A WONDERFUL METAL.

J. W. Richards in Youth's Companion.
Aluminium or aluminum—for science has not yet agreed finally how the same shall be spelled is a beautiful white metal, which in appearance and the uses to which it can be put resembles silver. Above all its properties, the one which distinguishes it most is its lightness.

If we compare it with ordinary metals we shall find zinc, and tin are two and one-half times as heavy, iron almost three times, copper 3 and one-half times, silver 4 times, lead four and one-half times, and platinum over eight times as heavy as aluminium, bulk for bulk.

The lightness of aluminum is, therefore something extraordinary, and makes it a very valuable metal for some particular purposes. Besides this it also possesses other important properties which will be mentioned further on. Less than seventy years ago no one had ever seen metallic aluminum. The substances which contain it and from which it can be extracted are numerous and abundant, and it was for a long time suspected that common alum and china clay and minerals like corundum held some undiscovered metallic base; but not until the year 1827 was any one successful in isolating aluminum from these substances. In that year a german chemist named Wohler accomplished this feat, and in the town of Gottingen, where he lived, a statue has been recently erected to perpetuate his memory, the discovery of aluminum being the most important of the many services which he rendered to medical science.

Aluminum is, therefore, a child of the Nineteenth Century, no older than old people now living, and first put to practice in quite recent years.

Why was not aluminum discovered and used until so recently? The reasons are not obscure. The earth is full of aluminum, yet, as is the case with many other metals, it is not found in nature in a free, metallic state, but is always combined with oxygen of other elements. The substances which contain it are very plentiful, even much more so than the minerals containing iron.

The combination of aluminum and oxygen alone forms the substance called alumina, which occurs in nature as the minerals corundum, sapphire, ruby and emery. Alumina and silica occur combined together in most of rocks which form the earth's crust, in the soils which cover the fields, in the clay which is baked into bricks for our houses or worked into porcelain to adorn our tables.

Every one knows of the salt called alum, whose very name betrays aluminium as its principal constituent, and which contains aluminium and another metal, potassium combined with sulphuric acid and water.

Away up in Greenland, at a town called Iyignk, so far north that ships can only reach it during three or four months every year, is found a large deposit of cryolite, a pure mineral containing aluminium, sodium and fluorine, which is brought by ship-load to Philadelphia.

From this brief mention of the occurrence of aluminium in nature, it is seen that aluminium ore can be had very cheaply and in unlimited quantity; indeed, mineralogists who have studied carefully the materials that form the earth's crust say that if the earth, is of the same composition all through, as it is on the surface, about one-eighth of its entire weight must be aluminium.

Then why, with so much of it to be had, is not aluminium in as common use as iron? Because it is extremely difficult to extract the metal from its ore, and for this reason alone the metal is costly. The immense blast furnaces are fed with iron ore, coal and limestone, in proper proportions, and one furnace will produce as much as two hundred tons of pig iron in a day. But no metallurgist has ever been able to do anything like that with aluminium ore.

The way Wohler succeeded was as follows: He took alumina combined with oxygen, and by mixing it with charcoal and passing chlorine gas over it, at high heat, formed a compound of aluminium and chlorine. He then brought this substance into contact with metallic potassium, which is able to take away chlorine from aluminium and thus the latter metal was left alone, or isolated by the reaction.

Potassium, however, is a very costly metal and dangerous to handle, because it explodes so easily, so that Wohler's aluminium costs many times its weight in gold. Thirty years elapsed after its discovery before it was made cheaply enough to be of any use.

Without the labors of Henri St. Claire Deville, a professor of chemistry in Paris, aluminium might even now be seen only in chemical museums, looked at as a great curiosity. This gentleman succeeded in making metallic sodium at a price very low when compared with potassium and found that it would reduce aluminium chloride quite as well as potassium. He was thus able to produce aluminium with much less danger and much more cheaply.

