NO. 46 IN OUR 33RD YEAR

RUIDOSO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO 88345

MONDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1978

THE ADVERTISING STAFF of The Ruidoso News walked off with most of the marbles in the awards competition at the 70th Annual New Mexico Press Association convention last weekend. Advertising Manager, Carmen Edwards, left, took top honors in statewide competition for weekly newspapers in color advertising. Caron Snow, News Classified Advertising Manager, took the top award for black and white advertising. Edwards also captured the third place award in black and white judging. She took first in black and white and third in color in last year's judging. News Publisher Ken Green was named 2nd vice president of the association at the meeting.

Chamber to honor 'Emma' Tuesday eve

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce will honor Emma Redmann, office manager the past 22 years, as the highlight of the annual membership meeting Tuesday evening at the Ruidoso Elks Lodge.

"Emma", as she is known by any and everyone in connection with the Chamber, started her tenure in January of 1957 and announced in August that she will retire January 8, 1979.

"Times have changed," she said. "When I started there was just the manager, Evan Mahaney, and myself working with the seven directors and a membership of 65 paying annual dues of $30."

"Today we have 14 directors and a current paid up membership of 340 with dues of $75 per year."

She cites the promotion of skiing here as the major program of the Chamber to attract tourism to Ruidoso.

"Our first public relations drive to bring skiers here started in December of 1957 for the White Mountain Park Recreational Area."

"We worked constantly on promoting skiing and for years I operated the radio communications with the ski area, before telephone service was installed."

"Our work increased with the opening of the Sierra Blanca Ski Resort in 1961, however, it has been worth it because we're known over the entire Southwest and I know that our reputation, as one of the finest skiing areas available, will spread nationwide."

She has served under 11 Chamber members: Evan Mahaney, A. E. Hunt, Don Stark, Robert Walker, W. R. Wood, Wyman Scarborough, "Tuffy" Wilson, Richard Cothrun, Bill Andrus, John Hobbs and the present executive secretary, Ed Jungbluth.

Seven of the past managers have notified her of their intention to be on hand when she is feted Tuesday: Mahaney, Hunt, Stark, Walker, Wilson, Cothrun and Andrus.

"I'm so happy they'll be here to share my evening with me," she said. "Also, I've never been so nervous in my life, thinking about Tuesday night."

The banquet, to be catered by the Altrusa Club, will be served from 5 to 8:45, with the general membership meeting beginning at 7.

"As the members arrive," Chamber president Dave Wilson said, "we'll distribute straw vote ballots to obtain the opinion of the membership on many issues, ranging from tourist promotions to the Aspencade motorcycle conventions."

"The directors will determine, from the vote cast, the wishes of the membership and will use this mandate to determine the direction the Chamber will take in the future to promote tourism, commerce and industry here."

The meeting, Wilson said, "will be open, as always, to receive comments from the members."

NMSU's gigantic stadium creates traffic problems

BY MARY WORMLEY
Staff Writer

A federal highway administrator said Thursday institutions and businesses need to begin consulting the state highway commission before they begin construction of projects which will create traffic problems.

Comments by John MacAllister, state administrator for the Federal Highway Administration, were prompted by a request during the commission's meeting at the Inn of the Mountain Gods Thursday from New Mexico State University (NMSU), the City of Las Cruces and the Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce to speed up a project to widen University Avenue.

Spokesmen said University Avenue presently is used by 13,110 cars per day but with the newly built 30,000 seat stadium at NMSU, traffic was heavier during sports events causing 30 minute delays and congestion.

Buddy Ritter, developer of the Holiday Inn on University Avenue told the commission three firms, which would be large employers, would be developing in the near future to the south of the street, causing more traffic.

He also said by 1980 Holiday Inn, Motel 6 and Howard Johnsons, all located in one block on University Avenue, would expand to approximately 500 rooms, also increasing traffic.

NMSU spokesman Carl Hall said the university was considering construction of Pan Am Plaza, a student shopping center "which would put added pressure on University Avenue."

A highway department spokesman, John Whitman, said the project was in the design phase now and would be let for bid in 1980, adding the design process had been granted to a private engineering firm to speed up the project.

The commission agreed to relay information in the potential traffic problems to the engineering firm.

Later in the meeting, MacAllister commended the "willingness of the commission to go to the people and the willingness of the people to come to the commission."

"We like to satisfy requests, but seeing the willingness of the commission, the desire for a project and the funding is not a full answer."

"People who want stadiums should consider traffic before building," he said.

"Suppose the University of New Mexico wanted a stadium. Without input to the highway department, they could build it, but there would be no way we could satisfy their traffic demands."

"People must cooperate with us, not only when building stadiums, but with shopping centers, etc."

"Instead of saying 'we now have a shopping center, how can you satisfy our traffic demands?' they should consult the highway department before starting the project."

Commissioner James Chaney, Moriarty, said, "Traffic problems are never blamed on the colleges, they're blamed on the state highway department."

Also during the meeting, a delegation from Truth or Consequences, Grant, Catron and Sierra Counties requested the commission consider construction on Forest Road 44 from Winston to Reserve.

The commission said the project was third on a list of priority Forest Service road projects, but added the funding allocated for such projects was minimal. The project also would be of less priority than a controversial project to pave the road to Sandia Crest.

In other business, the commission: — Heard a financial report from Tom Romero, assistant highway department administrator.

— Postponed a decision on a billboard economic study.

— Discussed legislative changes including setting up an administrative board to review contractual disputes, changes in the gasoline tax, reverse condemnation statutes and the construction hearing requirement on pedestrian, equestrian or bicycle paths.

— Discussed publishing engineering estimates. The commission directed the staff to make a formal inquiry of the Associated Contractors of New Mexico for their opinion on the issue.

— Heard a report on the national energy transportation study on coal haul roads from Whitman.

— Discussed per diem, agreeing to set up a meeting with the Department of Finance to discuss the issue.

— Discussed posting of signs giving a hot line number to the department.

— Discussed a meeting with representatives of the village of San Jon.

— Discussed the status of negotiations to exchange maintenance on SR 117 for SR 38 in Catron County.

Lodger's Tax committee in support of Aspencade motorcycle conventions

The Lodger's Tax committee Friday afternoon "voted and approved", chairman Ed Hyman said, "$5,000 for advertising, promotion, et cetera for next year's motorcycle convention at Aspencade."

The money was allocated on a tentative basis, Hyman said, "awaiting the Tuesday night approval by the Chamber of Commerce membership to support the Aspencade motorcycle conventions."

Hyman also said: "All the Lodger's Tax committee has done in approving this $5,000 to advertise and support the motorcycle convention, is advise the Chamber our committee is willing to support it and the efforts of organizer Tim Thompson to hold this annual meeting, attracting motorcyclists from across the nation, in Ruidoso."

Chamber's Coffee Cart Wednesday

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce is this week resuming their informal Wednesday Coffee Cart, open to the public. Residents with ideas to express are invited to participate.

This week's Coffee Cart will be from 9 to 10 a.m., at Security Bank.

Downs trustees meeting tonight

The Ruidoso Downs trustees will meet at 7:30 this evening in the municipal building.

Items on the agenda include: Consideration of two resolutions, one on the annual inventory and the second on the removal of debris and old buildings within the village; occupation licenses and a review of correspondence.

P&Z studying zoning

The Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday discussed the possibility of adopting new policies concerning rezoning subdivision regulations in an informal workshop.

Since it was an informal meeting, none of the commission's activities were made into resolutions. The main purpose of the workshop session, chairman Mike Waldron said, was for the commission to get feedback among themselves.

