As I See It

BY LLOYD P. BLOODWORTH

Thirty-seven years ago next Saturday President Taft signed the resolution admitting New Mexico as a state of the Union.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the brave men and holy women who tolled here in those early days to lay the foundation for the building of our state.

The NEWS this week pays tribute to all of those who had their part in the development of New Mexico. To those who for more than 60 years fought for statehood and to those from the first governor, the Honorable William C. McDonald of Lincoln County, on down to the present administration.

Our highway program should be well planned. It is necessary to have good roads along our main arteries, but at the same time we should not neglect our secondary roads.

We must take care of our aged people and the underprivileged children. Many of the aged are among those who labored so long and unselfishly in the early days of our state's life.

What does a hospital mean to you? It means continuous security in the knowledge that your loved ones will have adequate medical attention at all times.

It means that you—as a resident—will see the Ruidoso-Hondo Valley move ahead one more step in our desire to make this a vital, growing community of good neighbors.

It means your protection of health . . . and it means the fulfillment of your prayers in those moments when seconds count so vitally.

Central Bar Has New Coat

The Central Bar and Grill in Ruidoso, Ted Johnson and Tommy Hicks, have announced the purchase of a new coat as their entry in the 1949 Central Bar Futurity which race is held in May each year at the Hollywood Track.

The coat, a yearling, is a half brother to "Pelican," who set a world's record on the track at Tucson, Arizona, and won the 3-8 mile at Silver City this year.

Training for next year will start soon with Kenneth Gaines in charge. He is also trainer for Tom Roden Stables in Odessa, Texas. (Roden owns the famous Miss Pinky, Joe Mac and others) and he also trained "Miss Chester" for Ben Jenkins of Odessa.

Gov. William C. McDonald Served Lincoln County and New Mexico For 38 Years

GOV. WILLIAM C. McDONALD BORN 1858 — DIED 1918.

For many years New Mexico fought a battle for statehood. When this battle was finally won the many problems of a new state were to be faced.

Jane Spencer Murrier, of Carrizozo, N. M., says of her grandfather, William C. McDonald, "I remember him as a very stern, just, but kind grandfather . . . he was a Scotsman . . . blue eyes and sandy hair . . . what little he had."

William C. McDonald, the first governor of the state of New Mexico, was a resident of Lincoln County for thirty-eight years.

McDonald was born July 25, 1858 at Jacksonville, N. Y., the son of John and Lydia Marshall (Bigg) McDonald. He was educated in the public schools of Herkimer County, N. Y., Cazenovia Seminary in that same state, and taught school while he was working for a formal education.

In the spring of 1880, when he was twenty-two years old, he said goodbye to friends and family and left for the West.

His first stop after crossing the Mississippi River was in Fort Scott, Kansas. There were people living there whom he had known in the East and they could tell him of the new country.

He was admitted to the bar as a full fledged lawyer. In Fort Scott he was only marking time, waiting for his "opportunity" to present itself.

His capital was very limited. (Continued On Page Four)

V.F.W. Sponsors Dance August 27

The Veterans of Foreign War group of Ruidoso will sponsor a benefit dance at the Navajo Club Friday night, August 27th. The time is 8:30 p. m.

This will be a western dance. Everyone is invited.

School Lunch Rooms Open August 24th

Mrs. Jim Hale, supervisor for the three lunch rooms in the Ruidoso-Stetson District, has announced the lunch rooms will be open in all three schools Tuesday, August 24th, the first full day of classes.

New refrigerators have been purchased for both of the grade school lunch rooms. An equipment in the high school lunch room will be new. New silverware and water glasses have been put in the Stetson lunch room.

At the grade schools the children will pay in advance by the week or month to their teachers or the Parent-Teachers Association representative in their school. With the shortage of funds at the beginning of school all parents are urged to send the money to school by the children the first day.

The grade school will have the same program of a hot plate lunch as they have in the past, but higher prices will make the lowest possible price for this plate 25c.

The same menu will be served. (Continued On Page Eight)

Fascinating History Of State Began 460 Years Ago

By MARY NELL TAEGER

With the discovery of the American continent in 1492 by Christopher Columbus who was serving her honor, Queen Isabella of Spain, the history of America begins.

For some reason unknown to any man, Columbus' discoveries below the Panama Canal Zone led men across that country to the West and then into the Southwestern part of the centuries old but newly found land.

After his return to Spain and the tales were told of the new country, young and courageous men, the type of men who have built the world, wanted to start exploration.

Tales of Gold Told The first expedition to have any bearing on what we now know as the state of New Mexico was in 1527. In that year Cabeza de Vaca crossed the continent and traveling towards the West heard of the Red Man, his Pueblo dwellings and untold riches.

In 1539, Friar Marcos De Niza and a negro companion, Estevanico, started out from Mexico City and penetrated into the Zuni country of the new land.

They had come, men, women and children, on a lonely journey across deserts, mountains, and rivers to an unknown fate.

Ida Bloodworth Named Head Of Hospital Finance Group

Ruidoso's campaign for a new hospital moved into high gear this week with the appointment by the Board of Trustees of a Finance Committee Chairman to raise $15,000 necessary to build the needed institution.

Mrs. Ida H. Bloodworth was appointed to head the Finance Committee. Other committee members will be named later.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mrs. Bloodworth asked that members of the recently-appointed Planning Board of the Village of Ruidoso act as the hub around which the fund-raising campaign will be conducted.

The vigorous support of Planning Board members and the assistance of every person in the surrounding communities and the Hondo Valley is needed to put across this worth-while project," Mrs. Bloodworth said.

Planning Board members are Harlan Williams, president; Raymond Buckner, Harry Fairbanks, W. P. Cook and James Gayden. An additional member will be named soon to replace Mrs. Ezell Clarke, who has resigned.

This appointment will be made by the Board of Trustees of Ruidoso.

November 1, 1948, is the deadline to raise the $15,000 necessary to complete the project. The money must be raised through

In the enemy territory, Marcos pushed on until he reached the high country. From this height his imagination played weird tricks on him. He knew he saw the "Seven Cities of Cibola," the name given the first Indian pueblos visited by the Spanish.

