COMMISSIONERS CURTAIL ALL PATROLING IN COUNTY

Sheriff's excess spending under fire

BILL ELLIOTT

Documented spending of nearly $26,000 over the Lincoln County Sheriff's fiscal year budget of $184,000, caused the county commissioners Thursday to:

- Request the state Department of Finance and Administration (DEA) to assume administrative control of the sheriff's department;
- Analyze the department's operation and make (financial) recommendations to the commissioners;
- Authorize no more expenditures by the department;
- Direct Sheriff Bill Elliott to park all cars used by non-sheriff's department personnel; and
- Ordered all patrolling within the county by sheriff's deputies stopped.

District Attorney Doughty gives Elliott direct orders

The following letter written to Sheriff Bill Elliott, by District Attorney Robert Doughty, chief law enforcement officer for Lincoln County, outlined the manner in which the Lincoln County Sheriff would operate his office from June 23 until midnight June 30.

Dear Sheriff Elliott:
In accordance with the above referenced

Sudderth also ordered Thursday that all county employees turn their county-authorized credit cards in to him by 10 a.m., Friday. Of this action he said, "I will reissue them, but with certain instruction for their use."

Sudderth's compilation of sheriff's department expenditures exceeding the budget during the 18 months of Elliott's tenure, indicate budget overages totaling about $46,000.

The commissioners are responsible for departmental expenditures, Sudderth said, "and I won't sign any vouchers," until the DFA authorizes payment of currently outstanding obligations incurred by the sheriff's department.

THE SHARP INCREASE in the cost of operation of the sheriff's department is revealed in recent fiscal year budget figures released Thursday by Sudderth:

— 1975-1976, $130,000, Sheriff Leandor Vega.

— 1976-1977, $148,000. As required by law, $74,000 of this budget remained when Sheriff Elliott assumed office January 1, 1977. As of June 30, 1977 the overrun in the sheriff's department was pegged at about $18,000.

— 1977-1978, $164,000, with, as of this June, a DFA approved overrun of $17,735. Warrants have not been signed by Sudderth for an approximately $10,000 additional overrun accrued this fiscal year.

— 1978-1979, requested sheriff's budget $234,000, plus capital outlay expenditures of $11,000.

Meador claims sheriff unaware of credit card

Duane "Red" Meador, Lincoln County Undersheriff, Saturday said to The News: "He (Sheriff Bill Elliott) didn't know about it," relative to Meador issuing a Lincoln County credit card to an undercover agent working narcotics in the Ruidoso area, as a non-salaried investigator.

Meador further stated: "I didn't know it was illegal to let the agent use the credit card. The agent is a certified police officer, holding a regular deputy commission from Lincoln County, but the person was not on the county payroll and was working free of charge. I did it," (issued the credit card).

"Saturday morning," Meador told The News, "Sheriff Elliott asked me to resign. The Sheriff indicated to me that Sudderth (county commission chairman John Sudderth) mentioned to him he (Meador) should be fired and that Sudderth said the Undersheriff's position could be eliminated.

"I'm refusing to buckle under Sudderth's pressure. I will not resign. As far as I know, I will be fired."

Meador also said: "I think this whole thing is a result of my criticism of John Sudderth. And I feel I have as much right as anyone else to criticize him."

"As to the four surplus cars (that Sudderth has charged were misused) one was wrecked, one had a blown up engine, another had the exhaust system out and the last one we bled through until we got a replacement.

"Only one was driven by a non-salaried person. This driver had a regular deputy commission and used the car to patrol subdivisions around Ruidoso."

Town meeting on motorcycle gangs tonight

The problems surrounding outlaw motorcycle groups invading the Ruidoso area will be the subject of a special town meeting called for 7:30 tonight in the Chaparral Motor Hotel, Ruidoso Downs.

Representatives of various state and local governmental and law enforcement agencies have been asked to speak at the meeting sponsored by the Service Club Council of Ruidoso.

According to a Service Club Council spokesman, the representatives have been asked to offer suggestions on how to detour organized outlaw groups from the Ruidoso area and how to avert problems caused by the presence of such groups.

The meeting is one of a series called following rumors that the Bandidos, an organized outlaw group, will hold a meeting in the Ruidoso area sometime this summer.

Ruidoso was the site of the Bandidos' national convention last September.

Camping, smoking rules in effect on forest lands

Camping and smoking restrictions in Lincoln National Forest will go into effect at 8 a.m., Tuesday, a spokesman for the Forest Service, Smokey Bear Ranger District, said.

With the present hot, dry conditions, members of the Interagency Fire Prevention Coordinating Committee composed of the Forest Service, State Division of Forestry, Bureau of Land Management and Bureau of Indian Affairs, agreed to place the restrictions in effect.

Campfires will be permitted only in Cedar Creek, South Fork, Three Rivers, Baca, Oakgrove, Skyline and Mon Jeu campgrounds or in areas designated by a forest officer.

Smoking will only be allowed in vehicles equipped with an ashtray or in places of habitation.

"Conditions are extremely dry and we'd like to request visitors and residents to be extra careful with fire," Charlie Mook, fire prevention officer, Forest Service, said.

IN CONJUNCTION WITH the fire restrictions, a Forest Service spokesman said fireworks are not permitted on Lincoln National Forest at any time.

In the struggle to organize, the steering committee for community fire prevention outlined their objectives and selected a name during their lengthy Thursday afternoon meeting.

The group, which now will be known as the committee for Insuring Ruidoso's Environment (FIRE), discussed an outline of objectives and selected a regular meeting date.

"The overall objective of the steering committee is to eliminate the possibility of a disastrous fire occurring within the area of concern (Ruidoso, Ruidoso Downs and Alto-Bonito). This is a rather ambitious objective, but can be met by accomplishing some lesser objectives," the outline read.

These lesser objectives identified by the FIRE committee were "reduce the number of fire starts through public information and education; hazard reduction; fuels modification; adoption of regulations governing the types of construction materials and methods for new buildings, and better enforcement of all regulations."

In conjunction with their objective of enforcement of village ordinances, the group voted to request chairman Herb Brunell, who was unable to attend the meeting, "to approach the Planning and Zoning Commission and the village council to request they step up enforcement of ordinances, pertinent to fire prevention."

Other objectives include: "reduce the size and rate of spread of fires, if one does start, by hazard reduction, fuels modification, establishment of a fuel break providing better access for fire suppression equipment and personnel, providing better availability of water for fire suppression purposes, and assisting in the improvement of fire suppression equipment and personnel training."

"Reduce the possibility of loss of life due to fire through establishment of a known evacuation system, providing easy ingress and egress for all developed areas and educating the public as to the proper, safest evacuation routes from any given area."

The FIRE committee requested member Dorothy Holt Kinsey to contact Bill Sealbach, chief, Ruidoso Volunteer Fire Department (RVFD) to discuss evacuation routes.

In the past, the RVFD distributed maps of evacuation routes throughout the village. The committee requested Kinsey locate copies of the maps for their consideration for possible redistribution or for posting in strategic areas.

One of the main areas of discussion for evacuation was the Upper Canyon which has only one road, in and out.

A member of the committee said heliports have been installed in sections of Mescalero Apache Tribal land surrounding the canyon but few persons are informed of their availability and location.

DURING THE MEETING, Larry Bandy, state Division of Forestry, suggested the group undertake a problem analysis, determine a course of action and solicit funds from liaison agencies such as the Forest Service or state Division of Forestry.

Before attempting the analysis, he suggested the group have some training in fire prevention.

"Without training in fire prevention, behavior, etc., the analysis might not mean much to you," Bandy said, adding a representative of the state Division of Forestry was available to give a fire prevention presentation.

"Now, during the planning sessions, is an excellent time for a training session," a member of the committee said.

In other business Thursday, the FIRE

'Sales' tax drops July 1

On July 1 the current Gross Receipts Tax (GRT) of 4.25 percent paid by consumers in the Village of Ruidoso Downs will be lowered to four percent because of a 1978 law reducing the state's share of the GRT by .25 percent.

Pursuant to the decrease of the state's share, the Ruidoso Downs board of trustees Tuesday will consider passage of a village ordinance which will increase the GRT to 4.5 percent effective July 1, 1978, as provided under the law (Chapter 151, The Laws of 1978).

If the village ordinance is passed, the 4.5 percent GRT will be divided between the village and the state of New Mexico with the state receiving 3.75 percent of the GRT and the village picking up the remaining

.75 percent share of the tax paid by Ruidoso Downs merchants.

Lawmakers are quick to point out that a gross receipts tax is not a sales tax and is not levied against consumers directly.

Los Alamos County's Senator Vernon Kerr, strong supporter of the bill, said the tax is levied against merchants for the privilege of doing business in the state. He said, however, it is common practice for a merchant to pass the burden of the tax on to consumers.

In essence what the new law does, according to Ruidoso Downs village clerk Virginia Spall, is refund one-fourth of one percent of the state's previous share back to the municipality from which the monies came by allowing the municipality to still, as we have to abide by the wishes of the commissioners.

"We've worked ourselves out of a job. We have just worked too hard, I guess this is about what we've done."

"Mr. Romero is to let us know Monday, when his office will come to help us work out the overrun problem."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY Robert Doughty: "The general subject fell within the personnel and/or adjudicatory matters that are exceptions to the open meeting law," in explaining why Thursday's commission meeting was closed to the public and media.

AL ROMERO, director of the local government division of the department of Finance and Administration: "We are going to, in the very near future, analyze, not only in Lincoln County but other counties, financial affairs to help draw up recommendations. I feel any comments at this time should come from the county commissioners. I don't feel the financial affairs of a sheriff's department are in the hands of the sheriff, but rather in the hands of the county commission."