"We want to try to get everyone thinking the same way," he said.

Concerning the adoption of new rezoning regulations, the commission worked for the majority of the evening to reach what could be a workable plan but failed because of a lack of economic and geographic information. As a result, Waldron appointed a committee to look into these areas so a feasible set of regulations could be established.

The commission also discussed the situation off of Highway 37, where the land is currently zoned under C-2, or general commercial. The majority of the commission was in favor of reducing the subdivisions to C-1, light commercial use. However, the commission wasn't able to firmly establish the legality of such a move. Attorney Ronald Harris told the commission they may not be on firm legal ground if they made such a move.

One of the major accomplishments of the meeting was, with Harris present, the commission was able to get a legal definition of many of the rules and regulations the commission operates within.

BAND SWEETHEART Lou Ann Wilson and Todd Perteet, Mr. Rhythm, were named during the Warrior/Tularosa football game here Friday night.

The annual talent show, sponsored by the junior class of Ruidoso High School, will be presented at 8 Tuesday evening in the high school gymnasium.

The program will feature 20 local groups and individuals, with acts varying from musical to gymnastic to roller skating and monologue.

The Halloween Queen, chosen from contestants of all four high school classes, will be crowned during intermission.

Christmas tree cutting permits to be issued

Lincoln and Gila National Forest Supervisors James R. Abbott and Robert M. Williamson have announced that permits for Christmas trees from these two National Forests will be available through the mail for the first time this year. This approach to one of the area's favorite outdoor activities is designed to better serve the public and at the same time aid the Forest Service in handling this use of the National Forest.

Applications for permits will be distributed throughout southern New Mexico and western Texas November 13, with Forest Service offices and selected locations to be announced later having applications.

Both the Lincoln and Gila National Forests have a limited number of Christmas tree permits, which will be sold at $1 each. A permit entitles a family to cut one Christmas tree from a designated area on the National Forest for their personal use. On the Gila National Forest, located in the Silver City vicinity, 5,870 permits will be sold. The Lincoln National Forest, in the Alamogordo area, will sell 7,150. The majority of these trees are pinyon with lesser amounts of fir and pine available. The application will provide complete instructions as to selecting the desired species and cutting areas.

All applications will be processed by the National Forest on a first come first served basis. Permits will not be sold, nor will applications be accepted, at Forest Service offices. To insure that everyone has an equal chance of obtaining a permit, applications will not be available prior to November 13. Since permits are limited, it is advisable to send your application in as early as possible after they are available.

For additional information, contact the Lincoln National Forest in Alamogordo, or the Gila National Forest in Silver City.

Governor Apodaca aiding funding for Old Lincoln

New Mexico Governor Jerry Apodaca may be holding the ace in the hole concerning the possible loss of funds to rehabilitate the Billy the Kid Recreation Grounds.

These grounds, which include the dilapidated Lana and Gallegos houses, was supposed to receive $200,000 dollars for restoration of the houses. The government would match that, according to Bill Burkett of the Economic Development Administration.

However, Burkett filed for the funds on behalf of the houses but was later told that he had to file in the name of the state in order to receive the money. When he did this, he was told it was too late. The Southeastern New Mexico Environmental Development District (SENMEDD) said the money had already been used for another project. Burkett accused SENMEDD of stalling so the funds could be used for something else.

That's where the governor comes into play. Burkett requested, and apparently received, aid from the governor's office. The governor said he would intervene so there would be a better chance of the money going to the recreation grounds.

FIRE will issue evacuation maps

During a work session Thursday afternoon, the Committee For Insuring Ruidoso's Environment (FIRE) requested working copies of evacuation maps be prepared.

Maps of four sections of Ruidoso will be printed for distribution to homeowners showing evacuation routes to be taken in case of a major forest fire.

The committee requested that Glen Pike, publisher of the village map, draw up four working copies for study by various agencies including the Ruidoso Police Department, State Division of Forestry and the Forest Service.

The agencies will make road corrections and then collaborate on marking the evacuation route directions, intersections which probably would be blocked and holding or meeting areas.

In the meantime, committee members will determine the number of copies needed for distribution.

Final plans establishing how the map will be printed have not been made, but the committee plans on "a low cost, no fancy details map," possibly partially funded by advertisers.

"We want the least amount of information which still says 'this is the evacuation route,'" Herb Brunell, committee chairman said.

During discussion of the map proposals, Paul Lukens, chief of Ruidoso Police, said the committee should be cautious in designating holding areas.

"A safe holding area would depend on the prevailing winds" pushing the fire, he said, adding schools would provide facilities for housing and have kitchens capable of feeding large groups.

The committee also touched on including instructions explaining the map on the reverse side and a drawing of a house showing fire hazards on the front side. The next committee meeting will be at 4 p.m., November 16 in the library.

School bus rules protect children

(First of a series)

Brochures listing new state regulations regarding school buses will be given to each child in the Ruidoso School System within the next month, Donny Weems, bus coordinator, said.

The brochures will list the regulations governing the bus drivers and passengers in addition to listing the laws which other drivers must obey.

"The problem of transporting children to and from school is becoming more complex every year," Pat Valliant, Superintendent of Schools, said.

"The number of children to be transported is constantly increasing and traffic is changing rapidly." In efforts to ensure maximum safety to those riding school buses, the school system is seeking the cooperation of drivers.

State regulations governing whether a driver may pass a stopped bus or not are:

— Other drivers are not required to stop when a bus has pulled completely off the roadway and children don't have to cross the street to get home.

This is the most common method of unloading students in Ruidoso, Weems said, adding drivers can pass the buses.

— Drivers in both lanes of traffic are required to stop if the bus does not pull off the roadway, regardless of whether children must cross the street to get home or not.

As a general rule, school buses have special lighting equipment which will be in operation to signal drivers to stop. If the special lighting is not in operation, drivers may pass.

"The most hazardous of all school bus operations is when the bus is stopped on the roadway to load or unload students," the state regulations read.

"Circumstances sometimes make it impossible for a bus to pull off the roadway. Therefore, under the following conditions, the bus must stop on the roadway and turn on the alternating flashing lights."

School buses will stop on a single or two lane roadway when:

— Students must cross the roadway.
— The shoulder width is inadequate, or for any other reason the bus cannot completely pull off the roadway, even if no students must cross the street.

School buses will stop on a multiple or divided roadway:

— To load or unload students. Students will only be loaded or unloaded on the side of the highway on which they live so no students will be forced to cross the highway to reach home or to board.

Whenever possible, all loading and unloading will be done off the traveled portion of the roadway.

— Or any other circumstances. Should it become necessary to stop on the roadway, the bus will stop in the right hand or outside traffic lane with alternating flasher lights turned on.

Traffic approaching in the opposite roadway is not required to stop.

Buses will unload or load in the right lane of the roadway. However, in no event will buses load or unload students in a designated turn lane or in a lane immediately adjacent to a designated turn lane.

In the next article, regulations governing students will be discussed.

MAX PERKINS: EDITOR OF GENIUS

A. Scott Berg
E. P. Dutton, New York 1978
Max Perkins was as A. Scott Berg states in his opening chapter, "... unknown to the general public, but to the people in the world of books he was a major figure, a kind hero. For he was the consummate editor."

It was Perkins who discovered such major talents as E. Scott Fitzgerald, Thomas Wolfe, Ernest Hemingway, Ring Lardner, Taylor Caldwell and Marjorie Rawlings. He was not only the editor for these writers but close friend, money lender and manager, critic, inspirer, counselor and of course father-confessor. Early in his career Thomas Wolfe wrote, "There is just one person in the world today who believes I will ever come to anything. That person is Max Perkins."

