The Lincoln county Sheriff's department reported Tuesday that Larry Don Harris, who has been charged with the rape of a Fort Stanton employee March 10, has been returned to the Lincoln County jail. Harris had been undergoing a 60-day diagnostic evaluation at Las Vegas state hospital, where it was determined that he was capable of standing trial for the crime. A trial date has not been set.

Investigation is also continuing in the burning of the Alto-Bonito ambulance May 6. Sheriff Sanchez said the investigation had turned up two suspects, both residents of Roswell. However, no charges have been filed, pending further investigation, he said.

Forest Service meeting on core drilling Friday

A public meeting will be held June 8 at 2 p.m., at the Smokey Bear Ranger District office to hear input on a proposal to conduct core drilling operations in the White Mountain Wilderness and inventoried roadless areas.

Five items will be discussed at the meeting:
—determine the scope of the proposal and significant issues to be addressed;
—identify and eliminate any issues, concerns or opportunities which have been covered by a prior review;

—narrow the scope of the assessment and discuss information which will be included in the report;
—ensure that information included in the report is adequate;
—suggest a reasonable range of alternatives to the proposal.
A detailed description and map of the area involved in the proposal will be available at the meeting and written comments will be accepted until June 15.

Home Builders Association dinner tonight

The Lincoln County Home Builders Association will hold a 6:30 dinner meeting tonight at the Texas Club.
The recently formed group includes all contractors and builders in Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, as well as Lincoln County. Reports on efforts to upgrade the quality of building will be made at tonight's business session.

Race track fined $75 on liquor charge

State Liquor Director Jim Baca announced Wednesday that Ruidoso Downs Race Track was fined $75 on a charge of selling liquor to minors.
The race track was one of 24 licensees in the state that was fined for violations of state liquor laws and regulations. Statewide a total of $3,725 in fines was imposed on the 24 licensees.

Our new extension agent

One of the first tasks facing Barry Herd, 35, as the new Lincoln County extension agent, is a review of a two month accumulation of correspondence and publications which arrived since the vacating of the office by Ralph Dunlap.

Herd, who took office Tuesday, said he expects to be especially busy during the next few months, with summer 4-H activities as well as adult programs.

"I plan to spend lots of time in both areas," he said. "I would like to see increased enrollment and improvement of projects in the 4-H program, while carrying on with the adult program."

Summer adult programs will include assisting county residents with horticulture problems with lawns, trees and other vegetation, he said.

The annual county 4-H contest has been scheduled for June 19, probably headquartered at the County Fair Building in Capitan. During that contest, junior teams will be chosen to attend the June 27 District 4-H competition in Hobbs. Senior participants will also be chosen, to attend the state conference in Las Cruces in July.

The new agent will also be attending a sheep tour to be held in San Angelo, Texas June 13-15. Because Lincoln County is a major sheep producing area, Herd said he hoped to gain valuable information which could be applied here to improve production.

Herd was born and raised in the Silver City area, graduating from Cobre High School. He attended New Mexico State University from 1971 to 1974, earning bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural extension education.

He has five years experience in the field, having served as county 4-H agent for both Lea and San Juan counties. Herd, his wife Jessie, son Troy, 13, and daughter Tracy, 11, are making their home in Capitan.

Our new county manager

Truman "Bill" Billingsley, 56, who took office June 4 as Lincoln County manager, said this week he is pleased to be here in one of the prettiest parts of the country, and he looks forward to seeing the area continue to grow, preferably "in a very orderly manner."

In his first week in office, Billingsley is "putting the finishing touches" on the county budget. Final approval and submission of the budget is scheduled for the next county commission meeting, Tuesday, June 12.

"My basic function," Billingsley said, "will be to provide administrative support to the commissioners. I serve at their pleasure."

The new manager expects to make his home in Carrizozo, and will be joined there next week by his wife, Margaret Cleo. The Billingsleys have one daughter, who works as revenue officer with the United States Treasury Department in Roswell. Billingsley was born near Beeville, Texas and joined the military service at a young age in World War II. He was educated at Arkansas Polytechnic College, majoring in history and political science. He served 28 years active duty with the United States Air Force.

He has held numerous administrative posts with the Air Force and the state of Florida as chief of procurement and purchasing director.

Although he was familiar with the Lincoln County area from vacations spent here in past years, Billingsley said as of last week, he "didn't know a soul here." But he added that since his arrival he had already met "a lot of nice people."

Of his new position, he said, "We have many challenges facing us, and many opportunities to serve the public of Lincoln County."

