

Two youths rescued from Sierra Blanca's slopes

Two Ruidoso youths reported lost in heavy fog Tuesday at Sierra Blanca Ski Area were found unharmed but in weak condition at 9 that night, by ski area personnel.

Ezell Clarke, 12, and Paul Bonnell, 14, were found by search parties about three-quarters of a mile into North Fork Canyon, the next watershed south of the ski area.

Area manager Roy Parker said the youths "got into that difficult country by crossing the ridge from Apache Bowl."

Search parties found the youths, who had separated, and returned Clarke to the ski area by 1:30 a.m.

Bonnell bivouaced on the mountain, as he was too weak to continue and it was too difficult to carry him out, Parker said. "A crew of four was sent to where he was with food, a sleeping bag and other equipment," Parker said.

"They built a fire and stayed til daylight when Bonnell was recovered enough to walk out."

Parker said, "It was lucky we found them when we did; they were getting weak."

"We tried to think like the boys would. We knew their ability and could estimate about how far they could get, so we had an idea where to look."

The youths, who were participants in the Ruidoso Municipal School ski program, were reported missing by their fathers when they had not appeared after the afternoon sweep or the final patrol of the mountain.

As a result of the incident, the ski program will be altered, Parker said. Hereafter, Parker will notify the schools and cancel the program when the weather and road conditions are bad.

Also, starting next Tuesday, participants will no longer be allowed to ride the gondola or Chair Number One, both leading to the top of the mountain.

"This way we can keep a little closer reign on them as they cannot leave the watershed without working at it or climbing."

"Although they no longer will be allowed to ski from the top of the mountain, participants still will have a wide range of runs from which to choose.

"From the Lincoln Chair, they will have a choice of slopes from beginner through expert," Parker said.

Rescuing Clarke were Rick Vincent and Alex Neeley.

Bonnell was discovered by the team of Denny Grover and Ray Heid, and the crew taking overnight survival equipment to him included Doug DeCoursey and Diana Grover-of-the-ski school and Kevin Hayes and Tim Hannagan of the Ski Patrol.

Parents of the youths are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Clarke, Ruidoso, and Mr. and Mrs. David Bonnell, Glencoe.

The Ruidoso CB'sers Club, regularly monitoring Channel 3 for ski area activities, put their assist group plan into action to aid in the search efforts for the youths.

Club member Sam Pearson told The News Wednesday of the CB'sers operation: "Dr. Roger Beechie, 'Mountain Doctor', from a base on the mountain, relayed information and requests for assistance to base stations Mash and Shotgun in Ruidoso."

"Mash and Shotgun relayed requests to Grampa Grump at West Winds Base and checks were made on the air and by land line to see if the skiers had returned to town without their parents' knowledge."

"Checks were made at their homes, the theatre, game room, skating rink and with friends. "Information established by radio determined the area the boys had last been seen skiing, which aided in locating them."

"Grayrat" was stationed at the Mesalero Apache Reservation gate, should the boys find their way to the Upper Canyon.

"Mash and Shotgun bases maintained communication with White Mountain Search and Rescue, on standby at the Ruidoso police base."

"Once again the CB'sers Club has proven that it is ready and capable of immediately setting up a communications system and handling emergency situations in cooperation with local authorities and citizens."

Mule-O-Rama tower raised sans village authorization

The Ruidoso trustees Tuesday evening took no action on payment of a $7,400 past due bill presented by representatives of Toltec International, Incorporated (TII), El Paso, Texas, pertaining to the tower erected at Gateway Meadows, Ruidoso Downs, used as an officials' and announcers' stand by Lincoln County Mule-O-Rama Association last October.

TII representatives Gerald Campbell and Don Benge were advised by mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr., that the trustees had never acted on the purchase of the tower and that the matter had never been presented to the trustees for action.

The TII representatives, after producing a set of plans for the tower and citing village purchase order Number 8254 as their authority to erect the tower, advised the trustees:

- The plans were hand delivered to the TII office in El Paso.
- That TII had contacted Mike Taylor, village accountant, by telephone, upon receipt of the plans, for verification of the authorization to erect the tower.
- That, on being advised by Taylor that the tower had to be erected quickly, the crews rushed the construction through in six days.

- That TII had assumed receipt of plans for the tower reflected approval by the trustees.

- That TII had repeatedly billed the village for payment of the $7,500 but had received neither payment nor any communication regarding the account.

"All we want," Campbell said, "is to be paid."

Village representatives then advised the TII men:

- Village manager Jim Hine had authorized preparation of the tower plans by Ruidoso architect Jim French in response to a request from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) that a control tower, designed to FAA specifications, be erected at Ruidoso Municipal Airport for use during high traffic periods, as FAA would no longer bring a portable tower to the airport to provide this service.

- That the original purchase order, signed by Taylor, had been voided by village purchasing agent Frank Potter and that the matter had never been presented to the trustees.

- That there was no understanding by the trustees that the tower was to have been moved to the airport following the Mule-O-Rama activities.

The News determined Wednesday morning that Purchase Order Number 8254, dated October 7, 1977, authorizing erection of the tower under an "emergency" order, had been signed by Taylor, an official of Mule-O-Rama.

Mayor Davis said to the TII men, "We're somewhat embarrassed... we know so little about it. The tower was erected and situated before we had any knowledge of it."

Davis then authorized village attorney Ron Harris to contact TII attorney J. W. Neal, Hobbs, to begin negotiations to solve the problem, after stating that no billing had been received by Hine or Potter.

In other business, the trustees were advised:

- Progress on Eagle Creek Dam has again been delayed by action needed to obtain approval of the project by the Soil Conservation Office (SCS), Portland, Oregon. "SCS," Tom Mann of Mann Engineering, Roswell, said, "has set a time table of March 10, 1978, to approve the plans and I've been told that they will not communicate with me until that date." SCS is concerned, Mann said, with the design criteria including access to the structure, pressure control and installation of a tower providing release of water at different levels in the dam.

- By Michael E. Hernandez, village animal control officer, that during the 320 days preceding December 31, 1977, the service handled 5,987 animal calls, answered 2,165 complaints, destroyed 5,294 animals, adopted out or had reclaimed 693 animals, logged 10,388 man hours and 28,662.9 miles, all in Ruidoso.

- Authorized preparation of a lease agreement with the Ruidoso Noon Lions on acreage to be used for the Teen Center.

- Accepted the resignation of Jane Parks from the Library Board and appointed Mrs. David (Betsy) Wilson to succeed her.

- Adopted Ordinance 78-1, raising excavation rates on hard surfaced streets from $2 to $5 and on unimproved streets from $1 to $3 per square foot and requiring cash deposits from all services excavating the streets.

- Took no action on a request from Ross Schwarz to provide a mobile home office for the ambulance service near village hall, due to zoning restrictions. The trustees will consider an approved location for the mobile office at a later date.

- Instructed Hine to advise J. B. Pope that garbage rates are set by ordinance and that Pope would continue to be billed for year around service.

- Took action to change the village code to permit increasing the salary of the Municipal Judge from $500 monthly to

Gordon Snidow lithograph will boost band trip

The Ruidoso High School Band, under the baton of Jess Lara, will present a pop concert in Warrior gymnasium at 8 p.m., February 14.

The concert is the first of a series of events planned to finance the band's proposed late spring tour to California and Disneyland for three days participation in parades and concert appearances.

Members of the Band Boosters, as well as band members, started ticket sales, at $1 each or 12 for $10, yesterday.

