The Ruidoso Downs trustees Thursday night, at a special meeting, approved supplying water to Jack DiPaolo's All American Estates subdivision on a two to one vote.

The action solved, as mayor Norman Wheeler said in opening the meeting, the "thorn in our side the past couple of months."

Trustee Rose Bernard advised the council that she had inspected the plat filed by DiPaolo at the office of the Lincoln County clerk and that "council and Planning and Zoning signatures were on the plat." She also stated that it was "a proper subdivision" and that DiPaolo had "complied with hydrants" and other requirements.

Bernard then made the motion "To give a water tap, or taps if needed, not to exceed eight" to DiPaolo. Trustee Albert Richardson seconded the motion.

Before calling for the vote, mayor Wheeler spoke briefly in opposition, stating, in part, "I don't feel it (the subdivision) should be brought in. It will cost the city more than we'll ever get back. If we allow this subdivision, when it's approved by the city it's their baby. One of these days it will blow up in our face."

Bernard then said that Ordinance 76-3, passed and approved July 12, 1976, was "not published, so far as I know and does not relate to Mr. DiPaolo's subdivision."

Wheeler also said that DiPaolo "should resubmit plans to Planning and Zoning and the council."

On roll call, Bernard and Richardson voted "aye", with trustee "Boots" Nelson voting "nay."

Wheeler then said: "Motion carried. Turn the water on."

Mrs. Jack DiPaolo (Barbara), who has been active in the action to secure water for the subdivision, said: "You want a statement for the paper? All right! That's it! All right!"

Village attorney Jack Whorton and DiPaolo's attorney Frank R. Coppler of Santa Fe, were present at the meeting but did not participate.

New airport commission organized here Thursday

Four members of the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport Commission (SBRAC) held an organizational meeting Thursday, naming Colonel Richard Hall, United States Air Force, retired, as chairman and Wyndham Runningwater, tribal development director for the Mescalero Apache Tribe (MAT) as co-chairman.

Present were Hall, representing the village of Ruidoso; Runningwater, representing MAT; Norman Wheeler, appointed by Ruidoso Downs trustees; George Shoemaker, the Lincoln County commissioners' appointee, and Tim Morris, Ruidoso Municipal Airport manager and ex officio SBRAC member.

No representative of the fifth government involved in the commission, Capitan, was present.

SBRAC was formed to guide the progress of plans for a jet-capable airport to serve the greater Ruidoso area, as well as to administer the facility once it is in operation.

The five members agreed Thursday that their first step should be acquisition of the 1,700 acre site at Fort Stanton Mesa, the area selected in a comprehensive study conducted by Albuquerque engineering firm Herkenhoff-Parsons, and accepted by the former airport advisory committee.

SBRAC representatives will approach officials at New Mexico State University's College of Agriculture, as the college is conducting long-term range research on the mesa and has opposed the plan to locate an airport there.

Hall said SBRAC will make an effort to determine whether the research and the airport would be at cross purposes. The federally owned area is controlled by the state's Bureau of Land Management.

However, MAT lays claim to an aboriginal title to over 20,000 acres on the mesa, and Runningwater said the tribe "will take the position that they will relinquish the 1,700 acres" to the commission, provided MAT's efforts to take title to the land are successful.

However, he pointed out that SBRAC could lose some 60 percent funding for the airport should SBRAC and not MAT be in control of the site.

Runningwater, who was recently in Washington, D.C., said he contacted Richard Desautels, a Federal Aviation

Administration official assigned to work on Indian projects, and that Desautels "seemed to think there would be no problems."

In other business, the commission set up subcommittees:

- Runningwater, Hall and Shoemaker are in charge of land acquisition.
- Shoemaker, Wheeler, Runningwater and Hall will see to financial assistance.
- Wheeler is in charge of public relations, and Shoemaker is in charge of finances.

At a later date, subcommittees will be formed for budget and technical aspects of the project. The next SBRAC meeting will be December 1, 2 p.m., place to be announced. Meetings will be held regularly the first Thursday of each month.

Girl says 'abduction, stabbing' was a hoax

It was a hoax — the alleged abduction and stabbing of a Roswell juvenile reported in The News Thursday.

The 18-year-old girl, upon questioning by members of the Chaves County District Attorney's office and members of the Roswell Police Department, Thursday afternoon admitted that it was not true.

The girl, who was treated at the Ruidoso Hondo Valley General Hospital's emergency room Thursday night for lacerations, had told Lincoln County Sheriff's officers and Ruidoso policemen that she had been stabbed by her alleged abductor before making her escape. The cause of her injury had not been determined Friday.

"There was no basis for the story she had told all of us," Guy Bowers, Lincoln County deputy sheriff, said Friday.