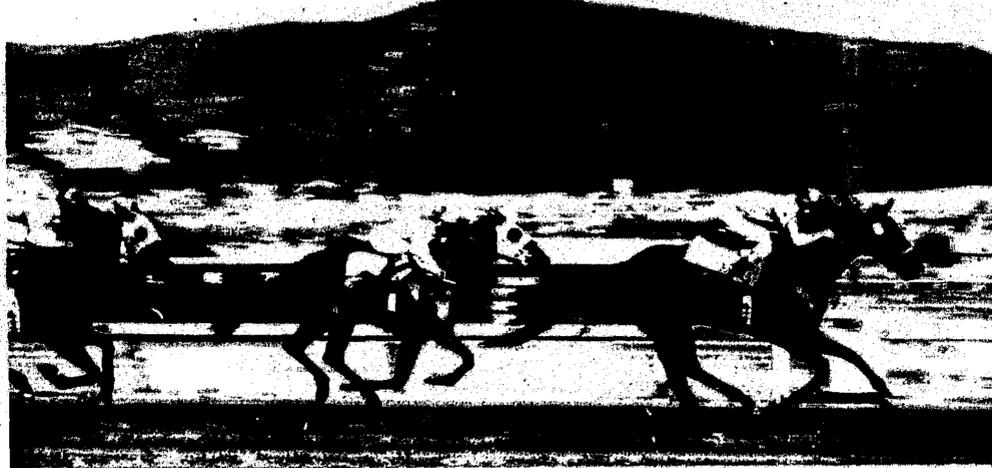

He said his agency is not singling out Lincoln County adding, "I don't feel what may have happened in Lincoln County warrants action on the part of our agency or any state agency."

He indicated that the Local Government Division of the DFA would take over financial management of the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department under a request from the county commission.

LEE STRALEY: "I'm in agreement with the rest of the county commission in our stand on what had to take effect at this point. A stand had to be taken by the commissioner and we dealt with it unanimously."

"I would back up the chairman's statement," he said.

Governor urging all communities to adopt energy saving programs

New Mexico's communities will be the source of initiatives to adapt new energy forms and greater energy self-sufficiency because of a program inaugurated by Governor Jerry Apodaca.

The Governor announced that the State of New Mexico, through the Energy and Minerals Department's Energy Extension Service, is turning directly to the community for its resourcefulness by offering the opportunity to become an "Energy Conscious Community," (ECC).

The ECC program is designed to provide every community in the state including all cities and counties with a format for organizing an agenda of local conservation and alternate energy projects. The program will also help communities obtain technological and funding assistance.

"We can not prepare properly for hardships from diminishing supplies of traditional fossil fuels until our communities are at the forefront of awareness of steps that can and must be taken at the community level," Energy Secretary Nick Franklin said. "It is, after all, in the communities where energy consumption habits are formed and it is there where changes in those habits have to take place."

Franklin, William F. Fulginiti, Executive Director of the New Mexico Municipal League; and Phillip P. Larragoite, Executive Director of the New Mexico Association of Counties joined the Governor in opening the program.

Any New Mexico community can achieve ECC status by appointing an energy planning committee, drawing up a list of projected energy conservation projects and applications of renewable energy forms and having that list approved by the New Mexico Energy Extension Service (EES).

A letter from Nick Franklin, Secretary of the Energy and Minerals Department, has been sent to all mayors and county chairmen asking them to participate in the program. The letter said that "the purpose of the program is to put the community at the center of planning and application of effective energy conservation measures."

"After a local plan is formed by the community committee, it will be evaluated by a review committee. A ceremony will be held in the community with an acceptable plan during which a certificate and other appropriate symbols for display will be awarded, designating the community an 'Energy Conscious Community,'" Franklin said in the letter.

ECC booklets are being sent to every city and county in the state and to many local civic organizations. Communities that obtain approval for at least five of the projects listed in the booklet will receive a commendatory plaque and pennant for special merit; communities that obtain approval for at least eight listed projects will receive a plaque and flag for outstanding achievement.

Some of the projects suggested by the booklet are:
 — the EES small business energy conservation program;
 — the EES home energy analysis program;
 — establishment of a community energy conservation information center;
 — implementation of solar and wind energy projects;
 — approved community-conceived projects.

The EES will be on hand for assistance to the communities in preparing suitable projects and in carrying out their plans. This will include technical advice and the availability of small grants to assist in executing some of the planned activities.

"The important aspect of this program is that citizens within communities can take part in preparing for their own energy self-sufficiency," Franklin said. "Any measures taken in this direction will be in the form of returned benefits to citizens themselves. It will also give New Mexicans the opportunity to benefit from New Mexico's natural resources, its abundance of sunshine and its leadership in alternative energy forms."

In his introduction to a booklet explaining the program, Governor Apodaca said, "Energy consumption in this country has become largely a matter of habits and many of these habits will have to be changed to adapt to the national energy crisis."

"New Mexico's supply of oil and gas will be severely depleted within 15 years and during that time our population growth rate will be twice the national average. As the nation demands more from domestic energy supplies and less from string-attached imported oil, New Mexico's communities will experience increased hardships in the rush to develop the state's wealth of resources."

"I earnestly hope every community in our state will participate in the Energy Conscious Community program. We must be prepared to be as nearly energy self-sufficient as possible before the invisible crisis becomes painfully visible. It is on the community level that the true extent of this crisis will first become apparent, and it is on this level that effective preparation to meet the crisis will be rewarded."

The symbol of the Energy Conscious

THE OFFICIAL EMBLEM of the Energy Conscious Community program is a reminder of the state's natural resources that must be conserved.

Community is an enclosed circle depicting some of the energy forms available to communities now and in the future. The circle represents the community's determination to contain energy consumption and to use existing energy resources in a controlled and effective manner.

Foreigners buying American farms are not oil rich Arabs

Foreigners are buying farmland in New Mexico and many other states in the union. And we all can guess that the buyers are those oil rich Arabs — right? "Wrong," said James Kirby, Extension economist at New Mexico State University.

Dr. Kirby said that in fact it's rich investors from Europe and Latin America who are buying farmland in the United States. The Arabs are busy buying businesses and property that will return more on their investment.

"In fact, in light of the two to four percent return on American farmland investments, it's hard to understand why the Europeans are buying."

Well according to the European Common Market publication, "European Community," the buyers have a long history of land ownership in Europe. These people are not speculators. They are "forever" buyers and generally the "solid citizen" type, the report said.

Dr. Kirby explained that foreign buyers of farmland compare the United States to the political instability in their own country and in some cases the threat of nationalization of their property. These buyers also view the future of providing food to a growing world population as just about the most stable and sure deal possible in a rapidly changing and sometimes turbulent world.

"Just how much land has been purchased by foreign investors is very difficult to determine," Dr. Kirby said. "In 1977, about $2.5 billion was invested in the United States for everything from manufacturing plants to hotels and shopping centers. A Belgium based research organization estimates that some 30 percent of this invested amount was for purchase of farmland," Dr. Kirby said.

Secretary surrounds most sales of American farmland to foreigners. "This is possible in New Mexico, for example, because such sales can be made through dummy corporations, holding companies, or even American citizens acting for a foreign individual," Dr. Kirby said.

All that is required when registering a property transfer in New Mexico is the name of the title holder and an address to whom tax information can be forwarded. This tax information is not possible in most European countries.

As the American dollar weakens in comparison with other currencies, notably those in Europe and Japan, American investments are a much better buy. This is the reverse situation which many American investors had become ac-collected by the state to 3.75 percent from the current 4 percent.

The Ruidoso trustees may, by enactment of an ordinance prior to January 1, 1979, increase the village's share of GRT monies by the one-quarter cent relinquished by the state, to return the GRT rate in the village to the current 4.5 percent.

The provisions of such an ordinance, if adopted, would not go into effect until July 1, 1979.

In past GRT increases in Ruidoso:
 — The first one-quarter cent, effective by passage of an ordinance, provided additional funds for police and fire protection, park development and other community services.

— The second one-quarter cent increase, approved by the voters a year ago, is used exclusively for the village's street improvement program, including the purchase of street department equipment.

EFFECTIVE JULY 1, under the new law, the GRT in Ruidoso Downs will be four percent and the GRT in Ruidoso 4.25 percent.

Action by the governing bodies of both villages would enable the stabilizing of the GRT in Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs at 4.5 percent, effective July 1, 1979. The adoption of this rate would raise Ruidoso Downs' share of the GRT by one-half cent and Ruidoso's by one-quarter cent over receipts to be realized after July 1, 1979.

Library Laurels

Kathy Moore

If you've noticed a great deal of excitement, or at least confusion, at the library lately, your observation is correct indeed. This somewhat "charged" atmosphere is directly related to the arrival of new library cards.

Just what does the arrival of new cards mean? It means we are able to initiate the change from a manual to an automated circulation procedure. Automated circulation will provide greater over-all efficiency, but it will require a few extra minutes of your time in order to issue your new card.

The cards are attractive and just the right size to keep in your pocketbook. We, therefore, are asking that you keep your card. We will no longer keep library cards on file at the library. You will need to bring your new card with you each time you come to check out books.

If you already have a library card, stop by and get your new card; and if you've never had a library card, this would be an excellent time to obtain one!

Garden Club discusses plans for summer

Hummingbirds, "iridescent green gems in the garden," were the topic of a program presented by Mrs. Ed Hyman to the Ruidoso Garden Club meeting held in the home of Mrs. J.F. Murray.

During the business meeting, conducted by president Mrs. Roy Avery, schedules for the annual August flower show were distributed.

The theme for the show is "How Green Is My Garden" and persons interested in participating are urged to contact any member of the club for information.

A report was given on the Garden Club's civic projects of planting and maintaining the patios at the library and hospital and plans for the bazaar and cake sale scheduled for Aspenade were discussed.

Also, members were urged to write to the authorities regarding problems with motorcycle outlaws confronting the area this summer.

Before the program by Mrs. Hyman, members and guests were served refreshments from a table decorated with summer flowers.

Hostesses were Mrs. Murray, Mrs. Ada McClendon and Mrs. B.J. Walker.

Plans for the July meeting will be announced.

Maranatha! concert set here

Maranatha, a mountain concert, will be presented by Lewis McVay and Karen Lafferty at 8 p.m., July 1 in the Ruidoso High School auditorium.

Jane Deyo, corresponding secretary; Kathrine Finley, president, and Charlene Jones, second vice president.

