Britain's Real Ruler Old-Fashioned Daughter Drags in That Prison? A Prosperous Country

Ramsay MacDonald, elected head of the British Empire by the Labor party, is here, the first British Prime Minister to visit the United States while in office.

The Prime Minister is the most powerful man in England. The King, addressing his lords and commons, says exactly what the Prime Minister tells him to say.

Miss Isabel MacDonald, here with her father, will seem hopelessly old-fashioned to many of our rising female generation.

She does not smoke or drink alcoholic liquors and does not paint or powder her face.

And, most old-fashioned of all, she does look after her father and take a serious interest in public affairs.

If you see Ramsay MacDonald, Labor Prime Minister of Great Britain, you may also see Miss Rose, Dorothy, vivacious, able young woman, the Prime Minister's private secretary. Miss Rose joined the Socialist party in London eleven years ago and has been MacDonald's secretary since then.

Observe the difference between "democratic America" and "conservative Great Britain." Here, if you join the Socialist party, and talk "that way," you stand a fair chance of being locked up. In Britain you may become secretary to the Prime Minister.

The tragic rebellion of convicts in the Colorado state prison ended with 150 convicts walking out, hands raised above their heads, in surrender.

Four leaders of the rebellion had killed themselves. The convicts, at intervals, had thrown out of an upper window the bodies of guards captured and murdered by them, the warden having on each occasion refused to let them go free.

Once a prison inmate was a poor and miserable creature, with poor and miserable friends, if any.

Some women, sad-faced, might come to see the man in jail, bringing him food to eat, through the bars, giving, perhaps, a few cents worth of tobacco.

That is all changed, in these bootleg days. Convicts have, outside the prison walls, gangster friends that control money unlimited. Convicts can afford to buy privileges, including drugs, and at the high prices charged in prison traffic.

That drugs played a part in the Colorado outbreak, with its reckless disregard for death and its soulless, senseless, probable.

Guards will likely learn from the Colorado tragedy to watch their prisoners closely, and to watch with special care any guard or other person engaged in the prison drug-trade.

While Sam continues to prosper, in spite of increasing expenses, he is actually working himself to death. He collected more than one billion dollars, and $125,000,000 more than he collected in the same three months ago. It's a big, rich country, with a single city appearing in a year as big as the United States used to be before the war.

Gasoline, whiskey, "home brew" and automobile accidents are related. Drunken drivers kill many. Every body knows that.

Doctor Norris, chief medical officer at New York City, says that "an officer's cause accidents for the automobile industry is increasing."

Doctor Norris argues that reckless drivers be fined and added "Twenty per cent of adults but by automobiles are intoxicated."

Herman Linderman, New York gangster, strangled himself with his belt in prison. He had "squealed" on his associates, had been stabbed once in prison, and feared what would happen when he reached the penitentiary again.

He put $2.50 in the pocket of a criminal asleep in his cell with a note asking that it be divided with a friend. He wrote to that friend, "Have a good feast on me, on my way to hell." Crime does not pay.

Germany mourns the loss of Stresemann, great and patriotic leader, who actually worked himself to death for Germany. Before he died he had the satisfaction of negotiating the evacuation of the Rhineland, thus restoring to Germany her territorial integrity.

The governor of North Carolina very intelligently thinks that in North Carolina wages should be made higher, hours shorter, in the textile industry.

He does not agree with the theory that human beings in the South should be treated like cattle in order to attract northern capital.

Every intelligent American, especially the very rich and prosperous, is coming to realize the importance of paying good wages and giving nice, reasonable leisure for the enjoyment of life.

Governor Dillon's Decision

Referring to the report recently made by the Santa Fe County Grand Jury relative to the Highway Department, I found the subject so complicated that it was impossible for me to take hasty action one way or another. Under the instructions of Judge of the First Judicial District, the grand jury was called to investigate the Highway department. Subsequent to the calling of the grand jury I asked the attorney general to assist the district attorney in the investigation.

Five indictments were returned against one Frank Quinn, an employee of the highway department and he is now out on bond awaiting trial. The report of the jury contains the suggestion that "the Governor would be justified in causing the removal of office of Messrs. Frank Quinn, W. C. Davidson and Charles Springer." This jury was composed of 12 of our best and most highly respected citizens and I feel convinced that they endeavored to fulfill their duties. The carrying out of the jury's suggestion involves a vital issue relating to the fundamental distinction made in our Constitution between the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the state government. Our Constitution provides:

Article V, Sec. 5: "The governor shall nominate, and by and with the consent of the senate, appoint all officers whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for, and may remove any officer appointed by him for incompetency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. Should a vacancy occur in any state office except Lieut. Gov. and member of the legislature, the governor shall fill such office by appointment and such appointee shall hold office until the next general election, when his successor shall be chosen for the unexpired term."

Nowhere in our fundamental law do I find any power conferred upon the judiciary or the judicial department of the government to employ its instrumentalities in attempting to sway the judgment of the governor in such matters as to the fitness or unfitness of any appointee of him to public office. If I surrender to such a suggestion as that contained in the report, no Governor of New Mexico after me would be immune from the effect of so sinister and dangerous a precedent. In all that I have said above I am not unmindful of the powers and duties conferred by our laws upon grand juries and for the information of those who may not be aware of the facts give them here as follows:

Sec. 3120: "Sec. 34. The grand jury then must retire to a private room and inquire into the offenses cognizable by them."

Sec. 3124: "Sec. 38. The grand jury have power, and it is their duty to inquire into all public offenses committed or triable in the county and to present them to the court, by indictment."

Sec. 3133: "Sec. 47. The grand jury must inquire—First: Into the condition of every person imprisoned on a criminal charge triable in the county, and not indicted. Second: Into the condition and management of the public prison of the county; and, Third: Into the condition and management of every public office of every description in the county."

Mr. Quinn was suspended prior to the investigation by the grand jury, which found 5 indictments against Quinn. Our constitution guarantees him his day in court and the public should wait for its opinion until he has had his trial. In regard to the recommendation for the dismissal of Springer and Davidson, the jury returned no indictments against them, therefore they are in an entirely different class from Mr. Quinn.

The identical provisions of the law as above cited are found in the laws of the state of New York and this exact point has been passed upon and decided by the courts of that state upon application to expunge similar jury reports, relating upon the integrity of public officials, from the records of the courts. In a case of this kind decided in New York, the court refused to inquire into the truth or falsity of the charges on the ground that the only question was the legality of the grand jury's action in making the charges. In course of the decision the court made some remarks which are worthy of appearing here:

"From time immemorial it has been the practice of grand juries the conclusion of their duties adopt resolutions and make reports on a variety of subjects, long as this would be unjust, they were tolerated. When the integrity of an individual is impugned, and he is publicly assured, without opportunity to answer, he is entitled in appealing to the court, to rectify the wrong. A grand jury, under the guise of a reportment, must not be permitted to attack the good name of a citizen. It is unquestionably true that the public mind is impressed by the charges of such a body. It is a grave matter to charge a public

San Marcial Now a Ghost-Town

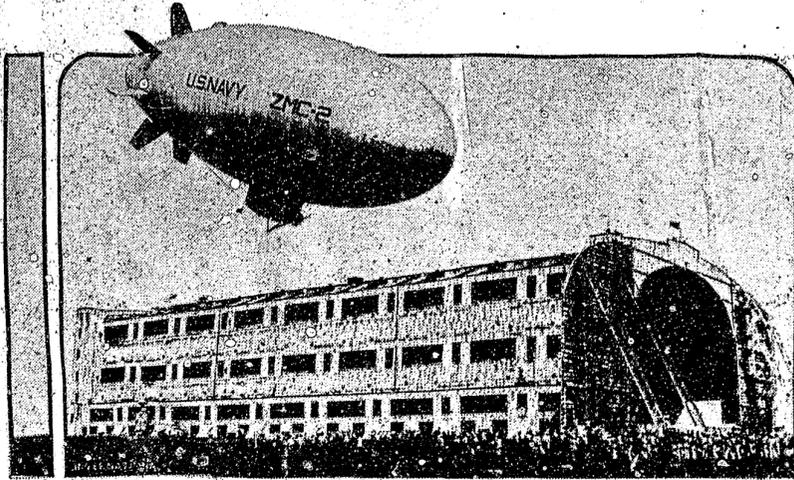

After enduring floods for over 100 years, San Marcial, being reduced to a flag station of the A. T. & S. F. The old town, or rather the site of it, is covered with silt from the last flood and only a few skeletons of buildings remain. The only signs of life at that place now is a few workers removing what salvage they can find and removing the same to safer quarters. Last Wednesday the manager of the former Harvey House, salvaged everything he could and shipped it to La Junta, Colo., and the old Harvey House that has long accommodated so many patrons of the Santa Fe at that place, is a thing of the past. Mystery of the Blue Goose Solved

