NEW MEXICAN NUGGETS.

Several thousand fruit and shade trees will be planted in Albuquerque this spring.

The Maxwell Land Grant Company have bought the improvements of over 150 settlers.

Last week Lyons & Campbell finished seeding down 1,000 acres of the Duck Creek Valley, Grant County, to alfalfa.

The New West Education Commission will try to secure donations this year to erect a $25,000 academy at Albuquerque.

Home grown lettuce, radishes and other garden truck are plentiful in the Santa Fe market and some to spare to neighboring towns.

Las Vegas Optic: "Some move should be made toward bringing a good class of servant girls to our city. Good Plors. help, just now, is in great demand."

Violets and peaches are now in bloom in the Mesilla Valley, and button hole bouquets of these flowers may be seen any day on the streets of Las Cruces.

A blacksmith in the employ of M. C. Zirbut at Albuquerque, had a foot badly smashed by a drill bit weighing 80 pounds falling upon the injured member.

`Fifteen wagons loaded with agricultural implements and ranch supplies crossed the bridge at Albuquerque en route to the fertile valleys west of there.

Lilac bushes are spreading forth beautiful green leaves and the buds on peachtrees in the Rio Grande Valley are beginning to burst, showing beautiful pink blossoms that will soon form an object of comment for Eastern tourists.

In Albuquerque there are thirty-two houses licensed to sell liquor at retail, five wholesale houses and one brewery. From licenses ranging from $25 to $100 to city, county and "Uncle Sam." the revenue aggregates $6,000, at least, annually.

Wheat sowing is about finished in the valley in proximity to Albuquerque, and farmers are commencing to prepare the soil for corn planting and gardening. Seed merchants report heavy sales this season and predict a large yield of vegetables.

Four wagon loads of sheep pelts and one carretta of hides were brought into Albuquerque from one placita. If the remainder of New Mexico shows a proportionate mortality among the sheep the wool clip will be very materially lessened this

A Daughter of Chief Justice Fuller Runs Away and Gets Married.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 20.-The Daily News Milwaukee special says:

Miss Pauline Fuller, the fifth daughter of Chief Justice Fuller, was married here last night at the Kirby House by a Justice of the Peace. The groom was J, Matt Aubrey, Jr., of Chicago, and it was a runaway match.

When the 6:30 St. Paul train arrived last evening a petite woman was helped off the steps of the parlor car by a well-knit young man with a smooth face. . The lady was closely veiled and was escorted to a car. riage by her companion. They were driven at once to the Kirby House, where they registered. No room was assigned to them, and the lady and her companion ppent the early evening in the hotel par-

About 9 o'clock the young man came down stairs and informed the clerk that he wanted a Justice of the Peace. Clerk Cole is well up on such affairs, so he winked knowingly and assured the young man that everything would be arranged inside of 15 minutes. Justice Gregory soon arrived, there was a hasty consultation, and then the young man brought the blushing young lady forward. The ceremony was a brief one, and the Justice, who is a very prosaic gentleman, put on no extra frills. He did not know that the bride was a daughter of the Chief Justice of the United States, and neither did any of those who were present, outside of the contracting parties. When the case was concluded the old Justice called for the witnesses and the young couple were legally and firmly spliced. The Justice coughed dryly, the young man slipped a bill into his hand, and Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey were escorted to the bridal chamber. Mrs. Pauline Aubrey, nce Fuller, is 19 years of age, highly educated and a remarkably handsome woman. J. Matt Audrey, is 20 years of age. He is the son of the General Western Agent of the Merchants' Dispatch Fast Freight Line, Mr. J. M. Aubrey, who has been a resident of Chicago since 1876, when he left Milwaukce. He is well known here, and Congressman Isaac Van Schnack is one of his most intimate friends. Young Aubroy is employed in his father's office in Chicago. He is a handsome young fellow.

