"A BOLD MOCKER."

BY CHARLES N. SINNETT.

"You come right in and wash the dishes, Sally, and stop your hollerin'!"

Sally had only been trying to imitate a sparrow. But she ceased her pleasant work at once. Her mother was very tired, however, and the girl's obedience did not wholly satisfy her.

"You'll forgit your natural voice some time," she said. "You're always a hollerin' like somethin'. First it's a loon, and then it's a squirrel, and then—Be careful that you dont spill that dish water!"

"Yes, mother."

"And then it's a crow. And the next that ye know ye'll be imitatin' human voices, and there's no knowin' what ye'll come to, you bold mocker."

Sallie gave a nervous start just then as she glanced out of the window near the sink. How glad she felt that her mother was so busy with her ironing that she did not notice her! She knew, too, that her mother in her present nervous and worried condition would have uttered a shrill cry if she had seen what she had caught a glimpse of through the great forest which grew so close to the west of the log house which was her home. It was an Indian's canoe gliding over the water of a cove. Sally saw no one in it, but she knew quickly that it was moving far more rapidly than the wind would have impelled it in that sheltered place. She was sure that an Indian was concealed behind it, swiftly pushing it as he swam in his eagerness to get behind a high point as quickly as possible.

Since she could remember she had heard of the artifices of the savages. Her mother's brother had been shot by an Indian the Spring before. She would never forget how the wily enemy had concealed himself in a bush which the high wind seemed to blow down on the cornfield where her uncle was at work.

Her father had said that very morning, as he started away to get grist ground at the tide mill up the bay, that no Indians had been seen in the coast settlements for several months. But she knew that he talked bravely to calm her mother's fears. He would hasten home again as soon as possible. As these things flashed through Sally's mind her mother began to scold again.

"I'm lonesome enough to-day with your father gone to mill without hearin' any of your dismal mimickin's."

"But he'll be back in good season he started away so early," said the girl cheerfully.

"What was I tellin' you just now about your voice!" snapped the woman as the baby gave the ironing cloth a sudden jerk. "Your talkin' is as coarse as a man's. It's all come of your foolin' away so much of yer precious time a-making noises like the dumb brutes."

Sally worked on steadily, and her mother's tongue flew faster and faster. "We can't have no idea about yer father. If the wind comes blowin' fresh up the bay he'll have a hard time pullin' agin it; and the tide'll hender him, too."

"But I am sure that he will come home to-night, mother. Or, if he finds that he cannot get his grist ground, he'll be likely to send brother Ben down. The miller would be very willing to lend him his horse."

"Why, Sally, one would think that you understood considerable, to hear you talk. You'd better whinny and see if the mare won't come. Or, sing. "Come, Pal" like a robin singing for rain, and see if his boat don't come flyin' down the bay like the loons do when you mimie them!"

The mother's tones were very sarcastic. Sally's heart went thump, thump as she listened. But the loudest beat was one of joy. She was willing to be scolded still more severely, to be blamed for an hour longer, if that would only keep her mother from thinking over their dangerous situation if the father did not return that night. And as long as she worked at the dishes Sally well knew that her mother would not glance at the window near the sink, for she never looked up when she worked and talked with her present energy. So the girl toiled on as slowly as possible, glancing out through the forest now and then in a quick, searching manner. But she did not see any new signs of the object which had startled her when she first began to wash the dishes.

Still she felt sure that somewhere down the Point, hidden by a jutting rock, or creeping stealthily from one great tree trunk to another, was an Indian, and perhaps several savages listening to every sound which came from the house. And very keenly their black eyes would watch the bay to see if her father and brother returned. She was very glad when the wind began to stir the trees less and less, and she had to strain her eyes to catch sight of a white cap here and there in the bay. Before the dishes were finished her mother had noticed the favorable change in the weather. But she would not speak of it to Sally after all the sharp things which she had said to her.