Without approaching the pueblos, Friar Marcos returned to Mexico with further tales of the wealth lying there to be claimed by the Spanish throne.

The next year, Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, was commissioned by the Viceroy of Mexico, of which outpost Coronado had been governor for three years, to take an expedition for exploration into the land of mystery.

Coronado captured the village of Hawiliton where Estevanico had been killed the year before. In 1542 the remaining explorers returned to Mexico after reaching into the country now part of northeastern Kansas.

Although Coronado's expeditions were considered failures at the time, they laid the foundation for those in later years that claimed the new country for Spain.

Chamuscado visited New Mexico in 1581 and left behind three Franciscans who felt their part in the conquest was to carry the Christian word to the Red Men.

All three of this first group were soon killed by the Indians, but others followed.

In 1582, Antonio de Espejo, a Spanish explorer, left San Bartolomea Valley in Mexico with a prospecting party and visited all of the principal pueblos.

His group explored much more extensively than any before them had and they returned to Mexico with tangible reports and actual proof of gold ore at various points they had touched.

This stimulated new interest and led to the final conquest of the new land by Juane de Onate a few years later.

In 1595, Onate entered into a contract with the Viceroy for conquest and settlement of the New Mexico. The next year he led an expedition from Mexico City.

In April of 1598, the colonists, over 400 men and many of them with their families, reached the Rio Grande and took possession of the new land in the name of the King of Spain.

GEORGE CURRY 1862-1947

George Curry, who passed away Thanksgiving Day, 1947 had come back to Lincoln county to live the rest of his life when he became ill.

The last Territorial Governor of New Mexico, Curry devoted his life from the time he came from Louisiana at the age of 18 until he died at the age of 85 to progress for his chosen land.

Curry held offices here in Lincoln county until the time of the Spanish American war, when at Teddy Roosevelt's request he joined the Rough Riders. After the war he was sent to the Philippines where he served as chief of police at Manila. Following this post he held office as governor of the Middle Islands for several years.

In 1907 he was recalled to the United States and appointed Territorial Governor of New Mexico by his friend Theodore Roosevelt. From 1911 through 1913 Curry served as New Mexico congressman and later was appointed to the United States Mexico boundary service.

He always had many friends, not just in New Mexico but throughout the United States and has been called "soldier, statesman and empire builder."

The last appointment in a long and colorful life of service to his state came in 1945 when Gov. John J. Dempsey named him state historian in keeping with a bill passed by state legislature establishing this post. At the time of his death he was acting as curator of the Lincoln County museum in Lincoln, back in the town which was his first and true New Mexico home. In connection with this work he was writing a book "Memoirs of George Curry, Statesman and Soldier," which was almost ready for publication at the time of his death.

He lived life as a tremendous challenge . . . and George Curry accepted every challenge in his life.

Could I go to school?

You could go to the kind of school the Communists tell you to, and nowhere else. You could go as long as they let you and no longer.

Could I own my own home under Communism?

No. Under Communism, all real estate in the city as well as the country belongs to the government, which is in turn run by the Communists. Your living quarters would be assigned to you, and you would pay rent as ordered.

Could I belong to a church?

In Russia, the Communists have for thirty years tried every way they could to destroy religion. Having failed that, they are now trying to USE religion from the inside and the same Party strategy is now operating in the United States of America.

Could I have friends of my own choice as I do now?

No, except those approved by the Communists in charge of your life from cradle to grave.

Doesn't Communism promise poor people a better life?

Communist politicians all over the world try in every way to break down nations as they are, hoping that in the confusion they will be able to seize control. Promising more than you can deliver is an old trick in the history of the human race. Compare Communism's promises with Communism's performances in countries where it has come to power.

Why shouldn't I turn Communist?

You know what the United States is like today. If you want it exactly the opposite, you should turn Communist. But before you do, remember you will lose your independence, your property, and your freedom of mind.

Are meetings public like those of ordinary political parties?

No, meetings are secret and at secret addresses. Records are all secret and in code. Public demonstrations are held at regular periods.

How can a Communist be identified?

It is easy. Ask him to name ten things wrong with the United States. Then ask him to name two things wrong with Russia.

His answers will show him up even to a child.

Communists will denounce the President of the United States but they will never denounce Stalin.

Onate, with 30 men down the Colorado River to California, a trip still incredible to all who have tried to repeat it and failed. The path of the Colorado River today is lined with skeletons and remains of equipment of those who unsuccessfully took this water route to the West Coast.

In 1805, Onate and his men returned to New Mexico and founded a capitol for the vast domain they had claimed for the Spanish government, called "La Villa Real de Santa Fe de San Francisco de Asisi," or "The Royal City of the Holy Faith of San Francisco de Asisi." The name was shortened to Santa Fe.

Until 1508, Onate ruled as governor of the new and royal city. (The only city in the United States to ever be under the rule of a monarch.)

Following complete conquest, the Royal City was ruled by the laws of Spain. The city was planned according to the needs of the times and in keeping with traditions of the old country. A thick-walled adobe building was erected, using the ancient building materials of the Pueblos, wood and earth, and was beautifully decorated with ironwork, silverwork, elaborate door knobs and locks, ceramics, leather and tile in keeping with the arts of Spain.

Building Has Long History Today this building is known as the Palace of Governors and there is no other building in the United States which can compare with the history written in its story.

Men have walked through the doors for almost 250 years. Conferences have been held that have changed the history of the state. Wars have been made to make war and to make peace. Plots uncovered have ended in violence and bloodshed. Flags have waved from its towers of the Spaniards, of the Indians, of the Mexican Republic, of the Confederacy and of the United States.

Today the flag of New Mexico and the flag of the Nation are in perfect accord as they are raised in the morning and lowered at night. This building today houses the State Museum, the School of American Research, the Santa Fe Library Extension Service, and the New Mexico Historical Society.

From 1605 until 1690, the Spaniard reigned over the new land from the adobe town of Santa Fe, then a fortress in the mountains. Then, suddenly, without warning, the Pueblo Indians rebelled. Pope, an Indian medicine man, incited the war for independence by slowly but surely feeding his own rebellious spirit to the people who had obeyed the rule of his station in the tribe for thousands of years. He felt justified in his beliefs that bending to Spanish rule meant the surrender of their tribal institutions and civilization. Violent, Bloody War They waged a vicious, bloody, ruthless war against the whole Southwest to rid their land of the white invader and destroy every sign of Christian faith and Spanish power.