As near as can be learned the acquaintance between the L ide and groom began about three years ago. Justice Fuller, who was then plain Lawyer Fuller, lived with his family and daughters on Lake Avenue, only a short distance from the

by Himself.

Long ago, when New York was only half as big as it is now, I had an adventure. I was only fifteen years old, and, like all boys, I had a great deal of curiosity. My parents 'lived in the suburbs of the city, and not far away, not more than five good blocks, a new building had just been erected. It was on the summit of a low hill, over which the street now runs, but then it stood alone.

The builder was a very stern and dictatorial sort of man, and did not like boys, and though I once or twice tried to enter the building for the innocent purpose of admiring it, I was never permitted to do so.

I used to look at the building with envious eyes after it was locked and boarded up, and one day, when I saw workmen enter with a kettle of roof paint, I followed them, and, to my delight, was unnoticed. They went up strirs, and out upon the roof, of course, and I examined all the rooms.

At last I reached the upper floor, and entered some little rooms with skylights. In one of these was an old chair. and on that old chair was an old book. I picked it up and sat down. It was a story of adventure. I became absorbed in it, and forgot all else. As I finished the last sentence I was conscious of doing so only by means of straining my eyes. I saw that it was evening, and as I listened I heard no sound. The workmen had ceased their operations on the roof.

Not yet anxious, I felt the necessity of leaving the house at once; but this, to my alarm, I found much easier said than done. The door at the head of the stairs was locked or bolted on the outside. The door at the foot of the stairs that led to the roof was in the passage without. The six rooms communicating with the one I had entered were lighted only by skylights. Here was a dilemma. At first I tried to laugh over it, but as it grew dark I felt much more like crying. beat upon the door and shouted, quite uselessly.

If I could have broken a skylight and climbed out upon the roof, I would have done so, but even on the chair I was not half way to the ceiling.

All that I could do was to sit down and wait, or to vary this pastime by walking about, and waiting until some one came to open the door.

As it grew darker I grew more dismal. I grew hungry, too, being a healthy youth, with a good appetite. I parents, though no ten min utes' walk from the building, had no carried in his pocket, and Sam gave him idea of my whereabouts—that they a blow in the back and he dropped would be terrified at my absence. And then it came to me that perhaps 1 might even starve to death in that elegant building I had admired so much, and that my delivery from such a fate log." He spoke with his back to me, stoop ing over the body of the insensible man, whom I by this time knew to be the builder of the house, the crusty and suspicious person who had forbidden me an opportunity to admire his edifice. His attitude gave me an opportunity of escape.

A lad of fifteen has not yet come to his strength, but he can at that age outrun any full-grown man. I was particularly good at this erpreise, and having . previously removed my shoes with hope of some such chance, I made the attempt. Two bounds took me out of the room. I heard one say: "What's that?" the other answer, ""A cat; I thought there was one about me to-day when we were on the roof," as I fiew down stairs.

The outer door was closed when I reached it; but not locked. I did not pause to shut it, but flew up the lonely unbuilt street as no boy ever flew before, and found my father's house still lit by lamps and candles, my mother weeping in terror, and my father just returned home after a fruitless search for me.

It was past one o'clock and the home theory was that I had gone into the river to swim and had been drowned, and great was the joy at my return.

Of course my story created great excitement, and my father at once notified the police. A procession of some size took its way to the building on the hill, the door of which was found fastened as usual. It was, however, burst open.

I had accompanied my father and the other men who joined the little crowd, and it was I who, armed with a lantern, led the way to the spot where the poor landlord lay unconscious. He was bleeding from a terrible wound in the back of his head, and was quite insensible. Doubtless he must have been dead before morning, had not assistance arrived; but he was yet alive, and, being at once cared for by a doctor of the party, was borne to his home. where he recovered.

The roofers were arrested next day with their spoils yet about them, and one of them made full confession. He said that they had seen Mr. ---- receive a large sum of money in a real estate office, and had known that he did not deposit it anywhere. A talk about his imprudence in going about with so much upon his person ended in following him. He attended a meeting of Masons that night, and in returning crossed the lonely hill on which his new house stood. He paused and looked up at the windows.