Summer sandwiches stemmed from card game

"Today your life is influenced by the results of an 18th century card game! ... That is, if you eat hamburgers, hot dogs, cheese, bologna, tuna fish, and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches," says Mae Martha Johnson, Extension food specialist at New Mexico State University.

How could a card game of so long ago affect me, you ask. That's simple! It was during that game that the great "sandwich idea" was born.

John Montagu, the Fourth Earl of Sandwich, England, became involved in the game he couldn't take time out for dinner. He instructed his servant to bring him a piece of beef between two slices of bread so he could eat and continue the game.

Sandwiches are popular as a filling summer meal and they don't heat up the kitchen. They complement salads or soups, and are just as good when eaten alone, the food specialist says.

Today, about the only constant in the sandwich is the bread, and even that often varies — some are wrapped in a lettuce or cabbage leaf.

It has been said the sandwich is a busy mother's best friend because it provides a fast, filling meal with little fuss. Sandwiches are popular at home, on picnics, as in-between meal snacks, and the brown-baggers standard.

Not only are sandwiches a favorite with mothers, but with all Americans. Over 300 million sandwiches are consumed everyday in America.

Choose from a wide variety of processed sandwich spreads and luncheon meats in the grocery store. You'll find a good selection of cheese to help change the taste of sandwiches, too, Mrs. Johnson says.

Not only are these commercially prepared items great sandwich fillers, but they are a great way to use leftover roasts, ham, chicken, hard-boiled eggs and turkey.

After removing bones and gristle from the meat, finely grind or chop the meat. Add chopped celery, bell peppers, pickles, onions or relishes. Some cooks even use grated carrots, chopped nuts, apples and various herbs to dress up a favorite spread.

Try mixing several types of cheese with chopped green chile and sour cream for a treat with a Southwestern flavor.

Chopped, hard-boiled eggs can be used as the base for a spread, or mixed in with a meat spread to add color and protein.

The "binding force" of many spreads is salad dressing or mayonnaise. Don't be afraid to experiment. You might try thousand island dressing, sour cream or mustard in your spreads.

After creating your sandwich spread, serve it on bread, topped with shredded lettuce, a slice of fresh tomato and another piece of bread.

Western artists set show

Three western artists will have a show and open house from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., July 2-4 at Bear Claw Gallery.

Mimi Jungbluth and Steve Forbis of Austin, Texas, and Gary Myers of Ruidoso will display a variety of western art using various media.

STEVE FORBIS has developed a unique technique which he calls carbon painting, involving application of dry dust from a carbon pencil, via a stump or tortillon to the paper in a painting or smearing fashion, creating a subtle blending of monochromatic tones.

His primary subject is Indians and he has an MA in anthropology, specializing in the Plains Indians of Northern America.

Although he began exhibiting work at 18, he turned to a full career in art in 1975.

Forbis is an officer of the Texas Association of Professional Artists. He had a one man show in the spring of 1977 in Corpus Christi and will team with Gary Myers and Lincoln Fox in November for a three man show at the Oklahoma Art Museum.

MIMI JUNGBLUTH specializes in painting American Indians emphasizing family life. She mainly uses pastel, oil and gouache media.

She painted pastel portraits for about 10 years before receiving her first formal art training from Gustav Likan.

Awards and show credits include a one woman show at Wagoner Gallery, Austin, in November 1977; first place award in George Philfen Memorial outdoor show in Prescott, Arizona, May 1978; Texas Fine Arts Citation Exhibition; Texana Art Committee, Citadel Club, Driskel Hotel; Texas Association of Professional Artists; Laguna Gloria Museum Annual Festival and pastel in New York Lever House Gallery, June 23-July 11, Pastel Society of America.

She has received portrait commissions from Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and Lucy Nugent and designed the cover for the University of Texas Law School Conference.

GARY MYERS, a watercolorist from Ruidoso, has "a unique handling of watercolor . . . intensified by spontaneous application through rhythmic movement in a strong composition," a critic said, adding his "artistic expression is imaginative realism with an expressed feeling as opposed to a realistic recording of a scene."

A western artist, he also dabbles in bronze and photography.

Upcoming shows include Stampford, July 4th weekend; Oklahoma Art Museum with Lincoln Fox and Steve Forbis, November 1978, and a two man show October 4 in Midland, Texas.

BY CARROL W. CAGLE
SANTA FE — The top campaign strategist in Tony Anaya's underdog effort to get to the U.S. Senate says there's no way of matching Sen. Pete Domenici's fundraising capabilities.

So the Democratic attorney general's effort will have to concentrate on grassroots organizational efforts while conceding the edge on expensive media advertising to Domenici, says Chris Brown, a veteran political organizer based in Santa Fe.

"I view this as an organizational campaign, primarily, since both candidates are well known," said Brown in an interview.

In some races he's been involved with, such as the recent unsuccessful gubernatorial race of Lt. Gov. Bob Ferguson, "media was at least as important as organization, if not more so," Brown said.

— In that primary race, Ferguson — although a top office-holder — didn't have nearly as much "name identification" among the general public as did his Democratic opponent, former Gov. Bruce King.

So the Ferguson camp out-spent King on media advertising.

But now Brown says both Anaya, a media-conscious attorney general, and Sen. Domenici are very well known, by name, among rank-and-file voters.

"There's no way we can compete with Domenici in terms of the overall budget," Brown said. So the campaign "is a prime case to wage an intensive grassroots" strategy, he added.

He said he has not worked out "in my own mind what I think the county-by-county operation ought to be" but that part of the effort will involve what he referred to as a "gold mine precinct strategy in connection with the Democratic party." He said this meant a concentrated effort to get out the vote for Anaya and Democrats on the ticket from those areas virtually guaranteed to back the majority party candidates.

One problem the Democrats will face, Brown said, is how to hold conservative Democrats who are showing "signs of interest in Domenici and, possibly (Joe) Skeen," the GOP gubernatorial candidate opposing King.

These are the "swing" Democrats who sometimes go for conservative Republicans in a general election, he said.

Despite the fact many of these Democrats favored Ferguson — the most conservative candidate for governor in either party — the climate for most of them staying with the party in November "is better this year than it's been," Brown maintains.

He said the primary between King and Ferguson didn't spur great voter interest, as measured by the low turnout at the polls, and that it didn't "spark acrimony" between the two candidates which would make it hard to close ranks against the GOP.

"We're going to see a more unified effort than we've had," Brown predicted.

Brown is only 29 years old but has a long record of political organizing behind him, beginning with the Gene McCarthy presidential venture ten years ago. At the time, Brown was a student at St. John's College in Santa Fe.

His other efforts have included the presidential campaign of Sen. George McGovern, the 1974 gubernatorial campaign of Jerry Apodaca, the State Supreme Court race in 1976 of Dan Sosa (successful) and that same year's campaign for the "Yes for Two" committee which would have allowed Apodaca to seek a second two-year term (unsuccessful).

And he was a top strategist in Jimmy Carter's 1976 presidential race, first in New England during the early primaries and later in the West.

editorial

It should be obvious to President Carter that his lack of concerted effort to make the dollar "as sound as a dollar" on the world money markets is the catalyst that will spark nationwide taxpayer revolt. The President's number one priority should be to again make the dollar the standard on which all currencies are based, after which he can return to playing at being the world's peacemaker. —CD

A REAL EGO DEFLATOR

'Twas Thursday ... I think ... time about 1 p.m. ... neither of which is germane ... and I was tooling down Schoolhouse Road ... a method of locomotion in a vehicle peculiar to habits of western North Dakota, who never drive, but always tool down a road ... they also tool up ... to avoid confusion.

Anyhow ... there's this one point where visibility is about 37 yards ... kinda down and to the right and left, all at the same time ... tricky curve, you know. Suddenly ... out of the weed harboring ditch to my left a puppy appeared ... with hind legs trying to stay in front of his front legs ... just as though he thought the devil was about to reach out and grab him by the end of his coddle appendage.

'Twas at this moment my reverie of dodging ice floes in a sea of ice tea was shattered ... by the discomfiting thought that fleeing puppies with flailing legs are generally preceding an entourage of small boys. So I eased down on the brake and ... sure enough ... two laughing lads ... perhaps tenish ... broke through the weeds and onto the road ... pursuing the pup. 'Twas then I noticed the pup'd ran up a steep incline ... followed by the boys ... all, mind you, at top speed ... and last I saw of 'em, all were still running ... at top speed.

Up to this point, I've managed to keep myself convinced that age is a matter of outlook ... but, after sizing up that hill the trio'd run up ... it hit me that I'd have had to "take five" seven times in order to walk up said incline ... so there I sat ... flordia faced ... with my pusillanimity showing.

NO WATER, LOTS A HEAT

The mid 90 temperatures serve as a reminder that the remaining days of the dry season are few ... 10 to 12 maybe ... before it's supposed to rain ... like daily ... and breathe new life into our parched forest ... and eliminate the extreme danger of fire ... and ... if'n the forest don't burn 'twixt now and then ... leaving us with the happy thought we made it through another fire season virtually unscathed.

The curtailing of water use ... for petunias, struggling beds of freshly seeded grass and dousing of seedling trees ... not to mention vehicles in need of a bath ... couldn't have come ... considering the heat ... at a worse time ... 'cause the hotter it gets, the thirstier landscaped lawns seem to become ... must be a "Murphy's law" covering this situation.

Anyhow ... from whomping up batches of ice tea, to showering, or mixin' a slippin' glass of lemonade ... seems there's almost enough water to go around ... providing there aren't too many leaky faucets ... and if'n everyone quits waterin' lawns ... washin' cars ... and stomps on the kids if'n they have the temerity to turn on the lawn sprinklers for running through purposes.

It's sorta like the old saw ... you don't miss the water 'till the well runs dry ... and, if'n you've cast an eye on Eagle Creek's flowage of late, you know our well's running ... but barely.

