A Wonderful Book.
Over 200 years have passed by since the publication of the Pilgrim's Progress. In that time the world has made wonderful advances—has forgotten or outgrown hundreds of thousands of books. Yet this same Pilgrim's Progress, written in Bedford jail by a common thinker 200 years ago is to-day read in more languages and by more people of all classes than any other book in the civilized world, the Bible alone excepted.
A grand memorial Edition has just been published—to be sold at a price within the reach of all—and yet to be the finest edition in print. The book is richly illustrated with over 100 of the grandest and most wonderful engravings which have ever appeared in a work of this kind. Superb character delineations, magnificent and realistic illuminated plates printed in oil colors, valuable Bible references, together with a life of the famous author and the beautiful poem "The Little Pilgrim" make this grand memorial edition one which will be eagerly sought for by all. It offers the book Agent an unequalled opportunity for a rich harvest. The History Company, of San Francisco, are the publishers, and their advertisement will be found in another column.

AT LAST!

The long expected illustrated History of Utah by the eminent historian, Hubert H. Bancroft, has at last appeared. It is absolutely a revelation. After visiting the field in person, taking testimony impartially from all sides, critically reviewing the enormous number of 1000 different authorities, and searching many of the secret archives of the Mormon Church. Mr. Bancroft now gives to the world this wonderful and remarkable work, the only true history of Mormonism.

The work reads like a romance—the wonderful adventures of trappers and travelers, the bloody Indian wars, the thrilling accounts of massacres and miraculous escapes, the famous Danite Association or destroying Angels, the story of Brigham Young—all this fresh from the pen of the brilliant and gifted author, forms a narrative of exciting interest, as fascinating as a novel, yet true to the letter. Above all in surpassing interest is the unfolding of the great Mormon Question—and the mysteries of Polygamy which will be read with equal interest by all classes of people throughout the English speaking world. The work is published in one large handsome volume of over 800 pages, bound in red and gold and grandly illustrated with steel plate portraits of the great Mormon leaders, exquisite half tone engravings and dazzling colored plates. It is issued by the great Publishing House of the Pacific Coast, the History Co. of San Francisco, and can only be procured through their authorized agents. We call attention to the advertisement in another column, under the heading of $25.00 Reward.

THE KEPT PROMISE.

In the morn'g city of Khorasan,
Adj'd by the people from his divan,
Said Omar, the pitiless, haughty khan.
"Who bring me to me either the vizier chief?"

"Who dare d... my bidding. He Who let from his camp my foe go free,
Because he 'd shared his salt, shall see "That the man who can break his promise, led
By a fabled duty, nor risk instead Life to a chief of the hostile Kurds,
Who seemed but a shepherd of flocks and herds,
Had come to his tent, his eyeballs dim
Through hunger, and gaunt in every limb,
"What could I but break my bread with him?"

The face of the khan grew wrath; his eye Pushed fire; he deluged but curt reply:
"The soldier who breaks his word must die!"

No paler the vizier's cheek o'er-spread;
On his bosom he only dropped his head;
"It is fate, it is fate!" he grimly said.

"I am ready, O master, to meet the worst
But not till your kindness grants me first
A vessel of water to quench my thirst.

"Shall the soldier stay till I drink?" Quick o'er
The forehead of Omar, so harsh before,
Dropt something like pity: "Till then, no more."

The water was brought. The vizier's brow Grew brighter. "We all of us heard you vow
"It then." Your promise is pledged me now!"

Then he dashed on the ground the goblet. "So,
You have snared me, and snared the khan."
"But no—
I never will break a promise—Go!"

TAMING OF THE SHREW.

"That's jest like you, Eliphalet Emmons!" said Mrs. Emmons sharply. "Comin' in with them muddy feet over my new scrubbed floor! Didn't ye never learn what door mats was for?"

Mr. Emmons, a meek looking, bald headed little man, recoiled from the magnetic force of his wife's words as if they had been so many whip lashes.