"Why shouldn't we have that money?" said Jim. "We'll have it," said Sam.

Then Jim struck him with a knife he

When it became apparent that it was opposed by the Fullers, Miss Paulino declared that she would marry whom she pleased, and her father recognized her right to do as she pleased. Mrs. Fuller, however, vehemently opposed the match. .

About this time Lawyer Fuller was named as Chief Justice of the United About the first of last January Miss Pauline informed her mother that she was make a trip to Chicago. Mrs. Fuller opposed the trip, but the girl was firm in her determination, and a few days later she left. Since that time she has been in Chicago, visiting friends of the family.

The story of the elopement of the young pair is an interesting one and demonstrates that young Aubrey has cut his eye teeth. To begin with, he hired two detectives to shadow his affianced until they left Chicago. These two guardians he paid $8 a day a piece. His object was to learn if anyone was following them and to prevent the young lady from being rescued. It was early in the afternoon when he met Miss Fuller and Gunther's candy store was the trysting place.

They boarded a Milwaukee & St. Paul train at the Union Depot at 3:30 o'clock, and to make matters more interesting young Aubrey's father also left for Milwaukee on the Northwestern road; at least that is what the young bridegroom thought last evening while flushed with the success of his elopement. However, all efforts to locate the Senior Aubrey last evening were unavailing. Young Aubrey, to use his own language, "will rustle around a bit in Milwaukee before returning."

was quite in the hands of chance. This thought, coming as it did in the darkness and silence of the night, made me know for the first time in my life an emotion of real terror. However, after some little time I grew sleepy, and rolling my jacket under my head for a pillow, I fell into an uneasy sleep, from which I was aroused by a strange sound below. People were in the house, and they were ascending the stairs. Searching for me, was my first joyful idea. But in a moment that curious comprehension of things not yet made obvious to the senses, which we all share, caused me to understand that something mysterious was afoot, and that I had better wait before I manifested my presence.

Happily there was a hiding place at hand. In each of these rooms was an ornamental corner cupboard, with a glass upper half to the door. This. doubtless, was intended to display brica-brac, or china, but below the half was a space sufficient to conceal my person, and guided by the light of the moon, which had rissen while I slept, and which now made the ground glass skylights yellow, I took my place there. The next moment a chain fell, a key turned, the door in the little passage opened, then another door opened, and two men entered the room, bearing with them another, who seemed senseless. The slip of glass through which I could peep did not allow me to see this third man's face as they laid him on the floor; but I saw those of his bearers. They were those of the roofers I had seen enter the house.

Both were out of breath, and they looked very dark and evil in the moonlight.

"He seems safe," said one.

"He is safe," said the other; "so are we. If they find him here in his own building they'll think he came of his own accord, and hurt himself, or had apoplexy or something. But let's get away. The pocket-book is in his overcoat

"Here it is," said the other. "We'll take the money and leave the book.

And then came the counting of what seemed to me at that age an immense sum of money-an amount which was actually very large for a man to carry in his pockets—and an even division of it between the thieves.

I trembled in my hiding-place, for I knew that if I was discovered I also should be murdered. But I listened intently. One of the men called the other Jim, and he in turn was addressed as Sam. They resolved to leave the watch on their victim's person, lest its possession might betray them, and to take care to be sent at work next morning as if nothing had happened. There was not one touch of remorse in their manner, and the last words I heard the one called Jim utter were these:

a blow in the back and he dropped senseless.

They knew that he always carried the pass-keys of his building in his pockets, and the thought of hiding him on the upper floor seemed a bright one, and but that I had been shut into the house neither of the men could ever have been suspected. I was the only person who could give positive evidence against them.

As for Mr. ----, when he was well again he sent for me, and thanked me heartily. He told me, when I explained why I had entered the house, that if he had known that, I should have seen it, and welcome, but that his experience of boys was that they were generally up to mischief and not to be trusted. Then he asked me whether I had fixed on a profession, and if I had thought of being an architect.