Further action by the Chaves County District Attorney is pending results of a continuing investigation, an office spokesman advised The News Friday.

Fire fighting facilities survey underway here

A survey of Ruidoso's fire fighting and protection facilities is being conducted today by Robert B. Lillie, engineering representative of the Insurance Services Offices of New Mexico.

"The inspection," Fire Chief Bill Seelbach said, "will have a direct effect on our fire insurance rates."

"Our volunteer department, due to the equipment we have and the skill of our highly trained firemen, has been rated high enough in the past to insure that Ruidoso receives an excellent insurance rate."

The inspection will cover available water supplies and the distribution system, the organization of the fire department, location of stations and the operation of the department.

Lillie will also inspect buildings to evaluate adherence to construction regulations, electrical installations and fire prevention practices employed.

"The wholehearted cooperation of all building owners visited by Lillie will be appreciated by the members of your volunteer fire department," Seelbach said.

Volunteer instructors needed to teach 20 handicapped skiers

Twenty handicapped children will learn to ski this winter on Sierra Blanca's slopes if, Diana Grover said, "we can recruit enough strong intermediate to advanced skiers to guarantee a one-on-one ratio for all lessons."

To achieve this goal, Grover said today the Sierra Blanca Handicapped Skiers Association will hold a general recruitment meeting at 8 p.m., November 12 at the Mountain Ski Shop.

"We need," Grover said, "more than 20 qualified skiers willing to donate one day a week starting January 18 to act as a guide instructor for blind children and to teach mentally retarded children."

The student list includes 12, possibly 15, blind children from 7 to 10 years old from the Alamogordo State School for the Visually Handicapped; five retarded students from Fort Stanton and three cerebral palsy/retarded children from El Paso, Texas.

"The children will average eight years old," she said.

The blind children will be on the slopes Wednesdays, beginning January 18; the retarded students will ski on Thursdays, beginning January 19. "Tentative hours will be from 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. those days," Grover said.

The association, founded last year, offers free lessons, equipment and lift tickets to the handicapped children.

"We need conscientious people who will donate their time," Grover said. "All volunteers will be trained with 'on the hill' clinics prior to being assigned a student."

"Anyone interested, who can't attend Saturday's meeting should contact me at 257-7155."

'Friends of Chamber' rallying to fund drive

John Hobbs, executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce said Saturday, "Friends of the Chamber are rallying to our fund drive."

He noted that Dessie Sawyer of Tatum pledged $1,000 to the Chamber at the time she won the Cadillac at the Cadillac Party and that her check in that amount was received Friday.

In addition Sonny's Barbeque bought an additional $75 full membership and Mack Rice, of New Mack Rice Company and K-Bobs Steak House of Plainview, Texas, bought a $75 membership.

"Rice," Hobbs said, "is an avid supporter of Chamber activities and I trust those Chamber members in the Ruidoso area will support his sentiments, as expressed in his letter."

Rice's letter follows:

Dear Mr. Hobbs: I read, with concern, that the Chamber is having difficulties and would like to present our check for $75 to help in any manner you see fit. We would accept absentee membership or you may call it a donation.

We are contemplating a business venture in Ruidoso, at some point in the future, and will certainly be a Chamber member at that time - perhaps there is no time better than the present to have some small involvement.

I am a director of our Chamber, Plainview, and have membership in Dimmitt, Texas, where we have another steak house and believe in them 100%. Good luck and we're looking forward hopefully, to being an active member some day.

Mack Rice
P. S. Your promotional program sounds good!

Village, school boards to meet

The Ruidoso trustees will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Ruidoso Public Library.

Agenda topics include reviewing revised cost estimates on Eagle Creek dam and reservoir, requested street repairs in Highway Addition, report on side loading garbage trucks and a new solid waste disposal site.

Review of principals' and the superintendent's contracts, a report on special education in the school system and the 40-day enrollment report will be considered by the Ruidoso Board of Education at their regular 7 p.m. Tuesday meeting in the White Mountain Middle School cafeteria.

In other business, the board will call for bids on surplus furniture and discuss the on-site program review conducted by the State Department of Education.

At the conclusion of the meeting, principal Sid Miller will introduce the middle school faculty and staff to the board.

'State of' luncheon reservations 'good'

Reservations for the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce sponsored "State of the village, state of the county" luncheon at the Inn of the Mountain Gods November 17, "stand at 150, as of today," John Hobbs, executive director, said.

In addition to individual tickets for the $7 luncheon, Hobbs said that the Ruidoso Noon Lions Club will have "Ladies' Day" at the Inn and the Altrusa and Rotary clubs will have their lunch there also.