"I didn't know the roads was muddy," apologized he.

"As if they could help bein' muddy arter that there thunder shower!" retorted Mrs. Emmons. "A man is the untiest creature I've been cleanin' the settin' room closet today, Eliphalet, and I've found two pair o' mildewed boots, an odd slipper, a broken umbrella and a nasty smellin' old pipe. What ye think o' that?"

"I'm very sorry, Sarah," said Mr. Emmons, mechanically ducking his head at each count of the indictment, "but I wasn't aware they'd all conglomerated like that. I s'pose I didn't know where else to put 'em."

"Humph!" said Mrs. Emmons scornfully.

"Is supper ready, Sarah?"

"Supper, indeed!" snorted Mrs. Emmons. "I s'pose you think I hain't nothin' to do but cook. I guess if you'd did the day's house cleanin' I've waded through you wouldn't feel much like roastin' over the stove. You'll find some cold pork and rye bread and butter in the milk room, and I guess you can make out to draw a glass o' hard cider for yourself."

Happless Eliphalet slunk into the milk room, followed by the shrill cry:

"Now, mind you don't grease everything up!"

And as he dipped his cubes of salt pork into the mustard pot, and spread the scant allowance of butter over the slabs of heavy rye bread, he thought dolefully of Peter Rigney's one storied cabin, that he had just passed on the Twickenham road, with its cheery interior view of a well spread table, a smoking teapot, blue edged china, and a bunch of lilacs in the center. Mrs. Rigney was laughing merrily and the little flock of children were running in and out, as if life were made for enjoyment, not discipline.

"I sort o' think," pondered he, "that it's most a pity that we never had no children, for all Sarah thinks it a dispensation o' Providence! Praps she wouldn't 'a been so awful particular if she'd had a lot o' young 'uns around under foot."

When he came out again Mrs. Emmons was diligently scouring at the fire irons, and seemed in no mood for conversation.

"Where's the weekly paper?" he ventured to ask.

"I hain't seen it," said Mrs. Emmons. "I wonder where the second volume of 'African Travels' has got to?" he next hesitated.

"I don't know," said Mrs. Emmons, "and I don't care. It strikes me you'd better be a travelin' out to the barn to see arter the cattle."

"I've done that," said Eliphalet with a sigh. "I—why, hello! Who's this 'ere? As true as I live and breathe this 'ere? Squire Perkins, with a little boy. One o' your grandchildern, squire? How d'ye do? how d'ye do?"

He stood smiling broadly in the doorway, while Mrs. Emmons flew to hide her housecleaning disabillies, with a brass and iron in one hand and the polishing powder in the other, and the squire heavily alighted from his buggy.

"No, Mr. Emmons, no," said he, "it ain't no kith or kin o' mine. Pretty little fellow, ain't it? Just 6 year old, and as tough as an oak knot. Well, it's Seb's Brown's orphan."

"Je-rusalem!" ejaculated Eliphalet. "You don't mean to tell me Cap'n Seb's Brown is dead?"

"The Black Eyed Susan and all aboard of her was wrecked off Cape Hatteras last month," said the squire impressively. "And here's this—child with no one to care for him; and the parson, says he, if this ain't a clear sign o' Providence I dunno what is!"

he says, says he. "Go you, says he, and see if Brother and Sister Emmons won't take him and bring him up." So here I be.

Eliphalet Emmons looked kindly at the cherry cheeked little lad, with the hazel eyes and curling brown hair.

"Would ye like to come and live with ma, sonny?" said he.

"Yes, I would," promptly answered the child, putting 'is plump hand in the farmer's horny palm.

"What's your name?" said Mr. Emmons.

"Benjamin Brown," answered the boy.

"Speaks up like a man, don't he?" chuckled Mr. Emmons. "Well, o' course, squire, I couldn't do nothin' without consultin' Sarah about it. But I guess you may leave him here over night, and we'll take the matter into consideration."

"So the squire drew away. Little Benjamin snuggled close up to his new friend.