The thought delighted me, and shortly I heard that Mr. ---- had interviewed my father on the subject.

In fact, he declared that I had saved his life, and that his conscience would not be clear of debt until he had done something for me. He placed me, therefore, with a master of architeoture, and after I was qualified to undertake orders on my own account. saw that I was never without work.

On his death he left me exactly the sum of money I had been the means of recovering from the thieves, and the very residence in which I now reside. Therefore you see that on the whole my adventure might be called a lucky one.-New York Ledger.

Bermuda Grass for Milk.

"A weed is a plant whose virtues have not yet been discovered." wrote Emerson. Bermuda grass is so nearly ineradicable and so terribly exasperating in the cotton-field that. although its virtues had been discovered, they were once hidden flom the eyes of Georgia planters. But the planters have now learned that this grass is the richest of cream foods. Butter-making can, thanks to it, be made to pay better than the raising of cotton on wornout lands, and the planters are now striving to save what they once sought to destroy. We select a few sentences here and there from a letter in Wilman's Express:

"Strange it is to see a gray-haired Southern planter coaxing the once despised Bermuda grass to live, and touchingly acknowledging his lifelong error in fighting his best friend, now the last hope of his old age."

"The introduction of that little butter machine the Jersey cow, has accomplished these results in a few years under untold disadvantages."

The New Hay Feed.

The Field and Farm has from time to time in the past year or two alluded to and given accounts of the experiments made on the Windsor farm and at other places with the mixing of green alfalfa and dry straw at the time of harvest for winter feed of horses and cattle. Enough experiments have been made to settle the question of its great value and practibility. It is a new departure that should attract the attention of every^{*} grain and alfalfa grower of the state. There is much in it. The great stacks of straw that now go to waste may, by this mixing method, be made valuable and be turned to good profit. The men who have tried it are positive that there is as much value in a mixed stack of alfalfa and straw as there is in straight alfalfa, and some even claim more. One secret of the combination is in holding and retaining all of the valuable qualities of the hay plant-the leaves, the blossoms

and the juices-without waste. Then there is a saving in labor in put ting up the alfalfa in this way. The hay is taken directly to the stack from the mower without waiting to cure, and without teddering or handling in the process of drying in the field, and with stems without losing off in handling. It ters in with the green hay, it comes out as one and is all consumed alike with A farmer from Nevada who has had experience, says this of the new feed departure:

"I have been disposing of my straw profitably in this way for many years, but I find more satisfactory results from the jumbling process, which is about as easily accomplished as in layers. It is done by unloading the green alfalfa, newly mown, so near the straw, either in the barn or in the stack so that while one is unloading the alfalfa, another is pitching the straw on the new stack or pile. I have put up alfalfa in this way with complete success that was not only green, but wet, adding a little more straw to the mixture. In this way I also save the blossoms, leaves and seed, that otherwise mostly are lost in the fields; and the straw is such a good factor in curing the hay mixed in this way, that I never wait for good weather, but cut when I am ready. I never bale any up in this way, for I suppose it would not soll readily, but for winter feeding and home use I prefer it to that put up in the ordinary way, as it cures soft in the straw, and retains all its virtues that are not absorbed in the straw. I consider straw disposed of in this way worth more than hay."-Field and Farm.