Covered wagon sojourner visits Ruidoso

BY GWYNETH JONES
Staff Writer/Photographer
"Everyone is meant to do something, and this is what I was meant to do—for now."

It's a simple explanation for a simple life (though some would call it a hard life) being led by Jean LeMay of Quebec, Canada. LeMay rolled into Ruidoso last week in a horse-drawn covered wagon, which he constructed from a hay rack, wagon parts and saplings bent to form the arches which support his canvas roof.

After traveling "1,000 miles in Texas," almost all of which was flat, LeMay was enjoying the mountain scenery. He had hoped to catch a close-up glimpse of Sierra Blanca, which he had seen from a distance, but the peak was obscured by rain clouds.

One year and 4,000 miles into his journey, the traveler, wagon and animals seemed to have fared well. The small sturdy horses, with palomino-like coloring, are Norwegian Fjord horses, LeMay said, originally bred in that rugged country for their stamina.

Traveling about 20 to 30 miles a day, LeMay is careful to see that the horses receive adequate rest and feed, camping nightly in grassy areas to allow them to graze.

Because concrete pavement takes a toll on standard horseshoes, the shoes are equipped with special tips of hard metal. Shoeling is necessary about every 1,500 miles, LeMay said.

Maintenance of the wagon is a more frequent necessity. The axles have to be greased every two or three days. The red painted wheels themselves have not been a problem, thanks to a layer of thick rubber which LeMay applied to the wooden surface.

The fourth member of the entourage is a brown dog of mixed ancestry which joined LeMay in Texas. "He's a good dog for me," LeMay said. "Without benefit of any training from his new traveling companion, the dog walks along beside the wagon and barks protectively at passersby who venture too close to the camp at night."

Why did he take to the open road? LeMay said he developed a taste for travel when he and a group of musician friends made a tour of his native country.

He found that travel was more to his liking than most jobs available to him and since he had "no family, no children," he felt free to leave.

As to his choice of the wagon as a mode of transportation, he said, "It's not that I'm old-fashioned or don't know about modern things." He admitted to being a former "motorcycle freak" and "a good driver—a fast driver."

His views on those faster-moving vehicles have changed during his lengthy journey. His main objection to motorcycles now—an opinion seemingly shared by the dog—is their noise.

He also has had some difficulty comprehending how people can fully appreciate the countryside when passing through it at a high rate of speed.

The "American way of life," as observed by LeMay, is also a puzzle. "People drive to work, drive home and just turn on the TV. They walk maybe a quarter-mile a day. Then on the weekends, they go to the country." He shook his head and tried unsuccessfully to think of an English word to describe what he saw as a paradoxical situation. Still, he doesn't condemn that kind of life. "It's a pity I feel for them," he said.

Although people often have "helped him out" with money and even a citizen's band radio powered by an automobile battery, LeMay said he doesn't need much money and his outdoor life keeps him in good physical condition.

Despite his unusual lifestyle, LeMay doesn't see himself as a "drop-out" from society.

"I've been living a country life for a long time, living on the road, but I'm not out of society. I'm right in the middle of it." People often stop to talk to him, and he has been photographed "probably thousands of times," he said. Without exception, he added, those who have stopped have been friendly to him.

The speedier travelers who pass him by usually "smile and wave" he said, or make gestures "like I'm crazy." Others seem to ignore the covered wagon, perhaps "scratch their head" and drive on in apparent concentration on the road ahead.

For those who do stop to question him, LeMay is always willing to discuss his pilgrimage, for as long as they wish. "I never say goodbye first," he said.

Accustomed as he is to the stares and questions, he has encountered some people whose reactions still surprise him. "I guess they envy me or admire me," he said, "I don't know why."

SOUGHT SUDDERTH CROSSINGS COSTLY

Traffic controls unlikely

BY CHARLOTTE FELLERS
Staff Writer/Photographer
Ruidoso's heavy traffic, pedestrian crossings, off street parking — all problems which have been evaded but not avoided by local businesses — were discussed by retail merchants and officials from the New Mexico Highway Department Monday.

The Retail Merchants Committee of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce met with two men from the state, Ralph Smith and Hank Smith, to explore the possibilities of providing pedestrian crossings or traffic controls in midtown Ruidoso.

Ralph Smith, in charge of several highway department functions in District Two, which includes Ruidoso, said the main problem all along has been lack of planning.

He said planning for growth should have taken place ten years ago, but since it didn't, "we have taken what was meant to be a four lane highway and turned it into four narrow lanes and two narrow parking lanes, which is not a good situation." Smith was talking about the main lifeline through Ruidoso, Sudderth Drive.

