Wind, 25 mph, Temperature, 78. Humidity, 8%. No measurable moisture during the past 60 days. Situation: Five acres of forest are burning on the south side of Upper Canyon Rd., a mile above the traffic circle. Four structures are also burning. The Ruidoso Fire Department is in command. The Disaster Defense Task Force (DDTF) for Lincoln County has been called to establish a Command Center.

Maps are spread on the Command Center table. A copy of the DDTF evacuation manual is open. Time: 1300. Command Center is operational.

(From this point, Command Center (CC), composed of members of DDTF, handled all phases of fighting the fire. Calls from the scene (Operations Center) were relayed by telephone and radio. Command Center had to immediately evaluate the situation. Remedial action—with no allowance for error—was taken. Instantly, incidents piled up on incidents. Emergency situations arose. DDTF training was on the line.)

Fire fighting resources: Four village FD units, USFS personnel, one helicopter, 20-man hot shot crew, 600-gal. tanker at the fire, a second 600-gal. tanker en route and a suppression crew just arriving.

PD 'solve rate' high

The 'solve rate' of violent crime, burglary and larceny set by the Ruidoso Police Department, substantiated by figures released by Chief of Police Paul M. Lukens Jr., were well above the national average for 1975.

Two cases of forcible rape were solved for 100%, against 51% nationally.

Five cases of aggravated battery were solved for 100%, against 62% nationally.

Of 136 cases of burglary, 29% were solved. The national rate is 18%.

Of 94 cases of larceny over $100, 28% were solved, against 20% nationally.

The News presents a recapitulation of the headlines of PD activity during 1975, as a matter of public information and to give village residents better understanding of the functions of Ruidoso's "men in blue".

The administrative section worked 3042 man hours, against the normal 2920 for 365 8-hour days. 2080 hours were straight time, 962 unpaid overtime. 120 days of "camp time" were earned, with five taken. No vacation was taken.

The patrol division operated with 10.3 men, with the authorized strength being 12.

Activities include criminal and traffic patrol, misdemeanor arrests, search warrants, investigations and citizens service, including detoxification, missing persons, fights, search and rescue and blood relays.

These 10.3 men performed a total of 80,079 operations, requiring 15,764 man hours, during 1975. Total committed time, including administrative, amounted to 22,937 man hours.

Man hours worked totaled 24,576 which breaks down to 3072 8-hour shifts for 298 working days per patrol officer.

Patrol officers averaged 67 days off and 4.2 days of vacation, against a normal 104.66 days off and 12 days vacation.

During 1975 there were 107 instances of patrol officers suffering assault and battery attacks.

The Criminal Investigation Division operated with 2.5 men working 7637 man hours. The breakdown shows 5200 straight time hours, 1190 paid overtime hours and 1447 recorded, but not paid, overtime hours. Of this total, 2023 hours were required for routine office detail including case preparation, reports and the drawing, filing and return of search warrants and criminal complaints.

CID utilized 432 hours in handling 18 search warrants, 112 hours in making 56 felony arrests and 82 hours in 82 misdemeanor arrests. In addition 1461 hours were devoted to crime scene activities and 2348 hours to multiple investigations. CID personnel averaged 5.2 days of vacation

DAR sponsors HS citizenship awards project

A "Bicentennial Citizenship" awards project is being sponsored in Lincoln County high schools by the Sierra Blanca Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Ruidoso.

Each month one student from grades 9-12 is named by the Captain, Carrizozo, Corona, Hondo and Ruidoso schools to receive a certificate provided by the local DAR chapter.

"We feel that in our national Bicentennial celebration we should recognize the young people that are good citizens in their schools, home and community," project chairman Mrs. Robert Beumer said. "Too often those that exhibit poor citizenship receive too much publicity and those that strive to be good citizens go unrecognized."

The 45 certificate winners, with their principals, will be entertained by the DAR early in May at the Truman Spencer ranch near Carrizozo.

The candidates discuss issues

Seeking his third term as Ruidoso trustee, Don Riley feels he has the experience and qualifications necessary to carefully weigh the financial needs of the community and come up with the top priorities.

"Here in Ruidoso we have to carefully weigh requests for more police, a better refuse system, more books for the library, a new city hall complex and additional sanitary sewer facilities and water," he said. "The list of needs for this area is long and methods of financing are limited since we don't have home rule."

Riley believes if the village wants to see the numerous area improvements completed, it will have no choice but to increase the current gross receipts tax.

"Regardless of whose in office it looks like the tax will have to be increased," he said. "Ruidoso needs the revenue."

According to Riley the village also needs the extra income from revenue sharing money and should continue pursuing it. "Although revenue sharing money is hard to get I think we should use it every time we can get hold of it," he said.

Among priority projects Riley would like to see completed is the $5 million water bond project. He also feels the village will need a new sewage treatment plant in the near future.

"Our present sewer system isn't going to meet state requirements and we will

M. H. NELSON

M. H. "Boots" Nelson came to the Ruidoso area in a covered wagon in 1929. Now retired, the 57-year-old Nelson wants to return something to the area which gave him so much by seeking a four year term as Ruidoso Downs trustee.

"An individual can only accomplish what the voting public will give him a chance to do," he said. "Being retired I feel I can devote all my time to a public office if elected."

In the culinary business since 1947, Nelson worked as a chef in the Chaparral motel for the first eight years after it opened and served as a baking instructor for the Bureau of Indian Affairs for five years. He currently owns and trains race horses.

Nelson would like to see Ruidoso Downs seek more revenue from the race track rather than increase taxes for local citizens.

"I'm definitely against the increase in the gross receipts tax," he said. "If we could find some way to collect all the revenue owed to the village by the race track we wouldn't have to raise taxes. There's no reason why we can't beautify the Downs area with revenue from a multi-million dollar industry like the track."

Nelson would also like the village to actively pursue an increased share of federal and state revenue sharing money. "There are many projects which can be financed through revenue sharing and it is a good

Acute alcoholism . . . a very personal disease

One out of ten people in the Ruidoso area are alcoholics, according to Paul Gallegos, Lincoln County's Alcohol Abuse worker for the Southwest Mental Health Association.

"That figure is about average for a resort area like this," Gallegos said. "This is a year round playground and, let's face it, a lot of people come up here to drink."

A rehabilitated alcoholic, Gallegos came to Lincoln County 10 months ago and is personally counseling 33 people in the area. In working with alcoholics he has noticed a definite increase in alcohol abuse during the past three years, especially among teenagers.

Gallegos believes the increase in drinking problems stems from a combination of unemployment and high social tenions. "Many people can't face up to their problems and try to escape reality by jumping into a bottle," he said.

"People are moving away from drugs and into alcohol," Gallegos said. "Alcohol is legal and more socially acceptable than narcotics, even though alcohol is a drug too."

Donald Phelps, director of the division of prevention for the Youth Education Branch of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, believes marijuana and other drugs are losing their novelty and liquor is filling the gap.

"There is less hassle in using alcohol than in using drugs and with alcohol there is some quality control of its manufacturing," Phelps said.

"Drinking has become a way of life in this country," Gallegos said. "Most people are introduced to it in their homes where many parents drink socially. Parents often condone drinking, but frown on smoking marijuana."

"Where people of other cultures drink slowly and with a meal, most Americans drink rapidly with the goal of getting high," former NIAA director Dr. Morris Chafaty said.

Chafaty believes two American institutions—the cocktail party and the commuter bar—epitomize this society's attitude toward drinking. "In this country if you have a party, people think you have to have alcohol," he said.