At the French Exhibition of 1854, the first large bar of aluminium ever produced was exhibited among the beautiful display of porcelain from Sevres, labelled "the silver from clay."

Deville built large works to carry out the processes he had devised, and in 1862 aluminium was being sold at twelve dollars a pound. This price was low enough to permit its use for many purposes, and opera-glasses, sextants, scientific instruments, medals, spoons, table-ware, swordhandles, helmets and even toys were made of it.

The price, however, was still too high to permit its common use, and articles made of it could scarcely be considered anything but luxuries. For over twenty years the metal remained at that price, and as a natural consequence the use of aluminium remained very limited only about five thousand pounds of it being made yearly, and its manufacture being confined almost exclusively to France.

During the last six years works have been started which have been able to make aluminium much more cheaply than the French company. A New York gentleman named Mr. Castner, invented a process by which metallic sodium can be made very cheaply, and by using this improvement the "Aluminium Company, Limited," of London, has been able to sell aluminium at less than five dollars a pound. Such a lowering of the price increased greatly the number of uses to which aluminium could be put.

Within a few months of this writing the invention of another American, Mr. Hall, of Pittsburg, has brought the selling price down to two dollars a pound. So, while aluminium was discovered in Germany and first brought into use in France, it is now being most rapidly cheapened by American genius for invention.

The last process mentioned is a utilization of the wonderful power which electricity has of decomposing compound bodies under certain conditions, and the extraction of aluminium from alumina, formerly done by the medium of chlorine gas and potassium or sodium, all expensive reagents is now done at one stroke by the force of an electric current, by the process known as electrolysis.

If aluminium could be bought as cheaply as the common metals, what advantages has it which they do not possess; in other words what valuable qualities has it? I have already spoken of its lightness, so much less than almost all other metals, and this is the characteristic for which it will always be noted.

But, besides this, it resists alteration in the air wonderfully well. We all know how iron rusts, copper corrodes, brass tarnishes and silver blackens; but none of these things happen to aluminium. It may be kept in water, exposed to the weather, hung on the walls, or kept in air full of vapors and corrosive gasses without anything but a very slight, almost invisible, white tarnish forming on it. It is, therefore almost as non-corrodible as gold, the king of metals, and so we are not far wrong in calling aluminium one of the noble metals.

Every one has observed how silverware blackens when exposed to the air, the black coating being silver sulphide formed by sulphurous gas in our house which comes originally from sulphur in the coal we burn. But a service of aluminium plate would never lack from this cause. You could put pure sulphur into an aluminium egg cup and set fire to it without tarnishing the aluminium, whereas a silver cup treated so would be made as black as a lump of coal.

Aluminum, however, possesses almost all the properties of the common metals besides many of those of the noble ones. It can be worked in almost every required way. The wire-makers can draw it into a wire as fine as a hair, the metal-rollers can roll it into sheets thin as tissue paper, and the gold beaters can beat it out so thin that it would take forty thousand leaves placed on each other to be an inch in thickness. It can also be worked into tubes, stamped, or pressed into hollow forms, or hammered into shape.

Before ending this account of the uses of aluminum, we must not overlook its wonderful effects on some other metals when mixed with them in small proportions. Copper is the metal most benefited. If thirty or forty parts of zinc are added to one hundred parts of copper we form bronze. Both these alloys are in common use everywhere, because of their color and strength. But if we add five or ten parts of aluminum to one hundred parts of copper an alloy is obtained which is two or three times as strong as brass or bronze, is of a beautiful golden color and does not corrode or tarnish appreciably on exposure. These benefits are so great that more aluminum is now being used to make these alloys—aluminum bronzes they are called—than is worked up into articles solely of aluminum.

In conclusion I would state that there is very little probability of aluminum ever being used in place of iron for bridges, railroads, locomotives, steamboats, houses, etc., even if it could be bought as cheaply. Such speculations are wild and visionary, and no one who is well acquainted with the properties of iron and steel and aluminum ever predicts that iron will be so far displaced.

