Ruidoso's policemen set excellent record in 1977

The Patrol Division and Criminal Investigation Division (CID) of the Ruidoso Police Department enjoyed, Chief of Police Paul M. Lukens Jr., said Tuesday, "one of the most productive years we've ever had."

"CID and patrol officers cooperated on all burglary, larceny over $100 and auto theft cases, comprising the majority of crimes committed in Ruidoso, to establish a crime solved record we can all be proud of."

Lukens noted the 1977 figures: — Of the 129 burglaries reported, 52 were solved for a 40 percent solve rate, compared to the national solve rate of 17 percent.

— There were 95 reported cases of larceny over $100, with 30 solved for 31 percent, against 19 percent nationally.

— Twenty-three cars were reported stolen, with 19 recovered and six cases solved for 28 percent, compared to 14 percent nationally.

In lower incidence crimes, the officers' solve rate was:

— Murder and non-negligent manslaughter, one case, which was solved.

— Armed robberies, three cases, all solved. The national solve rate is 27 percent.

— Aggravated battery, seven cases, two unfounded and four solved for 80 percent nationally.

"I'm extremely proud of this solve rate," Lukens said, "as it shows that the thousands of man hours that have been devoted to learning criminal investigation skills by our CID and patrol division officers are paying off with an impressive arrest record."

"Comparing our percentage of solve rate with the national figures is another indication of the quality of the personnel providing Ruidoso with 24 hour a day police protection the year around."

Lukens also released figures for 1977, covering duties performed:

— Department activities. Hours worked, 54,920, excluding the emergency services section. This includes 39,750 regular duty hours, 3,543 paid overtime hours, 957 paid holiday overtime hours and 10,670 unpaid overtime hours.

— Cases solved included 52 burglaries and 30 cases of larceny over $100.

McMillin sentenced on battery

Robert Brian McMillin, former Ruidoso policeman, has been sentenced by Judge George L. Zimmerman, in District Court in Carrizozo, on being found guilty of aggravated battery with a deadly weapon, a third degree felony.

Judge Zimmerman sentenced McMillin to two to 10 years in the New Mexico State Penitentiary, suspended, and placed him on unsupervised probation for one year.

The charges stemmed from an August 24, 1977, 2 a.m., incident at the McMillin home in Ruidoso in which Sam Sanchez, Ruidoso, suffered a gunshot wound in his right hand.

CBers hear problems in mountain rescues

Roy Parker, general manager of the Sierra Blanca Ski Resort, was the featured speaker at the Ruidoso CBers Club meeting held last Monday evening.

Parker spoke to the group about problems and procedures involved in mountain rescue. He cited the use of Citizens Band radios as instrumental in helping find lost skiers. Such units are now being installed in several of the vehicles used by the Ski Patrol to facilitate communications between club members and others involved in rescue activities.

To help locate stranded motorists Parker and the club agreed on a joint venture to receive permission from the state to post markers every one-half mile on the road leading to the Ski Resort parking area.

Parker also suggested that the club, monitoring Channel 3, "remind motorists that the road is at all times a two way road as resort officials, Ski Patrol and emergency vehicles may be moving up or down the road at any time."

Club members have been instrumental in locating persons reported as missing, through air contact and telephone searches, when they have accepted rides to Ruidoso with other than members of their skiing party.

The next meeting of the club will be February 13 at 7:30 p.m., at the Holiday House Motel. Dinner will be served. Admission will be $1.00 for adults and 50c for children.

Absent voter's applications available now

Absent voter's applications, for the March 7 Ruidoso municipal election, are available now at village hall.

Applications are to be made to Jim Hine, village manager, by telephone, mail or in person.

Completed applications are to be returned to Hine for verification of the voter's qualifications. Once verified, the ballot will be mailed to the voter.

Qualified voters may also cast their ballots at village hall beginning March 1.

Chamber plans Americana party

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce will initiate a series of special monthly events with an Americana Anniversary Party and Auction scheduled for 5 p.m., February 27, at the Elks Club. In celebration of their 25 years as members of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber has planned an Americana dinner of hot dogs, beans and apple pie, to be followed shortly by an auction of items donated by local merchants and businesses.

"Our purpose is twofold," executive director of the Chamber John Hobbs said Monday. "First and foremost, we want everyone in Ruidoso to eat a lot of all American food and also to have fun at an auction steeped in local color."

"The event is open to everyone in the community. Although it is a Chamber-sponsored event, it isn't restricted to Chamber of Commerce members."

The dinner/auction is the first of a series of programs planned by the special events committee which was "commissioned by the board to come up with some fun events which would also assist the Chamber in overcoming current financial problems," Hobbs said.

"The special events committee, and I mean this sincerely, has responded to the call," he said. Hobbs added the committee will solicit donations to be auctioned.

"I'd like to see a situation where each merchant in town or at least each Chamber of Commerce member would donate items we could auction off."

"We've already received generous donations from Doug Bass, John Cupp, Jim Woodriddle and Dennis Hargrove."

Sierra Blanca Skiing Action
From the top . . . with Roy
 by Sou' Garrett

By now, I hope that all of you have been up here at least a couple of days to enjoy the excellent skiing the new year has brought in. You have to "ski" it to "believe" it!

We received 4 inches of snow Monday, followed by true blue skies Tuesday. Nothing's better than that good ole winter sun beaming down while you're gliding along your favorite trail. We asked for it and we got it!!! It's absolutely terrific. Smiling red faces will greet you everywhere.

Sierra Blanca has been getting good coverage in El Paso and Albuquerque. This Sunday both papers had super articles concerning Roy Parker and Sierra Blanca. Mark Schaffer, from the El Paso Times, will have a weekly column on Sundays informing readers on the happenings at Sierra Blanca. It's a very nice compliment and we appreciate his interest in our area.

We are anticipating another busy week-end and hopefully it will go as smoothly as in the past. So far, so good! Let's keep it that way.