Berg in his title calls Perkins the "Editor of Genius." If there is truth to the observation that genius is one percent inspiration and ninety-nine percent perspiration, then it is clear that much of the sweat was from the brow of Max Perkins. Genius seems also too often trailed by tragedy, and a reader can hardly put aside this excellent biography without some thought to the tragic vein which follows the lives of almost all Perkins' writers. The fabric of his personal life contained some of the same troubled threads.

Biographer Berg is a young Princeton graduate who had done a remarkable job of research for this book. He has relied almost exclusively on primary sources having discovered thousands of letters sent and received by Perkins and which were revealed for the first time to Berg.

The book is also very well written and passes that test of good biography where the central figure acts and speaks without denying the importance of the people who surround him.

Berg's primary emphasis is on the relationships between Perkins and his writers, but in addition Berg explores the links between the writers, their friendships and their jealousies. They were often each other's most biting critic. Fitzgerald, after reading Wolfe's OF TIME AND THE RIVER, wrote Perkins that he thought the book went downhill just after the dedication page. Wolfe had dedicated the book to Max Perkins.

This is a fascinating book and should get a large amount of attention from students of Modern American Literature. For those with writing aspirations it may provide some chilling realities. A common perception of the writing profession fails to recognize the long days, months and years spent in the rewriting of manuscripts. Scott Fitzgerald, who had been working for a long time on a novel, was encouraged after having spent an evening with James Joyce. Scott inquired of Joyce if his next work FINNEGANS WAKE, already some six years in progress, was coming along. "Yes," Joyce replied, "I expect to finish my novel in three or four years more." Fitzgerald, in writing eleven hours a day, where Fitzgerald did only an intermittent eight.

Now that the World Series is tragically behind us and the long winter nights are approaching, this is a good time for reading. The biography of Max Perkins is a place to start.

Long runs kill Ruidoso

BY JOHN NEYLAND
Sports Writer

Tularosa broke the Ruidoso Warriors' necks with two long scoring runs sandwiched between two long drives and ended the Warriors Friday 27-7 at Ruidoso Stadium.

Both of the breakaway runs came at inopportune times for the Warriors, who struggled to keep the game close all night.

"The breakaway runs killed us tonight," warrior head coach Darrel Stierwalt said following the game.

After Tularosa took an 8-0 lead on Jordan Valdez' ten yard burst over the middle of the Wildcats' second possession, warrior quarterback Borde Williams had the Warriors mounting a drive of their own. Starting at their own 15 yard line, Williams mixed runs by John Whitlock, Joe Almager and Steve Cox with passes to Pat Matthews and Jeff Elliot. The warrior momentum was halted abruptly, however, when a Wildcat defender picked off a pass intended for Matthews in the end zone.

On the next play from scrimmage, Valdez slanted off left tackle and scooted down the far sideline 80 yards to enlarge the Wildcat lead. The point after failed, but the damage had been done. What moments earlier looked like a possible tie ball game was now a 14-0 Wildcat bulge.

The Warriors were put in a deeper hole early in the second half. Tularosa received and took over on their 30 yard line. One play later, the score was 21-0 as running back Jim Worley dashed 70 yards for the score. Suddenly, the Warriors needed a break if they were to get back in the game.

They got the break they were looking for with just over three minutes left in the third period when they recovered a Wildcat fumble on Tularosa's 24 yard line. The Warriors wasted no time scoring. On the next play, Williams hit Jeff Elliot in the end zone for a quick six. Mark Dutton added the point after and the score was 21-7.

Whatever hopes the Warriors had then were slowly dashed. Beginning at their 20 yard line, Tularosa nursed the ball downfield, where on a fourth and goal at the one, Worley slashed off left tackle for the clinching points.

Apparently, however, Tularosa didn't feel like they had a big enough advantage. With seven seconds left in the game and the ball at the warrior ten, Tularosa called time out to stop the clock so they could get another crack at the end zone. That, more than the loss, angered Stierwalt.

"I thought it was a lousy thing for him (Wildcat coach Bob Cerny) to do,"

WARRIOR QUARTERBACK BORDE WILLIAMS fires the ball over an unidentified Tularosa defender to receiver Jeff Elliot. Elliot was open in the end zone and the result of this toss was six warrior points. Touchdown cut Tulle's lead to 21-7 late in third period.

Stierwalt said, "and I told him so. But he likes to get you when you're down and keep you down. That's just the way he is. I told him someday he'd be in the other position."

Stierwalt had a few of his players in different positions for this ball game. For the first time all season, Borde Williams played defense.

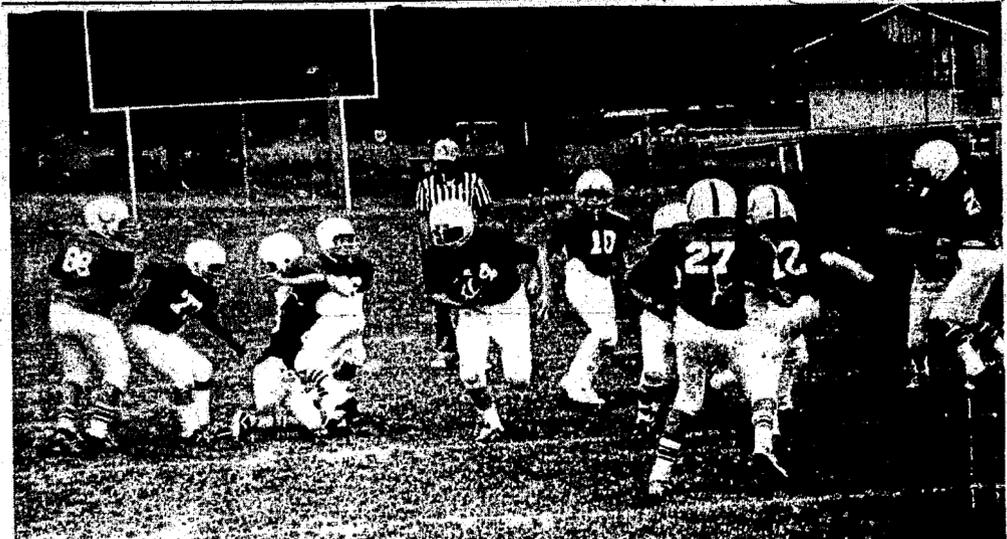

"I hadn't played him because I was afraid he might get hurt," Stierwalt said. "But he told me he wouldn't get hurt if I put him on defense. He did a good job. He's got a nose for the football. He'll be there the rest of the season."

Although the warrior defense gave up 27 points, Stierwalt was pleased with the way they played. Some of the lapses, he said, were probably caused by the fact the Warriors were in a new defense.

"We changed defenses to compensate for their size," he said. "We stunted a lot and that is always a gamble. Our other defense is geared for teams that are our size. We'll stay with this one the rest of the season."

The Ruidoso News SPORTS

BRONCO RUNNING BACK JASON YARBORO [44] blasts through the Colt line en route to first down in third period action. Yarboro carried down to the Colt two-yard line but Broncos failed to score because of a fumble: Colts won this game to stay unbeaten, 14-2. In other action Hornets defeated Lions 20-12 and Cowboys and Steelers baffled to a 0-0 draw.

Ruidoso Ski Area initiates races

The Ruidoso Ski Area is instigating a racing program in an effort to get more community involvement in the sport of skiing.

"We'd like to get as many people in the community involved as possible," program coordinator Ralph Rush said. "We'd like for businesses to get up a team, anybody who wants to."

