received penalties, those penalties have been paid. The Board of Directors, in April of last year, made the decision to make major changes in the organization to make sure that didn't happen again. Their goal was to come up with a Board of Directors and a management team that had the experience to be responsible for yard in a responsible fashion."

Paylich offered a brief history of the site's mining activities over the last century. He said there were four claims staked on about 88 acres of land five or six miles north of Capitan in 1907, and those claims were patented in 1911. 140 holes were drilled in the area by the U.S. Bureau of Mines in the 1930s in search of iron ore. The reports from that period of time noted the presence of precious metals," Paylich said. "Between 1964 and 1988, there was intermittent operation of that deposit for iron ore."

In 1994, Gold and Minerals, Inc. exercised a purchase option on the property and, in 2002, FICapitan PM bought a 40 percent interest from Gold and Minerals, Inc.

Paylich said that the entire deposit planned for mining is located above the water table. "The deepest hole we drilled is 710 feet, and that's the only hole that hit water," he said. "The average hole is about 283 feet."

The company drilled holes in 37 locations on Forest Service land before beginning the application process, and the current application is to drill another 112 exploratory holes. "Whether or not they will all be drilled depends on what we find," Pavlich said. He also said that El Capitan PMI is not staffed for operation of a full fledged mining endeavor, and will partner with another company to handle operations if the proposal moves out of the exploration stage and into development.

Pavlich turned the podium over to Denise Gallegos of GE Environmental Services, a company hired by El Capitan PMI to assist them through the application and permitting process.

"In order for the project to go forward, we have to obtain two approvals," Gallegos said. "One is from the Smokey Bear Ranger District, the other is from New Mexico Mining and Minerals Division," she said.

Gallegos reported that a Plan of Operations for the exploratory drilling has been submitted to the Forest Service. "Once the Forest Service determines whether the Plan of Operations adequately describes the exploration project and its impact, they will begin what we call the NEPA process," she said.

Other agencies, including the Office of the State Engineer, the New Mexico State Forestry Division, the New Mexico Environment Department, the state's Historical Preservation Office and the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish will also review the El Capitan PMI application and plan of operations.

The plan, Gallegos said, must include a project description and maps as well as information about the types of equipment and vehicles that will be used, any structures that will be needed to support the project, assessments of air quality, water quality, scenic value, fish and wildlife and cultural resources. The plan of operations must also include a reclamation plan to return the land to as close as its original state as possible once the mining is completed.

"New Mexico Mine and Minerals requires that we provide some kind of safeguard for the general public from our exploration activities," Gallegos said.

She explained that the proposed 112 exploratory holes will be drilled in phases. "Once we drill one phase, we'll have to determine whether or not we want to continue with the others and in which direction," she said.

Drilling will utilize both track and rubber tire rigs, and a 30-foot by 60-foot concrete drilling pad will be constructed for each drilling site.

Gallegos said that existing roads will be used whenever possible and an existing fire break will be used to access some areas, but new roads will also be constructed. The total land that will be disturbed for new 12 foot wide roads is approximately 10 acres.

Gallegos said that the average depth of the exploratory drilling will be about 410 feet, and each phase of drilling will be reclaimed upon completion, with reclamation work being done in the fall months.

In response to a question from the audience, an El Capitan PMI official acknowledged that the operation is estimated to yield one ounce of gold for every 25 tons of rock mined, and that El Capitan PMI expects to spend $500,000 to get through the NEPA process attached to the exploratory application.

Some in the audience questioned the assertion that the ground water was 700 feet below the surface in the mining area, because homeowners' domestic wells in near proximity are much shallower.

Gallegos said that the ground water depth estimate was based on well records kept by the Office of the State Engineer.

Ed Tinsley, who is in the process of developing land located about three miles from the proposed mine, said that a well that supplies water to the entire permitted area of forest land on and around the mining location is only 107 feet deep and supplies 15 or 16 water troughs.

"If you're coming at us with data like you just presented, I'd ask you to go back and take another look at it," Tinsley said.

A homeowner who's well is near the boundary of the mining claim voiced concerns about potential effects the mining might have on the ground water, and what can be expected if the mine is eventually approved for full operation and expands beyond the original patented claims area.

El Capitan PMI officials avoided speculation. "You're suggesting that when we drill those holes we might learn something about the ground in that area," Pavlich said, "and that's exactly what we're trying to do."

Someone in the audience wanted assurance that the water she and her children drink will not be contaminated by the drilling, and Pavlich said that the drilling would be done with air and water. "It could be water and mud, and we could use barite, which is just a heavy mud," he added. Water would have to be hauled to the drilling site because El Capitan PMI has no well permit.