"I'll carry these clothes up chamber, I guess, out o' the baby's way," was all she uttered.

The girl knew, however, that her chief errand up stairs was to look out on the bay with the certain hope of seeing her husband's returning boat. When Sally heard her mother give a heavy sigh she was sure that her father and brother were coming. She was surprised, however, when her parent her parent seemed to stand looking out of the window for several minutes. When she had quietly opened the chamber door she knew what had happened. She could distinctly hear her mother's heavy breathing.

"She was all worn out, and the heat up there made her drowsy when she lay down on my bed to rest a few seconds," thought Sally.

And then she heard the door-latch rattling in her hand. Like a flash these facts had come to her mind; her mother often slept for hours when she was so exhausted; to awaken her would cause her great fear if the boat had not come; and she was all alone. These thoughts were sharper than all the things which her mother had said to her that afternoon. Just then the baby looked up in her face and began to crow. The rattling of the latch had greatly pleased him. His happy call made Sally put on a brave look as she took him up in her strong arms. She dandled him up and down, softly singing to him "Daddy's coming! Daddy's coming!" She went boldly to the door and looked up the bay.

Yes, there was the boat. And Sally sang a little louder to the baby so that, if any Indians were lurking near, they might understand that their waiting for night would be all in vain.

Then there was a dull sound off beyond the Point, and the trees began to rustle and shake. Soon long, ragged clouds began to move and waver above the top of the forest as though the great pines were casting huge shadows on the sky. The bay moaned and rustled as though the woods had strewn its width with its dismal echoes which the white caps tossed up and down. Sally knew how her father's boat would stagger in the gale, how the tide would tug at it, that it might not reach its sheltered mooring-place in front of the house until the morrow. But she kept on singing to the baby. She fastened the windows quietly, as though it was only to shut out the wind. But they had never been closed so securely. She knew that the gun which her father had left at home was all in order; but she moved it softly to a more convenient place. Even when the sun went down she did not lose her courage, and let her mother sleep on up stairs.

As the night came swiftly on the wind roared louder. Sally's first thought was to set the candle near the window that looked out upon the bay. Thus its light would help her father. But she quickly remembered that if left in such a position it would be a sign to the waiting Indian. He would need no better evidence that she and her mother were alone and waiting anxiously.

So she flitted back and forth with the candle as she sang and talked to the baby after carefully bolting the door. To one who was familiar with the life in the log house it would seem that the family was all at home and that the usual evening work was going on. And when the candle was put down it was in its usual place on the mantel-piece.

But Sally did not sit down by the fire-place. She crouched on the floor by the door, her right ear bent to hear every sound outside. If her father and brother came up from the shore she could distinguish their steps above the roar of the wind. If the Indian crept near she was sure she would hear him in time to grasp the gun. But there was no unusual sound until the candle had burned very low, and showed only a faint spark of light. Then the lilac bush rustled, a bird fluttered as though it had been disturbed, and there was a low, guttural sound of impatience.

A less practiced ear than Sally's would only have noticed the sound of the bird's wings. But she heard all and knew that the savage was waiting right by the door. He was already provoked at the candle burning so long, the girl conjectured. When it went out he would try the door, and his crafty hands might find a way of opening it. And then—she must aim the gun with a steady hand; if she was to save her mother and the baby who softly slumbered beside her, for the hour was so late that she felt that she must not hope for her father's coming. Indeed, when she thought how the Indian at the door could spring upon her father and take his life, she hoped and prayed that he might not come.

And then a night bird made such a dismal sound as it flew close to the house that the girl half started from the floor. But her cheek did not pale with fear. A bright spot gleamed in each cheek, and her eyes sparkled. Ah! there was the Indian's hand at work upon the door now! His knife was swiftly but softly cutting around the spot where his fingers could reach thro' and push back the fastenings.

"If I only knew on which side of the doorstep he was I would fire at once," thought Sally.