In support of the Disneyland tour, Ruidoso artist Gordon Snidow has donated a lithograph and Mr. and Mrs. Elton Guthrie of Ruidoso Downs, a steer, to kick off the series of fund raising ventures.

Lara has announced that fund raising projects planned include "the sale of seating cushions, monogrammed with the Ruidoso High School Warrior in school colors, car washes when weather permits, bake sales, cookie sales and, of course, we'll be happy to accept donations to send the band students on this once-in-a-lifetime excursion." Snidow, a native of Missouri who has lived in Oklahoma and Texas, includes among books published "The Cowboy in American Prints", "Bronzes of the American West", "Western Painting Today" and "The Cowboy in Art."

In 1973 a book of his works, as well as thoughts, "Gordon Snidow: Chronicler of the Contemporary West", earned him national acclaim and in 1976 he was listed in "Who's Who in American Art."

His show medals include silver in watercolor, drawings and other media, as well as gold medals in sculpture, watercolor and other media.

At the 1975 Cowboy Artists of America (CAA) show he won two out of five gold medals offered, one for a mixed media painting and the second for a watercolor.

Snidow, president of CAA in 1970-1971, did a lot of, he said, "serious cow work" on the IX Ranch near Big Sandy, Montana, one of, he said, "the state's famous cattle operations."

Sunland Park sale set Saturday

Ninety-two head are expected to parade through the auction ring Saturday in the second annual Sunland Park Sale.

The vendue will be held on the track grounds, beginning at 7 p.m., and is earmarked for two-year-old thoroughbreds in training and for other horses of racing age.

"Of the total number of sale horses, 71 are two-year-olds and 55 of these are nominated to Sunland's upcoming $300,000 Riley Allison Thoroughbred Futurity," notes sale manager Richard Thompson.

He adds that the booming trend of the Allison Futurity — and the general growth of racing in the Southwest — has greatly stimulated the sales picture in this part of the country.

Thompson goes on: "Particularly, there's been a lot of interest in the Sunland sale. The fact that last year's sale was so successful, and produced a number of top-quality graduates, has also helped focus attention."

The most brilliant graduate of the class of '77 was Mr. Moon, who went for $7,200 and later turned into a multiple stakes winner, earning just over $120,000. The owners of Mr. Moon were recently offered $100,000 for the gelding, but turned the package down.

Another graduate of the '77 sale was Jerimi Johnson, who's earned some $26,000 so far.

Thompson says he's extremely pleased by the quality and balance in this year's sale, and, by way of example, he points to the juvenile filly, Vested Ways. She's by Vested Power, a stakes winner of nearly $80,000, out of Thinking Cap, who won seven races and earned almost $26,000. Vested Ways was consigned by James McArthur of Hillsboro.

Sam Stevens of Lamesa, Texas, consigned the roan colt, Top Master. He's by Master Hand, the sire of Butter 'Um Up. The latter ran third in last year's Allison Futurity, and earned over $100,000. Top Master is out of Hidden Valley by Royal Vale.

Each of the sale horses will be on track Friday from 1-4 p.m., galloping or breezing under tack.

Auctioneers for the sale will be Bill Tackett of Collinsville, Oklahoma and Keith Babb of Monroe, Louisiana.

Authorized Harris to prepare an ordinance allowing village residents to participate in The National Flood Insurance Program, making financing available for building or remodeling structures in areas of the village subject to flooding.

Named as members of the precinct board for the March 7 village election, Emadair C. Jones and Helen R. Brown, judges, and Marilyn Bloodworth, Ruth Wimberly and Mary Woodriddle, clerks; and Earline Phillips, judge and Dorothy Dillard, clerk, for absentee voters.

Mayor Davis also had inserted into the minutes, his: "Congratulations to Jack LaMay for the good job he is doing on snow removal, bar ditch work and drainage improvements; Police Chief Paul Lukens and all police officers for a marvelous job and excellent percentages on burglaries and crimes solved and hoping you have the cooperation from the sheriff and State Police you deserve; and to Jim Goodman, for achieving level four, the highest rating possible in New Mexico, as operator of the village water system."

News from the Home Economist

Foul weather play: If you have had a hard time amusing your children on bad days when they can't play out-of-doors, join the crowd! Almost every mother has wondered what to do next for a household child or children.

Why not mix up a batch of playdough, finger paint or paste? The ingredients for these inexpensive supplies are already on your kitchen shelf. As an extra bonus, if your children taste a fresh batch, it won't hurt them (although it won't taste very good either).

To make a batch of no-cook playdough, mix one cup of flour and one-third cup of salt. Add about three tablespoons of water and knead the mixture until it reaches the consistency of bread dough. If you want colored dough, add food coloring to the water. Sprinkle the dough with more flour if it becomes sticky.

If you want to save a "masterpiece" just let it dry at room temperature. Your child can paint the dried object.

To make child-safe finger paints, combine one cup of flour and two teaspoons of salt. Stir in one cup of water and a few drops of food coloring. Unlike other finger paints, this grainy product provides an extra sensory experience.

Finally, you don't need to buy white paste when it's so easy to make at home. Mix one-fourth cup of corn starch in one-third cup of cold water. Add this mixture to three cups of boiling water. Stir the paste until it is slightly thick.

While fresh batches of these art materials are safe for the children to taste, they are food products and should be protected from mold or spoilage. There fore store all left-overs in airtight containers in the refrigerator. Discard them if mold appears.

JOBS AND FREEDOM

"We clearly perceive that the problem of the poor is not just one of feeding the world, but of generating enough jobs to permit every worker to earn the livelihood to which he or she legitimately aspires. In generating employment, we give mankind the opportunity to be set free from devoting all of its energies to subsisting at barely livable levels, set free from living outside the monetized system and therefore precluded from access to the modern world."

—Daniel Parker, Administrator Agency for International Development

News from the County Agent

Parity price is the money that the producers must receive to pay for the cost of production and if 100 percent parity — it allows for a small profit. Economists have different methods to arrive at a parity price. The first parity price plan I was exposed to was the 1910-1914 as the base period for a parity price. The economist felt that the 1910-1914 period was a relatively stable time and reflected a true picture. Since that time there have been many base periods used in setting up a parity price formula.

As an example of how this works let's say that it cost a wheat producer 93 cents to produce a bushel of wheat in the base parity period. He sold this wheat for $1.00 giving him a 7 cent or a 7.5 percent profit. Now let's say that today it cost $3.50 to produce a bushel of wheat. If the producer is to receive an equal price to the base period he must receive $3.75 per bushel to equal the price received in the base period. This is a 100 percent parity price.

The cost of production can be much different than the example I just made, but I hope this will help you understand a little about parity price.

The recent emphasis on energy conservation should be considered by farmers and ranchers in the area. They have been always looking for ways to cut costs and this generally results in a saving of energy.

A few ways to cut costs is to feed protein supplement twice a week rather than daily. Low protein or energy feeds need to be fed daily for the best results. Another way to conserve energy at the same time cut cost is to follow a good range management plan. The plan will provide ample forage for the livestock year long and reduce the supplemental feed needs. Combining herds into fewer pastures reduces the travel time needed to look after the livestock.

A CB radio can save time, costs and energy as it can be used to relay information. This eliminates the need to travel extra distances to deliver a message.

Designing livestock water systems to use solar heat can reduce the need to break ice in the winter time. I expect some useable solar water heaters to be available in the next few years.

Fruit growers should consider a drip irrigation system when setting out new orchards as this uses the water most efficiently and requires less water to get better growth on the trees. Homeowners can also use a drip system on new trees and shrubs planted on the home grounds.

