

No Mining Moratorium In Lincoln County

by Patrice Brazie

After hearing last month from a group of citizens who are against proposed exploratory drilling in the Capitan Mountains, the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners asked county attorney Alan Morel to research the possibility of imposing a moratorium on the exploration for one year.

Morel presented his findings during the Tuesday, March 18 county commission meeting.

Morel said he and his staff looked into whether or not the county has the authority to regulate mining exploration on federally owned land by methods of land use regulation, ordinance or both.

"The analysis is incredibly specific as to whether you're on federal land, state land or private land," Morel said. "The analysis is even different if you're on BLM (Bureau of Land Management) land versus Forest Service land because every federal agency has separate regulations," he said.

County officials have two means of land regulation available to them, according to Morel. Those options are the adoption of land use regulations or zoning, or through setting limits on affects to the environment.

"If you passed a zoning ordinance, it would not be effective on federal lands," Morel said. "Your area of regulation would be limited to your police powers to regulate the health, safety and welfare for the citizens of this county," he explained.

Issues associated with mining that may fall within the jurisdictions of county government include environmental aspects such as air and water quality, hillside protection, traffic congestion, increased noise, wildlife and native plant protection and compatibility with surrounding land use. County officials cannot enact any regulations that conflict with existing statutes and mining laws, Morel said.

States and local governments have imposed regulations on federal lands, he said, based on an assessment and a detailed study and drafting ordinances to implement and enforce them. Any ordinance proposed by the county to regulate land use from an environmental perspective would require extensive analysis to ensure that there were no conflicts with the Federal Environmental Management Act (FEMA) or the many other statutes regulating public lands.

Morel said that Santa Fe is currently drafting ordinances and regulations to try to regulate oil and gas drilling in Santa Fe County.

"Their budget for this year,

Manhunt Continues

A nation-wide manhunt is underway for Kurt Sohrbeck, wanted on charges including the attempted murder of Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputy Sergeant Robert Shepherd one week ago. Sohrbeck has possibly attempted to alter his appearance and has reportedly shaved his head. Sohrbeck is approximately 6'3" tall, weighs about 215 pounds, has blue eyes and might be in the company of a pit bull terrier.

Lincoln County Sheriff's Deputy Robert Shepherd is in stable condition after being shot five times in the line of duty last Thursday. Prayers and good wishes for Shepherd and his family have been expressed throughout the county and the nation.

New Mexico State Police, the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department, U.S. Marshals, local police departments and law enforcement agents throughout the county are searching for Kurt Sohrbeck, a career criminal who is now wanted for the attempted murder of Sergeant Robert Shepherd of the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department. Local law enforcement agencies were notified to be on the lookout for Sohrbeck last week when he was thought to be headed for the Ruidoso area where he has family. According to Lincoln County Sheriff Rick Virden, Sohrbeck is wanted for suspicion of crimes committed in 11 states, crimes including several counts associated with identity theft, assault and evading arrest. Last Thursday afternoon at around 1:30, Shepherd spotted the suspect in Ruidoso and followed him to Ruidoso Downs where he pulled over onto a dead end road just off of Highway 70 near the race track. Though there are no known witnesses to what happened next, officials say that it appears that the suspect realized he was trapped in a dead end and immediately began to fire into Shepherd's windshield. Shepherd was hit with five rounds, three to the head and neck area and two in his shoulder. One shot entered and exited Shepherd's arm before lodging in his body. Shepherd was not wearing his bullet proof vest at the time but, according to Virden, a vest wouldn't have protected the Sergeant from the injuries he sustained.

his throat, all over," the sheriff said on Monday.

Shepherd had reported his pursuit of the suspect to the dispatcher at the sheriff's

Capitan Voting Error Discovered

by Patrice Brazie

During the March 7th canvassing of votes cast in the recent municipal elections, a question was raised in Capitan regarding the requirement to have early and absentee voters sign an application request for a ballot. According to Magistrate Judge Martha Proctor, Glynis Racine and her husband requested to review the signed requests, or applications, for early and absentee ballots. Racine was on the ballot as a candidate for a seat on the Capitan village council.

"They presented a question that, truthfully, has never been brought to my attention in any of the other canvasses I've done," Proctor said on Monday.

She said that upon the Racine's request she asked Capitan Village Clerk Kay Strickland if the signature applications were available, and that Strickland told her that she was unaware of the requirement.

"It was her (Strickland's) first election," Proctor pointed out.

She said the language of the election instructions addressing the signature request requirement is vague, so she called Ruidoso Downs City Clerk Carol Virden to help clarify the issue. "She's been a municipal clerk longer than anyone I could think of," Proctor said of Virden. She said Virden explained that voters who come into village hall to vote early are required to sign an application or request for a ballot, as are absentee voters who request that their ballots be delivered by mail.