The battle for freedom raged for almost 10 years. The famous siege of Santa Fe, rarely read about but important in the history of the state, ended with the retreat from Santa Fe of the Spanish and led the Indians to believe they had won the long fight.

The Spanish people were driven to seek protection within the walls of the Palace and the compounds surrounding it. Trapped in the fortress with all of their personal belongings, they fought until such time as their enemy cut off all the water supply and the battle became one of hunger and thirst and the human desire for survival.

The siege ended with complete defeat of the Spanish colonists. Men, seeing all efforts of the past years lost, dragged jagged feet over dusty trails, ever looking back and seeing visions of the empire they had planned crumbling into dust that glittered as the adobe cliff dwellings had as if they were gold, the thing that had lured them to the new Mexico.

Women, with children on every hand, babies in arms, or in various stages of pregnancy (for they had thought to build homes and families in the new country) gritted their teeth, swallowing the lumps in the dry harsh throats, wearing the remainder of their clothing, and making every effort to help keep the livestock left, started the journey from Santa Fe.

Journey of Death From Santa Fe over the hundreds of miles of desert country, the only passable path from north to south, they were on the waterless Jornada del Muerto (Journey of Death.) Physical death seemed insignificant next to the death of dreams and plans that had brought them the hundreds of miles into a new country.

By 1700, Don Diego de Vargas Zapata Lujan Ponce de Leon subdued the Indians and reconquered Santa Fe. In 1692, he accomplished submission of the Pueblo tribes who had been occupying the capitol and had made it a fortified pueblo but failed to recognize that Spanish authority ruled supreme.

wafers full of vengeance and lust for freedom.

Makes Procession Vow At this time de Vargas made a vow to the Virgin Mary that each year after 1693 there would be an annual procession in her honor to the chapel standing on the spot of earth where he took possession of Santa Fe on his entry into that city in 1692.

The famous Santa Fe Fiesta held each September by the Catholic people of that area and all of New Mexico many of whom are descendants of the old Spanish families who came into this vow.

For the next hundred years or more Mexico and New Mexico were ruled by Spain. Certain rules and restrictions regarding trade, established the people who had established the colonies felt they deserved, started discontent. The discontent, responsible for a free United States today and the freedom of any other democracy or country rose in the hearts and minds of the people in the whole of the two Mexicos, old and new.

Mexico accomplished a successful revolution in 1821 and became an independent country. At the same time the break with Spain meant that the New Mexico would be a province of the old Mexico then legalized Santa Fe trade with America and the rest of New Mexico which had been going on since the Louisiana Purchase.

Although New Mexico was claimed first by Spain and then by Mexico, there was never a great amount of aid from either country to meet governmental expenses and responsibilities in New Mexico. This continued to create strife, as more and more settlers coming in wanted freedom from any country.

Caravans Move In Although settlers dropped off along the way to Santa Fe as they traveled the El Camino Real (the King's Highway) into a new country, Santa Fe was the center of activity and origin of missions for the Indians.

From Chihuahua, and other parts of Mexico, men, women and children, filled with the spirit of adventure and a desire for a new opportunity in a new country, came in caravans on burros and on foot to Santa Fe. Their destination was La Fonda, the Inn at the end of the road.

Then as today Santa Fe was a strange mixture of many people and their many cultures; when as today Santa Fe was a gay city with bar rooms, ballers, sonoras in black lace shawls, soldiers in uniform, Indians in their blankets and Mexican men in their sombreros, all trodding the narrow, winding streets of the picturesque town.

This was the background for the next step in the history of the country and its people. When Texas established its independence from Mexico, it claimed the Rio Grande as its boundary. At the outbreak of the Mexican War, Colonel S. W. Kearney, with little resistance, on August 18, 1846, ran up the American flag over the Palace of Governors, ending Mexican sovereignty. He ran into some rebels and there were several bloody fights ending in the assassination of Governor Bent at Taos, but this was quickly ended.

Peace was established and by 1848 Kearney had taken for the United States the whole of the territory which now includes New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado. This area was officially established as the Territory of New Mexico in 1850. In 1853 this expanse of land was increased by the Gadsden Purchase, which added the Mesilla Valley to the territory. The government felt it necessary to have this valley as a future railroad route to the West Coast.

Confederate Army Occupies By this time there were a few pioneers venturing into the area from the eastern part of the continent to establish cattle ranches, and other holdings. But not until after the early 1860's did many start coming to the Territory of New Mexico.

In 1861, soldiers of the Confederate Army during the Civil War under the command of Baylor and Sibley invaded Albuquerque and Santa Fe and succeeded in establishing an occupation. But they were soon defeated and they withdrew from New Mexico early in 1862 when the Territory was restored to the Union.

After the Civil War, Santa Fe, which had been serving as a trading center for nearly 200 years, began commerce with the United States. For the first time many a wagon load of goods in the Plaza of Santa Fe, which had long served as the market place of the Spanish and Indians.

They had traveled the Santa Fe Trail from the east coast over the thousands of miles of country. Mountains, deserts, grasslands and hilly country all lay between them and city of fabulous tales, Santa Fe. Now that this was a new frontier for pioneers. And their first destination with few exceptions was the rich city.

Here they could trade good staple manufactured goods piled high in Yankee warehouses for the silver, turquoise, gold and wool, the hand-tanned leathers and tanned buckskin and the beautiful furs of a new country.

Ranches Established Many came to look and stayed to live. For the next 10 years cattle kings saw New Mexico as their kingdom. Huge ranches were established and finest of cattle and sheep were soon thriving on the open range. This opened the era of the pioneer in New Mexico.

The fight for land, water and cattle began. There were men whose greed caused rustling and stealing, there were men who would fight to the death over a water hole and there were men who took what they wanted, if it meant killing and bloodshed.

There were also those fair and square men who wanted what they needed. They felt everyone had equal rights to the new and fertile country. And these men won out on the ranges of New Mexico and have sons and grandsons and great-grandsons today running ranches established almost 100 years ago.