So ... though no tightening of the belt's necessary ... keeping those outside faucets closed is ... 'cause if'n a conflagration should happen along ... and everyone'd been waterin' ... the fire fighters might not have water in their hoses ... which could lead to a parched earth problem ... complete with piles of smoldering ashes ... and blackened debris ... which really don't smell no better'n it looks ... worse, maybe.

Without waterin' ... you know ... we're using about 2 million gallons of water a day ... with the ingo maybe not hardly even barely keeping up with that outgo ... which is why the village dads are insisting that you forego waterin'.

Leaving us with the knowledge ... or, at least, the hope ... that the rains'll come ... you can give your lawn a drink ... and maybe even get that unsightly layer of dust off'n the family jalop ... which shouldn't be muddy ... considerin' it ain't rained in so long there's no abundance of water.

BRIEF BIT: President Carter's acting like the Georgia cracker who tried crossing sheep and goats to take advantage of the rising market for shoats ... CD DON'T BE AFRAID OF COLOR... Color is the most important single factor in decorating a room... With color you create beauty, converting a large lifeless space into a room that has charm, personality, and meaning to the family that lives in it.

Create the illusion of spaciousness with color. You can seemingly "push back" the walls or make them appear to move directly toward you... you can even affect the way people act with color.

Our salesmen will explain to you how to blend colors in a room to create specific effects... Learn how to use light in displaying colors... In a light bright room use "cool colors"... greens, blues, violet. In a dark room use light colors, reds, yellows, orange, etc.

Since your carpeting is the biggest expense in furnishing your home... special care should be given to its selection as to the one best suited to your needs. Our salesmen are trained experts. Let one of them help you select the carpet perfect for your home.

Wilderness Wisdom

with Wayne Calloway

Dear Wayne — In my part of the country, bloodworms are frequently used as fishing bait. I have often wondered where they are found. Are they raised domestically like earthworms? Sid L. in Delaware

Dear Sid — The collection of bloodworms for fishing bait is a sizeable business along the North Atlantic Coast. They are commercially harvested from

New York, northward into New England; being most intensely sought in Maine. They are generally 6 to 8 inches in length and pink in color. They are found in the surface layer of mud along the coast. During the darkness of the night hours they can sometimes be picked from the mud.

They have not been successfully propagated in captivity because they refuse to eat when taken from their native habitat.

Dear Wayne — My brother and I have an argument going about which type pistol is more accurate, the revolver or automatic. Can you settle this for us? Jody P. in Arizona

Dear Jody — As a rule the automatic can be expected to be more accurate.

This is due largely to the fact that the bullet is seated directly into the chamber, much the same as in a rifle.

In contrast, the revolver bullet is loaded into a revolving cylinder. When the bullet is fired it must cross a very small air space before entering the rifling of the barrel. This affords more opportunity for the bullet to become scarred or damaged upon entering the rifling.

The rifling at the breech end of a revolver barrel is subject to more noticeable wear and disfigurement than that of an automatic because the bullet "jumps" into the rifling.

Summer Is Here

This is being written to you on the first day of Summer, June twenty-one. And the mountain world is a perfect picture of early summer time.

It is just a little after high noon on this longest day of the year, and all the world is still in a noon-day rest. The cows and young calves are under the deepest shade along the river bank, where the light western breeze can blow the coolness of the river water upon them.

Yesterday, on the eve of Summer, robins were everywhere chirping as they gathered feed for their young, who will soon be ready to fly from the nests high in the walnut and oak trees along the river.

All day yesterday, the twentieth, the wind was out of the east and north, and the robins sang the rain song. This morning on the first day of summer, the wind was steadily out of the east, and there was a faint touch of moisture in the air. And now, this early afternoon, the wind has suddenly changed and is blowing out of the west. There is a touch of coolness, carried all the way down the warm valley from the White Mountain where there is still a little snow left from the winter. This is the first time I have seen a little snow on the mountain on the first day of summer, for a long time.

Now there is a lull in the summer breeze and all the world is still and quiet. Now from the hillside over the warm mountain meadows comes a song of the summer — the gentle cooling call of the dove — peaceful and cheerful on the first day of summer.

The river is clear and very strong for the month of June — and this is a very good sign for a good summer. This time of year, the river seems to be glancing to the sky as it flows on its winding way — asking for help from the clouds.

This help arrives usually in July and August with rains all over the mountain country. Sometimes the rain arrives a little early, and all the signs lately have pointed to this early rain.

Outside on the southern and northern horizons, the pure white billowy clouds are showing against the blue summer sky. Closer and closer they move in overhead, beautiful messengers of summer rain on its way to the patiently-waiting mesas, foot hills, and mountains all around the slopes of the Sierra Blanca.

The Cholla Cactus

One of the favorite cactus flowers of the Southwest, the Cholla, makes its home in the foothills and mesas of the land of the Pinon and Pine. This plant grows in thin stalks, and has a sacred appearance as you see it out across the fields and on the gently-sloping hillsides.

The shorter branches grow straight out from the upright stalks forming many crosses on the plant. In winter, these little crosses, standing proud and upright, are outlined in pure white during the snow. They make you stop a moment and as you look at them you have a feeling of gratefulness to our Lord. And outlined in the wintry snow, they remind you that we are living in the Southwestern section of our country — and that warm and sunny summer time will follow the snowy winter. So the Cholla cactus in winter with its crosses outlined in white is a cheerful sight.

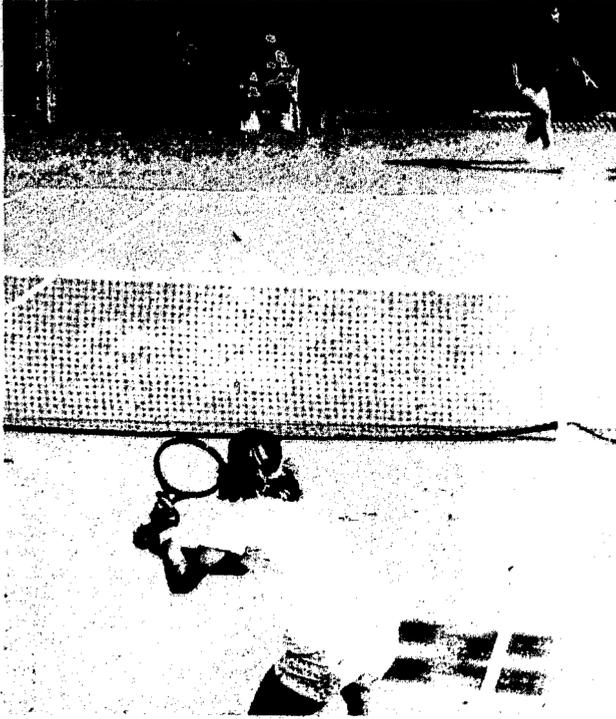

There is a little Cholla plant or two by the little road in to the house that have cheered me through the years. Now on the first day of summer it has bloomed forth with its bright blossoms of a color mid-way between light purple and pink.

The Cholla is a true native of the Southwest and favorite landmark of The Land of Enchantment. To see the Cholla with its purple-pink blooms shining high on the plants five to eight feet high, brightening the countryside out across the little prairies, mesas and hillsides — to see this cactus in full bloom is to know that you are in the Southwest, and that it is summer time.

The Clouds Move Closer

With the west wind blowing gently, the white clouds move closer to us from the east. Now you can see the light rain falling at the back of the clouds. What a welcome sight! What a joy to live in a region where we are so glad to see both the sunshine and the rain! The land of the pinon and pine is a land of the four seasons, and each day is filled with new happiness and new hope.

Let us all rejoice and thank God that glorious summer is here.

WINNER OF THE WILSON Invitational Tennis Tournament Friday was Glen Holroyd; Tucson, left, who defeated David Bryant, head professional at Sierra Swim and Racquet Club 6-4, 6-7 and 6-3.

Doubles tennis tournament here July 8-9

July 7 is the deadline for entering the July 8 and 9 winner-take-all doubles tournament at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

There will be 100 percent return of the purse to the winning "A" (advanced player), "B" (weekend player) and "C" (once a year player) doubles team. Trophies will be presented to the runners-up.

Entry fee will be $24 per team.

Four-wheeler mountain race won't be held

The proposed White Mountain Road Race, for four-wheel drive vehicles, from Nogal to Parson's Mine has been canceled, race organizer Til Thompson announced Friday.

"We were unable to secure proper liability insurance," Thompson said, "and we exhausted every possibility."

"I do thank everyone who has worked with me, gave me support and participated in all of the planning that has gone into this project."

"I regret having to cancel this race, but there was no alternative."

Man captured in attempt to leave building

A Ruidoso man was captured about 12:45 a.m., Thursday as he attempted to elude two Ruidoso police patrolmen while leaving Sonny's Bar-B-Q, 2919 Sudderth Drive.

Jimmy Hagan, 30, had bond set on burglary charges, a fourth degree felony, at $5,000, with no ten percent allowed, in a Friday morning first appearance hearing before Judge Jim Wheeler in Magistrate's Court, Ruidoso. The charges were filed by Criminal Investigation Division (CID) officers of the Ruidoso Police Department, who investigated the incident and collected evidence at the scene.

Sonny's co-owner and manager, Gail Adams, discovered a man inside the building about 12:30 a.m., apparently ransacking the office desk. He stopped a passerby and asked him to notify the police, while he kept watching the intruder.

Two patrolmen arrived at the scene about five minutes before the attempted escape. Adams stationed himself at the front door, the passerby chose a side door and the police watched the back of the building, where it was determined entrance could have been gained by means of breaking a window.

"The suspect," a CID spokesman said, "peeked out the side door. The passerby hollered, 'He's running away,' whereupon the passerby tackled the suspect, holding him until the police put the handcuffs on."

Hagan was taken to Lincoln County Jail Friday where, pending posting of bond, he will be held for Grand Jury action June 28.

Mescalero man dies in accident

A 44-year old Mescalero man died en route to a hospital from injuries he received in a one car accident near Three Rivers, New Mexico Wednesday night.

Francis Powderface was a passenger in a car driven by Juanita Eldridge, Alamogordo, south on U.S. 54 about 8 p.m., Wednesday.