Frozen water and sewer lines recently made life miserable for many New Mexico homeowners. Thawing these pipes with a torch or other open flame can be very hazardous.

Some people have tried to use electric welders, homeowners should not try this under any circumstances. The use of welding equipment should be left to a plumber or welder who knows when such equipment can be used and under what circumstances.

Wrap the frozen pipes with burlap or rags and keep them soaked with hot water until the ice melts. You can also use a hairdryer to blow heated air on the affected area. As a last resort you can use a homeowner's propane torch, but be sure to have a bucket of water and a large sponge handy to quench the fire should the wall or wood start to smolder.

The recent cold weather in New Mexico offered many a good excuse to enjoy the comfort of a blazing fire or wood-burning stove. But with the warmth comes a potentially dangerous problem — creosote buildup. A very hot fire can ignite creosote, resulting in a roaring chimney fire that could lead to a house fire as well.

When wood burns, the combustion process is never complete. A sticky tar-like substance called "creosote" can build up in the stove pipe or chimney flue. Dense smoke from a smoldering fire carries the most unburned creosote. Burning unseasoned wood — especially softwoods — forms the most creosote.

Creosote problems are more common in the newer, more efficient airtight stoves since less heat escapes up the chimney to burn off the creosote. To prevent the buildup, have a hot fire for 15 to 30 minutes a day. Inspect stove pipes and chimney flues frequently for creosote during the heating season.

A hot fire every day will burn off the creosote in very small amounts, eliminate buildup problems and lessen chances of a chimney fire. But if you are faced with a chimney fire, close all the openings and draft controls on the stove or fireplace. Call the fire department and squirt a fire extinguisher or throw baking soda onto the fire in the stove or fireplace until help arrives.

14 Downs candidates have filed

A total of 14 Ruidoso Downs residents filed as candidates for office in the March 7 election, prior to the 5 p.m., deadline Tuesday.

Filing were:

Mayor, four years, incumbent Norman Wheeler, trustee Harold Mansell and Jake Harris, former mayor and trustee.

Trustee, four years, Ray Parnell, Ray Reed, Emelia Maes and Lois D. Beavers.

Trustee, two years, "Dee" Dennis, former trustee Don Clark, Sandra J. Currens, Juanita L. Burke and Vada I. Leighton.

Municipal Judge, four years, Ray Walker and incumbent Eric West.

Declaring for the office of trustee, but not filing, "Pappy" Johnson.

Candidates at Ruidoso Downs will draw for ballot position at 4 p.m., Friday.

Thomas Loudon candidate for village trustee

C. Thomas Loudon, Ruidoso resident the past 13 years, has announced his candidacy for village trustee in the March 7 election.

He announced seven goals he will try to achieve, if elected:

- Do everything I can to promote good and orderly development of the village.
- Encourage the Planning and Zoning Committee to develop plans to correct some of the past errors in the haphazard development and hold to adequate zoning laws.
- Promote the passing of an ordinance permitting the village to enforce the Recorded Restrictive Covenants in subdivisions.
- Use my influence to enforce the building code in our village for the protection of property owners.
- Provide financing for street repairs and improvements and act on these promptly.
- Discourage further subdivisions being taken into the incorporated village while there is much property now within the village to be developed. The wide area being covered makes the village services, especially of water, but also sanitation and police and fire protection too expensive for the amount of revenue obtained and spreads these services too thinly.
- I have always been interested in youth recreation and education and will use my influence to further the plans for the Teen Center."

While in business as a general contractor in Glendale, California, Loudon was listed in "Who is Who" for Community Service. He was a two-term president, as well as organizer, of the Lake View Terrace Improvement Association and served as chairman of the City Planning Committee. He also served several years as assistant technical superintendent at Universal Picture Studios and was in the estimating department of Warner Brothers Studios for ten years.

A member of the Ruidoso Methodist Church, Loudon is a Past Master of three Masonic lodges and was patron of an Eastern Star chapter in North Hollywood, California.

Oak Grove to be winter playsite

A portion of the Oak Grove camping area will be developed by the Forest Service for a snow play site to replace the old ski area at Cedar Creek a part of which will be closed. Smokey Bear District Ranger Ray Page announced this week.

"We did an environmental analysis, studying Cedar Creek for snow play," Page said. "As we got into the analysis we looked at other sites, including Oak Grove, which could be developed into a safer area than Cedar Creek."

"We found Oak Grove to be better suited, safer, with better access and easier to develop with less earth work or disturbance of the site."

"So, the decision was to develop Oak Grove for snow play and close all of Cedar Creek except the lower portion of the old ski area."

Page said a snow fence barrier will be put up and seedlings planted this summer.

The Forest Service will fund development of Oak Grove as it "will cost a minimum to develop and probably only require clearing a little brush and some small trees."

Page said present plans call for the Youth Conservation Corps which will be hired by the district for the summer to do the closing work at Cedar Creek and the clearing at Oak Grove.

THE PROPOSED SNOW play area to be developed at Oak Grove Campground.

Sierra Blanca Skiing Action

From the top ... with Roy

by Sou' Garrett

Over 4,000 tickets were sold this past Saturday making January 28, 1978 a record day at Sierra Blanca. It certainly isn't hard to believe! After a few runs in the beautiful sun and excellent conditions, it is very obvious why there is such a great turnout. The skiing is GREAT! Roy mentioned that he felt the skiing was as good or better now, than it ever was last year or this year. Plus, we have been lucky enough that it snows during the week and clears up for the weekend. Who could ask for more?

You know Jean Peter Oshay, the winner of the Yukon Jack Sierra Blanca Pro Cup Race? Well, he left Ruidoso for Utah Wednesday, arriving at Snowbird at 12:50 p.m., Thursday, in time to race in their circuit at 1:00 p.m. And guess what? He won it. He must be on a real winning streak!!! What a way to start a season.

By the way, the Southwest Pro Ski Tour, the representatives of Yukon Jack, and most of the racers, really appreciated the help of the locals during their visit. It is a nice place to visit, isn't it? Have a good one this weekend!!!

Snow plow hits deputy's auto

Chiffins, Under Sheriff Red Meador told The News Wednesday, "suffered head and back injuries and was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Roswell, for treatment. He was due to be released today."

Meador said damage to the car was about $1,700.

"The accident happened during a heavy snow storm," Meador said, "and no citations were issued."

Crib death leading killer of infants

Crib death is the leading killer of infants between the ages of one and 12 months, striking two out of every 1,000 live births. It kills more males than females, more blacks than whites and more low birth-weight babies.

These facts were among the research findings presented Tuesday, January 3, by Eileen Hasselmeier, Ph.D., R.N., from the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland.

Via live, satellite, Dr. Hasselmeier explained to an audience at the University of Colorado Medical Center (UCMC) that the cause of crib death or Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) is still unknown. By definition it is the sudden and unexpected death of an infant, a tragedy that can't be explained even with an autopsy.

Although the cause has not been determined, Hasselmeier said researchers are certain there is no single cause. They also know these children are not healthy prior to their death. They are well-nourished and developed and appear to have received good care by the parents. However, physiological disorders and environmental factors may play a role in SIDS.

SIDS generally affects infants between the second and fourth month of life, with the most common occurrence taking place at 10 weeks of age. Contrary to earlier beliefs, more than one child in the same family can be stricken by SIDS. Hasselmeier said although it is not genetic, environmental factors increase the risk by five times if a sibling dies of SIDS.

She also indicated that there is evidence to show that there are fewer SIDS victims among first born children. The highest rate is among children born to mothers under the age of 20. The older the mother, Hasselmeier said, the less the risk. Women who smoke and women who receive no pre-natal care also experience a higher rate of SIDS among their children.