"This meeting," Hobbs said, "with Ruidoso mayor Lloyd Davis Jr., county commission chairman John Sudderth and Lieutenant Governor Robert Ferguson as speakers, should provide an excellent insight to the problems facing village and county government and how the state departments work with these entities."

Reservations for the luncheon are available at the Chamber office on Sudderth.

Sanchez quits deputy post

Ernest Sanchez November 1 resigned as undersheriff of the Lincoln County sheriff's department.

Sanchez, who opposed Sheriff Bill Elliott in the last general election, was named by Elliott as undersheriff, or chief deputy, in January.

The News was unable to contact Sanchez for a statement.

Sheriff Elliott had announced that Sanchez' successor will be named soon.

WATS motel reservation service offered by Heid

Local businessman Ray Heid has taken over the WATS motel reservation service from the Chamber of Commerce, and has been operating it since Wednesday.

A new telephone number will be announced shortly, Heid told The News Thursday, and the full-time person answering calls will be Johnnie Tarleton.

Heid said he took over the WATS lines not only to "bail the Chamber out," but also because he believes the service is "super-important to the community."

"We plan to encourage people (calling) to come to Ruidoso, regardless of how busy it is... We'll never turn anybody away."

"The service has changed in one way from what it was while the Chamber had it — the motel accepting the reservation will be able to talk directly with the caller."

Headquartered at Heid's ski and tennis shop, the WATS service will be in operation on weekdays from 9 a.m. till 5 p.m. and on holidays until 10 p.m., he said.

"Our goal is to help anybody who is having trouble obtaining a reservation, and we will stay with them until they find a place," Heid said.

"The service will be funded by participating businesses."

Tender meat possible through electricity

Can less tender meat be electrically shocked into becoming more tender meat? Two researchers at New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station think it can.

To substantiate their theory, the researchers are shocking beef carcasses with 110 volts of electricity, in an effort to make the meat more tender. They are also trying to determine if high temperature chilling and the use of an insulating material will also make beef more tender.

According to Drs. Earl Ray and Dennis Stiffler, members of NMSU's Animal and Range Sciences Department, beef carcasses which contain massive fat deposits usually produce more tender meat. On the other hand, carcasses having less fat tend to produce less tender meat. The question is, why?

"One obvious answer is the fat," says Ray. "We now think the principle, and perhaps only function served by massive fat deposits is to insulate carcasses against cold shortening of the muscle fibers of toughening."

Ray and Stiffler hope that the data they collect in their research will support their theory that electrical stimulation, high temperature chilling and carcass insulation will inhibit cold shortening.

To fully understand cold shortening, we have to go back to the time the animal was slaughtered. Carcasses have to be chilled as soon after death as possible to minimize protein breakdown and to prevent the growth of micro-organisms. So after slaughter, carcasses are stored in a chilling room where the usual procedure is to let them age at two degrees centigrade for five to seven days.

During this aging time, chemical changes begin to take place in the meat. These chemical changes are particularly influenced by temperature. According to Ray, temperature changes of just 10 degrees C can cause a wide range in the rate of chemical reactions taking place within the meat.

It is during this aging time that fat deposits become so important. "The fat insulates the carcass muscles against the effects of the cold temperature, making the meat more tender," Ray says.

But that insulation occurs only in fat carcasses. On lean carcasses there is little fat to insulate the muscles. Because of this lack of insulation against cold, the chilling system removes body heat from the carcass so rapidly that its muscles can contract up to 40 to 50 percent of their original length. It is this extreme muscle contraction, called cold shortening, that often makes lean carcasses less tender. Now, Ray and Stiffler think they can prevent such extreme contraction in lean beef.

To test their theory, the researchers slaughtered 20 yearling steers off grass at the NMSU Meats Laboratory. Before the carcasses were split into two sides, half of each beef was chosen to serve as a control beef, while the remaining 20 sides received four different treatments.

Five sides were aged in a cooler (high temperature chilling) for 24 hours at 12 degrees C prior to being placed in a cooler at 2 degrees C for seven days of aging.

Another five sides were electrically shocked or stimulated with 110 volts of electricity for a period of 60 seconds. Following the electrical stimulation, the carcasses were aged in a cooler at 2 degrees for seven days.

A third set of five sides were insulated in a plastic (air cap) insulation material for 12 hours. Then the carcasses were aged for seven days at 2 degrees C.

The fourth group of five sides were electrically stimulated and then insulated in the plastic insulation for 12 hours and then aged for seven days at 2 degrees C.