Out of the frozen North comes word that J. Dewey Soper, special investigator of the northwest territories branch of the Department of the Interior, has found the nest of the elusive ornithologist—the blue goose. For years the blue goose has baffled hunters. Nobody ever saw a blue goose's nest, or a blue goose egg, or a blue goose fledgling. The blue goose appeared every summer, but nobody knew whence it came, or where it went in the autumn. Soper found its habit away out in Baffin land, and brought back with him to Ottawa blue goose eggs, nest, goslings and mature birds. Soper is shown above, in the far North.

Lesson for October 13

KEEPING FIT FOR THE SAKE OF OTHERS

Temperance Lesson
LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:8-20, 1 Cor. 10:21, 1 Tim. 4:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own, ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Taking Care of Our Bodies.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Keeping Fit.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Self-control for the Common Good.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Temperance Essential to the Highest Usefulness.

In the use of this as a temperance lesson it must be borne in mind that it is temperance in the sense of self-mastery rather than indulgence in intoxicating liquors.

1. The Self-mastery of Daniel and His Companions (Dan. 1:8-20).

These young men were wrenched from their homes and country in the tender years of youth and carried away as captives to a strange land.

1. Their trials (vv. 5-7).

(1) The test of conscience (v. 5). By the appointment of the king, a portion of the king's meat and wine was provided daily for the captives. This being contrary to the Jewish customs, the young men could not conscientiously partake of them. Conscience is the groundwork of human character.

(2) Changed name (vv. 6, 7).

Among the Hebrews, names were given to children which were most significant. Daniel means "God is my Judge." The significance of this name was that all the problems of life were submitted to God for His decision. This was the secret of Daniel's successful life.

(3) Their religious life (v. 8).

This involved their refusal to eat meat and to drink wine. In the case of Daniel at least, it also involved his praying three times a day. Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with this food and drink.

2. The courtesy (vv. 8-13).

Daniel seems to have been the spokesman for the company. Although his heart was fixed, he did not forget to be a gentleman. He requested that he be excused from this meat and drink in order not to be defiled.

3. Their triumph (vv. 14-21).

(1) Their physical health (vv. 14-16). A test was made for ten days which showed that they were fatter in countenance and fatter in flesh than those who indulged in the king's meat.

(2) Their mental growth (vv. 17-20).

Daniel and his companions were found to be ten times better than their comrades in wisdom and understanding.

(3) Social and political preferment (v. 19).

(4) Their temporal influence (v. 21).

All were advanced to positions of influence, and Daniel became president of the college of wise men, and the prime minister of the nation.

II. Paul Advises the Corinthians as to Self-control (1 Cor. 9:19-27).

The Corinthians were an intemperate and a dissolute people. No city in the world perhaps exceeded them in vices of all kinds. The surest and most effective way to combat vice is to inculcate virtue.

1. Paul's own life and example (vv. 19-23).

Though free from all men, he made himself servant unto all.

2. The Isthmian games (vv. 24-27).

Paul uses these popular games to illustrate the need of self-control.

(1) Life is a race (vv. 24, 25).

In order to win a prize there must be self-denial and definite exertion. The Christian obtains life by contact with Jesus Christ through faith (John 3:16; 3:36; 5:24).

(2) It is a fight (vv. 26, 27).

The Christian's efforts are not mere beatings of the air. He has a deadly struggle with his carnal nature.

III. Paul's Advice to Timothy (1 Tim. 4:7-12).

A minister needs to have control of himself. He is urged to exercise himself into godliness. He needs to train himself for his work as a teacher and a minister.

Doing Good

Doing good is the only pleasure that never wears out.—Confucius.

Bring God into Your Heart

Bring God down into your heart. Embellish your soul in Him now, make within you a temple for the Holy Spirit; be diligent in good works, make others happier and better.—Amiel's Journal.

Power and Providence

No one can rightly like the great facts of history without feeling his own insignificance and the wonderful sweep of the power and providence of God.—Edwards.

 Watermelons instead of cane will be the raw material used in a new Russian syrup factory recently established at Stalingrad, formerly Tsaritzin, on the Volga. The product is known as "melado." The better grades of the syrup are used in cooking or confectionery, and the poorer grades in the manufacture of alcohol.

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon. Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Captain Chater of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of the True Bounty. Cara induces him to sail as mate. Fellowes falls in love with her. The True Bounty is stopped by the British frigate, the Badger. Captain Collishawe. Despite his American citizenship Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger as a "pressed" man. Maddened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery he strikes Collishawe who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat."

CHAPTER IV

Tom Grogan and Cuffee Cockroach

In his delirium Fellowes was plagued by a weird specter—the head of Collishawe on the sluey torso of Bob Clinch—that brandished a dripping cut over his lacerated back. But always as the lashes were about to fall a gigantic black figure intervened, and a soft, crooning voice quieted his frenzied defiance:

"Hush yo'se! mars'r, Cuffee hof' yo' han'. Dar, yo' don' need noier—ain't only Cuffee n' Tom wid' yo'."

Fellowes raised his head as the negro spoke, and his lips parted in a groan. He was lying on his stomach on a pile of hammocks; the yellow glare of a battle-lantern, suspended above him, revealed the confined space of the Badger's berth-deck. From his neck to his loins his back was a blaze of agony.

"How long have I been here?" he whispered.

"Dis two night. Yo' hab much bobbery, mars'r. Yo' holler, an' yo' yell, an' yo' wan' fo' 'ill him cap'n. Oh, my aunt, yo' plenty sick!"

Fellowes moaned again, tentatively, to ease a stiffness in his legs, and with the stab of pain which shot through him he felt an oily moisture perceptible down his flanks.

"What have you got on me?" he asked, between gritted teeth.

"Plenty slush. Dat best fo' yo' Bob Clinch fetch him from cookee. Yo' go fo' sleep." The negro settled back on his heels. "Sleep mo' better fo' yo'."

"But why do you do this for me?" exclaimed Fellowes.

"Cuffee help yo' fo' dat yo' strike him cap'n bad face. An' Cuffee t'ink yo' plenty juju fo' take tuggin' widout holler. Cuffee like yo' fine."

"I'm very grateful," said Fellowes weakly. "You—it's the last thing I expected. What did you say your name was?"

"Cuffee, mars'r—Cuffee Cockroach. Now yo' go fo' sleep."

The crooning voice hummed a slow, monotonous tune, and despite himself, despite the pain that racked and burned, Fellowes drifted off into a drowsing slumber. When he awakened sunshine was pouring down an open hatch. He turned his head with difficulty, and at once a gruff voice spoke beside him.

"Easy all, shipmate. That back's purty tender."

The speaker was the short, bow-legged sailor, of the bristling black beard and mahogany-tanned hide.

"There was a negro here," Fellowes answered feebly. "In the night—"

"Cuffee, messmate. He's on watch—leastways, he's at gun-drill. Ye wouldn't skeerely suspect it, now, would ye, but that nigger's a master hand with Long Tom? Holystone me, if he ain't the smartest gunner I ever seed."

"Your name is Tom, isn't it?"