Rush explained that the program is for skiers of all talents and ability, with all having an equal shot at the year-end trophies because of a computerized handicapping system.

"There are incentives for everyone," he said. "Experts won't have any better chance of winning than the beginner."

The reason for this is that on the opening day of the races, each skier will participate in a time trial. This time will be used to measure the skiers' success at the end of the season February 22. Rush explained that the beginner's time should improve more than the expert's thus giving him/her a good shot at winning the overall trophy.

There will be trophies for other categories as well, Rush said, including most improved skier, most improved time and others.

The races will be held once a month with two scheduled for the month of February. The dates are: November 30; December 21; January 18; February 8 and February 22. The entry deadline is November 10 and the fee is $40 per team.

Although it is required that four members be on a team, the officials will only take the three best times per race. Therefore, one member could still miss a race for whatever reason and not force his team to be disqualified from the overall competition.

Following the end of the racing program, there will be an awards banquet at a yet to be designated location and date.

The racing will be a fun type of competition, Rush said. The giant alom course will be easy enough for the beginning skier but not so easy that it does not provide a challenge for the expert.

Casa De Regalos snares keg lead

Casa De Regalos broke out of a four way tie and moved into sole possession of first place in the Ruidoso Ladies Bowling League with a 15-5 record.

Ruidoso State Bank and K-Bobs are in second place, one game back with 14-6 records. Both were tied for the lead going into last week's action.

Also tied for last week's lead, but dropping all the way to fourth is Pioneer Savings and Trust with a record of 13-7.

Apache Music is next with an 11-9 record, hardly out of it the way the race has been seesawing to date. Apache Music is followed by Hughes Body Shop (10½-9½), Valley Plumbing (9½-10½), Barney Rue Sand and Gravel (9-11) and Big T (8-12).

Rounding out the standings are: Mini-Mart (7-13), Brunell's (6-14) and Las Tres Tiendas, who tripled their wins last week, at 3-17.

The Dreamer BY DANNIE STORM

A Light Touch Of Indian Summer
True Indian summer begins after the first hard frost and sometimes a little snow along with some cold.
Then, as if to give us a chance to get ready for the winter weather, the world becomes calm and serene; there is a lull in the north wind, and the world stands still, and quiet. The sky is a soft blue and the sun is mellow. High and low, near and distant in the mountain world, the hills and vales are dreamy in a mantle of purple haze — light here at hand and deep in the distance. The mountain streams are crystal clear, and the Autumn colors in the valleys and on the mountain heights — these hues and tints of turning leaves have deepened and enlivened, bringing a stronger color pattern into the world.
The air is fragrant with the incense of every kind of leaf, fruit and grass floating everywhere on the warm air. First the cold and frost, and now the sun — warm like Summer — have brought out the aromas of cedar berries, oak leaves, pinon twigs, wild grapes and cherries, the sweet sap of Box Elder, ripe apples — and numberless other things all blending together to bring delightful awakenings to your heart as you breathe deeply of the air so full of autumn magic. Fond memories come to you one after the other, lightening your step and lifting your spirits with calm contentment and joyous gratefulness.

The North Wind Whispers Gently
Most of the day today, October eighteen, the north wind has been bringing little cool draughts of air from over the hill into the vale. Now in mid afternoon, the wind has become slower and slower until now the air is still. A sunny warmth floods the world down from the gentle sun close above in the velvet sky. Up the valley a few light clouds are shining white beyond the purple hills.
Out in front of the house, the large apricot tree is the color of ripe apricots all along its top. Lower down and underneath the leaves still have a touch of green. The tree is holding on to all its leaves, trying its best to make a full and rich display in celebration of October. The sun, half way down in the western sky sends its rays through all the trees, so that it is lighted up — gold upon gold, and gold of leaves lighted by gold of sun with the purple-mantled green of the hills beyond. A blaze of yellow wild grape vine leaves, climbing up in the green of a clump of tall cedar bushes, reflects the gold of the sun into the Autumn picture.
Now that the north wind is still and the sun is warm, there is a little brief season of Indian Summer — away ahead of time.
All the incense of the leaves reaches you, the call of the crow carries clearly on the still air. The bands of pinon birds send their harmonious call from the pinons on the hillside. It is their Indian summer call, echoing for just a moment down through the valley. The snow birds are out of sight resting in the shade. Winter seems far away, on this mellow sunny day with its early touch of Indian Summer.

Billie Clarke Recovering Steadily
Our good friend of many years, Billie Clarke is recovering steadily after being confined for quite a spell with a broken leg. Now that she is gradually gaining strength during this bright October weather, she is anxious to hear from her many friends. This is a very good and hopeful sign. We are happy that Billie is well on the way to recovery, and we know that Our Lord will continue to bring her hope, and cheer and a speedy recovery.
Blue Birds
More and more Blue Birds, those little spirit birds of happiness, are arriving during this unusually warm Autumn. Their flashing blue is very bright this year; and their little chirping clear songs bring us messages of cheer as they fly and light close around us.
Our song birds bring us very close to Heaven. And the blue bird is one of our very dearest. With the approach of my birthday, the blue birds are singing songs of Our Mother. And our Mother's spirit and the spirits of all our loved ones are fondly close to us this sacred October season.
Our hearts grow more grateful day by day for all God's blessings.

We wish you a Christmas portrait.

Domenici bill benefits guayule

A potential agricultural and economic bonanza for the Southwest is embodied in legislation drafted by United States Senator Pete Domenici and passed by the 96th Congress.

The Senate and House sent to the President the "Native Latex Commercialization Act of 1978," authorizing the Secretaries of Agriculture and Commerce to appropriate $30 million for research and development of the Southwestern rubber-bearing plant known as guayule.

"Guayule and its development," Domenici said, "offer real hope for the United States to end its dependence on foreign rubber and can reduce our dependence on foreign petroleum, in addition to providing a top cash crop for the Southwest. I'm very, very pleased that the 96th Congress sees this potential."

The bill will create a Joint Commission on Guayule, with three members appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture, three by the Secretary of Commerce, and the remaining two appointed by the National Science Foundation and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The Secretary of Agriculture will have exclusive authority for the research in plant culture and cultivation, with the Secretary of Commerce having exclusive authority over technology development and projects to demonstrate the economic feasibility of manufacture and commercialization of natural rubber from guayule.

During World War II, when the United States was unable to obtain natural rubber from South Pacific countries, an extensive program of guayule development was undertaken. That program was abandoned after the war when rubber from overseas became plentiful again.

In recent years, however, natural rubber from abroad has increased in price while decreasing in supply, along with petroleum-based products needed for commercial rubber manufacture.

Guayule is indigenous to Mexico and portions of the Southwest United States. It thrives in arid regions and yields a high quality latex.

"Research at New Mexico State University and the University of Arizona indicates it can be grown in quantity in the Southwest. With a pilot plant to explore all its aspects, the manufacturing and commercialization of guayule rubber could be a reality in the very near future," Domenici said.

The $30 million funding will be spread over the next four fiscal years for research and development of the rubber-bearing plant.

Plan now to keep the bugs out of your house before they get inside to enjoy the warmth of your winter home. If you have had problems with boxelder bugs, crickets and other bugs you are likely to have them again this year unless you do something to stop them.

Diazinon, Dursban (Chlorpyrifos) or Sevin (carbaryl) spray applied to the outside foundation of your home will keep out most of these invaders. In areas where elm leaf beetles and boxelder bugs are a problem, treat the trunks of elm and boxelder trees with your insecticide mixture. Sevin is the preferred chemical for these two troublesome pests. Spraying is the best way to apply the barrier around the house. However, granules applied to the soil and lawn in a five-foot band around the houses will control crawling pests.