Smith said some traffic has been channeled to Gavilan Canyon Road since it was repaved, but heavy summer traffic will probably not lessen much through the center of town.

The idea of lowering the speed limits through the main business sections was ruled out by Smith. "Lowering the speed limit works as long as there's a patrolman in sight to monitor speed; as soon as he's gone, the speed is determined solely by drivers." Smith said posting lower speed limits would do little to solve Ruidoso's problem.

Overhead crosswalks were suggested by the committee, but Smith said, while these would be a safe solution, they would also be expensive. Construction of only one overhead crosswalk, excluding possible land purchases and equipment to accommodate handicapped people, is "around $30,000 right now, and going up,"

Smith said. With a mechanical device for handicapped users, the cost would be much higher, he said.

"In the case of Ruidoso, because of the nature of the floating population, it would work fine as long as the vandalism factor is diminished," Smith said. He said some larger cities have experienced unfortunate accidents from people who throw things from the crosswalks onto cars as they pass under the crosswalks.

"It might be the most logical, most viable solution here," Smith said. "Sooner or later, there's going to be a terrible accident if we don't do something."

Painting crosswalks was an alternative which showed the most promise for a solution, but results may not be seen for several months. According to Smith, painting crosswalks and warning signs leading up to them costs about $500 per crosswalk, and Smith said the state highway department does not have funds for such an expense. Smith said the village has authority to paint crosswalks where needed on state highways, but must conform to state standards.

He said traffic control lights can be justified only if a community can prove that 600 or more vehicles per hour and more than 150 people per hour, eight hours straight, use a specific intersection.

"The only way to prove that is paint the crosswalks and monitor the number of people using them," Smith said.

The committee will recommend that the Village of Ruidoso make an official request to the state highway department to make a complete traffic study as a follow-up to the one made before the two new traffic lights were installed.

The committee will also ask the village to foot the bill for painting at least one crosswalk, using village crews, so the effects of the crosswalk can be observed through the busy racing season.

Hank Smith said little during the meeting, but spoke of a problem business people will face in the future if something isn't done now.

"It's inevitable that someone will come in eventually to build a huge shopping mall with lots of parking and jeopardize the downtown business trade," Smith said. He recommended that downtown businesses start setting aside adequate parking which is also safe. "You should also start planning for the future; if you don't, ten years from now you'll have a real mess," Smith said.

Rancher found jets, pilots' bodies

United States Air Force Investigators Wednesday recovered the bodies of two men from the wreckage of two air force jets which had been missing since April 29. The bodies were tentatively identified as those of Captain Michael C. Humphries 29, Dallas, Texas, and Captain Thomas S. Pollock, 26, Hermiston, Oregon.

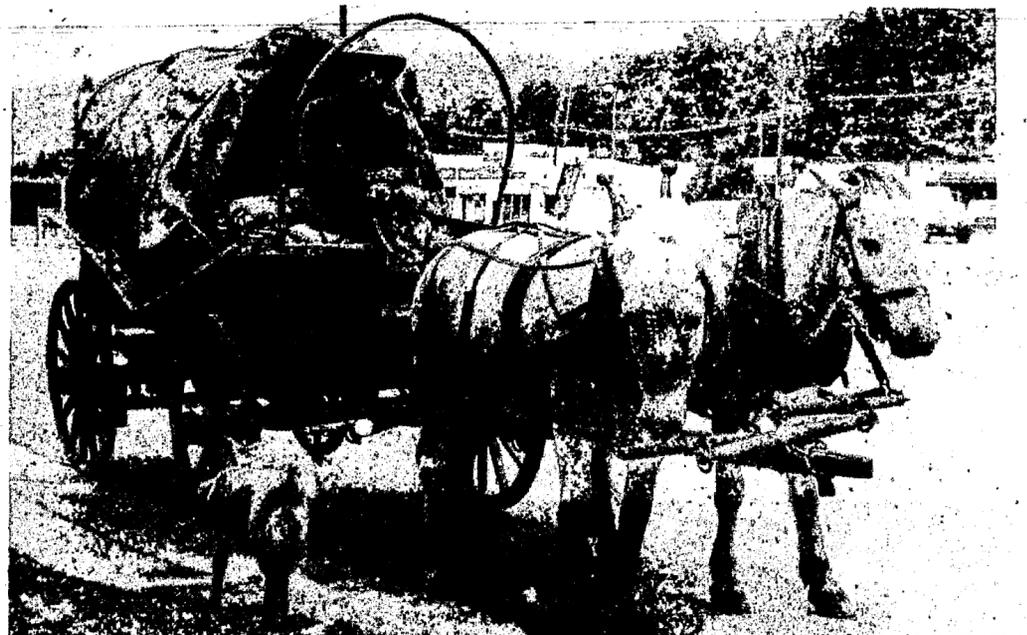

The wreck site had been discovered Tuesday evening by rancher Frank Dean northwest of Carrizozo and the Valley of Fires lava flow.