State ready for energy legislation

Solving New Mexico's energy-related problems may require some stiff legislation. But, are New Mexicans willing to accept strong energy oriented legislation?

Dr. Clyde Eastman, a sociologist at New Mexico State University, asked that question and some other energy-related questions to 499 New Mexicans. He got some surprising answers.

"We were surprised, for example, to learn that 82.5 percent of the survey respondents favored a bottle bill," Eastman said.

The so-called bottle bill has already been enacted in Oregon and Vermont and has been introduced into the New Mexico Legislature. Essentially, it would require that all soft drinks and beer be sold in reusable containers.

According to Eastman, many New Mexicans favored a bottle bill because, as one put it, "litter particularly distresses me."

Eastman's questions also contained two items on energy policy. One question dealt with conservation — the second with increased supply.

"When asked whether conservation or increased supplies would be the most effective solution to the energy problem, 73.9 percent preferred conservation," the sociologist said. He went on to say that, for the majority of respondents, abolition of quantity discounts on gas and electricity, and conservation incentives, were the preferred options.

Survey respondents ranked more regulations third, rationing fourth, and high prices a distant fifth among the options. In rejecting higher prices, respondents frequently expressed concern for the poor who would bear an unfair burden.

Eastman also asked New Mexicans just how much they would change their consumption of energy over the next two or three years if prices doubled.

"After analyzing the data, it appears that increased prices would not greatly reduce energy use," Eastman said. "Gasoline appears to be most responsive, with respondents willing to accept a mean cutback of about 18.2 percent." Respondents were the least responsive to cutbacks in electricity, accepting a mean cutback of 11.2 percent.

"This may indicate that a conservation policy which relies upon free market forces, such as rising prices to force people to cutback, may be ineffective in reducing consumption," Eastman said.

"In short, we found that New Mexicans prefer voluntary incentives to compulsory alternatives," Eastman said. He cited a 1976 study as an indication of many New Mexicans' willingness to accept voluntary incentives over compulsory alternatives.

Pertee Parks expanding with added service

Pertee Parks and Associates, a full service real estate organization, has expanded their services adding a complete property management division.

In conjunction with their complete real estate sales and insurance departments, the property management division will handle seasonal rental of cabins, homes and condominiums in addition to apartment and commercial office leasing.

"Several real estate agencies in town handle rentals, but none has a complete department exclusively for rentals," a spokesman for Pertee Parks said.

"It's a small department now, but we hope it will become as large as the real estate division."

Bonito firemen learn correct CB procedures

Members of the Bonito Volunteer Fire Department listened to a talk on correct Citizens Band radio (CB) procedures by Betty "Mother Nature" Bennett at their monthly meeting Tuesday.

"Mother Nature" stressed the importance of knowing CB equipment and how to use it efficiently. She also cited several rules which every CBer should follow, such as knowing what to do in an emergency procedure and the importance of being courteous when using CB radio, as there are now 54 bases operating in the Ruidoso area.

The program was attended by more than 25 members and their wives.

Moore began her duties at Ruidoso Public Library on Wednesday.

New librarian selected

Kathy Moore, formerly of Muleshoe, Texas, was selected this week by the library board as the new librarian at Ruidoso Public Library.

Moore, who assumed her duties as librarian Wednesday, said "my philosophy is that the library should be an active organization within the city" adding she hoped to begin a series of projects for both children and adults and a weekly informational column in The News.

Moore, who received a BA in 1972 in English and a MA in 1974 in library science, both from the University of Illinois in Champaign — Urbana, was the children's librarian at the Hayner Public Library in Alton, Illinois, and also worked at the Urbana Free Library while in college.

The selection of Moore as librarian will be presented to the village council for final approval at their 7 p.m., February 14, meeting.

Sleuth's guide to used clothes buys

Used clothes can be a good buy if they can be used "as is," remodeled slightly, or used as fabric for making something new, says Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist at New Mexico State University. A used-clothing shopper should be especially careful when buying clothes for use "as is." The fabric should be in good condition, especially at the points of wear, such as the knees, elbows and the seat. Stitching in the garment should appear durable and intact. Elastic needs to have good stretch, zippers need to be in good working order,

Three-time winner

When Cathen Gilman, of Portland, Maine, was a young girl, people used to call her Mike because she was "pretty much of a tomboy." Now, at the age of 70, she's still somewhat of a tomboy, involved in the predominantly male world of security. Miss Gilman is a partner of Black Bear Security, a Portland firm supplying private guards to a variety of clients.

Before starting Black Bear, Miss Gilman worked 32 years for a large corporation. When she retired, Miss Gilman opened a gift shop in Portland. She ran the shop successfully for seven years before deciding it was time to retire again.

"I love people," Miss Gilman told a writer from The National Council on the Aging. "I suppose that's why the shop did so well and why I enjoy my new business so much."

According to Miss Gilman, she "fell into" her third career accidentally. Ralph Thompson, her 66-year-old partner, is a 35-year veteran of the South Portland police and fire departments and served as chief of police for the Scarborough Downs Race Track.

He was all set to become manager of Black Bear for another person but it turned out the other fellow didn't have a cent to his name.

Thompson and Gilman have been friends for years and when the original plans for Black Bear fell through, they decided to pool their money and start the business themselves.

Three years later, Black Bear is a success. The company employs 27 fulltime guards, and, according to Miss Gilman, "we're growing in leaps and bounds."

Ralph's police experience and Cathen's business background form the perfect combination. He handles field operations, while she schedules the guards and keeps the books.

Black Bear has recently been supplying guards to direct traffic at road construction sites. As a result, they're deploying people throughout Maine and hiring additional personnel as the demand for their services grows.

"We try to do a good job for our clients and we're honest," Miss Gilman said. "Our increase in business is due to word of mouth more than anything. A client tells a friend that we're reliable and before you know it we have another client."