"I think you are very nice," said he. "Have you dot any picture books?"

"At that moment the door burst open, and in walked Mrs. Emmons, grim as Stonehenge.

"Eliphalet," said she, "hev ye took leave of your senses?"

"Eh?" stammered the farmer.

"What do we want of a great, hungry, crockery breaking, orchard robbing boy? Hain't I got enough to do already? And hain't you got plenty o' use for your money without adoptin' every young pauper in town? Sound that child away before he is an hour older."

"Where?" asked Eliphalet.

"That's your business, not mine. I didn't take him in."

"I don't know of no place unless it's back to Squire Perkins', and that's two miles off."

"I guess it won't hurt him to walk two miles," said Mrs. Emmons crisply. "But he don't know the way."

"Let him ask it then. He's got a tongue in his head, hain't he?"

"Wait till arter supper, Sarah, and I'll go with him," interceded Mr. Emmons.

"Supper! We've had all the supper we're goin' to hev in this house!" snapped Mrs. Emmons.

"Well, well," said the husband, "let him set down and rest a spell, and I'll go out and pick some o' them yaller antwerp raspberries and we'll give him a bowl o' bread and milk."

"The pans is all set for cream."

"Twon't do no hurt to disturb just one."

Mrs. Emmons stood watching as her husband took a little splint basket and went off toward the stone walled garden beyond the well. Then she turned to the little boy who sat in the big chair, swinging his plump legs and solemnly regarding her.

"Are you goin' to be my mamma?" said he inquisitively.

"No," she answered—and yet there was a something that stirred strangely in her heart at the soft, maternal word—"no, I ain't."

"Don't you like little boys?" he asked.

"I don't think nothin' about it one way or the other," retorted she. "Where's your cap? Just you take it, and go back along the road as straight as you can go, and don't stop till you get to Squire Perkins', and tell him we don't want no boys here."

Little Benjamin hesitated.

"I'd like to stay," said he, "and play with that nice yellow eyed cat. I'm tired—and I'm pretty hungry, too. I wish I had a mother somewheres!"

"Here's a slice o' bread and butter for you," said Mrs. Emmons, "with a taste o' currant jelly atop of it. Now go!"

"Because," she said to herself as the little fellow trudged down the path toward the road, biting into his slice of bread and butter as he went, "Eliphalet's that fond o' children he won't never give up the notion of keepin' the child till he's gone for good and all."

When Mr. Emmons came in, the little basket heaped high with golden "Antwerp," his wife sat knitting by the window and there was no one else in the room.

"Where's the boy?" he asked, looking around.

"Gone."

"Gone where?"

"Back to Squire Perkins' o' course. Where else should he go? I can't hev him here."

Emmons set down the basket and heaved a deep sigh. He knew from years of experience that all remonstrance would be in vain.

"It's jest as you say, Sarah," said he. Mrs. Emmons was a little disappointed. She had not expected Eliphalet to give up the matter so peaceably.

"He was a bright lookin' child," said she.

"Yes, he was," acquiesced Emmons. "But children 're a sight o' trouble."

"I s'pose they be."

"Cap'n Seb's Brown was a clever squire o' feller," said Mrs. Emmons. "I knowed him when he was a boy. He married a pretty black eyed girl up Edinburgh way. How bad they would 'a felt if they'd knowed their little boy was on the town!"

"I guess likely they would," said Eliphalet, slowly rising. "I think, Sarah, I'll go down to the store a spell. It's sort o' lonesome here."

A sort of pang pierced Mrs. Emmons' heart as she watched him stride slowly down the hill.

"It is lonesome," she thought, "and I'm too tired to be much company for him. I wonder if he'll be more contented if we had a lively little feller around like Bennie Brown. I wonder how far the child's got? Two miles is a pretty considerable spell for a little creature like that. Praps he's got most as far as the quarry road. My goodness alive!" she cried, jumping suddenly from her chair as a gleasty recollection presented itself to her mind; "I never once thought he might stray into that old quarry road, where a false step might pitch him down fifty feet among the sharp rocks. And such a pretty little chap as he is, too! I wonder I never thought o' that!"