According to Gallegos, there is no way to tell if a certain person will become an alcoholic. "It's an individual thing," he said, "and it affects different people different ways. We don't even know what causes alcoholism at this point and there is no known cure for it."

For Gallegos, the path to alcoholism started young. He got drunk for the first time at age eight. When alcoholism killed his father, he quit school in the fourth grade to go to work and began drinking heavily himself.

Alcohol became an escape route for the young man. "The older I got the more problems I had and the more I drank," said Gallegos, who often went through 6-7 quarts of wine a weekend.

"I was as proud as most people," he said. "I knew I was an alcoholic, but I wouldn't admit it. It took me a long time to do anything about correcting my drinking problem."

The hardest thing for an

THE ARTISTIC ABILITIES of sculptor Lincoln Fox are evident in this almost life size bronze. Jerry Shaw, Ruidoso News reporter, visited the Fox Studio and learned some of the basics of Fox' work from the inception of an idea until the finished bronze is given the finishing touches after being cast at the foundry. See page five for an insight into Lincoln Fox, the man, the artisan, the cunning worker in bronze.

Happenings by Jerry

With the beautiful, springlike weather we have been having in "our" mountains lately many Ruidosans have headed for the "hills" for a picnic while others headed up the mountain to ski and reported good conditions.

Mary and Til Watts packed their picnic basket and drove up toward Bonita for a picnic and walk last Sunday. They found a lovely spot beside a winding stream for spreading their picnic and then followed the stream for an hour or so looking for dried wood that Til uses in combination with his nail sculpturing.

There was nothing to mar the beauty of the scenery, not even a beer can, until they came to a small pool that had been formed by the stream. There they found a pile of old tires that had been dumped by some unthinking person and the beauty of our mountains had been ruined.

What a shame when we have such beautiful green mountains and perfect weather to enjoy them, that some uncaring person can ruin it for us.

Lloyd and L.B. Davis, Lorene Paulowski and Dorothy Lama were in Ft. Worth last week to attend the Fat Stock Show. They joined Fern Sawyer, who was already there, as she was riding in the rodeo parade.

We had a nice visit by phone recently with Mrs. T. J. Sutherland who is 84 years young now. She has had an active and interesting life and thinks there is too much stress on women's lib! She spoke of the differences in what our youths are faced with today and commented that "back in her days all they had to worry about was how to drink corn liquor without tasting it!" She plans to donate her books to our library so that they may be appreciated and enjoyed. She is a grand and young lady for her 84 years.

PRESIDENTS OF DISTRICT 5 Garden Clubs attending the State Convention planning meeting were: Mary Schultz, Oasis Garden Club; Roswell; Alta Marvin, Artesia Garden Club; Kathryn Tipps, Home

Garden Club, Roswell; Madeline Murray, Ruidoso Garden Club; Jackie Williams, Patio Garden Club; Hobbs and Cherry Greenwade, Morning Garden Club, Roswell.

AARP to meet

The American Association of Retired People will meet at noon Wednesday at the Senior Citizens Center for a covered dish luncheon. All members are urged to attend.

Garden club meeting

The Ruidoso Garden Club will meet Tuesday, February 17, at the multi-purpose room of the library at 2:00 p.m. Mrs. George Luck and Mrs. C. S.

Richardson will be the hostesses.

Mr. John Genta will present the program which is entitled "Fort Stanton Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow".

All interested persons are invited to attend the open meeting.

Pueblo Cliff Ruins at Bandelier

There is something for everyone at Bandelier National Monument, located near the Atomic City of Los Alamos in northern New Mexico. The monument covers 46 square miles and preserves "apartment" and cliff ruins of 15th century Pueblo Indians. If you can't stay long, the most accessible features of the monument are the ruins in Frijoles Canyon, near the visitor center. But if you have the time, Bandelier is the kind of place that can captivate you for an entire vacation. Ninety per cent of Bandelier is virtually undisturbed wild land, accessible by more than 60 miles of maintained trails, leading to such features as the gorges of Alamo Canyon, the Stone Lions Shrine, Painted Cave, the pueblo ruins of San Miguel and Yapashi and White Rock Canyon of the Rio Grande. Especially popular are the walks from Upper Frijoles Crossing - upstream to the beaver dams and downstream to park headquarters. The upper Frijoles section is a densely forested area where you can experience the inspiration that comes from solitude. There is a campground on the mesa above Frijoles Canyon near the entrance station which has campsites (containing tent spaces, tables, fireplaces), toilets and water taps. No utility hookups are provided. The campground opens for the season March 15. A picnic area is located in Frijoles Canyon near the visitor center. There is also a lodge with snackbar, overnight accommodations and camper supplies. It is open only in summer. Slide programs in the visitor center provide orientation and interpretation of the area and museum exhibits tell about the occupation of the area from A.D. 1200 to modern Pueblo times. Here are some things you folks might keep in mind when planning your trip. For your safety, comfort and convenience, remember: -Distance figures for the Bandelier hiking trails do not reflect the energy and endurance required for longer trips. Since trails lead into and out of deep, steep-walled canyons of rough, broken country and the altitude (about 7,000 feet) throws an additional burden upon the heart and lungs, you should be in good physical condition. -From May into September, temperatures range from the low 50's at night to the high 80's in the daytime. The relative humidity is generally low and thunderstorms, usually of short duration, are frequent in July and August. Hard freezes are a nightly occurrence in the winter. But don't rule out an off-season trip when the monument is beautiful and serene. -Pets are not allowed in Bandelier's backcountry because they may bother wild animals and people. The monument is located 46 miles west of Santa Fe, N.M. From Santa Fe, drive north on US-285 to Pojoaque, then west on NM-4. Approach may also be made through the beautiful Jemez country from Albuquerque, but travelers taking this route should inquire about road conditions in snowy weather. There is also a detached section of the monument 11 miles north of Frijoles Canyon on NM-4. This Tsankawi section preserves a large, unexcavated ruin situated on a high mesa with sweeping views. A two-mile, self-guiding trail leads from the highway on a circular route through the ruin. Walking time is about an hour and a half.

G. H. STONEMAN of Ruidoso Downs announced his candidacy for District 1 County Commissioner last week. The former mayor of Ruidoso has lived in the area for 25 years and is currently the manager of Keeth Gas Company. He will run on the Democratic ticket.

CECELIA BARRON

There is a saying: 'Nothing new under the sun'. All of the extortionists, protestors, demonstrators, strikers, etc., seems new to this generation; but it has been going on since man was created. The mob violence we have today is nothing new—there is just more of it.

Deception was practiced in the first history of mankind, by Satan, Gen. 3; and by Abraham in the Book of Genesis.

Then there were false teachers and prophets, just as there are today, Pet. 21.

In Jer. 17-9, God said: The heart is 'deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?'

Then later, during Christ's period, some Jews had a hunger strike and said they would neither eat nor drink until they killed Paul. Acts 23-12. Their plans were thwarted and Paul was rescued for the time being.

And in 2 Cor. 11-13, there is an account of deceivers among ministers. Also, Acts 17-5, states where the Jews did not believe Paul's teachings, sought to form a mob of 'certain lewd fellows' and set the city in an 'uproar'.

God made many examples of people, just as He is doing today.

Then in later centuries, in reading the history of some of the great American and English poets and authors, there was violence among many of them.

Iante Gabriel Rossetti lived in London; grew up in the strange society of Italian exiles and English eccentrics. He wrote and illustrated his own poems when only a child. At twenty he became a pupil of the artist Ford Madox Brown; but the artist had him drawing 'pickle jars'. Rossetti was impatient for public notice and resented this. After ten years of work he married his favorite model. Two years after the marriage, she took an over dose of drugs and died. Rossetti was so overcome with grief and remorse, that he put all his love poems in her casket. Nine years later the coffin was dug up and manuscripts exhumed.