But she could not surely tell what was his position, and, if she missed him when she fired the gun, her waiting and hoping might all be in vain.

"I believe he is at the left of the door," the girl said to herself when she had listened a little longer.

At that she slowly rose to her feet. She aimed the gun. And then a quick, stern voice rang thro' the log-cabin:

"Shoot, Robert! Shoot, Howard! Indians at the door! Shoot!"

There was a sharp cry outside, which was quickly drowned in the crack of a gun. Then followed a shriek, and the sound of a body crashing into the midst of the lilac bushes, and then all was still, outside but the howling of the gale.—But how Sally's mother made the chamber echo with her calls! The girl was by her side quickly, however, for, even encumbered as she was with the frightened baby, she could go anywhere about the house in the dark.

"The danger is all over, mother. I'm sure that the Indian is dead."

"Yes, your father is a good shot," said the woman, growing calm as she heard the girl's steady tones. "And the Indians have always been afraid of him. But he never spent his time like you, boldly mocking birds and dumb brutes. Yes, I hear him now in the yard."

Sure enough, there was the sound of his voice in the little path which led up from the shore, and the familiar step on the ground. Twinkle, twinkle, went the glow of his old-fashioned lantern, and then his laugh rang out. "Dead as a stone. Ha! ha! ha!"

Before she thought what she was doing, for she was growing nervous now that all the danger was past, Sally echoed her father's laughter so perfectly that her mother said, "Shame to mimic your own father."

But it was the last time Sally was ever scolded for her rare powers of imitation, for her father got the whole story from the girl whom he hugged to his heart in admiration.

"Say it over again!" he cried, and Sally called out as she had when she wished to make the Indian leap into a good position for her to shoot him through the thinnest part of the door, "Shoot, Robert! Shoot, Howard! Shoot!"

"No wonder he thought I had my brother in ambush here," the man laughed.

"But it was a night-bird that made me think of it," said Sally modestly. "He flew close to the house with his dreary cry."

What the Papers Say.

There was a good deal of education in the double object-lesson presented a few days ago when the president of the United States, while receiving hospitality and respect from his political enemies at the south was getting insult and contempt from his political friends at the north. That the indignity was carefully planned and the play rehearsed can not be doubted. When Mr. Thurston, the president of the convention, after sounding the "keynote" of the party tune, in a premeditated speech canceling Harrison and exalting Blaine, was re-enforced immediately by Mr. Foraker declaring that Blaine had given us "a magnificent administration," it is useless to pretend that the dual insult was nothing more than what Sam Weller would call "a remarkable coincidence." It would be just as reasonable to say that the first and second fiddlers in the orchestra were playing independent music, and that their harmony was an accident. It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that Thurston and Foraker are accomplices in the Republican plot against Harrison. There were some footprints in the snow round about there, too, that looked very much like Blaine's.—Chicago Times.

Mr. Blaine's future continues in Republicanism the uppermost topic. At the recent national convention, of Republican clubs in Cincinnati the delegates were questioned concerning their presidential preferences. Of 388 delegates interviewed 211 unhesitatingly declared for Mr. Blaine. Ninety-seven wanted President Harrison for a second term. Six were for Gen. Alger, six for Senator Cullom, three for Major McKinley, two each for Senator Sherman and Mr. Clarkson and one for Speaker Reed. The Secretary of State, it will be seen, received nearly two-thirds of all the votes cast. Of course, the poll was informal. The result, however, is significant as showing that he is still without a rival in the affections of the Republican masses. It coincides with similar expressions at state conventions and in state legislatures. It justifies the opinion held by intelligent political observers of the country over that the only preliminary necessary to his nomination next year would be intimation on his part of willingness to accept.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Philadelphia Enquirer, a very staunch Republican newspaper, regrets that Mr. Harrison did not make his journey a year ago, in which case, it thinks, he would never have favored the force bill as a means of breaking the Solid South, because he would have learned from Republican business men, as he did not from the politicians, that no worthy citizen of the South wants the force bill and that the true way to break up solidarity is to break down sectional hate. But the Enquirer mistakes the purpose of the force bill advocates. They did not support that measure with any view to breaking up the solidarity of the South or overcoming sectional prejudice. Their object was to secure the electoral votes of the Southern States and their Congressional seats, no matter how solidly the people of those States might vote the other way, and by irritating sectional prejudice to hold fast to the Northwest, which they see rapidly slipping from the Republican grasp. Mr. Harrison has learned nothing at the South which he did not shrewdly guess before—nothing which, if learned earlier, would have deterred him from supporting a measure which he confidently trusted to make him President again in spite of any majority that the people might give against him. But the force bill being now as dead as Rameses II, the President is putting his reliance on "taffy" instead of on bayonets. It is an agreeable change, but it comes too late to do him much good.—N. Y. World.