Even in Maine, a state most people think of as a bucolic, unhurried part of the country, strange things occasionally happen.

Miss Gilman remembers the time they were called to guard a fire-damaged house from vandals. When the guards arrived, they discovered $150,000 in cash and valuable stamp and coin collections.

None of the local banks had large enough safekeeping boxes to provide safekeeping, so arrangements were made to rent a cage in a warehouse.

Until the valuables could be moved, they spent the night in Cathen Gilman's house. "Even with two guards there, I was nervous as could be," she said.

In her three years in the security business, Miss Gilman figures she's had three days off. "And that's working seven days a week, mind you," she said. "People call at five, six-thirty in the morning no matter if it's a weekend or a holiday."

Even with her hectic schedule, Miss Gilman still finds time to serve on the Board of Directors of the Maine Institute for the Blind; and the March of Dimes recently presented Black Bear with a plaque honoring them for providing free security for its annual telethon.

Would she ever trade her present life for one of retirement? "I doubt it," Miss Gilman said. "I've had a full, rewarding life. I've gotten all the things I've wanted by working hard and I don't see any reason to change now. If I have a choice, I'd rather wear out than rust out."

Mora research benefits state's forests

How do you replace $14 million worth of burned timber, establish a tree plantation that could gross $30,000 at harvest time and rejuvenate New Mexico's understocked forests with genetically-superior trees?

The answers to these questions are coming from the Mora Research Center, a part of New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station.

According to Dr. James Fisher, forest ecologist and manager of the center, "the research we're doing here could help improve forests on public and private lands throughout the state."

Part of that research involves finding genetically-superior trees. According to Fisher, the center's genetic research involves seeds found in New Mexico forests and seeds imported from other countries.

"The seeds collected in New Mexico come from all over the state. However, we're concentrating on the north-central part of the state, because two-thirds of the commercial timber land in New Mexico is found in that area," Fisher said.

Fisher, working with Mike Davault, began their project by selecting "plus" trees.

"We select plus trees on the basis of growth rate, stem straightness, branch angle and immunity to insects," Fisher said.

The seeds collected from plus trees are then grown in greenhouse containers at the center's greenhouse. The researchers used accelerated-growth conditions such as, a good supply of nutrients, optimum temperatures and long exposure to daylight which make the trees grow four times faster than normal trees. After the trees have reached 10 inches in height, they are outplanted on test plantations.

"Based on the offsprings performance, the stands where the seeds were collected are then thinned to provide seed production," Fisher said.

The researchers are also growing Scotch pine from 31 international sources, including seeds from Greece, England, Spain, Turkey and France.

"So far, our research indicates that seeds from Turkey, France and Spain grow the best in this climate and produce a Christmas tree shade of green," Fisher said.

"We have also found that New Mexico's white fir does well in very cold temperatures. That means the fir grown here could be used as a seed source for other states."

In addition to genetic testing, the Mora researchers are working to help New Mexicans expand their Christmas and ornamental tree production. According to Fisher, the best way of doing that is to establish plantation-type trees similar to those grown in Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Fisher pointed out that growing Christmas trees on plantations is profitable because it is becoming increasingly difficult to find saleable trees in New Mexico's cut-over forests. In addition, the trees grown on plantations are the kind of well-formed, dense trees consumers prefer to buy.

Fisher noted that "the soil and climate in New Mexico are excellent for growing trees, especially consumer-preferred fir and spruce."

Because New Mexico has such excellent tree-growing conditions, Fisher said, even small lots of land yield good annual incomes.

"For example, seven acres of trees could be planted in as many years," he said. "Rotation cutting could be initiated in five to seven years. By planting 1,200 trees per acre, the wholesale value of an annual harvest would then be at least $4,500."

Growers can make an even greater return on their investment if they dig their trees and sell them as ornamentals in metropolitan areas, Fisher said.

For example, a five foot blue spruce wholesales for $25. Multiply that by 1,200, the number of trees planted per acre, and tree growers could make $30,000 per acre return, less operation costs.

"Our research has shown that plantation trees do require careful care," Fisher said. "So far we have found that it is important to use containerized seedlings and to prepare the site extensively before setting the seedlings out."

In addition, the Mora researchers recommend irrigation during the first and second year, weed control and fertilization.

"We have used these techniques on various plantations and the trees have shown excellent growth. But more important, when these techniques are used, the mortality rate is less than five percent," he said.

The center is currently working with five landowners, testing a wide variety of plant materials and growing methods.

Concurrent with genetic and plantation research, Fisher and NMSU forest soils expert, Dr. Bruce Buchanan, have also started a reforestation action plan for the Guadalupita burn which wiped out an estimated $14 million worth of timber. This research is being done in cooperation with the New Mexico State Department of Forestry.

Energy crisis shapes agriculture future

In comparison, corn production in 1970 derived about 0.7 percent of its cultural energy from labor, 50 percent from fuel, 15 percent from fertilizer, 4 percent from pesticides and 24 percent from depreciation from machines and buildings.

Thomas also cited an extensive study of the energy crisis done by a Cornell University research team which concluded that, "certainly, United States agricultural practices could not produce enough food to feed a world population of four billion with current energy limitations, even if capital were unlimited."

Just what can be done to assure the world's farmers enough energy to continue feeding the world's population?

"For one thing we must halt the population explosion," Thomas said. "Then, too, we must begin to explore the possibilities for energy conservation and increased efficiency of energy use in the agricultural sector."

To do that Thomas recommended "more specific research to determine ways and means to increase photosynthetic energy capture, as well as finding ways to increase the efficiency of fossil fuel use."

Thomas's publication points out that researchers at NMSU are doing just that. Dr. Stanley Smith, an animal scientist with NMSU's Agricultural Experiment Station, is working on a joint project with Sandia Laboratories in Albuquerque to find new ways to utilize the sewage from New Mexico's largest metropolitan areas. In this case, it would be used for livestock feed, rather than fuel production. NMSU is also looking at methane as one of the potential products of this conversion process.