After his wife's death, Rossetti continued to work at writing, painting and designing glass and murals; but he became gloomy and suspicious. He lived on fantasy and narcotics; he even imagined his wife's spirit was reincarnated in some animal. At various times he housed woodchucks, owls, a raven, an opossum, dogs and a donkey. A raccoon lived in a bureau drawer, a white peacock died under the sofa and an armadillo gnawed through to a neighbor's kitchen. He died under the influence of drugs, while his best book, Ballads and Sonnets was being printed.

A few lines from Rossetti's Silent Moon—

Your hands lie open in the long fresh grass,
The finger-points look through like rosy blooms;
Your eyes smile peace—
He created a far more mystical and beautiful poem than his 'model' wife, in: 'The Blessed Damozel'

The blessed damozel leaned out
From the gold bar of Heaven
Her eyes were deeper than the depth
Of waters stilled at even;
She had three lilies in her hand,
And the stars in her hair were seven—

Wilfrid Scawen Blunt was born to be rebellious. He established a stable for breeding Arab horses, at his estate in Sussex; and this interest took him to Arabia, where he became a sympathizer with Mohammed cause. This was in direct opposition to British policy. He was in favor of the Egyptians and condemned the Boer war. Eventually he was arrested for helping Irish insurgents and was sentenced to prison. The British refused to publish his works, but he had already brought out four volumes of poetry. He added this note to the fourth: 'No life is perfect that has not lived—youth in feeling—manhood in battle—old age in meditation. Having experienced all, he died at the age of 83.'

A line from Esther:
He who has been happy is for aye,
Out of destruction's reach:
His fortune then
Holds nothing secret, and Eternity,
Which is a mystery to other men—

From 1856 to 1900, Oscar Wilde was a continual controversy, and became an 'artist in attitudes'. He wore a drooping look, with long hair; his oddly cut clothes were 'cobwebby'. At 28 he was married and seemed to adjust, but remarked that: 'women spoil every romance by trying to make it last forever.'

After a notorious libel suit against the Marquis of Queensberry, he lost and was sentenced to two years hard labor; where he did his most sincere writing. Among them is The Ballad of Reading Goal.

Thomas Lowell Beddoes lived in the nineteenth century and could have been a macabre character in his plays. He lived in Europe all his life and practiced medicine in Zurich. He hired a theatre for one night so a baker could become an actor.

When the two separated after a quarrel, Beddoes tried to kill himself. Later he visited some of his relatives living in England, gravely riding upon a donkey. Then he tried to set fire to a theatre with a five-pound note, as a protest against the English stage. It was suspected, that he committed suicide by taking poison.

Does not these few characterizations remind us of the world today?

Fresh eggs cook better

When buying bread or meat, most people automatically check the label to see if the item is fresh. But how many homemakers question the freshness and quality of the eggs they buy?

These factors do make a difference in the performance of the egg, says D. W. Francis, Extension poultry specialist at New Mexico State University. Although all grades of eggs contain essentially the same nutrients, those of higher quality are better for cooking purposes.

A clean, properly-shaped shell, required by all grading regulations, is an indication of good exterior quality, the specialist notes. However, the shell color has no bearing on the egg's freshness or nutritive value. The color is determined by the breed of hen laying the egg, and may vary from white to deep brown, or in some cases bluish green.

The interior quality is also subject to grading standards. Each egg must be checked for external and internal defects before being shipped to consumer outlets.

During a process called candling, the inner structure and condition of the egg is determined with the help of a strong light. The term candling originated from early times when candle light was used for this procedure, Francis explains.

The eggs that meet grading requirements are then weighed and packaged according to size and sent to the retail outlets.

Interior quality is more difficult for the consumer to judge, but an understanding of the egg structure will make it easier to determine quality when the egg is broken.

An egg consists of a shell that is mainly calcium, two shell membranes, the air cell, a thick and thin white layer (or albumen), the chalazae and the yolk.

At the time the egg is laid, the contents fill the shell. As it cools the interior contracts, forming an air pocket between the two shell membranes, usually at the large end of the egg. A high quality egg will have a small air cell. Size of air cell is best observed when hard cooked eggs are peeled.

Thick, cloudy albumen is also an indication of a high quality product, Francis says. This cloudiness, naturally present in the fresh egg, is a sign that the carbon dioxide has not yet escaped through the shell. As the egg ages, the white becomes clearer and thinner, the air cell larger and the albumen and yolk less upstanding.

The color of the yolk has no relation to freshness or nutrient value of the egg, the NMSU specialist says. Although most consumers in the Southwest prefer a light yellow yolk, the color may vary depending on the diet of the hen. Eggs produced today tend to have uniform color because the hens are fed a controlled ration and are not allowed to run out on pasture.

SANTA FE—Conservative Rep. Bob Moran, R-Hobbs, says of the House Appropriations Finance Committee's general appropriations bill: "Too, too much money and fiscally irresponsible."

Liberal Rep. Lenton Malry, D-Albuquerque, says: "The bill will not jeopardize the state if we hold the line on special appropriations." Moran and Malry are on the HAFIC controlled by Democrats. Malry is part of the Mama Lucy Gang that manages the House.

An oil well drilling contractor, Rep. Moran says: "The bill increases spending about 15 per cent with a 12 percent revenue increase. You've got a 3 per cent increase the wrong way. That's a $15 million tax increase next year or the year after."

Rep. Malry, equal employment opportunity officer for Albuquerque Public Schools, says: "We needed to do some things. We had never supported special education adequately. We did this time. We support public, higher, special and early childhood education at a proper level. We also adequately funded the various agencies."

Rep. Moran said: "The committee did not cut programs in any of the 269 state government agencies." Moran said a poll of constituents in his conservative Lea County district showed 89 per cent "want tax relief even at the expense of cutting programs."

Rep. Malry, the only black in the legislature, says: "I'm not a wild spender. I believe in adequate funding but not over funding agencies." Malry supported Gov. Jerry Apodaca's proposal to fund statewide kindergartens a year ahead of schedule. He said: "We have the space. We have the money."

Rep. Moran said the bill "is really $800,000 over the governor's budget. They got it under the governor's budget by simply transferring from expenditures to reserves $3 million in higher education." The $3 million was a contingency for enrollment increases in state universities.

Moran said: "If the state universities would have had the same enrollment increase next year that they had this year, the $3 million would have been spent. Language was written into the bill that universities receive nothing if enrollment increases only 3 per cent."

Rep. Malry says: "According to the best estimates we have now, it's a responsible bill. Tax relief is out the window if the bill becomes law as reported by the HAFIC. You can adequately fund state agencies, health services, public schools, higher education or you can have a tax rebate. I oppose a tax rebate because citizens would not realize any money to speak of."

"Secondly, you're taking the money from senior citizens, health care services and education."

Rep. Moran said the shift of the $3 million to reserves "destroys the last vestige of that being a true formula for funding universities. They're giving the University of New Mexico a ridiculous increase. Highlands University gets a big money increase. Eastern New Mexico University will barely be able to hold the line where they are." Proposed state appropriation increases in the bill: UNM, up 22.3 per cent or $7.4 million; Highlands, up 9.4 per cent on the formula plus an added $470,000 or 12 per cent outside the formula.

Also, New Mexico State University, up 16.5 per cent or $3.4 million; Western New Mexico University, up 11 per cent or $285,000; New Mexico

Institute of Mining and Technology, up 15.8 per cent or $517,000. The New Mexico Military Institute state appropriation would be hiked 149 per cent to $237,000, but NMMI depends on state land income for most financing.

