

Traffic lights promised for Sudderth

The State Highway Department has committed itself to the installation of two traffic signals, several pedestrian crosswalks, and raised, snow-plowable centerline markers on Sudderth Drive.

In a March 27 letter to the Evening Lions Club and telephone interviews with The News, L. A. Larranaga, traffic services engineer, Santa Fe, said, "The signals are in the 1978-79 fiscal year budget, priority numbers three and four."

"They will be placed on the annual work program, funded and installed in this period. I see absolutely no problem with getting them in the next fiscal year." The 1978-79 fiscal year begins July 1.

Larranaga said the location of the two lights will be at the intersection of Sudderth and Cedar Creek Road and at Sudderth and El Paso Road.

When contacted by The News, Larranaga said that he could not pin the project down to a specific date yet. He said it would be a bid job, and that he anticipated no problems. "There are no right-of-way problems, or anything like that," he said, "no problems with condemnations and so forth. The work should proceed without a hitch."

On the subject of crosswalks, he said there will be crosswalks at each of the two signal locations, and that no others are planned at this time. He acknowledged that there may be other places in town where marked crosswalks are needed, and said that his department will be studying those locations further.

"Crosswalks are a problem, because people ignore them," he said. "They just cross anywhere they can find a gap in the traffic, and that causes drivers to ignore the crosswalks, too."

Larranaga said that his office is also preparing to let bids on installation of raised, snow-plowable pavement markers for Sudderth.

Parker Bell, traffic design engineer for the highway department, will be in charge of the pavement marker project. He said the raised markers are strictly an experimental program.

They will be placed from the intersection of Sudderth and Highway 70 to near the First Baptist Church just past Bennett's Supermarket.

Bell said the raised markers are 100 percent funded with federal money and that the total cost of the project will be about $15,000.

"We'll place the markers about 80 feet apart," he said, "and they'll have a little plastic cover over them with a reflective surface behind the plastic."

Larranaga assured The News that his department would "push as hard as possible" on the projects. He also said that they would schedule the work to interfere as little as possible with the activities in the village.

"If we have to work during racing season, we'll schedule the work for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, so as not to conflict with the race day traffic," he said.

In his letter to the Evening Lions, Larranaga said, "As you will know, this work will only take care of part of the problem. Even though it will allow for some gaps for traffic to enter onto S. R. 37 and some pedestrian crossings, this will not solve the problem completely."

"A comprehensive plan to establish other arterial street systems for local traffic is essential.

"One of these could possibly be Gavilan Canyon."

"Sudderth Drive cannot be improved to provide better alignment, or widened because of the strip business built up along the street."

Bell indicated that if the experimental raised marker program is not successful, the department has other plans to try to help Ruidoso drivers to identify which lane they're in.

He said they will next try a special epoxy plastic paint strip that has reflective beads imbedded in it. As the strip wears, it remains reflective at night.

Bell said that because of the large number of off road vehicles and snow tires on Sudderth in the winter, and the amount of debris carried onto the street, the conventional paint striping just won't stand up.

Larranaga said that the raised markers project will probably be implemented in 90 to 120 days, but that in the meantime the street striping crew will be in town within the month.

Ruidosoans have been complaining about the problems of street striping, crosswalks, and especially stop lights for several years. Recently the Service Club Council took on the project of getting more traffic lights.

The individual members of the Service Club Council went back to their clubs and asked the clubs and club members to let the State Highway Department know about Ruidoso's problem.

The Evening Lions club membership signed a petition and sent it to practically everybody from the Governor down who could have some influence.

Larranaga's letter to the Evening Lions was in direct response to the petition.

Proposed school budget hits $2.3M

Acknowledgement of a $2.3 million operational budget and approval of an 18 percent salary hike for certified teachers highlighted Ruidoso School Board action when it sat in special session Wednesday.

In addition to the salary hike for certified instructors, three other categories of school employees will see raises. They include a 17 percent hike for noncertified instructors, a 13.6 percent increase for principals and a 14.6 percent boost for the superintendent.

The board also approved an increment schedule for sponsors and instructors of extracurricular activities including athletic sponsors and coaches, cheerleader sponsors, journalism club sponsor, etc.

Showing a 20.5 percent increase over the current year, the proposed budget is tentative pending approval by the state Department of Educational Finance and Cultural Affairs. In past years, approval from that agency has come with minor or no changes to the board's preliminary budget.

Including $99,138 for emergency unforeseen expenses, the school's proposed operational budget consists of 11 other line items.

Topping the proposal is a $1,142,757 request for direct instructional expenses. This item includes salaries for teachers, grades 1-12; teacher aids, special education instructors, early childhood instructors and substitute teachers.

According to Pat Valliant, school superintendent, there are 75.3 school employees covered in this category. He explained that not all instructors are full time which account for the fraction.

About $270,774 has been budgeted under a field charges category which includes employee benefits such as Social Security. [SEE PAGE TWO]

Vandals stealing street signs; cost to Village many $

In recent weeks, vandals have begun a campaign of stealing traffic control and directional signs throughout the village, streets superintendent Jack LaMay said Friday.

Individuals have "knocked down and stolen stop and yield signs mostly, and some directional signs," he said. "We've had a problem with people stealing signs for years, but it's gotten bad in the last few weeks."

LaMay added, "I have no idea why they are doing it or what they're doing with them, but it is costing [Ruidoso residents] a lot of money."

"We've put up all we had and ordered about $800 worth of additional signs. We'll try to replace as many as possible, as soon as possible."

Stop signs cost $23.85 apiece and the other types stolen cost approximately $30 apiece.

The thefts are under investigation by the Ruidoso Police Department.

Street crews patch potholes

A project to fill potholes and patch the badly deteriorated sections of four village roads is underway, village streets superintendent Jack LaMay said Friday.