According to state police, the car went out of control for reasons yet unknown, slid off the highway on the east side and overturned throwing Powderface from the vehicle. Police said his skull had been crushed.

Eldridge received cuts and bruises in the accident.

Police said citations are pending.

CANAL ZONE

'Canal Zone,' the newest documentary produced, directed and edited by Emmy Award-winner Frederick Wiseman will encore on PBS Monday, June 26.

Filed in the 10 by 50-mile strip of Central America which the United States has owned, operated and controlled for more than 60 years, 'Canal Zone' is the 11th in Wiseman's series of documentaries on the operation of American institutions.

Beginning with a trip through the Canal aboard a Japanese freighter laden with automobiles bound for Europe, 'Canal Zone,' presented by WNET/New York, focuses on the daily life of the American residents—a scenario played out against the background of the treaty negotiations between the United States and Panama.

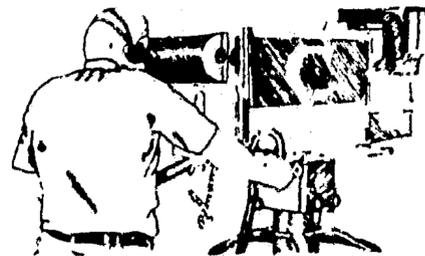

The Canal Zone is like a small city. The Zone's main business is the proper functioning of the Canal. The film examines how the Zone is governed and how the canal is operated. Wiseman looks at community meetings, schools, commissaries and hospitals.

BY JOEY SASSO

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT It looks like another classic example of winning the battle but losing the war... an ABC TV executive confides. He's referring to the out of court settlement that paved the way for blonde sex goddess Farrah Fawcett to return to "Charlie's Angels" this fall as a guest star. On the surface it appears ABC and Spelling-Goldberg (the producers of the show) are the big winners since Farrah will guest star on three episodes of the show this season and three more in 1979. But from what I've seen and heard from others, who either work on "Charlie's Angels" or are close to Jaclyn (Smith), Kate (Jackson) and Cheryl (Ladd), ABC's problems are just beginning. It would be an understatement to say the three existing angels are furious over the decision I heard Kate was so upset when the producers told her of Farrah's return that she tried to rip the phone out of the wall, screaming, "I won't work with that witch." Although Jaclyn and Cheryl apparently took the news a little more calmly, they were also visibly angered by the decision. "The Young and the Restless" star Jaime Lyn Bauer was restless after only 11 months of marriage to psychologist Richard Goldstein, so she's divorcing him. Friends reveal the shrink was jealous of their new baby boy! "Family's" Kristy McNichol flew to Washington, D.C., for lunch with the First Family. Amy Carter invited her, confessing she's Kristy's best fan!

INSIDE THE TUBE. Robert Blake is delighted "Baretta's" cancelled. He's been miserable since his wife Sondra left him. But without the show responsibilities, he's dating her again and taking her to exotic tropical vacation spots. His motorcycle-riding days with Lesley Ann Warren are over. Herve Villechaise, who plays Tatoo, Ricardo Montalban's hilarious assistant on "Fantasy Island," has refused acting jobs which capitalize on his size. "Producers want me to play circus performers or elves," Herve reveals. "I told them, 'I'm an actor, I want to act.'" Ex-beatle drummer Ringo Starr is flying high lately thanks to his recent TV special, which helped sell an extra $1 million worth of record albums. Ringo, 37, has also been lucky in love, frequently getting it on with "Star Wars" princess Carrie Fisher, 20, who played his girlfriend on his special.

TV BACKSTAGE. While in Lake Tahoe, Sammy Davis Jr. wined and dined ex-wife Mal Britt, whom he hadn't seen in years. But the current Mrs. D., Altovise, didn't worry—she was right there with them. In fact when Sammy had to leave to catch a plane, the two women stayed on, gabbing half the night away. Teenage idol Lelf Garrett came back from a concert tour of Australia with his right arm in a sling. It seems he suffered a dislocated shoulder in a near-riot at one of his appearances. At the end of the show, police were escorting him from the stage when a half-dozen girls grabbed for his arm and wouldn't let go. "Three's Company" star Joyce DeWitt still wants out. She's mad because Suzanne Somers gets all the publicity. Norman Fell, who plays the landlord Stanley Roper, also demanded a juicier role or he'll quit too. He's tired of doing all the show's publicity tours when Suzanne, Joyce and John Ritter are "too tired." "Shecky Greene's Las Vegas act was taped by Home Box Office at the MGM Grand Hotel late last year. Shecky was named 1976 Comedian of the Year and was nominated again in 1977. "The King of Comedy," as Bob Hope called him, will grace the Home Box Office screen on Tuesday, June 27.

Welcome Exhibitors
to the 1978

On behalf of the business community of Ruidoso, I would like to extend a hearty welcome to the artists and craftsmen who are in our community this week to participate in the Chamber's Arts and Crafts Fair.

This is not our first arts and crafts fair, but in many ways it is a new start. This year the show is being produced entirely by the people of Ruidoso, not by a private promoter. We believe that by involving the entire community in an event of this type the Chamber is creating a new kind of spirit for Ruidoso. In the past the arts and crafts shows were fund-raising events for the Chamber; this year and in the years to come the arts and crafts show is to be a cultural event for the people of Ruidoso and for visitors to our community.

Those of you who come as artists to participate in this event, we welcome for the contribution you make to our community this weekend. Those of you who come as visitors to our show, we hope you find it to be a stimulating and completely enjoyable experience.

Welcome to Ruidoso and to our arts and crafts fair.

Original print is a great buy

BY DAVID HAIL TRAVIS

Everyone who buys a print has that secret hope that someday it will be of value to the kids or maybe the grandkids. But will it? Let's take a good look at that print. He! That's great, it's been signed and numbered by the artist. But does that really mean anything? If it is a photographic offset reproduction then its value in years to come is highly questionable.

In recent years, there has been a large number of prints produced by photographic offset reproduction that are signed and numbered by the artist leaving the impression that the buyer is purchasing an original print.

The essential difference between a photographic reproduction and a fine print lies not only in the definition of the word original but also the method by which the print was reproduced. One may ask with reference to a color offset reproduction, where is the original? And receive the correct answer that the original is a painting by so and so and is in the collection of such and such museum. But one cannot give the same answer with reference to an artist's etching. One cannot consider a copper plate the original or the preliminary drawing the original (if the artist has made one as sometimes he has not). The print itself is the original. The reasons are that each time a print is "pulled" (printed) by the artist he has done something a little different. Quite often he hand colors the print after it has dried thus giving each print more originality.

The signing of a print tells us who did it. Quite often the print is pulled by a master printer under the direction of the artist and the print carries a "chop mark" which identifies the printmaker. This practice is acceptable as long as it is done under the direction of the artist and the information is included in the provenance or documentation.

Now, let us look at the numbering of the print and see what it really means and what its purpose is. First the number usually appears in either the lower right or left hand corner of the paper just off plate. It looks like this: 12/100. The first number tells us that this particular print is number twelve and the second number tells us the total number of the prints that were pulled. Thus, this print is number twelve of one hundred.

Some people will tell you that the lower the number the better the print. Not so, as stated before the artist is likely to make improvements on the plate as he prints. There are some collectors who like to collect all the same numbered prints that a particular artist produces. The numbering helps the artist keep track of the prints he produces and aids in later cataloging the artist's work by historians. It also helps in identifying a particular numbered print as an exceptionally good print over some of the other numbers. However this does not occur where offset reproductions are concerned as all of them are exactly the same. Then why even number the offset reproductions if they are all the same? Certainly not because the artist has added anything different to each print. They are nonetheless mechanical mass reproductions, with no aesthetic value and with little monetary worth, except for the artist's autograph, if genuine.

How about pricing? What role does it play in original prints vs offset reproductions? Offset prints can be reproduced for pennies by the thousands. In fact most printing firms do not like to run less than a thousand prints at a time. The big presses run so fast that in just a few minutes hundreds are produced. This newspaper was printed on the same type of press. The price difference between what the print costs the artist and what he sells if for is huge. No wonder there are so many offset prints on the market when the profit is several thousand percent. All the artist has to do is sign and number them. No touch up, no changing this or that. All are exactly alike. In most cases he will sell them for just a little bit less than what a person can buy an original print for. Sometimes the prices are even higher.

The artist who specializes in original graphic prints is called a master printmaker. He is usually an artist of integrity and has high aesthetic values. He has enough of an ego to believe that his prints will last a very long time. There are many prints that are several hundred years old. History has shown us that there are good papers for printing and there are very bad papers for printing. A fine quality paper which will last a very long time is called 100 percent rag paper. It is made 100 percent of rags without any chemicals or acids which might cause it to deteriorate over a period of time. The other kind of paper which is used is wood pulp paper of which there are several degrees of quality, the worst being newsprint. If you would like to know what happens to this newspaper if it is left in the sunlight for a short time try an experiment by placing it in the sunlight with half of it covered up for about thirty minutes and then check the results. Depending on the quality of the wood pulp paper it will deteriorate with time when exposed to sunlight and air pollution. It is not uncommon to find a print that is turning to dust because it was printed on poor paper.

Because of various technical problems involved with the large offset presses and the type of fast drying ink that is used it is almost impossible to use 100 percent rag paper when producing a photo offset reproduction. Thus, since the wood pulp type paper is used, offset reproductions suffer from the very beginning by the use of inferior paper. Therefore, what of the buyer who has purchased an offset print in good faith who will one day awake to find his print discoloring and deteriorating?

For the layman there are several methods for determining the difference between the original print and the offset reproduction.

First, beware of any prints that are numbered over five hundred, as most offset reproductions will run into the thousands. It is very hard for the print-maker to pull more than two hundred and fifty prints and at the outside five hundred. Over the two hundred mark the plate or stone starts to wear down and quality of the print is inferior.

Second, most original prints will carry what is known as an impression mark around the print which is caused by the plate or stone when the heavy pressure is applied during the printing. This plate mark is less noticeable on some types of graphics such as the true lithograph.