"One feature of this research is that we have found a good use of radioactive wastes to sterilize the sewage material," Thomas said. "Results to date suggest that solids from 'undigested' domestic sewage could be worth upwards of $100 per ton under current economic conditions, when used as supplements for cattle and sheep rations."

Other NMSU research, again in cooperation with the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratories, has shown good possibilities for bioconversion of algae with microorganisms discovered by the late Dr. Eugene Staffeldt.

"Before his death in August, Dr. Staffeldt stated that, if he could transfer his laboratory experiments to the field, he could meet all of America's energy needs. He would do this by growing algae in an 8,000 square mile lake. The microorganisms would then decompose the algae in an oxygen free chamber. This would produce ethanol and methane," Thomas said.

Thomas added that when the resources are made available for research, "we find the same optimism shown for research on solar irrigation pumping systems, trickle irrigation, crop drying and processing by solar energy and the utilization of wind on farms."

"The need for research on energy conservation must be apparent as a part of the total formula for food and fiber production," Thomas concluded. "We must also find ways to power the food system with renewable rather than depletable resources."

"Neither the United States nor the world community has fully faced up to the implications of the energy crisis as it affects the agricultural industry," according to Dr. Gerald W. Thomas, President of New Mexico State University. Thomas made his statements in a publication entitled "As Energy Shapes the Future of Agriculture."

In that publication, Thomas pointed out that energy specialists estimate that crop production to feed a world population of four billion will require an energy equivalent of 450 billion gallons of fuel annually. "That estimate could reach nearly 1,515 billion gallons if the off-farm sector is included," Thomas said.

"Putting that in terms closer to home, a University of Nebraska study estimates that the food system alone required 16.5 percent of the U.S. total energy output," Thomas said. "Adding fiber and forest products could run the total up to 22 percent."

Thomas went on to say that recent calculations show that the total energy required to deliver our food only to the farm gate in 1972 was about 4,944 kilocalories per person per day.

Other reports show that on-farm corn production in the early 20th century derived about 17 percent of its energy from labor and 70 percent from depreciation of machines and buildings.

Wilderness Wisdom with Wayne Calloway

Dear Wayne — How should a broken arm be treated in the field? Should an effort be made to reset the arm and splint it in the field? Ross In Iowa

Dear Ross — First of all, do not try to set the arm in the field. To do so would likely result in additional damage. Through this effort an artery could be severed by the broken bones or additional tissue damage may be caused.

A compound fracture, in which the bone protrudes through the skin, is more serious than the simple fracture.

It is helpful to apply a splint along the arm to hold it as steady as possible. Do not tie the splint tight enough to cut off circulation. Loosen bindings as necessary to compensate for swelling.

Apply a tourniquet above the break only if an artery has been cut and bleeding is severe.

Get to a doctor as quickly and smoothly as possible.

Dear Wayne — Isn't it true that a halibut is just a large ocean going version of the summer flounder? They both look alike to me except for size, Jerry J., Pennsylvania

Dear Jerry — It is not true that they are the same, although they belong to the same family.

The summer flounder is a "left-handed" flounder, while the Atlantic Halibut is of the "right-handed" group.

The eyes of the "left-handed" group are on the left side as the fish lies on the bottom. The "right-handed" group, of course, has eyes on the right side of its body.

The Atlantic Halibut may attain a weight of 800 pounds or more, but are most often much less.

The summer flounder usually weights 2 to 4 pounds, but may reach 20 pounds or more.

Labor-share lease plan way to get into farming

So you want to own your own business, be your own boss, make your own business decisions and accept the profit? You're not alone. These desires are inherent in America's free enterprise system.

Young people want to establish their own business, but are turned off by the amount of money they need to get started. New Mexico State University's Extension farm management specialist, Gene Ott, says this is particularly true for those who want to farm. He also says the number of young people interested in farming is increasing.

About all that young families own when they are deciding on their future career is an automobile, a couple thousand dollars in savings with a chance of borrowing a couple more from their parents, a good education, good health and the desire to work on their own. These are great personal assets but they don't have much borrowing power.

But it is important to remember that not many successful people started at the top, points out the specialist. Instead they worked their way up by using their skills, talents, ambition, business judgement, managerial ability and limited capital to attain their life's ambitions.

There are ways for young people to get started in business — yes, even in farming. One way to get a foothold in a farm business is through a labor-share lease. This arrangement is like a partnership, but a formal partnership agreement is not necessary.

In a labor-share lease, one person is usually short on capital but has a desire to farm and is willing to work hard. He teams up with a farmer with adequate capital and a good side business who needs a dependable assistant to help with the labor and share in managerial responsibilities. Each party contributes what he has in exchange for a proportionate share of the earnings.

Farm earnings to be shared are what remains of gross income after all operating expenses have been paid, explains Ott. Many such arrangements provide for a guaranteed amount for living expenses plus a liberal bonus for young assistants who prove their ability. With young, energetic and dependable help, the farmer-owner often enlarges the business, thus providing more income for both families.

Usually such arrangements are intended to be only the first step on the ladder to having your own business. Often the junior member of the arrangement in a few years is able to accumulate a few head of livestock, or some machinery and a little cash toward the next step, which may be leasing a farm. Occasionally a full fledged partnership develops out of a labor-share lease that eventually leads to full ownership.

Young people who sincerely want to farm can find a way even if they don't have much capital, if they are willing to start where they are and work and sacrifice to reach the goal of having their own farming business, Ott says.

News from the Home Economist

How many times have you forgotten to soak pinto beans overnight? And, then think you can't cook them. There is a short cut method. All dry beans must be soaked before cooking to return part of the water lost in drying. But that doesn't mean it has to be overnight.