"Tom Grogan of Philadelphia, P. A.—likewise, A. B. Pressed off the schooner Martha out o' Baltimore. But mebbe ye could eat a morsel? All ye had was a sup o' rum since ye came below."

He dropped on his knees by Fellowes' head, and offered him a spoonful of steamy liquid from a pannikin.

"Cuffee cooked this for ye," he pursued. "For an ignorant nigger, he's got a surpris'n lot o' knowhow."

Fellowes was amazed at the fastness and savor of the mess.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Salt-horse 'n' hardtack 'n' whatever Cuffee could steal out o' the galley," Grogan replied, grinning. "He's a master-cook, too—that's how we shipped him on the Martha."

"You were pressed together?"

"For sartain. Collishawe was only for takin' me, but Cuffee, he up and says us how he's alius shipped with me, 'n' if I'm transfer'n to the r'yal navy, why, he'll come, too."

"Then Cuffee isn't a slave?"

"Grogan set down the pannikin, and scratched his ear doubtfully.

"Well, mate, that's a question I've often asked myself. 'See the Martha took him off the wreck of a slave—San Jago, of Havana—diswasted in the Middle passage. He was the only livin' critter aboard. I guess he wouldn't have lasted more'n a day, if we hadn't happened by. Cap'n, he didn't want to take Cuffee off—but I was a curious young feller, and there was a chance the slavers had ie't treasure behind 'em, so the cap'n he heims 'n' haws and 'lows I can go. If so be I go alone, which same I did."

Fellowes found the narrative amusing. It removed his thoughts from his tortured back.

Grogan went on: "Cuffee come, 'n' he kissed my hand, and knelted down on the deck in front of me. And after I took him back to the Martha, 'n' we'd fatted him a piece, why, ye jest couldn't pry him away from me. Cap'n, he called him 'Tom Grogan's nigger,' and next time we made Baltimore that's how the customs officers entered him. 'Cuffee Cockroach, property o' Tom Grogan, A. B. of Philadelphia, P. A.'"

A shadow fell across Fellowes' face, and Clinch squatted opposite Grogan.

"'Fellin' a mite more peckish, ind?' inquired the bosun. "Rot my guts, but yer a game bantam." He paused awkwardly. "No anemosectees, I 'ope?"

Fellowes thrust out a hand, regardless of the pain the movement caused him.

"I haven't anything against you bosun," he answered. "I'm sore, but I'll be up and about soon. And then I'll attend to the cur who used you."

Clinch darted a worried look over his shoulder.

"Belay that talk, ind," he ordered, gruffly. "Twon't get ye nowhere. Ye can't reach the cap'n. Ain't it so, Tom Grogan? Yer a pressed man. Tell the lad I'm talkin' for 'is own good."

"Sartain, sartain," Grogan corroborated soothingly. "Ye got to use plain sense. Yer jest a pressed seaman like me 'n' Cuffee, only ye hit the cap'n in the jaw—and lived to reckon it."

"Aye, aye," agreed Clinch. "Don't forget that. Cripes, ind, a cap'n can't let one o' 'is men strike 'm." "E was as easy as 'e could be."

"Easy!" Fellowes snapped scornfully. "I'd rather have been killed than flogged."

Clinch rose uncomfortably.

"See 'ere," he said. "I don't like the way ye talk. The cap'n, 'e's fair, but 'e's 'ard. All for discipline, 'e 'is."

Fellowes experienced a profound sensation of weakness. "It doesn't matter," he mumbled, fighting back the tears of rage that pricked his eyelids. "But if I live—G—d, how I hate the cur! And her! and her!"

His voice became a wail. There was a sudden patter of feet on the deck.

"What yo' po' fool do?" Cuffee scolded. "Buckra mars'r, him sick like ill chille. Yo' wan' fo' make him mo' bobbery?"

"We ain't done nothin' to him, nigger," Clinch protested. "E was atalkin' ag'in the cap'n."

Probably Only "Ghst" of Island on Record

I was staying in Orstava, Tenerife, with the family of the English chaplain there. One very sultry day he asked me to come up to the flat roof of the house, as he wished to show me something very remarkable. Finding I had strong and far eyesight, he asked me to count the islands I could see round the coast of Tenerife, and I found that, with Grande Canary, they numbered seven.

He then requested me to look through the telescope and name what I could see on the islet beyond Palma. And after I had specified a small palm tree, some low-growing trees and a small white hut, he showed me the latest map of these islands—which did not include the island which had

Artistic Bobbing

THE barber shops were the "first bobber shops. The girl's idea was to get a hair cut, to get rid of the old-style switch and be a flapper. With young girls, the act of cropping the mop of hair was not so bad, since a vivacious manner and a sweet face can get along without woman's crowning glory.

But when women as well as girls sought the shears and the hair began to fall in all directions, what was all right with golden locks was not so good with gray, and something had to be done. The job must not take away from a woman's beauty, but must leave it as it was, or perhaps improve and enhance it. That has been the problem of the bob.

The proper caper for the hair cutter is to make the bob add to and not subtract from the beauty of the head. The head? Yes, for it was that important portion of feminine anatomy which was often lost to view with the old-style coiffure. People knew that a woman had something on the top of her neck and there was the pretty face, but the sculptured head was not to it with the wig.

When a modern woman decide to let her hair go the way men did when they came out of the woods, she is only, like an Or'ntal dame who slings her veil into the discard, if she really does that. Both women feel that they want to move about without any disguises and away go hat and switch, to say nothing of hampins and hair-dressers. That's the woman who has snuffed the air of freedom.

A Greek goddess like Venus or Diana looked different from a French or English queen, if we may judge by their pictures, and it's the Grecian type that we are imitating today. This means that there must be form as well as face, the whole head and not merely eyes and lips.

A woman who is bobbed may look strange for a while, but she doesn't have that top-heavy appearance of the dame of olden days.

The bobbed head has the power to suggest that a woman intends to use her head and not merely wear it for adornment.

When a girl has trim locks under her closely fitting cap and isn't all decked out like an arbor of trailing arabus, she's bound to give the impression that she has something under that hat, something more than hair.

Artistic bobbing will bring out the idea that a girl has something more on her mind than a switch and that she has as many wits as her mother had.

Decollete by Day

WHEN you see a girl with bare arms at 8 a. m., you think she's coming home from the ball, but as a matter of fact, she's just going to business. That's one of the signs of the times. It makes Father Time adjust his bi-focals. It's the Nouveau youth.

Now this decollete stuff is only democracy showing itself at elbows and knees. It means that the flapper is crushing the gates and breaking down the barriers between the lady and the shop girl.

Time was, you know, when it was only women of the Four Hundred who used the bathing suit costume, and then it was after dark. Time is when any girl can rig herself up in decollete and turn the office into a ballroom.

Women are naturally expressive. Let's put it that way. So a girl who may not be a clank model or bathing beauty still wants a chance to reveal what beauty she has, along with the vaccination mart. A woman may conceal her mind, but she makes up for this by showing her neck.

I know that the professors who like to figure things out in dollars and cents tell us that lack of sleeves and trains mean that woman wants to economize in dress materials. It was the war, they say, that made 'em economical.

But economy was never a girl's maiden name. A girl may save a little on food, especially if she's getting fat lips, but she won't economize on dress. So it isn't economy in woman that makes her make a whole frock out of a scarf. It's the elemental within her.

Woman is primitive, that's all. This may sound like rough stuff, but it's what every woman knows. It's all right for men to be civilized, for they built all the cities, but woman doesn't care much about that sort of thing.

Look at a girl who throws off the coat of fur which once kept some wild beast warm. See the display of arms and shoulders. Now, isn't she a sweet ringer for some female ancestor who was togged out in the same way, minus the talcum powder?

The jazz costume of the day is a sign of the times. It shows that women have broken with the past and gone back to nature for a fresh start.

Unharnessed youth is the thing today. But this isn't only a lack of garters and corsets. It's freedom of mind as well as body.

It may have been the war, but I guess women were due for a change of some sort anyhow.