She caught her gingham sunbonnet from its pegs and ran out into the pale softness of the dewy twilight.

At the end of the lane she saw her husband leaning over the bars and staring at the pale crescent of the new moon.

"Eliphalet," said she, "I'm mortal 'fraid the little boy'll stray into that quarry road."

"Je-rusalem!" uttered Mr. Emmons. "Let's go arter him! Or stay—you're a better walker than I be. You go down the road as fast as ever you can, and I'll wait here."

"Any'spose I find him, what'll I do?" "Why, bring him back here!"

"Bring him back here!" reiterated Mrs. Emmons. "He's a pretty, frank spoken boy. I guess we can manage some way."

She stood in the path, watching and waiting.

Parson Barrett had always preached low meekness; the good Lord was, Surely he would not allow an innocent child like that to wander to his own destruction!

"But," thought Mrs. Emmons, wringing her hands, "if he has strayed into that old road—and the fences are down in more places than one—I shall always feel as if I had sent him to his death!"

She could not stand there a prey to those remorseful thoughts. She hurried back to the house, lighted the cheerful lamps, set out bread and milk and a loaf of election cake on the table and kindled a fire to make the little boy.

"Eliphalet's right," she said. "The old house would be a differ 'nt house if there was a child running around it. I do—hope—"

"Here we be, mother!" called a loud, hearty voice, and once more Mrs. Emmons' indurated heart leaped up in answer to the words "Me and little Benny! He was settin' a-cryin' under the elderberry bushes by the Methodist buryin' ground. He'd less his way, poor little feller! And wasn't he glad to see me, though? Here we be!"

"Where's the cat?" joyfully cried Benny, running into the room as if certain of a welcome.

"Benny," said Mrs. Emmons coloring, "do—do you think you could learn to call me mother? If you can I'll try and do the best I can by you!"

"Mother!" spoke up the child, lifting his rosy lips to kiss her. "And is he my father, too?"

The middle aged couple looked at each other; their hard faces softened.

"Eliphalet," said Mrs. Emmons, "we'll keep the child."

"It shall be as you say," acquiesced Eliphalet.

They kept him, and little Benny revolutionized the whole house.

"Sister Emmons comes far more regularly to church of late," said the parson. "She's got interested in the progress that child makes in Sunday school. And it seems as if her soul had, somehow, woke up."

"Our house is a different house," said Eliphalet. "Sarah's left off frettin' and took to laughin', and it's all Benny's doin'." There ain't no sunshine in his life like a happy, healthy child. And she's even talkin' about adoptin' a little girl from the asylum to keep him company. Says it does her good to hear children hollerin' "Annual mamma" about the house!"

"Bless the Lord for all his mercies!" solemnly spoke Parson Barrett.

And in her heart Sarah Emmons echoed his words.—Helen Forrest Graves in Philadelphia Saturday Night.

The democrats carried 38 of the 41 states in the union, made large gains in those eight states but lost California. There being no more states to carry the Democrats are satisfied with the earth.—Albuquerque Democrat.

The election news from all over the country indicate that the the republicans were badly "snowed under" in most of the states where elections were held. The next New Mexico legislature will have a Democratic majority.

Now the election is all over, bets all paid and defeated candidates beginning to look pleasant again. Things are assuming their usual aspect once more. Everybody is glad it is all over and done with for at least two years to come.

The new fifth district consists of the counties of Socorro, Lincoln, Chaves and Eddy, with headquarters for the present at Socorro; this is about the best disposition that could have been made of the matter. Judge Freeman is to travel over the district and after he becomes better acquainted with the condition of things there a change may take place, but that is for the future.—New Mexican.