Notice is hereby given that, whereas, Maddox and Van Slyke, a firm compos-ed of J. M. Maddox of Jack county, Texas, and J. S. Van Slyke of Dallas county, Texas, and J. M. Maddox and J. S. Van Slyke individually by their cer-tain instrument in writing bearing date the 25th day of August, 1887, and on that date executed and delivered to us, Schneider and Davis, a firm composed of Jules E. Schneider and Alfred Davis of Dallas county, Texas, did grant, bargain, sell and convey unto us said Schneider and Davis, all and singular, the goods and chattels hereinafter described, upon the conditions and for the purposes men tioned, as follows, viz:--

1st. For the purpose of better secur-ing us, Schneider and Davis, or other holders, in the prompt payment by said Maddox and Van Slyke of a "sertain prommissory note for the sum of $5004, 12 made and executed by Maddox and Van Slyke, bearing date the 6th day of August, 1887, and payable to the order of us Schneider and Davis, at our office in Dallas, Texas, twelve months after date thereof, with interest from said date until paid, at rate of 12 per cent. per an-num, with all costs of collection, and 10 per cent. additional if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection.

2d. Also, for the purpose of better in demnifying, protecting and holding harmless Jules E. Schneider from loss or process of drying in the field, and with no risk of rain or dews to bleach it. The leaves and the blossoms stay upon the ing date the 24th day of June, 1887, and payable four months after said date, matters but little as we understand it, National Bank of Dallas, Texas, at the how the two articles of feed are mixed in the stack, so that the bright straw enannum until paid, and if not paid at ma-turity, and collected by an attorney or by legal proceedings, an additional sum relish by the hungry brutes in winter. of 10 per cent, on the amount of said note as attorney's fees; said note being exe-cuted by said Maddox and Van Slyke and Jules E. Schneider, by A. Davis, agent, said Jules E. Schneider being only surety thereon. And, whereas, by the terms of said instrument in writing afore said, it is provided that in case of default made in the payment of either of said prommissory notes aforesaid, or the interest thereon, or any part of said notes according to the tenor and effect there of, or if the said chattels should be at tached or seized under any legal process or be claimed by any other person or persons, or if said Maddox and Van Slyke should sell or attempt to sell or remove, or attempt to remove said chat tels or any part of them from their present range, without authority or per-mission in writing, from us said Schnei-der and Davis, then it should be lawful, and said we, Schneider and Davis, or either of us, or our assigns, agent or agents or attorney, should be authorized, and were thereby authorized and em powered to take immediate and full pos-session of the whole of said goods and chattels, and sell the same for the best price we or they can obtain at public sale, at either the court house door in Lincoln, in said county of Lincoln, or at a public place in the town of Roswell, or town of Seven Rivers, in said county of Lincoln, in the territory of New Mexico, after having first given twenty days no-tice of the time and place of sale, by written or printed hand bills posted in four public places in the precinct in which the property is to be sold, at least twenty days before the day of sale, and by publication in some newspaper print- \mathbf{E} ed in said Lincoln county, at least twenty days before the day of sale; and out of now held by a patent from the United the moneys arising from said sale, we should first pay said notes or the balances due thereon, and all the interest and the costs and expenses of sale, including an attorney's fee of 10 per cent. of the amount of money realized from said sale, and the remainder, if any, should be paid to said Maddox and Van Slyke, or their assigns. And, whereas, default has been wholly made in the payment of all and of every part or portion of both of said prommissory notes aforesaid, and all interest thereon; and, whereas, we, said Schneider and Davis, are still the legal owners and holders of said prommissory note, first above described, and are justly entitled to payment of the same, with all interest there on, now amounting in the aggregate to the sum of Five Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-nine dollars. And, whereas, said Jules E. Schneider, has been compelled to pay and has paid said prommissory note secondly above de scribed, and has thereby been damnified, and has suffered loss in the amount of said prommissory note, with interest thereon, according to the tenor and ef-fect thereof, and is now justly entitled to payment of his said damages, now amounting in the aggregate to the sum of Six Thousand Three Hundred and Seventy dollars and seventy-five cents. Now, therefore, by reason of the promises, and by virtue of the power in us vested, by the terms of said instrument of writing aforesaid, we, said Schneider and Davis, by our agent and attorney in fact, Wm. P. Ellison, of Dallas county, Texas, thereunto by us duly authorized in writing, will, on the 3d day of May, 1889, at the front door of the store of Poe, Lea and Cosgrove in Roswell, New Mexico, between lawful hours, proceed to sell at public outcry, to the highest bidder for cash in hand to us paid, the following goods and chattels, being the same conveyed, as aforesaid, viz: All that stock of cattle owned by said Maddox and Van Slyke, on the 25th day of August, 1887, and being about 2500 head, branded \bigvee_{Λ} N on left side and ear marked \gg and all the horses, owned by said Maddox and Van Slyke, on said 25th day of August, 1887, numpilgrim on the old Santa Fe trail across the then almost boundless stretch of bering about sixty head, branded V_{Λ} N on left hip; all of said property being on the 25th day of August, 1887, situate and then ranging in the southern part of Lincoln county, New Mexico, and in ad-joining counties in New Mexico and in Fexas; and after said sale we will make to the purchaser or purchasers thereof a conveyance of the property so sold, and the proceeds of said sale, we will ap-ply as provided in said instrument in writing aforesaid, which said instrument is now on file in the office of the Probate Clerk and Recorder of Deeds at Lincoln, Lincoln county, New Mexico. Witness our hand this 1st day of March, 1889. SCHNEIDER & DAVIS. John Wanamaker is not inflated with false pride because of his high position. He still advertises in that generous and judicious style which has been largely instrumental in helping him to his present eminence. Young men who desire to reach the top shelf should commence to advertise-in their youth and keep it up until the going down of life's sun.