That the territorial fair at Albuquerque in September may prove successful, and that it is to the interest of every section of the territory that it does, the board of commissioners of each county should make an appropriation to have the products and resources of every section properly presented. While it may be argued that the attendance of outside visitors is not sufficient to justify such an appropriation, admitting the force of the argument, it can be shown that there is a remarkable ignorance among the citizens of this great territory regarding its resources, and such an appropriation would bring most profitable returns in making an intelligent advertiser of the territory's resources of each resident. Should this suggestion be adopted, the fair association or board could appoint a representative citizen to act in the nature of a commissioner for the county.—Stock Grower.

The death of Hon. G. G. Posey occurred at Silver City, a short time ago. Judge Posey was one of the first lawyers of New Mexico, and one of the leading Democrats of the territory. His mind had been gradually failing after an attack of paralysis which occurred some time since.

Mountains of Water.

"Mountains of water," is the way the court officers who returned last night from Tierra Amarilla speak of what they saw on the trip. They say that the half has not been told of the flood that must soon sweep down the Rio Grande. At Cumbres hill the snow stands up beside the D. & R. G. R. R. section house, six feet deep, and thence it extends for miles, covering the whole range as far as Toltec gorge, and ranging in depth from four to twenty-five feet. All the streams are running bank full; the Chama, Rio Brazos and Wolf creek, an ordinary rill, are rushing torrents. In places, they say the whole mountain side is covered with water, trickling out from under the snow banks on top and spreading over the face of the decline in every direction. Thus far the weather has continued cool in that region, hence the floods that have passed do not begin to indicate what may follow.

In the lower Rio Grande to-day the situation in the flooded districts is about the same. The river has fallen several inches at Espanola. At Albuquerque work on the new dyke is being pushed. At Valverde, above San Marcial, much land is under water and there is also trouble in the La Joya bottoms. At El Paso there was a rise of five inches night before last. The Times of yesterday says: "Last night the upper embankment of the canal broke and in less than half an hour all of the flat south of the El Paso street car stable was under water. Shortly after the water broke thro' under the track and flooded the company's corral and all the Mexican dwellings north of the track. A large force of men at once went to work throwing up a dam in the centre of Stanton street in order to protect the settlement east of Stanton street.—New Mexican of May 7.

The territorial board of world's fair commissioners held its first formal meeting at the office of Governor Prince, on Tuesday. All members were present. Judge Thornton was chosen president; Miguel Salazar, vice-president; W. H. H. Llewellyn, secretary; and E. V. Chavez, treasurer. No other business of moment was transacted. President Thornton was authorized to call the next meeting of the board at Albuquerque.—Santa Fe Sun.

Parties desiring copies of the stock laws of New Mexico should address G. L. Brooks, secretary of the Sanitary Board, Albuquerque, N. M. It is essential that every stockman in the territory post himself thoroughly on the measures enacted by the last legislature, as some very radical changes and additions to the statutes regarding cattle were made.

WHAT CURES?

