FIRE PREVENTION ACTION REQUESTED BY TRUSTEES

Village water supply OK

The good news concerning Ruidoso's water supply, with the onset of the dry season and resultant fire danger, is that all storage tanks and Alto Reservoir are full.

This puts the immediate reserve supply at 10 million gallons in storage tanks and 80 million gallons in Alto Reservoir.

To date, even with the lack of winter snow, a check of moisture records discloses that the area is only .20 of an inch below the average since records were maintained. The unseasonal rains during normal periods of snow were responsible, village officials said.

Even with the small runoff that will occur during April, the flow of surface water in Eagle Creek and the Rio Ruidoso is termed "adequate" to maintain the 90 million gallons in storage by water department personnel.

The village water system is in better shape than a year ago, water superintendent A. E. Nash said, because of the completion of the new distribution system, made possible by a $100,000 state grant. The final payment of $10,000 from the NM EIA Wednesday, completing the grant, was made by John Wright, Chief of the Water Quality Division and NM Rep. John Bigbee.

Water conservation is being urged by the village trustees and residents are being asked to guard against causing grass or forest fires. "One bad fire," Nash said, "could cost us the bulk of our stored water."

In the event that water use restrictions will be put into effect the village has two emergency supplies: The Cherokee and Hollywood wells.

The village has permit rights to 11 million gallons from the Cherokee well and unlimited gallonage from the Hollywood well.

"Due to the poor quality of Hollywood well water," village manager Jim Hine said, "this source will only be used in the event of an emergency, including water rationing."

The installation of aeration equipment at Alto Reservoir, scheduled this month, will upgrade the quality of water stored there by the addition of oxygen, which will keep the supply fresh.

"We anticipate no critical water shortage," Nash said, "but we're definitely encouraging a curtailment of water use, so that we can maintain our emergency supply at maximum level."

Each day the village conducts several tests of the water in the updated laboratory. "The use of our laboratory," Nash said, "insures the public of having water of the highest quality and gives us a big margin of safety in that we can detect impurities, should the water become Mobley, 11, and Will Cascio, 12. Cascio will be pumped into our distribution lines."

The public is being asked to cooperate with the village in reporting any water leaks discovered. "Leaks usually occur from pipes that have frozen during the winter," Hine said, "and in these homes the non-resident owners might not check on them for several weeks yet. If you notice any flow of water from leaks, or any other cause, please call 257-4014 and report it to the water department."

FINAL PAYMENT RECEIVED — With the presentation of this $100,000 check Wednesday to Ruidoso village manager Jim Hine, left, by NM Rep. John Bigbee, right, as John Wright, Chief of the Water Quality

Division, EIA State of NM, looks on, the last installment of the NM State grant of $100,000 marked the completion of the 1973-74 installation of new water tanks and distribution lines added to Ruidoso's water system.

CITE 1852 TREATY TO DENY STATE TAX CLAIM

Mescalero Apaches file suit protesting gross receipts tax

The Mescalero Apache Tribe filed suit in federal court Thursday in an attempt to prevent the state of New Mexico from assessing an estimated $236,197 in gross receipts tax (4% of total project cost) on contractors responsible for construction on the reservation.

Filed against the state of New Mexico, the State Bureau of Revenue and bureau commissioner Fred L. O'Cheskey, the suit maintains an 1852 treaty and the constitution prohibits the state from assuming jurisdiction over reservation activities without the consent of the tribe.

Under the 1852 treaty between MAT and the U.S. government the tribe claims the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over Indian affairs and therefore, the state cannot interfere with or tax construction projects on the reservation.

According to MAT attorney Kim Gottschalk, of Alamogordo, the state is attempting to collect gross receipts taxes from eight contractors on projects on the reservation—six who worked on the Inn of the Mountain Gods resort complex, one for the recreation area and campground and one for the housing project.

Although the taxes are being assessed against the contractors, the tribe is under contract to pay any taxes incurred in the projects and thus, it claims it will be the taxpayer since it bears the ultimate burden of the tax.

The initial hearing on the motion for an order to prevent the state from assessing the tribe's contractors will be held at 10 a.m. March 29 before U.S. District Judge Howard C. Bratton.

Should the decision favor MAT, the result could be a landmark decision toward increased tribal sovereignty.

According to the Albuquerque Journal the suit asks for the following judgments from the court:

—When entering into contracts for improvements on the reservation, the contracts are not subject to gross receipts taxes and neither the contractors nor the tribe can be assessed or made subject to the taxes.

—The taxes fall on the tribe and not its contractors, therefore infringing on the immunity of the tribe guaranteed by the Constitution, U.S. treaties and New Mexico laws.

—The tribe is entitled to intervene as a party in any administrative tax proceedings before the New Mexico revenue commissioner in cases where the tax must be paid by the tribe.

—The New Mexico commissioner of revenue has denied the tribe and its contractors due process.

—The taxes allegedly imposed and collected by the state be refunded.

Ruidoso's Municipal and Magistrate courts handled several cases the past week on possession of marijuana and liquor violations.

Daniel C. Black of El Paso appeared before Magistrate W. A. Hart on possession of a controlled substance, marijuana, second offense. Black, on a nolo contendere plea, was fined $320 or sentenced to 90 days in Lincoln County jail, in lieu of payment.

Robert Eby of Ruidoso Downs was arraigned before Magistrate Hart on a fourth degree felony charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Eby was released on a property bond of $12,000 to await a preliminary hearing March 30 at 10 a.m.

Black was also arraigned before Judge Sam Nunnally on charges of DWI, reckless driving and throwing hazardous material on the thoroughfare. A hearing on these charges is pending the naming of a court appointed attorney to defend Black.