Through research, Hasselmeier said, they've been able to determine that crib death has the greatest frequency during the cold months, especially during November through March, and between the hours of midnight and 6:00 a.m.

One of the most difficult aspects of SIDS is the grieving process parents must endure. Hasselmeier explained there are now 32 counseling centers in the U.S. provided through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. There are three such centers in the Rocky Mountain region, one located in Denver. During the next few years, according to Hasselmeier, researchers at the National Institutes of Health hope to identify the cause of SIDS, the risks and prevention methods, thereby eliminating future victims of SIDS.

HOW to Write a Person-to-Person Classified Ad that Sells!

STATE THE ITEM

Tell your readers exactly what you're selling right away. Don't bother with fancy features yet. They don't want to know it's "Wilson K28" until after they know it's a set of golf clubs.

GIVE ENOUGH INFORMATION

An ad that's too short becomes expensive if it doesn't sell your item. "Golf Clubs, 000-0000" leaves the reader with too many questions. What kind? What model? Condition? State the price or say "Make an offer."

GET TO THE POINT

Avoid long-winded language when short phrases will do. "Super deluxe, attractive blue and white Atlantic bag" can be shortened to "blue and white Atlantic bag." That way you can convey a lot of information while taking advantage of our low Person-to-Person rates.

MAKE SURE CUSTOMERS CAN REACH YOU

Just a phone number is enough if you will be home all the time the ad is running. If not, your caller may get discouraged and decide not to call back. By adding "After 6 P.M." your customer knows exactly when he can reach you.

BE HONEST

Don't omit obvious flaws or exaggerate the quality. "Never used" might get lots of calls but "damaged number three iron" may get more offers. Your readers want to buy from someone that they can trust.

A well-written classified ad will sell just about any item or service you're selling. The example above suggests a few ways to make your ad effective. But even the best ad won't do the job unless you put it in the right place. In our Classifieds. In the Classified, your ad will reach your best prospects at the lowest price. It will be read by ready buyers in your area, the ones most likely to come over and complete the sale. So when you're placing an ad for anything, make it count. By writing it the right way and putting it in the right place. In our Classifieds.

He Still Relies on Mule Power

By the time Oren Reeves of Pittsburg, Texas was eight years old, he could harness a mule and plow the fields of the family farm. "Mules and donkeys provided a lot of power back in those days," Reeves recalled for a writer from The National Council on the Aging. "They were used to plow fields, harvest crops and to haul products to market." When Reeves got a little older, he got a job moving dirt for the construction of a manmade lake, using a three-mule team to pull wagons and other equipment. From this, Reeves moved on to other, bigger jobs, at one time leasing about 30 mules to the highway department for road building and also worked for a steel company using his mules to build a levee. Among their many uses, Reeves remembers a team of mules that pulled wagons for local merchants. "Those two mules were so well trained they'd walk to the next house and stop while the iceman made a delivery," Reeves said. "And then you'd see two mules hitched to a wagon running full-steam — really flying — delivering groceries." At one time, there were about 10 million mules in the country but automation changed that. Around 1930, farmers began buying tractors and many mules were sold to the proverbial glue factory. The end of the days of mule power didn't stifle Reeve's love for mules, however, and he began to raise and break show mules. "I bought a jack and four Belgian mares from a man in Missouri," Reeves said. "I did my own breeding for two or three years but it was a slow process trying to get matched pairs, so I finally bought two pair and a four-mule hitch." After buying his first two pair of mules, Reeves got involved in buying two-year-old colts, training them for about two years and selling them for a profit. Today, he goes to all the big mule sales, where muletraders from all over the world get together to swap stories and mules. Reeves currently drives what is probably the only hitch of six matched red sorrel mules in Texas. He drives them in small parades throughout the state as well as bigger affairs in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston. "It gets a little expensive," Reeves said. "If you ever tried to bed down six mules overnight in a strange town you'd know what I mean. Sometimes a company sponsors me and then I just about break even." Not that paying his way will ever stop Oren Reeves from driving his mules in a parade. "I reckon I'll be buying, selling, swapping and parading mules for the rest of my life," Reeves said. "I wouldn't know what to do with my time if I didn't."

NEW YORK CITY and Alaska lead a list of 27 state and local government units which have decided against earlier plans to cancel Social Security coverage for their employees. New York City announced in the spring of 1976 that it was going to end coverage for more than 300,000 workers but recently rescinded that decision. Alaska, which filed a termination notice in December, 1975, has also reconsidered, and its more than 12,000 government employees will remain covered by Social Security. The other 25 government units which have changed their plans means another 45,000 workers who will remain in the Social Security plan. "We're gratified that these government units had second thoughts about taking such a serious step," said James Cardwell, commissioner of the Social Security Administration. "In many cases, they were told by independent actuaries that they could not duplicate benefits through private insurers at comparable cost."

OLDER RESIDENTS of Rochester, N.Y. living in high crime areas are being given 10,000 citizen's band radios by New York State to help protect them against crime. This pilot project involves installing the standard 23 channel models in the homes of elderly persons, which will enable them to communicate instantly with the local police.

Ranchers can save energy and dollars

Energy and labor are two of the biggest expenses for ranchers in New Mexico. Often by cutting the time spent for labor and travel, fuel costs will go down. Larry Foster, Extension beef cattle specialist at New Mexico State University, presented some energy saving ideas at a recent Extension training conference.

as much as 60 percent can be saved on labor and travel by feeding supplement twice a week instead of daily. Feeding only once a week saves only 50 percent on labor and travel. The weekly feeding is less efficient because the cattle tend to scatter more.

He said by using solar water heaters in cattle watering tanks, ranchers can often save the time and fuel required to break the ice during the winter. Ranchers who use pumps or pump jacks could save fuel by cutting down on the amount of evaporation from large storage tanks.

Research over the years has shown that protein feeds do not need to be fed daily. Feeding every other day or twice a week can be as efficient for the cattle as feeding daily. This is especially true when feeding cottonseed cake to cows or calves.

NMSU is currently researching various types of solar water heaters. NMSU's Jornada Experiment Station near Las Cruces is studying how to cut down on evaporation in large storage tanks.

When energy feeds are needed, however, this may not be true. Research from Oregon State University indicates that energy feeds need to be fed daily for a maximum benefit. This may be a case when you're feeding cattle on short grass during a drought. The reason is that protein can be recycled in the body while energy must be supplied daily.

By using two-way radios, ranchers can save time and fuel by preventing unnecessary trips to convey a simple message, Foster said. Ranchers could also save fuel simply by using a smaller, more fuel efficient pickup. Many ranchers have more than one pickup and by using a fuel efficient pickup for errands and small hauling jobs, ranchers would save fuel.

You can also save on supplement by making sure that you are feeding the right supplement at the right time and in the right amount. In years when grass is plentiful and available to cattle, mature cows need no supplement at all until after they calve. Even then, NMSU research indicates that mature cows can get along well with only a phosphorus supplement. Growing cattle need more supplemental feed through their first calf crop.

On large ranches, airplanes will save energy on some jobs, like checking windmills and waters in the summertime, checking on livestock and assisting during livestock gathering, Foster said. Airplanes can also efficiently obtain small repair parts and supplies. If you consider time and fuel lost by driving long distances to pick up such small items, an airplane is a feasible alternative.

Matching the supplement to the range may mean a change of supplement every year. There is no one supplement that will do the same job year after year on the same ranch. There are many factors, such as class of cattle, condition of range and weather, that will influence the type and amount of supplement that should be fed.