During the aging process, the researchers will monitor the temperature and pH changes for each side of beef. The slower the muscles cool, the more tender the meat will be. In addition, they will make bacteriology evaluations as well as evaluate each carcass for yield and quality grade factors, using USDA grading standards.

Volleyballers place fourth in region

The Ruidoso High School girls' volleyball team placed fourth in the regional tournament held this weekend in Ruidoso, coach Sergio Castanon said.

Regional winner was Animas, followed by Dexter and Texico.

In the first round of the playoffs, Dexter defeated Ruidoso 15-1, 15-2 and in the consolation game, Texico defeated Ruidoso 15-12, 16-14.

"It was one of those days where we couldn't get going," Castanon said. "We had a good week of practice, but came Saturday, we couldn't put it together."

"The team had an average year overall. Juniors coming back next year will be good, but we lose a lot of good players."

The girls' basketball team begins practice tomorrow with their first game November 19 against Tularosa.

"I'm looking forward to an interesting season," he said.

Pepper Added Spice to Retirement

Retirement wasn't by choice for Sidney Sparks, but he knew the day of mandatory retirement was coming so he prepared for it. As a result of that preparation, the 76-year-old Mr. Sparks has a booming second career.

With a background in engineering and design and with an interest in woodwork, Mr. Sparks knew long before his retirement date that he would get into manufacturing and do it with a product of his own design.

The result was PEPSAL, which combines the functions of a pepper mill and a salt shaker in a single unit. From the beginning it was a success.

"It was a better mouse trap kind of thing," Mr. Sparks recalls. "People just kept coming to me."

Mr. Sparks retired from his job with a major electronics firm in New York City on January 1, 1965. He began his manufacturing in Dingman's Ferry, Pennsylvania, calling his company Brisco Mountain Woodcrafts, Inc. His PEPSAL was soon selling nationwide. It quickly became a manufacturing and marketing operation rather than creative engineering and thus was not as interesting to Mr. Sparks. So, on July 1, 1975, he sold Brisco Mountain Woodcrafts.

"The people who bought it will do a better job. I just wasn't interested anymore," he said. He retains ties to the company, though. He is a consultant in the fields of engineering and design.

And Mr. Sparks is just as busy as ever. He has started another operation. He now runs a shop-store in Clermont, Florida.

"People enjoy buying things that they have watched being made. Presently we have about 200 products—pepper mills, salt grinders, carving boards, lamps and the like," he said.

"I'm just as busy as I ever was," Mr. Sparks said. He maintains, in addition to the shop-store in Clermont, an experimental workshop there and a similar workshop in Pennsylvania. "We spend the winters here and the summers in Pennsylvania," he said. "With a workshop at each place I can keep on working on various designs."

He stressed again that his interest was in the creating end of the operation. Like many workers, Mr. Sparks was forced to retire at 65. "I never would have retired otherwise," he said. "The retirement was against my wishes."

But mandatory retirement was a fact of life so Mr. Sparks decided to make the best of it.

The Dreamer

BY DANNIE STORM

November Lets Us Know It Is Here

Have you noticed how often a new month lets you know it is here right on the first day?

On November first the weather was warm and mild — a perfect Indian Summer day.

Still, you could feel something in the air. A great band of robins had flown in during the morning and they were chirping flying around, seeming well pleased with the sunny weather and blue sky. Yet you know that they had journeyed south from snow and cold farther north, and that surely very soon a cold wave would follow them down from the Rocky Mountains of Colorado and Northern New Mexico.

However, the day was so warm that you thought surely these long-time favorite birds who cheer us with the arrival of beautiful spring and make the summer time more joyful — surely they were ahead of time in announcing the cold weather.

No such thing. Just at noon, when all the world was dreaming in the Indian Summer sun — the robins had quit their singing and chirping conversation back and forth through the trees; and Solo Vino was lying in the shade of the cedar tree — just then when you were thinking that maybe this would be an unusual season with no cold weather until very late in the Autumn, just then there was a deep and far reaching lull in the world.

The deep, deep blue of the sky, the purple and velvet-green of the mountains, the amber sunlight fields, even the golden leaves and the cedar and pinon branches — all this made a picture like an oil painting, perfectly still and silent.

Then out of the deep silence came a little voice, long familiar through the years of your life — first a whisper and a sigh, and the little singing sound around the eaves of the house.

Our Old, Old Friend, The North Wind

This sound makes your heart jump inside your breast with a dreamy joy, and instantly your memory is awakened to happy emotions and scenes — clear as day and the present moment — of your earliest childhood.

The little murmuring sound rises to a little singing call, as into the still picture-world of Indian Summer colors comes a rush of wind. The grass waves, the leaves fly from the trees, sparkling gold against the blue sky and amber fields.