Editorial Difference of Opinion on an Important Subject.

What is the force that cures disease; and which is the most convenient apparatus for applying it? How far is the regular physician useful to us because we believe in him, and how far are his pills and powders and tonics only the material representatives of his personal influence on our health?

The regular doctors cure; the homeopathic doctors cure; the Hahnemannites cure; and so do the faith cures and the mind cures, and the so-called Christian scientists, and the four-dollar-and-a-half advertising itinerants, and the patent medicine men. They all hit, and they all miss, and the great difference—one great difference—in the result is that when the regular doctors lose a patient no one grumbles, and when the irregular doctors lose one the community stands on end and howls.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

Nature cures, but nature can be aided, hindered or defeated in the curative process. And the Commercial's contention is that it is the part of rational beings to seek and trust the advice of men of good character who have studied the human system and learned, as far as modern science lights the way, how far they can aid nature and how they can best avoid obstructing her.—Buffalo Commercial.

It is not our purpose to consider the evils that result from employing the unscrupulous, the ignorant, charlatans and quacks to prescribe for the maladies that afflict the human family. We simply declare that the physician who knows something is better than the physician who knows nothing, or very little indeed about the structure and conditions of the human system. Of course "he does not know it all."—Rochester Morning Herald.

I have used Warner's Safe Cure and, but for its timely use, would have been, I verily believe, in my grave from what the doctors termed Bright's Disease.—D. F. Shriner, Senior Editor Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe, Ohio, in a letter dated June 30, 1890.

PECULIAR INFATUATION.

Different Methods of Following the Injunction "Love One Another."

Do men ever fall in love with each other?

Women do. Not long ago a young woman in New Jersey was married to a youthful laborer on her father's farm. Some time afterward it was discovered that the husband was a female; the young wife refused, however, though earnestly entreated by her friends, to give up her chosen consort. The strangest part of the discovery was the fact that the bride knew her husband was a woman before she was led to the altar.

If men do not exhibit this strange infatuation for one of their own sex, they, at least, oftentimes, give evidence of the fact that they love one another. There are many instances on record where one man has given his life for another. There are many more instances where men have given life to another.

It is a proud possession—the knowledge that one has saved a precious human life. Meriden, Conn., is the home of such a happy man. John H. Preston, of that city, July 11, 1890, writes: "Five years ago I was taken very sick, I had several of the best doctors, and one and all called it a complication of diseases. I was sick four years, taking prescriptions prescribed by these same doctors, and I truthfully state I never expected to get any better. At this time, I commenced to have the most terrible pains in my back. One day an old friend of mine, Mr. R. T. Cook of the firm of Curtis & Cook, advised me to try Warner's Safe Cure, as he had been troubled the same way and it had effected a cure for him. I bought six bottles, took the medicine as directed and am to-day a well man. I am sure no one ever had a worse case of kidney and liver trouble than I had. Before this I was always against proprietary medicines but not now, oh, no."

Friendship expresses itself in very peculiar ways sometimes; but the true friend is the friend in need.

Mr. J. Zeigler and Allen Lane started, Sunday last, for San Pedro.

L. W. Stewart and Bertie Lund are on the sick list, this week.

There have been heavy rains all over the Territory, within the last two weeks.

Mr. Al. Parker left White Oaks for his home in Albuquerque, last Sunday.

Mrs. Rogers's millinery goods are kept at her residence, just back of Stewart's store.

A. H. Reynolds, late of White Oaks, may now be addressed at Aransas Harbor, Texas.

White Oaks is rejoicing over the abundant rain which fell Monday and Tuesday, of this week.

Mr. U. Ozanne has been quite sick from a return of the grip, caused by fatigue and exposure on his trip to Santa Fe.

'Squire Parker united a Mexican couple in the bonds of matrimony, last Tuesday. We did not learn the names of the contracting parties.