It is almost as rash to predict what will not happen as to prophesy what will, and we are continually reminded that the unexpected often happens, yet I will venture to close by saying that the end of the nineteenth century will in all probability find aluminium classed as far as price is concerned, among the ordinary metals of every day life.

EASTER.

Next Sunday being Easter Sunday, the several churches will hold divine services in commemoration of the event. Easter, as a holy day of more than ordinary importance, is almost universally observed, both throughout the Christian and Pagan world. The Jews, at this time celebrate the Passover in commemoration of the deliverance of the children of Israel. Christians commemorate the day in honor of the resurrection of Christ. The exercises are usually very imposing and impressive at the Catholic and Episcopal churches. All denominations generally distribute tokens to the children at this time who attend Sabbath schools, and some beautiful designs in the shape of Easter cards have of late years been distributed. Among epicureans, eggs, colored and uncolored are plentiful and the consumption of this article of food is greater at this time than at any other during the year.

The New Chief Justice.

Judge James O'Brien, nominated by the president and confirmed by the senate, to be chief justice of New Mexico and judge of the fourth judicial district, arrived on the morning train and is domiciled at the Plaza hotel where he has been called upon to-day by nearly every member of the local bar.

Judge O'Brien resides at Caledonia, Minnesota, a town of about 1,000 inhabitants, the county seat, and the home of two weekly newspapers.

In conversation with an Optic emissary at the dinner hour to-day, Judge O'Brien, who, by the way, would sooner be taken for a well-to-do wholesale merchant on a needed outing than for the newly appointed chief justice of New Mexico, stated that he had never sought the position. His appointment was entirely due to the persistent endorsement of Hon. C. K. Davis, United States senator from Minnesota. After he was informed of his nomination, Judge O'Brien wrote to the member of congress from his district that he felt a delicacy in coming into the territory with a commission in his pocket, when he knew that there were competent and deserving lawyers here, some of whom were applicants for the place. He was answered that the contending factions of the Territory were unable to agree upon a man and the delegation in Washington had centered on him. He then, of course, yielded to the inevitable and expressed himself as being willing to don the judicial ermine in New Mexico, after his confirmation.

The new chief justice is about fifty-three years of age and has a family, a wife and six children—two sons and four daughters. The youngest is four years of age and the eldest twenty-four. Three of his children died of diphtheria at his Minnesota home, two in the spring of 1882, within a short time of each other, both being interred in the same grave; the other, of the same dread disease, in the month of May, 1888. It is for this reason that these hopes and joys lie buried there that Mrs. O'Brien is tearfully reluctant about leaving the home in which she has resided for so many years, and around which so many tender memories cluster.

Judge O'Brien was for many years district attorney for his county, and has been a practicing attorney for a quarter of a century. He was for two terms a member of the Minnesota state senate, and headed the delegation from his state to the national republican convention at Chicago. Their fourteen votes were cast solidly for Blaine, after the first few ballots had been taken.

The new chief justice has not as yet appointed his clerk, neither has he yet set a time for being qualified. He will probably rest up a day or two before assuming the functions of his position.

New Mexico and Arizona.

Washington, March 27.—The house committee on Territories held a meeting for the purpose of considering the bill to provide an enabling act for New Mexico. After discussion, a resolution was adopted by a party vote, providing that further consideration of the bill be postponed, and a subcommittee of five be appointed to consider the propriety of reporting to the full committee an enabling act under which New Mexico may be admitted under the constitution prepared at the constitutional convention at Santa Fe, in October, 1889.

The bill for an enabling act for Arizona was also referred to the same sub-committee.

THE OLD SOLDIER.

The Shameful Manner in Which Promises, Made during the Last Campaign, have been Ignored.