Patching of Hull, White Mountain and Carrizo Canyon roads and Paradise Canyon Drive will be a temporary solution while the village negotiates on a cooperative agreement with the state to completely resurface the roads.

"There's no point in resurfacing the roads now at the cost of the village when there is a possibility in the future of doing it on a 50/50 agreement with the state," LaMay said.

He added the agreement with the state, which has received tentative approval, calls for the resurfacing to begin in mid May with Carrizo Canyon Road and then White Mountain Road.

Chamber's Coffee Cart

The Wednesday morning Coffee Cart will be held April 3, from 9 to 10 at Alto Alps Condominiums, hosted by Jim Wimberly.

The Coffee Cart, sponsored by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, is open to Chamber members and the public.

Street residents very unhappy

BY VICHOGSETT
Staff Writer

The winter problems of the residents of Roswell street in Ruidoso came to a head Friday when members of Continental Telephone met with representatives of the village government in the offices of the telephone company.

During the meeting, Frank Potter, village administrative assistant; Jack LaMay, village road superintendent; Clive Joy, Continental's state engineer; and Dee Mosen, the company's local service manager agreed to meet with residents of the street this week to work toward a solution.

Living on Roswell street was particularly trying this last winter. Residents had to contend with the one road to their homes being torn up first by the cable television people and then the telephone company.

Though the work was necessary it was inconvenient. But, to make matters worse, according to Patrick McNamara, Roswell street resident, the road was never put back into its original shape, as is required by village ordinance.

Roswell street residents became vocal on the issue back in October after all the cables had been buried and it looked like construction was completed for the winter. Roswell street's J. E. Riddle and McNamara began communications with the telephone company and the village elders in which they wanted to know when their street was going to be repaired.

Riddle was notified in a November letter from the telephone company that according to Joy, the village had accepted the work and "therefore the Continental Telephone Company (was) no longer responsible for any additional repairs to that street."

McNamara was told by Potter that he didn't know anything about the street being accepted.

"The village and the telephone company began a game of pass the buck," McNamara said.

The issue remained in limbo through the remainder of the winter. Getting stuck in the mud, ice or snow while trying to go to or from home became a way of life for the street's residents.

Alma Russell slipped and broke her arm one day while she was trying to get her vehicle moving. That was enough for her; she bought a four-wheel-drive vehicle, "just to get home."

Many on the street agreed that in previous winters negotiating the street had been a minor problem. In previous winters, McNamara said, the upper portion of the road, the part with the greatest grade,

ROSWELL STREET — Before cable-laying operations occurred last fall, this street had been graveled and reasonably well maintained, according to street resident Patrick McNamara. Now he says all drainage, except into his yard, has been destroyed. Through the winter the street became deeply rutted by residents becoming stuck in the mud.

Spring planting time nears for Ruidoso

ROWS OF FLOWERS await planting at the start of the growing season May 1 as Cork Conley of Conley's Nursery inspects plants in the greenhouse.

BY MARY WORMLEY
Staff Writer

With warm afternoons encouraging sunbathing and skiing in shorts, it's nearly time to consider planting new lawns and gardens.

When planning a garden, Wilbur Conley of Conley's Nursery in Ruidoso Downs advised, "almost anything will grow in Ruidoso, but it will have a short growing season."

He recommended planting gardens around May 1 and to expect about a 100 to 110 day growing period.

"We usually have that many frost-free days, but it's hard to predict. May 1 is plenty soon to plant, but you might plant in early April and get away with it. There's no telling." The time to plant can vary depending on the species, he added.

Bare root plants or plants begun from seeds or seedlings usually should be planted in the spring, he said. Plants such as shrubs or trees which can be bought already planted in containers of earth, usually can be planted at any time.

He also recommended buying plants zoned for growth in the Ruidoso area. "Plants bought elsewhere and brought to Ruidoso will grow if the variety is zoned for the area."

Plants that will grow well in the area, by category include:

— Vegetables. "All vegetables which grow below ground will do well, especially carrots, onions, radishes, cabbage and lettuce," Conley said. "Corn will do well if you get a short season variety like a 65 to 85 day variety."

— Flowers. "The most popular flowers in the area are petunias, nasturtiums and daisies," he said. "Nearly anything will grow, but again, for not as long a season as other areas."

— Grasses. "Kentucky bluegrass composes most of the lawns in Ruidoso," Conley said. "Usually white Dutch clover or annual rye are planted with it and it's a good idea to use commercial fertilizer when you put the seed down and to dress with peat moss or steer manure." He added blue grass can be planted from May 1 through September although an autumn planting is best.

— Ground covers. "Sedums, ajuga and dragon's blood all are hardy and can be planted now," he said. Ground covers, which are not feasible to cover a large area, fare well planted at one foot intervals and allowed to spread.

Although May 1 is the recommended time to begin planting, gardeners should begin now to care for their plants and prepare soil, Wilbur Conley of Conley's Nursery said.

"Now is a good time to hose down evergreens to wash off red spiders, aphids and mite eggs," he said. "Also, you could begin to till your soil now in preparation for planting May 1."

Conley added that lawns should be fertilized in mid-April.

— Flowering shrubs. "Pink tatarian, ninar, quince, lilacs, pink and white almond, pyracantha and triflora all do well and because they're in containers they can be planted anytime," Conley said.

— Shrubs. Armstrongs and broadmoors flourish in the Ruidoso area and can be planted at any time.

— Trees. Blue spruce, mountain ash, willow and maple which are zoned for the area will do well and can be planted at any time.

— Fruit trees. "Apples, plums, peaches and pears are some that will do well," Conley said. "Almost any fruit tree will do well, but not all will bear fruit because of the early summer and late freeze; where the weather gets warm, trees bud out and then there's a sudden freeze."

— Berries such as strawberries also will grow in Ruidoso.

— Vines. Virginia creeper and vinca vines will do well.

— Flowering vines. Clematis and honeysuckle fare well.