Boil the beans in water for two minutes. Remove the beans from the heat and let them soak for one hour. Even if overnight soaking is planned, the brief starter boil helps keep the beans from turning sour. The short-soak method cuts cooking time and reduces vitamin loss. It also produces cooked beans with fewer hard skins than those soaked overnight. Add salt and other flavorings only after soaking. The salt tends to toughen the surface and increases cooking time.

Man has been using food additives for thousands of years. Only in recent years have people become upset about it. Additives are used to spice, preserve, flavor or treat to increase or improve the product. American colonists, for example, used vinegar, sugar and salt as preservatives.

Additives are also used to provide extra nutritive value in diets, to add flavor to foods and to make foods easier to cook. In the world of convenience foods, they provide many functions taken for granted. Rather than being upset over the additives we are consuming, we should think about our food predicament without the use of them. Without additives, we'd have a world of bland tastes, spoiled foods, flat baked products, dry foods that stick together or moist foods that become dry.

Some additives are integral parts of our existence, but others may bear questioning. The full range of additives should not take the blame for the few. It is good to continue checking for the safety of food additives, but let's not "throw out the baby with the bath water!"

News from the County Agent

Trees are again available at cost for windbreaks, re-forestation or Christmas tree production from the New Mexico Department of Forestry. Some of the seedlings available are Russian Olive, Lombardy Poplar, Douglass Fir, Colorado Blue Spruce and Native Plume. These trees are from five inches to 24 inches tall. For more particulars — get an application from the Lincoln County Extension Office in Carrizozo.

Now is the time to prune your fruit and ornamental trees. First you should cut out any dead or dying branches. Next cut out any branches that are rubbing. Remember always to cut to a side branch, cut flush to the other branch, never leave a stub. Generally you will need to prune more on the east side of the tree as there is more growth on that side.

On first trees, you may want to cut the tall limbs back so that they will not grow so exceedingly tall. Commercially, any fruit tree over 14 feet is not economical as it costs too much to spray and pick the fruit.

As you prune your trees check for wintering pests. Small red eggs in the lower branches of apple trees indicates mites and you will need to put on a delayed dormant spray of lime sulfur and/or oil to control that pest.

 CANDIDATE FOR MUNICIPAL JUDGE

I would like to personally announce today that I am a candidate for the office of Municipal Judge.

Although I have no previous experience as a judge, I feel that I can be a fair, impartial and practical judge, giving out sentences with common sense and the desire to alleviate the problem of the second offender.

I graduated from Goddard High School and had one year of college. I've worked 2 1/2 years for the Village in the water department with the rest of the time going to raising a family. I have three children Dana, Darl and Beau. My husband, Robert, is a patrolman for the Village.

Ruidoso has been my permanent home for 8 years and summer home for 36 years, therefore I feel a certain desire to see the Village grow and prosper in a lawful and peaceful manner.

Municipal judge would be my full time occupation, making the hours more flexible and convenient for the working people and weekend tourists.

New Mexico wool sets national show record

New Mexico wool "stole the show" at the National Western Stock Show held recently in Denver. Wool from the state took the top awards for the tenth consecutive year — a record, says Jim Sachse, Extension sheep specialist at New Mexico State University. New Mexico producers edged out all the competition to take the show's top three sweepstakes awards.

Ernest Perez and Sons, Encino, took the top sweepstakes title. A. D. Jones Estate, Tatum, placed second and the Treat Ranch, Roswell, was third. The sweepstakes award goes to the producer with the best five fleeces in the show, judged on uniformity of quality.

Perez also received the American Sheep Producers Council trophy, the grand champion in the Rambouillet ram fleece division and five other division awards.

In addition to winning third place sweepstakes, the Treat Ranch took reserve grand with a Debouillet ram fleece and also won five division awards. The Jones Estate won five division awards in addition to the sweepstakes award.

The Diamond A Cattle Co., Roswell, won the champion territorial fleece award and the reserve award went to A. P. Johnson, Jr., Roswell. Diamond A won four other division awards while Johnson won two.

Other New Mexico division winners included the MX Ranch Co. and Tom Filbin, both of Roswell; the Goodrum Bros. and Twin Butte Sheep Co., both of Picacho; Christopher Perez and Larry and Victor Perez, both of Encino; F. V. Cahape Ranch, Hope; John V. White, Carlsbad; the Ramon Perez Ranch, Vaughn; and The Cooper Bros., Tinnie.

In the Junior Wool Show, Jeffery Perez, Encino, took the reserve Champion Junior Fleece Award. Billy Roach, Caprock, was first in the fine combing class. Bernarr Treat, Roswell, was first in the three-eights blood combing class and Tony Lynn Treat, Roswell, placed fourth in the same class.

Some 'energy-savers' are misrepresentations

"Sure cure for cold feet?" such claims are often made by manufacturers of various "energy-saving" devices.

But beware, some "energy-saving" devices are frauds, says Suzi Holder, Extension housing specialist at New Mexico State University. Consumers are reporting problems with devices that claim to save energy or supplement home heating systems.

These devices sometimes sell for $40 to $500, depending on the unit. Often consumers are advised that they will need several devices for a home or office.

The schemers contact their customers through door-to-door sales, telephone solicitation, in-store sales to small businessmen, and newspaper or magazine advertising.

The Federal Trade Commission is looking at the problem and may require testing to substantiate advertising for energy-saving devices. However, consumers still need to investigate any device before they buy.

Don't be overwhelmed by technical jargon in a sales pitch. Ask for a simple explanation of how a device works.

If you have any question about a company that sells energy-saving devices, contact your local Better Business Bureau, Chamber of Commerce or the State Attorney General's office.

There is no sure cure for cold feet, but a hot water bottle is one possible solution, Ms. Holder says.

Panama Canal important to farm exports

The Panama Canal, subject of treaty negotiations and discussion in recent months, is a vital link in U.S. agricultural trade, says Robert Coppersmith, Extension marketing economist at New Mexico State University.