Proctor said that she thought the Racine's request stemmed from the fact that Racine and Trustee Lilly Wood tied for votes cast on election day with 107 each, but Wood's votes outnumbered Racine's in early voting with Wood picking up 66 votes to Racine's 18.

"I am extremely certain that nothing illegal or unethical happened," Proctor told The News earlier this week.

Multi Agency Sting Nets Traffickers

Lincoln County Sheriff Rick Virden issued a statement last week reporting that warrants had been executed with regards to narcotics cases developed by the Lincoln County Narcotics Enforcement Unit. Agents from that unit, the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department and officers from Ruidoso, on March 7th and executed a total of 24 warrants issued by Ruidoso Magistrate Judge William Butts on a variety of felony methamphetamine and cocaine trafficking and conspiracy charges.

Six arrest teams composed of officers from the various participating agencies simultaneously fanned out around the area in the early hours of Friday, March 7th, to serve the warrants. Twelve of the warrants were for suspects living in Ruidoso Downs, while the remaining suspects were scattered about Ruidoso, Alamogordo and the Mescalero Apache Reservation. One suspect reportedly lived in Carrizozo.

A total of 15 individuals were located and taken into custody. More than 50 narcotics cases were brought to a close as a result of the investigation, which is on-going.

THOUGHTS

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Enjoy the blooming

By Ruth Hammond

Have you noticed the buds on the trees? Easter Sunday may be the day there is a mass eruption of those innards trying to get out to see the sun. If not, it will be soon. The areas south of here had their coming out parties, maybe not as grandiose as ours will be, but they became green and flowery quite some time ago. And all of this may be in time for Easter and the activities that go along with it.

If you have no special plans for Easter you might stop to think about what has changed recently. Apparently the birds have returned, anyway we were told buzzards and vultures are back. Crows and ravens endured the winter here but those other big birds went to other territory, but it is unclear where they spend their winter vacations.

Birds have their own habitats, just as people do. Some birds go south for the winter, way south, while others are content to migrate a shorter distance. And other birds are willing to be involved in things that are happening at the local level. Municipal governmental business has caused quite a stir in some areas and other places it is very calm.

If you haven't attended a municipal council meeting you should. It is very interesting. You might not agree with the way they do things, and if not, then it is up to you to voice your opinions and suggest changes. Meetings are supposed to be open to the public but too often some of the things that should be done in open air. It was a shock to find out that the big to do a few years ago about the animal shelter was not what it was publicized to be.

Since that time it has been reported that the animal shelter is not legal, not a good place for dogs, and there are no facilities for cats. Hmmm. What happened, other than different people are now in charge? And what about the money that was supposedly spent to build the facility?

Could it be that other irregularities happened that we may never know about? Much of these subtle situations happened other than in open meetings. And that makes more people not trust officials. When we said that some people were being threatened by officials we were told that it was imagination. Now maybe someone will listen. Some elderly people were told their services would be cut off if they complained. Yes, it did happen. That is why we continued to write about it in this column to warn people.

Upsetting as it was, it did happen. One person told us about a situation and then was threatened to not come to the News office again. That person was afraid to even talk to us in public and never came to the News office again.

Some people doubt that threats would deter a person but they don't realize that elderly can remember back when services could be curtailed and no one would do anything about it. They were at the mercy of officials. Thank goodness those days are gone for now. Enjoy the blooming that will happen imminently. Happy Easter.

WEATHER REPORT

by Jeff Hammond

Today, Thursday March 20 is the beginning of the Spring Equinox, with the spring comes the warm spring winds out of the west and southwest. This year will be no different, daily winds out of the west southwest, increasing in the afternoon hours, then decreasing after midnight on most nights.

The clear skies will mean that the sun warmed land will give up its heat much faster, so expect drastic changes between daytime and nighttime temperatures for the next several weeks.

There is a slight chance for rain at the higher elevations on Sunday.

Ski Apache current snow conditions are considered primary, spring melt conditions at all elevations. Artificial snow making machines are currently being used at the upper elevations. An 8 inch base at lower and middle elevations, and 24 inches at the higher elevations, 48 of 55 trails are currently open and 8 of 11 lifts are operating. For current conditions log on to: <http://www.onthesnow.com/NM/367/skiireport.html> on the internet.