Fined $50 by Judge Nunnally on charges of riding with an intoxicated driver were Rudy Garcia of Ruidoso, Danny Sanchez of Las Cruces, Leslie Hawkins and Terry Vaughn of El Paso. On a liquor violation, liquor to a minor, Sanchez, Vaughn and Hawkins were each fined $50.

Charlie Platta of Mescalero, on DWI charges, was fined $300 and sentenced to serve 30 days in Lincoln County jail by Judge Nunnally.

Junior racers entering Eldora championships

A trio of Ruidoso Junior Racers have qualified to compete in the Western States Championships at Lake Eldora, Colorado March 27 and 28.

Competing as age division racers under 15 years old will be Lon Nunley, 11, Mark Mobley, 11, and Will Cascio, 12. Cascio will race in the class 3 category and Mobley and Nunley will race in class 4.

To qualify for the Western States Championships, a youngster must compete against junior racers throughout a three state area—Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico.

At the end of the racing season a committee selects two of the most important races of the year and awards points to the top twenty finishers in each race (30 points for first place, then less down the scale).

A junior racer's total for the two competitions is tallied and the high point boys and girls qualify for the championships. Only 14 boys were selected for the class 4 category this year, while 19 qualified for the class 3 group.

In action at Los Alamos March 13-14:

Mark Mobley, racing in Class IV, won the Slalom and Giant Slalom first place trophy with a combined time of 88.72 seconds, first place in the Pajarito Slalom and third in the Giant Slalom.

Lon Nunley, in Class IV, was third in the Slalom. Lon is holding his first and third place awards in down hill racing won at Santa Fe last year.

Mark and Lon are presently tied for fourth place in Class IV overall competition in District I for the state of New Mexico.

Cathy Hadley won first in the girls' Giant Slalom, Class V, March 13. Dave Wilson won second in the Slalom, Class III, March 14.

Rollerettes schedule skating performances

The Ruidoso Rollerettes, recently formed skating group, will make their first public appearances March 24 by performing at the Hondo school gymnasium at 10:30 a.m., and at the Captain HS gymnasium at 1:20 p.m.

The Rollerettes perform precision routines as they skate to popular musical numbers. The girls have perfected a skit depicting the theme of "Convoy", which is a favorite with the troupe.

Bill and Ann Wilson, Ruidoso Skateland owners, organized the group with their regular customers, choosing those with the talent and the interest for skating routines.

"Our girls and boys have worked hard perfecting their skating ability during the past six to eight weeks," Wilson said, "and they need not take a back seat to anybody."

"Though we have only these two bookings, we hope to appear in gymnasiums and roller rinks within reasonable driving distance of Ruidoso. We've worked too hard to let this show drop after Wednesday and I hope anyone interested in having the Rollerettes appear in their towns will contact me at Ruidoso Skateland."

Couples performing are Pete Wilson and Donna Keith, David Wilson and Karen

Keith and the brother-sister team, Paul and Deann Keith.

The Rollerettes had a sneak preview for the parents Sunday night. Comments overheard at this performance—"These kids are great", "I didn't know my kid could do that", and more.

Gladys Knox—a teacher and a friend

In the fall of 1947 Ruidoso High School was born. Until this time high school students went to Stetson or Capitan school. The first teacher to be hired in that beginning year was Mrs. Gladys Knox. She taught English.

The high school building was not finished until after Armistice Day that year. Mrs. Knox recalled, so school was held at Carrizo Lodge until November.

There were eleven in that first graduating class of 1948. The high school had six rooms. In that beginning year, Mr. Crume was superintendent and Mr. Vance was the principal. There were five teachers and a secretary.

Mrs. Knox, besides teaching English, served as the librarian, sponsored the cheerleaders and began the Honor Society. She started taking students to Community Concerts in Alamogordo, Las Cruces, El Paso and Roswell because these programs were not available here.

Kenneth Newson, Ruidoso High School English teacher and an ex-student of Mrs. Knox, has continued taking students to these events as a tribute to her. "She is my reason for being a teacher," Newson stated, "and I hope I am one-tenth the inspiration to my students that she was to me."

She was the drama coach in those years too, and instigated the first junior and senior plays. She suggested the name for the first annual and it is still called the Tomahawk. She also suggested the name, War Whoop, for the school paper and Warriors for the football team. The Warriors played eleven games that first year, she recalled, winning six and tying one.

With the name suggestions of Tomahawk, Warriors and War Whoop, it was not surprising to learn that Mrs. Knox spent all her school years in Oklahoma. She was born in Iowa but moved to Oklahoma when she was five years old.

She is a 1916 graduate of OCU in Chickasha. She hopes to return this year for the sixty year anniversary of her graduating class. She worked toward her masters degree while on a teaching fellowship at OCU. She taught for one year at Panhandle State College in Oklahoma, then spent a summer in England working toward her doctorate at Oxford. She planned to be a college professor, but the next year she decided to go to the Panama Canal Zone to teach high school English. That was in 1928. She taught there until 1933 when she married.

When asked if she enjoyed Panama, she laughed and said, "I loved it, it was the only place where the men really outnumbered the women." She said when the boats arrived with the nurses and teachers, the men would be lined up at the docks.

One of the things most remembered by Bucky Morrison, a former student, are the stories she used to tell her students about her experiences in Panama. He also remembers her as "the most sensitive person I have ever known."

She stayed in Panama until 1946 when she and Mr. Knox moved to Ruidoso. The only schools here at that time were the grade school which is now the Village Hall and the Stetson school. The following year she began her teaching career in Ruidoso at the new high school. She taught there until 1957.