In a twinkling, the world is cold, and you can almost smell frost on the breath of the North Wind. It is all like a different world. Snow birds begin flying everywhere, white tail feathers flashing. Pinon birds begin their bugle call notes and flash their blue as they fly from tree to tree.

The robins were right after all. And of course the snow birds had been here quite a while. And the day before there was just the faintest little touch of snow on the tip-top of the white mountain.

There is something about the north wind that awakens you in a way all its own. It seems you have been hearing it, not only all your life, but back since the beginning of time itself. The sound and the feel of the North Wind, with all the deep emotions it stirs in you, has been handed down to us from other days. And every year it is more real, more wonderful to hear, more filled with treasured memories and joys, and filled also with promise of happy days ahead.

Each Season Has Its Charm

Along with the happy song of the North Wind comes a message that you live in a land of seasons, and that each season has its charm and its place in the happiness of your life.

The North Wind tells you there is still time to get ready for winter. There is promise of cool weather and the strength and inspiration that comes with these brisk days. The North Wind tells us that snow will be coming one of these days. Snow, a magic touch to the world, bringing a sparkling wonderland! Besides the beauty of the snow there is the life the snow brings to the world, with its renewal of the water and the fertility of Mother Earth, and many things else besides.

The North Wind gives you new strength to labor getting in wood and many other things you need to do to get ready for winter. Suddenly you are a different person. The cool weather makes you hungry. A fire feels good in the evening of the close of day.

And your thankfulness is awakened for so many things, the great blessings of life — loved ones, friends, good health, a beautiful mountain homeland.

And so, we welcome our old friend, the North Wind.

Indian Summer Continues On

The cool weather goes along with Indian Summer with its warm days and brisk nights. It is a very beautiful time of year. So let us thank God and rejoice during our Indian Summer season.

Altrusans name summer reading contest winners

Winners of the summer reading program sponsored by Altrusa Club and the Ruidoso Public Library were honored at an awards ceremony Wednesday evening.

Recipient of the $25 savings bond for first place was Ricardo Garcia, fourth grade, who read 33 books. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Garcia, Ricardo also received a pass to Ruidoso Skateland, a bookmark, a ribbon and his section of the library's bookworm.

The summer reading program, sponsored by Altrusa and the Library, was open to kindergarten through sixth grade students. As each child completed a book, he wrote a review and added it to a bookworm posted on the library wall.

Second place was fourth grader Pam Craft, who read 31 books. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Craft, Pam received a bookmark, ribbon, pass to Skateland and her section of the bookworm.

Third place was Bart Bowen, who read 19 books. A fifth grade student, Bart received a pass to Skateland, ribbon, bookmark and his section of the bookworm. He is the son of Vivian Bowen.

A total of 321 books were read by 42 children during the summer reading program directed by Altrusa's community services committee. Chairman of the committee Shaula Cull was assisted by Gladys Glenn, Giner Huband and Thelma Jennings.

Blue ribbons for children who read 14 or more books and red ribbons for all others may be picked up at the library along with a pass to Ruidoso Skateland.

After the awards ceremony, refreshment consisting of segmented bookworm cake made by Mrs. Cull and punch were served.

program, sponsored by Altrusa Club and the Ruidoso Public Library, are their parents, left to right, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Craft and Mrs. Jerry Garcia.

Friends honor Pat Valliant for educational achievement

Nearly 30 friends and relatives surprised Pat Valliant, superintendent of schools, by attending the banquet held Saturday in Las Cruces to honor him as New Mexico Educational Office Personnel (NMEOP) "administrator of the year."

Valliant, who received the honor in February, has served the Ruidoso Municipal School System in various capacities for 22 years.

Attending Saturday's banquet, which was held to honor him as part of the NMEOP annual convention, were his wife Jackie, sons and their wives Jack and Melinda Valliant and Tom and Libby Valliant, members of the board of education and wives, Dave and Jane Parks, Stormy and Sue Edwards and Lamar and Linda Osbourn, and past members of the board and wives, Dr. Howard and Patsy Tate, Dr. Willie and Lou Horton.

Also attending were Ernest Booky, superintendent of Hondo schools and his wife, Cecilia; Sid Miller, principal of White Mountain Middle School, and his wife, Susan; Mike Gladden, principal of White Mountain Elementary School, and his wife, Sandy; and Donny Weems, principal of Nob Hill School and his wife, Cathy.

Ruidoso office personnel, who attended the three-day convention and the banquet, were Paula Struman, Nob Hill secretary; Judi Costanza, White Mountain Elementary secretary; Patsy Racher, high school counselor's secretary; Mary Hudson, administration bookkeeper and Gnaese Zink, secretary to the superintendent.