Harry Allen, whom all of the boys are glad to see again, came in on the morning stage, last Tuesday. He has been visiting in New York for about a year.

Two sales of carp have been made lately, one to Mrs. Geo. B. Barber, to stock her pond at Three Rivers, and the other to Mr. Alf. C. Watson, for his pond at Nogal.

All interested parties are requested to meet at the base ball grounds next Sunday afternoon. Arrangements are to be made for a game of base ball on the Fourth of July.

A summons was sent, late last week, to Messrs. Stewart, Taliaferro, Rexford and Brothers to go Socorro and serve their country on the grand jury. Mr. Stewart was sick and couldn't go; Mr. Taliaferro's partner was absent and he wouldn't go; Mr. Rexford didn't go, but Mr. Brothers seized his grip sack and went. Now mark the sequel. The Rio Grande rose in its majesty, seeking whom it might devour, and the last heard from Mr. Brothers, he was in a boat on the foaming waters, which were rapidly bearing him gulfward, while he waved his grip-sack and shouted, "Excelsior!"

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to remove from this world our former associate and Brother, Sir Knight Charles L. Pearman,

Therefore, be it resolved, by Baxter Lodge No. 9, Knights of Pythias, White Oaks, New Mexico, that, while we always recognize the justice of an all-wise Providence in His dispensations, we do deeply deplore the loss, in his early manhood, of one we cherished as a friend and Brother.

Resolved, that we recognize in the character of the departed Brother, a true Knight, a faithful man, and a Christian gentleman in social circles.

Resolved, that we hereby tender our heartfelt sympathies to the wife and relatives of the deceased, feeling, as we do, the pangs of affliction in losing a dear friend and Brother, how much more must they feel the sad loss of a kind and loving husband and dutiful son.

Resolved, that a copy of the foregoing resolutions be delivered to the wife of the deceased, and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Lodge, and a copy be furnished to each of the Lincoln county papers for publication.

A Big Strike,

An old friend at Las Cruces, one of the most prominent and competent miners in New Mexico, writes to us this date. We publish the following from his correspondence that we feel is straight goods.—Ed.
Editor BULLION:

There is a nice little story which comes to us from White Oaks that speaks volumes for mining in New Mexico. Eight years ago Messrs. Hewitt, Fergusson and Watson, three attorneys, secured the Old Abe mine. Up to last December they had little returns from the property, expending what their means would allow in development work. Then they struck pay ore. Their first clean up brought them a thousand or so dollars, their next doubled the amount, and for weeks the output has been climbing up until last week a ten stamp mill turned out something over twenty thousand dollars and the three lucky owners have taken out in four months over and above expenses the neat sum of ninety thousand dollars. A bona fide offer of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars has been refused for the mine, At a depth of 130 feet the lead is from 3 to 17 feet wide, and at that depth nuggets of gold weighing five or six ounces are taken out. THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

The attitude of the medical profession toward what is known as "patent medicines," is not at all unreasonable. Thousands of these nostrums are offered to the public every year. Some of them are dangerous, and most of them are futile. Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), we are all glad to say, is not classed among these nostrums. It has overcome the wholesome prejudices of physicians in all parts of the country, and some of the strongest testimonials in its behalf come from medical men who have used it in their practice, and who do not hesitate to endorse its wonderful results. This is extremely gratifying, but by no means astonishing, for every claim that is put forward in behalf of S. S. S. is based on a series of actual experiments extended over a long period of time.

Mr. LEE: "Why, Addie, you needn't cry about it! I only said Mrs. Allen was a very well-informed woman, and I wished you would follow her example."

Mrs. LEE: "Yes, and last week you said you wished I could manage to look as stylish as Mrs. Allen—and she makes all her own clothes. But she has what I haven't."

Mr. LEE: "What is that?"