Mrs. Knox first taught in the state of New Mexico, however, from 1924-27. One of her ex-students is former Governor Mechem who served as Governor of New Mexico in the fifties. Mrs. Knox saw him at one time while he was in office and he remembered her as his teacher.

In her second year of teaching in Ruidoso, Mrs. Knox organized the Senior Girl Scouts and in 1958 she organized the Rainbow Girls.

One of her favorite teaching aids was the Readers Digest, Harold Perry, a former student, recalled. Many of her former students remember that as being their first exposure to the Readers Digest and many of those ex-students are still subscribers and avid readers of the Digest because of her use of the Digest as a teaching aid. "Her teaching did not stop in the classroom," Billie Surmick, a former student, said. "She is a real person — not plastic."

Mrs. Knox is recovering from a broken hip and has had a lengthy hospital stay of two months because of the injury. Her spirit is not broken, however, and she is looking forward to leaving the hospital and being able to take up her busy schedule again. She is presently District 4 President of the Federated Woman's Club. She was given the honor recently of being made a life member and Treasurer Emeritus of the Ruidoso Woman's Club.

She still hears from many of her students who no longer live in Ruidoso. Vera Cooper Woods of Illinois, who is now a teacher, wrote Mrs. Knox recently and said, "I appreciate your influence and try to give my students the same encouragement that you gave me."

She was born to teach. Her first teaching experience was teaching a Sunday school class at the age of twelve. Her influence remains with the many students she taught over the years—and she remains their friend.

Garden club meeting

Ruidoso Garden Club will meet tomorrow, March 23, at 2:00 p.m. at the Multi-purpose room of the library.

The program will be "When, Where and What to Plant in Our Area" and will be presented by a panel of the Garden Club members.

Hostesses will be Mrs. Fred Berger and Mrs. Wendell Leeling.

St. Jude's altar and rosary society

The St. Jude's Altar and Rosary Society of San Patricio held their regular monthly meeting on March 8 at the home of Oralisa Sanchez.

Sister Julie held a question and answer period concerning Lent.

A missionary priest will be in San Patricio March 22-26 to conduct a mission for the people of the parish. Mrs. Stella Romero was named honorary member for the month of March for her outstanding work as a past member.

The fiesta of San Patricio was celebrated March 17 with mass at 8:30 p.m. and a procession around the church. A covered dish dinner followed at St. Jude's Center.

Refreshments of green enchilada casserole, beans, salad, cake, coffee and punch were served by hostesses Oralisa Sanchez and Helen Herrera.

The next meeting will be held on April 12.

Happenings by Jerry

Indian gauze is the latest spring fashion fabric. In making the rounds of the shops in Ruidoso there is a wide variety of tops in the gauze which are ideal for today's fuller fashion look. They team well with denim, poplin, gabardine and other popular fabrics being used for spring pants and skirts. They should be popular as long as the ethnic look continues!

The thin open weave fabric in all cotton or cotton blends is comfortable for the warm weather of spring or the hot days of summer.

If you plan to try sewing the gauze it does require some skill in handling, according to Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist at New Mexico State University. Since gauze is woven with twisted yarns, it shrinks when removed from the loom.

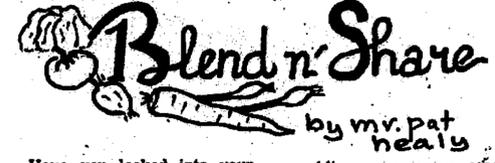

The techniques are similar to those used on most light weight cotton fabrics except the crinkle, ma, get-in-the-way. Stretching the fabric as you sew will help you get smoother seams and finishes.

You may find that you need less ease allowances than on other woven fabrics because the crepey finish stretches somewhat when worn, the NMSU specialist says.

If the fabric seems to ravel, stitch both seam allowances together one-fourth of an inch from the seam line and trim away the seam allowance beyond the stitching.

As with any new fabric, you'll have to use your own judgment to achieve the best results. So, whether you try sewing one—or selecting a top of the light, airy fabric already made up—available in many varied styles at any of Ruidoso's fine shops—have fun teaming it with your favorite spring pants or Levi's!

Have you looked into your spice cabinet lately? It's interesting to note that most of us usually have the usual spices, such as cinnamon, nutmeg, cayenne, oregano, paprika, garlic salt and, of course, a big box of salt, and a can of black pepper. Herbs and spices are so important to any recipe, whether it be appetizers, salads, soups, main dishes and even desserts.

Surprisingly, if you buy them one at a time, how soon you will have a collection, and you'll be thrilled with all the different new flavors they add to your foods.

Needless to say, one could go on and on about all the dishes that certain spices go into—but for now I thought it would be fun to list some of the more unusual ones.

Thyme—add a pinch to make soups, poultry dressing, stews and chowders more tasty.

Marjoram—a mild fragrant herb that's a special friend to lamb, chicken and vegetables.

Cream of tartar—a dual purpose spice as it's used in meringues and as a household cleaning agent for pots and pans.

Cumin—a small dried seed resembling a caraway seed. Used largely in making chili powder for Mexican cookery.

Rosemary—a sweetish minty herb that brings Italian dishes to life.

There are many more but we'll leave those for another time. Like many things, herbs and spices do lose their flavor with age—6 to 8 months should be the longest life of any spice in your cabinet.

Marilyn Bloodworth enjoyed many pleasant vacations as a young girl here in Ruidoso. She recalls the best times she had were at the old Navajo Lodge.

In 1951 a log cabin belonging to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Rice, burned and a new more modern home was built in its place. Marilyn has resided there for the past three years since moving from Sonora, Texas. She enjoys sewing and playing golf. She also is an avid gin rummy player.