Third, ask for provenance or documentation of the print which will tell what artist did the particular work of art and the process by which it was done. This documentation will prove in itself the aesthetic intent of the artist.

Fourth, know your dealer and/or gallery.

Fifth, by the use of a magnifying glass one can look at the ink on any offset print (this newspaper is one) and observe that the printing is made up of myriads of very small dots of equal size. Whereas, the ink on an original graphic will be solid.

Six, educate yourself in fine prints and the care of them. One very good book on the subject is "A Guide to the Collecting and Care of Original Prints" by Carl Ziggrosser and Christa M. Gaehee, and published by Crown.

For a few dollars more, one can create a very fine collection of original graphics which will be the envy of all who see them. It is also a very good way to invest in original art at a very reasonable price without the outlay of hundreds of dollars for large paintings. Most artists and galleries will sell original graphics as well as paintings on time payment without interest. Beware of mail order houses offering original graphics. Buy from someone you know.

With proper matting and framing such original graphic will last a long time.

Yes, artists, you can relax in beautiful Ruidoso

Each exhibitor at this year's Ruidoso Arts and Crafts Fair — artisan, artist, craftsman, specialist, genius — just might, at the end of a hectic, busy, trying, and hopefully, profitable day — be stricken with an uncontrollable urge to relax, grab a change of scenery and fortify the body for the coming day of frenetic activity.

Should this be the case — and if it isn't, it should be — breathe easy, you're deep within the most enchanted reaches of the fabled Land of Enchantment — Ruidoso.

Within the confines of the many establishments catering to the banishment of the blues — the rejuvenation of spirits jaded by turmoil — each of you, artists all, can find an unparalleled artistry, wizardry if you prefer, among those delighting in the preparation of comestibles and libations that would indeed titillate the palates of the most discriminating gods of bacchanalian pursuits.

The gamut — from cash and carry to dine and tarry — of eateries and taverns awaiting your pleasure is, in the true modesty of the most ardent New Mexican, mindboggling.

Really want to go all out? Your choice ranges from one establishment that won't let you in the door unless your "after five" attire is impeccable . . . to places where you can't hardly get in the door. Within this range, if you can't satisfy your appetites — giving due consideration to your financial stability and tolerances — you're just not getting into the spirit that characterizes Ruidoso as the place where it's happening . . . first. And fast.

For an evening of challenge and intrigue, for practitioners of the arts with a yen to live experimentally, the sole limitations you'll encounter will be self imposed. Available entertainment varies from organized to completely disorganized . . . in fact, some of the liveliest entertainment in town is spontaneous.

To seek satiation of your desires, prosiac or open ended, let them become known to the first native Ruidosoan you see. You can spot them right off — they act like they're at home, no matter where you encounter them. And they'll be happy to tell you where to go. A statement that can be taken in any context.

So . . . enjoy the delights of the night life. You could find it so stimulating you might elect to linger over a night or two — just to avoid missing anything. And, strictly as routing, you'll discover an enchantment that'll hold you in complete captivation — be it intellectually or, and this is the greater likelihood, otherwise stimulating.

One man's hobby . . . Southwestern Indian style weaving

Despite protests and pleas for anonymity, Don Swalander admitted he has the unusual hobby of Southwestern Indian style weaving.

He and his wife, Linda, became interested in weaving after visiting artist Frieda Herrera in La Luz.

"We began taking classes from her and went down to La Luz several Fridays in January," he said.

"Few men do weaving. I don't know of any Navajo men who weave, only women," Don said.

On his fourth Navajo style rug, Don said, "The next one is always the best."

The first three rugs he wove on the loom dominating his living room were in shades of yellow and the present project is a variety of bright shades.

Don uses predyed wool and designs his own rugs.

Owner of Don's Pharmacy, he also is a beekeeper and has what he believes is one of the largest collections of Dixie Land jazz in Lincoln County.

Don also is an amateur color photographer.

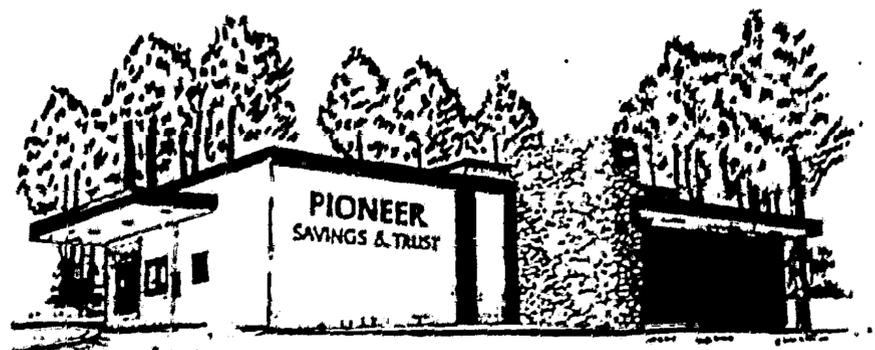

DON SWALANDER is weaving his fourth Southwestern Indian style rug. The loom is two sided so he and his wife, Linda, can use it

In response to popular demand when we were at the Roswell Joyce Arts and Crafts Fair of the Southwest, we will exhibit at the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce Professional Crafts Fair.

Hooking rugs is fun hobby

Dorothy Dennis said her husband, Dave, is the "best hooker in town" and she is very proud of him!

Dave hooks rugs as a hobby and, in fact, has completed so many that he is running out of wall space and has a closet full.

"I don't like to sit around and do nothing, so I took up hooking rugs because they're fast and versatile. I've made a closet full," he said.

On his eighth rug, Dave literally has made a closet full . . . as Christmas gifts for his family.

"I've already got them wrapped,"

Dorothy said.

Dave is color blind and turns to Dorothy for assistance on some colors and through the couple's efforts he has completed several rugs, which "are not going to be used for rugs, they're too pretty," she said.

Presently working on a circular Indian design 40 inches in diameter, Dave has completed several three foot by five foot designs.

"The small ones took about 30 days, but this one has already taken six weeks and I'm about half way," he said.

The managers of Locke Inn Cabins, Dorothy and Dave have found summer business interrupting their crafts and slowing down their progress.

"I can do a lot more in the winter, we're busy in the summer," Dave said.

A creative family, Dorothy crochets and their daughters do macrame.

"It's not a matter of having time for a project, but a matter of taking time for a project because you want to do it," Dorothy said.

Ojo story centuries old

Centuries ago in the northeastern highlands of Mexico the Huichole Indians settled and established the tradition of building an "Ojo de Dios" (Eye of God) for the safety of each new born baby. At birth, the father would cross two sticks and set them in the dirt inside their home. Soon he would drive two or three arrows into the center of that framework and then add one yarn ring for the baby's first year of protection. Each year after that the family would add one more yarn ring on the "ojo" until five rings were completed. This then was the life saving and protecting "Ojo de Dios" that guided the harshest time of the baby's life. At five years old the chances of the baby living a full adult life were enhanced and the young person kept the "ojo" for future needs of protection and ceremony. The "ojo" became a life symbol.

In more recent times, the now small, isolated Huichole villages on high Mexican desert plateaus and mesas still use and subscribe to the healing and protecting values of the Ojo de Dios. The western and northern Mexican Indians have learned of the values of the ojo and have created their own style.

These Indians gave the "ojo" a broader meaning and more flexible design characteristics and feel the "ojo" is a general protector and harbinger of good will and friendship. The modern "ojo" is used extensively in ceremonial times, around the home for protection and especially as a gift to a very close friend or a person who is entering danger. The story grows into legends of people facing death with the protection of the "Ojo de Dios".

Over the years, the beauty and restfulness imparted by the "ojo" has allowed this unique item to spread to all of Mexico and the Southwest United States. Now, Navajo, Apache, and other Indian tribes as well as the white settlers produce "ojos" for their personal and local custom needs.

Herb Brunell ... photographer

A photographic contact print making kit developed more than just photographs for one local merchant; it developed a new avocation. He took the 1973 Christmas present and turned it into a complete color darkroom capable of turning out just about all sorts and sizes of color or black and white photographs.

Along with the development of material needs for such an undertaking came the garnering of the necessary knowledge needed to use the equipment. When Herb Brunell first started out he said he knew very little about his future hobby.

"I received a little Yankee contact printer for a Christmas present in 1973," he recalled, "I went crazy; within 10 days I bought an enlarger and I was on my way."

What first seemed to be a clear black and white issue of art soon became clouded by other tones and shades. On the one hand it seemed obvious that he would stick with the art; that much was clear. However, it was the black and white part that became clouded.

"I made black and white prints for about six months," he said. "Everytime I would come up with a black and white print, the wife would say that would be neat if it was in color."

"My wife took this one," he said as he pointed out various prints on display at his store, Brunell's in midtown. "She took this one too. You know it's funny, but everyone seems to like best the ones Ann took."