Health worth more than fortune

THE baby to be envied is the one who is born with an inheritance of perfect health, to begin with. And who's lucky enough to have a mother who knows how to build up this fortune. "Perhaps I'm old-fashioned," she'll say to the doctor who pronounces her child physically 100% at a baby show, "but this health certificate, means more to me than all the stock certificates in the world. If my baby grows up strong and well, I'm willing to leave it to him to make a career and fortune for himself. "Already I'm teaching him the value of regular habits, regular sleep, regular meals, regular functions. He's never once been off-schedule, not even when he was cutting teeth or traveling to the country. I make sure of that by giving him Nujol regularly. Nujol works so easily and naturally that it won't upset a baby under any conditions. It keeps everything functioning properly. It not only prevents any excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming but aids in their removal. It is safe and sure. Nujol was perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Avenue, New York. Just try Nujol for your baby. Give it to him regularly for the next three months. See if it doesn't make things much easier for both of you. Certainly it could do no harm—for Nujol contains no drugs or medicine. Your druggist carries it. Be sure you get the genuine. Sold only in sealed packages.

Makes Wonderful Gift to Chicago

Nearing completion on an island in Lake Michigan near the Field Museum is Chicago's Planetarium, the first in the United States. It is the gift of Max Adler of Chicago to the city to popularize and dramatize astronomy so the layman may get a new vision of the heavens.

Mr. Adler had three ideas in mind when he decided to give three quarters of a million dollars for the Planetarium. They were: First, to further the progress of science; second, to enable people to observe the action of the heavenly bodies as heretofore only astronomers have been able to do; and third, as he expressed it, to emphasize that all mankind, rich and poor, powerful and weak, as well as nations here and abroad constitute part of one universe and under the great celestial firmament there is no division or cleavage, but rather interdependence and unity. The building itself will comprise three twelve-sided tiers, built of granite and surmounted by a gleaming copper dome, 85 feet across. Each side of the structure is to be decorated with bronze plaques now being sculptured by Alphonse Lanelli, one of the country's foremost sculptors. Each plaque will depict an imaginative and symbolic representation of one of the 12 signs of the Zodiac. The building will be approached with terraces and balustrades.

County Fair Notes

Remember that—We are ready for the Fair and Track Meet Oct. 18-19. The indications are that the biggest crowd Carrizozo ever entertained will be here. Business houses in town should close from 9:45 to 10:30 a. m., and all should get into the parade; simply fall in behind the Band on Alamogordo avenue and follow the crowd. $5 for the best decorated car, truck or float. Miss Mabel Moody and her famous 6-piece Washington Park Orchestra of El Paso will play for the dances. Governor Dillon has written that he plans to be with us.

Aircraft Holdings, Incorporated of the T. A. T. Field, Albuquerque, is sending an airplane which will be with us both days. Consult the heads of any of the various committees for any needed information. By the time this paper is published again, the 3rd Annual Lincoln County Fair will be on. Do the work that has been assigned to you as best as you can; it is now too late to change any plans; boost and don't knock—smile all the while.

Gov. Dillon's Decision

He official with misconduct in office. The consequences may be very serious. In this case it cannot be seriously disputed that the emanations of the grand jury reflect on the petitioner's integrity. His official conduct is criticized, his motives are impugned, and he is held out as deserving of chastisement and reprobation. Even a grand jury should not attack with impunity the character of a citizen. Many a man of good repute in the world's ear may have his reputation blasted in this manner.

The Santa Fe county grand jury report indicates that Mr. Charles Springer and Mr. W. C. Davidson had knowledge of certain alleged offenses committed by the said Frank Quinn and on this ground I am asked to dismiss these officers. No attempt is made in the report to show that Springer and Davidson are guilty of incompetency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office. The Highway Commission is named by the governor and confirmed by the state senate and the commission selects the highway engineer and has the power to dismiss him if they deem it advisable. To remove any public official upon such suggestion as given in the report under discussion is a serious matter. Removal under any circumstances would reflect discredit upon these officials forever after, and tend to ruin their reputations for all time. It has never, to my knowledge, been charged by anyone that Springer or Davidson are incompetent, neglectful of duty or guilty of malfeasance in office; on the contrary they have the reputation far and wide of being the best road builders in the entire southwest. Mr. Davidson is an engineer. To openly discredit and disgrace him by removal from office, without cause, might deprive him of his means of earning a livelihood. Both Messrs. Springer and Davidson, as far as I know or have ever heard, are men of great ability, high standing and clean reputations, private and public. To openly discredit them and perhaps ultimately ruin their good names by summary dismissal upon charges that have not been proven is something that I shall never do.

Our state constitution contains the following paragraph on the distribution of government powers:

"Article III. Distribution of Powers. Sec. 1. The powers of the government of this state are divided into 3 distinct departments, the Legislative, Executive and Judicial and no person or collection of persons charged with the exercise of powers properly belonging to one of these departments, shall exercise any powers properly belonging to either of the others, except as in this constitution otherwise expressly directed or permitted."

The governor is the legal head of the executive department and upon him alone rests the responsibility for his actions. After careful deliberation and study, the above is my decision.

R. C. DILLON,
Governor.

Glencoe Woman's Club

Mrs. J. V. Tully was hostess to the club for its regular meeting, Oct. 5. The meeting was opened by all singing the club song, "America, the Beautiful," followed by reading the Club Litany. After considerable discussion the club went on record favoring a full co-operation with all efforts to establish a Union High School in southeastern Lincoln county.

Plans were made to observe Book Week in November, and to celebrate the First Anniversary of the Glencoe Woman's Club Library. The club has resolved to purchase a new book each year from the works of Judge J. Y. Hewitt's favorite author. These books are to be placed in a special section, designated as the "Judge Hewitt Section," honoring him for his gift to the library.

Mrs. Louise Cog, State Parliamentarian of the Woman's Club, was present and gave a brief report of the State Executive Board meeting.

The program subject was "Parliamentary Law," led by Mrs. A. F. Roselle, the ladies responding to questions asked by the leader. Roll Call was responded to with "A Parliamentary Rule."

Next meeting will be Nov. 2, at the home of Mrs. B. J. Bonnel. The program will be "A Book Party," led by Mrs. J. V. Tully. Each member is to come representing some book, in some way, for the others to guess.

Bravery and Efficiency of Telephone Workers Displayed at the Cleveland Clinic Disaster

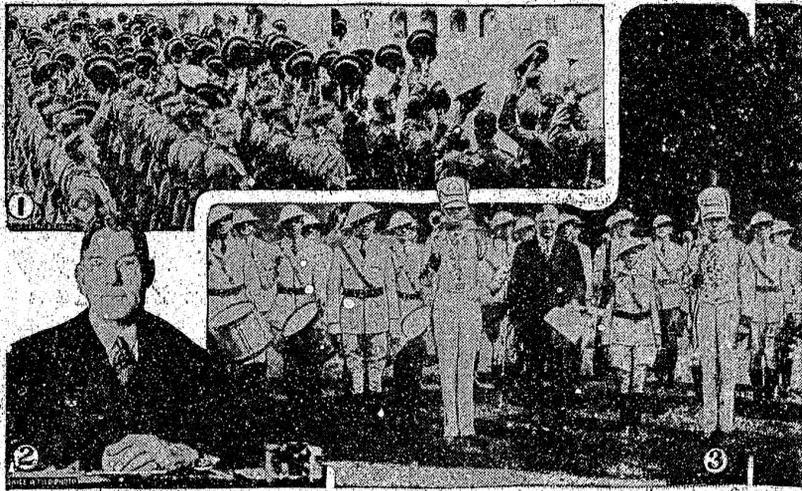

Cleveland Clinic Building During Rescue Work.