subtle alchemy known only to her kind she has transmuted the gold of southern sunshine through her butter into the farmer's pocket-book."

And the editor, commenting, speaks of "the 'pest' of the State, 'Bermuda grass,' which the cotton planters have fought as their bitterest enemy for years, not knowing that the missing link between it and wealth was the Jersey cow.

"It is the child of summer and a product of the tropics. It riots in the sun, droops in the shade and dies at the touch of frost. * * * Under the fiercest downpouring solar heat it will cover a desert with an emerald sheen, where the whole family of civilized grasses, timothy, redtop or clover would wither or perish."

But even this grass, it is claimed, cannot endure asummer on our dry plains, although it is common for pasturage here on damp soils. Millet, however, a Perris gentleman says, can stand the closest of browsing through the dryest of summers, and he says he knows because he has tried it himself.

A Novel Incubator.

In certain districts of France poultry breeders, instead of resorting to artificial incubators, use young turkey hens. 'Twenty-five hens' eggs are placed under each turkey. When it is desired that the turkey hen shall commence to sit, be it January or June, she is placed in a suitable box almost entirely covered by a board, and some dummy eggs are put under her. She is generally kept in the dark. She soon takes to the dummy eggs, which are then removed, and twenty-five fowls' eggs are placed beneath her. She is taken off the eggs once a day to feed, and carefully replaced, not on the eggs, but in front of them, and she then, after the manner of turkeys, carefully hooks them underneath her with her beak. When the chickens are hatched they are removed from under her, to be sold or sent off at once, or to be brought up by another turkey hen which is, perhaps, an indifferent sitter, and which, in lieu of sitting, has from eighty to one hundred chicks given her to bring up.

Irrigation by Windmills.

It is estimated by those who have a good windmill, suitably located to catch the ordinary breezes of this valley, will raise enough water to irrigate five acres of land. This probably means with suf ficient reservoir capacity provided to enable one to accumulate water for some time in advance of the dates when it will be needed. Five acres on the plains either east or west of here, planted to almost any kind of stone fruit or berries, or figs, or almonds, will yield the owner a better revenue than eighty acres of unirrigated land planted to wheat or barley. If five acres are not enough, plant eight or ten, and then either erect another windmill or hitch the old mare to a horse power and let one of the children drive her. There ought to be at least a thousand windmills or horse powers put in use 'in this county this summer.

States, reads like a romance. These originally belonged to the tribes of the Aztec faith, then to Spain, and lastly the Republic of Mexico, which republic some years prior to the conquest of the country by the United States, granted the same, for the purpose of settlement, to two of its citizens, by name Carlos Beaubien and Guadalupe Miranda, the former being one of those French voyagers, who, in the early days of the west, were the hardy and adventurous agents of the American fur company.