Nearly all varieties mentioned are available at Conley's which also offers a complete garden care center. Conley is assisted in the family business by sons Cork and Ted.

Old Lincoln transferred to State

In ceremonies Saturday, the Lincoln County Memorial Commission turned administration of state owned property in the village of Lincoln back to the state, which in turn relinquished its control to the Lincoln County Heritage Trust.

"Now, we're ready for the next major step, to preserve and keep Lincoln, (ensuring none) of it is put on the auction block or allowed to deteriorate," Harry Wugalter, state secretary for educational finance and cultural affairs, said. "I feel we have taken a good step."

Executive director of the trust, John Meigs, told the large group, who had gathered on the 100th anniversary of the Lincoln County War and on the 100th anniversary of the day Sheriff Brady and his deputy were ambushed and killed during the war, of present plans and projects underway by the trust.

Through these projects the trust "hopes to get a feeling of what a living Lincoln used to be... and we hope to place Lincoln on the map in an entirely different respect," Meigs said.

"Billy the Kid is a touchstone, an attraction, and when visitors get here we hope they will find a great deal more to Lincoln."

Present plans and projects include a display of photographs of old Lincoln, collection of reference material, and continuing exhibits including Spanish colonial art, quilts, graphics and paintings, trunks, clothing and a charcoal drawing of a pioneer scene by Peter Hurd.

Other plans of the trust include preservation of the recently acquired Luna and Gallegos homes in Lincoln, a rotation of exhibitions in the convento, restoration of the Montano store to illustrate the period, restoration of endangered buildings, and completion of plans to make schoolhouse an orientation center with a tri-cultural display in the classrooms.

Meigs added that the trust hoped to preserve Fort Stanton and other structures in the surrounding area.

Also during Saturday's ceremonies, Lloyd Davis Jr., director of the memorial commission and Pat Ward, curator of properties, presented certificates of appreciation to commission members Louise Coe, Mike Kelaheer, Lawrence Merchant, Lonnie Jarratt, Lucille Cooper, Marvin Jones, Ora Lee Skipworth, and Dessie Sawyer in "recognition of un-compensated service and in appreciation of dedication and loyalty to the commission."

A certificate of appreciation also was given to Rafaelita Prior, who has served the museum for several years.

LINCOLN COUNTY HERITAGE TRUST board member Robert O. Anderson, left and architect William Lumpkin, restoration expert, discuss plans to preserve Lincoln after transferral ceremonies Saturday.

PRESENT FOR CEREMONIES transferring administration of Lincoln properties from the memorial commission to the heritage trust were, left to right, Phil Helmig, liaison for the trust; Robert O. Anderson and John Meigs, trust board members; Lloyd Davis Jr., director of the commission; Harry Wugalter, secretary for educational finance and cultural affairs in Governor Jerry Apodaca's cabinet, and state representative John Bigbee.

group insurance, workmen's compensation, educational retirement, and the like, and for property insurance, surety bond payments, and other insurance payments.

Sixteen instructional support employees will see a salary share of $238,796 if the budget proposal is approved by the state. Included in this category are salaries for the principals, librarian, counselors, the diagnostician, instructional aids, and five secretaries in the four schools.

Included in two separate line items are the plant and maintenance charges. The board is proposing a total of $240,117 for these categories. Included are plant operational expenses, custodian salaries, and utilities costs.

The school board projects that it will cost about $126,254 to run the system's school buses. Valiant congratulated the board on their estimation for the current year's budget. He said last year's estimate was proven to be off by only four miles. A rough estimate of the number of miles the school buses travel a year is a portion of the formula used to compute the transportation division's budget.

The administration division of the school system may have a budget of $80,812. The figure will be used for the salaries of four administrative employees.

Student support activities may receive $21,383 to be used for athletics at both the high school and the middle school and for both boys and girls.

Health services has a tentative budget of $9,501 for the salary of the school nurse. The nurse is currently a seven-tenths time employee.

Food services may receive $9,000.

Rounding out the operational budget is a proposal for $59,785 for capital outlay. The money will be used for improvement projects for both school owned land and buildings. Valiant explained that the figure represents the remainder of the school's cash balance.

had been graveled and that aided traction. Winter began to ebb and the melting snow began to run off right into McNamara's yard.

"I worked for years to build up a (shoulder) on that road to contain drainage," McNamara said. "They got their damn tractors out there, broke trees down, filled in the (drainage ditch); they didn't give a damn what they did."

He added that he had at various occasions told the telephone company contracted tractor operators how drainage could be handled. He says he is a civil engineer retired from the Corps of Engineers.

While everyone agrees that the road has never been in the best of shape, Potter and Lamay said that it did receive gravel from time to time and the upper portion of the road had never been particularly bad. Lamay is a one-time resident of the street.

McNamara is also concerned with the various piles of rubble, pieces of coaxial cable and piles of dirt that dot the area. He says they weren't there before construction. He has also pointed out a newly constructed junction box that had been left open waiting to receive an unsuspecting playing child.

McNamara's comments followed a call to The News in which he said he was tired of the "run around."

During the conference with Potter, Lamay, Monsen and Joy, it was brought out that the village had recently bladed the road. Contention arose over whether it was the village's road grader or the phone company's tractors that filled in the drainage ditch.

"We want to get it fixed," Potter said.

"Well, we want to, too," Monsen replied.

"If we get everyone down there together we can resolve the issue," Potter said.

"What we ought to do is joint-venture the issue. You provide the base course for the upper part of the street and we'll get the base course for the bottom part of the street."

Monsen said that despite the November letter, if the phone company caused the damage, they would repair it.

DAVID BRYANT, pro at Sierra Swim and Racquet Club, defeated rival Bob McKenna, 6-4, 6-3 in a grudge match to win first place in singles at the Abilene, Texas, Easter tennis tournament. Teamed together later, Bryant and McKenna, pro at Samuel Grand Tennis Center in Dallas, won the doubles tournament 6-4, 6-4 against Tom Rapson and Steve Hall of San Angelo State College.