Forecast for Carrizozo, the high plains of Lincoln County and the Hondo Valley:

Today, First Day of Spring, Thursday, March 20

Mostly sunny, windy turning warmer with the highs in the low to mid 70s, southwest winds 15 to 25 mph increasing to 20 to 30 mph in the afternoon with gusts up to 45 mph, night: Mostly clear skies, with breezy wind conditions, lows in the low 40s, west winds 15 to 25 mph decreasing to 10 to 15 mph after midnight with occasional gusts up to 35 mph.

Friday, March 21
Mostly sunny skies with the high in the low to mid 70s, night: Mostly clear skies, overnight lows in the 30s.

Saturday, March 22
Mostly sunny, high temperatures in the low 70s, night: Partly cloudy skies, overnight lows in the high 30s.

Sunday, March 23
Partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of rain showers, highs in the 60s, night: Mostly clear skies, overnight lows in the low to mid 30s.

Monday, March 24
Partly cloudy skies, high in the mid 70s, night: Mostly clear skies, overnight lows in the high 30s to low 40s.

Tuesday, March 25
Mostly sunny skies, breezy wind conditions, high in the mid to upper 70s, night: Mostly clear skies, overnight lows in the high 30s to low 40s.

Forecast for Ruidoso, Capitan and Corona and most of the Hondo Valley:

Today, First Day of Spring, Thursday, March 20

Mostly sunny skies, windy conditions, highs in the mid 60s to low 70s, southwest winds 10 to 20 mph increasing to 20 to 30 mph in the afternoon with occasional gusts up to 40 mph, night: Mostly clear skies, breezy wind conditions, overnight lows in the mid 30s to low 40s, west winds 15 to 25 mph decreasing to 10 to 20 mph after midnight with occasional gusts up to 35 mph.

SANTA FE -- New Mexico's little dwarf planet just might be on its way back to full planet status. There are indications Pluto is gaining support.

Obviously, Pluto doesn't belong to New Mexico and neither does its founder Clyde Tombaugh. But the 50 years Tombaugh spent here tied him so closely to the state that one prominent reference source gives our state credit for being the location where Tombaugh made his discovery.

He actually did his work at Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, AZ. In recognition of his discovery, Tombaugh received an undergraduate scholarship to the University of Kansas. He came to New Mexico in 1946 to work at what is now White Sands Missile Range and remained in the Las Cruces area the rest of his long life.

But it is Streator, Illinois, Tombaugh's birthplace, that is generating much of the enthusiasm and support for the discoverer of Pluto. Former Streator City Councilor Siobahn Elias played a major role, last May, in organizing a two-day Planet Pluto Festival featuring a combination of entertainment and education.

The entertainers included artists who have written songs, poems or essays inspired by little Pluto and its sad tale of unjust demotion. New Jersey writer Laurele Kornfeld has compiled a listing of some of those pieces, which she includes on her Web site www.laurele.lovejournal.com.

Among the speakers at the event was Dr. Alan Stern, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's associate administrator of space science and the principal investigator for NASA's Pluto-bound New Horizons probe.

Stern, one of the underdog planet's biggest proponents, says the scientific tide has turned in favor of Pluto's planet-hood in the past year and that teachers and textbook companies shouldn't be too quick to toss Pluto out. Kornfeld's favorite, and mine too, of those performance pieces is the song "New Horizons: A Tribute to Clyde Tombaugh and the New Horizons Mission." Written and performed by Levin Elias and Richard Fey, it carries an upbeat message of faith and perseverance, which is what Pluto supporters need to have if the planet is ever to regain its former status.

The New Horizons mission involves a rocket on its way to Pluto for a 2015 arrival. It is an American project run by NASA. It was launched in 2006, shortly before the International Astronomical Union demoted the planet.

Pluto was the only planet discovered by an American. It may not have been coincidence that the IAU demoted the planet shortly after the launch of an American mission to Pluto. There is suspicion that the action could have been at least partially due to the low esteem in which the international scientific community currently holds the United States.

Siobahn Elias also has succeeded in getting Rep. Jerry Weller, who represents the Streator area to enter comments in the Congressional Record encouraging his colleagues to support the effort to restore Pluto's planet-hood.

Lesson to Be Learned

Attended the Carrizozo School Board meeting Tuesday night after learning that a certain situation might be brought up and it was worth the time taken. Some concerned parents brought up a sensitive situation wanting to know if the board was aware of it and wanting some assurance of the safety of the students attending Carrizozo schools.

The situation was discussed by the board and inquired of the people that are in charge of Carrizozo schools (superintendent and principal) and the result was that everyone there got answers to the touchy situation and also assurances that matters would be closely monitored to insure the safety of the students.

Can't ask for much more than that, the concerned parents in attendance asked their questions of the people who were elected to be their representatives and saw those people respond to their concerns, business was taken care of in a matter of minutes. No waiting for days on end for answers and no beating around the bush and trying to delay the matter until everyone forgets. I applaud the present school board and school administrators for addressing the possible problem out in the open so those in attendance didn't have to go home wondering if and when the situation would be addressed publicly.