The Mangum Star is three years old, and though it can write heavy editorials or twinkle at will, it can't yet tell where it lives. But the Star is not there for health alone. This is what it says: "To keep our place at the head when the 'glorious future' strikes us, and the head is where the newspaper is expected to be, requires means, and unless the means are gathered when we are young we need not expect some one to drop it in our lap when the opportune moment comes. The gist of this matter is that if this people want a newspaper in their midst they must support and encourage it or see it go elsewhere."

Almost a panic was produced on Friday in all the business centers of the country by the report that Postmaster General Wanamaker had failed. The statement was made that he had been caught long on Reading railroad shares, and when called upon to put up $3,500,000 margins he could not respond, and the failure of course ensued. After great damage had been done by the report, in the lowering of almost every kind of stock and the increase in the rate of money from 8 per cent to 20 per cent, the rumor was traced to a telegraph message which Mr. Wanamaker sent to a friend, saying: "I have suspended the clerk." In the hands of the operator "the clerk" was omitted and the message sent out, "I have suspended."

Death Valley.

California can certainly claim the greatest natural wonders of the world. Its Yosemite valley, its big trees, its petrified forests and its innumerable other attractions substantiate this assertion. One of the latter class, little known and rarely spoken of, is the Death valley of Inyo county, in many respects the most remarkable of them all. Imagine a trackless waste of sand and rock, shimmering under the rays of a more than tropical sun, hemmed in on all sides by gigantic rocks and mountains whose very impression is that of eternal desolation, and you have a fair idea of Death valley. Geographically it is the sink of the Arimaosa river, which is quite a marvel in itself. It rises in the Western Sierras about two miles from the California line, and flows southward for ninety miles, when it disappears from sight at the bed of an ancient lake at the foot of the Rising Spring mountains. A little further south it reappears and continues another sixty miles when it again returns to its subterranean channel. Still again it reappears and flows northwest nearly 100 miles when it finally disappears in the sink of the Death valley, quite a remarkable river. Death valley is about eighty miles broad by thirty-five long and comprises some 300 square miles of the most God-forsaken country in the world. It looks as though suffering from some terrible cause, such as we read in the scriptures. It lies far below sea level, in some places 100 feet. No friendly cloud appears to intercept the scorching heat; the thermometer registers 125 degrees week after week. No moisture ever falls to cool the burning sand. Bright steel may be left out night after night and never be tarnished. Nothing will decay. A dead animal will simply dry up, and remain so, seemingly, forever. No sound is ever heard; the silence of an eternal desolation reigns supreme. It is a curious geological formation, only paralleled in one instance—that of the Dead sea. The rocks, lava, basalt and granite showing the volcanic formation, which perhaps accounts for the poisonous quality of the air. It is said that noxious grasses are emitted from the fissures in the rocks. Such is a brief description of the most remarkable valley in America. Population may press onward but it will never enter here. Reclamation of vast tracts of land will be accomplished but Death valley will never see a plow. It is forever destined to remain in a state of primitive barrenness. By the work of some mysterious cause the place is hostile to life. It is avoided alike by man and beast. Geologists tell us it is a striking illustration of the condition of the whole world at an early epoch. Every tourist who has an opportunity should visit this miniature Sahara.

Information for Settlers.

Congress by the act of Aug. 30, 1890, has repealed the arid land act of Oct. 2, 1888, and all land entries made by settlers since the date of the act of Oct. 2, 1888, are made valid, except as to reservoir sites selected.

The act of Aug. 30, 1890, limits the amount of land subject to entry by any person under all the various land laws to 320 acres.

Any legal sub-divisional part of the whole of said 320 acres can be entered under the desert Land Law, or in such amounts as is prescribed by the Homestead, Pre-emption and Timber Culture Laws can be entered as shall not exceed in the aggregate 320 acres.

The Timber Culture Law has not been repealed; but it is likely to be repealed during the next session of congress, which convenes in December.

Settlers living on the United States land prior to Aug. 30, 1890, and who have made reasonable improvements thereon will be entitled to enter said land and in addition thereto 320 acres more when desired, under the act of Aug. 30, 1890.