Rep. Malry predicted the state will show another surplus when the 1977 Legislature meets. In the present session, Malry said, "We're going to have to be very careful with our spending. It's close. If we're going to spend $504 million and taken in $506 million, that's a very close range. We're all cognizant of it." He noted the HAFIC asked State Finance Director Vincent Montoya for a tabulation of pending special appropriations bills.

Rep. Moran said $102.7 million in special appropriations bills were still alive Tuesday—$91.9 million that would be funded from surpluses and $10.8 million in recurring expenditures. Moran said: "There is absolutely no room for a tax cut" if the HAFIC general appropriations bill becomes law. Moran referred to "them" as the Apodaca administration and House Democratic leadership.

Moran predicts a special legislative session. He says: "When the State Supreme Court stopped the legislature from Mickey Mousing with the clock it almost mandated special sessions of three or four days to finish our business responsibly."

JACKSON'S BUSING
Senator Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), who has exhibited more intestinal fortitude on the school busing issue than most politicians, has proposed a new solution to enjoin court-ordered mandatory busing—so unpopular among parents in many sections of the nation.

Jackson, who is introducing a bill in the Senate to effect the changes, proposes that three-judge courts be required to act on all school busing cases, and that the judges be required to factor in mind the "white flight" factor in mandatory school busing.

Jackson says bluntly that forced busing in many areas has accomplished the opposite from the court's intention and that it's time to take this truism into account in trying to solve school problems.

The Washington Senator has issued a paper on the subject which he describes as facing up to reality; slides say it requires courage for the Senator to criticize civil rights symbolism and break through political taboos that have become strongly associated with the effort to integrate schools.

Few, however, can criticize Jackson's voting record in the field of civil rights in the past two decades; he is being practical in his current approach and one suspects the majority of whites and blacks realize that and generally support his position.

The growing presence of "Mexican brown" on the back-alley heroin market suggests that President Ford is on the right track in reminding Mexico Operation Intercept gave way to a program called Operation Cooperation, linking U.S. and Mexican enforcement efforts.

Such tactics are exasperating as well as costly, but they demonstrate how the persistence of narcotic smuggling invites measures which would not be necessary if drugs were not reaching the border in the first place.

U.S. relations with Turkey are still strained as a result of the dispute over Cyprus, which may or may not affect the willingness of the Turks to monitor their opium production more closely. There is always the hope that detente diplomacy can lead the Chinese Communists to do more about drugs flowing from the "Golden Triangle" of Asia. However, Mexico has more to lose than any other nation from allowing drug-smuggling to impede relations with the United States.

Meanwhile, however, the dearth of Turkish opium has created a new illicit drug industry in Mexico. Where in 1972 Mexican heroin accounted for only 20 per cent of the drug seized in the United States, it makes up 70 per cent of the seizures today, and after a brief respite heroin use in our population is once more on the rise. It is no secret that the Mexican state of Sinaloa has become a major source of heroin now entering our country. ### CURB DRUGS

President Ford is wheeling out bigger guns in the fight against illicit drug traffic. The program he announced recently will require some new legislation which he will propose to Congress early this year, but he has already made some moves on his own which could open a new front in this long-fought war.

Mr. Ford says he has told leaders of Mexico, Colombia and Turkey that the solution to our drug problem is going to require their cooperation. The link between U.S. foreign policy and the narcotics traffic on American street-corners deserves more attention.

Heroin traffic in New York City dropped off noticeably when the Turkish government invoked a ban in 1973 on the growing of opium poppies. The fact that Turkey is now permitting opium production again—for economic if not political reasons—has raised the certainty that Turkish opium refined into heroin will once again appear on the drug scene here.

Meanwhile, however, the dearth of Turkish opium has created a new illicit drug industry in Mexico. Where in 1972 Mexican heroin accounted for only 20 per cent of the drug seized in the United States, it makes up 70 per cent of the seizures today, and after a brief respite heroin use in our population is once more on the rise. ## 'Dollar a week' Ford

President Gerald R. Ford seems to have forgotten a fact of life that he learned in Congress—that it is the taxpayer that makes all things in government possible.

His current proposal, up for Congressional action Wednesday, is to bolster the dwindling Social Security fund by the simplest of expedients—foisting a $1 a week additional pay check deduction upon the salaried worker.

When you say it fast—real fast—and don't think about the regular percentage increases of the past, present and future, it doesn't seem like it's a cross to bear that'll make the hard pressed worker more stoop-shouldered.

The sole redeeming feature of this not-of-free-will pay roll deduction has been the apparently glib, and also apparently unfounded, promise that upon retirement recipients of the dole will be assured of adequate sustenance and housing, without becoming a burden upon the state.

Someone... perhaps NM's own, the Hons. Lujan, Runnels, Montoya and Domenici... should take the lead in impressing upon the politically-motivated mind of "Dollar-a-week" Ford, that the government's responsibility should be to the people who make all things in government possible... to and including extravagances that keep incumbents in power as infinitum and ad nauseum.

Out of the $ billions in IRS revenues that, some say, are squandered by Congress... it'd seem many political aspirants'd campaign on the plank of taking care of the little fellow... and let the Aswan dams go dry.

On the other hand, considering what "Dollar-a-week" Ford's government pension will be, isn't it amazing he gives any thought to Social Security.—CD

LIVING TOGETHER

Why not live together? Indeed, in these times of high inflation, when the pooled earnings of two people go farther than those of one, why not join forces? When marriage is such a risky proposition why not test your partner and the system before you make the commitment?

In a society which emphasizes freedom and "doing your own thing" why not opt to live together rather than get married? After all, without marriage there are no legal strings or responsibilities and if things don't work out you can always skip out.

Why not blow off the time-worn, outdated, malfunctioning institution of marriage and live together? Because most of the time it doesn't work.

In nearly every culture throughout history there have been rules governing mating and pairing, most of which were for the protection of the woman. In Indian society a woman whose husband died was assured she would be taken care of by her husband's brother or the rest of the tribe.

Alimony laws in times when few women worked, supposedly served the same purpose... they protected a woman who had given up a career for a family from being financially abandoned.

Basically there are two reasons for living together. One is for the pure economy of the situation and the other is as a test or trial before marriage.

Time and again the latter arrangement has progressed along fine until the couple finally does get married and then a few months later, after all the care they took to make sure they were right for each other, they're another divorce statistic.

Why? Mainly because when you're living together there's always the possibility your partner might take off at any time. Since there's no commitment involved, each partner has to work at convincing the other person to stay around... sometimes that means putting up a front or being nicer than you would if you thought that person would stay around no matter what.

Once married you've supposedly made a decision to stick things out together and the facade can be dropped. Often that means taking the other person for granted. Often that means divorce.

People living together under the assumption that it's "just like being married" are in for a shock when they do tie the proverbial knot. Living together and marriage are two completely different ball games.

Living together is further tripped up by the legal hassles involved. No matter how close the situation comes to the husband-wife ideal, society won't legally accept the union without a piece of paper. That means no joint insurance, credit cards, and rarely joint checking accounts.

For all our society's heralded liberalism, living together also bears with it an unconscious sense of social ostracism. It is still out of synch with the system and most friends and especially family don't quite know how to handle the situation much less accept it.

Probably the biggest complication comes with the birth of children. Any children are illegitimate and the sole legal responsibility of the woman. If the man decides to leave, she's stuck and he walks off unscathed.