McKinney retired with the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Upon retirement they moved to Ruidoso where their new home was just completed.

The occasion will also mark the 30th anniversary of the McKinney's daughter, Lois Ann, and her husband, Howard Jackson. The couple was married on March 31, 1948 in St. Clement Church in El Paso.

Family attending the celebration included: Mr. and Mrs. William Ralph McKinney, Houston, Texas (son); Mrs. Rozilee Baldwin, Dallas, Texas (Mrs. McKinney's sister); Mr. and Mrs. Howard

Jackson, El Paso; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Raleigh, El Paso (granddaughter); Mr. and Mrs. Rod Jackson, El Paso (grandson); Mr. and Mrs. Kerry Jackson, El Paso (grandson), and Mrs. and Mrs. Brad Smyth, Cleburne, Texas.

The reception table was draped with a lace and embroidered table cloth, and was adorned with golden candles and roses. A three tiered white cake embellished with pink roses highlighted the arrangement. Rozilee Baldwin presided at the cake, Mrs. Ralph McKinney and Mrs. Howard Jackson served pink punch and Mrs. Richard Raleigh presided at the golden guest book. Soft music hinting at memories of the thirties played throughout the afternoon. The reception room was decorated with Easter lilies and golden jonquils.

After the reception, the family enjoyed a dinner party at Whispering Pine restaurant.

The McKinneys have one daughter and one son, three granddaughters, three grandsons, three great-granddaughters and two great-grandsons.

Social Security information

"Six million employers will have much less paperwork when reporting wages for social security and federal income tax purposes as a result of a change in the law effective this year," Gordon Lunsford, social security field representative, said today. "The change is expected to result in millions of dollars in savings for both employers and the federal government."

"Although employers will make a quarterly report in April, as usual, the report will not show the names, social security numbers, and amounts paid each employee. This information will be reported at the end of the year using the familiar W-2. The April and later quarterly reports will show only a wage summary and tax liability information for Internal Revenue."

"Early in 1979 employers will send their W-2's to a data processing center to be operated by the Social Security Administration in Albuquerque. In the past W-2 information went to the Internal Revenue Service."

"Employers can realize additional savings by joining the growing number who report wages electronically. The Social Security Administration estimates that about 40,000 employers with small computers are capable of reporting on so-called 'floppy disks' which are relatively inexpensive."

Lunsford may be contacted at the Lincoln County Senior Citizens Center in Ruidoso on the 1st, 2nd and 4th Tuesday each month between the hours of 10-12.

Library Laurels

by

Kathy Moore

Many children don't read more than they do because reading is hard work! Sometimes experienced adult readers forget just how much hard work is involved in reading, and as a result we often fail to give children the encouragement they need to develop their reading skills.

I fear that in many instances parents lack sagacity when they coerce themselves into accepting, "My son, and/or daughter just doesn't like to read." I feel that any child would initially "like" reading if his or her reading skills were not a source of continual frustration. I suggest that it is not "reading" that children dislike but rather that the feeling of frustration is what they so disdain. Naturally a certain amount of frustration will be involved in learning to read, for frustration is involved in the acquisition of any new skill. However, if frustration becomes dominate in the process of learning, the child will assuredly throw his hands up in despair, his book down in disgust and lament, "WHY BOTHER?"

Help the children you know minimize frustration by giving them maximum encouragement. It is extremely important not to compare a child's achievements with those of another child and to praise the accomplishment the child does make. Of equal importance is the less obvious encouragement a child receives when the adults with which he comes into contact demonstrate that literature is an integral part of their lives.

This is National Library Week so be sure to remember these two special programs: Eve Ball, Monday, April 3, 7:30 p.m.; "Plays and Presentations" (for children k-5th grade) on Saturday, April 8, 10:00 a.m.

This Woman Definitely Not the Retiring Type

Rose Moran has been a scrapper all her life and she sees no reason to quit just because she's approaching her 80th birthday.

On a recent visit to Washington from her home in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Rose was interviewed by a writer from The National Council on the Aging. Many facets of her fascinating life were discussed but she was preoccupied by her recent forced retirement from a leading national charity.

"I could understand being asked to retire if I couldn't do the work anymore," Rose said, "but do I look like I need to take it easy?"

The answer is no. Her physical appearance is that of a woman considerably younger and her mind is as quick and nimble as that of a much younger person. In fact, the reason for her trip to Washington is to help her old employer and lifelong friend move from a large house into an apartment, a job that has kept Rose busy 10 and 12 hours a day lifting boxes and arranging furniture.

As a young woman with little education, Rose went to work for a Washington laundry and dry cleaning chain. Determined to do more with her life than routine labor, she took courses in bookkeeping after work. Her employers admired Rose's pluck—not to mention her ability with numbers and as an organizer—and steadily gave her positions of increasing responsibility during her years of employment.

When she retired in 1963, Rose moved to Florida, thinking she'd take it easy after a lifetime work.

"I didn't like sitting around, though," she said. "I don't like it 15 years later, either."

Her desire to be active led her to become a volunteer with the local chapter of a national charity.

"The paid staff had never seen a volunteer like me," she said, laughing. "I put in a 40 hour week. They were lucky if they saw most volunteers one morning a week."

She stayed on this schedule for about five years before she was made a regular, salaried member of the staff. As a volunteer she'd already totally streamlined the method for tallying donations. After she started getting paid, Rose worked twice as hard in a continuing effort to improve efficiency.

"What I did was just common sense," she said, shrugging off any praise. "Someone else could've come along and done exactly the same things."

Sometime after she turned 79, it was decided that Rose Moran would have to retire at the age of 80. The reason for this decision has too many twists for an outsider to follow—just call it a case of office politics.