—It is now very evident that the managers of the Republican party in the last campaign made hundreds of promises to the old soldiers, well knowing that they would never be able to fulfill them. Tanner was created commissioner of pensions, no doubt, in conformity with a previous promise, and the policy he pursued during his brief occupancy of the position was, beyond question of doubt, in perfect accord with a multiplicity of promises that had been made for the sole purpose of capturing the vote of the old soldiers. More than a year has elapsed since the Republican party took charge of the affairs of the government, and a Republican congress has been in session for more than three months, and yet, not a single measure in the way of pension legislation has been passed for the relief of our country's defenders; and, as a result of this course of apathy and procrastination, the old soldiers are becoming restless, and murmurs of discontent are heard in many sections of the country. The Republican party, to say the least, is in an inextricable dilemma. The fulfillment of the promises made to the old soldiers, on the one hand, would result in the complete depletion of the national treasury; and, on the other hand, if they make no show of an endeavor to redeem these promises it means that all hope of perpetuating the party will be at an end. The probable outcome is that some kind of a pension measure will be passed before the adjournment of the present congress. There will be such a disparity, however, between the measure and the solemn promises made to the soldiers that it will have little effect in allaying the general feeling of discontent. In short, the old soldier will be made to realize in the end that he was hood-winked and misled in a most shameful manner, and when a realization of the fact is reached, it is safe to say that the G. A. R. will not be found, in the future, supporting the Republican ticket with the ardor and unanimity that characterized that organization in the last campaign.

The difference between the Democratic and Republican parties is forcibly exemplified by comparing Kansas and Missouri. In Kansas the people are groaning under intolerable burdens of debts and are taxed to the very limit of human endurance. In comparison with that state the people of Missouri are prosperous and happy and pay less taxes than in any other state in the union.

Under the benign influence of a Republican administration the surplus in the treasury is growing beautifully less every day.

Defaulters and absconding bank cashiers will not be able to find a refuge in Canada after April 4th, the time when the new extradition treaty goes into effect.

The house committee on judiciary has reported favorably a bill for the appointment of another district judge for New Mexico. The New Mexican three months ago was the first to agitate that subject; then the Bar association took the matter up, and the people of Lincoln, Chavez and Eddy counties moved in the case. Another judge is badly needed, and the New Mexican is gratified to be able to say this need of the territory will be filled, from all appearances, at an early day.—New Mexican.

One bay mule about twelve years old, and one dun mule about ten years old, branded in Mexican brands—All of said horses and mules being upon the range contiguous to White Oaks in said County of Lincoln.

Three head of stock cattle branded K within circle on left hip, and twenty-two head of stock cattle branded thus, K on left hip. All of said cattle ran upon said range—One hundred head of sheep, marked with crop in left, and slit in right ear, now in the possession of Juan Chaves, and being cared for by him near Paros Spring, in said County of Lincoln.

And, whereas, said conveyance was made in trust to secure the payment of a certain note described therein, for the sum of $602.00, and interest from April 2nd, 1888. And, whereas said deed of trust provides that in case the said note shall not be well and truly paid when the same becomes due and payable, then in this event the undersigned, his legal representatives or assigns, may proceed to sell the property above and in said deed of trust described, to the highest bidder at public sale, at the post office door in said town of White Oaks. And whereas, as default has been made in the payment of said note, secured by said deed of trust by said James W. Kelly, said note remaining now due and unpaid.

Now therefore, by virtue of said deed of trust, I, the undersigned, will offer the above described property for sale at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, at the front door of the Post Office, in the said town of White Oaks, N. M., between the hours of ten o'clock, a. m. and four o'clock, p. m., on Saturday, the 12th day of April, 1890, for the purposes of said trust.

W. H. WEED, Trustee.

GEO. B. BARBER, Attorney.

Dated March 23th, 1890.

DEATH OF MRS. SLIGH.