In 1879 the first railroad came to New Mexico and this changed the economic status of the territory overnight. This opened up new possibilities, for men had had knowledge for almost two hundred years of mineral resources in the hills and mountains of the area. Transportation by rail was the key to development of these resources.

Mining became as important as cattle. Mines were opened up over the entire state, some on the strength of the railroad coming near and some of those places where people flocked seeking "mineral riches" lie as ghost towns today, for the railroad passed them by.

New Mexico Admitted Finally on August 21, 1911, President Taft signed the resolution admitting New Mexico as a state of the Union. This followed various constitutional conventions, and after adoption of a constitution by popular vote and its ratification by Congress elections were held. Thirty-five years ago, Saturday, August 21, 1913, William C. McDonald, a resident of Lincoln County, was inaugurated governor.

The history of New Mexico from that day to this is much better known. She, as a fairly new state, has had trials and tribulations, victories and defeats. The state is so young, there have been 18 governors since 1911; there were almost 90 before New Mexico became a state.

Through it all New Mexico has remained the "Land of Enchantment" for those fortunate human beings who call it home. Through the years New Mexico has kept pace with progress in all ways. Roads, public schools, state colleges, progressive government, public health, and all of the other essentials to the machine of an efficient state government. The charm of days gone by has been retained.

Typical Architecture The cloak of the romantic past are characteristics of the average New Mexican. Progress is imminent, and everyone wants it. But in personal living, today is the important... tomorrow will take care of itself.

There are still lots of towns with piazzas, tree lined streets, quaint old bars and dance halls, where in the afternoon and on Saturday the Indians, Spanish speaking people, and those of some Anglo strain mingle with no evidence of any need to hurry. Throughout the state there are trading posts and settlements where the Indians still congregate to trade their jewelry and other hand crafts to the man with the money in his pocket and red flour, sugar, Pinto beans, and flour chile on his shelves.

In those same mountains rivers and streams have their origin. They go tumbling or rippling, depending on their size, down the mountains, into the grazing lands, across the deserts to join the Rio Grande or the Pecos and flow on out to the sea. Certain amounts of the water from rains, snow, springs are taken from the source to irrigate the lands, to raise food for the people in the towns and villages along its path.

There are still shining iridescent trout, and bass, and crappie in these streams and the lakes they form and then go on through, fish that have been a source of food and sport for men from the beginning of time. Mingling of Cultures.

The natural beauty of the land of New Mexico has made possible a compatible mingling of cultures and civilization. Those men and women who settled here, and those still coming today, have been born with a spirit and soul-consciousness needing those things provided by beautiful surroundings.

Tolerance, understanding, hospitality, friendship, love of gaiety, an inborn religion, a deep feeling of rightness with the world, and knowledge of a full life without placing stress on monetary gain

Annual Inter-Tribal Ceremony Draws Many Tourists.

The greatest spectacle in the state of New Mexico and the most spectacular show of its kind in the world is the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial in progress this week at Gallup, N. M.

An annual affair for the past twenty-six years the ceremonial program was created by the state of New Mexico to encourage the preservation of the worthwhile traditions and products of culture of the American Indians. The ceremonial has also been a method of education for other races and has increased their appreciation of the many fine characteristics of the Indian tribes.

Although the Indian has been influenced by the teachings of Christianity for a little over four hundred years, his world has been one of spiritual beauty for thousands of years, equal to any race.

Almost all the the native songs and dances of the Indian tribes are inspired by religious beliefs and complete acceptance of higher power than earth bound man. This reverence and worship is carried into their every design used in their costumes and drafts.

These things are shown in exquisite perfection at the annual ceremonials in Gallup.

The program is the same for all five days of the event. The "Grand Opening" of the exhibit halls are held the evening of the first day and followed by the night ceremonial program.

The exhibit hall is the Gallup Armory. For this occasion the walls of the mammoth building are lined with showcases. The walls are hung with beautiful and fantastically designed rugs and other articles produced by weavers; plaques of black velvet to display the jewelry.

On every side is color . . . the blue of native New Mexico turquoise mined by the Indians in the more northern mountains of the state, the dull gleam of hand-worked silver, the brighter tones of polished copper combined with the favorite turquoise, in pieces of jewelry, various articles such as combs, ash trays, dishes. Famous black pottery, polished and dull, in many sizes and shapes; pottery of native clay fired in adobe kilns and needing only the natural color to be beautiful; woven work of baskets and grain containers created from native plants, colored in tones of brown, red and black.

The Navajo rugs are spread on stacked several feet high over the floor, hung from the walls, the vast building. The most famous craft of the tribe is their rugs, and startlingly beautiful colors and designs are used to express a story by some Indian who has raised the sheep, sheared the wool, carded and spun and dyed parts of the yarn with color taken from native plants and herbs.

These exhibits cannot be fully appreciated in a few minutes or even hours. The pottery, jewelry, textiles, baskets, Kachina dolls, and other items are all individual and distinctly different, for an Indian design is never identically duplicated unless for an express reason.

Daily throughout the Ceremonial a sacred Navajo Sand Painting, a form of worship through a picture prayer, is made by the Navajo Medicine Man and his assistants. Each evening the sand painting is completely destroyed with proper ceremony. The number of colors, the methods of coloring, the millions of grains of sand, are known only to the Navajo tribe.

The exhibits are sponsored through trading posts, and individual traders and certain Indians. Seven starlets are represented each year and all of the tribes.

The evening Ceremonial program is one of those things difficult to describe with words. A painter with an acute sense of color, design, a feel for motion and emotion, a thorough knowledge of the Indian race would be the only person capable of reproducing its wonders in any medium.

As the crowds enter the grandstand which seats several thousand people the scene before them is weird and beautiful. Looking toward the hill back of the grandstand a panorama of tents, teepees, brush arbor cook shacks, horses and wagons, modern cars, horse trailers, trucks silhouetted against the night sky by the flickering red glow of campfires with a waning full moon hanging in the space of the sky, people stop . . . to look and literally feel the wondrous sight.

After the crowd gathers the arena in front of the grandstand becomes a place enchanted as huge bonfires are built the entire length of the area.

Before long the crowd has reached a pitch of expectation and anticipation, with only those who have been there before knowing of the beautiful pageant which is to be presented with all the pride and dignity of the "Red Man".