Changes in the supplementation program can mean more savings. Research from Texas A&M indicates that "It" has no mind. It cannot think. It cannot control its actions. It is not distinguish right from wrong. "It" is a gun.

Guns, more correctly referred to as firearms, are a favorite subject of controversy. Anti-gun people fight for legislation to enact strict gun control laws. While, the pro-gun people fight for their rights as citizens to keep and bear arms. An apparently never-ending battle that concerns an object as much as a national heritage as is this country itself.

The knowledge that a firearm can kill is not a new concept by any means. Even the earliest guns, merely a tube open at one end and closed at the other, were used to obtain food and protect property and life.

The most simple guns, such as the matchlock firearms brought to America by the pilgrims, had an advantage over the bows and arrows and hand-thrown weapons utilized by the Indians. Just as civilization progressed, so did the firearm.

The repeating firearm, so named because of its ability to fire more than one shot without being reloaded, added a new dimension to the capability of firearms. No longer was the shooter dependent upon one shot guns for gathering food or fighting wars.

Today, firearms are of an unequalled excellence. Precisely machined, quality parts are standard. Add to them improved sighting devices, advanced technology in ammunition manufacturing and knowledge of ballistics, and you have a dependable, accurate implement.

Firearms, old and new alike, are common in the households across America. Some are kept for a feeling of security. Some are kept for sport hunting. Others are kept for target shooting.

Muzzle-loaders and other early guns, handed down generation from generation, are proudly displayed as a part of the household furniture. Or, they may be carefully locked away as collection pieces. Collecting firearms has added a new concept in the field of firearms.

Firearm manufacturers have gone to great extremes to catch the businessman's eye. That is, to produce an exceptionally attractive, yet functional firearm in a limited series. These firearms are sold at high prices as collector items and their values do increase with time. Most of these guns will never be fired.

All modern guns are a good investment. The better the brand-name, and the better the looks and features, the better the investment. Their retail values skyrocket each year and their resale values are ever increasing.

Regardless of the reason for having firearms in your home, the safety factor must be considered. Not the safety of the firearms themselves, but the safety of the people in the household.

A firearm is only as dangerous as is its possessor. When the two are together, only one has a brain. Only one realizes it is capable of living, and of killing. If the one that has these capabilities does not utilize them, the results could be tragic. It seems unfair that the gun has to take the blame for his "master's" actions.

Statistically, firearms occur low in the list of causes of accidents. Automobiles, falls, drowning, fires and burns, poisons and suffocations all are more frequent causes of accidents, and resulting fatalities. Yet, very seldom do you see a headline concerning a poisoning or suffocating fatality.

Precaution is the greatest cure for all accidents, regardless of cause. In the case of firearms, gun owners across America are active in the role of educating individuals in firearm safety. Firearm safety classes are offered in each of the 50 states. Such courses are mandatory in about one-half of these states and New Mexico is one of them.

New Mexico requires all persons under eighteen years of age to successfully complete an approved hunter safety course before firing a firearm in this state. Since the program's origin in the mid-1960's, the number of accidents per number of hunters have been reduced.

The next time you are around firearms, use your head. Your gun doesn't have one.

Yours and Ours

BY ROBERT E. HUBER and
CARROL W. CAGLE

Griscom was in the general counsel's post, it was removed from the "exempt" category and made a part of the classified personnel system.

Ms. Southerland ended up holding that job temporarily from May until August 1976, on an "acting basis from the time Griscom left and until McNeill came on board. Now that McNeill has left the agency, Ms. Southerland is again in line for the job and the Apodaca Administration is again faced with a decision on the general counsel's job — and the resulting policy decisions which inevitably will be affected.

The entry of McNeill and another Democrat, Robert Hawk of Albuquerque, into the race against Congressman Lujan insures a rare primary fight between two potential nominees both popular within the party.

Lujan, who has had 10 years in Washington as a GOP representative, has been winning with big margins every two years since 1968. So in recent years few strong Democratic contenders have been willing to take on the popular incumbent.

Neither McNeill nor Hawk have statewide or district-wide campaign experience, and many Democrats still see Lujan as virtually unbeatable. But others note that the New Mexico political scene is in flux and that surprises are becoming more commonplace. The fact there'll be a contest in the primary at all indicates a belief Lujan may be potentially vulnerable — and the winner of the Hawk-McNeill race will gain some momentum merely by having shown electoral strength.

McNeill was an administrative aide to former U.S. Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M. Hawk is a county commissioner in Bernalillo County (Albuquerque), which supplies the bulk of votes in the northern congressional district.

Meanwhile, Lujan continues to function as one who believes he is politically strong but who leaves little to chance. He will be campaigning hard, both on the campaign trail and in maintaining the high level of constituent services which have contributed greatly to his popularity among rank-and-file voters.

Clipped comment

CLEAN AIR BAG

Some years ago there was an almost constant flow of news and comment about air pollution. This reflected and stimulated growing public awareness that chemicals and other pollutants had sharply reduced the quality of the air we breathe. It came to be widely realized that this trend would continue unless stringent corrective action was taken.

That prompted a major legislative attack on various aspects of the problem. The fruits of this legislation can be seen in the Environmental Protection Agency's newly released 1976 National Air Quality and Emissions Trends Report. This shows significant long-term declines in various pollutants — sulphur dioxide, carbon monoxide, particulates (smoke and dust).

The report does not warrant complacency, however. The present state of affairs was summed up by EPA Administrator Douglas M. Costle in releasing the report: "America's air is getting cleaner. But we're still a long way from having healthy air throughout the country."

One important factor is that, for all our progress, the smog which blights urban areas is still troublesome and levels "are even increasing slightly" in some cities. This seems to point the finger at that most cherished American artifact, the automobile, since smog results when airborne hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxide are exposed to sunlight.

One might assume that smog levels will steadily decline as more and more autos comply with emissions standards, yet there are indications that there may be setbacks. The EPA report notes a rise in emissions, from 1.5 percent for carbon monoxide to 6.4 percent for hydrocarbons, from 1975 to 1976.

It is a mixed bag, then. The report is encouraging in some respects. At the same time, it shows that the goal of reasonably clean air throughout the country still is far from attainment. — Alamogordo Daily News

Reports from Santa Fe

John F. Bigbee

A constituent called me the other day and said he had thought of coming up to see me but seeing as how we couldn't even pass our own "Feed Bill" he supposed there was little use in talking to us! Actually, even though we have completed very little work on any measure, we have been very busy holding hearings on budgets and proposals.

I have received a number of letters from teachers in my district who have been very disappointed over the small raises they have been receiving in spite of the large increased appropriations we have been making each year. I was curious as to why the teachers have not been receiving their share of the increased appropriations. I was shocked to find that in the last ten years the state's number of students has increased 1%, the number of teachers has increased 19%. This 19% increase can be understood when you realize the number of new programs such as kindergarten and special education has increased. The shocking and difficult thing for me to understand is the 44% increase in administrative personnel and the 102% increase in non-certified personnel. No wonder the teachers are disappointed.

The problems the New Mexico House and Senate are having in passing the "feed bill", a no-bill no-pay issue, raises questions as to how they will cope with financial proposals including slashing revenues, increasing spending and keeping the reserve account flourishing and growing.—CD

ON TAX DEDUCTS

All contributors to political activities ... if'n they were used by a candidate in an election bid ... are deductible ... up to $200 on a joint return ... (and if'n you're making your return out while in a joint, easy does it) ... so says the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) ... that's the outfit that wants you to have all the money that's left after they take what they want.