"It still makes me mad," she said, "but I'm getting over it. When I get back to Florida I'm going to take a vacation with my brother and sister."

Each Day More Beautiful Than The Last, In April

By the time this message reaches you we will be over in April, one of the great favorites out of the twelve.

Spring time is at full tide in April with each new day bringing something new into the spring time moving picture. The queen of seasons has many pleasant surprises for us in blossoms, new leaves, and the green of bushes, herbs, and the grass of the mountain meadows. The sunrises and sunsets will be more colorful day by day, and new song birds will be flying in, adding their melodies to the celestial harmonies of Spring.

April is the month of hopes come true, of promises faithfully kept. And at the same time this is the month of bright promises and high hopes for the days ahead.

For this is the month when the trees and bushes and small plants shine forth with their blossoms. And the seeds planted by our hands in our fields — and the seeds of Mother Earth — spring forth, awakening from their winter sleep, to rejoice in the Spring sunshine.

More vivid, more shining green, more colorful and fragrant the beloved members of the spring family appear, and we behold, with reverence in our hearts, the eternal miracle of life.

April is the birthday month of our brother, John, eldest of the Storm brothers. John was born April fifteen, 1907 in Denver, Colorado. During April the spirit of our beloved brother, John, will abide with us fondly, and I will remember his great qualities and take inspiration from them and I will thank God for our beloved brother who is in Heaven in the care and protection of Our Lord.

wind on the young fruit buds, causes them to bloom.

With not much wind, then, the fruit buds are slow to open. This is fine. The colorful spring will last longer, and the fruit will have a better chance.

The Mystic Apricot

You will notice I have spoken a lot about the apricot. There is something about this tree and its blossoms that holds me in a spell.

Why do they bloom so early, year after year without bringing fruit? And yet why do we see them growing everywhere beside the roads and far back in the hills? And why are they so strong? Around an old abandoned homestead the apricot tree will still be thriving and blooming in the spring after more than a hundred years.

The blossoms of the apricot tree appear as a surprise quietly during the windy days of March. You have become used to the winter scene — the trees with twigs and limbs bare of leaves, the fields in winter amber, and the oak brush on high on the hillside in winter russet brown. The pines and cedars and juniper are in their subdued winter green.

And then in the early evening when there is a lull in the wintry wind of March: What is that giant bouquet of pale white over next to the hill? It is not snowflakes. Oh yes, you had forgotten. That is the

There in the late evening's dim light the blossoms are airy and ethereal. You have to look to be sure they are there. And yet they are ever so plain, all alone on the wintry picture. Still they are like something in a dream. The tree of apricot blossoms is ever so welcome to your sight. It is a living promise come true — something ever so real and deeply spiritual — cheering and uplifting your heart and soul.

This is the most beautiful spring time in many a day.

Harold F. Olson is Game and Fish head

Harold F. Olson, a 19-year veteran of the Department of Game and Fish and an assistant director of the agency since 1975, became its director effective April 1, according to State Game Commission Chairman Francisco Urra Jr.

The commission met Monday March 27 in Santa Fe to select the successor to Bill Huey, who is moving to the post of Secretary of the Natural Resources Department.

"I am very pleased to accept the appointment and intend to continue the tradition of professionalism within the agency, which is one of its strongest points," Olson said.

Urra said the commission considered a number of applicants, all wildlife management professionals, and selected Olson on the basis of his own professional and academic background, plus his familiarity with both the department and the state.

He said the commission was highly impressed with the caliber of people who applied. "There was no predetermination in selection, and each of those selected for an interview was given the commission's full consideration."

Olson, 43, earned a Master of Science degree, majoring in fisheries biology, from Utah State University in 1959 and a Bachelor of Science from the same university in 1957.

He joined the department on April 1, 1959, and has since served as a District Wildlife officer, fisheries research biologist, Northwest Area Fisheries Manager, water pollution biologist, assistant chief of the Fisheries Division, Southeast Area Supervisor, Roswell, and Northwest Area Supervisor, Albuquerque.

In 1973, he was named Chief of Area Operations and in 1975, was further promoted to Assistant Director, Services, as which he was supervisor of the agency's seven support divisions — Law Enforcement, Public Affairs, Game Management, Fisheries Management, Planning, Special Services and Fiscal Management — and for coordinating their work with that of the area and field staff.

He is a member of the Wildlife Society, Western Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies, New Mexico Wildlife Federation, New Mexico Shooting Sports Foundation and the National Rifle Association. He and his wife Jean live in Santa Fe.

Storm windows not total answer

By now practically everyone knows what a storm window is and that it saves heating and cooling fuel. But the assumption that storm windows are the solution to all window energy problems simply isn't true.

A storm window provides a second layer of glass, which forms an insulating trapped air space between itself and the primary window.

This reduces by about 50% the amount of the heat that is lost (or gained, in summer) directly through the glass. But the storm window doesn't eliminate the loss (or gain) of the heated air that physically passes through cracks in and around operating parts of the primary window.

This "infiltration" loss must be stopped by the primary window. Sometimes this can be accomplished by adding weatherstripping. But when the primary window is badly deteriorated, there is probably no hope for it short of replacing it.

BY GARY DOLLAHON

An angler is often referred to as "a jerk on one end of a line awaiting a jerk on the other end."

Of course, this viewpoint is that of the non-fishing peers, who may actually be a minority in numbers when compared to the fishing public.

The challenge of catching fish has "hooked" so many individuals that fishing ranks atop the polls of America's participant sports. In New Mexico alone, more than 165,000 anglers spend about 1.6 million days a year fishing.

Even though fishing tackle and technology have changed somewhat, the concept of fishing has not. That is, to catch a fish and put it on the stringer. However, catching fish is often easier said than done.

Page after page, chapter after chapter, and volume after volume of books have been written on the how's, when's, and where's to catch fish. Unfortunately for the anglers though, few fish apparently have had the opportunity to study this literature while in their schools.