Bon Appetit

Tricentennial Century

We looked last week at the future of faith. Logically, we must turn now to the morals of tricentennial citizen. Will his ethical values be inverted, as Aldous Huxley pictures them in "Brave New World," with "mother" a dirty word and sexual promiscuity forced on everybody? I don't think so. People have always been alarmed about the misbehavior of the coming generation. Socrates was made to drink from the poison cup for corrupting the youth of Athens. Here in America, a few years ago, a man's long hair was widely seen as a sign of moral rot. Tomorrow's list of sins will change again. Moral norms are often arbitrary. Among the Puritans, thrift was a virtue and wealth a mark of God's favor. Among the Tlingit and Kwakwaka'wakw of the Northwest Pacific Coast, social status was earned not by gaining wealth but by giving it away. A special totem pole was erected to ridicule Secretary Stanton, the man who bought

Alaska for America, because his Puritan traditions led him to ignore the Indian custom of the potlatch. An extreme inversion of our morality is pictured in H.G. Wells' science fiction story, "The Time Machine." He shows our far-future descendants split into two semi-human races, with the underground Morlocks raising the child-like Eloi as cattle, to be butchered for food. Murder and cannibalism have become necessary social institutions; without them, the society could not survive. Past history shows morals moving in a curious ebb and flow. Under Oliver Cromwell, the Puritans beheaded their evil King and closed the English theaters, stopping the production of Shakespeare's wicked dramas. When Charles II regained his father's throne, he lowered the moral bars again, reopening the theaters and leaving at least 14 illegitimate offspring. Half a century later, Queen Anne was another moralist; Swift satirizes her prudery in "Gulliver's Travels." Today, with our rising tides of crime, with Watergate, with the open promiscuity of admired public figures, with our toleration of obscenity, we seem to be aping Charles II. But we cannot assume that moral standards will continue to relax through the century to come. A reversal is more likely. Even the final decay of religion would not prevent a return to strict morality. In attitudes toward sex, in regard for sanitation, in public decorum, it seems that the atheist nations, Russia and China, are now far more rigorous than America. Though codes may differ, morality has to endure because it offers the essential discipline without which a society cannot survive. Our citizen of the year 2076 may have ways that would shock us, but he will doubtless regard himself as a highly moral individual. He will look back with a horrified fascination at the wicked ways of his ancestors in the twentieth century, and he will be sick to see the way his own kids are running wild. Dr. Jack Williamson, English professor, Eastern New Mexico University.

BICENTENNIAL NOTEBOOK

Washington Honored
Two hundred years ago this week George Washington was still basking in the afterglow of the recovery of Boston. The retaking of the city had been symbolically important, but the scene of action had shifted southward.

Therefore, within only a few days after entering Boston Washington moved most of his troops to New York City on March 27. Later, on April 13, he established his headquarters on Pearl Street in the city.

In the meantime, on April 3, he had been honored by Harvard College when it awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. This was the first of the five honorary degrees he would eventually receive. The others were from Yale in 1781, the University of Pennsylvania in 1783, Washington College of Maryland in 1789, and Brown University in 1790.

All the while, the American revolutionary spirit was growing. An example was the play, "The Fall of British Tyranny, or American Liberty Triumphant" by John Leacock of Philadelphia. By its title one can tell that it was a highly nationalistic drama that helped to arouse AMERICAN SENTIMENT AGAINST THE British and their supporters. A satire of political conditions, it was a chronicle play with numerous scenes that shifted from Lexington to Parliament to Virginia and to other locales.

Without doubt, the sentiment of Americans who were involved and aware was shifting more toward independence. The arts, as in the play just mentioned, were contributing to the development of American patriotism. Also, with the development of a continental hero such as George Washington, the development of a nationalistic feeling was sure to come.

Therefore, as each day passed the movement toward that fateful day when independence would finally be declared became more obvious.

In the Spanish Southwest the social system discussed for the past two weeks was obvious in several ways. For example, transportation was most difficult just as it was in the English colonies, except that the distances were often greater. Since transportation was by donkey pack, oxcart, or horseback the poor seldom traveled very far from home. Traveling was done only as a matter of necessity.

On the other hand, wealthier citizens, government officials, and churchmen traveled much more than might be expected, considering the means of transportation available and the distances to be covered.

Because of their servants, guards, and pack animals, these journeys often were rather impressive. Obviously, travel was a luxury available only to the rich and powerful. /Donald W. Whisenhunt, history professor, Eastern New Mexico University.

Third Day of Spring
Look up at the top of this page and you will see that this is the third day of spring.

And with Easter less than a month away a few lines come to mind from an Easter hymn:
"Now the queen of seasons bright
With the day of splendor
With the royal feast of feasts
Comes its joy to render..."

What a joy it is to live in a land where we have the four seasons. In spring your spirit awakens with the beauty and the fragrance of the blooming flowers, the opening leaf buds and the bright new grass springing from glad Mother Earth.

This is being written on the eve of Saint Patrick's Day and what a beautiful day it is! Not a cloud in the sky and hardly a breeze in the air. I can smell the opening buds of the cottonwoods just down the way—ready to celebrate Saint Patrick's Day with a touch of green.

The night last night was cold and today is between warm and cool—as if spring were holding back so as to come into the world smiling on its first day. We feel as John Greenleaf Whittier felt when he wrote the following lines:
"Close to my heart I fold each lovely thing
The sweet day yields; and not disconsolate,
With the calm patience of the woods, I wait
For Leaf and Blossom when God gives us spring."

Tull Stansell
Another good friend and neighbor has gone to join loved ones upon "That Happy Shore" with our Lord in Heaven.

Tull was always cheery, helpful and kind through the sunshine and the shadow of this life. He always took pride and joy in his beautiful place just down the vale from Ruidoso Downs. A scene of breathtaking beauty is his cherry orchard in full bloom by the wayside as you pass his place and come in sight of the village of Ruidoso Downs.