Happy family mealtimes worth parent's efforts

Happy family meals together are difficult to achieve in today's home.

Parents' work, children's activities and other outside events can disrupt plans for meals, says Leo Yates, Extension family life specialist at New Mexico State University.

While few families can have all meals together, most can share at least one daily meal, says the specialist. Trying to make this shared meal a happy and relaxing time takes effort and planning.

First, study the family's schedule and try to plan a time when all can be together.

For one family, the most ideal time is breakfast. They find that planning a full menu and rising in time to enjoy the meal makes the time well worth the effort.

Another family might make weekend meals special. Others might have to plan ways to make a birthday dinner, a barbecue or a picnic the main time to eat and talk together.

During mealtimes children generally watch and listen to the adults who are the most important to them — their parents.

By watching and listening, children can develop feelings and ideas about food, as well as family interaction. If children are to have good feelings and pleasant thoughts about mealtimes, then mealtimes must be pleasant, Yates says.

Giving each family member a turn at saying grace while joining hands around the table adds strength and warmth to family relationships and fosters spiritual growth, the specialist adds.

Make sure children have a chance to participate in the conversation. Do not rush mealtimes. Avoid unpleasant subjects or family arguments at the table.

Some authorities believe the increasing incidence of ulcers among children result when mealtimes become rushed and families use the table as a battleground.

Children are constantly watching adults and learning how people react to different situations. This is especially true in families. Children of all ages learn about manners by the way their parents react at a meal.

Acceptance of new foods and new situations are likewise influenced by parents. Children whose parents have a good attitude towards new foods or unusual meals will usually share the adventuresome spirit, too.

Parents who say, "I don't like this," or "I've never eaten this before and I don't want it now," will have some difficulty having their children try new foods in the months and years ahead.

To help children accept new foods, serve only small quantities. Allow just a taste, then permit additional servings once the taste is accepted. Avoid remarks about new foods that may discourage the children from trying or eating it.

If a parent says, "Hey, this is new. I wonder what it has in it," children will usually become interested in trying the new food, Yates says.

EXTERIOR PAINTING... READY TO PAINT

If you have decided to paint your home, with or without an expert opinion, remember that the name of the game is... preparation. Inspect your house thoroughly for evidences of deterioration which must be taken care of before you paint.

In this and future articles we will try to take up most of the conditions you might find and tell you what to do about them.

Chalking is a common condition, occurring mostly where an oil base paint has been used. It is simply oxidation, a chemical change in the paint coating which results in a powdery film on the surface. Light chalking is a minor problem and can be eliminated by using a stiff brush and water hose to get down to a paintable surface. Allow to dry and you are ready for a one-coat job.

Heavy chalking is another matter. The house has not been painted in many years and the coating has oxidized to half its depth or more. Here, not only should you brush and wash as above, but a suitable primer or surface conditioner must be applied to penetrate and harden the chalky film.

Remember, when you get ready to paint your house, you can find the best in paint here. Also we will be glad to assist you in any way we can... at

Corduroy care easy

Corduroy is a popular fabric for fall and winter fashions, says Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist at New Mexico State University. Today's corduroy is easy to care for, too — especially when you will take time to follow these laundry procedures.

Turn corduroy items inside out before washing them. This prevents lint from clinging to the fabric. Lint traps in both the washer and dryer should be empty before doing any wash load — but especially when laundering corduroy.

Wash corduroy apparel before it is heavily soiled. This will allow using a gentle cycle for a short period of time. The prolonged agitation or rubbing of normal cycles may damage the fabric surface. Use fabric softener in the final rinse to keep fabrics soft.

Use warm water in the wash cycle to help keep the nap soft and to reduce color loss. Dark colored garments are susceptible to color loss, so wash them alone or with similar dark colored items.

When washing corduroy items by hand, simply squeeze suds through the fabric. Twisting and wringing will set creases and crush the fabric nap. Rinse by gently pressing water through the fabric.

To dryer dry corduroy garments, use a low setting. Or use the damp setting and remove them immediately from the dryer to prevent wrinkling. Hang on hangers and straighten or smooth to the original shape. Full seams tend to remove any puckered appearance. When garments are completely dry, the nap can be fluffed up by brushing it in one direction.

ROWS OF TROPHIES await presentation during the Little League football banquet held Thursday evening to honor coaches and the four teams.

BY ROBERT E. HUBER
SANTA FE — When you look closely at government bureaucracy in Santa Fe and the folks out there in the hinterlands who allow it to continue you just have to chuckle — or grimace, depending on your convictions.

Takes for instance two minor incidents of late — the tourism policy hearings being held by the Department of Development throughout the state and a downtown historic marker in Eagle Nest.