Fisherman "know-how" seems to be the only secret to fishing success. Records show that more than 80 percent of the fish are caught by less than 80 percent of the fishermen; in the case of largemouth bass the catch usually is made by about 25 percent of the fishermen.

But what is fisherman know-how? Generally, it is understanding the physical make-up of a fish and the characteristics of water.

All of the so-called game fishes have well-developed eyes and use them in finding and capturing their foods. Most of these fish appear to have color vision as well.

In largemouth bass for example, investigations of color vision indicate that bass vision is similar to that of a man looking at objects through a strong yellow filter, that is, the yellow filter made it difficult for the man to separate the colors at the blue end of the spectrum.

One study, important to the fisherman, indicated that during the daytime largemouth bass preferred red and white cast baits 3.5 times more than the second most popular color, black. Black proved to be a valuable color in both casting and fly fishing.

A fish's underwater upper vision is interesting. Looking slantingly upward at the surface, a fish cannot see through it, but instead sees mirrored upon it objects which are on the bottom at a distance.

Looking more directly up, the fish sees through in effect what is a circular window upon the surface. This window enlarges as the fish sinks, shrinks as he rises, but is always opposite an angle of 97.6° (in fresh water) at the fish's eyes.

This window enables the fish to see everything above the plane tangent to the water surface at the rim of the window, but the distortion and brightness of the objects vary within.

Thus, a man standing on the bank of a pool appears as a tiny doll to a fish a few yards away and only inches below the surface. As the fish drops in depth, the window enlarges and the man's image is magnified above that of a doll.

The eyes and other light sensitive organs of fish often play a part in the relative position of fish in a body of water. Fish appear to seek the level of illumination most satisfying to them. Light affects feeding, reproduction, migrations, and general activity. All fishes studied have been found to have the ability to hear. Their ranges of sound perception varies among species. Although their ranges do include a part of the range of human speech, the air and water between a man and fish would make it difficult for the fish to hear talking. However, vibrations made by walking easily or noises in a boat are undoubtedly heard by fish. The sense of "smell" appears to be highly developed in fishes. Catfish largely depend upon odor detection for many of their biological functions. A fish's body is almost insulated from the surrounding water and it does not maintain a constant body temperature. However, their bodies are sensitive to extreme temperature changes. High and cold lethal temperatures are possibilities. Water temperatures, generally associated with the seasons, affect feeding activities. Warm water fishes reduce their activity and become sluggish when water temperatures drop below 60°. Activity increases as the water warms into the 60°-75° range for these species.

Investment-grade diamonds may be very costly purchase

Selling "investment-grade" diamonds to the unwary is the latest in a long parade of money-grabbing schemes. "You've seen the ads in the mail. Sparkling stones are pictured and big profits are promised. Easy street is apparently just around the corner if you'll only sink a little of your loose change into loose stones," said Jackie Pinson, Extension family finance specialist at New Mexico State University. "Well, if you fall for one of these schemes you'll likely wait forever and in vain for the big payoff," Miss Pinson said. Even with a continued high inflation rate, small diamonds held for many years would make only a small profit. "Selling 'investment-grade' diamonds is a growing fraud," the specialist said. A number of promoters are pushing low-quality stones with inflated price tags. One firm was recently investigated by the U. S. Attorney's Office because prospective customers were told their diamonds would increase in value from 30 to 60 percent a year. "The fact is, however, that cut diamonds increase in value only about eight percent a year, and the rate of increase depends in part on the quality of the stone," Miss Pinson said. It takes years to become a diamond expert. "What looks like the Hope Diamond to you could turn out to be a hopeless hunk to someone who really knows," the NMSU specialist said. Quality is determined by several factors, all of which can fool the eye. Size is important, but so is proportion. Color and cut are factors, as well as flaws.

Diamonds are carefully graded under 10-power magnification, and even inferior diamonds dazzle under the right kind of light. "But only the Six Million Dollar Man has X-ray vision. The rest of us see the dazzle, and it seems to immobilize our brains," Miss Pinson said. So when you're buying diamonds, for love or for money, deal only with responsible jewelers. A stone of any real value should be accompanied by a certificate from the Gemological Institute of America.

Gifted children program this summer

A summer enrichment program for talented and gifted students in grades five through eight will be held in six one-week sessions at the University of New Mexico, June 11 to July 27.

Sponsored by the UNM special education department, the program will include an overview of the arts, a study of the origins of Southwestern culture and individual research into family roots. Field trips, athletic and cultural events are also planned.

Dr. Gary Adamson, chairperson of the special education department and director of the program, said principals of public schools throughout the state are invited to nominate students for the program. The nomination deadline is April 30.

Some of the criteria for eligibility include: scores of achievement levels two grades above actual grade placement in at least one subject; a score of 130 or higher on a standardized intelligence test; evidence of potential for superior performance in one or more areas; a high level of creativity in at least one area, or other special talents.

"Nominations should originate in the child's school," Adamson said, "and nomination forms should be completed cooperatively by the principal, a teacher and a parent." He said nomination forms have been sent to all public school districts.

Tuition per student for each one-week session is $168. "That includes room, meals, materials, recreation and health services," Adamson said. "A number of economically disadvantaged children of high potential might benefit from this experience through scholarships," he added. "We are soliciting donations from persons interested in helping us provide such scholarships."

Gail Beam, president of the Association for Gifted Students, said, "The students' need for a rapid pace, a stimulating classroom setting, daily recreation and quiet times will all find a place in each day's schedule. Students will have the opportunity to work and play with a variety of responsible adults such as students from the UNM honors program, University professors and teachers from the Albuquerque public school system."

Adamson said interaction with other students from throughout the state "will extend horizons for the students as they investigate the beauty of creative expression or the hollow rings of an ancient land and its culture."