Both pilots had been participating in an air combat training mission toward Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo when they lost contact with ground crews. Both had been assigned to the 65th Fighter Weapons Squadron at Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada.

Officials said there were two separate indentions where the planes apparently hit the ground at a high rate of speed.

The debris from the planes will be returned to Holloman for further investigation to determine the cause of the crashes.

Housing styles for every taste

Cape Cod... cooperative... townhouse... single-family home... condominium... apartment... bi-level...

With such an array of housing types and ownership forms available, first-time home buyers can become confused.

Today, there is a housing alternative for almost every life style. Whether married or single, childless or raising an army, handy or helpless, there is an ownership form and housing type to fit almost anyone's needs.

As the National Association of Realtors state, confusion about these alternatives often arises over whether the term refers to ownership or design. The term condominium is a good example; many people think it refers to a type of structure.

Not so. Condominium refers to a form of ownership. When a person buys a condominium, he or she has fee title to the unit lived in, plus a share in ownership of common areas available to all occupants in the development. Campgrounds, mobile home developments and office buildings, all can be condominiums.

Following is a list of definitions provided by the Ruidoso Realtors to help prospective home buyers better understand housing and ownership terms.

Some of the alternatives available today are:

Single-family home - This is what many buyers have in mind when looking for a home. It's the American dream; you own a home and the land it sits on. You have your own mortgage, pay property taxes and arrange for your own maintenance.

Cooperative - A buyer owns a share in a building, which entitles him or her to use, rent or sell a specific living unit within the building.

In a co-op, all owners share mortgage payments, taxes and building main-

Gas situation generally good throughout state

Gas you ask? In New Mexico?

Allocations in May were about 60 percent of what they were a year ago; in June, they'll be about 95 percent.

There haven't been any lines at gas stations anywhere in the state, and there've been few closings on Sundays. Per gallon prices at self-serve pumps May 31 were averaging about 71c for diesel, 78c for regular, 83c for unleaded and 88c for premium.

There are 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week stations in every major community along Interstates 40, 25 (except Las Vegas) and 10; U. S. Highway 285 and State Highway 44; and in Clayton and Clovis. In other communities, stations generally have been open from 5 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Anyone having specific questions on gasoline availability and travel in New Mexico can call first from out-of-state and then from in-state, toll-free. The out-of-state number is 800-543-5877; the in-state number is 800-432-4269.

Both toll-free numbers operate from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., MST, Monday through Friday.

tenance. Owners also pay a monthly charge for their own units. Also, if one owner defaults on paying the mortgage or taxes, the other owners must pay their portion of the amount in default.

Condominium - No responsibility is shared for mortgage payments of other units. Condominium owners make separate payments to cover services used by the unit, such as gas and electricity, and also pay share of the general maintenance and operating expenses of the common property. Condominium residents become members of an owner's association, and are entitled to a vote on matters of management as specified in the condominium documents.

Timesharing - This relatively new form of ownership is most popular in the second or vacation home market. Two or more persons own a living unit, with each person paying proportionately for the amount of time he or she uses the unit. Owners pay property taxes and can deduct interest and taxes from their income taxes, pro rata.

There are many variations of housing types, but they usually fall into three broad categories:

Single-family detached - This is the house on its own lot for just one family. It can take many forms: Cape Cod, bi-level, ranch or colonial. The single-family detached home, as its name implies, is not connected to any other housing unit or structure.

Townhouse - This is a single-family residence connected by a common wall to another residence of the same type. Townhouses usually are built in groups or rows of two to eight.

Apartment - This is a single-family unit within a building containing two or more such units. An apartment building can be as small as a two-flat or as large as a high-rise.

Kochia possible future feed crop

Kochia, often referred to as the poor man's alfalfa, may just turn out to be the cattle and sheep feed of the future.

"Particularly since kochia has an expected production rate of about 600 pounds of dry matter per acre inch of water used," Dr. Dale Fuehring, a researcher with New Mexico State University's Plains Branch Experiment Station, Clovis, said.

