Skiing season opens on Sierra Blanca

THE LAZY MAN'S way of rest for the legs, warmth from the climbing a mountain provides sun for the body, and a look toward Texas from whence he probably came.

CAPITAN, THE FIRST lift visible from the road to the Sierra Blanca Ski Area, was busy for Friday's opening session. No lift lines, good snow, warm weather all beckoned for the beginning of the season.

Basketball classic this weekend

The annual Ruidoso Basketball Classic, an eight-team tournament, will be played Dec. 9-11 in Warrior gymnasium.

Thursday's action kicks off at 2:30 p.m. with Canutillo meeting the Alamogordo sophomore squad. San Elizario and Hondo play at 4:00, Roswell sophomores and Weed meet at 6:30 with Ruidoso and Elida in the nightcap at 8:00.

Consolation play begins Friday at 2:30 p.m., with the second round at 4:30. The action continues Saturday at 2:30 with the consolation championship at 4:00.

Championship bracket play will be at 6:30 and 8:00 p.m., Friday with the third place game at 6:30 p.m. Saturday and the finals at 8:00.

"Ruidoso won this tournament in December of 1974," Warrior mentor Thurman Sanchez said, "and we were third last year. This year, the way the Warriors have been working, I think we have a good run at the title again."

Sanchez noted that Weed and Hondo are Class A entrants and that the sophomore teams from Alamogordo and Roswell "must be considered as Class AA players."

Walsh, Jeff Wohlgemuth, Kirk Eubank, Daryle Watkins, Dennis Jefferson, Hector Aguilar, Kim Nelson, David Hoffer, Jim

McGarvey and Elmo Silva. Ruidoso meets Elida Thursday in the nightcap of the opening round.

Home Health Services offers home nursing care

Verna Stoltzfus is a Registered Nurse who makes house calls. Heading the Home Health Services of Lincoln County, Verna began ministering to home-bound patients throughout the county last month.

In addition to taking care of the patients' medical needs — following a plan of care ordered by their physicians — Verna obtains and delivers special equipment and supplies required by the patient. She coordinates home health aides, physical therapists and all specially-skilled employees the patient might need.

As if coordinating care isn't enough, Verna, ably assisted by secretary Debby Alvis, sees to it that the HHS acts as a central agency to handle billings involved and to cut through red tape to insurance companies, Medicare, Medicaid, veterans' programs and various other agencies.

"So many people," Verna said, "don't get the benefits they're entitled to because they don't know the channels to go through. They give up if one agency turns them down. There is so much bureaucracy. We don't pretend to be social workers or delivery boys, but we try to help a patient in all possible ways."

Working on a federally funded grant through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, HHS is based in mid-town Ruidoso and staffed by Verna, her secretary and two home health aides — Larry Covey and Beatrice Pena. As more patients require the service, more full time, qualified employees will be hired. Highly skilled specialty employees are under contract to HHS and are available to patients as needed.

Business hours are from 8 to 5 Monday through Friday; however, a registered nurse is on call 24 hours a day. "If they can't get me by dialing the office number, 257-5189," Verna said, "I give them my home phone number and if I'm going to be out of town, I let them know."

"Our primary objective is to provide skilled and professional care for the person in their home, thereby shortening their hospital stay. We see some people — like those who are paralyzed — on an indefinite basis. Others, we see daily, bi-weekly or weekly until they get back on their feet.

"Our society tends to neglect health education. We in Home Health Services try to teach people how to adapt and live with their illness or particular circumstance. We may have a diabetic we teach how to administer injections or medications to himself. So many people think all they have to do to feel better is pop a pill in their mouth. We help monitor their medications and give them instructions within their homes. This is probably more effective than it would in the doctor's office or in the hospital room where the patient is likely to be under stress. It's easier to instruct in the home under more normal conditions and where the patient feels more secure."

Verna spoke of one lady in the area who is living on a fixed income of less than $200 a month and her drug bill is over $100 a month. She has a lung ailment which is made worse by the conditions in which she is living — a camper-type trailer heated only by a hot plate and a roof that hardly stops the rain and snow. "The cold and dampness were leading to serious complications in her health and she would wait until she reached a crisis before calling a doctor."

"We determined she had seen several doctors and was taking four different pills for the same ailment. The side effects were injurious to her heart. We also were able to help her secure adequate housing through HUD and we managed to get her drug bills reduced. We're there when she needs us and we try to keep her condition stable."