One day around Easter this orchard was like something out of Heaven and I told him what a favor he had done the world in planting something so beautiful. I then asked him if he thought he would have a crop of cherries this trip. Tull smiled his bright smile and said, "I hope so."

And sure enough, that year there was a bountiful crop of bright red cherries all through the orchard.

Tull will always be kindly remembered by his many friends and we send up a prayer of thanks that God has received him in his loving care.

In the Gloaming
One of the charms of the land of the pinon and pine is that we live in the right spot on Mother Earth to live through four seasons that are especially wonderful; and also we are blessed with a generous share of those smaller seasons—the blending changes in the night and day, the eve and morn, which give such uplift to the spirit and such comfort to the soul.

These late winter and early spring evenings especially hold you in their spell. You can not go inside until the first star appears. Then you need to go out again to look at the moonlit world.

There is something about our world when the sun goes down and there is yet some of its light shining upon the world from the sky—there is something about this, I say, that puts one in the mood of reverence.

We remember the lines from the immortal Longfellow:
"Between the dark and the daylight
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupation
That is known as the children's hour."

First there is the sundown, and this blends into the twilight which fades into the dusk. It is a mystic time of day and you can not tell where the one begins and the other leaves off.

There is a brief little interlude during this gently passing and peaceful time between day and night that reaches its rapture into your heart like a fond benediction that is known by the old Scotch word, "The Gloaming."

The Scottish poet "The Mountain Bard", James Hog, in one of his poems said this time of evening came, "T'ween the twilight and the mirk." (Dark)

And the beloved Scotch singer sang a song that went:
"Roamin' in the Gloamin'
With my lassie by my side
Roamin' in the Gloamin'
On the bonny Banks of Clyde
When the sun has gone to rest
That's the time that we love best.
Oh, it's lovely roamin' in the Gloamin'."

At this time of day the sun sends its last golden glow reflected back and down from the sky. There is a peacefulness and a deep thankfulness to God that comes into your soul.

Then comes the dusk, and the evening star and you are reminded of the lines of the poet Horatious Bonar:
"The star is not extinguished when it sets
Upon the dull horizon; it but goes
To shine in other skies; then reappears
In ours, as fresh as when it first arose."

Tips For The Novice Automechanic

How To Prevent (Or Cure) Engine Overheating

Any venture onto the Interstate System this summer reveals many unfortunate souls who are victims of a breakdown at the side of the road. A cursory glance reveals the hood open and steam rising from the engine compartment.

What can you do to prevent this from happening to YOU?

Don Prieto, technical services director for the Automotive Parts and Accessories Association, suggests you use the following procedure before you leave on that summer trip.

1. Check all radiator and heater hoses. Don't hesitate to replace any that are revealed to be brittle, cracked, aged or weak.
2. Check the water pump for leaks. Replace it if found faulty.
3. Check the radiator cap. A new cap is cheap insurance against loss of coolant due to pressure build-up from sustained high speeds.
4. Correct any cause of engine coolant loss not mentioned above, such as leaking core plugs, leaking head gaskets, leaking radiators.
5. Check all belts for condition and tightness. It is false economy to push old belts past their age limits. Replace dual belts in sets.
6. If the car is two or more years old, flush the radiator and install fresh antifreeze.
7. Blow or flush out all bugs and foreign material from the radiator. Air must flow through it for it to do its job of cooling the engine.
8. Check engine timing.
9. Check operation of engine overheating warning light or gauge. You can't shut the engine down in time if you don't have any warning.

If, in spite of all these precautions, you are faced with an overheated engine, find a safe place to pull off the road to check for possible causes. After opening the hood, leave the engine running, turn off the air conditioner, and even turn on the car's heater.

If in traffic, try the engine at fast idle while the gear selector is in neutral and the air conditioner turned off.

Turning on the car's heater will also help to pull heat out of the cooling system to save the engine.

It may be that the car's cooling system is marginal and the combination of outside temperatures, high speeds and a heavy load adds up to a little more than it can accommodate. But do find a safe place to stop. Prieto warns, even after the warning light may have gone out, and let the engine cool down long enough for you to safely remove the radiator cap and determine if there has been any coolant loss.

Some people find it worthwhile to carry a container of water in the trunk for such emergencies. Even if you do not need it yourself, it can be a blessing to someone stranded between exits on a limited-access highway.

One final word: Always practice safety whenever stopping beside any high-speed road. Turn on your flashers, don't step into any traveled portion of the roadway, don't try to remove any radiator cap while the engine may still be hot, and never re-enter the roadway after your emergency until it is safe to do so - and then only with care and consideration for those coming down the road behind you.

Tennis pro here

Jim Isham came to Ruidoso at the dawn of the skiing era in 1962. As a ski instructor and then the director of the ski school for eight years, he watched skiing blossom into one of Ruidoso's most profitable industries until he left the area in 1972.

Now Jim Isham is back at what he believes is the beginning of another new era in Ruidoso's history... tennis.

Last month Isham became Ruidoso's first official tennis pro when he joined forces with Ray Heid's Ski and Tennis Shop and opened a tennis clinic at Pinecliff Village condominiums.

"The response by local people has been tremendous," Isham said of the clinics and private lessons. "I'd figured we'd have to shake the trees to get anyone out at first, in fact I was anticipating only working three days a week. Already the phone's ringing off the wall and I'm giving lessons six days each week."

Isham became serious about tennis seven years ago and followed his interest to Lake Tahoe and Dennis Van der Meer's Tennis America University in 1973. After weeks of study he turned pro.