First indication that the program is about to begin is the rise of voices in their favorite chants from the camps. The Indians then start toward the opposite side of the arena to congregate and watch those of their tribe in the program of songs, dances and rituals.

Then comes the grand entry... bands, one of which is called the Inter-Tribal Band of 25 pieces composed entirely of Indians from eight different tribes, playing military music . . . the colorful gold and red flag of New Mexico and the United States flag carried by mounted Indian chiefs in snowy white buckskin, beaded and decorated with colors vivid and true as those of nature; their heads adorned with war bonnets perhaps worn by their Aboriginal rituals still live among New Mexico's Pueblo Indians today just as they did before the coming of the white man four centuries ago. This photo shows a Pueblo Indian drummer and Tony Whitehouse, famed hoop dancer from Jones, performing in full regalia at the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial held each August at Gallup, New Mexico.

In a short time he became deputy U. S. Mineral Surveyor for the Territory of New Mexico. He held this position for ten years and was at the same time building for the future.

In 1890 he became manager of the Carrizozo Cattle Ranch Co., and by this time had made his name a known one in New Mexico. The cattle company was then owned by an English syndicate whose holdings included a very large ranch southwest of White Oaks. Although he never "practiced law" knowing it proved an asset in protecting the interests of his employers and his own interests.

Shortly after becoming manager of the Carrizozo Cattle Company he took full charge and control of the El Capitan Live Stock Co., at that time one of the largest holdings in the state.

In 1891, August 31st, William McDonald married Mrs. Frances J. McCourt, (Frances Jane Tarnbell who had come to White Oaks from Wisconsin). In 1892, August 13, their only daughter was born and named Frances McDonald.

All during his life in New Mexico, McDonald held public office.

He was assessor of Lincoln County in 1885-87; member of the territorial house of representatives 1891; chairman board of county commissioners, Lincoln County, 1895-97; member of the Cattle Sanitary Board 1905-11; Chairman Democratic Territorial Central-Committee 1910; and was elected November 7, 1911 as first governor of the state of New Mexico.

McDonald served as governor until the inauguration of de Baca in January 1917. From that time until his death in the spring of 1918 he served the United States government during World War I as one of the now famous dollar a year men. He inspected coal mines and brought back into use his engineering knowledge.

The daughter Frances, became Mrs. T. A. Spencer of Three Rivers, N. M. She died in 1938, two years after the death of her mother. Her husband, Mr. Spencer, still lives in Lincoln county and manages both ranches as his father-in-law did, for McDonald bought out the two companies.

T. A. Spencer and Frances McDonald Spencer had four children. Jane-Elizabeth, now Mrs. J. P. Turner of Carrizozo, whose husband is Dr. J. P. Turner, was married in 1938. They have four children, Paul Truman, Sally Frances, Sandra Jane and Janis Kay.

W. C. McDonald Spencer died at the age of fifteen. T. A. Spencer, Jr., is married to Marion Selby and lives at headquarters of the El Capitan Live Stock Co., north of Capitan. They have three children, Susan Selby, Steven McDonald and T. A. Spencer III.

Another son is A. N. Spencer, also of Lincoln County, now a medical student at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. All of the grandchildren were born here. Jane Spencer Turner of Carrizozo says, "We are all native New Mexicans as are our children . . . will probably all die right here in this beautiful county and state."

More Echoes

Do you feel the need of the Ruidoso - Hondo Valley General Hospital?

If you answer the following questions honestly and with your heart, soul, and mind full of human compassion, not just yourself and your own, but for "every man", it will be your answer to the hospital question.

Is there a parent in this world who by choice, would see the time come when they had to say "If we had been able to take my child to a hospital immediately he would be alive today?"

Is there a man who loves a wife that would not avoid feeling "she might have lived if it hadn't been so far to a hospital" regardless of what sacrifices he might have to make to help build one here?

Have you known the painful emotion of dreading ill when a member of your family becomes seriously ill? Wouldn't you give your share, whether it be 25c or $2,500 to know there would be built within your reach a modern fully equipped hospital for emergencies, where your child and your children's children can be born in safety . . . and receive medical treatment to assure them protection of health.

NAVAJO HOGAN TYPE OF INDIAN HOME

The Navajo Indians still live in their ancient type of shelter called the "hogan". Made of sticks, grass, bark and earth they were never intended to be a permanent home, for the Navajo's were nomadic people who drifted into the Southwest from regions to the north.

For several centuries the tribe were occupied with agriculture. The nature of the land designated to them as a "reservation", and area of 10,000,000 acres in New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, turned them to stock raising.

The past year there has been a concentrated effort to improve the lot of the rapidly increasing Navajo population.

Lincoln Largest County In United States In Early Days

Unearthed Indian relics, skeletons in burial urns in the Ruidoso Canyon and throughout all of Lincoln County prove a civilization occupied parts of the land any hundreds of years ago. Perhaps nomadic tribes of the Red Man summered here... or maybe this paradise was their permanent home.

Spanish exploring the new Mexico must have at some time passed through the Sierra Blanca country and might have left behind individuals to live and die here.

But the written record of people living gregariously in this area starts with the 1850's. A group of Spanish-Americans came from the Rio Grande Valley and the Manzano Mountains to settle on the Bonito River. These people chose the spot where Lincoln now stands for their homes in the new country and named their settlement, Bonito Plaza, later to be named Lincolntown, and to become the first county seat.

The next group to come in, settled on the Hondo River about fifteen miles above the present site of Roswell, New Mexico. When flourishing, this settlement was called Missouri Plaza, but in not too many years it was abandoned.

Names of some of these first settlers in what is now Lincoln County were Felipe Miranda, Tofino Salazar, Diego Chavez, Sabino Gonzales, Enrique Trujillo, Feliz Trujillo, Maurilio Sanchez, Isidro Baldonado, Guadalupe Gomez and three Americans, Reese, Huges and Andy Beckwith. Andy Beckwith was the first man to take water from the Bonito through an irrigation ditch, copying what the Indians had done hundreds of years before.