Pavlich said the exploratory holes will be drilled over a period of about three years. He said it would then likely be another five to seven years before the actual mining operation begins.

ation in the Capitan area will reduce property values. "Do not believe that people will continue to invest in Capitan and Lincoln County if there is a possibility that they will have a mine at their back door?" she asked. She also suggested a loss in revenue from tourism as hunters, hikers, campers and equestrians would be forced to go elsewhere for recreation, and wildlife would move out of the area.

Arnone said that the citizens of Lincoln County will have to cover the cost of repairs and maintenance on county roads that will bear the additional burden of heavy equipment use associated with drilling and mining activities.

"They're talking about bringing all of that equipment up (highway) 246," she said.

Arnone also voiced concerns about the contamination of ground water from drilling and mining activities.

"Their own Plan of Operations states that no monitoring of subsurface water is required during exploration," she said. "Are you kidding me?" she asked. "In addition to possible harm of our water supply, we will all suffer from air and noise pollutants, vibration damage to our historical and cultural artifacts and buildings," Arnone said. "This would greatly impact our personal health and happiness, as well as that of our tourists."

Blossom and Beau

Queen Amber Vigil and King Rory Zamora

On Tuesday, January 22, Student Council held the Blossom and Beau ceremony, which took place during half time of the varsity boys' game against the Capitan Tigers.

Student Council members worked very hard to make this happen. They made a balloon arch for the candidates to stand under, had to gather contestant introductions, and last but not least bought the roses and crowns.

According to the organization, Blossom and Beau is a mid-year festival, and it is a fun event for students to anticipate. The Capitan game is always a big game, and there is a lot of attendance.

The sixth grade horticulture class volunteered to make the boutonieres and corsages which would be worn by the queen and king candidates. They had to learn how to work with flowers and how to make the arrangement look good. Student Council appreciates the sixth grade class for all their work.

The freshmen candidates were Kylie Gaines and Roper Webb, sophomores were Erika Culley and Daniel Hernandez, juniors were Amber Vigil and Rory Zamora, and the seniors were Victoria Hernandez and Robert Morales.

The Queen was Amber Vigil and King was Rory Zamora. Queen Amber Vigil received a flower bouquet and a crown. King Rory Zamora received a vase filled with a variety of candy, topped with assorted bright lollipops.

When King Rory Zamora was asked about his nomination, he responded, "I decided to go with the flow and go on with walking. I really wanted to walk with Amber. I believed that Roper and Erika were going to win." Rory, a basketball player who helped the Grizzlies go into the half in the lead also commented about walking down the court. "I really wanted to get a drink of water. I was very happy that I won, but I was ready to continue with the game."

Queen Amber Vigil also had some thoughts on the nominations. "I decided to go with the flow and I thought that seniors Victoria and Robert were going to win." She said that all she was doing while walking down the court was laughing because she was nervous. "I was very excited when they called me out as queen. I honestly didn't believe that I had it."

Everyone at our school was grateful that Carrizozo voters voted in favor of the bond issue which means much needed improvements can get done. The money will be used for the following: HVAC system upgrade at the high school, new gym locker room updates, new student parking/bus drop off, Elementary play-ground equipment and safety covering, Technology upgrades, ADA improvements and miscellaneous district-wide improvements.

State FFA Career Development Clinic

The first FFA Career Development Event Clinic will be held February 9 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is held to help FFA students improve their career skills and get them ready for their own careers.

The event will be held in Roswell at Goddard High School, Roswell High School, RISD Education Service Center, and the Eastern New Mexico State Fairgrounds.

Carrizozo will be sending 25 to 30 students, seventh through twelfth, to participate in workshops. At the workshops there are presenters who are experts in each category of FFA judging. These experts show students how the judging process works. Our students will be studying only a few particular categories: horse, crops, wildlife, wool, and homesite. According to Christopher Scott, the FFA Advisor, they picked these categories because they have more local help in these areas.

Super Soups Are Split

By Ruth Hammond

This was the Super week, with all kinds of activities, such as New Mexico being the only state to not have a declared winner by noon the next day.

One thing to remember is that audio commercials last for a short time while in contrast print ads, such as in The News this week, will be seen time and again.

Right on the heels of Super Bowl Sunday was the big political do, but New Mexico fell down with the caucus results not declaring a winner by noon Wednesday.

Suppose there was an election and no one attended? That happened Tuesday when some people got tired of waiting and went home after a couple of hours.

It might help if some of this information was made public to allow people to know how it worked.