"I'm more of a teaching pro than a great tournament player," Isham said. "I started playing tennis too late to be an outstanding player, but when it comes to teaching the sport I feel I can really help someone else."

Like many people Isham started his tennis career hitting balls against a wall on his own. "Because I never had any coaching in my early years of tennis, I spent a lot of time just unlearning bad habits," he said. "If there's anything I can do to keep someone else from having to suffer through that 'unlearning' experience, I'd like to."

Last year Isham attended Victor Braden's Southern California Tennis College and, upon graduation, became an examiner for certifying tennis pros at Braden's U.S. Tennis Academy for nine months.

Generally acknowledged as one of the world's greatest tennis instructors, Braden is responsible for coaching more kids into top level tennis than anyone in the country. "Here in Ruidoso we're using Van der Meer's teaching techniques and Braden's strokes," Isham said.

While Van der Meer stresses colorful, creative techniques, Braden has spent years photographing and researching tennis strokes to determine which manner of hitting the ball is most effective.

"I think tennis will go beautifully here," Isham said, noting the current growth of tennis complexes in the area, including the Sierra Blanca Swim and Racquet Club. The first phase of the eight court club is expected to be finished in May and the club is trying to secure another tennis pro for Ruidoso.

In addition, Isham plans to add an assistant pro, Dave Gilliland, to his program May 15 and is currently being assisted by Sou Garrett, who runs the children's clinic, administers the program and is the only certified racquet stringer in New Mexico.

RUIDOSO'S FIRST TENNIS PRO Jim Isham assists Connie Foster with her forehand at the Pinecliff Condominium tennis courts. Isham is conducting tennis clinics and private lessons at the courts, with hopes it may spark a new sports attraction for the area.

Big game, fur rules printed

The 1976 big game and fur-trapping seasons proclamation is off the presses and being delivered to N.M. Game and Fish Department offices and vendors.

Both the big game and 1976 Fishing Regulations will be available with the purchase of licenses for the new license year, beginning April 1.

The big game regulations established by the State Game Commission in a February meeting set seasons only. Bag limits will be set in May after biological surveys are completed.

Sportsmen purchasing licenses that included a deer tag—a general hunting and fishing license, for instance—will have their licenses validated at time of purchase for one of the three deer-hunt periods set for November, according to the regulations.

However, the hunter will not be bound by his initial choice—the license validation can be changed through Nov. 5 by a Game and Fish Department officer.

The deer season opens on Nov. 6; it will be a stratified season—divided into three hunt periods, as it was in 1975.

Hunt period A-One is opening weekend, Nov. 6 and 7. Nov. 8 will be closed to all deer hunting. A-Two, the second hunt period, runs from Nov. 9 through Nov. 14. A-Three opens Nov. 13 and runs through Nov. 21, overlapping A-Two for two days.

The 1976 elk season is also stratified and will be the same on both public and private lands. Separate applications are required for the elk hunt; all eligible applicants will receive an elk license in 1976.

Eligible applicants, with a few exceptions involving bow-only hunters and private landowners or lessees, are those who did not hold an elk license or an authorization to purchase one during 1975.

Lethal Mixes

Never mix household or gardening chemicals with anything else. The result could be an entirely different compound

Page 7—Ruidoso (N.M.) News and extremely dangerous. For example, mixing chlorine bleach with ammonia, lye or any alkaline substance produces an irritating gas which can cause serious injury or death.

'Good Sam' Advisory Board

An alcoholic's story . . . top, to bottom

(Editor's Note: The following is the true story of a Lincoln County resident. A fictitious name is used to protect his friends and relatives.)

The man in the corner chair speaks in a soft voice. The darkened room cannot hide the deep lines in his face. The wrinkles betray his hard life.

While at the top, Felipe has worked variously as a cost accountant, a design engineer for a large corporation and a minister.

At the bottom, he has managed to live through three suicide attempts, served nearly seven years in prison and been hospitalized 20 times.

Felipe is an alcoholic. He has been for 20 some odd years. "I started drinking in high school and got drunk the first time at 15," he said. "It wasn't just social drinking, I was trying to escape from something. . . get away from reality."

Like many alcoholics, Felipe had a serious psychological problem behind his drinking. Psychological causes of alcoholism range from an inability to accept something in the past or the death of a close friend or relative to an inability to accept present behavior traits inherent in a person's personality, such as homosexual or bisexual tendencies.

After years of dropping in and out of hospital rehabilitation programs and numerous marriages, Felipe attempted a desperate suicide by drug overdose. When it proved unsuccessful he took it as an omen from God and joined the ministry.

"For two years I was a dry drunk . . . a minister who preached the story of an alcoholic who found God from his heart," he said.

However, problems erupted and, unwilling to cope with them, Felipe left the ministry and started drinking again. Within six months he was serving a 1-15 year prison sentence for armed robbery.

Later prison sentences were to include five years for burglarizing a jewelry store and another five years for writing a fictitious check. "I was so drunk at the time I couldn't even remember writing the check that sent me to prison," Felipe said.

"Statistics show approximately 80% of the men and women in prison are there for drug and alcohol related offenses," he said. "Many alcoholics can't hold a job and when they run out of money for liquor they take to crime."

According to Felipe, money and organized crime connections helped shorten his actual prison stay, but the power and influence of criminal friends couldn't do anything to help his drinking problem.

About a year ago he tried suicide again through a deliberate automobile accident. Then in the fall of 1975 he tried once more with another overdose.

The experience brought him back to God and into contact with Lincoln County's Alcoholic Abuse Worker for Southwest Mental Health, Paul Gallegos.

Through the help of Gallegos, a rehabilitated alcoholic, Felipe was able to stop drinking and rejoined Alcoholics Anonymous.