He said the summer program represents "The beginnings of a gradually widening recognition of these special children and their needs. One of few such models in the nation, the summer enrichment program will offer New Mexico a positive alternative to the education of the gifted and talented child."

In addition to making the enrichment program an annual event, Adamson said weekly Saturday programs for the gifted in the Albuquerque area may also be established.

"Gifted programs throughout the state are limited to the public schools," he said. "We want to get kids from throughout the state and give them a taste of UNM so maybe they'll consider coming here. These are the kinds of kids who could be Presidential Scholars later on."

The summer program will also provide an opportunity for special education students and teachers to get experience teaching gifted children, Adamson said.

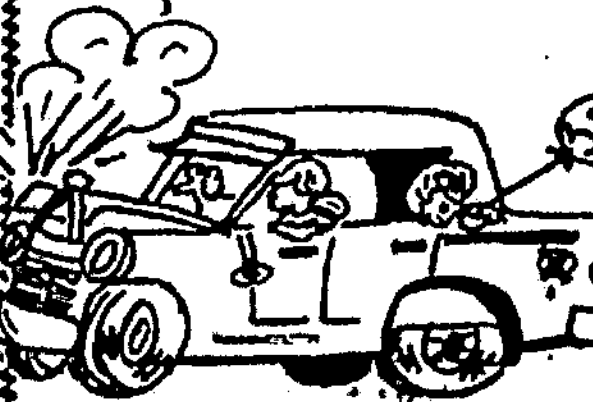

Dates of the six sessions are: June 11-15; June 18-22; June 25-29; July 9-13; July 16-20 and July 23-27.

BY ROBERT E. HUBER and
CARROL W. CAGLE

SANTA FE — Although he'll be running against not only his Democratic opponent but the Democratic Administration in Santa Fe, Republican gubernatorial candidate Joe Skeen has some good things to say about Gov. Jerry Apodaca's achievements in restructuring the bureaucracy.

Skeen, a conservative in a generally conservative party, says he sees no valid reason for concerns that reorganization of state government into a cabinet system will centralize too much power in the governor's office.

The cabinet system was approved by the 1977 Legislature and its first working day of operation will be Monday.

"I don't think a philosophical conservative could object to it on that ground at all," said Skeen in an interview with this column.

Skeen said the pre-cabinet system, featuring a wide array of independent boards, agencies and commissions, was "impossible to coordinate." He added, grinning:

"You ought to at least have something for the governor to do."

Skeen, who served as State Senate Republican leader for several years when there were even fewer GOP members than now, didn't give a blanket endorsement of Apodaca's reorganization plan, however.

He said if he moves into the governor's office in January he would review the entire cabinet structure and see how the new system is working.

"Before making any determination," he said, "I'd like to see how effective it is."

Skeen went on to take a jab at Apodaca's decision to pay the 12 cabinet secretaries $40,000 a year.

He said more attention should have been paid to lower-echelon state employees, many of whom have salaries that are "scandalously low."

For Skeen, a rancher from Lincoln County in southeastern New Mexico, it is his second race for governor and his third statewide race. He was Pete Domenici's lieutenant governor running mate in 1970 in an unsuccessful venture against the Bruce King-Bob Mondragon ticket.

Then in 1974 he headed the ticket, with running mate Virgil Rhodes, and came close to edging the Apodaca-Bob Ferguson slate.

The Democratic team had 164,172 votes and the Skeen-Rhodes had 160,430. Without the presence of a third-party ticket which picked up 4,062 votes (the American Independent Party), Skeen may have narrowly edged out Apodaca.

Skeen concedes what most political observers say: that whether he's opposing King or Ferguson on the Democratic slate this year, there probably won't be a great clash on issues. All three range from moderately conservative to conservative on most social and fiscal issues.

Skeen himself has opposition in the Republican primary but his statewide network of allies almost certainly will make him the GOP nominee.

The general election race against King or Ferguson, he says, will be primarily on "ability" and not on "issues."

But he also agreed that, at least indirectly, he is bound to benefit from a public impression that the Democratic party has plenty of troubles, ranging from the series of indictments against party figures spurred by Atty. Gen. Toney Anaya to the more recent controversy between Apodaca and some of the media over Federal investigations of organized crime activities.

Asked if he plans, in effect, to run against Apodaca, Skeen replied: "No. But it'll have a direct bearing, by inference, on the race."

ANOTHER SPENDING HIKE

President Carter has proposed another considerable federal spending increase. He is asking Congress to appropriate $12.9 billions for federal aid to education — an increase of about twenty-five percent over last year's outlay.

Mr. Carter's desire to improve education and help more students is admirable. But, as with other increased spending in so many fields, the pertinent question is whether the nation can afford to increase spending in still another area.

In short, the decisive question is whether our temptation to spend more prevails over the fact that we can't afford to spend more. If it's immoral to continue to spend more than the citizens (the government) have, thus putting future generations further in debt, the temptation must often be resisted.

Noble ideals, generous programs, giving more to more, usually make for popularity among the politicians dishing it out. It's the road to election. It's also easier to be generous with the taxpayers' money and to assume high humanitarian obligations and philosophies — if one is not the average taxpayer having to struggle to keep up and facing growing living costs, taxes and prices generally. —Santa Rosa News

NEW LIQUOR LAW NEEDED

Brown-bagging your dinner wine or beer is thriving right here in New Mexico, despite the abundance of package stores and lounges. If you want a sturdy chianti with your lasagne or a frothy beer with your bratwurst, you'll have to sneak it to your table.

Why? Because your friendly corner Italian restaurant or hofbrau haus could ill afford to shell out $100,000 to buy a liquor license when it opened years ago. And it can afford twice that or more now even less. Only large, well-heeled restaurant operators can afford to pay such rates for the right to sell drinks.

Although the law itself sets forth the limits on licenses, thereby driving the prices of those in existence up outrageously, it seems to be a non-legal eye to be discriminatory against small business men and women and a restraint of free trade. However, we don't question the law, we just question why that is the law.