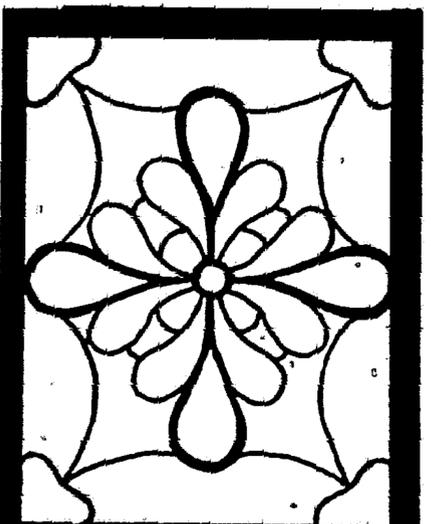

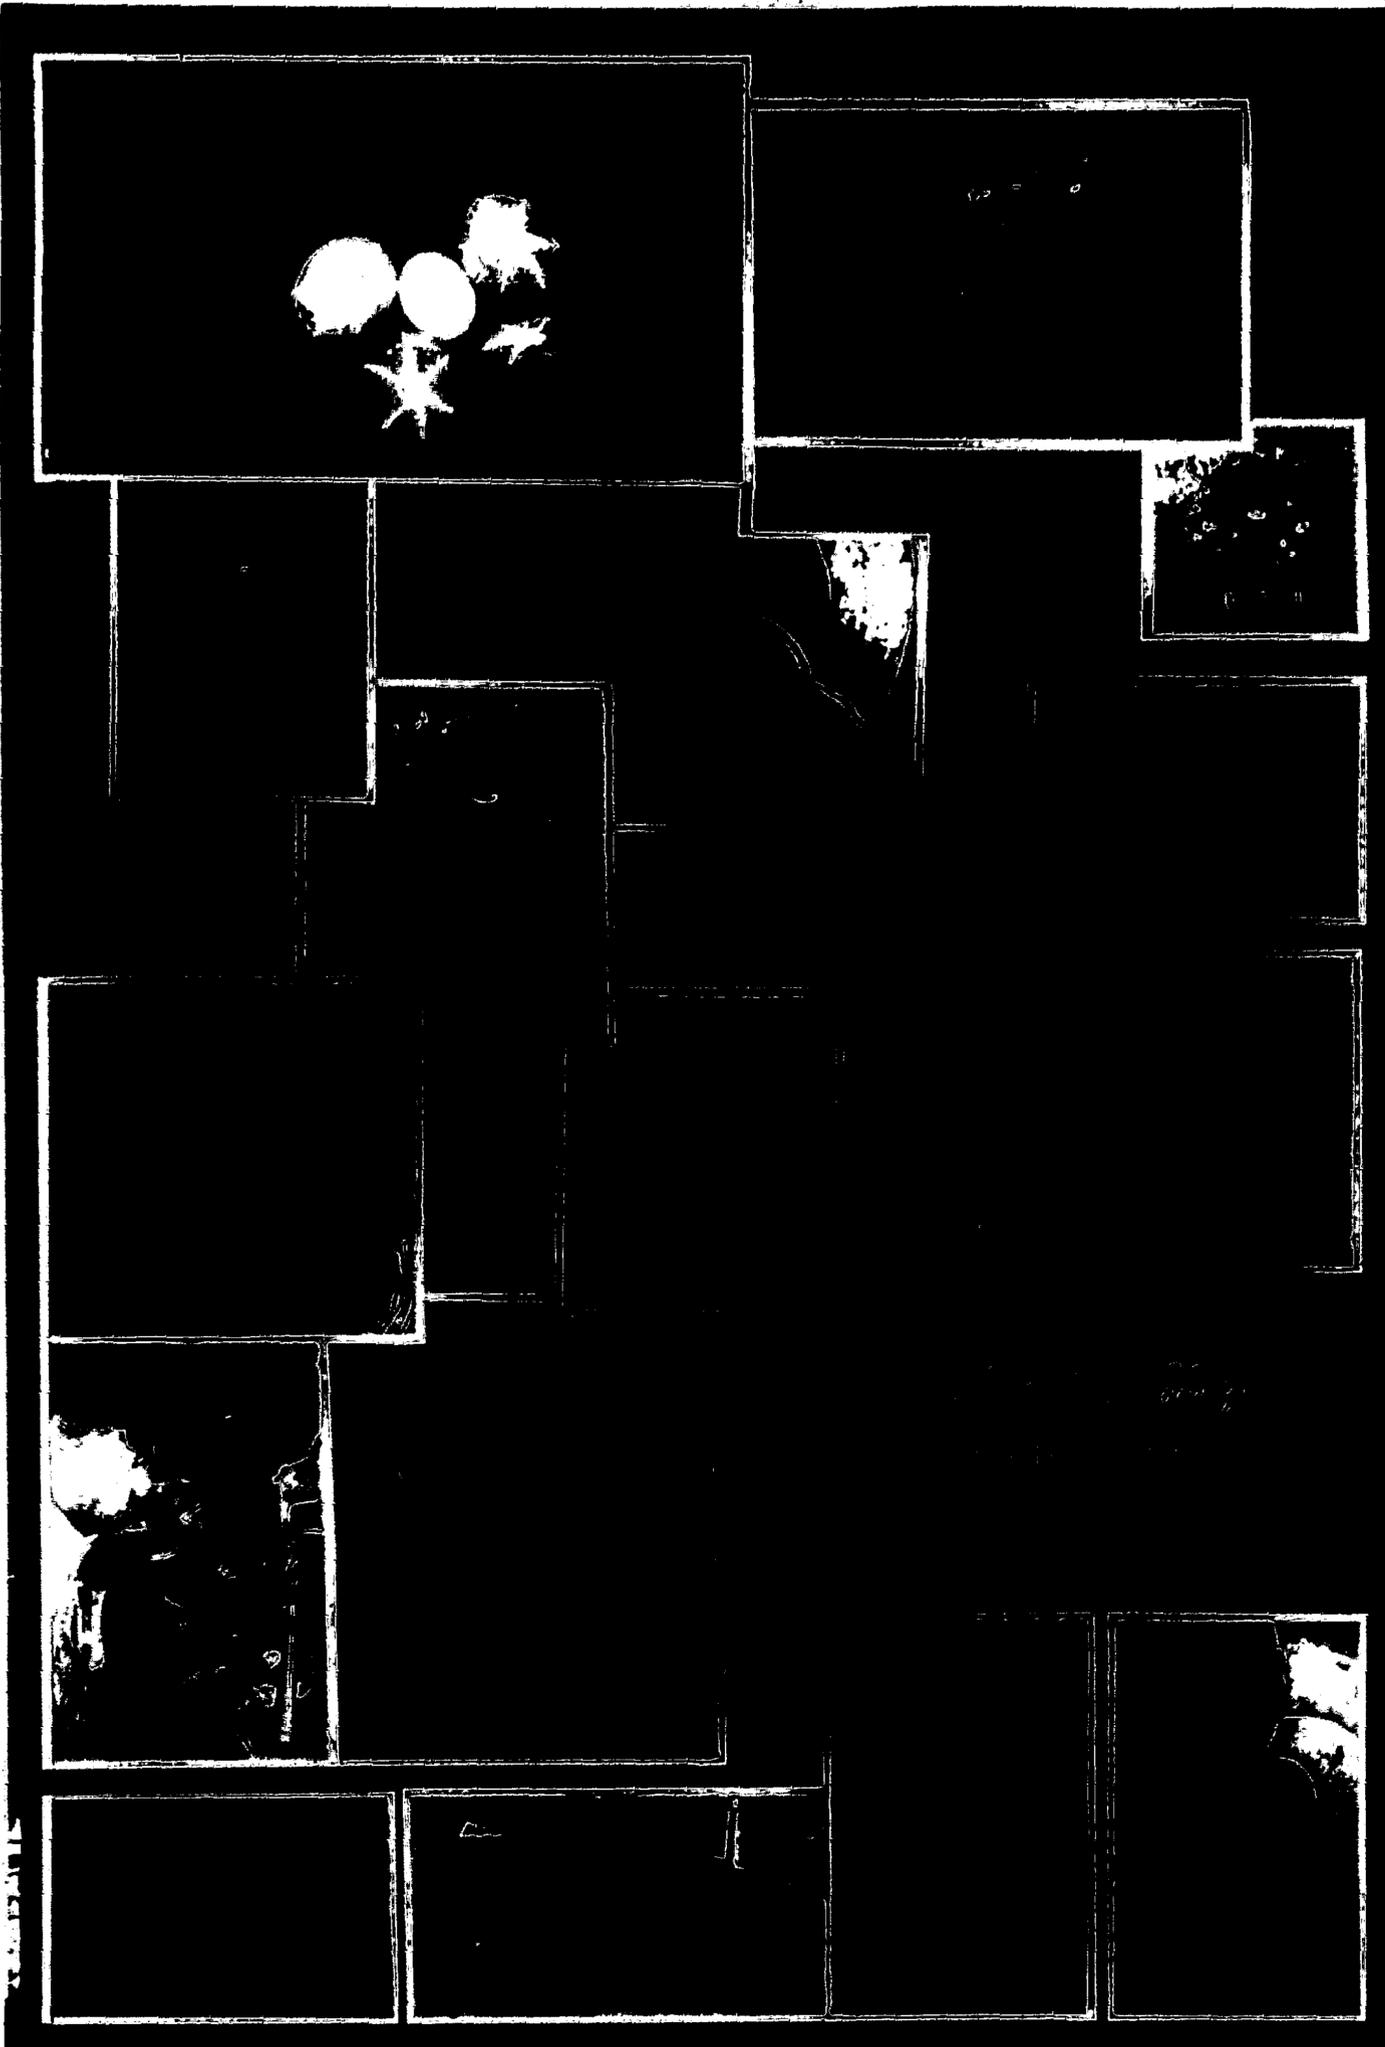

He said it wasn't long before he was whipping out full color prints on his own from his own near-totally equipped darkroom. For the most part the prints he made were from photographs he had taken himself.

"I went down to El Paso and told a man in a camera store that I was thinking about color," Brunell said. "He literally jumped out at me, looked me in the eye, and said, 'you can't do it.'"

He says his is a two camera family.

Since his initiation into the art of photography his interest has grown to multi-media presentations.

He has produced a full color slide documentary outlining the evolution of the White Mountain Jeep Club into the White Mountain Search and Rescue organization. He is planning a similar project concerning the history of his department store.

His interest in photography has also gone full circle back to its roots.

"I've been playing around with black and white photography," he said. "I'm trying to learn how to do it right."

He explained that he feels that color processing is in many ways easier than processing black and white.

An artistic family

A California art colony transplanted to Ruidoso might best summarize the Jim French family. The artistic endeavors of this family run a full gamut from painting to sand sculpture and include such diverse crafts as laying tile and landscaping.

Much surrounding the family has been touched by its members. The house they live in is the product of their combined talents. Jim designed it; while each French member has added his or her personal touch.

A Jacuzzi pool located within the main living space of the house is ringed with sand cast sculptures designed and produced by Robert. The kitchen area features cabinetry created by Kirch, while tiles formed to make a dining table were placed by Katie and Robert.