Erma Faubion is a 70-year-old widow who recently had varicose vein surgery.

After she was dismissed from the hospital, a severe infection set in her legs. Mrs. Faubion sees a Roswell physician weekly. He then writes or telephones follow-up orders to Verna and she takes over from there. Verna's house call to Mrs. Paulson includes changing the dressings on her legs, helping her with her bath and monitoring her blood pressure which tends to be high.

Verna drove over snow-packed roads Thursday to the patient's home. They warmly greeted one another and Verna patiently completed the examination. Mrs. Paulson jokingly complained that old age was getting to her. Verna responded, "You're only 20 years old in spirit and I won't be seeing you too much longer because you're almost well."

The bag Verna carries contains supplies and vials of medicines. Some of the most vital medicine this caring, energetic R.N. dispenses comes not from a vial, but from the heart.

VERNA STOLTZFUS, left, assisted by secretary Debby Alvis, heads Home Health Services of Lincoln County which offers professional care to home-bound patients throughout the county.

JAMES R. WHEELER assumed the duties of the office of Magistrate, Div. III, 12th Judicial District, November 29. After certification in the November election, Judge Wheeler was sworn in by Larry D. Coughenour, Administrator of Courts, Santa Fe. Wheeler succeeds W. A. Hart.

public service to the community, far above and beyond the call of duty", at a banquet in which Bill Morrison was named Lion of the Year for the local club.

During the award presentation by emcee Ed Roberts, it was noted that Hyman was a charter member of the Noon Lions.

Morrison's award was for outstanding service to Lionism and the Noon Lions during the past year. "Lion Morrison, as active as he is and as much as he had to do with obtaining the plaque honoring Ed and Marlon Hyman, wasn't aware that he had been selected as our Lion of the Year," Roberts said.

A special "President's Award" from Lions International for an outstanding year of service as club president was received by Mrs. Bill Fugate on behalf of her husband, who was hospitalized.

"This is an honor given by the president of Lions International," Roberts said, "and it is one of the highest tributes paid to club presidents and earned only by those presidents who perform their duties in an outstanding, unstinting and unselfish manner."

Entertainment at the Cree Meadows Country Club was provided by Sayieda, who demonstrated the art of belly dancing to an attentive audience who favored her with sustained applause.

ENTERTAINING the Lions and their ladies at the honors banquet was Sayieda.

APPRECIATING the entertainment was Lions secretary Jack Kannady Jr.

TROPHIES AWARDED in the Ruidoso Knights of Columbus basketball tournament for area eighth and ninth graders, were presented by Wayne Wantiez, place and the championship trophy to Benjie Walters of Tularosa. "The tournament was a success in every way and well supported," Wantiez said.

Grand Knight, Saturday evening, to, from the left, Spike Goss, Weed, Sportsmanship; Vince Vega, Carrizozo, third place;

Rick Coy wins

dog appeal case

Rick Coy, Ruidoso, Thursday had a lower court conviction on a charge of cruelty to animals, failure to provide proper feed and water reversed in a District Court decision handed down by Judge George Zimmerman in Carrizozo.

Coy appeared before Magistrate Bill Payne in Carrizozo July 14 of this year, on the same charges, and appealed the court ruling of a $10 fine and 30 days in jail. Subie Coy was acquitted of the same charges in Judge Payne's court.

Atty. Mel O'Reilly of Ruidoso represented Coy in the appeal action Thursday with 12th Judicial District assistant District Attorney Patrick Kennedy representing the State of New Mexico.

knowing that they were doing something for generations yet unborn. And sure enough, here we are celebrating our two-hundredth birthday as a Nation. And now we are entering the final month of this celebration.

The third reason I have brought this early cold and heavy snow is to teach a lesson to people like the Ridge Runner. There are people like him all over the world where they have snowy winters.

Now it is all right to be a dreamer. This is fine. But in a country where you have snow in the winter, you need to look ahead. You should prepare in the summer for the winter time, and always be prepared for the unusual.

Now here is the Ridge Runner out in the snow cutting wood for his fireplace and furnace, when he should have had a tall wood pile already stacked up. He says that the winter came earlier than usual. Sure, but we must be ready for that.