BY JOHN B. O'BRIEN. WITHIN twenty minutes of the first explosion in the terrible Cleveland Clinic disaster in May, which took a toll of more than 125 lives, emergency telephone lines had been installed on lighting poles in front of the Clinic building, and if the telephone was ever called upon to serve a humanitarian use, these instruments surely performed such a task. Four such emergency telephones were installed in front of the Clinic building. Three of them were connected to the Clinic private branch exchange board by means of lines run out of the window, and a fourth, for the use of the police and fire departments, was connected with a subscriber's line which had been taken over for the emergency. In order to relieve the strain on the Clinic hospital facilities, the subscribers' lines were taken over. These were strung through a window and connected with instruments in the reception room so as to handle outgoing calls. Telephone operators were rushed to the scene in taxis and by the time of their arrival, temporary lines had been strung across vacant lots connecting the Clinic board to the corridor or the hospital building. Emergency Information Bureau. From the very first, every effort was made to get and give the public just as much information as was possible, and included in this service was the answering of a large number of Long Distance calls, some of which came all the way from Europe. No sooner had the news of the disaster been flashed across the country than Long Distance calls began to pour into Cleveland, for many of the Hospital and Clinic patients were residents of other parts of the country and friends and relatives were anxious to receive information in regard to them. This was made the more difficult by the fact that the Clinic records had been in part destroyed and that many of the Clinic staff, both medical and administrative, were either among the dead or dying, or were engaged in caring for the injured. However, in every case, as much information as possible was given and all inquiries were carefully followed up so that the distant parties could be called back and receive any further information which could be obtained. This call-back service was furnished without additional charge. It became necessary, therefore, to organize an emergency information bureau. Eight such emergency stations were installed in the Headquarters Building of the Ohio Bell Telephone Company and they were manned continuously for forty-eight hours by members of its Commercial Department. The company also assigned other representatives to the morgue and at the different hospitals to which the injured had been removed. Thus, there was no delay in telephoning to the bureau as soon as identifications had been made and in this way the casualty lists were compiled. In the meantime, thousands of calls came in, inquiring as to the safety of patients in either the Clinic or the Hospital, and a great crowd collected outside the building to watch for and read the lists that were posted there from time to time. Among the many calls which were received from different parts of the country were hundreds that came from doctors, offering their services. Such calls were at once transmitted to the hospital authorities.

The emergency information bureau continued to function from Wednesday, May 15, until Friday noon. By then the traffic had subsided to a considerable extent so that it was possible to handle it by means of the two switchboards in the Clinic building. Heroism of Telephone Workers. The first word of the disaster came from the brave telephone operator at the Clinic, Miss Gladys Gibson, who, although she saw death approaching in the form of a ghastly yellow poison gas, stayed at her switchboard in an effort to secure help and to warn everyone of their danger. "Greater love hath no man," said a priest, with tears in his eyes when he saw the girl die. "She was a brave and noble girl." Not were her efforts in vain, for the telephone forces went into action with remarkable celerity. First to reach the scene were William Kane, a repairman, and E. G. Spahn, the district plant superintendent of the Cleveland exchange in the city of Cleveland, together with C. T. Mahaffey, the district traffic superintendent. With the firemen they entered the building, only to be driven back by the deadly fumes as a third explosion occurred. Mahaffey finally succeeded in making his way to the second floor where the switchboard is located, and after finding the operator's headset and with a handkerchief tied over his nose and mouth as a protection against the fumes, he stayed at the board for more than an hour, being joined shortly afterward by Walter J. Turner, maintenance supervisor. Mahaffey's first call was to the Garfield chief operator, to send other operators to the Hospital building without delay. The Cleveland disaster again demonstrated the value of the first aid training which is given Bell System employees throughout the country. By some strange providence, a number of telephone men were nearby when the explosion occurred and all of them did heroic service, both in rescue and in first aid work. To record the individual efforts of these men, or even to mention them all by name, would be impossible, but here is a typical case illustrative of their efforts. Edward Kvasny, a cable splicer, and Joe Kaspar, his helper, were working in a manhole about four blocks away. Although neither heard the explosion, their attention was attracted by the passing fire engines and ambulances and by the odor of gas and fumes, which was forced through the subway. They ran to the scene where they not only assisted in carrying out the injured, but turned their attention to getting artificial respiration. Both men suffered ill effects from gas, but were entirely recovered by the next day. The women, too, played their part in the emergency. Full operating forces were kept on duty all night at both the Garfield exchange and in the Ohio Bell and the A. T. and T. toll office. Operators who were on vacation had their day off reported back to duty voluntarily, as soon as the news of the disaster reached them. During the emergency the Cleveland toll traffic reached a new high peak, exceeding by several hundred calls the day's traffic.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Chairman Legge Makes Plain to Senators His Farm Board Policy.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ALEXANDER LEGGE, chairman of the federal farm board, intends that the money put at the disposal of the board shall be handled "with a reasonable measure of safety," and he doesn't wish his appointment to be confirmed under the mistaken impression that any other policy will be followed. If the senate does not approve of this policy, Mr. Legge is perfectly willing to give up his office and return to his home in Chicago and his private business.

So much, and a lot more to the same purpose, the chairman told the senate committee on agriculture which was considering his appointment. The Democratic and radical Republican members of the committee questioned Mr. Legge sharply for many hours and made plain their displeasure because the board in the two months of its existence had not more rapidly organized stabilization corporations and placed at their disposal large funds with which to finance the prices of farm products. Senators Brookhart of Iowa and Wheeler of Montana were especially vexed by the failure of the farm board to take steps assuring the stabilization of wheat prices during the present crop season. Senator Wheeler said that if the board had announced that a stabilization corporation would be prepared to operate the farmers would have held their wheat. Senator Frazier of North Dakota said the farmers of his state had lost from 25 to 40 cents a bushel on wheat because of the failure of the board to take action.

Mr. Legge explained that stabilization corporations would be organized as rapidly as it is possible to determine that they can operate with a reasonable prospect of success. It is intended, he said, that the grain marketing corporation, which was organized at Chicago conferences, shall act as a stabilization corporation. He explained that steps toward the formation of this corporation were taken within nine days after the board organized.

Wheeler intimated that the board's loan to the Sun Maid Raisin Growers' association was made for the benefit of a Wall street house that floated the bonds of the Sun Maid Raisin corporation, but Mr. Legge effectively scoffed that idea by explaining that the loan prevented the financiers from foreclosing on the company's property. He also took the wind out of the sails of those who sought to attack him personally in the matter of his connection with the International Harvester company by a detailed statement of earnings and market values of that concern's stock and of his financial interest in it.

SHIPBUILDING company officials for whom William B. Shearer attended the Geneva arms limitation conference in 1927 all virtually disowned him in their testimony before the senate investigating committee, agreeing in stating that they attached small importance to his reports and none at all to his claims of influence there. In his final report to his employers Shearer asserted his work in Geneva resulted in the collapse of the conference. He said: "This advance campaign and the accuracy and scientific data released by me automatically made me the leader of the unofficial fight to the extent that the American officials referred the press to me, as they were bound to secrecy, with the result that the attempt to deliver the United States was defeated by a complete expose, which is now acknowledged."

SENATOR HOWELL of Nebraska stirred up a hornet's nest when in the senate he declared the liquor laws could be enforced in Washington if the president desired it, since he is "all powerful in the capital" and could out the district commissioners if they neglected their duty. Mr. Hoover responded promptly with a statement that Mr. Howell had impugned the integrity of the district officials, and called on the senator for "definite facts" supporting his charges of prohibition violations in the district.

Reiterating his charges Tuesday, Senator Howell admitted he was unable to give the time and place of violations but said it was "unfair to expect a senator so to do." Senator Brookhart then came to his rescue by telling of a convivial party, he said was given in Washington by a New York stock broker in honor of newly elected senators and others some time ago. He declared there was a flask of liquor for each guest, and later he said he would gladly face a grand jury and tell all about the party, giving the names of those present—which caused considerable alarm. There was indication that this function might be investigated by those who are probing the doings of lobbyists, for, according to Brookhart, there was much discussion of pending railroad legislation.