The next area to be settled by adventurous spirited men and women was the Ruidoso Valley, with settlements at San Patricio and Hondo the first. A. M. Cleary, John Newcomb and Joseph Storms and the Spanish-Americans who came in to live by farming and sheep raising were the pioneers of the valley.

Some descendants of these three men still live in Lincoln County. The water in the rivers of Lincoln County, the Ruidoso, Carrizo, Little Creek and Eagle Creek, the Bonito brought the settlers to the valleys. The fertile land, easily irrigated, and water plentiful for this purpose was soon producing crops, pastures and producing a comfortable living for the pioneer families.

About 1855 Ft. Stanton came into existence as an outpost for United States Cavalry called west to subdue the then vicious and hostile Apache Indians, who felt their country unjustly invaded.

Ft. Stanton was first located two miles below the present site on the Bonito River. When Confederate troops came up from Texas in 1861, this first fortification was destroyed and abandoned. This same site was reoccupied in 1893 and rebuilt in 1898.

A few years later the fort was moved up the river to its present site, permanent barracks were built for officers and men, most of them still being used today as a part of the United States Marine Hospital located there. The last soldiers left the post in 1896, when all need of soldiers was over and three years later it became a hospital.

Early in 1879 the discovery of gold in White Oaks led to a different type of development in Lincoln County as men flocked in from everywhere to take advantage of the glittering ore. Following the first year of the "rush" White Oaks was well on the way to be an established and permanent town even though a boom town. Beautiful homes went up... substantial store buildings were erected... the town had a bank, churches, schools and the prospect of a wonderful future. There was even a railroad promised to take the gold being mined from the mountains.

The story of why White Oaks did not get the railroad... the eventual desertion of the town because they did not get it... the ghost town it became has been heralded far and wide as one of the stranger than fiction stories to come out of New Mexico.

When the railroad came through the present site of Carrizozo, this settlement became the town of the county. All men with business interests in this area, particularly with railroad dreams, wanted to see it grow. The courthouse was moved there, under protest from Lincoln in 1909. The waters from the Bonito River were diverted to Carrizozo flat by the railroad for their use... and the town became the complete center of the area.

Many parts of Lincoln County were settled after 1885 by men who had come to White Oaks to make their fortune; they stymied by the railroad situation, and not wanting to leave a newly found land of enchantment, settled on homesteads, later to become ranchers, farmers, and builders of the present towns and settlements. They are all old.

The population of the final Lincoln County has remained almost equally divided Spanish and Anglo blood. Two languages are still written and spoken although the cultures of the two races have mixed and mingled to build a united area full of friendliness and understanding not to be surpassed any place in the state.

The growth of Ruidoso as a nationally known resort has tended to make the whole of the Southwest more conscious of Lincoln County, the wonderful and sometimes terrifying history behind it, the magnificent mountain areas, the interesting landmarks it contains.

Lincoln County is rich. Unexploited mineral resources, abundant timber supplies, ranching, farming, fruit orchards, lumber mills, the railroad in Carrizozo which goes through Ancho and Corona, makes the economic status of the whole County stable.

Today the communities in Lincoln County with post offices are Corona, Ruidoso, Ancho, Carrizozo, White Oaks, Nogal, Capitan, Lincoln, Hondo, Tinnie, Picocho, San Patricio, Green Tree, Hollywood, Glencoe, and Alto.

Lincoln County, as all of New Mexico accepts the challenge of the state motto, "Crescit Eundo." We grow as we go.

The "county" was created by an act of the Territorial Legislature in 1869 under governor Robert B. Mitchell. Although it was not one of the nine counties designated in the original organization of the territory after the area had been acquired from Mexico, it was created before others.

In the beginning Lincoln county took in all of the Southeastern part of the territory and one-fifth of its total area. Before it was broken up Lincoln County was the largest county in the United States and included all of what are now Chavez, Eddy and Roosevelt counties, and part of Curry, Guadalupe, Otero and Torrance. Possibly the richest area of natural resources and good land in the present state.

Now it has an area of 4,659 square miles, approximately 3,000,000 acres. A considerable portion of its area is classed as mineral land and more than half a million acres lie in the Lincoln National Forest.

Message From Gov. Mabry to New Mexico

New Mexico was colonized in 1598 by the Spaniards, many years before the Pilgrims landed on the Atlantic Coast. Our history is filled with accounts of gallant actions of brave men, who were willing to risk their all to create the foundations upon which our state has built so well.

Whether we talk of agriculture, of livestock, of industry, or travel or of social advances, they all have their roots in the accomplishments of the early Spanish explorations and colonization.

They introduced the first sheep, the first horses and the first cattle into the southwest. They opened the first mines—except for the few that had been worked on a small scale by the Indians. They introduced modern agricultural methods and they still found time to create a new and gracious way of living.

New Mexico began to grow and expand shortly after the pioneers established the Santa Fe Trail. With the coming of the railroad in 1879 all forms of industry experienced unprecedented development. That growth has continued, still continues, and under the progressive leadership offered by all communities in New Mexico, will continue in the future.

We have been blessed by nature with a matchless climate and with unparalleled places of grandeur and beauty. We have been endowed with vast reservoirs of natural resources, many of them as yet untapped.

Every citizen of New Mexico has just right to feel proud of his state, which has today become the second fastest growing area in the United States. Every citizen has a right to be proud of the spirit of tolerance, of friendship and of mutual respect and consideration which has developed among the three nationalities that compose our state.

New Mexico is a good place to visit—a good place to invest capital—but more than that, New Mexico is a good place to live!

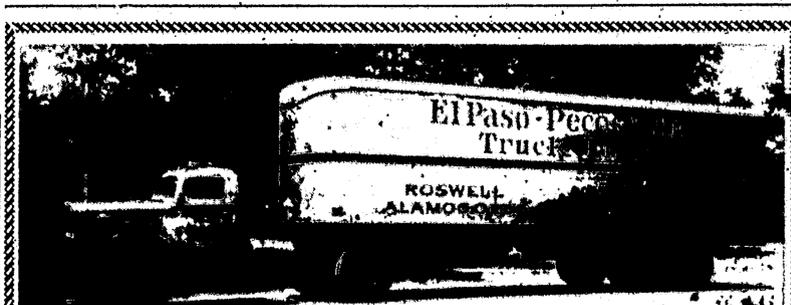

Sincerely,
THOMAS J. MABRY,
Governor

Report On Minerals To Be Found In Lincoln County

This brief article appearing below covers only part of Lincoln County Mineral Resources and was supplied by C. E. Degner of Carrizozo, New Mexico.