Mrs. J. E. Sligh, wife of Atty. J. E. Sligh, was found dead at her home in Nogal on last Sunday morning. Mrs. Sligh, besides her husband, leaves two grown children, Mr. Geo. Sligh and Mrs. Emma Shannanhouse. Her death is a singularly sad one. A devoted wife and fond mother has gone from her loved ones at a moment's warning. The bereaved family have the sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances here in White Oaks where they resided for some time. Mrs. Sligh was at White Oaks Friday preceding her death, calling on a few friends in company with her husband—she drove home and at once visited a sick neighbor. Mr. Sligh made an appointment to come to the house soon after an errand at the Village store, which appointment unfortunately was never fulfilled until a short time before the discovery of her remains cold in death. Mr. Sligh was the first to face the lifeless form. Business reverses and a highly nervous temperament caused Mrs. Sligh to be very despondent of late and to her daughter she had made known her seeming desire to live no longer. The inquest held over her remains concluded that she came to her death by chloroform administered by her own hands. The bereaved have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in their sad affliction.

The Easter number of the New York Ledger is rendered especially attractively an uncommonly beautiful cover printed in colors. The central design is a picture of Easter morning in the country, the road to church with a border of Easter lilies. This number contains the first chapters of a new story by Amelia E. Barr, entitled, "The Household of McNeil," which opens well, and bids fair to rival "Jan Vedder's Wife," so far the best known of Mrs. Barr's romances.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE.

Whereas Theodore W. Heman and M. Lulu Heman, his wife, of the town of White Oaks, County of Lincoln, and Territory of New Mexico, by their certain mortgage-deed bearing date the 17th day of August, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the Probate Clerk's office, of the County of Lincoln in Book B, of the records of mortgages, pp 40-43 did convey to the undersigned, Phil. E. Green, (of St. Louis, Mo.) his heirs and assigns as mortgagee the following described Real Estate situate in the said County of Lincoln and Territory of New Mexico, as follows, to wit: That certain Placer Mining Claim and premises designated by the Surveyor General of New Mexico as Lot No. 151 and known as the Janes Placer mining claim in the White Oaks mining district and which is more particularly described as to meets and bounds in the United States Patent recorded in the records of said Lincoln County in book C of records of patents at page 151 to which reference is hereby made to secure the payment of a certain promissory note made by the said Theodore W. Heman and M. Lulu Heman to the said Phil E. Green, of even date with said mortgage deed for the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars and interest thereon at the rate of twelve per centum per annum, payable one year from the date thereof. And whereas it was provided in and by said mortgage-deed, that if default be made in the payment of said principal sum and interest thereon or any part thereof, when the same should become due and payable, then in such case, the said mortgagee, his agent or legal representative, might sell at public auction said mortgaged premises to the highest bidder for cash: first giving notice of the time and place of such sale by publishing a notice, in some newspaper published in the County of Lincoln, for at least thirty days before the date of such sale and in their name or names or as the Agent or Attorney of said mortgagor might make and deliver to the purchaser or purchasers at such sale a good and sufficient deed of such premises.

And whereas default has been made in the payment of the principal sum and interest thereon due upon said note and which default still continues: Now, therefore, Public Notice is hereby given that on Tuesday the 15th day of April, A. Mr. Lee: "Why, Addie, you needn't cry about it! I only said Mrs. Allen was a very well-informed woman, and I wished you would follow her example."
Mrs. Lee: "Yes, and last week you said you wished I could manage to look as stylish as Mrs. Allen, and she makes all her own clothes. But she has what I have not."
Mr. Lee: "What is that?"
Mrs. Lee: "Well, she gets all her information from the Magazine they take. I admit that she knows all that is going on, and is bright and entertaining in conversation, but I could do as well as she does if I had the same source of information. She lent me the last number of her Magazine lately, and I loitered more in one hour's reading, about various social matters and the topics of the day, than I could pick up in a month by my occasional glance at the fringes. I certainly cover every topic of interest from the news of the day down to the details of household life; and everything is so beautifully illustrated, too. Every time Mamie goes over to the Alens' she comes back and ceases me to tell you to take Democrat's Family Magazine as the stories are so good. Even the boys watch for it every month, as a place is found for it in their pockets; and Mr. Allen swears by it. It is really wonderful how it suits every member of the family!"
Mr. Lee: "All perhaps I had better send for a Specimen Copy; for, if it is anything like what you say it is, it will amuse and instruct the whole of us."
Mrs. Lee: "I see that W. L. Hughes, Democrat, the publisher, is East 14th Street, New York, is offering to send a Specimen Copy for 1 cent, so we can't lose anything, as each number contains a 'Pattern Or' entitling the holder to any pattern she may choose, and in any size which alone makes each copy worth 2 cents; and I just want a jacket pattern like Mrs. Allen's. The subscription price is only $2.00 a year; and I must say I can't see how they can publish so elegant a Magazine for so little money."