Mr. Howell, in continuing his attacks, charged as one instance of the failure of local enforcement that the Carlton club, one of the most exclusive night clubs in the capital, has never been raided or closed up, although four dry agents reported witnessing Volstead violations at numerous tables. Later he said he would seek to have Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commander of the marine corps base at Quantico, detailed to Washington for a "clean-up job." General Butler recently compelled the town authorities of Quantico to enforce the prohibition law by ordering the marines not to enter the town until the speakies and bootleggers were driven out.

HARRY F. SINCLAIR'S appeal to the President for commutation of sentence having been denied on recommendation of Attorney General Mitchell, the imprisoned oil magnate issued a statement calling on Mr. Mitchell to make public all of the record in his plea. His principal reason for asking for freedom, Sinclair declared, was that he had been jailed for jury shadowing—which had not before been prohibited by statute or rule of the court. "Observation of a jury became contempt of court only when I engaged in it," he declared.

"In effect," Sinclair said, "the statement of the attorney general can be summed up to mean that I should remain in jail because I was acquitted of an alleged offense for which he feels I should have been convicted."

FOR the first time President Hoover took a hand in the tariff fight when he issued a statement urging the retention of the flexible tariff, which he asserted is "a protection for the sound progress in our economic system and for the future protection of our farmers and our industries and consumers." He gave at considerable length his reasons for this assertion, taking direct issue with the Democrats and radical Republicans who seek the repeal of the flexible tariff. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi predicted the President would be defeated on this proposition.

EVERY American was interested in the wedding of Mr. John Coolidge, son of former President and Mrs. Coolidge, and Flor Trumbull, daughter of Governor Trumbull of Connecticut. The ceremony took place in the bride's home town, Plainfield, Conn., and though the families tried to make it a simple affair, it was attended by a number of distinguished persons and the details were read with avidity throughout the land. The wedding gifts nearly filled one half of the second floor of the Trumbull home and included a big silver bowl and candlesticks from the foreign envoy in Washington. Mr. Coolidge gave a substantial check and Mrs. Coolidge presented a solid mahogany bedroom suite of colonial design and a check for $250, which she received for her poem, "The Open Door," inspired by the fifth anniversary of the death of her father, Calvin Coolidge, Jr.

JACKSON REYNOLDS, president of the First National bank of New York, and Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank of Chicago, American representatives on the commission that is to set up the bank for international settlements provided for in the Young reparations plan, have sailed for Europe, where they will meet their European colleagues. The effort to put the bank under complete control of the League of Nations failed for the time being in Geneva, but something in that line may come up at later sessions of the league assembly. Since it was specified by the Young commission that the bank should be dominated by financial and not political interests, Messrs. Reynolds and Traylor did not confer with President Hoover before departing.

RAMSAY MACDONALD, prime minister of Great Britain, occupying the imperial suite on the liner Berengaria, sailed for the United States for his conference with President Hoover. He is bringing no staff of experts with him because, as he told the English, the technical points of the proposed plan for a five-power naval limitation conference have already been settled and all that is needed is a diplomatic agreement. In the conversations with Mr. Hoover, besides the naval conference, other matters entering into Anglo-American relations will be discussed, one of them possibly being certain changes in the ship liquor treaty negotiated in 1923.

LAST week it was Russia's turn to issue an ultimatum, as the Soviet government warned the Chinese Nationalist government that any further Chinese attacks on the Russian population along the Manchurian border would result in immediate and decisive action by the Red army. Gen. Chang Fals-wel, reactionary commander of the Cantonese "Iron-sides" division, who was dismissed by the Nanking government, led his troops in a rebellion that for some days looked very serious. But toward the end of the week the Nationalist authorities announced the revolt was broken and Chang's soldiers surrounded at Lichow.

Letters from missionaries tell of the massacre, late in August, of 3,000 rebellious Moslems in the remote Kansu province. The victims were gathered at Taohow under a pretext and all males between the ages of fifteen and fifty were slaughtered.

POLITICAL quarrels in Austria, which for some weeks have been threatening civil war, were further complicated by the resignation of Chancellor Streeruwitz and his Christian Socialist cabinet because certain elements in their party could no longer be restrained. John Schuber, head of the Vienna police, was made chancellor and he selected as minister of war Gen. Karl Vaugola, who has made the army a powerful conservative force. Both these men are bitter foes of the Socialists.

The coalition government of Czechoslovakia which had held office since last February also resigned. Parliament was dissolved and new elections were called for October 27.

ACCORDING to reports from Calcutta, Amir Habibullah, otherwise Bacha Saka, the water carrier and hand who made himself king of Afghanistan, was assassinated. Recent advances from Peshawar, stated unrest was increasing in Afghanistan, owing to Habibullah's inability to raise money, and a counter revolution was threatened.

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S latest feat was a flight from Miami to Cuba, Trinidad, British Guiana and Dutch Guiana for the purpose of opening a new aerial route. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh and several others and the trip was without undue incident. Coming back from Paramaribo to Port of Spain, the colonel turned his plane westward for flight to Maracaibo, Venezuela. From there his homeward course included Curacao, Maracaibo, Barranquilla, the Canal Zone and again Cuba.

PROMINENT among those whom death claimed were Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris; Gen. Harry E. Hodges, builder of the Panama canal locks, and Miller Hoggins, manager of the New York Yankees of the American league.

NEW INDUSTRIAL ERA AT HAND

By LIEUT. GOV. HERBERT H. LEHMAN, New York.

I PREDICT a new era in industry, when sympathy and understanding between employer and employee will take the place of suspicion and misunderstanding. Unions of the future will resort less and less to strikes and the arbitration machinery established in the cloak industry will be carried over to other trade unions.

The action of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has greatly encouraged me to hope for the future. Mr. Green showed the willingness of labor to regard its relationship to employers as a partnership when he attended the arbitration conferences that resulted in the agreements recently signed by the groups in the cloak-making industry.

Employers must work honestly to eliminate sweat shop conditions and to maintain the standards agreed to with the union. They must not abuse the privilege of reorganization granted to them in new contracts by discharging employees for political reasons. They must bend every effort toward strengthening the union.

The union in turn must not raise trifling, nagging questions. It must see to it that the entire industry is organized and that all standards established are maintained. They must co-operate with the enlightened manufacturers, strengthening those who want to play fair.

CRITICS OF CHURCH CONFUSED

By REV. EDWARD L. FEET, New York (Methodist).

It is fashionable to criticize the church. Complaints are made against it from all quarters. Some say the church does nothing; others resent its interference. From another direction comes the charge that the church is without faith. Others say that it is creed-ridden. The disinterested bystander is bewildered by this chaos of criticism, and the friend of the church, noting such inconsistency, properly suspects the critics of confused thinking.

With those who, believing in the way of ethical love, score the church for its average idealism, we heartily sympathize. They are the constructive critics. Others, in assuming to judge the institution, are striking at Christian faith itself. They are suspected. Their motives are not always sincere. They rail at the church for its peace efforts, but who they are really striking at is the teaching of our Lord upon the solidarity of the human family. Or, forgetting the teaching of Christ upon purity of heart, they label the church narrow because the church condemns unwholesome forms of amusements. Let them state their criticism clearly; if Christ offends them let them say so. In all fairness should they not forsake that tolerance which always is given to those who merely criticize the church? Would it not be more sportsmanlike for them to state their case upon an avowed attack upon the ethical doctrine of Christ? Such a declaration would clarify the issue.

SCIENCE MAKING WORLD LAZY

By HAL S. RAY, Railroad Public Relations Director.

We live in the laziest age of history. Americans are too complacent, too self-satisfied. And it's all caused by modern science and invention. But this same science has made this age the most wonderful of all.

We must get away from this smug, self-satisfied feeling of security. If we are to properly aid our children, then we must make many changes in our private and business lives.

We all hate alarm clocks, and we hate them more and more all the time. Yet everybody needs one. We are learning to think wrongly about work. It has come to the place that we believe the prayer, in which we ask for daily bread, will be filled without effort.