The usual exception obtains as to the Pre-emption Law, i. e., as the entryman must not be the owner of 320 acres of land.

Public lands can now be safely entered under any of the foregoing laws; and settlers can be reasonably sure of receiving patent when they comply with those laws in good faith.

All applications for the entry of land, if complete, will be acted upon the same day they are received, office business permitting; and all correspondence relating thereto will receive prompt and courteous attention.

Settlers and all other persons are requested to remit all moneys to the Receiver after Dec. 1st, 1890; and only currency, postal orders, express orders; postal notes and certified checks will be received.

Letters from this office to settlers calling for additional papers should receive prompt attention in order that their lands may proceed to patent rapidly.

No unnecessary requirements will be asked for by this office.

Very Respectfully, SAMUEL P. McCREA, Register.

QUINCY VANCE, Receiver.

U. S. Land Office, Las Cruces, N. M., Oct. 25, 1890.

More public land is being taken up in the vicinity of Albuquerque at the present time than was ever taken up before in the history of the country. Lands that have been passed over for years as comparatively worthless are now being eagerly picked up, and land hunting parties are to be seen on the prairies every day for a radius of ten miles around the town. The scheme to sink for artesian water caused the spurt.

Crazy Indians.

St. Paul, Nov. 6.—Gen. Miles, commander of the department of the Missouri, is here on his return of a western tour.

Regarding the causes and nature of the religious craze existing among the Indian tribes, he says: "I have been in the Utah, Montana and Cheyenne reservations investigating this craze."

You no doubt have heard that the Indian tribes believe that the Messiah has come, who is to restore them to their former glory, bring back the buffalo and drive the whites from the land.

I have learned that this belief exists among the tribes of the Sioux, Cheyennes, Blackfeet, Shoshones and other tribes. In all the craze has extended to sixteen tribes, the Snake Indians being the only ones to repudiate it.

There is no doubt that many Indians hold this belief in the Indian Messiah or Micre, and a few have certainly seen some person whom they took to be that Messiah. Several small parties of Indians have gone westward from their tribes to some point.

As near as I can locate it is in Nevada. There they have been shown somebody disguised as the Messiah and spoke with him. I am inclined to believe there is more than one person impersonating this Messiah, for when the Sioux have spoken to him he replies in their language and to the Blackfeet he replies in their tongue and so on with the representatives of each nation or tribe, speaking their own language to each.

"Who do you think is responsible for this impersonation upon the Indians?" "I can not state positively, but it is my belief that the Mormons are the prime movers in it. This is not a hard statement to believe for there are 200,000 Mormons and they claim to believe in prophecies and spiritual manifestations and they even now claim to hold intercourse with the spirit of Joe Smith.

Besides they have had missionaries at work among the Indians for many years and have made many converts." "Do you think this new belief among the Indians will lead to an outbreak and bloodshed?"

"I do not think so, but when an ignorant tribe become religious fanatics it is hard to tell just what they will do. It is noteworthy, however, that this so-called Messiah tells the Indians that when he comes to reign over them, fire arms will no longer be used or necessary. He tells them also with his coming dead Indians will all be raised to life, buffalo return and he will draw a line behind on which he will gather all the Indians and then he will roll the earth back upon the whites.

This has naturally excited the Indians and a large number have accepted the new belief. Among those who have done so none are more ardent than Sitting Bull, who is intensely Indian in all his ideas."

"Do you think the person who is impersonating the Messiah is a white man or an Indian?" "Those who have seen him say he was muffled up so they couldn't see his face, but I believe he is a full blooded white. The argument that the Indians use in this discussion is that the whites have had their Messiah and the Indians now have theirs. The situation is not alarming in any way and I do not know whether any action will be taken by the government in the matter until after I make my report."—Albuquerque Democrat.