If she gives up a career and leaves her financial support up to the man in the relationship she gets legally burned again when he walks out without compensation for her sacrifice. Without the sanction of marriage a woman has no legal recourse or recompense in the relationship.

Granted, living together does work in many cases. And many times it seems there are a lot more people married on paper yet divorced in heart than there are people married and united in heart without a piece of paper.

Yet, in the long run, living together seems to be the riskier and less fulfilling of the two propositions.

THINK TANK

Visited with Dawson and Karen Hayward one recent day... and they do indeed have a mind-boggling outlook on the capabilities, potentialities and purposes to which the human mind should be directed.

Their idea of achieving higher and attainable goals involves learning to relax-mentally... and once this difficult process is mastered, such delights as being able to harness the mental abilities to produce concentration will ultimately lead to an increased learning capacity.

From this level of attainment, it naturally follows that people will advance to the point of self-control whereby they'll become 100% responsible for themselves.

With the ability to manipulate all these tools, the person involved can make it on his own... not needing anyone... individually to attain his or her own life and reality.

Dawson applies the approach: "As long as you are reacting you are unable to act", to bolster the proposition that direct application of the powers inherent in homo sapiens can be directed to best serve an individual in life.

Gadzooks—Utopian in our time is at hand... just get those brain cells perking... be your own person... and reality is yours to cherish.

Arise, thinkers... down with the mundane. And M/Ms. Dawson are serious... why in an hour's chat-nerve neither one cracked a smile.

POOR JUDGES

While no strike is presently threatened, a group of judges who are forced to struggle along on annual stipends... mere pittance, they say... of $42,500 give or take a thousand or three... are seeking respite from their money woes to the tune of some 34% hike in pay.

It's not so much their take home pay they are decrying... it's the fact that the depreciated dollar just doesn't enable them to contribute as much as they feel persons of their responsible stature should, to the national economy.

Way I read it, these judges can still spend the same number of dollars year after year on their present pay... but seems they want to be able to spend more... 'cause they claim their dollar doesn't go as far as it used to.

So... you can say to yourself... what's new? The aggravating thing about their proposal is that they keep recalling how much money they could make in private practice. With the puzzler being... if they left private practice, why?

... and they are so accomplished in the field of law that they can double or triple their judge's income, why don't they resign and get to work teaching their nest?

Like... if their life style is cramped due to their judgeships... who coerced them into taking a position so far beneath their dignity and potential... without due consideration being given to the compensation?

Maybe a national day of mourning is in order? MERCENARIES

I really can't understand the attitude in Britain... and elsewhere... over the tight-for-money soldier. Being a mercenary, from my biased point of view, means selling your fighting abilities to the highest bidder... and then getting on the field of battle to do your thing.

OK... so it's hazardous... but, assuming the pay is right, hazards should be taken in stride... and if one of the drawbacks happens to be to get shot for not earning that old pay check... that's why the tiring squad shoos.

Elm Gump where are you? BRIEF BIT: I've achieved a monumental milestone in achievement... already I've taught my pet rock to stand up... CD

1040 US Individual Income Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I found some bills and other papers relating to an addition I built on my house six years ago. Must I still keep these records for tax purposes?

A. You should keep these and any other records of home improvements as long as they are material in determining your tax basis (generally the initial cost of the home plus the cost of improvements) of the original or replacement property.

You will need to be able to determine your tax basis in your house to determine whether you have a gain or loss if you dispose of it by sale, exchange, gift, condemnation or involuntary conversion, to determine the amount of a casualty loss, or to determine the amount of depreciation which may be claimed if the property is converted to business or rental use.

Q. I own a small amount of common stock and the company has just sent me a dividend check. There are many types of dividends with different tax requirements. How should I report mine?

A. Most dividends are ordinary dividends, paid to stockholders from the corporation's earnings and profits. Unless the corporation says otherwise, you may assume that any dividends, whether from common or preferred stock, are ordinary dividends.

The money you receive is considered ordinary income, but the first $100 in ordinary dividends is excludable from taxable income. A husband and wife, filing either jointly or separately, may each exclude up to $100 of ordinary dividends he or she received from qualifying corporations.

Dividends and other distributions of $400 or less can be reported on Form 1040 or Form 1040A. If your dividends exceed $400, you should list them on Schedule B of Form 1040.

For your records, you should prepare a list showing the sources and amounts of the dividends you received during the year, and place a copy of it with a copy of the income tax return.

Q. In December, 1975, I pledged some money to a mountain. There have been little sprinkles of rain here at Storm's Crossing, and I see where it has been raining and snowing all the way. Jack Frost told me he was going to bring a little moisture, but I forgot to tell you. I am going to have to catch Jack one of these mornings early as he runs by on his way up to the mountain; or late in the evening on his way back, and ask him what kind of late winter and Early Spring we are going to have. All the signs now are for a green Spring.

Spring Moves In

Un-Noticed on the Wind.

The west wind which blows some of the time in February and a lot of the time in March is sort of a screen or blind for Spring to move in and be here before you know it.

Up here at "The Wee House on the Hill-side" we catch every bit of wind, north, south, east

Section B - Ruidoso [N.M.] News Monday, February 16, 1976

I have been trying to bring you a very special kind of winter; that is snow enough without too much cold. You have to walk a pretty tight rope to do this, but so far the project is coming along fairly well.

Here lately a little wind and rain got mixed up with the snow.

I don't care how long you have been at this weather-making game, there is always something new. You never "Get it all knowed up" as the Ridge Runner's brother, Lynn, says. I hear they have been having it pretty dry down his way in Dripping Springs; and out on the great plains. The talk about another dust bowl.

Don't you believe it! The moisture will be along, pretty soon.

There will be quite a bit of wind mixed up in the weather for a while now. But not too much dust I hope. Do not worry about the wind. We need the wind too.

Well, cheer up. Spring is on the way.

Yours ever the same,

The Dreamer

Past the Half-Way Ground Of the Winter.

The half-way ground of the winter was along about the Fifth of February. So you see, although the days are more and more touched with the breath of Spring, still we have some winter weather left.

This is a wonderful February. All morning I have been wandering around in a beautiful day, and it is now at this writing half past twelve, on February ten. For two days now a warm Chinook West wind has been blowing, carrying just a little snowy air in it from off the

Tricentennial Century

REVOLUTIONS TO COME

Some aspects of life in our coming century are fairly easy to forecast. Science seems certain to go on offering us new knowledge and new machines, while our rich inheritance of natural resources is being squandered. We are sure to gain a deeper understanding of ourselves and our universe. We will have better computers and deadlier weapons, along with higher prices for fuel and food.

Such physical trends will surely dictate cultural shifts and historical events, but these are not so easy to outline. The social sciences will probably never be as precise as physics or astronomy, yet we can at least try to weigh some of the more probable factors in the culture and the history of the future.

There is a basic principle for such prediction that I learned long ago, as an Army Air Force weather forecaster. It says simply that whatever is happening is likely to keep on happening. Applying this principle to human history, we find that we are in the middle of a world-wide revolution, the one that the Spanish existential philosopher Ortega y Gasset called "the revolt of the masses." Already in progress for several centuries, it seems likely to continue.

In the simplest terms, this has been a revolution against the upper classes, against the small elite groups that used to monopolize money, knowledge, prestige, and power. The primary cause of this revolution, I believe, has been the improved technologies of communication which led to mass education.

To look at a few examples of this process, the printing press helped bring about the American Revolution. The motion picture helped support the Russian revolution; Eisenstein's "Potemkin" is not only a film classic but also powerful propaganda. Radio expertly used, aided the rise of Adolph Hitler. Radio and films, by showing the possibilities of life beyond the mud village, helped break up the old colonial empires. Here at home, the TV coverage of the Vietnam war and the news media prying into Watergate have shaken the prestige of the American government.