"Our 1978 test results show kochia is a very high yielding, water efficient, self-seeding forage crop that has no serious disease or insect problems," the researcher said. "However, there is no free lunch. Nutrient requirements are high and farmers wanting high returns will need to pay strict attention to the amount of fertilizer they apply to kochia."

During the past year, Fuehring has conducted both field and greenhouse studies to determine if kochia can be used as grazing or as hay with either a dryland or a limited irrigation situation. "Kochia will make five tons per acre or so under regular rainfall," Fuehring said. He adds that "we got 4,000 to 5,000 pounds on a May cutting last year and that was just in a dryland pasture situation."

Fuehring says four cuttings were made in the 1978 trials, and "we got 23,000 pounds of dry matter from three irrigations and 250 pounds of nitrogen per acre." He also found that three to four cuttings or grazing cycles are about right. In addition to his own research, Fuehring says that researchers in South Dakota got yields in excess of five tons to the acre.

At the same time researchers working on an experiment station located north of Amarillo, Texas grew kochia as a dryland crop. The stand received 12 inches of rainfall from November through July, and the volunteer stand contained about 16 plants per square foot.

When the first clippings were made May 29, the kochia was 17.5 inches and yielded 3,147 pounds of dry matter per acre. They also registered a 25 percent protein content.

When the second clippings were taken June 20, the plants were 34.4 inches tall and yielded 7,724 pounds per acre. This time the protein content was 17 percent.

When the researchers took a third cutting July 15, the plants were 52.6 inches high and yielded 10,081 pounds, which had a 15.2 percent protein content.

In yet another study conducted west of Amarillo, researchers studied kochia during a 12 month period. Those researchers found that grain sorghum produced 6,100 pounds of dry matter; corn, 6,600 pounds; and kochia 4,900 pounds. Each of these crops received only a pro-watering.

In addition to its high yields, kochia also grows early, usually coming up before other weeds. "Once it gets started," Fuehring says, "kochia is so competitive for water that nothing can get in and grow."

Those are impressive figures, but you skeptics might ask, what happens when kochia is used for pasturing. According to Fuehring, one farmer near Clovis reported pasturing 1,600 head of lambs on 140 acres of kochia in wheat stubble. He pastured those lambs between July and October; he got 200 to 250 pounds of gain per acre.

There are, of course, some problems. "Because kochia is not a legume which can make its own nitrogen, farmers must add nitrogen, especially when hay is removed," Fuehring said.

"One of the largest problems with raising kochia," Fuehring says, "involves matching the nitrogen fertilizer application to the yield potential and to the protein level desired. Because kochia is a high protein source, it requires 200-250 pounds of nitrogen per acre."

And that's where the potential problem comes in. If too much nitrogen is applied at one time it's possible that toxic levels of nitrate may accumulate.

Another problem centers on kochia's classification. Although it was brought to the Southwest as a decorative plant, it soon acquired the reputation of being a poisonous plant.

"Kochia's toxicity probably may depend on the soil and the water it is grown in," Fuehring said.

In fact, Fuehring and other researchers think kochia's toxicity is caused by growing it in salty soil or with saline water. They theorize that kochia makes oxalate, an acid.

Large amounts of oxalate in an animal's total diet causes a severe calcium deficiency. That deficiency affects an animal's nervous system, reduces blood clotting and causes acute kidney infections.

Another problem centers on kochia's seed production.

"We think that properly-managed kochia will reseed itself," Fuehring said, citing a research report that showed that kochia produced seed yields up to 1,600 to 2,000 pounds per acre. However, getting that seed may be a problem, at least for a while.

Despite these potential problems, Fuehring is enthusiastic about kochia. "It does seem to have considerable genetic variability," he said. "Thus, breeding for resistance, improved quality or high yields is probably possible."

Fuehring will continue his tests on kochia during the next two years. If kochia shows promise, he hopes to continue his tests for several more years.

Avalanches And Blizzards Don't Stop Mail

Neither rain nor sleet nor train wrecks and avalanches have kept Elbert Despain from delivering the mail to Alta, Utah for the past 56 years.

Since 1922, the 80-year-old Despain has made more than 17,000 trips up Little Cottonwood Canyon and has seen Alta change from a bustling mining town into one of the most popular ski resorts in the country.

When Despain started delivering the mail, there were still a dozen mines operating around Alta. The only way up the canyon back then was by horse-drawn passengers froze—I had to threaten them with a crow bar."

They finally jumped but were all seriously hurt. One of the passengers later died of gangrene which resulted from the amputation of a leg. Despain escaped with scrapes and bruises. Since then, Despain has used cars and four-wheel drive vehicles to deliver the mail.