Mrs. LEE: "Well, she gets all of her information from the Magazine they take. I admit that she knows all that is going on, and is bright and entertaining in conversation—but I can't do as well as she does if I had the same source of information. She lent me the last number of her Magazine lately, and I learned more in one hour's reading, about various social matters and the topics of the day, than I would pick up in a month by my occasional chats with friends. It certainly covers every topic of interest, from the news of the day down to the details of housekeeping; and everything is so beautifully illustrated, too. Every time Mamie goes over to the Allens' she comes back and teases me to get you to take Demorest's Family Magazine, as the stories are so good. Even the boys watch for it every month, as a place is found for them also in its pages; and Mr. Allen swears by it. It is really wonderful how it suits every member of the family!"

Mr. LEE: "Well, perhaps I'd better send for a Specimen Copy; for, if it is anything like what you say it is, it will amuse and instruct the whole of us."

Mrs. LEE: "I see that W. Jennings Demorest, the publisher, 15 East 14th Street, New York, is offering to send a Specimen Copy for 10 cents, so we can't lose anything, as each number contains a 'Pattern Order' entitling the holder to any Pattern she may choose, and in any size—which alone makes each copy worth 20 cents; and I just want a jacket pattern like Mrs. Allen's. The subscription price is only $6 a year; and I must say I can't see how they can publish so elegant a Magazine for so little money."

$300 REWARD
FOR ORE THIEVES!

The common experience of this camp shows that much is lost by the mine operators by the stealing of gold in specimens, if not in amalgam and bullion. Therefore the "Old Abe" Co. offers a standing reward of Three Hundred Dollars for the arrest and conviction, or for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person guilty of stealing any of the property of the Old Abe Co., even the smallest specimen of ore. The rule of this company is to mill all specimens. Therefore none of the ore from this mine can be honestly held as specimens. And as the receiver, with guilty knowledge, is as guilty in law as the thief, this offer applies to the holders of Old Abe specimens.

CAM LIFE.

HERE'S THE SLICKER.

The one thing you'll always find in every cowboy's outfit when he goes on the spring round-up is a "Fish Brand" Pommel Slicker. They make the only perfect saddle coat, and come either black or yellow. They protect the whole front of the rider's body, being made to fit round the outside of the saddle entire. When used as a walking coat, the extension pieces neatly overlap each other, making a regular overcoat with a double storm-proof front. When riding, the saddle is dry as a bone, from pommel to cantle, and the rider is entirely protected in every part of his body. These "Slickers," being of extra width, make fine blankets for camp. Beware of worthless imitations, every garment stamped with "Fish Brand" Trade Mark. Don't accept any inferior coat when you can have the "Fish Brand Slicker" delivered without extra cost. Particulars and illustrated catalogue free.

SAVE MONEY AND SUFFERING.

One feature of the thousands of testimonials that have been given in behalf of S. S. S. is remarkable. In numbers of instances it is related that a great deal of time and money have been spent in a vain effort to secure relief from disease in the usual way. A knowledge of the virtues of Swift's Specific would have saved the time and the money, to say nothing of the prevention of the suffering. There need be no such mistakes made now. The great blood purifier is for sale by druggists everywhere, and the S. S. S. company in Atlanta will send to any address their Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases free, and a pamphlet containing a few of the thousands of testimonials they have received from those who have experienced the benefits of this wonderful medicine.

HEED THE WARNING.

It is not infrequently the case that itching pimples and irritating "eat boils" are the forerunners of larger boils, or the most serious carbuncles. Invariably Nature puts out her danger signals, and they should be heeded at once. The pimples and little boils show that the blood is not in a good condition and nature is trying to relieve the system. A few doses of Swift's Specific at this juncture will accomplish wonders. The eruption will be healed and the system cleansed of its impurities. The modern paraphrase of the old saying, "A stitch in time," etc., is that "Timely stitches will save nine pairs of breeches." The modern form has a touch of humor that does not modify the truth of it. In that vein, we may say that a course of Swift's Specific prevents ill-tariff.