George has done much to enhance the grounds surrounding the home. He is currently working on a terracing project which will create outside planting space.

The whole of the solar heated home is so unique as to be the subject of a New Mexico Magazine feature to appear on newstands within the next few months.

The family's accumulative talents extend beyond their home. Eric, who currently resides in Redding, California, is a graphics/photography specialist now working on redesigning packaging for Redken cosmetics. The family mother, Pat, describes her son as having a more visual than participatory talent. She said he is engaged in an art that is more concerned with the pleasure of the end result than the pleasure of participation.

Robin has studied theater in Guadalajara, Mexico and, according to

Pat, is very much concerned with stage setting and costume design as well as acting. Pat said her daughter has been asked to help establish a local little theater group.

With several paintings under her belt, including portraits of family members, Pat well fits within the usual definition of an artist.

She said she has been painting for about 35 years in various places ranging from several locations in Mexico to Ruidoso.

"My most successful works have been of street and people scenes in Mexico," she said.

She describes some of her work as cubist but said she was reluctant to really put a label on it.

"You're bound to go through a few periods in 35 years," she said, adding that she has at various times been concerned with certain color schemes and certain techniques that seem to pass, becoming a part of her entire artistic makeup.

When asked what she thought of having raised a talented family she responded by saying, "That's a very interesting question.

"My husband is a very talented person, he paints," she added, "I think it comes out of two sides; both my husband and myself."

She said her family's talent has, in the past, not been apparent.

"Eric was a teacher, he taught Spanish for awhile before he finally decided he was an artist at heart," Pat said. "He gave up teaching and went into graphic design.

"Kirch has always been a mechanical/engineer type. He's the one that set up the radio, television and stereo. George has a four handicap (in golf) in California, don't you think that's talent?" she asked.

Displaying at shows requires technique

The following article was written by Dave Wilson, president of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, who got his start in private business as a street vendor and arts-and-crafts-show circuit rider.

One of the busiest scenes at any successful arts and crafts fair is the information booth, with a steady stream of folks wanting to sign up for the mail list so they can obtain entry applications for next year's show. Obviously there are a lot of potential artists who are searching for a way to break into the public eye, and the arts and crafts fair is a very popular way to get some experience in the business.

How does one go about participating in an arts and crafts fair?

The first thing required is a salable product — sometimes you start out not knowing how salable it will be, but you can save a lot of grief by doing a little research before investing too much time and money. Is anyone showing a similar product? Are they selling? Are there already a lot of people selling similar products; is the market glutted? Are you able to sell in a test market of friends or in a church bazaar or garage sale?

Watch out for fads, they aren't much good unless you catch the wave just right. Several years ago you could sell anything with an owl or a mushroom painted on it; the next season owls and mushrooms were being ignored and seagulls were getting all the attention. Original ideas, obvious quality, and a sensitivity to current fashion but with an individual approach — all these characteristics will help to assure the success of a product in any marketplace and it holds true for the arts and crafts fair.

The second consideration is which fairs to participate in. The usual approach is to start small and work up. Neighborhood fairs, "starving artist" shows, shopping center shows, and even free street markets are all good starting points. There are many small town shows that are good for the beginner. These less pretentious shows usually lack strict entry requirements; you just pay a fee and set up your booth. The best way to get in is to get your name on a mailing list by signing up at this year's show to get into the next one. You can also ask some of the artists in a show about others that they know will be coming up soon. The trick is getting into your first two or three shows, then usually can develop consistent leads on more shows.

Be aware that there are many different kinds of shows. Some are highly restrictive, using a jury system to select a hundred or so artists from as many as a thousand or more applicants. The Fiesta de Laguna Gloria in Austin, Texas, is such a show. The New Mexico State Arts and Crafts Fair is another. Kermezarr in El Paso and Holy Cross in Las Cruces also qualify. Competition for exhibition space is extremely keen, and an artist usually has to apply several years in a row before he has a chance to get in. Booth fees in these shows are high — $100 or more for two or three days — but most of the quality shows can boast a traffic count in the tens thousands to make that fee worthwhile.

Usually an artist must develop a reputation before he can hope to get into the restrictive shows. Quality will be noticed, however, if the artist makes a good presentation in his application and is patient enough to wait. Here is where experience in the small shows is invaluable. The artist can use the small shows to refine his product, to try out ideas and receive feedback both in the form of sales and by listening to people who stop to look. It is surprising the things people will say to each other while standing in front of the artist; it takes a thick skin to profit from these sidewalk critics, but there are lessons to be learned. Also, people who are involved in producing the exclusive shows also attend the small ones and can become familiar with an artist's work. I was able to gain entry into Fiesta de Laguna Gloria on my second try largely because of encouragement and support I received from a customer at a smaller show who turned out to be chairman of the Fiesta selection committee. Once into the top quality shows, simple reference to them on your resume will penetrate a lot of barriers into other juried shows.

Any juried show will require a rather substantial presentation along with the application. Photographs and a resume are always requested. Some show committees use photographs simply to verify a minimum level of quality in the work of the artist, others will actually jury the work and select exhibitors on that basis. In either case, good photos will be worth almost any investment you make in them. It is always best to send slides when given a choice, and most of the better shows will insist on slides. Polaroid prints are usually a disaster, as are pictures taken at close range with most unsophisticated amateur cameras like the Pocket Instamatics. If you aren't a competent photographer and pretty sure of yourself, get a competent friend or a professional to help. Be sure to allow plenty of time. In fact, it is best if you have a set of master slides made early in the season and several sets of copies made from them. Send copies, not the originals. Always label the slides clearly and include a return envelope, but don't count on getting them back. An up-to-date resume with a list of shows attended and any other exhibitions or prizes is a vital part of an application for a competitive show. Copies of clippings of articles about the artist are also helpful; but, again, don't send the originals. Don't overwhelm the selection committee, however; a succinct, confident application with clear documentation is the ideal.

In your application try to emphasize quality and uniqueness. If you can demonstrate your art or craft in your booth during the show, say so in your application, as it can be a deciding factor with judges who are thinking about entertaining the fairgoers. Try to offer a wide range of prices for your products. Most show promoters want to be sure that customers can find something they can afford. I counted on small sales of $5 or less as my bread and butter in most shows and included more expensive works mostly as an attraction to get people looking.

Once accepted for a show, the work begins. Indoors or outdoors, with booth or without, any show requires a great deal of planning for proper organization and display of the artist's work. It helps to have attended a given show before exhibiting in it so that you can know what to expect of the facility. Most experienced artist on the fair circuits have several different exhibit set-ups — one for shows that provide space with no booth facilities, another for use in a standard booth arrangement, and both with variations for indoor and outdoor facilities.

When planning for an outdoor exhibit, don't take anything for granted about the weather. Wind, rain, and sun are your enemies. Display panels catch the wind like sails, and attaching anything to a sun awning is adding sails onto a sail. The wind will also blow dust and dirt into everything, even behind the glass over framed prints. Rain has its obvious disadvantages, but remember that when accompanied by any wind at all rain doesn't fall straight down. The only good thing about rain is that brief showers can sometimes trap a few unsuspecting customers in your booth where they might be susceptible to a "rain special." The sun will burn you and will bleach colors in your work; it can also cause glues to heat up and come unstuck. It is best to be prepared for all these contingencies, for I have experienced gales, floods and sunburn all in the same show on several occasions.

Try to organize for a show before you ever leave home. Pack everything logically, don't just dump things in boxes and hope to sort them out later. Take along a tool kit and emergency repair supplies for your products. Take plenty of spare change in a lockbox. Set up your exhibit and then store extra pieces out of sight but close at hand so they can be found quickly. Take a helper. A two day show without a helper is harder work than digging ditches — a three day show is suicide. Art shows are usually made up of alternating bursts of activity and periods of stark boredom. You will always run out of change, need something from the car, get hungry or thirsty, or have to go the bathroom only during periods of maximum activity. Spouses can make decent helpers if properly trained and praised occasionally; kids usually disappear within a couple of hours. Leave kids and pets at home.

Sometimes my whole profit for a show would be in the pieces I had traded for.

Speaking of profit, there is money to be made in the art show business, but you'd best try not to count on it too much until you've had some experience under your belt. I once knew a street vendor who shared sidewalk space with me in Austin who suddenly found himself with a quarter-million dollar contract with a department store chain for a simple flute that he had created. I've known a lot more craftsmen who considered themselves lucky to make ends meet over the course of a season. Profits are there to be made if you have the right product, produced with the right flair and quality, sold at the right price, shown in the right fairs at the right time, and if you are lucky. As for myself, I always counted on the profits of the spirit — the good times, good friends, the thrill of showing my creations to an enthusiastic customer and even the hard lessons of listening to the sidewalk critics.

Once into the arts and crafts show routine you will acquire a set of art show friends. Most of the people who participate in these shows are friendly, outgoing folks who enjoy the shows for their social features almost as much as they depend on them for income. In fact, there are more than a few shows that artists will attend even if sales aren't good just because they are so much fun. One feature of the art show community that I most enjoyed was trading my prints for works by other artists. At the close of almost every show, artists will be seen scurrying about consummating trade deals for left over merchandise. This isn't horse trading; it's value-for-value trading of something I like of yours something you like of mine.

Lu Newton dabbles in stained glass

Although she began the hobby just to put stained glass tools laying around the house to work, Lu Newton has found she enjoys stained glass art.

Her daughter Kenna signed up for a class in stained glass and purchased the tools, but "she had to cancel because of a work conflict," Lu said.

"Stained glass is a more creative craft than many others; you have to plan the colors and designs. It's not like macrame where you just follow directions. Stained glass allows more freedom, particularly with selection of colors."

Lu said dabbling in other crafts such as macrame, oil and watercolor painting had led her to attempt stained glass art and she found painting experience "helps in selecting the colors" for a stained glass panel.

Lu is ready to solder her first design which is a seagull in warm shades of amber and brown.

"Possibly I'll do more panels, but it'll have to be this winter when I'm not as busy" taking her daughter DeLese to tennis tournaments and working at her job as a broker for Pertot Parks and Associates.