C. E. DEGNER

In many years of technical training in mining, to which has been added also many years of actual experience, the writer believes Lincoln County capable of turning out good mineral values when proper development is undertaken and economic and scientific methods of extraction are employed.

I was born in the State of Iowa and when about 12-years old my folks moved to the great Coter D'Alene mining district in the State of Idaho. As a boy my mother encouraged me to gather minerals, rocks and fossils. I received my mining knowledge in the old school of professors of classification of minerals, its mode of origin and etc. During part of World War One, I was interested in the State of Minnesota Iron Mines and the Republic of Mexico. I was appointed receiver for a large American Mining interest in 1922 to straighten out mines in Mexico and after that job was completed, moved with my family to New Mexico in 1925.

Prospecting, exploiting the prospect, developing it and mining. Prospecting is the work of hunting for the place where nature has deposited her minerals. Obviously, prospecting is attended by natural risks, because the hunter may not find that for which he hunts. Competency, experience, geological knowledge, and skill are mooted questions. The greenest tenderfoot has been known to find a prospect where the skilled geologist has searched, and conversely, the skilled geologist has found prospects where the unskilled have failed.

In the Sierra Blancas, we have several mining districts. One cannot speak in an authoritative way about these districts, due I believe to the fact, that many years ago, a sensational discovery of gold ore was made at White Oaks, along the range to the north, which camp apart from its great production, became famous in a romantic way from the novel "Heart's Desire," written there by the late Emmerson Hough, Esq., better known to the present generation by the Covered Wagon.

In the geology of the several mining districts of the Sierra Blancas there is nothing complex in the geological conditions of these districts, and no evidence of any serious faulting or vein displacement, although oxidation and scoriification have left their ineradicable marks. Signs of ascending aqueous vapors and igneous disturbances are plainly evident, however. Striae or minute grooves show earth movements, parallel and vertical, and are particularly pronounced in the latter, which, coupled with the Gough or Selvedge, namely, finely ground talcose seams carrying values on the walls, give every evidence of deep seated mineral carrying veins. Great ore bodies should not be expected until a depth of 400 to 700 feet is obtained in these districts. The enclosing rocks are andesite, Rhyolite, Porphyry and Lime Apar.

The Red Cloud mining district which lies in the Gallinas Mountains in the northwest part of Lincoln County. This district produced several hundred thousand dollars in lead, copper, and silver ores in years past, mostly from the 100 and 200 foot levels. No deep mining has been undertaken, per the geological conditions great ore bodies should be encountered below the 500 to 600 foot levels. The principal intrusive rocks are porphyritic quartz monzonites, rhyolites, and syenites. They occur in large bodies which are discordant with the sedimentary rocks and irregular in outline, and a number of small lamprophyre dikes apparently belong to the same period of igneous activity, you have fine-grained sandstones interbedded with large limestone dikes on these contacts your lead, copper ore bodies are made up in. Large fluorspar deposits have been discovered in the past few years. This of high commercial grade, assaying from 55 percent to 87 percent. This district has a great future in becoming one of the great lead, copper and fluorspar producers in the state.

The Jicarillo placer district in Lincoln County lies about 8 miles east of Ancho, a station on the Southern Pacific railroad. This district was worked for placer gold by the Mexicans about the middle of the last century. The Jicarillo placer deposits lie in a very arid or dry region with no streams of any kind available. The source of water would be to drill wells in the district. The success of this placer field depends on your water supply.

The iron ore deposits in Lincoln County are of great importance; in the Capitan range a large deposit of iron ore has been explored by the U. S. Bureau of Mines; also in several other districts such as the Jicarillo district, Red Cloud district and the Sierra Oscura mountains. The principal iron ore in the county is Magnetite and Magnetite and the average grade runs from 50 to 65 percent iron, a smelter of 100 ton capacity daily could run for many years. It would be a great industry for Lincoln County, with coal that can be coked right at the place where it was to be used. The White Oaks coal is of excellent quality for steam and coking purposes. Much can be said regarding the mineral resources of Lincoln County, but I have only touched very briefly on some of the deposits and its great possibilities.

Mining is a moving job. It is the work of moving mineral deposits made by nature from the place where nature put it to the place where mankind can use it. Much can be said on the subject of mining. I know a number of mines with $8 to $12 ore that are left standing as waste, merely because the operators cannot take it out at a profit in the manner and under the conditions of its development and equipment. I know of a number of mines developed by companies, in comparatively recent years, some right here in Lincoln County. They built mills far larger than they could keep running. This by not having the ore deposit developed and expensive costs, and incompetent management and equipment. It will be rightly placed after mine is fully developed to warrant such mill there might have been millions of tons "in sight" and all could have been mined and milled for $5 a ton.

Laying out the development for economic underground mining, timbering, transportation, loading, pumping, ventilation, safety-synchronized with the surface work-capacity of equipment; capacity of treatment plants, disposition of wastes, ores and tailings, with the least expense is no work for the novice, if the mine is expected to pay a profit.

Development is likely to require several years of time, and plenty of money; hence exploitation should show that the ore deposits are sufficient to justify the time and money. Lincoln County has numerous properties that warrant large capital for its development, great fissure vein systems, the making of great mines. And the day will come when these numerous mining properties in Lincoln County, New Mexico will be systematically exploited and developed and the results will be the opening up of the largest mining region in the Southwest.

Children Leave Summer Home

The children of the southwestern Children's Home in El Paso, Texas who have been in their summer home in Ruidoso for two months left Tuesday for El Paso. They are returning to make plans and preparations for the coming school year.

Five of the teen age children in the home will enroll in college this fall, and twenty-five in high school. Mrs. Victor C. Moore, matron of the home, was in Ruidoso all last week getting the summer home closed and supervising the trip back. R. H. Hedgecock took the group back to El Paso.