I saw him yesterday, November thirty, down at his crossing breaking the ice with an axe and pushing it out into the stream. So today, he made it out without chains, but his wood pile is not very tall, and there is more snow coming through the winter.

The Ridge Runner looks upon the snow bird as sort of his second self, that he will make it through the winter easy, but here is another thing: he thinks he can get the best of Father Time.

As the years go by, we need to pace ourselves along. And whereas the Ridge Runner used to get by on his brute strength, he must learn now that he must plan ahead and use his intelligence. We must all do the same.

The Ridge Runner and I are first cousins. You will notice the similarity in our names. And I do not want to be rough on him with this cold winter, but it is for his own good.

Let us look forward to a joyous celebration of our bicentennial Christmastide.

All the best to all of you,

IF IT'S WESTERN — WE HAVE IT!

I am looking out at the hillside to the south on the afternoon of the last day of November. And it looks like the middle of January except that you can almost see the snow melting.

Did you know that the melting of the snow has a tiny sound to be heard only by the keenest ears. It is the sound of the cracking of the ice breaking in the spring on the Yukon River in the Spring — reduced down about a million times. Then there is ever so faint a rushing sound of the water flowing from the snow.

The snow water is running off the roof in a silver stream and splashing into the rain barrel — a jolly sound. It is fifty outside in the mid afternoon — up from four above this morning. The ten below of a few days ago was a record for the place here, I mean for this time of year. The record cold is sixteen below, January 20, 1962, the day Shady Logan came to the house.

Two days not able to cross the river is the longest I have been ice bound since that day in 1962.

When I told Dude Browning over the phone that I could not cross on account of the ice, he said, "Cold as it is the ice should be solid and you can cross easy."

Finally on Monday, I went out, with chains, on the old back road. In some places the snow was drifted two and a half feet deep. Today, the last of November, the snow is melted off in the sunny spots and still deep in the shady places.

It is late afternoon now, and I am going down to have a look at the ice at the crossing.

A beautiful first of December! Just like a picture. Early this morning came a light driving snow. And now the mountain world is in the soft glow of the sun just barely shining through the last of the falling flakes.

This is December, the sacred month. Already we are looking forward to Christmas. And it will be the best Christmas we ever had. Just think of it! Our two-hundredth Christmas as a nation. The first few Christmas celebrations of our infant country were record cold weather just like today two hundred years later.

So our honored forefathers battled on through hunger, war, and cold and every kind of suffering — so that our beloved nation might live. The record cold weather came on top of everything else, but our forefathers never faltered in the struggle, inspired and uplifted by Almighty God. So on this Christmas as we celebrate the birth of our Infant Saviour, let us also send up a prayer and thanks for our gallant kinsmen of two hundred years ago, who brought into being, with the help of God, our great and beloved Nation.

Jack Frost says a Word

Dear Friends in Lincoln County,
Well here we are in good old December. I have brought this cold and snow for several reasons. First, it was getting too dry, and Mother Earth needs the moisture. Maybe next year there will be some little springs running that have been dry for some time. And the ground water in the wells will come up. All the streams will have extra water.

Another reason is to remind us of the great strength and faith of our early ancestors during the Revolutionary War. The winters were cold back in those days, and the brave early Americans kept right on,

1976 Small Business Person of the Year

[No. 7 of a series]
James DeLapa, President, Sauto Foods Corporation, Benton Harbor, Michigan, is one of the 1976 Small Business Persons of the Year selected by the U. S. Small Business Administration.

In 1963 DeLapa invested his life savings and all he could borrow ($2,000) in an old garage, which he converted into a pizzeria, called Pasquale's Pizza Pit. Today he runs a wholesale/retail operation, selling a variety of Italian foods in 26 states. Sales in 1974 exceeded $13 million.

In preparation for opening his own cafe, DeLapa took a degree in restaurant administration from Michigan State University and spent several years gaining experience in the food business.

His idea was to start by making only two high quality products — pizza and a Hoagie sandwich. When Jim and his wife eagerly counted their receipts at the end of the first day they hung out their "Open For Business" sign, there was $39.00 in the register. A short four months later, they had grossed $13,000.

A few months after that, a local food chain manager who was a restaurant customer casually asked Jim if he could make up a pizza to be sold in the store's frozen food case. Jim replied with an enthusiastic, "yes!"