I hadn't attended a school board meeting in several years because of the non-action at the last meeting I did attend. The present school board has the right attitude towards the parents and other concerned citizens of Carrizozo schools, they are there to represent them and the students, not themselves. I applaud the openness of both the board and the administrators on Tuesday night and as a concerned grandparent feel comfortable in knowing that our school is in good hands. I recommend that more people attend their school's board meetings, my guess is that you will not be disappointed. More on the meeting next week.

Physical Activity Group Will Start in Las Cruces

In a partnership to improve health and get into the spirit of physical activity, New Mexico State University and the New Mexico Department of Health have joined forces to organize a Ciclovía—a from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. Sunday, March 30, at Meerscheidt Recreation Center, 1600 E. Hadley Ave. in Las Cruces.

Ciclovía—a is a series of events to have fun at an organized physical activity day where participants can walk, run, skate, ride bikes, play racquetball, lift weights and participate in many more fun activities to get into an active mood.

Ciclovía—a, Spanish for bike path, was originally started in Colombia. The cities of Bogota, Cali and Medellin closed off large blocks of streets for several hours every Sunday and holidays so they would be free of automobiles and give participants free access to bike, run, walk or partake in other physical activities.

This event was developed from a coalition called the DoA+a Ana Diabetes Action Coalition and the intent of this is to recognize the impact that physical activity can have in preventing type 2 diabetes," said Lawrence A. Banegas, community health specialist for the New Mexico Department of Health.

The event is free and open to all the public and is an "opportunity to recognize the value and significance of physical activity to help people know that there are things they can do to help themselves and at the same time have fun," Banegas said.

Medical and scientific studies have shown that insufficient physical activity contributes to the risk of obesity, type 2 diabetes, osteoporosis, breast and colon cancer and other chronic conditions, Banegas said.

Along with NMSU's Southern Area Health Education Center and the Cooperative Extension Service from the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, the hood. New Mexico's congressional delegation should be among the first to take up that challenge.

Obviously, the United States Congress is not going to be able to influence the IAU directly, but it can provide encouragement. Numerous scientific societies are having great problems accepting the IAU's new definition of planethood, which essentially could eliminate all planets in our solar system.

If you are interested in helping with the effort to restore Pluto to its former elite status, go to Kornfeld's Web site for information on why Pluto should still be a planet.