Helen Barrajas To State FHA

Helen Barrajas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barrajas of Ruidoso, was in Albuquerque three days the first of last week to attend an executive committee meeting of the State Officers of Future Homemakers of America. Helen is state historian and was one of the delegates to the National Convention in Albuquerque last month. The group made plans for next year's convention, to be held in Roswell, and discussed projects for the coming year.

Republican Platform For 1947 New Mexico State Campaign

The Republican party of New Mexico adopts the following as its platform:

1. We endorse and reaffirm the principles set forth in the national platform of the Republican party. Without qualifying this endorsement in any way, we point specifically to the following pledges:

A. Procurement and maintenance of military forces adequate to protect our national security and to implement effectively a non-partisan foreign policy to the end that world peace may become a reality.

B. Achievement and protection of real opportunity and treatment of all individuals regardless of race, color or religion.

C. Recognition of the collective and individual rights and obligations of the working man.

D. Recognition of our obligations to the service connected disabled veteran and to the dependent families of veterans who lost their lives in service.

2. We pledge active and positive steps to eliminate the gross inefficiency and waste which now characterize the administration of our state government. We pledge economical use of money available from present tax sources and pledge our best efforts to avoid new taxes.

3. We pledge our unceasing efforts to effect a fair and equitable readjustment of water rights between New Mexico and Texas as delineated by the state boundaries.

4. We propose the elimination of the present State Planning Board which is renowned exclusively for its ineffectiveness and the establishment of a competent and active industrial commission, to promote, encourage and develop the mineral, industrial and economic resources of New Mexico. We propose a businesslike administration of state lands looking toward full development thereof for the benefit of the state of New Mexico instead of the benefit of political favorites.

5. We pledge immediate steps to correct the flagrant abuses which prevail in our state administrative bodies. In particular, we propose the following:

A. Appointment and confirmation of members of the various state boards in accordance with the spirit and letter of the law.

B. Legislation or a constitutional amendment, if necessary, to prevent removal of board members prior to the expiration of their terms of office except after a public judicial hearing.

C. Reorganization of the division of liquor control to the end that the law be fairly administered by a bipartisan board in lieu of a liquor czar and that the local governing bodies have a voice in the granting of licenses.

D. The complete cleanup of a disgracefully inefficient highway department. It is our belief that a well-run highway department can and should provide and maintain adequate farm-to-market roads and arterial highways. We pledge ourselves to the achievement of this goal.

E. Efficient, economical and non-partisan collection and administration of tax moneys earmarked for assistance to the aged and the needy, to the end that such moneys be equitably and uniformly distributed in accordance with their intended purpose.

6. Recognizing the infirmities of the present primary law we pledge a careful study thereof in order to offer to the people of New Mexico a primary election law designed to carry out their true will.

WHITE SANDS NATIONAL MONUMENT UNIQUE

The White Sands National Monument is famous because it contains the world's largest deposit of surface gypsum. Through a series of natural processes, beginning when a great section of the earth's crust settled to form a graben, or valley without an outlet, deposits of subsurface gypsum are being separated from the rock containing them, brought to the surface in solution, crystallized out in a pure form, broken into small particles by weathering, and piled into great dunes by the wind. These processes, continued through the centuries, and still continuing, have resulted in of snow-white dunes of "gypsum sand".

7. We propose a constitutional amendment permitting the absentee ballot.

8. In the use and development of our national forests and our state grazing lands we favor a progressive and dynamic program directed toward increasing the yield of the public domain to produce more livestock rather than the present static program which results in the diminishing of that yield and which works a particular hardship on the small growers.

9. We propose a constitutional amendment establishing a stable, bipartisan state board of education with power to employ a school superintendent having specific qualifications. We propose legislation providing for the election of county boards of education by the electors of the county school districts, which boards shall be empowered to employ county superintendent having specific qualifications. We further propose to eliminate the diversion of school tax money to non-school purposes. We pledge adequate salaries for teachers commensurate with their training and duties.

10. We advocate a nonpartisan method of selecting judges which will eliminate the serious deficiency in our present method.

11. We pledge continuation of a non-partisan game commission and full support of its program. We oppose diversion of moneys from the state game fund.

12. We condemn whole heartedly the profligate use of taxpayers money by the party in power for the purpose of perpetuating themselves. It is our firm belief that the administration of our state government should have as its primary aim the welfare of the people of New Mexico rather than enhancement of the power and prestige of the political party in office. In all sincerity we dedicate ourselves to that ideal.

Ed's Barn Gets "Unpainted"

A couple of traveling painters drove up to Ed Cary's farm, and offered to paint his barn real cheap. Next thing Ed knew he had a bright red barn—looked fine!

Only thing was—after the first rain, the paint washed off! And by that time the traveling painters were not to be found—most likely in another county.

From where I sit, Ed made a mighty obvious mistake. As Dee Wilson says, you wouldn't buy an unknown kind of beer from a stranger who offered it to you cheap. You'd get it from a licensed dealer, or at a licensed tavern, just as you'd get a decent paint job from a licensed painter.

Because you know that that license is a public obligation. And when it comes to beer, it's backed up by the Brewers' Program of Self Regulation—which endeavors to see that taverns selling beer are decent law-abiding places, committed to the public interest.

Rev. Foster To Deliver Sermon Here

Rev. W. H. Foster, Presbyterian minister of Lubbock, Texas, will preach at the grade school auditorium in Ruidoso at 11 o'clock Sunday, August 23, at a special meeting called for the purpose of completing the organization of a Presbyterian church in Ruidoso.

All resident and visiting Presbyterians, as well as the general public are invited to attend and hear Rev. Foster.

So many visiting Presbyterians from all over the Southwest who come to Ruidoso for the summer have felt the absence of a church of their faith that they have generously asked that they be allowed to help build a creditable Presbyterian church in Ruidoso. Local Presbyterians have found welcome and worshipped with the various other churches here, but now feel that they should have a church of their own, as have the other churches.

Friday afternoon, August 27th, from 4 to 6 o'clock p. m., Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McDaniel will entertain all resident and visiting Presbyterians at an afternoon tea on their beautiful and spacious lawn at the Indian Reservation line on the Upper Ruidoso.

Over the tea cups details of church organization and future plans will be freely discussed. All local and visiting Presbyterians are cordially invited and expected to attend.