Two days later the manager was looking at the very first frozen Pasquale's Pizza. He liked the cheese ones and ordered a few "just to see what happens." What happened was, they sold out the same day they arrived.

The idea caught on. Other stores were receptive, and soon the Pizza Pit was bursting at the seams, unable to handle the volume. At a new rental facility with the all-important freezer space, the DeLapas produced 82 pizzas during their first eight hour day. In comparison, 30,000 pizzas are made each day at their present plant.

As years went on, they added new products and new accounts. Under the "Sauto" name, which means "To your good health", they market, in addition to pizza, minestrone, spaghetti sauce, Italian meatballs and sausage, and a frozen dessert, tortoni.

They employ 225 people and have a weekly payroll of $35,000.

The Small Business Administration provides counseling and financial, procurement and management assistance to small business people.

SANTA FE — Public office candidates would be required to report campaign expenses and contributions 10 days before and after primary and general elections if Sen. Gladys Hansen's bill becomes law.

The Las Cruces Democrat would also define political action committees in the law. "Political committees" are specified now. The term is vague, Sen. Hansen says: "We would define political action committees so that political committees would include political action committees." Candidates are required to report only expenses now. No pre-election reports are compelled now.

Sen. Hansen says coal and uranium taxes must be raised but she is undecided on the level of tax. Part of additional revenue should be in severance tax, she says. She is on the powerful Senate Finance Committee and Interim Revenue Stabilization Committee.

She says taxpayers would receive relief if a proposal to allot the 96 New Mexico cities two percent of the gross receipts tax becomes law. The one-fourth percent tax adopted by 50 cities would be wiped out. Cities receive one percent of gross receipts tax now. The added one percent would be deducted from the state's three percent share. The shift of one percent would cut state revenue $60 million, almost wiping out the $67.7 million surplus.

Sen. Hansen can accept the two-tiered death penalty law endorsed by the Criminal Justice Study Committee. She voted to restore the New Mexico death penalty in 1973. The new bill would determine guilt or innocence in a capital case in one proceeding and set punishment at death or life imprisonment in another proceeding.

Sen. Hansen will sponsor legislation for displaced homemakers. Women 35 to 64 who are widowed or divorced without training for jobs outside their homes would receive training and placement help. A division of the Commission on the Status of Women would be created for the displaced homemakers project.

She opposes public employee collective bargaining, a certain issue in the 1977 Legislature. If a bill is passed, she says, she wants a cutoff date on salary bargaining before the start of the budget year so agreements can be inserted in budget provisions. Sen. Hansen says of Gov. Jerry Apodaca's state government reorganization plan: "I'm very much in favor of trying to come up with a reorganization plan that will give better service to our citizens. I hope in the long run it would be a saving in dollars."

Sen. Hansen says her constituents do not favor removal of the gross receipts tax on food. Sen. Jack Morgan, R-Farmington, favors tax relief. But Morgan would not shift the burden from the gross receipts tax onto extractive industries. If the tax was removed on food, Sen. Morgan says, "Many people would be denied the opportunity to participate in the support of state government."

Sen. Morgan noted an alternative plan sent to the legislature by the Revenue Stabilization Committee provides tax relief by eliminating the one-fourth percent gross receipts tax used by 50 cities. Sen. Morgan says more time to study Gov. Apodaca's government reorganization plan should be allowed for the legislature and public before action is taken. He believes action in the 1977 Legislature would be too soon.

A lawyer, Morgan can accept the death penalty bill written by the Criminal Justice Study Committee. Sen. Joe Gant, D-Carlsbad, wants to look at the state's money position when the legislature meets in January before committing himself on a tax cut. Gant says localities should make a maximum effort to finance their needs. Sen. Gant says a proposal to divert revenue from the state to cities is a form of revenue sharing. A conservative, he represents a potash-producing district.

Sen. John Morrow, D-Capulin, says information is insufficient to justify a coal and uranium tax increase. Morrow says Kaiser Steel Co. laid off 60 to 75 men at its York Canyon coal mine near Raton. A Senate Finance Committee member, Morrow says: "There could very well be a possible tax cut when we get the whole picture. A $67 million surplus is quite a bit more money than is needed to run the government. The taxpayer is entitled to a break once in a while."