A number of Albuquerque citizens and restaurant owners are questioning it too, and have formed the Coalition of Civilized Liquor Laws. The group's purpose is to get a beer and wine license law passed by the 1979 Legislature. It is being put together by Naomi Walsh, author of an annual guide to eating places in the state.

"Our goal is simple," she says. "We shall redress current liquor laws which don't serve our own citizens according to their expressed desires, and which are definitely inhospitable to our visitors."

"After a good beer and wine bill is passed, there won't be any need for diners to sneak their soft-alcohol beverage into their favorite restaurants, at the risk of the owner's arrest."

Our out-of-state guests will no longer be disappointed and shocked at the abysmal state of our liquor laws. They can enhance their meals with appropriate beverages in a civilized, hospitable and sane way.

"This can only help New Mexico's economy and our image as an equal-opportunity state and a good place to visit."

It is a change long overdue and we hope it is made by the 1979 Legislature. —Valencia County News-Bulletin

TV

PRIME TIME SCHOOL TELEVISION

"That killer has murdered five people," and Telly Savalas emphasized, "one of them is a cop." This circumstance began the action in a recent KOJAK episode, resulting in an unimpressive and typical detective segment.

In the course of the show, the cop murderer is captured and nailed by the police department and a powerful mobster, whose girlfriend was an eyewitness to the cop killing, is apprehended.

The lack of realism seems to be a major factor contributing to the program's failure. The show would have us believe that sergeants, not captains, run police stations and that police officers would be more content playing card tricks and drinking beer than solving criminal cases. This is probable but it presents a rather poor image of law enforcers to the viewer.

Spread between a dozen commercials, the show is set in an effective series of settings. But even the grandest of these cannot cover the show's faults which stem primarily from weak scripts stretched to the breaking point in order to fill a full hour.

The show could very well prove successful if these 'rubber-band scripts' were rewritten to stand comfortably on 60 minutes. Change should also take place on the program's script predictability. One need only watch the first few minutes of the show to find out who did what. The remainder of the show is quite predictable—the criminal will be caught by a shining police department.

This Saturday night show can offer little to its viewer except the opportunity to reinforce the aged cliché which says that "crime doesn't pay."

The author, Joseph Keane, 18, of Laredo, Tex., is one of the six winners of the Prime Time School Television (PTST) national contest for the best critical review of a TV police or detective program by a junior high or high school student. The other winning reviews will be published in this column in the weeks that follow.

Each of the winners, in addition to having their article published in hundreds of newspapers across the nation, has been awarded a $10 cash prize and a year's subscription to PTST, so they will receive informative guides on prime time television programs before they are aired. If you would like to become a PTST member, just send $10 for an annual subscription to PTST, 120 S. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill., 60603. The guides are used by thousands of teachers and parents in the United States who want to use television as an educational tool.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT: A famed TV star who once spoke proudly of being a prude is becoming one of Hollywood's wildest playgirls. Rumors of her having bizarre orgies with her co-star and her beau have been circulating around tinseltown. So have reports about her hot one-nighters and frequent flings with Hollywood studs. The evils of Hollywood seem to have changed her once angelic and wholesome ways. Friends claim for a while she was her co-star's bitter rival as the two beauties vied for the top playgirl in Hollywood award. She has had a bevy of beaus. The feud fizzled at her 28th birthday party, where it is rumored that she, her co-star and her beau spent the night together... It's hardly new that Cloris Leachman and George Englund are getting a divorce as they've been apart more than three years. But it's a shock to their friends that George, rather than Cloris, filed the papers. Seems he got fed up with her indecision... David Soul is having a hot romance with beautiful Leigh Taylor-Young, once wed to Ryan O'Neal. David and Leigh met a couple of weeks ago at Laine Kazan's Playboy Club opening in New York. They've been together ever since, despite David's public statements that he and longtime flame Lynne Marta are "really happy." By the way, Mr. Soul is being socked with a $1.5 million paternity suit. Angela Dena May is causing headaches for him, claiming he's the father of her daughter, who was born last September.

TV BACKSTAGE: In the opposite direction, here are Sally Kellerman and Rick Edelstein planning to remarry. They tried it for eight months in 1973 but both feel they've grown since then and are ready to give it another go... "The Blue Knight" star George Kennedy could be having some blue nights over that $6,000 a month in alimony and child support he has to pay, now that Norma, his wife of 18 years, has been given a divorce. They have two children... Some second thoughts about her plan to move to England are now reported to be troubling Priscilla Presley. She wanted to get out of the unceasing spotlight in America but now the thought of leaving her friends and lifestyle is getting her down, friends say.

INSIDE THE TUBE: Redhead Bonnie Franklin of "One Day at a Time" has done more for single women than Carrie Nation did for temperance. Her portrayal of Ann Romano, the divorcee trying to cope with two teenagers and a career, has hit the hearts of TV audiences nationwide. "Bonnie Franklin," Bonnie Franklin says, "is very much like Ann Romano. I sulk. I'm moody. I can't let it out. It builds up and all of a sudden—boom." Bonnie's booms can make life on her hit CBS-TV series something that must indeed be taken one day at a time. For she takes the character of Ann Romano, her hit performance, very seriously. Once last fall she battled with "One Day at a Time's" producers for three days over a script. She tells it this way: "Ann wakes up on her 36th birthday angry and upset. She fears life is passing her by and there's nothing left. Five middle-aged men were telling me I didn't understand that script. They wanted to go for laughs instead of playing it for reality." After rehearsal, she recalls, she walked stiffly to her car, climbed in and screamed at the top of her lungs. "Then I cried for 20 minutes," she says. "If you'd asked me about the show then, I would have said I hoped it went down the drain. I have to remember it's only a situation comedy and I have to stop taking these things so seriously." ... At a small party for Dick Cavett, the White Rum Martini was a big hit.