Everywhere, the fall of the old aristocracies has left a host of new elitist groups scrambling for supremacy. These include all sorts of political, ethnic and religious leaders, industrial managers and money men, union bosses and army generals. The winners have usually been those most adept at controlling and using the communications media.

Though social predictions are risky, this vast revolution seems likely to go on. The technologies of communication will become more and more efficient. The new elites who manage to seize and manipulate the news media, in most cases party bosses or military men, will grow in power. The outlook for the future of freedom is alarming.

Yet the coin does have a brighter side. The advancing arts of communication can be used to enslave men, but also to liberate them. Our tricentennial citizen, better educated than we are, may well be able to organize and run his world to fit his needs as he perceives them. /Dr. Jack Williamson, English professor, Eastern New Mexico University.

BICENTENNIAL NOTEBOOK

On a more serious note, 1776 was also a time of intense scientific interest in electricity. Electricity had been known since the sixth century B.C., but only in the eighteenth century had a real interest developed. With his kite experiment in 1752 Benjamin Franklin had proved that electricity could be drawn from the sky.

But many questions still remained. What is electricity? What causes it? Of what value is it?

In 1776 interest was fastened on the eel and the electric shock that it gave off. In the Royal Society's "Philosophical Transactions" for 1776 Henry Cavendish, a British chemist, reported on his efforts to duplicate the electric shock or eels through artificial means.

His experiment was not very successful even though he was able to create a small electric shock. Some people considered the entire matter to be highly impractical. Nonetheless, the work continued because there were a few visionaries who dreamed that electricity might somehow be harnessed as a useful tool.

In the meantime, Spanish New Mexicans were concerned about the development of the region. The pattern of development in the eighteenth century was slow expansion into areas where good land and water for irrigation were available. Obviously, the geography of New Mexico predetermined that the area of settlement would be along the major rivers—especially the Rio Grande—in a pattern similar to that of the Pueblos.

Since stock raising was a major activity, its expansion was halted in the 1770's because of the hostility of the plains Indians. Only when a satisfactory accommodation could be reached with them, would it be possible to put more land under pasturage.

Throughout the eighteenth century an accommodation was not possible. Therefore, the amount of farm land remained limited, but especially critical was the restriction of the potentially enormous pasturage.

COCKTAILS AND EELS

As events were moving rapidly toward independence and war two hundred years ago, other developments were made that would have long-range significance.

For example, the first cocktail was said to have been made in 1776 and the use of the word became common. Supposedly, the inventor was Betsy Flanagan, a barmaid at Halls Corners in Elmford, New York. Apparently, the back of the bar was decorated with tall feathers. Reportedly, in 1776 when a drunk asked for a glass of "those cocktails," she made him a mixed drink and put a feather in it. Thus, the name, cocktail, became identified as a mixed drink.

also offered to disabled people under 65 who have been entitled to monthly social security disability benefits for two years or more," Hassen stated.

"Some people decline this protection when they're first eligible, and some sign up once and cancel later."

Hassen may be contacted at the Lincoln County Senior Citizens Center in Ruidoso Tuesdays, between the hours of 10-12 and 1-2.

DDTF fights 'forest fire'

Traffic blocked. Backed up. Fire fight in progress.

CC: Reroute traffic without interfering with other evacuation routes. Call wrecker. Send law enforcement to stop fight.

1503—Injured person at Davis Drive and Yellow Pine. Needs medical attention immediately.

CC: Send rescue helicopter, doctor.

1508—We're losing Ponderosa Heights. Fire heading toward Helicopter 500.

CC: Burn out on fuel break. Move Command Center. Evacuate houses.

1512—Hospital is full. Medical facilities taxed to maximum.

CC: Activate Red Cross. Alternate location for injured. Activate Civil Defense. Call Holloman Air Medical facility.

1517—Out of water pressure. Very little water in Ponderosa Heights.

CC—Order nurse tankers. Use hose lays from river and ponds.

1523—Need help. Fire on private land east of Otero Electric Co-op.

CC: Coordinate USFS and State Forestry and take action.

1528—All telephone communication is lost.

CC: Order backup communication, all available radio channels. Order telephone company to take action to restore lines.

1530—Looting taking place in evacuated homes.

CC: Order backup law enforcement to scene. Call National Guard.

And so it went. Just about every emergency situation was thrown at Command Center personnel. They responded correctly—using the training knowledge received through DDTF instruction and manuals.

Command Center was deadly serious throughout the exercise. Isn't it comforting to know there are trained personnel in the event of disaster? Any disaster: fire, flood, tornado, riot.

The entire exercise was according to a manual. Operations

Center had a copy of the situations that were to come up. Command Center had to act. They didn't know, until the phone rang or the radio blarred, what problem they'd have to cope with.

And as I watched the Command Center personnel operate—and kept one eye on my copy of the manual—it was especially gratifying to see they kept coming up with the right answers and moves. Right off the top of their heads. Right out of their DDTF training.

Congratulations CC personnel. And may you never have to test your expertise against the real thing. And not that you'd be found wanting.

and 58 days off during 1975.

Of a total of 494 criminal cases handled, the solve rate was 52% or 265 cases.

The CID criminal technician division expended 1554 rolls of film during 1975 to print a total of 7247 black and white pictures and 631 color pictures and slides. In addition 100 feet of movie film was shot at the scenes of accidents and crimes.

Communications Center traffic included 88,361 radio messages and 25,360 telephone calls for a total of 111,721 messages.

Communications duties include being receptionists for law enforcement agencies, jailers, office arrests, incident, accident and citation reports, routine maintenance forms and maintaining FCC radio files.

Communications, operating 365 days a year with three operators and one relief operator, totals 1460 work days. Of these hours, 594 are required for special assignments and other duties other than communications. Of the actual total of 1695 work days a year, personnel can perform 866, due to other duties, leaving a total of 229 workdays requiring use of patrol personnel or payment of overtime.

During 1975 the Animal Control Section answered 150 calls, captured 600 animals of which 390 were taken to the Humane Society, and 210 were returned to their owners.

probably have to come up with the funds to add new mains and make other improvements to meet the standards," he said.

He also sees a new village hall complex in Ruidoso's future.

"The village has outgrown the present facility and the jail complex is expected to be condemned," he said. "Ruidoso should have built a new structure in 1971 instead of just remodeling it."

He is also in favor of the village helping to provide a meeting place for area Boy Scouts and other youth organizations. "Ruidoso can probably give them the land and we're trying to get matching funds to build the structure," he said.

"The village is in the shape its in because it can't keep up with the rapid growth," Riley said. "This area is going to develop whether we like it or not because Ruidoso have everything everyone else wants. The big problem is keeping up with the development."

One way of keeping up with the expanded population is to upgrade the garbage collection system, according to Riley. "Personally I'd like to investigate turning garbage collection over to a private company," he said. "It might save some money and we won't have to raise garbage rates."

A building contractor and manager of the Red Men Club, Riley and his wife, Jeanette moved to Ruidoso from Austin, Texas in 1969. Riley was appointed to the vacant trustee position left by Wayne Estes in 1971 and was elected to a second term eight months later.

"There are a lot of projects I'd like to see finished before I leave public office," he said.

source of income rather than taxing local citizens and business too much more."

He feels the major areas which need improvement in the Downs are the streets, sewer and the frontage property along the highway.

"Fifty years ago people maneuvered these roads in covered wagons. In many areas the roads haven't changed a bit since that time," Nelson said.