The development agency has been holding tourism policy hearings all over the place in the past month with aim toward jacking up local interest in the wayward tourist when he comes to New Mexico next year.

Cost of the hearings was not outlined by the agency, but a little army of Tourism Division employees have attended each meeting.

At the same time, tourists in Eagle Nest have been following an historic marker for five years that points the way to Red River and Elizabethtown. They end up at the city dump and a dead end street.

Seems like the Tourist Division folks could have left one staffer home for one meeting and used that money to change the sign in Eagle Nest.

On the other hand, folks in Eagle Nest might have taken the matter into their own hands and applied a little paint or the teeth of a chain saw to the sign instead of relying on the government to do something for them.

Governor Jerry Apodaca's $30 million tax rebate plan and his $15 million proposal for local governments will leave a $37.2 million surplus for the legislature to play with in the coming session — and play they will.

sure to be introduced will be bills to eat up that surplus — bills for local buildings and projects, more pay for teachers and state employes, bigger and better tax rebates and dozens of other spending proposals.

Apodaca says his rebate really will be a proposal to cut back taxes by $30 million per year permanently, but lawmakers can be expected to balk at both the amount and the method. The legislature historically has faltered at any permanent tax reduction because they fear future tax hikes more than bubonic plague.

The legislature won't take the chance that unforeseen expenses might cause a future tax hike if they cut back on taxes next year. Rebates, on the other hand, are fairly safe — they jull the unsuspecting taxpayer into believing he is getting something for nothing.

Another member of the Apodaca administration has spoken out in direct opposition to words by the governor — this time Liquor Director Carlos Jaramillo, who said the quota system of issuing liquor licenses ought to be abolished.

Jaramillo, speaking before the interim Legislative Finance Committee, advocated the use of special restaurant licenses for the sale of beer and wine. Then he said the license quota system should be eliminated within 10 years.

Last month Apodaca said he did not anticipate or support any change in the quota system. He said public response to changes in the present liquor law during the 1977 legislature showed most New Mexicans support the present system.

Jaramillo sees the quota license system as the core of high license prices and cited a recent Albuquerque license purchase at $225,000. The license went to a firm owned by Atlantic Richfield Oil chairman Robert O. Anderson of Timex.

The New Mexico Blue Book, published by the Secretary of State, is the product of former New Mexico Magazine staffer Marcella Powers and photographer Betty Lillenthal.

GROMYKO UNCONVINCING

The 1973 agreements which sought to limit the deployment of strategic weapons by the United States and the Soviet Union have expired, but to no one's alarm. They have been extended informally by both sides amid indications that negotiations for a new agreement have entered a promising phase.

The only issue raised by the expiration date was whether the U. S. Congress, which reviewed and approved of the 1973 agreements, should have been consulted on the decision to extend them until a new agreement is concluded. President Carter seems to have avoided a quarrel with Congress on that point, thanks largely to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

It is Gromyko who has done the most to give the impression that the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) are entering a conclusive stage. Emerging from the White House in a mellow mood after a recent meeting with Carter, he declared that the only problem remaining is to "finalize" an agreement.

When Andrei Gromyko begins to smile, something tells us to beware. Carter, at his news conference later, did not speak of "finalizing." He said the Russians have become more flexible and the range of disagreement has been narrowed, but "an immediate agreement is not in prospect." What, then, is really going on?

Neither side has hinted at what compromises might be emerging — if indeed they are — to break the deadlock that descended on the SALT talks after an agreement seemed to near at Vladivostok in 1974. Mainly the problem is to find numerical weapons ceilings and range limitations that will accommodate the Soviet Union's massive new SS16 missile, its Backfire bomber and the new U. S. cruise missile.

Does Gromyko's smile mean that a satisfactory trade-off is in sight — or was his performance in Washington and New York last week only designed to put pressure on the U. S. negotiators? For months the Russians have been accusing Carter of trying to gain "unilateral advantages" in his approach to the SALT negotiations, arguing that the proposed deployment of the U. S. neutron bomb as a tactical weapon in Europe is evidence that Carter is not really interested in controlling the arms race.

Gromyko arrived at the United Nations in New York to help the Soviet delegation push through its proposal for a special General Assembly session on disarmament next spring. Then he made the dramatic announcement that the Soviets would suspend underground nuclear weapons tests as a gesture to hurry along negotiations for another test-ban treaty. Clearly it has been part of Gromyko's current mission to further the impression that the Russians are more eager to reach arms control agreements than the Americans.