An associate of these men was Lucien B. Maxwell, who also came west from Illinois in the employ of this fur company. He speedily came to the front as the peer of such men as Kit Carson, and bore the reputation of an unerring guide. and withal a shrewd business man. After returning with Kit Carson from a trip guiding J. C. Fremont over prairie and mountain to California, Maxwell settled down to ranch life, married a daughter of Beaubien, and prepared to enjoy life as a ranchero, with the hope of providing a competency for his family. In a few years after the death of Beaubien, he succeeded in purchasing the interests of Miranda, and the remaining heirs of Beaubien, and thus became the largest land owner in the United States. In 1860 the congress of the United States confirmed the title to the grant, and in 1879 the government issued a patent to it, which was confirmed by a decision of the supreme court of the United States, April 1887. Maxwell was a most generous man and his home portals were always open to the wayfaring

GIVE EXPRESS NOTICE.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to con-tinue their subscription.

UNTIL ARBEARAGES ARE PAID. 2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

YOU ARE RESPONSIBLE UNTIL YOU PAY UP. 3. If subscribers neglector refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are di-rected, they are responsible until they have set-tled their bills, and ordered them discontinued.

REMOVING.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publishers, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. INTENTIONAL FRAUD.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facia evidence of intentional fraud.

AND FINALLY.

6. If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice to the publisher, at the end of their time, if they do not wish to continue taking it; otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it on and the subscribers will be responsible until an express notice, with payment of all arrears, is sent to the publisher.

THE LATEST POSTAL LAW. THE TATEST FOSTAL LAW. The latest postal law decision is to the effect that publishers of newspapers can, under the law, arrest any man for fraud who takes a paper and refuses to pay for it. Under this law it is a dan-gerons trick for a man to allow his subscription account to run on from six months to a year and a half unpaid, and then toll the postmaster to mark it "refused," or send the editor a postal card to discontinue the paper.

VERY GOOD.

We Will Take Rock Island, White Oaks, And All.

The Pecos Valley REGISTER seriously nisunderstands the position of the Tribune in its recent criticism about the Great Rock Island road. As now surveyed, it gives us a straight, direct line to Chicago, making the route several hundred miles shorter than any other road, which necessarily enables it to carry our freight proportionately that much cheaper. We do not want it to deviate its line, nor do we think the inducement can be made for so doing, so much out of the way as to go around by White Oaks. But we still insist "it looks as though this monster was not only going to take in El Paso, but Albuquerque, Eagle Pass and Laredo as well."

It is a "monster" corporation-one of the most powerful in the world-and while El Paso will be the terminus of its main line, or perhaps better, where it will cross the boundary line into Mexico, yet it will not be content with a single chance, but like it has done elsewhere, will extend its arms to every rich source of commerce within its grasp. Those were the pointers we suggested and so misunderstood by the REGISTER. The White Oaks line from here might possibly become one of them, but we do not for a moment expect the trunk line of the Rock Island to thus far meander out of its way. Not only this, but we realize as much as the REGISTER the vast importance this road will be to our commercial interests to which the White Oaks is small in comparison, but the latter is exclusively a home institution, and an object of more exclusive attention.

Now we do not think we are neglectful of the importance of the Rock Island, any more than that road is of the wealth of this country which they are heading to assist in developing. That road will come. There is no use getting nervous or losing sleep about it; and it will take the most direct practical route, too. El Paso nor any other town can change its course. Consequently our friends abroad must excuse the desire of the Tribune to devote its space to the immediate interests and institutions of El Paso, its home and field for practical work and usefulness.-El Paso Tribune.

Discovery of the Pecos Country.