Avalanches are another danger during the long Utah winters. Despain has been trapped dozens of times and even had the back end of his car pushed off the road by one slide.

"I've been scared so many times going up that canyon I can't remember them all," Despain said.

Despain was born near the mouth of Little Cottonwood Canyon and has lived there all his life. He picks up the mail at the Sandy, Utah post office and spends about half a day making his run up the canyon.

"When I drive up, people gather around," Despain said. "I'd get done a lot sooner if I didn't talk so much."

Despain's contract with the postal service expires in July and he's not certain he'll continue.

"I'm already what you might call semi-retired," Despain said, "but I don't know if I'm ready to give up working altogether. I'd really miss it."

recent hearings by the House Select Committee on Aging revealed that a lengthy probe by the committee's staff found that many older persons are paying $1 billion annually for so-called "Medi-gap" insurance policies they do not need or may not be able to collect on.

Around 15 million of the 23 million Americans eligible for Medicare purchase supplementary insurance policies without realizing that in many cases claims will not be honored on more than one policy, a stipulation frequently overlooked in the fine print.

Committee Chairman Claude Pepper said the investigation found that some older persons have bought three, four, five and sometimes as many as 30 different health insurance policies, even though, according to Pepper, "they generally contain a clause saying that only one policy will pay."

As a result of the committee investigation, the Health Insurance Association of America has formed a task force to look into the problems the committee uncovered.

His Business Is Helping Others

Seventy-one year old Roy E. "Friday" Fitzgerald of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, has better things to do with his time than retire.

At 6:30 each morning the senior vice president can be found at his desk at the Fidelity Bank, answering his morning mail with handwritten letters.

"Writing my own letters is something I've always believed in," Fitzgerald told a writer from the National Council on the Aging. "It gives them a personal touch, and people like that."

Of course, answering his own letters is only one of the many activities that fills Fitzgerald's day.

After about two hours of writing, his desk is cleared and he is ready to do what he knows best — dealing with people.

gerald's business. Through experience he has learned the importance of getting to know people well—in business, in friendships, in casual meetings. He brings people together who share common interests and assists them in decision making.

"I find it challenging and satisfying to recognize an individual's potential and, if possible, to further his or her development by providing the opportunities," Fitzgerald said.

"Friday" Fitzgerald's organizational and leadership talents have not only benefited his business tremendously, but have extended to outside activities.

In an effort to help young people — just as he was helped as a youngster during the Depression — Fitzgerald took a leading role in organizing the Fellowship of Christian Athletes as well as the first four Cerebral Palsy telethons in the area. He is also the past president of the state's Amateur Athletic Union and first national chairman of the Junior Olympics Program. Fitzgerald's lifelong commitment to helping others is based on one simple philosophy. "I believe there is only one investment that is really sound, and that is friends," said Fitzgerald. "I feel that I'm one of the richest men — not financially, but because I'm rich with friends. I'm going to do all I can to help others share in those riches."

HIGH BLOOD pressure, a serious, chronic disease, has no symptoms to warn of its presence.

Unfortunately, some people with high blood pressure think their blood pressure is up only when they suffer from headaches, dizziness or tension. They make the mistake of taking their medication only when such "symptoms" appear.

The best advice for controlling high blood pressure is to have it checked regularly and to follow the doctor's advice about medication.

ELKS MEMBERS CONGRATULATED Debbie Frey, recipient of the Yolanda Manley Pierson scholarship for nurses' training, administered by the Ruidoso Elks Lodge, Tuesday evening following her graduation as a Practical Nurse from Eastern New Mexico University, Roswell. From the left, Ruidoso Elks present included J.

C. Hughes, trustee; Fred Hughston, trustee; Rich Seeley, Past Exalted Ruler and secretary; Frey; Bill Taylor, Past Exalted Ruler and scholarship chairman; Earl Phillips, vice president of the New Mexico Elks Association, Roswell; Bill Budens, Exalted Ruler and Van White, scholarship committee.

Debbie Frey graduate practical nurse under Elks' scholarship

Ruidoso Elks Lodge officers and members Tuesday evening attended graduation ceremonies for Debbie Frey, recipient of the Yolanda Manley Pierson memorial nursing scholarship, at Eastern New Mexico University (ENMU), Roswell.

Under the terms of the scholarship, administered by the Ruidoso Elks Lodge, all of Frey's expenses for the two year course in practical nursing was paid for. She applied for, and received, the scholarship while employed at Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital as a nursing assistant.