Now you have two choices ... take a tax deduction ... or a tax credit, reducing your tax bill by up to one-half of $25, or $50 joint. And, within the limitations set on your generosity by IRS you can charge off cash handouts to politicians, dues to political committees, even the tab on dinner ducats ... and that sounds like a whale of a deal.

But ... IRS isn't quite as generous as it sounds ... 'cause you'd better have cancelled checks or written receipts ... and be able to prove every bit of your donations were spent on activities strictly political ... and that those banquet were 100 percent political, or you'll have to get your calculator in gear and figure out how much dining and listening time wasn't. Leaving the obvious conclusion that if'n you slipped some "good old boy" a double sawbuck or laid a big one on him, it might be best just to forget the whole shebang ... but don't let the "good old boy" forget it.

ON MISSING W-2'S

If'n you don't have all of your W-2's by now ... your bosses who are derelict in duty aren't nearly in as much trouble as you might be.

It's this way ... if'n you don't have your W-2's by February 15, you advise the IRS. Presumably the IRS'll chit-chat with said bosses as didn't comply with the rules on getting the W-2's to you.

With the sticker being: "Employees who do not receive all of their W-2's in time to file should report all of their income and attach a statement explaining tax computations for which W-2's are missing" ... the IRS says ... which could tend to be considerably more complicated than it sounds ... especially on a hurried reading. For instance ... that explanatory paragraph could mean that you have to fill out a separate tax form for each W-2 you don't have ... and if'n you're doing your own, and missing seven W-2's and don't start work on your return until April 14 ... you could be in a peck of trouble.

But be of good cheer ... Carter wants to slash the federal tax bite by $30 billion, or so ... Apodaca wants to cut the state's take by 30 percent, or so ... and if'n those cuts come through ... and your W-2's don't ... you might save more'n enough to pay your penalties ... but don't rush out and spend your savings until you get the good word.

SOLAR ENERGY COSTS

Comes now the state's Department of Development (DOD) ... with plans to build a $114,000 solar energy tourist information edifice in Chama.

Seems this is a joint project of dear old DOD, our Tourist Division and the Highway Department ... which probably won't do a thing to reduce the cost.

Anyhow ... this $114,000 building needs a road leading to it and the Highway Commission ... DOD says ... has approved the need for such a road ... as if'll promote safety and cut down walking strain, especially amongst cardiac prospects ... and this feeder road'll only cost $200,000 ... to make good driving to a $114,000 building ... where, if'n lecturers in similar edifices hold true to form, lecturers will deliver their discourses in language the average fellow driving over that $200,000 road to the $114,000 building won't understand.

Course the building will be solar heated/cooled ... so you'll be able to see solar heating/cooling in action ... and easing the pain'll be the fact that the annual payroll is estimated at a mere $35,000. Makes you wonder, considering the state's economy kick, where the money'll come from.

BRIEF BIT: Scratch a politician's back long enough and you'll wind up with fingernails worn down to the nubbin ... and bleeding, too ... CD

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

In spite of the present village ordinances and the efforts of Mike Hernandez and his crew at Ruidoso Animal Services, unfortunate incidents involving loose animals continue to plague us.

Saturday evening, January 28, in our yard at Palisades Condominiums, our small 11-year-old poodle was severely mauled by a larger dog resulting in two broken bones, a mangled foot and several bald patches where fur had been torn out.

I understand Ruidoso Animal Services has responded to several reports of similar occurrences in our area but have been unable to impound the dogs because the owners argued that the animals were licensed and confined to their property. Probably these animals are confined at times, but certainly NOT ALL THE TIME. And when they are allowed to run loose, they can obviously be dangerous. While we are incensed over the attack on our little dog, we are thankful it was a dog and not a small child, which may be the case next time if the owners continue to permit these animals to roam at will.

Carmen K. Edwards

Cattle, hog market due for upsurge

Prices of fed cattle will average some what higher in 1978 than in 1977, predicts Robert Copper Smith, Extension marketing specialist at New Mexico State University. He looks for prices to average about $2.65 per hundred higher than last year.

Most of the total cattle slaughter this year will be in fed cattle. Cow slaughter, calf slaughter and non-fed slaughter will be down from a year ago. However, the total amount of beef available to consumers will not change much.

Grain will be cheaper in 1978 than it was in 1977, Copper Smith predicts. This means that cattle feeders have a better chance of returning a profit.

The hog market will be slow during most of 1978, particularly in the late fall, Copper Smith says. Cheaper grain prices along with a fairly good hog market have encouraged hog producers to expand production.

"Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."
— II Corinthians 3:17

Every man, conducting himself as a good citizen, and being accountable to God alone for his religious opinions, ought to be protected in worshipping the Deity according to the dictates of his own conscience.

New Mexico's tourism outlook very favorable

The travel market should continue to grow steadily in New Mexico throughout 1978 with more emphasis on motorcoach travel, fly-drive and package tours during the last quarter of the year, according to David Santillanes Jr., director of the Tourist Division.

"We are basing this forecast on studies done within the state and on information obtained at the 1978 Travel Outlook Forum held in Washington, D.C., in December," Santillanes said.

At the Forum, Dr. Douglas Frechtling of the U.S. Travel Data Center provided the information that the travel industry outperformed the total economy with a growth rate of nine percent in sales compared to a five percent growth in the Gross National Product. Although less than 1976 growth which was due to bicentennial promotions and a booming economy, the 1977 growth was very healthy in the face of major changes in the economy.

"In New Mexico, in 1977, the travel industry employed more than 34,000 state citizens and contributed an estimated $774,000,000 to the state economy," Santillanes said.

As part of an overall economic outlook for 1978, Dr. Sidney Jones of the International Center for Scholars predicted that expansion will continue through 1978 but the expected economic adjustment to this expansion will be more severe due to the intervention of government spending and monetary policy.

"This economic adjustment is the reason that we expect an increase in group travel by the end of 1978. Travel vacations have become necessities, rather than luxuries, for the American consumer, but the type of transportation chosen will change if the predicted tightening up in the economy occurs. Travel by means of recreational vehicles, for instance, will probably decrease," Santillanes said.

"John Hemphill of the U.S. Department of Energy gave a presentation on the federal energy policy and prospects for 1978. He stated that the government is investigating contingency plans for allocation of energy supplies during possible shortages.

"We are urging, along with our sister states, that the federal government give fair treatment to the travel industry in terms of energy allocation. As the 1973 energy crisis proved, the economic impact of the travel market is extensive and cannot be disregarded or given a low priority," Santillanes said.

Finally, Beverly Shipka of the U.S. Travel Service gave a report on the international travel outlook for 1978. A qualitative market profile of major foreign traveler origins shows that the U.S. share of foreign visitors from Mexico will increase. These Mexican visitors, because of their discretionary incomes, are noted for large travel expenditures.

"The New Mexico Tourist Division has already begun soliciting this high income Mexican Travel through matching funds from United States Travel Service," Santillanes said. "We have implemented an advertising campaign called the 'Pancho Villa Trail' in the northern Mexican state of Chihuahua to encourage auto travel throughout southern New Mexico. In addition, the state participated in a travel promotion trip to Mexico City in November sponsored by Foremost West, and in a number of meetings with travel officials from the northern Mexican states.

"Our major goal for 1978, however, will be the publication of a state tourism policy, the first such policy in the history of New Mexico. This study will be based on data gathered in seven regional meetings held throughout the state with members of the tourist industry in 1977 to discuss problems and progress. It is designed to make the division more responsive to the needs of the state tourist industry and better able to plan for and expand this industry.