Last year, one out of every five tons of American farm product exports moved through the canal. This included 18 percent of our corn exports, 26 percent of soybean exports and 45 percent of grain sorghum exports, Coppersmith says.

Of the 20 million tons of American agricultural exports shipped via the waterway, over 12 million were bound for Japan, our largest single-country market.

Rerouting grain shipments around Cape Horn could almost double transportation costs and would sharply extend shipping time. Rerouting Midwest grains and soybeans overland to the West Coast would not only be very costly, but the increased volume could not be handled by existing transportation and port facilities.

SANTA FE — While much of the attention has been focused on personality aspects of the legislative fight between House and Senate, the conflict is also based on geography and political philosophy.

Intertwined in the personal feuds are urban vs. rural, liberal vs. conservative and northern vs. southern battles.

On the personal front these names are dominant: C. B. Trujillo, Eddie Lopez, John Mershon, George Fettinger, Bill O'Donnell, Walter Martinez and Aubrey Dunn. Who are they?

Trujillo is a Taos Democrat, third-ranking senator in a chamber which operates on the seniority principle, and floor leader of the majority Democrats. He is one of the Senate powers, based not only on seniority and his position as leader of his party but on his ranking membership on the powerful Senate Finance Committee which handles all spending and taxation measures in the Senate.

It was Trujillo's assertion that House leaders unfairly denied him the chairmanship of an interim committee, the Legislative Finance Committee (LFC), which provoked the current clash. Interim committees meet during the year between annual sessions to hear testimony and draft major bills to submit to their lawmaking colleagues each January.

Traditionally, the chairmanships have rotated between House and Senate members.

But two years ago when it was the turn of a House member to head the LFC, conservative Democrats and Republicans from both chambers gave the post to House member Bill O'Donnell, a Las Cruces Democrat, rather than Democrat Eddie Lopez of Santa Fe.

Lopez, chairman of the important House Taxation Committee, is a top strategist in the "Mama Lucy" Democratic element of northern and urban House members loyal to House Speaker Walter Martinez. Believing he was unfairly denied his turn as LFC chairman by a coalition of southeastern conservatives of both parties, Lopez came back the next year to become the second House LFC chairman in a row — with the help of Speaker Martinez, who drastically realigned committee memberships to make this possible.

Martinez bumped O'Donnell from his own position of power. O'Donnell, a moderate southern Democrat, had been chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, but Martinez deposed him not only as chairman but removed him from the committee.

The speaker also found that non-loyalist Democrats and Republicans in the House had managed to install John Mershon, a shrewd conservative Democrat from Cloudcroft in the southern county of Otero, as chairman of the interim Energy Committee.

Martinez was determined to get Mershon out of that important post as well, since the committee had much to do with critical decisions on New Mexico's energy policies and since Mershon had been a key strategist in the southern-rural coalition of House members deposed by Martinez and the Martha Lucys in the speakership election of 1971.

One result of the ensuing struggles was that the Energy Committee ceased to exist — along with all other interim committees except the three deemed to be "permanent."

As the 1978 legislative session opened, the Senate resumed the battle with a leading card of its own: a proposal that the 70-member House and 42-member Senate be equally represented on the interim committees. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Aubrey Dunn, another Otero County legislator with a generally conservative philosophy, joined with Trujillo in taking on their fellow Democrats led by Martinez in the House.

Conservative Democrats like Mershon and George Fettinger yet another Otero

Countian, teamed with House GOP members in siding with the Senate chiefclerks and in backing Martinez on the issue. Regardless of outcome on this one, the complex dispute will continue.

Submitting to political pressure could mean President Carter will serve but one term. It was Carter who said: "All federal judges and prosecutors should be appointed strictly on the basis of merit, without any consideration of political aspect or influence," before bowing to political demands to fire David Marston, apparently a prosecutor of more than average merit and integrity. —CD

MARSTON GOT SHAFTED

The more gets printed about David W. Marston, former United States Attorney in Philadelphia, the more the public is being made aware that Our Jimmy reverted back to good old Navy terminology and gave him the shaft ... with Our Jimmy maintaining ignorance of Marston's doings.

In this case the shafting was prompted by two Democrat congressmen, who resented Marston's investigation of their activities ... and one of them picked up the phone ... got good Old Jimmy's ear ... and suggested that Marston be given the shaft ... and the sooner the better.

So ... Our Jimmy ... he did done Marston in ... possibly without regard to the fact that Marston'd be another statistic in the labor field.

Now what Our Jimmy does is politically acceptable ... what good politician can sleep nights if'n a member of the opposite party is setting in one of the political plumb positions ... especially if'n he's making waves.

Adding to the uproar was the comment by Tip O'Neill ... he's the mouthpiece of the House of Representatives ... who described Marston as a "vicious Republican political animal" ... right on the heels of the disclosure that Marston had secured the conviction of two Republicans for getting involved in hanky-panky that they shouldn't have got caught doing.

It'd seem ... until Our Jimmy at least wins the confidence of the Democrats ... that he'd try to get himself ingratiated into the hierarchy of the party before going out of his way to irritate enough members of the loyal opposition that political reprisals might be taken ... enough to scuttle Our Jimmy's fondest dreams of getting his legislation through Congress ... In view of the fact that he doesn't seem to have learned much about manipulating Congress in his first year ... and he keeps saying Vice President Mondale has an important voice in the Carter administration ... with the trouble apparent being that this important voice isn't being used on important matters leading to reelection.

LITERS AIN'T CHEAPER

I ain't no whiz on this business of converting to the metric system of measurements ... but I can read enough to know the public's getting took.

For the past while a half-gallon of one of the lesser brands of Kentucky corn squeezings ... that's 64 ounces ... has been selling for $9.54 ... indicating not much fluctuation in the corn market.

Just the other day ... on whim ... I peered at the price label on 1.75 liters ... 59.2 ounces ... was selling for $9.58 ... which even I figured out was four cents more for 4.8 ounces less.