"I'd been in, and out of A.A. many times, but just couldn't accept and incorporate all the steps in its program," he said. "Until I could admit the exact nature of my wrongs to God, myself and others and turn everything over to God, I kept slipping back to alcohol."

"My faith in God has probably been the biggest help in overcoming alcohol," he said. "Then there's also the fellowship provided through A.A. Having friends who understand your problems helps you stay sober. It helps to know someone cares."

Felipe believes most people goof in their attitude toward drinking when they confuse social drinking with "having to drink to be sociable."

"When a person can't feel comfortable or be part of a group without being high then he is on his way to becoming an alcoholic," he said.

As an alcoholic, Felipe fights a daily battle to stay off the bottle. As an alcoholic he can never be cured and just one drink can send him back to the bottom. He has gone back to work and will soon enroll in the Alcohol and Drug Counselor Training Program in Colorado.

"My dream for the last three years has been to become an alcohol abuse counselor and go back into the prisons to help those who are suffering through the same things I went through," he said.

The current demand for alcohol counselors is tremendous and few have experienced alcoholism first hand themselves.

"So many alcoholics who want to quit, slip and then have to keep slipping straight into the gutter before they do anything about their problem," Felipe said. "If they could just sit down and discuss and admit their problems with someone else they might be able to face up to them before it ruins their life."

Alcoholics wanting help, or someone to discuss their problems with, can contact Paul Gallegos 24 hours a day, 648-2545, or the Ruidoso AA organization, 257-7265.

SANTA FE—The Public Service Commission will grant a moratorium on new connections by Southern Union Gas Co. in major New Mexico areas. The unanimous PSC order will be issued late this week or Monday. The moratorium will apply to new residential, commercial and industrial connections.

The affected communities: Tucumcari, Portales, Clovis, Silver City, Alamogordo, Grants, Gallup, Animas, Millan, Thoreau, Tyrone, Loving, Fruitland, Kirtland, Texico, Anthony, Truth or Consequences, Tularosa, Central, Hurley and Bayard.

Also, Ambrosia Lake, White Sands Missile Range, Cannon Air Force Base and Laguna Pueblo. Commissioner Gary Blakely, a former Portales resident, called the moratorium "a necessary evil."

SUG asked for the moratorium because its supplies from El Paso Natural Gas Co. were curtailed by a Federal Power Commission order to accommodate EPNG's California market. The moratorium has been resisted strongly by New Mexico communities which argue the holddown places them in a no-growth situation.

At a PSC hearing Feb. 17 on the SUG request Laguna Pueblo asked for special relief and an exclusion from the moratorium. But the PSC order will include Laguna Pueblo. Department of Defense spokesmen testified against the moratorium for WSMR and Cannon AFB at Clovis. Sen. Kenneth Schlichter, R-Curry-Quay, strongly objected to the moratorium because of its effect on Tucumcari and Clovis.

Meanwhile, state and SUG officials met at mid-week in Santa Fe on SUG plans to build a 40-mile natural gas pipeline from its Star Lake Compressor Station in San Juan County to Grants. The line could be completed in November. It would ease supply problems in the Grants-Gallup area and other parts of SUG's New Mexico system. Gas would be piped from wells drilled by Teneco.

The legislature this year authorized $7 million in state severance tax bonds for the State Energy Resources Board to build, own or lease a natural gas pipeline. In the meeting this week with SUG officials were PSC, SERB and Development Department officials.

State energy officials and legislators have traveled recently to several moratorium-affected communities and explained New Mexico energy supply problems in meetings. Among them were State Energy Director John O'Leary, Legislative Energy Committee Director Ed Grahm, Sen. Aubrey Dunn, D-Alamogordo, and Reps. John Mershon, D-Cloudcroft, and George Fettinger, D-Alamogordo. Rep. Mershon is Energy Committee chairman. Dunn sponsored the pipeline bill.

A request to move five State Museum division directors from classified to exempt status was withdrawn after State Personnel Director Glen Gares sent a letter to Museum Director George Ewing. Gares said Ewing will study the matter further and send recommendations to the Museum Board.

The Museum Board voted the exempt status request Feb. 18 to establish a more direct line of authority between division directors and Ewing. The request was subject to State Personnel Board approval. Gares told Ewing in a letter March 10: "The matter may be a more complex administrative issue than appears upon a casual glance. It is because of this impression that I would like to recommend that you get together with your board and study the matter further with the thought of arriving at alternative courses if not better ones."

The affected State Museum division directors: Stewart L. Peckham, anthropology; Donald O. Strel, fine arts; Yvonne M. Lange, folk art; Thomas J. Caperton, monuments, and Michael J. Warner, education.

The legislature quietly inserted a $75,000 appropriation in Gov. Jerry Apodaca's budget for a governor's educational evaluation unit. By legislative order none of the money can be spent before Dec. 1. Voters will decide the fate of a constitutional amendment Nov. 2. It would allow Gov. Apodaca to run for a second term in 1978.

The money allows Apodaca to establish a council to evaluate and make recommendations on goals, processes and organization of the education system. Harry Wagulter, Apodaca's Secretary of Education and public school finance director, disclaims responsibility for the idea. But Wagulter is getting credit in capitol halls.

A memorandum Jan. 23 from Budget Director Fred Muniz to Finance Chief Vincent Montoya says: "The public education process has received sincere criticism and questioning from various sources, including parents, education professionals and legislators." Muniz said a public concern has been declining scores of New Mexico elementary and secondary students on national standardized tests.

STRONG LOCKS

If your home has never been broken into, consider yourself lucky. Burglaries have increased 31 per cent from 1964 to 1973. So rather than relying on luck, you may want to take some steps to protect your home against burglary. If so, the place to start is your door.