Spray the outside walls and foundation from sill to soil and about four to six feet of soil next to the foundation. Give cracks and crevices special attention. By spraying the walls or ceiling around outdoor light fixtures, you can kill the insects attracted by the light. Treat along the edges of sidewalks, patios and driveways. If a sprayer isn't available, then a sprinkler will do. For treating window sills and thresholds, a paint brush makes a good applicator.

Read the label on your insecticide before mixing your spray and use the rates recommended. Keep children and pets off treated surfaces until the spray dries. Plant foliage should not be treated with the mixture. However, the bark of trees can be treated without injury.

Fall is a good time to clean up around the garden. Clean and repair all equipment before storing it. Sort through the garden chemicals. Destroy those that have lost their effectiveness. Seal and label any chemicals that can be used again.

It's clean up time for the vegetables and flowers, too. Many plants have completed their life cycle and the debris can be put in a compost pile. Remember, however, that diseased plants should not go in the compost pile.

If you don't have a compost pile, now is a good time to start one. The compost pile can utilize vegetable parings, leaves and weeds. Composting occurs more rapidly during the warm days of spring, summer and early fall. Keep the pile moist and turn it occasionally. Sprinkle a small amount of nitrogen fertilizer over the pile.

Vegetables such as pumpkin, squash and muskmelon should not be thrown in the compost pile unless the seeds are removed, as seeds attract rodents to the area.

Floor Fashions

Barnett Carpets, Inc.

COLOR can be used in so many ways in room decor . . . and most particularly in large areas of color such as room size rugs or wall-to-wall carpeting.

Use color to visually alter the size of problem rooms. The strong hot colors that are "in" right now, such as the family of reds and yellows and rust colors, make a room look smaller and warmer. The colors move toward you. They are also good in dark, sunless rooms.

The cool, pale hues, such as the icy greens called after celery or vermouth, the pale lilacs and ever-popular whites and off-whites, are colors that recede visually. They make mini-rooms loom larger.

While color in carpet can and should be used as a personal fashion expression, avoid going too far toward "fad" colors. They're fine in clothing, but apparel items are not designed to be seen every day over many years. Carpets are. They will outlast the fads of today . . . and you'll be better off without an obsolete color that was briefly modish.

We can help you select the right carpet colors . . . not only because we have a tremendous selection in every shade, but we can also bring color samples to your home for on-the-spot shopping and selection. Come in . . . or give us a call for shop-at-home service.

In-s-i-d-e the Outdoors

by Gary Dollahon

The crisp, fallish mornings we have been experiencing in our part of the state over the last few days have a tendency to make us start looking for those tell-tale signs of autumn.

That is, each day we notice the browning of our lawns. We observe the turning of color of the leaves on our trees, and we look and listen to the skies for migrating waterfowl.

Migrating waterfowl have always held a deep fascination among mankind. Countless reports by early day explorers depict seemingly endless flocks of waterfowl winging their way southward during the early days of fall.

Even at the start of the 20th century, it was reportedly not uncommon to see massive numbers of ducks and geese literally blanketing the sky as they moved toward their traditional wintering grounds. Those who were fortunate enough to observe these awesome flights gave little or no thought to the chance that one day these birds would almost be absent from the fall skies.

Yet, shortly after World War I, the rapid spread of civilizations across the North American continent created its own "black cloud." Conservationists horrified observed that waterfowl populations were plummeting.

It was during this time that the foundation was formed for an organization that would greatly benefit waterfowl in the years to come - that organization being Ducks Unlimited.

In 1929, a group called "More Game Birds in America Foundation" was formed with the intentions of finding the solutions to the waterfowl decline.

An intensive study conducted by this organization concluded that (1) over 65% of the continent's waterfowl begin life in the Canadian Prairie Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba; (2) the irresistible onslaught of civilization, through draining and cultivation, was steadily vanishing the prime breeding grounds; (3) natural droughts and floods were becoming increasingly critical as a limiting factor in waterfowl production.

Their final conclusion was that if the duck and geese population were to be maintained and restored, immediate efforts must begin in the gigantic task of rehabilitating and preserving the primary nesting areas of Canada.

This task was accepted by a group of conservationists that banded together to form Ducks Unlimited (DU). On January 29, 1937 DU was incorporated in the nation's capital as a unique non-profit membership organization, dedicated to the wise conservation of waterfowl. A companion Canadian Corporation was formed as well.

Obviously, DU's task was a big one and problems were many, with the depression in the United States and Canada being one. Nevertheless, the whole-hearted support between United States and Canada governments, conservationists, landowners, and businessmen gave DU a success story to be proud of.

Since DU's first movement, they have expended over 32 million dollars to plan, build, and develop nearly 1300 "duck factories", or projects. Today DU has under lease 2.2 million acres of prime wetland habitat, with a total shoreline measuring over 12,000 miles.

In the 1970's, DU affiliates from Mexico and New Zealand have joined the Canada and United States ranks.

During DU's 41 year old life it has raised a total of over $43 million dollars in contributions from United States and Canada supporters. And, DU is proud of the fact that 80c of every contributed dollar has gone directly to Canada for use in active development programs. DU projects are financed entirely by contributions from supporters and by funds raised from activities sponsored by affiliate chapters.

We have several such chapters in New Mexico and they hold fund raising banquets each year. These banquets include raffles, door prizes, and exclusive auctions on limited editions of art.

Help support your local DU Chapter as they have played a big role in the management of the ducks and geese you will be seeing this fall.

Wilderness Wisdom

with Wayne Calloway

Dear Wayne — A couple of times I've heard reference on the radio to the RARE II issue, and that the federal government wants public input regarding it.

I don't know enough about what it is to understand, let alone comment on it. And I doubt that I am alone. Would you clarify the meaning of RARE II? Albert T., New Mexico

Dear Albert — RARE II is short for Roadless Area Review and Evaluation. It is a study of possible uses of more than 60 million acres of undeveloped land which are a part of the National Forest System. These areas are presently available to the public for a wide variety of outdoor activities, but they contain no roads, permanent structures, or commercial development. No vehicles or machines are permitted. At this point, they are truly wilderness areas.

The object is to determine if these lands can serve multiple purpose roles to the overall benefit of all concerned.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has asked for public input that will help the Forest Service determine the best future use of these undeveloped acres. A final statement on the review will be issued in late December of this year. Public opinion could help determine what this statement will contain.

RARE II and wilderness management pamphlets are available from the Forest Service, P.O. Box 2417, Washington, DC 20013.

Dear Wayne — Judging from catalogs of outdoor suppliers and from magazine ads, today's outdoor enthusiast has a tremendous resource of equipment from which to draw. I don't believe there is a single article of outdoor gear which isn't produced by more than one manufacturer, in some form or other. In some cases the selection is infinite, and prices vary widely.

Is it good practice to stick with a well known brand where possible, even though the price may be substantially higher? Raymond J., California

Dear Raymond — I don't believe it's necessary that you always buy the best, or the most expensive, but it's to your advantage to buy a quality product. In the majority of cases product quality is relative to price. The old story of getting what you pay for. And in this regard, established, reliable brands are good assurance of good quality and service.

Let your conscience be your guide when buying luxury, nonessential items, but a cut rate bargain in clothing and footwear is apt to cost you in comfort and wear.

Dear Wayne — Last year a friend gave me a Canada goose he had bagged in a morning's hunt. It was to be my family's first goose dinner, and it turned out quite well. But what I went through to get it in the oven!