In Washington Gromyko's optimistic tone led to speculation that the Soviets were making significant concessions on SALT issues. Carter's less sanguine comments suggest otherwise. If the Russians hoped to stampede the Americans into being more amenable to the current Soviet position on SALT — for the sake of countering their own propaganda barrage — the strategy does not appear to have worked. — News-Bulletin, Beten.

ANITA'S COSTLY STAND

In the United States... as of today... a person can stand up and be heard on any subject... all the person with an opinion to express needs is the desire... and the ability to stand the heat.

Take Anita Bryant... some would, some wouldn't... but she's a woman of her convictions. Everyone knows where she stands on the issue of homosexuality... a stand applauded by some, damned by others... a stand that stands to cost Anita a job paying more than $100,000 a year... proving, at least in this instance, that talk isn't cheap.

Anita suspects the gay activists are behind recent threats on her life... that there's a move on to muzzle her... and her reaction was: "I'm not afraid... And it seems if the possibility of losing her lucrative position... and a career... isn't causing her to have second thoughts about continuing her fight... mere threats won't."

If, as Anita claims, orange juice sales are up, maybe Florida's orange grove owners won't give her the axe... would you, if you had a good thing going that was putting extra dollars into your pocket?

Now... I've never been in a position to lose a $100,000 a year job... whether for expressing an opinion, or any other reason... and, in Anita's case, I'm envious... 'cause I don't know if I've the guts to do as she is... and, curses, I'll never find out.

MEXICAN ALIEN WOES

There's lots of talk... and precious little action... on the problem of Mexican nationals furively, and illegally, crossing the border to find jobs in the U. S. It even looks like a tide that can't be stemmed.

What's frightening is... considering what kind of work, pay and living conditions are available to these Mexicans... what are their living conditions at home? It's... at least to me... highly unlikely that any able bodied American... enjoying food stamps, welfare and assorted doles without ever having to lift a finger

... would even accept the jobs that these Mexicans sometimes put their lives on the line to take.

Now, if I were smart enough to solve the nation's financial woes... employment... inflation... welfare... I wouldn't be sipping ice tea in Ruidoso... excepting on vacations. None-the-less, I vividly recall the WPA days and the $44 per month paid these workers... which provided meager existence to those unfortunates not able to find work. And, with all the faults in WPA, at least the recipients of that dole had to be physically present on the job site, five days a week... instead of enjoying a life of idleness... assuming present day grabbers of free money are indeed idle.

Course... come income tax time... it's not too difficult to understand why so many prefer tax free income... income that provides the necessities of life such as cars, television and booze... and a few of the luxuries, like food, rent, heat and clothes.

There seems to be two solutions to the illegal Mexican worker problem... let them continue and their employers profit thereby... or keep them out of our country... by any means... and force the employers of the aliens to hire welfare, whatever, recipients and pay them a living wage... not necessarily enough to permit the welfare recipients to live in the manner they don't want to change... a wage that'd make them contributing members of our society... just enough to force them to find better paying jobs... assuming any of them'd ever want to keep up with the Joneses.

Maybe Congress should finance enough jobs in Mexico to keep their citizens at home... then, cut off all aid to the indigent... and encourage them to cross the border illegally to take jobs away from Mexicans. Why, we might save so much money that Carter could get income taxes cut.

BRIEF BIT: I don't think radio and TV stations turn the sound up for commercials... I think they turn it down for regular programming... CD

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,
 I would like to thank the Ruidoso Boosters Club and all the good people of Ruidoso who contributed to the Wade

Briley fund. I know I will never know all the people who gave so generously, so I want you all to know how much we appreciated your help.

The Ruidoso Boosters Club gave Wade a trophy which said "Ruidoso Warriors' Greatest Warrior." I can only say as a mother what a kind gesture that was to a boy. That trophy gave him hope on days when there seemed like there was none.

I am thankful for all of our friends who washed and cooked and served and were just there when we needed them; and a special thanks to the sweet children of Ruidoso High School who sent letters and homemade cards, and collected funds, and stood and cried so silently with us all for their friend.

Ruidoso has fine people in this town and with you I share this thought because it best describes the Briley family's feelings:

Friends will give you companionship and hope during times of trouble; they will double your joys in times of triumph.

A true friend will open his doors to you when the hour is late. He will give you treasures of the spirit more valuable than gold.

Wanda Briley

"Many weeks ago, Santa started making his list and checking it twice! And then he had me help him drop off bundles of toys and games at all Safeways to help you get ready for the eager young 'uns who can hardly wait for the big day. These toys are sturdy, well-made, ready for happy recipients on the holiday. He paid special attention to the red Special tags that marked many good buys in your stores. He said he's sure you'll have these signs on a lot of the Christmas items he left. Of course, you will, Santa is always right!"