"I think it's time someone did something about them. Furthermore, the village has been working on a sewer system for over three years. So far there has been little done about it and things are pretty 'hush-hush'. I'd like to see something come out of it," he said.

"The entire frontage property along the highway could also stand some work. There are several condemned buildings which should be cleaned out and the Downs could use a new fire collection station and municipal building. I'm sure we could get some federal money to help beautify the area."

Nelson and his wife, Joanne, the head bookkeeper at the Ruidoso State Bank, have four children, Mrs. Rick Stevenson, Eary, Randy and Kim. All reside in the Ruidoso area.

Alcoholism . . .

alcoholic to do is admit to himself that he has a problem, Gallegos believes. The major symptom to look for is whether you are controlling the alcohol or whether it is controlling you.

Other signs of alcoholism are a strong craving for alcohol, shakes in the morning, delirium tremens, laying off work because of a drinking problem, temporary amnesia during drinking bouts and withdrawal pains.

"Alcoholism is a progressive disease," Gallegos said. "The more you drink, the worse it gets and the less it takes to get drunk. It effects you both psychologically and physiologically, in fact, every time a person gets drunk it destroys 5,000-20,000 irreplaceable brain cells."

What is the solution to the alcoholism problem? Gallegos feels part of the answer may lie in education through both the schools and the mass media. "We need to make people more aware of the problem and of what alcohol can do to you," he said.

Meanwhile, there are several rehabilitation programs in the area for those with a drinking problem. Gallegos can be reached in Carrizozo 24 hours a day, 648-2545, and the Alcoholics Anonymous organization in Ruidoso can be reached at 257-7752 or 257-7265.

"No therapy is 100% effective," Gallegos said, "but we work with each individual and try the program or method he or she thinks will work best."

Lincoln Fox

'Legends

art is the search' —LINCOLN FOX

Galleries where sculptures by Lincoln Fox may be seen are: Kennedy Gallery, New York; Maxwell Galleries, San Francisco; Biltmore Galleries, Los Angeles; Fenn Gallery, Santa Fe, NM; O'Brien's Art Emporium, Scottsdale, Arizona; Gallery Eleven, Lubbock, Texas; Coronado Gallery, El Paso, Texas; Gallery of the Raven, Estes Park, Colorado and Jamison Hall Arts Associates.

BY JERRY SHAW

"Art is the search—not the finished product", commented Lincoln Fox, as he stood by one of his life size bronze sculptures called "The Day of the Eagle". And Lincoln Fox is still searching. The American Indian is his favorite subject. The life-size figure called "The Day of the Eagle" is so expressive and sensitive that you are immediately startled by it. Then, Fox begins telling the story of the legend which he has depicted and you see the emotion that has gone into the sculpture. He knows the story—he knows the man—and it shows in his work.

"The Day of the Eagle" shows the Indian standing with an eagle tucked under his arm. In this legend, the eagle will be killed by smothering. The blanket to be used for the smothering is lying at his feet and since the eagle is sacred to him there is a sadness in his eyes. Deep brown eyes that seem to stare out at you no matter where you are standing. "I like the American Indian, as a subject because they have a beautiful understanding of life. Everyday is a holy day." The Hopi tribe is one of his favorites because of their strong cultural background but his works include nearly all of the tribes. Our nearby Mescalero tribe is missing from his collection but will soon be included.

Other sculptures of Indian legends that are included in his works are "Temptation" which depicts the Indian speaking to animals; "Bird and Shaman", "Passing of the Medicine Man" and "Blessing Little Brother". Each one is starkly realistic. "Art is emotion—not how much work—but the effect it brings," Fox stated, and it is certain that he is after the "real thing."

He does not sketch or draw his ideas before creating his sculptures as he feels that something is lost between the sketch and his creation.

Browsing through the gallery, you know how much emotion has gone into his works, but the average person has no idea of the actual work that is involved. Stepping into the work shop two young men sit working on one of the molds. They are engrossed in their work. Gaylon, who has been with Fox a year and a half and Jeff who has been with him six months, help with the process that goes into the making of a bronze sculpture. Fox does all the finish work himself.

The first medium that is used in the beginning of a bronze sculpture is Victory wax or an oil base clay. The oil base clay or plaster of paris is used in making larger pieces. Most artists use one or the other of these mediums but Fox often uses a combination of the mediums in his works. "You get different effects from the different mediums, which I like", Fox told us.

A rubber mold is made and is carefully split from the wax figure. When the wax figure is removed the mold is filled with hot wax. By using this process you can make as many of the figures as required. "I was making my sculptures in 30's", Fox explained, "but now I make them mostly in 12's." He favors the lower number because he feels he gets a finer quality. Also some of his sculptures are one of a kind.

The wax or clay figures are then taken to a foundry. Fox uses a foundry north of Denver, Colorado and usually makes the trip there about once a month. At the foundry the casting is done. More touching up and finish work is done to the sculpture after it has been bronzed. A brush wax is used in the finishing to give the bronze a shine. With the waxed finish the more you touch the piece the more beautiful it becomes.

A base for the sculpture is the last step using marble or wood. Fox likes black walnut for a base because wood breathes and has a rich natural color. He also likes earth colors for the coloration of the bronze. After the base is mounted at the foundry the finished sculptures are shipped to the various galleries and some are kept for the Fox gallery at Alto.

When Fox was asked how long he had been living in Lincoln County, he smiled and looked at his arm and said, "I quit wearing a watch a long time ago." He has been here about five and one-half years he told us. He was born in Arkansas and I did not ask when, because age did not seem important in a man so young in spirit and in his search for knowledge.

I felt that the talent in this man must be an inborn quality, so I asked him if he played with clay as a child. He laughed and said, "I was covered with band aids as a child. I used razor blades to carve mopsticks!" He was interested in primitive weapons as a child and that interest still remains. School was terrible for Lincoln Fox. He said, "I spent all my time in class drawing." But during his high school years, a scholarship fell in his lap. He entered college with the thought of going into biological sciences but one day at the University of Texas as he was walking down a hall, he passed by a sculpturing class, and that was it!

Before coming to Lincoln County, Fox spent some time as a teacher. He left teaching to become more involved in his work and he and a partner owned a foundry for awhile. Now in the quiet of the Paso Monte Ranch where he and his wife Rachelle live, he is doing "his own thing."

"You burn your bridges behind you—and go ahead", Fox said, and he has done just that. He takes long walks in the woods for relaxation and still pursues his interest in primitive weapons. He says he is selfish—that he does his work for himself and the few who appreciate it. He will soon start a book about sculpturing and its processes. He is a man with a purpose—a man who sets his sights so high that he is still searching.

He and his wife Rachelle have the best of two worlds. They have the seclusion in those hills once known as Lincoln Hills and much traveling in keeping up with their busy schedule. He has fourteen shows scheduled for this year and will be scheduling more. Within the next 30 days he will have a one man show date set at the Kennedy Galleries in New York.

In the past year, he has created three life size figures and by the end of 1976 plans to have finished a total of seven life size works. Plans are to spend a month in Europe in May scheduling shows and researching casting facilities for large commissions.

Some of the events that have kept him busy recently were a commission from the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum in Midland, Texas, at which he presented number one of the Edition to President Ford while he was performing the Museum opening ceremonies; a one man show at the Smithsonian Institution which lasted two months; presented a bronze medal at the Solon Borgum Memorial Sculpture Exhibition, which was the first annual all sculpture show held in Oklahoma City by the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and currently has his works represented the Grand Central Gallery Invitational Show. "The West Returns to Grand Central". This is the Gallery used by Russel and Remington in New York.