Never having picked a goose before, I held it up with one hand while pulling feathers with the other. I soon realized this wouldn't work, and hung it from a clothesline post, then set to work with both hands. The feathers seemed to grow faster than I could pluck them, and by the time I had finished, the goose had aged considerably. And I was nearly obscured by feathers and down. I then decided I would eat the darn thing for spite.

What secret would enable me to pick a goose in less than a day and a half? Roland T., Virginia

Dear Roland — Persistence and practice. But it never gets to be fun. Some report good results by melting paraffin in a bucket of hot water and then dipping the goose. After it has cooled, the wax bonds the down and feathers together, making for easier removal.

Dear Wayne — I understand members of the American Agricultural Movement (AAM) plan to close their farmland to hunters this season. I'm sure many of these farmers are hunters and I can't understand why they choose to retaliate against other hunters. What do they hope to gain? Alan L., Iowa

Dear Alan — The goal of the AAM is to receive 100 percent parity for their products. The reason for closing their farms to hunting is to gain support from hunters toward their objective. They believe hunters will join the fight so the lands will be reopened to hunting, but there is a belief among others that this act will only serve to alienate the two groups.

It's too early to know what percentage of AAM members will participate, but if it is high, several millions of acres will be closed to hunters.

Dear Wayne — I have often wondered why the males of most birds, waterfowl in particular, are much more brilliantly colored and more beautiful than the females. What might be the reason for this? Ellen J., Louisiana

Dear Ellen — During mating season in the bird world, it is the male's role to woo the female to submission, and he does so with his color and charm.

While nesting, the female's more subtle and drab colors allow her to remain hidden from potential predators. This chore would be much more difficult if she displayed the coloration of her mate.

There is a short period during molting when the male loses his brilliant feathers and takes on an appearance similar to that of the female.

Capitol Comment

by Ernie Mills

Santa Fe — Time to Talk Turkey: Several months ago, when the State's big computer factory, the Department of Automated Data Processing, was cracking at the seams, Governor Jerry Apodaca indicated he was going to consult with both gubernatorial candidates on a "permanent" director for the "Star Trek" agency.

In the meantime, the Chief Executive borrowed Frank Kleinhenz of the Big Duke City as a "loaned executive" to try and set the agency straight.

Kleinhenz filled the bill so well, the job was made permanent — but we've seen no indication that the permanency has been approved by either Demo Bruce King or Republican Joe Skeen . . . and one of the two will be Governor after January 1st.

Every bit of information we've been able to piece together from our "birdies" at DADP indicates Kleinhenz has done an admirable job to date from a management standpoint — but that progress could go down the tube if big question marks remain as to who is going to be boss after January 1st.

Two rumors circulated through the Capitol corridors recently — one that Steve Malnar, former DADP boss wanted to return to the agency, and the second, that Gerald Gingras, another former computer boss wanted to return.

Make no bones about it, this columnist has been more critical of the overemphasis upon computers in State Government than any other reporter around.

Salesmen from the big computer firms have oversold their products in terms of the "magic" they could accomplish — and they're still doing it!

And nobody has taken the proper steps to ensure that the guy-in-the street is being educated to what the computer can do and what it can't do.

Just for the record, several years ago this column suggested the State gather some expertise on computer crime before it committed itself too quickly to the electronic world.

And . . . in case you missed it, the American Civil Liberties Union workshop in the Big Duke City this weekend is looking at computers and privacy.

A major conference at the national level is set for Washington, D. C. on Dec. 13th and 14th on computer technology as an instrument for fraud and abuse control. That confab will be looking at fraud, abuse and error.

Don't kid yourself . . . right now the Automated Data Processing Division probably is in better shape than it has been for five years, but that doesn't mean it's in great shape.

And straightforward members of the division will be the first to admit the overall security at the agency is a long ways from perfect.

Somehow, DADP has become the most sensitive agency in State Government, what the media likes to call the "nerve center."

Between now and January 1st — in fact, between now and election day, if the major gubernatorial candidates don't speak out on their plans for the agency it could have a nervous breakdown.

Whoever gets tabbed for the number one job, whether it is Kleinhenz or someone else, he should have complete freedom to go as far afield as possible to get the number two "computer expert" he needs to put the shop in A number one order.

There was a time political columnists could take delight in itemizing those State employees who drove their State vehicles over the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit, or take pokes at those who abused their travel expenses.

Because, neighbor, the big headlines in the next few years are going to concern computer fraud—if—if we have the expertise to catch it!

One responsibility the Chamber of Commerce owes the Ruidoso/Ruidoso Downs area is promoting the influx of tourists — tourists bearing dollars they spend freely. Therefore, it seems highly inconsistent that the Chamber has not come out in strong support of continuing the Aspencade Motorcycle Convention, an event that produced more than $2 million extra revenue dollars to our communities in a week's time.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:
We of Glenwood School (4th, 5th and 6th grades) think Neyland's article regarding the "Ire of Kristi Perryman" was in very poor taste. It seems to us that he is commending or rewarding poor sportsmanship.

Personally, I can't imagine Kristi acting in such a manner. I knew her two older brothers as very fine athletes and the best of sports.

PUTTING ERA INTO PRACTICE

One of the problems of the equal rights for women movement is that while many people might support it in theory, they also tend to buckle when it gets down to cases.

Female reporters caused quite a stir when they demanded entrance into the locker rooms of football and baseball teams in order to compete with male sportswriters.

Another case currently in the news is the U.S. Navy where there's been a lot of discussion about the role of women and whether they should be sent off to sea duty, sometimes in combat ships.

Many of the wives of sailors are extremely vocal in expressing their objections to having women out there on the wide expanses of the ocean with their men. We're all familiar with what goes on in "Operation Petticoat."

And some of the women sailors who will be sent to sea have described combat duty as less than a marvelous idea. They don't like the reactions of some of the male sailors, the objections of the wives, and, frankly, some of the conditions they will be enduring.

When it gets down to the bottom line, it's darned difficult to find enough personnel to crew the warships.

And if the time ever comes that the shells and missiles start flying, you can bet the women will be right in there beside the men, doing their duty. — Carlsbad Current-Argus

OLD PROMOTER ME

As a promoter, I've never been any great shakes . . . but during Mule-O-Rama I really outdid all past stellar performances at flubbing my dub.

Seems Lynette Sullivan . . . Miss New Mexico State Fair Queen . . . was firmly ensconced on a donkey's back . . . or mule's back . . . some kind of long eared, braying beastie about the size of a shetland pony . . . more or less of the time . . . leading the racing mule hordes forth and back on the track.

So . . . being's she's a right pretty colleen . . . and I had camera and lens . . . and film . . . I set about the pleasant task of taking her picture . . . and all was well . . . to that point.

Seems . . . in getting her name writ down . . . I got as far as "Miss New Mexico" on the sash she was sporting . . . and that's how it came out in The News.

So . . . came Thursday morning . . . last . . . and for a spell I thought it would be my last Thursday . . . I met her daddy . . . right here in Harmony Valley . . . and he happened to peek at a copy of The News with his illustrious daughter's picture on page one . . . and he picked up a copy or three to take back home with him to Truth or Consequences . . . just to prove to his friends and envious neighbors that Lynette IS "Miss New Mexico" . . . through a little bit of hanky-panky promotion engineered by ye cheerful and not too astute editor type fotog.

On the other hand . . . maybe Lynette'll become Miss New Mexico one day . . . and I'll have been the first to have so designated and photographed her.