The Ruidoso Elks will continue her scholarship for one more year at ENMU enabling her to receive an associate degree as a Registered Nurse (RN) in the spring of 1980. She is presently employed at St. Mary's Hospital, as a Graduate Practical Nurse and will take her licensing examination next October.

She will, after receiving her RN, return to Ruidoso to be employed at the local hospital, a stipulation contained in the scholarship regulations. "I know there'll eventually be an opening," she said, "and I do want to return to Ruidoso to live and work."

Following her graduation as a RN next spring, she'll continue to work at St. Mary's Hospital until there is an opening at Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital.

"All of us in the Ruidoso Elks Lodge are very proud of Debbie's scholastic achievements and her dedication to nursing," scholarship chairman Bill Taylor said. "We know, when she returns to Ruidoso, she will be a credit to her profession and contribute much to the advancement of our community as she pursues her nursing career."

Of Frey's graduation, Earl Phillips, Roswell, vice president of the New Mexico Elks Association, said, "The Ruidoso Elks can be very proud of Debbie and I am especially impressed with her accomplishments in school. This program is one example of one of Elkdom's primary goals, to assist deserving young people in furthering their education in professional fields. Following through with Debbie's education until she is a RN is an outstanding example of the highest traditions of Elkdom."

Public awareness plan on cancer begins Friday

The East Lincoln Chapter of the American Cancer Society (ACS), in conjunction with the Ruidoso Jaycees, will sponsor public awareness days beginning Friday.

Pamphlets detailing the warning signals of cancer in both men and women and brochures describing the research programs sponsored by the ACS will be distributed in parking lots around the village.

The public awareness days will lead into the local cancer crusade, beginning June 15 and lasting two weeks.

"We hope to reach our goal of $2,300 several times over," Guin Stone, president of the local organization said. "Through the public awareness campaign, we hope to point out the importance of supporting the fund drive."

Witnesses to Tucson meeting

Forty-five members of Jehovah's Witnesses of Ruidoso will attend the "Living Hope" convention in Tucson, Arizona June 14-17, John Fuchs, spokesman for the local congregation, has announced.

The Tucson meeting is one of a series of more than 90 district conventions being sponsored this summer by The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York and will attract, Fuchs said, "950,000 people in more than 60 cities in the United States."

Sessions are planned for all age groups and all meetings are open to the public.

Summer immunization of children recommended

"Get your child immunized now before school starts again", advises the Health Services Division of the Health and Environment Department.

Many parents wait until shortly before school begins to have their child immunized.

"If parents bring their children in between now and July, they will relieve the pressure in August, and they will receive service faster", said Juan Lopez, Chief of the Division's Field Services Bureau.

The high level of immunization in New Mexico has resulted in a very low rate of communicable disease among school children according to Dr. Jonathan Mann, Chief of the Disease Prevention Bureau.

"During the 1978-79 school year, there were only 19 cases of measles, 15 of which occurred in the Silver City area, and 2 cases of rubella. There were no cases of diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, or polio", Mann said.

State law requires that children be immunized before entering school.

For further information and service, contact your family physician or the Health Services Field Offices nearest you.

Help offered to combat the alcoholic's problems

BY GWYNETH JONES
 Staff Writer

Like other chronic diseases, alcoholism can, in time, wreak havoc on the physical condition of its victims. Unlike some other diseases, however, its destructive powers are not limited to the addicted person, but may extend to the family and co-workers, who suffer from financial problems and the psychological strain of dealing with the alcoholic.

An effective treatment program for alcoholism must encompass all these areas, according to Paul Gallegos, alcoholism and outreach counselor at the Counseling Center, Four Seasons Mall, Ruidoso.

Gallegos said his clients are referred by spouses, families and friends of alcoholics, as well as law enforcement agencies, judges and probation officials.

After a referral, Gallegos will try to arrange a meeting with the person, either at the center or the client's home. Most of his clients, especially during the first visit or visits, are locked into what the counselor calls the "denial stage" of the disease.

In this stage, the alcoholic realizes he has a problem, as does everyone around him, but because he "doesn't want to stop drinking," he refuses to do anything about it, Gallegos said.

"I can quit any time I want to," is a common refrain of alcoholics in the "denial stage" he said. "In the meantime," he added, "he's losing his job, getting picked up for DWI (driving while intoxicated) and his family is facing the financial problems and mental strain of trying to deal with the problem."

Spouses will often enter into "game-playing" with the alcoholic, Gallegos added. Threats are made but not carried out. The wife tells the husband she will divorce him unless he stops drinking, Gallegos said.