And if'n we're to be deprived of quarts and half gallons ... and going metric ... seems the bottlers could make one and two liter bottles ... instead of trying to make the drinking public think they're getting a bargain. Good thing the booze makers aren't packing the mix for ice tea.

WELCOME ABOARD, BILL

In the coming days and weeks a reasonable young man will be out and around the streets and area ... introducing himself as Bill Langley ... and representing The Ruidoso News ... and Bill'll be lugging a camera ... and note book ... and getting news, pictures and articles for The News.

Seems Bill had a hankerin' to live in the mountains ... and as he was enamored of Ruidoso ... and Old Baldy ... and the Sacramentos ... he kinda thought ... being's he's a journalist type ... that he'd like to get on with practicing his journalistic expertise right here ... and since he was so willing ... and we were hunting for someone that willing ... Bill's the latest addition to the editorial staff ... besides, he'd gotten a mite weary of Albuquerque ... so, folks, kinda make him welcome ... huh?

BRIEF BIT: In all fairness, our state legislators should be paid for exactly what they accomplished the first 20 days in session ... nothing ... CD

Clipped comment

PORNO TAX?

What do you think of this idea? Sen. William R. Valentine of Albuquerque has introduced legislation which would place a 20 percent surtax on pornography and related activities.

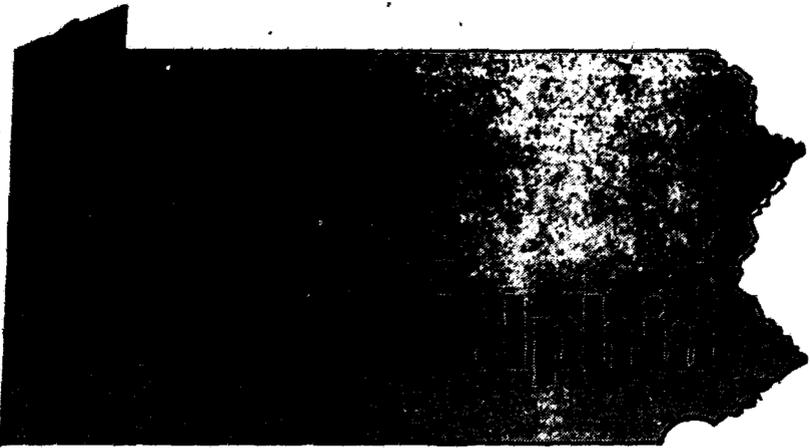

The bill, also sponsored in the House by Rep. Jim McGee, would allow each municipality to set community standards as to what was pornographic, then impose a 20 percent municipal tax with the 4 percent gross receipts tax — the cumulative tax would amount to 24 percent tax.

Valentine said "We tried for a 50 percent tax, but were informed by the Legislative Council that this would be considered confiscatory and unconstitutional."

Valentine also noted, "It is our contention that since we have not been able to get rid of pornography because of recent Supreme Court rulings, etc ... we can at least make it expensive and in this way possibly discourage it. We are also certain the municipalities in New Mexico will be able to find a use for this extra income, possibly in crime control and prevention."

Many New Mexicans thinking energy crisis is real, but . . .

Are big brother and big industry really telling you the truth? Is there really an energy crisis? A sociologist at New Mexico State University asked that and other energy-related questions to 499 New Mexicans.

According to Clyde Eastman at NMSU's Agricultural Experiment Station, his study was to determine New Mexico citizens' perceptions of the energy scarcity.

When Eastman asked if the energy situation was exaggerated, 5.1 percent said they felt there was not an energy problem. However, more than three-quarters, or 76.3 percent, of the sample characterized the situation as important or critical. A similar percentage, 76.6, felt that the energy situation is a long-term problem.

Eastman also found that while the majority of New Mexicans believe there is an energy problem, 64.8 percent think there is a conspiracy among oil companies and/or foreign companies to create shortages and/or raise prices. Many of these people felt a conspiracy was the major cause of the energy problem.

"When we analyzed the data on truth-worthiness of information sources, we found industry ranked lowest — being trusted by only 19.8 percent," Eastman said. "The second lowest was the government — trusted by 32.1 percent." Conversely, consumer organizations, with 49.3 percent of the total sample, were the most trusted. Even with this rating, all three sources do have their credibility problems. As one skeptical New Mexican put it, "all sources have their own axes to grind."

"Perhaps this mistrust of the main information sources accounts for the fact that 30.2 percent of the sample felt that too little information is available, while 45.9 percent felt that the available information is contradictory," Eastman said.

Because pollution is often associated with energy production, Eastman tried to determine just how New Mexicans felt about putting emphasis on pollution control, or on energy production.

According to Eastman, "70.7 percent, or almost four out of every five respondents, preferred to control pollution at some expense to power production."

In another series of questions, Eastman asked respondents whether the U.S. should develop an independent energy strategy, or emphasize interdependence with the rest of the world.

"Almost 61 percent responded in favor of self-sufficiency," Eastman said. "However, when we asked respondents whether New Mexico should look after its own citizens first, or whether a solution should be developed for the entire United States, 52.7 percent placed New Mexico first."

According to Eastman, the question of self-sufficiency caused respondents to pause and consider the alternatives. "Respondents definitely perceived an interdependence, but at the same time they thought New Mexico should look after her own interests and become as independent as possible," Eastman said.

Overall, Eastman pointed out that the New Mexicans who were sampled thought Americans waste "quite a bit of energy." From their responses to several questions, New Mexicans clearly believe conservation is necessary.

But, just how willing are New Mexicans to make the necessary changes and sacrifices for saving energy? Eastman pointed out that most New Mexicans felt that others could and should conserve energy, while taking the attitude toward themselves that "I'm doing all I can."