"It should also be noted that the New Mexico Tourist Division is becoming known on the national and international level in the area of policy planning evidenced by the fact that John Adams, the director of the Research Section, has been asked by Frechtling to moderate a panel discussion on the 'Costs of Travel Development to the Local Community.' This panel will be part of a conference sponsored by the Travel Research Association, a national group of research specialists, which will be held in Ottawa, Canada, in June."

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

down among rural folks, "February, second day, have half your wood and half your hay. (or half your corn and half your hay.)" In other words there is always a chance that February second could be the mid-point of the winter.

Our pioneer forefathers watched the little ground hog as they did many of the woodland creatures. And they figured he was a good weather prophet. So now we know that if the second of February is clear and sunny he will see his shadow and become frightened and go back into his underground home for another six weeks. If he does not see his shadow he will know that he can get ready to come out and greet an early Spring.

Lincoln's Birthday Special Day
For Lincoln County
We all know that Lincoln County was named after president Abraham Lincoln. Our state was almost named after "Honest Abe", and it was decided that one-fourth of the state should be named after him, for the original Lincoln county took in seven present day counties — an area the size of the state of Indiana.

So you see our beloved Lincoln County is not only blessed with great beauty, healthy climate and good people; but we also have an honored tradition in our name.

Snow On the Way
On the next to the last day in January, as I write you these words, the sky is cloudy and a little misty rain is coming down the vale. This makes me think snow is on the way. The smell of the snow is in the air.

January has been good to us this year. It has been unusually mild with some good, little snow-falls along the way. And now, with a good cap of snow on the mountain, we are off to a good beginning for a fine winter.

There will be lots of sunny days in February, and a good deal of snow and other moisture. This way we will have a perfect February with every promise for a glorious Spring.

Ruidoso grapplers win second in tournament

The Ruidoso High School wrestling team placed second in a field of four teams at the Roswell junior varsity invitational tournament, coach Frank Silva said.

Warrior wrestlers placing in the weight classes were Keith Sullivan, 98 pounds, third place; Dirk Strassburg, 105 pounds, first place; Tim Jones, 112 pounds, first place; Ray Herrera, 126 pounds, first place; Greg Lane, 132 pounds, second place; Kenny Sullivan, 138 pounds, third place; Sterling Rehmer, 155 pounds, first place and Chuck Burgess, 185 pounds, first place.

District matches begin today in the gymnasium with the Warriors meeting Silver City in the first round and Cobre in the next.

Tax rebate claims need extra care

Taxpayers who have filed for the New Mexico state income tax rebates on refunds may experience delays in the processing of their returns if they did not fill in all necessary information on the New Mexico Individual Income Tax Return PIT-1.

"A number of returns already have been sent back to state taxpayers for additional information on resident and dependent status," A.B. Sneed, deputy commissioner of revenue, said this week.

"This information must be provided on lines 21 through 25 of the state income tax return before eligibility for the rebates can be determined."

Another common error Sneed noted was "many taxpayers filing joint returns also have omitted the spouse's social security number which should be listed on Line 3."

He also said taxpayers who appear to be eligible for one or more rebates are not claiming them.

Sneed requested taxpayers who have not filed, use the preaddressed income tax forms as this will hasten processing of the return.

Sunland Park Hoofbeats

JOCKEY RICHARD BICKEL got off to a flying start Sunday, winning the first three races. He took the first aboard Go Flashing Son ($8) by a length, the second with Honor Scout ($4.60) by 2½ lengths and the third by ¾ lengths aboard Ernest Scout ($21.80).

ERNEST SCOUT, in winning the third at two furlongs, became the first two-year-old winner of 1978 at Sunland. The chestnut colt is by Scout Leader out of Me Challenge and is owned by Melvin and Ernest Riggs of Ft. Stockton, Texas. The colt will now probably be turned out for a short rest, and isn't likely to be back in action until around the trial time for the $300,000 Allison Futurity in late April.

RELLIM'S COURAGE, a probable heavy favorite in Sunday's seventh race at ½ mile, was scratched out earlier in the day by the track veterinarian.

WINDS OF THE EAST, a sophomore gelding owned by Sam Henderson of Odessa, and ridden by Arthur Anderson, turned on a big stretch run to nail favored Neke Nod right on the wire in Sunday's eighth race at a mile. Winds of the East now holds a perfect career record of two wins from two starts. The win payoff was $10.60.

FOUR WINNERS on Sunday's program were sired by Scout Leader, the popular stallion standing in New Mexico. They were: Honor Scout ($4.60), Ernest Scout ($21.80), Bold Switch ($3.60) and Secret Scout ($8.80).

EARLIER THIS MONTH, Robert Hillin of Odessa attended the California Thoroughbred Breeders Association Mixed Winter Sale at Hollywood Park. The five-year-old gelding, Kentito, caught his eye. But after Kentito's owner repurchased him in the sale, Hillin negotiated a private deal and got the gelding for $15,000. Kentito made his first Sunland start in Saturday's ninth race at a mile and won by a head in a strong performance paying $8.80.

JOCKEY JOE OBER was fined $50 for failing to maintain a straight course aboard Mr. Powell in the first race January 22.

THE "WRONG" HORSE won Saturday's sixth race at six furlongs but it made no difference in the mutuels. The fans made the entry of Orbit Lassie and Texas Step even-money favorites, obviously on the strength of Orbit Lassie's sharp recent form. Texas Step, who recently ran 10th at 40-1, wasn't expected to be much of a factor, but he turned in a strong effort and outlasted his stablemate to win by a head. The win price on the entry was $4.40.

SATURDAY'S FIFTH RACE, a six furlong maiden spin for three-year-olds, was the vehicle for Ayaunt's career debut. The gray filly bounded home a 1½-length winner under apprentice Don Howard and paid $9.40.

TORRENT DUCK put up a good fight on the front end during the early portions of Saturday's six-furlong headliner. But the gelding, recently claimed for $10,000, bore out badly at the turn for home and wound up in the middle of the track. He finished sixth at 5½-1.

FREEMAN M., in winning Saturday's feature, has now been in the money nine times out of nine career starts.

ITSELARIUS caught form players off guard by rushing down the stretch in Saturday's opener and winning the mile route by a half-length. The filly lit up the tote board with a $114.20 payoff — highest so far in the spring meeting, Isaac Flores was up. The upset also reduced the Big Q to 14 "live" tickets, of which four turned out to be good for a bonanza of $2,983.80.

SAUCY SQUARE, a 63-1 longshot, finished second in Friday's first race and threw a monkey wrench into the evening's first Big Q. Indian's First, a 5-2 shot won the first race — but there were only 31 "live" tickets going into the second half. But when Tex Meyers, a 12-1 shot, and Lunar Charm, a 7-2 pick, took the top two slots in the second half there were no winning tickets. But Big Q players who'd backed Tex Meyers with any other horse got $2,121.40 (there were only two winning tickets) and patrons who banked on Lunar Charm and any other horse got $425.80. There were 10 winning tickets on the latter.

BUPERS HOPE made her 20th career start in Friday's fourth race, and finally won. She came on gamely at the end to take the 5½-furlong sprint by a neck as an odds-on favorite. The filly had been second in her three previous tries.

SON OF EAGLE, with apprentice Kenny Lewis up, rallied out of nowhere for a desperate last-second win in Friday's sixth at six panels. Pipot and No Ending were also in the blanket finish and deadheaded for second. The winner paid $4.20. An unusual sidelight was the fact Son Of Eagle raced without a whip and needed no special encouragement from his jockey. He was deadlast at the top of the stretch.