Sen. Morrow, a rancher, can support part of Gov. Apodaca's state government reorganization. But he says executive jobs created under the plan would cost $150,000. "I guess I'm old-fashioned," Morrow says. "I believe in the board type of operation. You get people from the business world with their knowledge." Morrow cannot support public employee collective bargaining at present. He would probably support the proposed death penalty bill. "They say that it doesn't deter crime," he says, "but we don't deal with the people that it deters." He says, "The cost of living, the cost of energy is getting to where it's quite a problem for the average family, as with medical services."

by billie surmick

Reading the notices of a special municipal election coming up next month brings to mind the passage of bilingual laws based on an "illiteracy" census of New Mexico. (and all other states) by surnames. The powers-that-be concluded in 1975 that it is necessary to print election notices, voter information, etc. etc. in English and in Spanish due to the number of Spanish surnames in our citizenry . . . on the assumption that a sufficient number of Spanish surnamed people can read only Spanish. Ernestine Evans, secretary of state, has pointed out that she is 100% Mexican, but her surname is Anglo. She also said Mrs. Jerry Apodaca is Mexican, but she can neither read, write nor speak Spanish. Unfold numbers of Indians have Spanish surnames which no more indicate their heritage than do many Anglo names. San Francisco, because of this recent law, had to print a massive book of voting instructions in Chinese. In northern N.M. counties, special election assistants are hired to verbally translate English into Navajo as it is an unwritten language with many dialects. So we have a law based on "illiteracy" that says an "illiterate" can read Spanish . . . and we have stringent voter assistance rules, then hire people to orally translate a language perhaps understood only by the Navajo. Who's to know if the translator is offering information to the voter or telling him to vote for Joe Blow? Do the people actually aided by the bilingual laws compare to the confusion, effort and expense caused by such a law?

Silence is not always golden. Sometimes it's just plain yellow.

The exterminators tell us they've changed chemical compounds to wreak havoc on our creepy crawlers. The ones we've spied lately are limping along with a decidedly stiff gait. Either the different solution or the sub-zero temperature is working.

Losing patience with the occupants' slow response, Delta has learned how to let herself in the house by nosing open a patio door. Now if she's just learn to shut the thing . . . Another German Shepherd who used to live at our house would ring the door bell for admittance (but only after 2 a.m.), could turn on the outside water tap (but couldn't turn it off) and helped pull weeds during the annual lawn manicuring (weeds and flowers looked the same to him.)

Santa Claus is out of business after just one week in Wichita, Kansas. Seems part of the commercial promotion was to give Santa his own telephone number. The number became so busy, additional lines were installed. When the callers numbered some 7,000 a day, almost that many complainants were dialing the telephone company to say that their phones were out of order and their prefixes constantly signaled busy. So, it's back to the old traditional kid on lap requests for St. Nick.

An Independence, Mo. man deserted and went home. His family immediately called the recruiting station and told them where he was. The Army took the man into custody last week on Thanksgiving Day — six years later. A spokesman said he couldn't really explain the delay, "but the deserter should be glad he wasn't in Russia because he would be shot." Ah yes, something to be thankful for on Thanksgiving.

Hang in there, Laces. Winners don't quit and quitters don't win!

REAL SENSIBLE MOVE

By jinkies, but Ruidoso's village dads did themselves proud . . . and they'll save some tax dollars from all the same as wasted . . . by deciding to leave the snow where it falls . . . until it disappears from our streets through exposure to sunlight.

First off, the village doesn't own snow removal equipment in sufficient supply or variety to clear the streets in the dark of the night . . . even at overtime pay.

Then there's the fresh-in-mind example of the problems arising from a wide and deep windrow of snow on Sudderth . . . and the wider and deeper, the longer the hazard exists. Why more drivers got hung up trying to cross Sudderth last week than got hung up trying to do their thing.

What'll be done now . . . harrin', of course, a disaster-depth snowfall, in which event village crews will do their best to insure a smooth traffic flow . . . is to just let those few inches pile up . . . and leave the drivers to their own devices . . . and the more tracks are made, the more the sun can get to the snow and the faster the streets'll clear.

Anyhow that's the thinkin' of the village dads . . . and it seems as though it's pretty sound reasoning. And, if the next snowfall's like the last, we'll have the answer as to the wisdom of their action in letting the street maintenance crew make their own decision as to whether to leave the snow lie, or pile it up where it causes problems . . . gripes . . . and stirs up malcontents.