The Lower Pecos valley in the eastern part of New Mexico, to which so many incoming agricultural pilgrims are now leaves, he is the kind of men we like to old as any other portion of the United States. The first white man that over set foot upon the soil of the Pecos valley was Cabeza de Vaca, who passed up the Rio Grande river towards New Mexico about 1535. In relating the adventures of his wonderful trip, he says in his diary: "The party now arrived at a

PARALLEL LINES.

A railroad man to whom we showed hem said, "To me those four lines epresent a double-track railway." A doctor replied to the same intergatory, "The lines are to me the arge arteries and veins lying alongide each other in the human body." As will be observed the same lines to either gentleman suggested different lines of thought, as both looked at them through eyes accustomed to see only that which for the most part occupied their attention. To the writer both answers put an old truth in a fresh and original light.

As every intelligent man or woman knows, the blood of every living person flows with almost railroad speed through the arteries, forced by that wonderful engine. the heart. From the arteries it is side-tracked through the capilliaries and veins, and every drop of blood goes through the kidneys for purification no less than 2,500 times every twenty-four hours. If the kidneys be diseased the impurities of the blood containing the worn-out tissues. and deleterious acids are not drawn out or excreted as nature intended, but continually pass and repass through every fiber of the system, carrving death and decay with every pulsation. Unless remedied the heart becomes weakened, the lungs trying to do double work break down, the liver becomes congested, the stomach refuses to digest food and the result is a general break down.

WhyP

Because the kidneys, the sewers of the system, are foul and stopped up, and the entire blood becomes nothing more nor less than sewage.

Now is it not criminal, nay, suicidal, o allow such a state of thiugs to coninue when a simple remedy is within your reach, known for a certainty to lo as represented, which will open the closed pipes of the kidneys, allow the hifete matter to escape, relieve the overworked heart, lungs and liver, cause a healthy appetite, put the bloom of health in your check, the dove of hope in your breast and the light of life in your eye?

Cliff Dwellers. From the Journal of Commerce.

One of the most attractive portiona of Colorado, if not in the entire west. is that part of the State in which are found the cliff dwellings of a long ex tinct race. The district in which these ruins are located covers an area of nearly six thousand square miles, chiefly in Colorado, but which includes narrow belts in the adjacent territories of New Mexico, Utah and Arizona.

The ruins of this region, like most others of the extreme west and south, are the remnants in a great measure of stone structures. It is evident, however, that a great portion of the villages and dwellings of the lowlands which comprise this district have been of material other than stone, frequently, doubtless, of rubble and adobe combined. The cliff houses conform in shape to the floor of the niche or shell on which they are built. They are of firm, neat masonry, and the manner in which they are attached or cemented to the cliffs is simply marvellous. Their construction has cost a great deal of labor, the rock and mortar of which they are built having been brought hundreds of feet up the most precipitous places. They have a much more modern look than the valley and cave remains, and are probably in general more recent, belonging rather to the close than to the earlier parts of a long period of occupation.

It seems probable that a rich reward awaits the fortunate archæologist who shall be able to thoroughly investigate the historical records that lie buried in the masses of ruins, the unexplored caves, and the still mysterious burial places of the northwest. But it is quite improbable that any certain light will ever be thrown on the origin of this curious race which has just been described, or their history.

A Great Mine.

From the Mining Industry. If there is a silver mine in the United States possessing more valuable known reserves in ore than the A. Y. and Minnie of Leadville, we have yet to hear of it. It is customary to do great talking without giving figures to back up the statements. Faith generally in these cases supplies the place of actual measurements and the mathematics of the case seldom prove that faith was well founded. In the case of these mines measurements are given. The body in the main ore chute is reported by several who have personal knowledge of the property, to be blocked out 150 by 150 feet, and to be 70 feet thick, averaging $100 per ton. This would give a gross value of about $17,000,000, and a net value of over $10,000,000. Three other great chutes from 70 to 80 feet wide with undetermined thickness are also proven to exist. In any other place except Colorado, where these kind of things are accepted as expected and not wonderful, such a body of ore