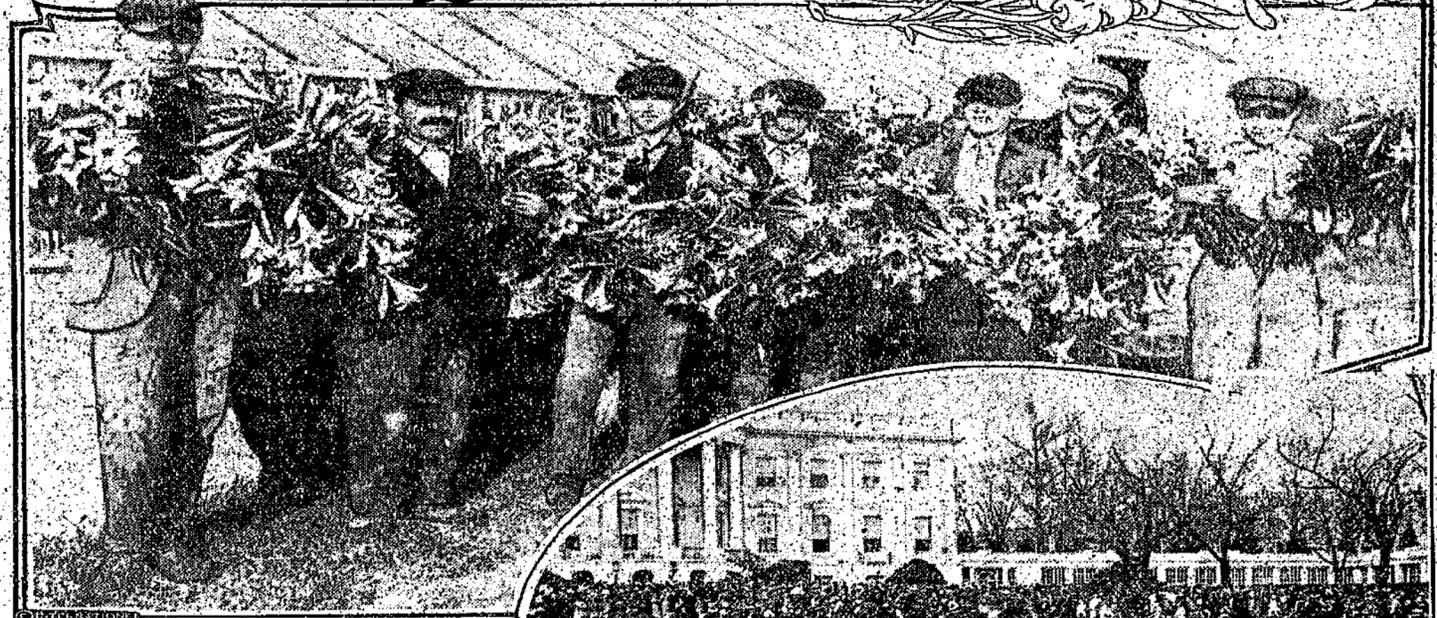

Very appropriately, some to Tombaugh's ashes are aboard the New Horizons rocket headed toward Pluto. Tombaugh had a deep interest in rockets as a means of exploring outer space.

Because of that interest and his ability to spot tiny objects in outer space, Tombaugh was recruited for a secret government project several decades ago to search for near-earth satellites.

That reason for the search was never revealed, but we have recently learned that our government knew the Soviets were ahead in developing a manned spy satellite in the early 1970s. It's another aspect of the practical uses of astronomy.

Message of Easter

SHARE YOUR EASTER LILY

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

EASTER SUNDAY this year falls on April 17. Last year it was April 4 and the year before, it was April 12. Next year it will fall on April 8. As everybody knows it is a variable date, sometimes falling in March and sometimes in April, but under the present method of reckoning the Easter Sunday date, it cannot come earlier than March 22 nor later than April 25. For the reason that Easter Sunday is a variable date, it therefore does not have the significance as a red-letter date on American calendars that other dates, such as New Year's day, Christmas day, Independence day, Washington's birthday and Lincoln's birthday, have. In this relation it is more like Thanksgiving day or Labor day in being always a certain day of the week, but varying as to the day of the month.

More important, of course, than its significance as a red-letter day on our calendars is the inherent significance of the day itself. To the Christian world it is the anniversary of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. But that does not mean that the essential spirit of Easter means something to one part of humanity, set off from the rest by a religious classification, and means nothing to the rest of the human race. For Easter has a significance to all humankind and the keynote of that significance is the one word "resurrection."

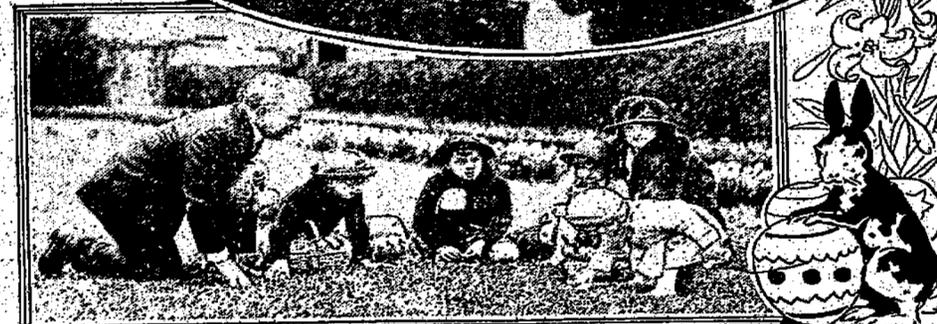

Look at the word itself—Easter. It is derived from the word East, and East is one of the four cardinal points. It is also the cardinal point which has always been most important in all religious ceremonies of all races and creeds. This is because it is the part of the heavens where the sun is seen to rise—the sun, bringer of light and heat, the very giver of life itself! The most primitive intelligence of the most primitive man recognized the fact that the sun and life were inseparably associated and it was only natural that when he came to worship the thing which was greater than he, he should turn to the East whence came that greater and higher thing which he recognized as being the life-giving power.

So each day was to him a cycle of a whole lifetime. In the morning as the sun came up, life came into being. As the sun mounted in the heavens life grew in its lusty youth and increased in power. At its zenith, life, too, was at its highest point. As the sun declined, so life declined into old age, into weakness, until there came darkness, the synonym for death. After a period of darkness, life came again. There was a resurrection and once more, the cycle of a life-time compressed into 24 hours, there was life!

And that, stripped of all the tradition, myth, legend, custom and social practice that has attached itself to Easter, is the spirit and the message of Easter, all concentrated in the one word "resurrection." So Easter has a significance that no other red-letter day on our calendars has and that significance is the significance of one of the fundamental and inevitable facts of existence. It is conceivable that all other red-letter days may be abolished from our calendars, that the calendar itself may be done away with. Let, no matter what may happen, so long as human life exists on this earth, the spirit of Easter will survive. When it ends, then ends all hope for mankind, all reason for mankind's struggle to exist.