Of course the answers are moot now because the day has passed, just as Super Bowl Sunday has passed.

Now that these two Super days are only memories we will have opportunity to concentrate on more important matters such as bracing for another six weeks of winter now that the groundhog saw his shadow on February 2.

FFA Career Development Events are based on the philosophy that "Students are important customers of agriculture education and the FFA who recognize quality and value in products and activities."

The State FFA Association does assume the role of leader and develops and improves FFA development events. These events should also "reflect relevant and emerging technology."

Students need to be able to recognize the quality and the value in products and activities since students are important customers of agricultural education.

The actual judging competition begins February 23 in T or C, March 1 in Carrizozo, March 8 in Moriarity, and March 15 in Las Cruces. A team consists of four members, the team's top three scores are counted up and that's the team's final score.

Inside the Capitol

by Jay Miller, Syndicated Columnist

SANTA FE -- Eek. We're halfway through the legislative session and nothing's happened.

Legislatures, like lives, go through stages. The first week is a laid-back time to get reacquainted, go to receptions and introduce some bills.

In the old days, Hugh Bishop flew all the bills that had been introduced to his printing company in Portales and used the three days to make all the copies necessary for Monday morning at the Capitol.

Committees start working on bills during the second week but little action is taken.

And then comes the mid-point of a 30-day session. It's the deadline for bill introductions. At this point lawmakers know what issues they are dealing with -- and not dealing with.

But that hasn't happened. Many important bills haven't even had their first hearing. This is when lawmakers begin paying attention. And that is when Gov. Bill Richardson stepped in with a news conference to let lawmakers know he'd like to see more action.

Something the governor failed to note, however, was that there is only one bill that has to pass before the session ends. That's the big budget bill to finance state government for the next fiscal year. And that bill is exactly on schedule.

House leaders did not let that accomplishment go unnoticed, scoffing at Richardson's charge that this is a do-nothing Legislature. The governor may come to regret that comment. He's given lawmakers a battle cry they may use as they take actions contrary to the governor's wishes.

Another example of needing to be careful of what you wish for is lawmakers' request of the governor that he not allow so many extra subjects to be addressed by this year's session. During short sessions, the governor controls what is on the legislative agenda other than financial items.

Richardson agreed to limit the items he put on the legislative plate this year. But now many lawmakers are saying they didn't mean for the governor not to allow the special items in which they are interested.

Next week lawmakers will reach the panic stage as they see conflicts with the governor and other legislators bringing the session to a halt before work is completed. We'll hear much about train wrecks, melt-downs and special sessions. And maybe there will be a few silent wishes they could add in that Friday from the first week.

But almost always it works out. Amazingly New Mexico gets its business attended to in 30 or 60 days while bigger states take all year to accomplish no more. And even with year-long sessions, the phases mentioned here still occur. The final week is just as frantic with late-night and weekend sessions.

The truth is that New Mexico has a system that works and which costs us a lot less than a full-time Legislature. Our unpaid lawmakers put in a punishing one or two months to keep our state running and then return to their lives as citizens.

At this point, no more bills can be introduced. That ends at the midpoint of the session. House and Senate party leaders do introduce a number of blank bills, called dummies, just in case an important, but unexpected, situation arises.

Few of these dummy bills ever are used, however. They are guarded closely by the leadership in order to prevent misuse.

As we begin the downhill slope, some controversial bills on the governor's call already have made it through one house. Stem cell research has passed the Senate and domestic partnerships passed the House.

The big problem is ethics legislation recommended by a task force that has worked for two years. It is going nowhere.

Commercial Waste Tire Amnesty Event Set for February 8 and 9

A discarded commercial tire amnesty/recycling event will be held Friday February 8 and Saturday February 9 at School House Park in Ruidoso for Lincoln County commercial businesses, schools, and government agencies.

Residents may drop off used passenger, light truck and SUV tires at School House Park near the recycling containers between 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. on Friday, and between 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. on Saturday.

The opportunity is an "amnesty" recycling event where the customary $2.00 per tire recycling fee is waived for any business that drops off discarded tires. A similar fee is collected by local tire vendors when new tires are purchased.

The used tires collected will be recycled into retaining wall construction at the new Lincoln County

Solid Waste Authority Green Tree Operations and Recycling Center in Ruidoso Downs.

The event is being sponsored by Keep Ruidoso Beautiful, the Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce and the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority. 524 discarded tires or 60 cubic yards of residential tires were collected in a similar September 21 and 22 recycling event at School House Park in Ruidoso from 43 county residents, mainly from Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs.

Large vehicle or heavy equipment commercial tires will not be accepted at this event.