And it's a funny thing . . . here we live in a mountain resort strictly dependent upon copious snowfalls to insure anything approaching a solid winter economy, and, by jinkies, people complain about snow causing driving woes.

Why there isn't a one of our dealers in cars, chains and tires that won't go out of their way to see to it that drivers are properly equipped to go just about anywhere in snow they've a mind to. The Boy Scouts have a motto that can be applied to winter driving: "Be Prepared" . . . and quit complaining.

PRESIDENTIAL "TEAM"?

The use of the term "team" by the national media, in referring to the "Carter-Mondale team" is amusing in indicating that Mondale will be shoulder-to-shoulder with Carter pulling his fair share of the executive wagon load.

Considering that presidents traditionally are held to blame, or given accolades, for running . . . or attempting to run . . . things . . . and also it's their neck . . . and they do glory in their successes . . . and knock Congress or Cabinet members for their failures . . . there just isn't any president, first term, appointed or otherwise, that's about to give the vice president any decision making authority. Gadooks . . . presidents have been threatened with impeachment for lesser instances of malfeasance in office.

Rest assured Mondale will . . . if he feels so disposed . . . preside over the Senate; . . . and, for the sake of protocol, he might run a few errands for Carter . . . but as to having anything to say about Carter's policies or actions . . . Mondale'll have as much influence as Lt. Gov. Bob Ferguson has on anything Gov. Jerry Apodaca might do or say . . . even where he skis.

On the other hand, don't sell Fritz Mondale short . . . that Minnesotan has never had the rug pulled out from under him . . . nor has anyone even laid a hand on that rug . . . not once in more than 20 years in politics . . . and politics in Minnesota is almost, but not quite, the toughest in the nation . . . North Dakota still has all of the honorees, even besting Chicago, in political skulduggery.

Yet it goes as an assured thing that Mondale will be in the harness . . . he'll be instantly available for working as his part of the "team" . . . ready and anxious to pull his share . . . and fully aware stepping up from No. 2 to No. 1 is always a possibility . . . but it seems most likely that the only thing he'll really be pulling is his hair.

BRIEF BIT: Politicians in Russia, China and Cuba never have to live a thought to losing their jobs because of voters becoming irked with them . . . CD.

FOUR-DAY WEEK?

Ford Motor Company's new contract with the United Automobile Workers may open the door to a four day work week, at some time in the future, for millions of U.S. workers. Ford workers got an extra six days off next year, bringing to forty the number of off-days they will be entitled to in 1977.

Generally speaking, management takes the position U.S. workers are already the world's best paid — along with those in Scandinavia and West Germany — and that if pay is to be kept where it is while the work week is reduced from 40 to 32 hours, costs are certain to go up sharply; also, prices of products, such as automobiles, as a result. The increased costs of products will fuel sharp inflation and cancel out gains, management says.

In general, the union argument is that through increased productivity companies can get the same production, or more, from 32 work hours as from 40. If this proves possible, prices need not rise any faster than they would otherwise, it's said.

The public interest, of course, is directly affected and all Americans and Congress should be acquainted with the dialogue. It would seem, from the national interest standpoint, that when productivity can be maintained or increased with a shorter work week, it's desirable. Of course, other costs are involved, such as materials, and no exact equation is possible.

On the other hand, it seems to be a questionable time for major unions to push hard for a four-day work week (and they have not necessarily done so). Eventually, a four-day week might be a proud accomplishment of American industry and labor.

Eventually, however, the 40-hour week, which has been standard since President Roosevelt's New Deal established it in 1938, seems destined to be diminished by advances in technology and productivity. — The News-Bulletin, Belen.

Bicentennial Notebook

"The Crisis" "These are the times that try men's souls." These words written by Thomas Paine were the first line of "The Crisis," a political document first printed in the "Pennsylvania Journal" on December 19, 1776, and in pamphlet form on December 23.

This was Thomas Paine continuing the tradition he had started the previous January when he issued his pamphlet, "Common Sense," calling for immediate independence.

Tom Paine was the right person in the right place at the right time. The Americans were in need of a political propagandist, and none was better than Paine. His eloquence was able to arouse people from the depths of despair and cause them to redouble their efforts.