If "resurrection" is the spirit and the message of Easter, then the inmost essence of that spirit can be summed up in the one word "immortality." If man can find an answer to the old, old question that has troubled him through the ages, the question "Does death end all?" he can find it in the message of Easter. It is reassurance that the struggle to live is worth while and that he does not face a hopeless task. Even if he did not have the comfort of his religion to help him arrive at that belief, he finds it in the mere fact of living. Each day, each year and each lifetime he sees the cycle repeated. The sun comes up in the morning and goes down into darkness at night. But he knows that it will come up again the next morning. Each 24 hours he sees the miracle of resurrection. Now life is manifest in the animal and vegetable kingdoms with each recurring spring. It ripens in the heat of summertime and mellowed into maturity in the autumn, only to die in the cold of winter. But he knows that life will begin again next spring. Each 12 months he sees the miracle of resurrection. A baby is born, passes through childhood, grows into youth, reaches man's estate and then declines into old age. What if the darkness of death is only a matter of a few years away? He has seen the recurring miracle of resurrection every 24 hours and every 12 months. Why should not man, reasoning logically from this evidence of which he is aware every day of his life, believe that the cycle of a lifetime includes a resurrection just as does the daily cycle and the yearly cycle? He does so believe and from that belief comes his belief in the life everlasting, in immortality.

CHILDREN ROLLING EGGS ON THE WHITE HOUSE LAWN

Perhaps it would be more accurate to say he chooses to believe. For few men, if any, have ever solved the riddle of life to their utter satisfaction. They constantly grope for the truth, seeking, always seeking, the answer to the unsolved problems of life. They have the never-ending longing in their hearts for everlasting life and they choose to believe, and take comfort from the belief, that they shall have it.

So whether he be primitive man or modern, civilized man, whether he be Christian or heathen, the essential spirit of Easter, the message of Easter is the same—it is a message of hope, a message of joy and a promise and a fulfillment in one. That message is delivered to man in many forms. It comes to him in the riot of bird songs which greet the sun on every morning in spring. It comes to him in the greenness of the grass, in the swelling buds on the trees, in the flowers which push their way up through the earth when the warming touch of the sun is laid upon it. It comes to him in the softness of the blue sky. In the fleecy clouds floating above him and in the gentle caress of the breezes that touch his face as he goes forth to start each day's work. It comes to him, too, as he watches young animal life about him—lamb, calves and colts waddling about unsteadily at first and then, as they gain strength, running around in those funny, awkward, stiff-legged little jumps which are always so fascinating to watch.

It comes to him every minute of the day as Nature, in all her forms, cries out exultingly "Spring has come! Spring has come!" Even if she did not tell him in those words, he would know it himself—in the surge of new strength in his own body, in the quickening of his blood after its winter sluggishness. As he hears the call of spring and the message of Easter he feels the desire to pass the message along. He passes it along in as many ways as it comes to him—in the happy note in his voice as he greets his friends, in the little snatches of song which he finds himself singing and in the effort which he makes constantly to put that message into words.

One of those efforts takes the form of writing poetry. Even though the spring poet is a subject for many of our stock jokes, the fact remains that the urge to write poetry is a part of man's effort to pass along the message of spring. For all spring poetry is fundamentally an effort to express the feeling of resurrected life. And Easter, which represents the crystallized spirit of spring, probably brings forth more attempts at poetic expression—and perhaps more real poetry—than any other day on our calendar.

Though the theme of all the Easter poems may vary, through them all runs the thread of rejoicing, rejoicing in the return of new life to the fields and woods, rejoicing in the new hope that springs up in human hearts at the coming of the springtime and more especially at the thought that Easter means the promise of life everlasting. These poems illustrate those joyous thoughts:

At Easter Time

Easter lilies, daffodils,
All the world their perfume fills,
While adown the dim aisles ringing
Hallelujahs, Hark the singing
Echoed in the far-off hills.

Waiting time is o'er at last,
Finished all the prayer and fast;
Woodland songs are echoing,
Woodland bowers beckoning;
All the waiting time is past.

Hail the glad, sweet Easter Day!
Lifted is the veil of gray,
Christ is risen in His glory;
It is finished now, the story;
Clouds of gloom have rolled away.

Hallelujah! Joyous sound,
What was sought at last is found,
Through the dim aisles hear it ringing,
All through woodlands hear the singing,
Echoing the world around—Amen.