Another factor of laziness, and which at the same time is a modern blessing, is the type of work. Our grandfathers had only a few things they could decide upon for their life's work. But look at today's list. We have almost 15,000 occupations men and women can choose from. And yet we all hate alarm clocks.

AMERICA EXPLOITS PROSPERITY

By PROF. T. E. GREGORY, English Political Economist.

The United States rates her success on the basis of material acquisition—the number of motor cars and radios and shining bath tubs which she possesses. I doubt if these are standards of civilization or of real prosperity.

But they have made Europe very dissatisfied with her position today. She has been poisoned by the talk about American prosperity. If you had not told us how rich you were we would not have asked for war debt cancellation. We are dissatisfied with what we have got.

The prosperity which America enjoys today is due to her vast resources and land area, combined with a small density of population as compared to Europe. The topography of the United States, enabling it to build railways at a comparatively low cost, and the lack of trade barriers between any sections of the country are additional factors contributing to America's prosperity. The miracle is not that you are as well off as you are but that you are not better off than you are.

PSYCHOLOGY DESTROYING FAITH

By LIEUT. COL. WALLACE WINCHELL, Salvation Army.

Modern psychologists are filling libraries and seats of learning with philosophies calculated to destroy faith and lead the next generation into outer despair.

A generation or two ago the slums of New York was the theme that interested the touring parties that came to the great city. The riots and roughhouse fights of the sensual "tough guys" kept everybody talking. When gangsters would start something, throw stones, cut throats, shoot enemies dead, burn orphanages and missions, steal and loot, it made the Bowery more thrilling to the slummers. The slumming of today is not in the vile shambles of the poor and ignorant. It is in the gutterous minds and pens of the so-called "intelligentsia." These highbrows in their roughhouse scramble—hurting big words and high-sounding phraseology at each other—are undertaking to rob men of their precious possessions of faith and truth and eternal hope. Blind leaders of the blind, they are

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 219 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all it's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition falls better than yards how it works." Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Children's Evening Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Fu-fu was driving along with his mistress in a fine motor car. He wore a lovely blue bow around his neck, and his coat was very fine and silky.

Every little white Fu-fu's mistress would place a white gloved hand very gently on his back.

He didn't care much for petting, but still he put up with it.

He liked all the comforts, good food and plenty of it. But he didn't care to wag his tail often. It was beneath his dignity.

"Any dog can do that," he said.

"It's a common habit among dogs," she continued. "I am a beautiful dog. My family dates back for years and years. I have a background. That means that I do not have to do a single thing with my life. My father and grandfathers, mother and grandmothers did it all for me. I just must live up to the fine family name I have by never doing anything like work, going into rough places, trying things I don't know all about."

Fu-fu and his mistress took quite a long drive that day.

On their way home his mistress stopped to make a call. Fu-fu stayed in the car.

Some common dogs passed by. They were barking and playing and seemed to be having a very good time.

Fu-fu looked at them as if he really sometimes longed to be a real dog and to play as other dogs did.

But of course there was his family to be thought of and his background. He could not disgrace it. He must not try anything different.

He must stay at home, doing nothing, thinking nothing except how fine he was and from what a noble breed he came.

But the other dogs did fill him with envy. He had a strange longing to be out playing, too.

After all there was something to be said for the lives they led.

The other dogs seemed now to be laughing at him. They seemed to be

He Had a Strange Longing.

judging him as he was and they did not seem to realize his background. "Don't be such a snob," they now barked at him.

"I have a fine family background," he said.

"What is that?" they asked. "Have you saved any lives? Have you taken care of children and watched over them?"

"Have you been their devoted playmate and given them great happiness? If not, don't boast."

And Fu-fu was just a little ashamed of himself.

Still he had been a snob so long that he felt he would have to continue being a snob.

It was only in rare moments such as these that he felt a little ashamed. (© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

TIMELY HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Eggs are a protective food, rich in the necessary vitamins.

Eggs are easily digested; hence, a most wholesome human food.

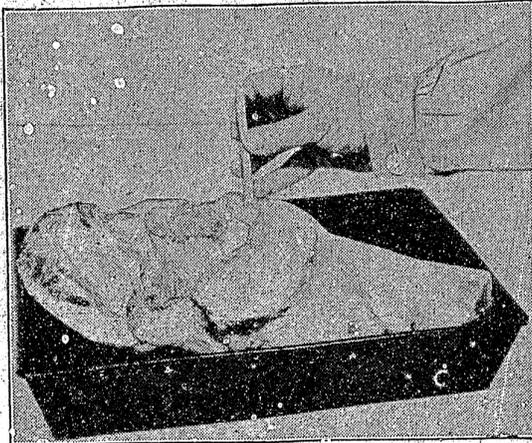

The baby's first shoes should have flat, flexible soles, pliable tops and broad toes.

Serve small enough portions of food to the child so that he can finish the whole amount.

Vitamin E is a necessary ingredient in feed for the assimilation of iron. It is found in lettuce, whole wheat, rolled oats, dried alfalfa, milk fat, in yellow corn, etc.

New linare should be rendered rust-proof by a thorough rubbing of oil or lard and baking in a slow oven to season. This process will make your linare absolutely rust-proof and it will last much longer.

Use Thermometer When Roasting

Eliminating Guesswork in Roasting a Leg of Lamb.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A roast meat thermometer removes the guesswork from roasting any thick piece of meat to the desired stage of doneness. It can be used with rib or sirloin roasts of beef, veal roast, with leg of lamb, or ham. These thermometers, which can be bought for a relatively small price, are marked to indicate when the meat will be rare, medium, or well done. A small cut is first made in the fleshiest portion of the raw meat with a narrow knife or a skewer. The thermometer is then thrust into this cut far enough for the bulb to reach the center of the meat. It will show when the meat is cooked to the degree wanted. Whenever a similar cut of meat is cooked in the same way, the results will be the same, hence the housewife can be sure of uniformity whether she does the cooking herself or has some one else do it for her.

The time required to roast meat of any kind depends largely on the temperature of the oven. Very high temperatures shorten the time of cooking but increase shrinkage and may make the meat overbrown and too dry. In the case of roast leg of lamb, little juice is lost and the meat is uniformly cooked at the temperature given in the recipe below from the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture. It will have a light golden brown crust. Whatever way lamb is cooked, if it is to be served hot it should be piping hot on hot plates, because the fat hardens as soon as it begins to cool.

For an average family select a leg of lamb weighing from four to five pounds, preferably cut so as to include some of the loin. Wipe the meat with a damp cloth, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and rub well with oil. Lay the roast skin side down and cut-flesh side up, on a rack in an open pan without water. Insert a roast meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center of the thick round of the leg. If the fat covering is very thin, lay several strips of bacon on top. Sear for 30 minutes in a hot oven (about 450 degrees Fahrenheit).

malade may be made from the pulp, adding three-fourths of its measure in sugar, then cook until thick.

Pears for Salad.—Use large under ripe pears. Halve and remove peeling and core. Sweeten very lightly, add a bit of lemon or ginger root, cover with boiling water and cook until tender but not soft. Cap in hot sterilized cans. Pear salad in the winter is such a favorite that many cans will be needed.

Oranges are always in the market. Make and serve an orange shortcake for your family; they will call for it again. Serve the oranges, after cutting into small pieces, covered with sugar for an hour. Pour over well buttered, hot baking powder biscuit cut into halves. A sweet cake for the shortcake is not as tasty as the baking powder biscuit mixture. (© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Good Things for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"Heroism is the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh—that is to say over fear—fear of poverty, of suffering, of calamity, of illness, of loneliness and of death. Heroism is the dazzling and glorious concentration of courage."

While tomatoes are plentiful is the time to can some good soup for use in the winter. Here is one which will be enjoyed and will be all ready to serve, with just the heating.

Tomato Soup.—Cook twenty-five pounds of ripe tomatoes with fourteen sprigs of parsley, fourteen stalks of celery, eight large onions, two bay leaves, ten whole cloves. Cut up the tomatoes, without peeling, remove the green core, chop the celery and onions and cook for an hour or more of boiling with the spices and other ingredients.