The Growth of Gold. Richard J. Hilton, chief of artisan-well division, Department of Agriculture, says: "The theory of the Australian geologists that the famous Mount Morgan mine is of geyser origin is not altogether novel. I have seen in the Bodie mining district of California, a spring which produces gold. The spring is not exactly a geyser but the water is not exactly hot, and as it flows away and evaporates it leaves a deposit. That deposit contains gold. I can't explain the process. Whether the water disintegrates gold bearing rock far below the surface and brings the gold to the top, or whether there is going on in the laboratory of nature a chemical process which produces gold in solution, I don't pretend to say. There is the water and there is the deposit in which gold can be found. Gold, you know, is the what is it of science. There seems to be more or less of it everywhere. The waters of the ocean contain gold. In a mine near Tombstone which has made half a dozen fortunes, there is every indication that thermal waters had a great deal to do with the creation of the deposit. Up in Nevada is a similar formation. It is known as a blowout.

The Child's Life of Christ.
 Introduced by Rev. J. L. ...
 The writer of successful juvenile books in command almost his own price—in fact, such is the demand for this class of literature that many of the leading writers of the present day are devoting their talents exclusively in this direction.
 Two, where people, authors and publishers are alike, are beginning to realize the fact that it is of utmost importance that good wholesome books should be placed in the hands of the young, and to-day hundreds of thousands of copies of books of this kind are sold yearly. Recognizing this fact the great London publishing house of Cassell & Co., one of the largest concerns of the kind in the world, whose establishments cover over an acre of ground, have been engaged in the preparation of a "Life of Christ," which should be especially adapted for the young.
 They have succeeded in producing a work of rare beauty and practical value in the household. It may be seen at a glance. Em-bellishments have been carefully selected by the letter press, a large force of the ablest artists have admitted designs in the illustrations and for the covers of the book, and out of all these the publishers have selected in the neighborhood of 300 in their judgment worthy of a place in the work. The book contains over 500 pages, the print is exceptionally large and clear as it should be—the paper finely cut and the binding elegant and appropriate. English silk cloth with gold and antique side stamp. A beautiful feature being a fine representation stamped in gold on the side of the book of the scene for blessing the little child by roadside. It is impossible to estimate the value of a book like this to every God-fearing man, woman and child. We see it actually present viewing with our own eyes the wonderful panorama of the Bible and Bible lands, also all the remarkable events connected therewith. All classes of people and especially the young, will read this book with as much interest as they would the most thrilling story of adventure, and in doing so they will unconsciously acquire a thorough knowledge of the Bible. In this way thousands of young people will be induced to become Bible readers who would otherwise never look within the sacred pages.

We predict for this work the same phenomenal sale in this country that it is being accorded in England. It is not only a book that, in our judgment, sell readily, but one which deserves to sell the engraving alone, and as it is they do, a complete Bible and art gallery, are worth the price of the book, and it ought to be in the hands of the children in every home in this country. The History company, the well known publishing house of 723 Market Street, San Francisco, have, by special contract with Cassell & Co., direct control of the entire work in this country. Agents and parties who desire to introduce the work should communicate at once with The History Company at the above address. We call attention to the advertisement in another column.

 Dr. W. H. HAZEN, the famous memorial of 1866, N. Y. writes: "I am ten years ago suffered untold agony from chronic catarrh. My family physician gave me up as incurable, and said I must die. My case was such a bad one, that every day I could scarcely speak above a whisper. I could scarcely cough and clear my throat would almost strangle me. By the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, in three months, I met a man, and the cure had been permanent."

"Constantly Sneezing and Spitting."
 Thomas J. HARRISON, Esq., 202 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was a great sufferer from catarrh for three years. At times I could scarcely breathe, and was constantly sneezing and spitting, and for the last eight months could not breathe through the nostrils. I thought nothing could be done for me. I was called to try Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am now a well man. I have not been troubled with the disease since I began to use it. I can testify that it is the only cure for this disease. I have recommended it to all who have had this trouble, and all have only to give it a fair trial to experience astounding results in a permanent cure."