Easter Day

Words cannot utter
Christ His returning;
Mankind, keep jubilee,
Strip off your mourning,
Cre a joy with garlands,
Set your lamps burning.

Speech is left speechless;
Set you to singing,
Fling your hearts open wide,
Sing your trills ringing;
Christ the Chief Reaper
Comes, He's about bringing.

Earth wakes her song-birds,
Flies on her flowers,
Leads out her lambskins,
Builds up her bowers;
This is man's spouse's day,
Christ's day and ours.
—Christina Rossetti.

Corpus Christi

Faith, faith, faith, torques of advancing dawn,
Into the Tomb, confirm its vacancy,
That every eye in certain day can see
It is no dream of worn contention,
Nor any parable of transient love,
That Christ hath risen and goeth on before
His very mourners into Galilee.

Flagging mid lilies redolent with prayer—
White as the wings which seraphim unfold
In grace above their carrels of gold,
Or as the robes triumphant saints will wear—
His blessing by his presence in the way
Each creature waiting to eternal day;
Ere this God's purposes were but half told.

His flesh was rent apart on Calvary,
Those veins which opened at the spear's mad thrust
Gave priceless blood unto the very dust:
Yet not all hell could change the prophecy
That not a bone of him should mortals break
Nor worldly slugs from him his portion take While high above earth's darkness signed the Just!

And so, though torn by many a man-made creed
The garments of our faith still seem to be,
The firm foundation of our hope is He,
Bruised, but surviving every foe, the seed
Sown by His Word in stanch and fertile ground
Will bloom till all its flowers of Love abound;
For what shall vanquish immortality?
—Edna K. LeNart.

Obituary

JACK NELSON

Jack Nelson, of Ruidoso, died March 15 after a battle with cancer. A memorial service will be held at Gateway Church of Christ at 415 Sudderth, today, Thursday March 20th at 6 p.m.

Jack was born in Fayetteville, AR on October 13, 1946. He was raised in California and later met his wife Carolyn Nelson in Germany. They were married in Kansas City, MO August 3, 1968. Jack and Carolyn raised two children, Danielle Nelson and Jack Nelson Jr. He has three grandchildren. Jack has one sister, Nellie Dean Hall and four nieces. He was a retired United States Army Green Beret and a Vietnam veteran. After his career in the military, Jack worked as a counselor at Capitan High School. He was also a ski instructor for the Ski Apache Ski School and Ski Apache Disabled Skiers Program.

large. Laws must be worthy of respect, and while respect for courts is all important, courts also must be worthy of and command respect," he declared.

"Present day law makers it seems have become filled with a passion for the regulation of everything and everybody. This passion has brot about some results which may be well classified as 'terrific,' and the end is not yet. You can put a law into the constitution, but the people themselves must put that law into operation.

"The constitution of the United States will have been scrapped when centralized government takes the place of that constitution and individual and personal rights have been violated," he said.

"The ideal of states rights is not dead and must not die. The theory that the majority should always rule as between the states is a false theory, and it's high time that we should realize that each state must settle its own problems in its own way. Self-government is a sacred responsibility and one not to be taken away by congress or any other law making body," he declared.

"I believe in the churches, God speed the day when all men will be Christians, but Christians by what they believe to be right and just and not Christians by law. Human statutes can never supplant heredity and training and the courthouse can never take the place of the altar," he declared.

"The next 50 years are to be momentous years in the history of this great government of ours. You and I perhaps will never live to see it, but on the horizon there is a gleam of a brighter day, when we return again to the ideals of our forefathers, turn back the pages of time and revert again to the fundamentals of the bill of rights, a government of the people, by the people and for the people," he declared in closing.

Why We Hate Don'ts

By M.K. Thomson, Ph. D.

We all, hate don'ts. None of us like to be told that we must not do this or that. Every such command is a challenge to our personality. We rebel. The natural reaction to every don't is to do the very thing we are commanded not to do.

Every don't arouses a counter suggestion. The force of an idea is such that once the idea takes possession it has a way of working itself out in action. Whenever the don't is repeated either by ourselves or by others it serves to keep the idea at the focus of consciousness.

We cannot live on don'ts. Body and mind, we are made for action. Don'ts do not provide opportunity for doing, and since we must do something, we end by doing the very thing that is prohibited. The laws of association and suggestion turn the trick.

The most important reason why we hate don'ts is that the thing prohibited is usually something we have done before or are likely to do. This means that it is something we like to do. We therefore resent being told not to do it.

A don't implies an act that is already begun or is strongly contemplated. In either case the muscles as well as the inner mental attitude are all set for it. Once an act has begun to function, any interruption is looked upon as an impertinence. The whole mechanism is thrown out of gear. Consequently the resources of the man are called into play in behalf of the act in question.