FOURTH CLASS MAIL

Most people . . . including me . . . aren't overly fond of receiving fourth class mail . . . and if'n the Navajo Community College gets wind of this, they'll probably cease and desist in its use.

Seems they mailed a press release August 11 . . . announcing an exhibition of Current Southwestern Photographs . . . on campus, August 27 . . . touting the outstanding capabilities of one David Allison.

There was only one problem with publishing this news release . . . somehow . . . possibly due to measures employed by the Postal Service in handling fourth class mail . . . it reached my desk about mid-morning October 17.

ON C. BASCOM SLEMP

Unless you're a Virginian . . . preferably one living in Big Stone Gap, Virginia . . . chances are you never heard of the Honorable C. Bascom Slemp . . . and further, it's unlikely that it'd ever matter . . . unless you might be in the position of raising and marketing whole bunches of guayule . . . that's some kind of plant that grows well in the southwest . . . produces latex.

Seems Senator Pete Domenici's bill to promote the growing of guayule in the southwest . . . including New Mexico . . . wasn't making much headway through Congress . . . so who in Washington, D.C., cares about guayule?

Anyhow . . . as the miracles of Congress are performed . . . seems some bickering developed on a Senate Public Works bill benefiting tobacco farmers . . . and one guy got mad at another . . . and things were not boding well for Pete's bill.

Then the Senate's sugar pricing bill surfaced . . . and the tobacco measure got tagged onto it . . . then . . . out of nowhere . . . an amendment designating the federal building in Big Stone Gap, as the C. Bascom Slemp Building . . . being's he'd been a favorite son Congressman from 1903 to 1907 . . . was tacked onto this bill . . . which, by some miracle, still contained Pete's bill . . . and . . . presto! . . . guayule might become about as important to New Mexico as tourists.

No wonder Our Jimmy's having trouble understanding how Congress operates.

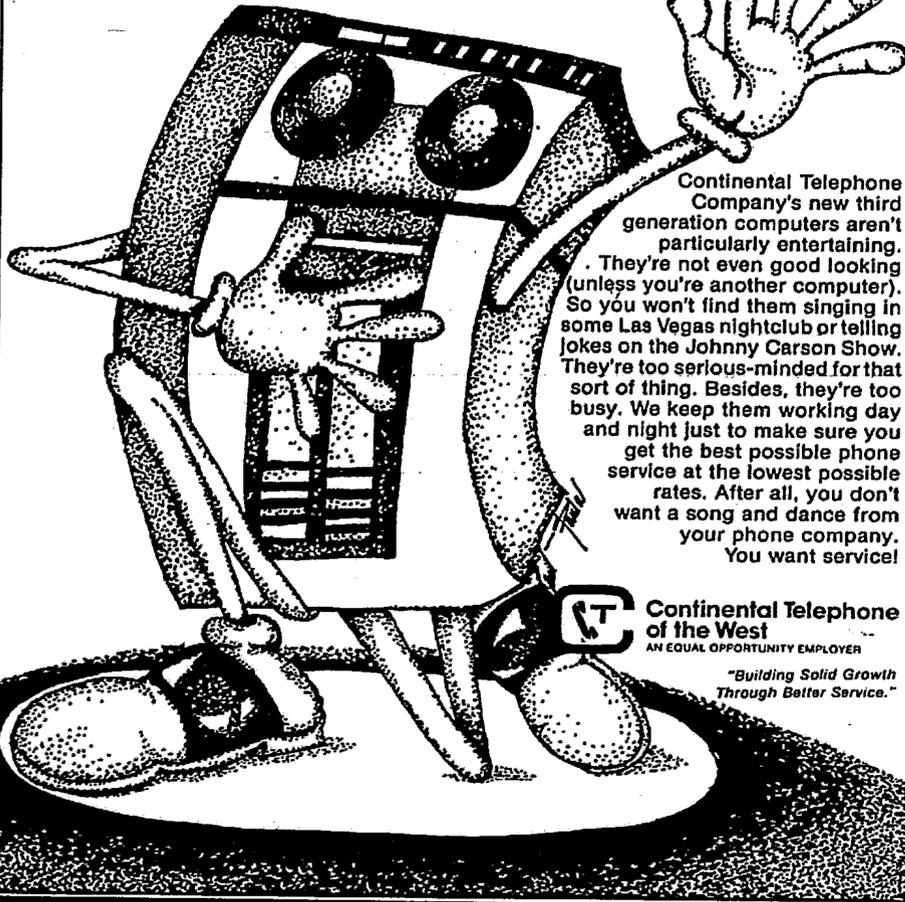

ON BIOLOGY TEACHERS

Biology teachers in high school are a breed apart . . . they imbue eager young minds with the delights of dissecting frogs and learning the secrets about the love life of flowers.

But now, the day of recognition of these geniuses is at hand. The University of New Mexico is actively seeking a high school biology teacher to be named Outstanding Biology Teacher Award recipient . . . and . . . by jinkies . . . the New Mexican one named will receive a binocular microscope valued at $1,000 . . . which said winner'll probably be ecstatic over, while developing a case of the squints.

BRIEF BIT: Think you're frustrated? What about the guy who owned a ton of gold for 27 years . . . and sold his holdings out for $35 an ounce? . . . CD

Continental Telephone Company's new third generation computers aren't particularly entertaining. They're not even good looking (unless you're another computer). So you won't find them singing in some Las Vegas nightclub or telling jokes on the Johnny Carson Show. They're too serious-minded for that sort of thing. Besides, they're too busy. We keep them working day and night just to make sure you get the best possible phone service at the lowest possible rates. After all, you don't want a song and dance from your phone company. You want service!

Jojoba may become New Mexico crop

"Jojoba — will it grow in New Mexico? If so where will it grow and where can I buy some plants? When should I plant them? How much fertilizer will they need? And, most important, how much money can I make."

Darrell Sullivan, a horticultural researcher with New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station, says he averages three telephone calls a month from New Mexicans wanting to know the answers to those questions.

"And right now we just don't have the answers," Sullivan says. But the researcher hopes to correct that situation with a research project designed to find out two things. First, will jojoba grow in New Mexico, and second, what cultural practices will be necessary to grow it in this climate.

"As ridiculous as it sounds," Sullivan says, "New Mexico's climate may prove to be too cold for the desert-loving jojoba. You see, it is reported that jojoba will not tolerate temperatures that fall below 15 degrees Fahrenheit."

Therefore, Sullivan's project, which is funded through a grant from the Four Corners Commission, will evaluate 12 jojoba varieties for winter hardiness.

"This August we planted 12 varieties of jojoba on about a half acre of land at NMSU's Plant Science Research Center," Sullivan says. "Our goal for this year is to evaluate these seedlings for winter hardiness and to see if there is a genetic variability for cold tolerance in any of the varieties.

"If we do find plants having genetic variability for cold tolerance, we will then take cuttings of those plants to produce more plants," the researcher says.

According to Sullivan, jojoba "oil" is actually a colorless, odorless wax that can be used in a wide variety of products: lipstick, varnish, fertilizer, lubricants, furniture polish, candles, chewing gum, mulches and even as browse for livestock and big game animals.

Sounding rather like a panacea for all our ills, jojoba is easily extracted in large quantities from the plant source. Right now there is only one other natural source of this unsaturated liquid, and that's sperm whale oil.

Sperm whale oil is used as a high-pressure lubricant in automotive and tractor transmission fluids, in metal-working oils and for gears and other machine parts requiring extreme pressure properties.