Lincoln Fox is a busy man—a man still searching—a man with a purpose.

Going Strong

by Gerry Johnson

Thankfully, He Does Not Stay Retired

At 75 years of age, Ted Chambers is thinking about retiring. He shouldn't be surprised, though, if his friends are a little skeptical. After all, he has retired three times before.

Mr. Chambers is now a teacher-coach at Howard University in Washington, D.C. He has been coaching 52 years, the last 31 with Howard.

"I like to be active," he explained. "I imagine I will work as long as they want me."

Presently, he said, his main duties are in the classroom, although he is the assistant soccer coach at Howard, a university which takes its soccer seriously. It is the defending national champion.

In the past, he has coached just about all sports. "All American sports," he said. "You know, those that are traditionally American." He was the head football coach when he started at Howard.

Then he listed the other sports he had coached there—baseball, track, swimming, basketball, soccer, cricket. Cricket? Not exactly the traditional American sport.

"I coached cricket sort of by accident," he said. "I did so well with the soccer team, which had several foreign students, the university felt I could work with them in cricket. I didn't find it that much different from baseball."

Mr. Chambers, who has two daughters and eight grandchildren, keeps active with his church work, too. He is assistant treasurer of his church and says, "the financial committee there keeps me going."

In addition to his coaching-teaching duties at Howard, Mr. Chambers has been conducting a first aid course and lifesaving as a volunteer with the Red Cross for 40 years.

He doesn't talk as if he is ready to quit his Red Cross duties anytime soon. "I just finished a comprehensive review course in lifesaving," he told a writer with The National Council on the Aging. "No one could be better prepared to teach lifesaving. Mr. Chambers is one who has practiced what he has preached."

Last year, at the age of 74,

Mr. Chambers saved a student's life. "I've dragged a lot of people out of the water in my time," he said, "but this one was almost gone. He was lying at the bottom of the pool. Practically every-thing had stopped. I got him out of the water and what I did after that was almost automatic after teaching it for so long." He managed to get the man breathing and his heart beating.

"He drops by to visit me once in awhile," Mr. Chambers said. "He's doing real well in school. Going to be an engineer."

That is one young man who is certainly happy Mr. Chambers has not stayed retired.

Gardening Popular Pastime

People who have never gardened in their lives are suddenly digging up weed patches to plant productive vegetable gardens. The big incentive for doing this is economy, says Ricardo Gomez, Extension horticulturist at New Mexico State University. He points out that a family of four can save up to $100 on grocery bills by letting their garden produce essential fresh vegetables such as tomatoes, lettuce, beets, zucchini squash, bush beans and peppers.

Even a small area, just 10 feet wide by 15 feet deep, can provide bountiful harvests of tasty vitamin-rich vegetables from spring until fall. In addition, time spent on weeding and fertilizing can be written-off as healthy exercise, Gomez says.

As few as six hybrid tomato plants will produce bushels of fruit. Beets can be harvested 50 days after planting, then started again. Zucchini squash grows fast and forms a dense bush, producing the fruits over a long period if picked regularly.

Carrots are best picked when young and tender. Parsley, the most useful herb in the garden, provides extra flavor to so many dishes. Bush beans are extra productive, and many varieties will mature within 50 days. If the garden produces more beans than the family can eat, they are easy to freeze.

The tomatoes, peppers and cabbage are best started early indoors—about six to eight weeks before transplanting into the garden. Lettuce, carrots, parsley, bush beans, and zucchini squash are best direct-sown into the garden.

To obtain full value from a vegetable garden, try succession sowings, Gomez suggests. For example, sow cabbage in spring, then again in midsummer. At least two crops of lettuce are possible by the same procedure. Also, two plantings of bush beans and carrots will stretch out the supply of fresh vegetables. With beets, three sowings are possible from a single packet—one in April, another in June and a third in early August.

Septic tank registration

Brown Edwards of the Ruidoso Environmental Improvement Agency has notified The Ruidoso News of violations of the EIA regulations governing liquid waste disposal in Lincoln County.

Brown cites Section 102 of EIA Regulations on septic tank registration:

"A. Any person intending to install an individual liquid waste disposal system or to modify an existing individual liquid waste disposal system or privy must obtain a registration certificate for the system from this agency prior to the installation or modification.

"E. Any person seeking a registration certificate shall do so by filing a written application with an agency field office. Application forms may be obtained from the agency.

"C. No person shall install an individual liquid waste disposal system or privy after November 1, 1973, or use an individual liquid waste disposal system or privy installed after November 1, 1973, unless the system is located, operated and maintained so as not, by itself or in combination with other sources, to potentially pollute or cause high nutrient levels in any body of water, potentially degrade any recreational resource, create a nuisance, or cause a potential hazard to public health."

The EIA field office in Ruidoso is across the street from the Post Office at 3788 Sudderth Drive. Office hours are from 8-5, Monday-Friday and application forms are available.

Of the tank problem, Brown said:

"Although the above mentioned regulations became law on November 1, 1973, many people who are installing septic tanks still are not filling for Registration Applications with the Environmental Improvement Agency.

"There are basically two reasons why people do not apply for Registration Applications. One reason is that they are not aware that such a law exists. Others are aware of the law, but have a very complacent attitude toward the Liquid Waste Regulations, and therefore ignore the law entirely.

"The Environmental Improvement Agency Field Office in Ruidoso intends to increase their Environmental Surveys of all areas where domestic type sewage systems are being built and will enforce their Regulation Governing Liquid Waste Disposal. Those who choose not to comply with the above mentioned regulations will be dealt with according to law."

Sew and save

Savings and sewing just seem to go together. In fact saving money is an important reason many women sew at home. Most garments made at home can save you 50 per cent or more. Such savings definitely help stretch your family budget.

With careful planning, your clothing dollar will not be the only thing you save. You can also save time, energy and gasoline by planning sewing projects carefully. Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist at New Mexico State University, offers some suggestions.

Select pattern, fabric and all notions at the same time. This will prevent costly additional trips to the store to pick up a zipper or thread. Also, you'll save time by having everything on hand when you're ready to sew.

Preshrink fabric, zippers and trim as soon as possible so they will be ready for sewing when you are. Put them in with the regular family wash instead of running them in a special cycle. This will save time and energy.

To save time, set up a permanent area for sewing so you can by-pass setting up and putting equipment away. If you don't have space for a permanent area, store all sewing equipment together in a convenient location near the point of use. Shoe boxes, round cardboard ice cream cartons, potato chip cans or cardboard boxes all make excellent storage areas. They can be dressed up with adhesive decorator paper or covered with fabric remnants. Stacked in a corner or stored in a closet or cabinet, the boxes will help keep your sewing equipment organized.

You can save energy by using a portable cutting board. Placed on the bed, a table or even the floor, the smooth surfaced cutting board makes measuring easier. You can also avoid pinning fabric to the bedspread, tablecloth or carpet.

Clean-up will be easier if you use a small paper bag to hold loose threads and fabric clippings. Tape it to the edge of the sewing cabinet or table so it won't get knocked off as you work. If the sewing area is carpeted, an inexpensive plastic drop cloth or an old sheet can be spread over the floor to catch all threads, fabric clippings and pins. When you're finished just shake it over wastebasket or outside.

Using a pattern more than once saves money. Change the garment's appearance by varying the fabric and adding different trims. Save standard pattern styles to use for young children who will eventually grow into that size. Trade patterns with friends who use similar sizes and styles. Be sure all the pieces and instruction sheet are in the pattern envelope before swapping.

Watch for new opportunities to save in your sewing. Keep list of your ideas for future reference and share them with your friends who sew.