So that what was originally a mild reaction becomes a storm center

Modern Youth and Its Ways

by Jean Newton

"Dad, you're just a conscientious objector!"

I heard a boy of twenty say that to a father whose whole life was wrapped up in his children and to whom nothing in the world meant anything compared with their happiness.

During that boy's childhood father and son had been pals. But now it seemed they were growing farther and farther apart. They no longer seemed to have things in common. The father could not escape the terrible hurt that he was losing his son's confidence.

To an outsider, the reason was obvious. Modern youth and its ways were completely awry according to the standards of the older man. Of course he had only his son's own good in mind. There were times when he was undoubt-

Clothing Drive

The Carrizozo Junior Rotary put on a clothing drive from Monday, March 10, to Wednesday, March 19, to donate clothes for an orphanage in Mexico west of Juarez. The suggestion came from senior Erin Hightower and freshman Lauren Smith, both Junior Rotary members.

The idea for the clothing drive was discussed at a Tic-Tac meeting which is held every Wednesday from 6-8 p.m. at the Methodist Church for middle school through high school students.

Members placed boxes in classrooms and picked items up on the 19th. For the past week students from kindergarten to 12th have been bringing clothes that they no longer need but are still in good shape. Daniel and J' Lane Zamora also donated over 10 large bags of clothes to this charity.

The orphanage contains over 100 children. The church sponsoring this event has "adopted" the orphanage as their own. Lauren Smith stated, "They had nothing and I have so much compared to them." She is not sure when they will get the clothes there. But one thing for sure is that the people who have donated clothing, time, and their thought are greatly appreciated to a lot of people.

edly right in his contention that his son was endangering that "good". At other times when he created issues it was merely because he was inelastic - a bit narrow and a bit stubborn in insisting upon his own standards as the only right standards instead of recognizing them as something as dated and inappropriate to modern needs as his 1899 clothing would be if he should put it on for a meeting of the 1930 Rotary club!

The important point, of course, is not who is right in any particular issue of 1899 against 1930. It is that parents can do more for their children by holding their confidence than by being right. And if they are going to see everything from the other side of the fence from their children, those children cannot have anything in common with them; and not only will they feel no urge to give their parents their confidence but to avoid the unpleasantness of constant friction they will consciously or unconsciously avoid those who love them best and are in a position to give them their valuable assistance with the problems of their lives.

It is a bitter pill for any parent to have to swallow when he realizes that his son or daughter regards him as a "conscientious objector." And difficult as it may be to drop standards and ideas which for a generation we had regarded as the very foundations of the universe, to force our set minds around to see things in the light in which we can hold the confidence of those children, which is the most powerful weapon for their protection in times of real danger.

Incidentally a mental attitude of doubt as to whether our way is really always the best way in everything is good for us. It helps us keep young.

Finding the Next Dollar

By Douglas Malloch

Where the next dollar comes from, that's
The problem that we face.
Whether a mansion or a flat,
It always seems the case.
The morning always brings some need:
New fuel for the fire,
New food to eat, new books to read,
New clothes that we require.
But if by chance two dollars come
When only one will do,
Then add the other to the sum
You save, to work for you.
For dollars that you lay away
A dollar soon will breed,
And that may prove some other day
The dollar that you need.
Perhaps some morning when the shop
Is shut, or hair is white,
We'll find that dollars never stop,
Keep working day and night.
They will not need to ask of friends
Who saved as well as spent:
Where the next dollar comes depends
On where the last one went.

Lights of New York

By Walter Trumbull

New York men who employ secretaries grow to be more dependent on them than a ship's captain on his compass.

Charles Francis Coe, for example, the man who wrote "Me, Gangster," "The River Pirate," "Votes," and all those other novels, dictates his stories, as well as his letters. The other day I entered Mr. Coe's writing room, in a Broadway office building, to find him sitting at his desk, gazing disconsolately at an epistle which he had picked out of the typewriter himself. It seems that he had lost his secretary by marriage or some other catastrophe.

"Got a stamp?" he inquired.
I assured him that I was unarmed.
"Well," he said, "I don't know what I am going to do. This is an important letter and I haven't any stamp."

Suddenly he was struck by a bright idea. He smiled happily, picked up his telephone and called an editor in Philadelphia. It took only a moment or two to get the connection and Mr. Coe explained that he had written a letter, but hadn't mailed it, and recited the gist of its contents. Then I heard him say:

"No, don't wait until you get the letter. I can't mail it. I haven't a stamp."

I later learned that the charge on the telephone call was $7.20. And all because Charlie Coe was alone in New York, without a secretary or a two-cent stamp.