"People like to think they are contributing to energy conservation, so they take energy-saving steps that involve little sacrifice and inconvenience," Eastman said. "They turn the lights off when leaving a room. Doing that leaves their consciences free so they can drive alone to work or heat their house up to 82 degrees," he concluded.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

We Rejoice And Give Thanks For The Safe Return Of Paul and Ezell

The hearts of all of us are full of gratitude and joy over the safe return of Paul Bonnell and Ezell Clarke. We thank God for all those who worked so hard and faithfully in the rescue; and we all share in the gladness of the parents and loved ones of the young gentlemen.

There is hardly anything that will bring people together in appreciation of each other as the experience of hunting for children that are lost. The children become like our own children and the hopes, the longings and the prayers of the parents and loved ones become our own.

And as David Bonnell said, "Much good can come from this experience. Your whole perspective changes. Before this I thought I had worries, and then I knew I would give everything I had just to have my boy back. And I am so grateful now, that I realize my other worries were nothing. I will be grateful to God all my life."

Mrs. Ray Clarke said, "At times like this you realize the value of your friends. So many of them came by and called up saying they were praying for us and for the boys, and offering their help, and keeping our spirits up. We are all so grateful to the ski patrol; their work was just wonderful. We are grateful to them and to all who helped so much."

David's Mother, Della, said that her prayers had been answered, and that many lessons were to be learned from this experience, trying though it was, so that lives could be saved in the future. Della said that the work of Roy Parker in monitoring the work of the rescuers by radio was remarkable. From his knowledge of the country, Roy could direct the searchers, telling them to go farther this way or that way.

Ray Clarke expressed gratefulness for the Ski Patrol and all those who helped in the rescue.

The Hand-Writing In The Snow

During the winter of 1971-72 when I was in the hospital for one hundred days, Paul Bonnell and his brother Joel, and sister Ruthie came to visit me and brought me get-well cards in color drawn by themselves. The cards told stories in pictures like comic strips, telling about searches for lost horses, and other things.

Now Paul has a story to hand down all his own which he might call "The Hand-writing in the snow."

I have been lost several times in the snow, and a few times in the fog even in places where I thought I knew every foot of the ground. In thick snow the land-marks of the ground are covered up and if the snow is falling, the distant landmarks are lost from sight. In thick fog were you can hardly see one step ahead, there is the most bewildering sense of helplessness to think you do not know which way to go nor where you are, even in a place where you thought you knew the country like your own backyard.

Fog and snow both add to a sort of dreamy wandering of the mind; the snow can make you blind. Both snow and fog can lull you to a state of drowsy sleepiness, making you want to sit down and rest — something you must never do in real cold weather unless you find a sheltered place and make a fire.

When it actually comes over you that you are actually lost, you do not know whether to get mad or scared. There is nobody to get mad at except yourself, and nothing to be scared of but losing your head. You do not know whether to laugh or cry; and just when you need your brains the most, it seems that they have turned to mush.

All your life you have been telling people to have food, matches, and warm clothing and here you are with none of these. Getting lost — that happens to the other guy, not you.

Now all you can do is ask God to help you; and He will always help. The all-important message comes to you that you must calm down. Then after a little study you will know what to do.

If it is difficult enough being lost in snow or fog either one, and in a place where you know your way around, then just think what it must be out in a strange place with both snow and fog.

Paul And Ezell Deserve Our Thanks

Paul and Ezell deserve a lot of the credit for doing so well under very trying conditions. They were out in the snow and the heavy fog in a place not well known to either one.

These are two fine young Christian gentlemen and they never lost their faith and their hope. And they prayed to the Good Lord. They did not lose their powers of reason, and kept trying, kept fighting the battle against snow and fog and cold. We owe them thanks that they did keep trying and kept their courage and their faith.

Paul said that the ropes which marked the border line got covered up so that he and Ezell got into the wrong canyon. Then Paul said he began following down the canyon hoping to get help for both boys.

"After a while," said Paul, "I began to get tired. And then I woke up and found that I had been sleeping, standing up in the snow, and I would say to myself, 'Hey I can't stand here.' And I would keep on walking. I crossed the stream several times, and went to sleep some more. I began to pray to God for help. On a big rock that had a lot of snow on it, I wrote my name and put arrows going the way I was going. I remember going to sleep on a pile of logs. I thought this was out in the open where I could be seen. The next thing I knew I heard voices and woke up."

A Survival Camp In The Snowy Mountains

The voices Paul heard were those of Ray Heid and Denny Grover.

"I owe my life to Ray Heid," said Paul. "My clothes were frozen solid, and Ray took off his clothes and put them on me and carried me in his winter underwear."

"Paul was in shock, and did not know where he was when we found him. We had seen his name written in the snow," said Ray. "He must have fallen in the creek several times, for his clothes were frozen."

"I took off my clothes and put them on him, and held his feet to my abdomen, and they finally got warm. I carried him for four and a half hours, and then I began to get tired, and it was too much going up the steep cliffs and other rough places, so I radioed in that we would make a survival camp. We built a fire and warmed Paul up. Then food and survival equipment were brought to us. We put Paul in shelter and got him warm, and then by daylight, he was able to walk out with help."

"People say to me, 'How can we thank you?'" said Ray. "I tell them that to know that we were able to save Paul and to know that Ezell was safe was thanks enough and more."

Rick Vincent and Alex Neely were the team that rescued Ezell Clarke; and among those who brought food and equipment to the rescue camp, or bivouac, were Dian Grover, Doug DeCoursey, Tim Hannagan, and Kevin Hayes.

The CB'ers club did their best to help out in this time of need, and many, many organizations and individuals offered help and stood ready to do all they could.

At Saint Anne Chapel at Glencoe, Sunday morning February Five, thanks was offered to God at the communion service under the direction of Father Delbert Achuff. Paul and his Mother, Della were among those present at the service.

And so a grateful community sends up prayers of thanks to God and so many working under His guidance and with His help, for the deliverance from danger of Paul and Ezell.