Take fourteen tablespoons each of melted butter and of flour, mix and stir as if making a white sauce, adding a bit of the tomato to thin; when smooth, add to the tomato and season with thirteen tablespoons of sugar, eight tablespoons of salt and four teaspoonsful of paprika. Boil up a minute or two and can and seal. When serving, if milk is to be added, add a bit of soda.

When having a feeling of indigestion or a slight heart burn eat half an orange and see how quickly the distress passes.

Dream Pie.—This is one that will take the overbearing berries, or canned fruit may be used if drained. Whip the whites of four eggs very stiff, add four heaping tablespoons of powdered sugar and beat well, add four more and beat as stiff as possible. Then fold in one pint of berries. Heap in a baked pastry shell that has been just removed from the oven. Leave the mixture in rough mounds and bake until brown.

Andy Custard Pie.—To one cupful of sugar add one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, one heaping tablespoonful of butter. Cream these well then add two well beaten eggs and two cupfuls of milk. Pour into a pastry-lined pan and bake in a moderate oven. When baked the spices rise to the top making a creamy custard underneath, so different from the usual custard pie. Bake at first in a hot oven until the crust is set, then lower the heat. Test with a knife; if it comes out clean the custard is done.

Good Things "to Put Up."

Prepare your own fruit salads to use during the season when many of the good things are out of the market.

Fruit Salad.—Simmer small pieces of any available fruit—pineapple, pears, apricots or peaches—in a light syrup, using care not to over cook, adding a few fresh or maraschino cherries. Cover with the syrup and sterilize, using the cold pack method. The syrup may be used for gelatin desserts, punches, fruit salad dressings or pudding sauces.

Fruit Jelly.—Take half a peck of apples, two quarts of quinces and one quart of cranberries. Wash the fruit, put the quinces, cored but not pared through the meat chopper and cut up the apples including the skins and cores. Combine all the fruit—just cover with water and cook until soft, mashing and stirring often. Drain through a jelly bag and to each pint add a scant pint of sugar, heated hot. Boil the juice fifteen minutes before adding the sugar. Cook until it jellies then pour into sterilized glasses.

Ruby Jelly.—To two quarts of cranberries add five large quinces, put through the food chopper with half their cores. Add three quarts of water and cook until soft, stirring frequently. Drain through a jelly bag, measure the juice and add an equal amount of heated sugar, after the juice has boiled about fifteen minutes. After the sugar is added boil five minutes and remove when it jellies. Mar-

Boston Cream Pie Is Cake

Misleading in its name, for it's not a pie at all, but a cake, Boston cream pie is one of the family's favorite desserts. Any standard cake recipe may be used for the foundation. The filling below is spread between the two layers and powdered sugar is sprinkled over the top of the cake. The recipe is supplied by the bureau of home economics.

1 c. sugar 2 eggs
2 tbs. flour 2 tbs. butter
3/4 tsp. salt 3 tbs. lemon juice
1 pint milk Grated rind of 1 lemon

Mix the sugar and flour thoroughly. Beat the milk in a double boiler and add the salt. Pour the heated milk into the flour and sugar mixture and cook over the flame until thickened. Place in a double boiler, and cook for 15 minutes. Add the well-beaten eggs and the butter and cook for two or three minutes longer. When the filling is cold add the lemon juice and rind and spread the filling between layers of cake. Sprinkle powdered sugar over the top of the cake and serve.

Rich Fur Enhances All Black Suit

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

An outstanding event in the autumn style program is the return of the richly furred all black suit made either of broadcloth, duvetyne or velvet. In the reappearance on the stage of fashion of these costumes of dignified men, the knell of flapper styles is sounded. Henceforth and until further notice, according to the word of those who control the destiny of the modes, women are going to dress in real lady fashion. Wherefore in coming to some conclusion in regard to a new fall suit, keep in mind the smartness of elegant black.

This picture, however, not so black as one might suppose, for with a jacket of coat and skirt of black, the call for a strikingly colorful blouse is inevitable, which accounts for the gorgeous beaded blouse which animates the black duvetyne long-coat suit in the picture. This blouse should prove an inspiration to a seeker of the "new." It is entirely worked in exceedingly fine black, red and white heads, achieving irregular stripes.

Perhaps the blouse which occurs most frequently with the modish black suit is the one made of eggshell satin. Styling interest focuses to a great extent to the hemline which shows oddly draped and shirred effects, also soft bow ties. The swathed hipline is also observed in many blouse modes.

With the black velvet jacket and skirt, smart afternoon vogue features a sleeveless blouse of supple metal cloth, either plain or brocaded. This fashion is one of the most highlighted themes of the present season. Often color gleams through the gold or silver weaves, as for instance in a blue and silver brocade or a green and gold plaided design.

While many of the metal blouses are sleeveless the majority of the satin crepe and printed velvet types have long, rather tight-fitting sleeves. Clever side fastenings, gilets and jabots define most of the new models.

Two novelties in the autumn blouse collections are those of transparent corduroy, also a knitted Shetland wool-lace type, the latter as filmy and exquisitely delicate as one can conceive. (© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Get His Birds Mixed

One evening at the dinner table the family was discussing the visit of the stork to a neighboring family. Mother was contemplating a visit to the home to see the new arrival, a baby boy, and to take it a gift. Bobby, age four, who had been listening with interest, suddenly inquired: "Well, mother, why don't you ask the hawk to bring me a baby brother, too?"

Two-Piece Dresses for Children

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

She's ready for the first days of kindergarten or school in this practical little two-piece dress of green and tan cotton poplin. Whether she is four or fourteen, she can wear a school

Good Type of Two-Piece School Dress.

Dress of this type, although her twin brother, who has a similar outfit, with straight trousers instead of the plaited skirt, will probably wear "store" made waists after he is six. The waist or top part of the dress is plain and tailored, easy to make, to launder, and put on. It is cut with the kimono sleeve without any seam on the shoulder. Therefore, before the under-arm seams are sewn up the top can be laid flat on a table and the trimming piece fitted to it, basted, and stitched in place.

The skirt of green poplin, matching the trimming, is on a thin white underwaist so that it hangs from the shoulders. Mother put an inch-wide tuck in this waist, so that the skirt can be let down as the little girl grows. The tuck is stitched twice, half an inch apart, with a long loose stitch. When the first row of stitching is taken out the skirt drops an inch, and it will be possible to lengthen it as much more at another time. An equal growth allowance should be made in the hem of the blouse, either by means of a broad hem, or a generous piece turned inside the hem.

Large round buttons, fastened by proched or cord loops form the front closing. They can be easily found and managed by the little girl herself. Provision for self-help is always an important feature of garments designed for children, as this one was, by the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture. The bureau has no patterns to distribute, but any mother could easily adapt a kimono type pattern to fit her child. Any preferred combination of cotton materials might be used, for example, plain broadcloth for the skirt and trimmings, and printed zephyr for the blouse. Bloomers or panties matching the darker material should be made.

With Pets and Pests

The pleasures of living in Liberia are graphically described by a writer in the Churchman. "At first," she says, "my evenings were a long-drawn-out last-night-ever! Centipedes on the floor; lizards on the walls; flying cockroaches fully two inches long darting about, and I just sat with my eyes glued, first on one, then on the other pest, and waited to get hit. Now I can go on undressing at night and only look half a dozen times at the giant soldier (4-inch spout) which lives on my medicine shelf. But I sink under my mosquito net and put out my candle with a quiet gasp of relief. I'm still whole! After a few moments of darkness papa and mamma rat start training the little rats around the walls, and then Charlie, our pet house snake, drives them off and quiet reigns."

Oil Causes Sea Rainbows

Rainbows that seem to lie horizontally upon the surface of water are occasionally seen, sometimes in clusters, one behind the other. Dr. W. J. Humphreys, of the weather bureau, explains these phenomena are due to a layer of small drops that are resting on the surface of the main body of water but prevented from merging into it by a thin film of oil.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.