And the National Bureau of Standards has a new publication to help you. It describes door construction problems, including sliding glass patio doors and jalousie doors, hinges, and locks. For a single free copy of "Home Security Starts at Your Door," write to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 94, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Here are some of the tips: —Choose the right lock. If your primary lock is the key-in-the-knob type, it is easily attacked. Replace it with a stronger lock, or install an additional lock.

—You can increase the security of your door by installing a good deadbolt lock. A deadbolt is a straight bar, usually rectangular, that is squared off at the end. You lock it by turning a key or knob. The deadbolt of a lock, or any slide bolt used to back up the primary lock, should be at least 5/8-inch square, made of steel or solid brass, and preferably, stick out of the lock more than 1/2-inch.

—Another type of deadbolt is the verticle bolt—the lock looks like fingers from both hands interlocking. This lock is considered to be one of the most secure locks available.

—Be careful when buying locks. Often what appears to be a good brass lock if nothing more than brass-plated "pot" metal that will break very easily. As a general rule, avoid very inexpensive locks unless you are buying from someone who is qualified to assure you the products will provide the protection you need.

—Take extra precautions if you home has panes of glass large enough to reach through within 40 inches of the door knob or lock. Either cover the glass with protective grillwork or replace it with a burglar-resistant type of material. And you should consider locks that require a key to open them from the inside as well as the outside.

Who's crying wolf?

A year ago we were in the middle of the worst recession since the great depression. Watergate's shadow was cast over the entire government. Nixon was in San Clemente in disgrace. Scandals continued to unfold.

President Ford, characterized by some as a person prone to tripping over his own feet, seemed an easy mark for any strong Democrat who would rear up and confront him.

The President was fighting Congress with vetoes of major legislation designed to pump up the economy. A few of those vetoes were sustained by the slimmest of margins.

The opposition party big guns, Humphrey, Kennedy, Jackson, McGovern, flayed the President unmercifully. His economic program, or non-program, to hear them tell it, was ruining the country. More government programs. More government money. More taxes. Make more jobs. That's what FDR did. That's what needed to be done now to keep us away from another great depression.

Mr. Ford was steadfast with his nonprogram. He voiced the strange notion that maybe things would get better, quicker, longer if the feds kept to themselves.

The recession isn't over. But it's certainly easing greatly. Unemployment isn't perfect. But it's certainly lower.

The economy is better. The sun is shining again. And now what are the big Demo guns saying? Why, the same thing. They're still preaching disaster and downfall at the hands of that fellow who even falls down on skis.

They'd better find another argument. They'd better find something else to campaign on. Folks didn't buy their solutions last year, and in a rising economy, they're not going to buy it at election time this year.

When whoever of that herd of Democrats gets nominated finally, he'd better find some new campaign strategy. Party loyalty doesn't mean much to many of today's voters. Many of them are wanting to hear meaningful things from their leaders.

And, for many, "meaningful" means less from Washington. It means less from their pocketbook, and more left-at-home.

The President hasn't completely gotten that message himself. But, he got enough of it to keep his hands pretty much out of the economy. The recession got better because of that. —KG

HOUNDING PROBLEM

Ruidoso is literally going to the dogs... and cats and dead skunks and porcupines and badgers and other animals.

It has been ever since Feb. 15 when the Lincoln County Humane Society shut its doors. As packs of wild dogs and wild cats once again roam the streets unfettered and unchallenged and dead animals lay to rot in the road for days, citizens are beginning to divide into factions over what should be done about the animal control problem.

One group backs the Humane Society both vocally and financially. After all, no one else seems able or willing to handle the problem... both villages and the county are in financial straits and are trying to push the burden off on each other or anyone else available.

Humane Society president Joe Truitt is gung ho for establishing a new shelter as soon as possible and has already located several suitable sites.

Donations for the new shelter have already started coming in from individuals, although neither village or the county has offered any monetary support. Yes, it looks like the animal shelter might be well on its way to being reestablished... that is, if it wasn't for that other faction.

Seems one group of Ruidoso Downs residents doesn't hanker to the notion of a dog pound in or anywhere near its backyard. The rumor is the animals are noisy, smelly, rabid and otherwise obnoxious and that their presence would depreciate property value.

Could be... but from what Truitt says, the chances of the dogs or cats getting out of hand or overly odorous is unlikely. Still, he refuses to establish a shelter in an area without full community support.

Funny, but with all the anguished cries to "do something about all these dogs wandering around here", one would think the Humane Society would automatically have community support.

Could it be some people don't really want the leash, license tag and rabies ordinances enforced?

According to Truitt only 10 dog licenses have been issued in Ruidoso Downs since the ordinance was put into effect last year and veterinarian Lynn Willard can rarely get Downs residents to bring in their pets for rabies shots.

A hypocritical attitude prevails in this community... one where citizens point an accusing finger at their neighbor and insist that his dogs be licensed, leashed, kept in their own backyard and kept quiet.

However, when one of their own pets gets picked up or they have to pay a few dollars for a yearly license or shot, those same citizens are often outraged. "What do you mean you put my little Poo-foo in the dog pound? She's really very gentle... the only reason she bit that little boy is because he said she looked like a Brillo pad with legs."

If Ruidoso and vicinity is serious about doing something about the animal control problem its citizens are going to have to stop living a double standard of justice.

As things stand now it looks like the Humane Society has the only viable solution to the problem.

If people want to have a shelter and get the strays off the street they're going to have to support the Society. That may mean providing financial support and volunteer help.

It may also mean your dog will have to play by the rules just like your neighbor's.

If Ruidoso citizens are unwilling to sacrifice a little of their pet's freedom then they should stop complaining and keep gambling on another rabies quarantine.