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.

25 CENTS

The New York Ledger for March 22nd contains the first installment of an Irish story of to day, by Harold Frederic, which will set the hearts of Irishmen on fire. The story is called "The Martyrdom of Maev." The name of the heroine is Maev. She is a beautiful and accomplished girl, and it is her martyrdom, suffered for her lover's sake, which is described. The story is full of intensely interesting incident, is told with a simplicity and pathos which go straight to the heart.

While on a recent visit to El Paso Jay Gould remarked to the Chicago Inter-Ocean correspondent that Denver and El Paso will be the great cities of the west. He made large purchases of land at the latter place for depot grounds, thus emphasizing his belief in the future, and intimated that he might complete the railroad from that place to White Oaks in New Mexico, a distance of about 150 miles. In addition to large paying gold properties, at the later place, it contains extensive deposits of coal. There is no reason why the "Gate City" between the two republics should not become a great city, while Denver's future is among the certainties. This fact not only Mr. Gould but other far-seeing railroad men and financial and commercial magnates have long since conceded.—Denver News.

QUEID'S EARNEST.

Most women naturally look forward to matrimony as their proper sphere in life, but they should constantly bear in mind that a fair, rosy face, bright eyes, and a healthy, well-developed form, are the best passports to a happy marriage. All those wasting disorders, weakness, and functional irregularities peculiar to their sex, destroy beauty and attractiveness and make life miserable. An unfailing specific for these maladies is to be found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrappers, and faithfully carried out for many years. $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

Can Scirrhus Cancer Be Cured?

This is a hard question to answer. Swift's Specific has cured thousands of cases of Skin Cancer, and there have been many cases of Scirrhus Cancer reported cured by it. We do say that S. S. S. is worth a trial in any case of cancer. We append a statement from Miss Green, of Tallapoosa, Ga.

In 1884 I had a small lump in my left breast, which proved to be a cancer. The first remedy I tried was to have it burned off. This did not cure it, for shortly afterward it broke out in a much worse form. I then consulted our druggist, who advised me to try Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and after taking about one dozen bottles, was completely cured, and my general health greatly improved. This has been over six years ago, and my cancer has never appeared since, nor has it ever troubled me in any way. I can cheerfully recommend Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) to any one suffering with cancer.

Weed his certain mortgage deed, conveying the west half of Lot 3 in Block 47 in the town of White Oaks in Lincoln County, New Mexico, with power of sale therein, which said mortgage deed was given to secure the payment of the sum of ninety-seven dollars and seventy-five cents, one year after date with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, according to the tenor and effect of a certain promissory note bearing even date with said mortgage deed, a copy of which note being inserted in said mortgage deed, which mortgage deed is duly recorded in Book B pages 136-7-8 of the records of mortgages of Lincoln County, New Mexico,

And whereas the conditions of said mortgage deed have been broken and the amount of said note is still due and wholly unpaid although the same is long since due and payable.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that, in pursuance of the power in said mortgage deed contained, I will, on the