WINDY ZIPPER, a 12-1 shot, lost his bearings at the turn of Friday's feature race and bolted to the outside rail. Jockey Jaimi Maxwell vainly did his best to keep the filly on course.

THE NO. 2 POST position turned in seven winners over the three day racing weekend to lead in that category. Here's the complete breakdown: 1 — 58; 2 — 71; 3 — 58; 4 — 60; 5 — 67; 6 — 65; 7 — 49; 8 — 39; 9 — 24; 10 — 21; 11 — 0; 12 — 1.

Protect fruit trees during cold weather

Injuries from cold winter weather can leave your fruit and ornamental trees open to invasion from a host of diseases. Some fungus diseases, such as cytospora canker, invade the tree through winter injury wounds, says Emroy Shannon, Extension plant pathologist at New Mexico State University.

Although many trees can survive severe winter injury, they frequently die when they contract these diseases.

Be especially careful with trees and shrubs growing in exposed, windy locations or in poorly drained soils. They are frequently injured by low temperatures, repeated freezing and thawing, or drying winter winds, Shannon says. Healthy trees in a proper dormant condition can withstand low temperatures. However, if a tree makes excessive vegetative growth late in the fall, the tissues do not harden properly. Plants fed too much high nitrogen fertilizer usually suffer injury.

Frost cracks and winter sunburn are common on the south or southwest sides of the trunk. Apple, elm, poplar and willow trees are most susceptible to this.

Protect the trunks of young trees by wrapping them with burlap strips, sisalcraft paper or aluminum foil. You can also simply tie a six-inch board upright on the south side of the tree. Whitewash applied to the trunk and lower limbs reflects the sunlight and helps prevent frost cracks.

Alternatives to the Rocking Chair

by John W. Gardner

Scientists have played a benevolent trick on us. They have presented most people with a great many years of active life beyond "retirement," but they have not told us how we might spend those years in a satisfying way — nor how we could survive them economically in the face of inflation.

One can't generalize about older people. Some like the rocking chair, some like hobbies, some like travel and so on. But a great many older people would like to work and be paid for it. They want some useful activity to fill their time, to keep them in touch with other people and to bring in a paycheck. The paycheck may be absolutely essential, but even if it isn't, it gives them the satisfying feeling that they are still worth something in the labor market.

There isn't any simple formula that will take care of such people. But it is inhumane to ignore millions of older people who would like to be useful but are not allowed to be.

The law prohibiting mandatory retirement at age 65 is a hasty and possibly ineffective approach to a very large problem the American people must face. I say "possibly ineffective" because employers are already saying the law will simply lead them to eliminate inadequate employees well before 65, so that continued employment of the remainder beyond that age will make little difference. But neither the law nor evasive action by employers faces the big problem ahead.

What we need is a major shift in career patterns and it may take a quarter of a century to accomplish that shift — so we'd better get at it immediately. What we must work toward is a fully accepted social custom of further careers for individuals past the mid-point of life. We know it's feasible because it is already occurring in specialized instances.

Policemen, firemen, military people and some others quite commonly take retirement in their early 50s (often in their 40s) and launch a second career. Others who now retire at age 65 become successfully self-employed, or engage in voluntary work which is in effect a further career. Most lawyers and doctors pay no attention to the age 65 milestone.

We must assume that such patterns will not be the exception but the rule for those who wish to remain employed.

We will need a far greater number of full-time, part-time and flexible-schedule jobs for older people. We will need to become far more skilled in using volunteers for social and civic work, providing them with rewards of status and recognition.

Above all, we need counseling arrangements in corporations, unions and social agencies that will help those terminating one career to find their way to the next stage of the journey. That may involve providing information as to what kinds of work are available in what parts of the country. It may involve advice as to the kinds of mid-life training needed to prepare for another kind of activity.

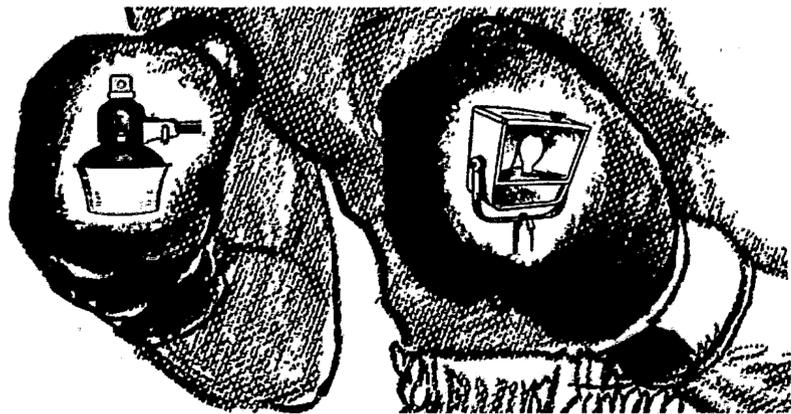

A "further career" need not involve a change of occupation or even institution. It may simply involve another pattern of work activity, or another assignment. How great it would be if a fifty-year old employee of a large company or government agency could — without embarrassment or punishment — go to the institution's mid-career counseling center and say, "Look, I'm stale on the job I'm doing. How about a new assignment?"

Or, "I've learned everything there is to know about the job I'm now doing. Give me an assignment where I can begin to learn again."

Small companies obviously couldn't afford such counseling services but might use community agencies or contract with management consultant firms to do the job.

Those who want and can afford leisure, hobbies or travel should also have counseling if they need it. But those "retirement" patterns are already pretty well established. In contrast, we are barely at the beginning of the huge task of providing work for willing hands. We acknowledge the need for such work in early and middle life. The need doesn't disappear in later life. We just choose to ignore it.

The One-Two punch of outdoor lighting . . .

Nite-Liter & Leased Floodlighting

Good outdoor lighting gives you safety, security and economy at home or at your business. Outdoor lighting can help encourage business, help prevent accidents after dark, discourage unwanted nighttime intruders, and the cost is surprisingly low.

For the home, we can install the mercury vapor Nite-Liter on a tall pole, maintain it and furnish the electricity for just a few cents per night. The on-at-dusk, off-at-dawn Nite-Liter spreads safety and security lighting up to 100 yards in diameter around your home.

For your business property, we offer mercury vapor or Metal Halide leased floodlighting. We will install the floodlighting wherever light is needed around your business property, maintain it and furnish the electricity for a very reasonable monthly rate.

For more information on these outdoor lighting programs, give us a call.

Which comes first: the patient or the paper work?

There never has been, there never will be, the slightest doubt. Care and concern for the ill and injured is the reason we're here.

Yet the fact remains that one of the most unavoidable, uncontrollable and expensive items on your hospital bill is "red tape".

Just eight recent federal regulations add $22 to the cost of every hospital stay, a total of $863 million this year - with federal government paperwork alone accounting for $174 million. No, you won't find it itemized on your bill - but the increasing cost of government involvement is one of the reasons your hospital bills go up every year.

Other reasons? One is simple inflation, that affects our "cost of living" just as it does yours — and accounts for more than 50% of the annual increase in hospital expenses. Another is the ever increasing need and demand for hospital care...an increase of 144 million patients in the past generation! Finally, the tremendous improvements and advances in hospital facilities, equipment, therapy, training, research, service and care...the only element of our ever-increasing costs over which we have any control, and the only element which actually contributes to a longer, healthier, fuller life for you.

We believe that perhaps the best way to control rising hospital costs is to cut "red tape" — not patient care. And we think that's what you want, too.

Today's Hospital Care — it's the bargain of your life.