In the late 1960's, sperm whale oil consumption in the United States averaged about 50 to 55 million pounds per year. However, in December of 1970, the United States banned all imports of oil, meat and other products containing sperm oil under the Endangered Species Conservation Act.

According to Sullivan, jojoba's most important use is as a substitute for sperm whale oil. In fact, research now shows that jojoba is a virtual sperm oil duplicate that can probably be used as a sperm oil substitute without requiring major reformulations.

And that's why jojoba's future lies in developing it as a cultivated crop.

Sullivan says that jojoba, which is also called coffeeberry, goatnut, wild-hazel nut and deer nut, grows wild over approximately 100,000 square miles of land in the Sonoran Desert of Arizona, California and Mexico.

Jojoba is a grayish-green bush. Along the Pacific Coast, it may reach 16 feet in height, while in the desert it is a semi-prostrate shrub. It has a natural life span that appears to be more than 100 years and, in some cases, up to 200 years.

Climatically, jojoba plants tolerate desert temperatures that reach summer highs of 110-115 F in the shade and winter lows that plummet to 40 F.

Jojoba is also a drought resistant plant. Only 12 inches of rainfall a year are enough to support large and productive stands of jojoba bushes. Due to its low water requirement, cultivated jojoba would place only a small strain on New Mexico's dwindling water supplies.

In addition to its drought resistance, jojoba also seems very tolerant of saline and alkaline soils. And if all this isn't enough to make jojoba sound like some sort of miracle plant (which it isn't, by the way) then listen to this: jojoba does not appear to be subject to serious insect or disease damage.

In short, Sullivan says, jojoba shows a great deal of promise as a domestic plant. For example, in experiments conducted at the University of California at Riverside and in Israel, researchers have shown that jojoba plants can be cultivated and their yields greatly improved over that of wild plants.

These researchers found that, under cultivation, jojoba will produce an average annual yield of five pound of clean, dry seeds.

These researchers also estimated that a farmer planting jojoba for the first time would face start-up costs of $1,500 per acre on average agricultural land. Farmers starting-up in rough desert terrain could face costs as high as $2,800. In addition, maintenance costs, including harvesting, would be about $100 per acre per year.

The California and Israel research teams also found that jojoba has some limitations. For example, one newly planted seedling requires five years before it will bear adequate amounts of seed for commercialization. Then too, there has been little agronomic selection for commercialization, and the seed available produces highly variable plants.

Another limitation is with yields. Although the research teams obtained an average of five pounds of seed per bush, some bushes yielded only 1.5 pounds of seed.

And finally, researchers are now unable to distinguish between male and female seeds. That means several seeds must be wastefully planted at each plant site to ensure that both plant sexes are obtained so that the plants can adequately pollinate themselves.

Despite these limitations, the researchers feel jojoba has potential as a cultivated crop.

PAPILLON

'Papillon,' starring Steve McQueen and Dustin Hoffman, was adapted from the autobiographical international best-seller by Henri 'Papillon' Charriere and airs on 'The CBS Tuesday Night Movies,' Oct. 24.

The incredible but true story tells of a convict's harrowing 13-year ordeal in the hell of Devil's Island and his repeated attempts to escape.

Papillon's first attempt ends in disaster. Betrayed, he is captured and sentenced to two years in solitary confinement. Emerging from solitary, he immediately tries another escape. This time, Papillon gets as far as Colombia before he is captured.

Upon his release from five years' solitary confinement, Papillon finds his friend Dega now a muttering, broken and demented old man. But Papillon, his thirst for freedom unquenchable, makes new plans to escape—or die in the attempt.

THE GRASS IS ALWAYS GREENER OVER THE SEPTIC TANK

Carol Burnett, Charles Grodin and Alex Rocco star in the comedy-drama special 'The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank,' based on Erma Bombeck's best-selling book of the same title, to be broadcast Wednesday, Oct. 25 on CBS-TV.

It is the story of Dorothy and Jim Benson (Miss Burnett and Grodin), a New York City couple who, after spending years with the furious pace, dirt, noise and hassles of the city, decide to pack up their three kids and move to what they think is the easy life of the suburbs.

They are rudely awakened when they discover that suburban life presents a whole new set of problems and fierce competition. For the first time, they have to deal with crabgrass and fertilizer, the hazards of highway commuting, the house parties featuring plants and plastic goods, the gossip, backbiting and pressures to conform to their neighbors.

Rocco (pictured with Ms. Burnett) portrays Ralph Corliss, a neighbor who takes a more than neighborly interest in Dorothy.

NETWORKS AND STATIONS RESERVE THE RIGHT TO MAKE CHANGES

by Joey Sasso

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT Robert Wagner and Natalie Wood are ecstatic that Charlie's Angels' continued its Nielsen winning streak in its new fall premiere. And if you're wondering why the Wagners should care how that TV show does, it's because the longer Charlie's Angels stays on the air, the richer Bob and Natalie become. The Wagners happen to be partners with Spelling-Goldberg Production in the series. Bob can next be seen as star of the two-hour movie pilot 'Hart to Hart' written by Sidney Sheldon and Natalie will be starring in the remake of 'From Here to Eternity.' Married recently in Martha's Vineyard, actress Kate Jackson of Charlie's Angels is talking about a couple of little angels for her and husband Andy Stevens. "I'd rather not wait too much longer to get started," Kate said maternally but because of the show I'll probably have to wait a few more years. Alice the popular comedy now beginning its third year on TV owes much of its success to Vic Tayback who plays Mel Says series star Linda Lavin. "If it weren't for Vic's steady sense of humor on the set we'd all have gone loony a long time ago."

INSIDE THE TUBE Here's why David Soul of Starsky and Hutch is bankrolling a soccer Little League in Beverly Hills: his ex Karen Carlson told him their son Jon, 7, couldn't get into the game because there weren't enough teams for all the kids who wanted to play. "You get the teams started," David offered, "and I'll write the checks." Can anybody, including Farrah Fawcett-Majors, help winning at the inane commercials she's done for her new shampoo? Some of her best Hollywood friends are asking for tapes for the comedy collection. Suzanne Somers certainly isn't selling herself cheaply. The actress claims the three networks are all after her to star in a special but she's waiting for the million dollar offer before making her decision. The way Phyllis George got estranged husband-producer Bob Evans to show his face at the party she gave for her new TV show 'People' was to twist his arm—practically Evans had turned down her invitation because he felt his presence would start gossip about a reconciliation. "Your absence would cause even more talk!" Phyllis stormed, and convinced him. After all, the tradition of 'friendly' Hollywood divorces must be preserved!

ON THE TV SCENE Anybody who's expecting Liz Taylor to come charging out to Hollywood to break up the romance of her daughter Liza Todd with actor Joseph Bottoms can just keep on waiting. Fact is, Liz introduced the two after working with Joseph in NBC's 'Return Engagement' and she thinks he's the nicest fellow Liza has gone out with. She wants both of them to fly out to the farm in Virginia for an old-fashioned family Thanksgiving with her. Although it's hard to take a Valerie Perrine romance seriously (there have been so many of them), the sexy beauty has been seeing an awful lot of Nels Van Patten. And even his dad Dick Van Patten of 'Eight Is Enough' approves of their pairing. Their plans for the future? So far no talk of marriage although Nels does plan to accompany Valerie to New York and London for openings of 'Superman,' in which she co-stars. Katherine Ross is trying to hurry up the divorce from photographer Tom Lisi so she can hitch up with Sam Elliott, who's no longer, for obvious reasons, hanging around former girlfriend Kate Jackson. Right up to the week Kate eloped with Andy Stevens, Sam was seeing her occasionally.