Paine, like so many of his type, had been a failure until he came to America in 1774. Here he found the people ripe for a pamphleteer and propagandist. Before issuing "Common Sense," he had come to the attention of Benjamin Franklin and other leaders. He made a modest living from free-lance journalism before becoming actively involved in the Revolution.

After the publication of "Common Sense" he joined the army in time to participate in the demoralizing retreat across New Jersey. It was during this march that he wrote the first of the pamphlets known as "The Crisis." Possibly, he was able to inspire the soldiers in Washington's army to fight their best a week later when they won their first significant battle.

Even though he contributed so much to the American cause at this critical time, his later career was somewhat tarnished. He caused much controversy in the Continental Congress and other governmental circles. After the end of the war he wound up in France as a major participant in that nation's revolution.

Despite his later problems, Paine provided the inspiration so badly needed at this dark moment in American history.

The situation in New Mexico was not nearly as critical as that in the United States. In fact, there was a great deal of optimism within the Spanish government. Hopefully, the new military department, the Commandancy General, on the northern frontier could bring a measure of peace and improved efficiency to this troubled region.

If the area could be made secure economic development could begin. If that happened, the home government could hopefully be released from some of the burden it had been carrying for so long. Possibly, some government officials dare to hope, these internal provinces could assume the burden of paying a share of their own expenses.

Obviously, much responsibility rested on the shoulders of Jose de Galvez, the new Minister General of the Indies. — Donald W. Whisenbunt, history professor, Eastern New Mexico University.

Ruidoso Downs Police Activities

During the month of November, Village of Ruidoso Downs Police Department members issued 16 citations for moving violations, investigated five thefts, two accidents and made three arrests.

Meleton Sanchez, Jr. was sentenced to 30 days in county jail for battery against his wife, Elvira. Bill Fry was charged with disorderly conduct, with charges later dismissed. W.R. "Pappy" Johnson pled guilty to discharging a fire arm within the village limits and was fined $25. Charges of careless driving and failure to give immediate notice were placed against Kenneth A. Johnson after he crashed his vehicle into a tree.

Kenneth Newsom reported a person or persons gained entry to his home through a bedroom window Nov. 23 and stole two tape recorders, one gold ring, a gold money clip, a pocket calculator and an AM/FM radio. Value of the items was undetermined.

John D. Egbert reported a wristwatch valued at $37 was taken from his person. A CB radio was stolen from a vehicle owned by Robert Shanks, Jr. W.R. "Pappy" Johnson reported a deer was stolen from his truck. Joe Roberson reported a chain saw was taken from his truck. All vehicles were parked at the Hollywood Inn parking lot at the time of the thefts.

News from the County Agent

The 1976 Lincoln County 4-H Awards Day Program was Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Carrizozo School cafeteria. The program started off with a pot luck dinner followed with the awarding of 4-H completion pins and special awards. The county 4-H Council was in charge of arrangements.

Raythe Gipson of Glencoe, Lincoln County 4-H Council president was the master of ceremonies. The B.A.S.I.C. Youth Choir entertained the 4-Hers with a selection of songs. The group is under the direction of Susan Batchelor.

The wool market outlook for 1977 indicates a good price especially if some of the late sales are any indication. Some fine wool recently sold for over a dollar per pound on a grease basis. This was estimated to be about $2.10 per clean pound.

If the present wool price continues, the wool incentive payment will be around 10%. The national average through September was around 64¢ a grease pound. This average price would indicate 12% but late sales have been higher and could change the average price slightly.

Consider the smaller fruit trees for the home orchard. The spur type tree with a dwarfing rootstock are some of the better adopted fruit trees to use. The rootstocks more adopted to this area are the MM106, MM111 or EMVIL. The Golden Delicious, Red Delicious, McIntosh and Winesap are some of the varieties of spur type trees. It is generally best to get two or three varieties to get a better fruit crop by cross-pollination. Dwarf trees start bearing fruit sooner than standard trees as well as easier to take care of. Pears on a Quince root are a good choice for a home orchard. When planting dwarf fruit trees always be sure the graft union is about three inches above the ground level to prevent the standard variety from rooting.

SNMEDD to meet

The directors of Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District will hold a special meeting Dec. 15 at 10 a.m., in Building 610, RIAC, Roswell to appoint members to the Health Systems Agency Sub-Area Council. This is a continuation of the Nov. 17 executive committee meeting that was recessed.