But if the husband has heard the threat made before (perhaps for years) he may disregard it. On the other hand, Gallegos said, if the wife "puts her foot down and follows through (with the threat), it may force him to make a decision about his drinking. Either he wants to be responsible for his family or he wants to drink."

That doesn't mean, he added, that the chronic alcoholic will "become an ideal father overnight, but if there is any love left between the spouses," such action will sometimes "make him stop and think about it," and perhaps "reach a turning point" in his illness, Gallegos said.

If that turning point results in a decision to seek counseling, help is available. In some cases, Gallegos refers clients to structured alcoholism treatment programs available in Carlsbad (20 days) or Roswell (14 days). Basically a "drying out period," Gallegos said the programs also involve detoxification or medication to prevent withdrawal symptoms, which otherwise might include hallucinations or "DTs", delirium tremens.

Working with the patient's family during his absence for treatment is an important factor in the success of the programs, Gallegos said. The family must receive information on alcoholism which will prepare them for the mental and physical state of the returning alcoholic.

Without the informed support of the other family members, the alcoholic may "use them as an excuse to start drinking again." As an example, Gallegos cited the case in which the family nags at the alcoholic for being "grouchy" or "nervous". They may go so far as to make statements like, "You sure are grouchy; I liked you better when you were drinking."

Gallegos often suggests family involvement in Alanon or Alateen, so they will be able to help the returning family member. The Carlsbad and Roswell programs also operate on an Alcoholics Anonymous modality, he said.

"If the family expects the addicted person to go to the hospital (program) and come back cured, they will be sadly disappointed," Gallegos added. "There is no cure — there is only treatment."

In addition to individual counseling for the addicted person, the family may be asked to attend some of the local counseling sessions.

Gallegos had worked in the field of alcoholism treatment for almost five years, with Southwest Mental Health, the Otero County Council on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and Lincoln County prior to the opening of the Counseling Centers in Ruidoso and Carrizozo in February. His schedule is as follows: Monday through Friday mornings, Ruidoso; Monday and Friday afternoons, Carrizozo; Tuesday afternoons, the Captain/Fort Stanton area; Wednesday afternoons, Hondo Valley area; Thursday afternoons, Ruidoso.

Appointments or referrals may be made by calling 257-5038 in Ruidoso or 648-2188 in Carrizozo.

The Ruidoso Hospital Auxiliary met Wednesday at a luncheon to install new officers, award hours pins and hold a business meeting.

Kimberly Yoder, the sole applicant for a scholarship sponsored by the Auxiliary, was the recipient of a $500 scholarship which she will apply toward her goal of becoming a surgeon.

The group decided to open a thrift shop for three months' trial basis in the building located next door to the midtown Mini Mart. Rent will be nominal and the women will sell items leftover from garage sales held during the year.

An annual report was submitted by outgoing president Nellie Vickers, who cited several highlights of the year. The Auxiliary grew to include 92 members, five life members and donated 10,227 hours of time in and out of the hospital.

An escort service and aid in disaster service were added to the Auxiliary's duties and the cancer screening clinic, using many volunteers, screened 603 Ruidosians during the first year of operation.

Among the items purchased for the hospital were a blood gas analyzer, therapy department wheelchair, heart monitor unit, special beds and a refrigerator for the Pink Shop in the hospital. Total cost of these items was more than $11,000.

The Auxiliary gave hours pins to ten women. Receiving pins for working at least 100 hours were Gwen Caughan, Elvera Cooper, Joy Cehle and Lorraine Wormley; 1,000 hours, Bernice Woods; 1,500 hours, Jodie Keys; 2,000 hours, Nellie Vickers, Gladys Berger, Peg Nobles; 2,500 hours, Mabel Johnson and Dottie Quaid.

New officers for the upcoming year include Mabel Johnson, president; Ellen Miller, president-elect; Liz Monro, vice president; Dottie Quaid, secretary; and Lorene Ross, treasurer. Pins were presented to new officers by Ruby Carver and Vickers read duties of each office.

Thinkin in Lincoln

Know Before You Mow: Grass has a way of growing, whether you want it to or not. It seems that the only way to keep your lawn from looking like a jungle is to keep mowing those blades down.

The most powerful weapon in the homeowner's arsenal for this type of task is the power mower, or for the bigger objective, the lawn tractor. The trick is not to become a casualty yourself in the unending war against the green menace. Underwriters Laboratories and your local County Extension Service recommend the following guidelines for this year's campaign.

— Know how to operate the mower before starting it. Read the instruction manual.

— Wear proper clothing. Safety-toe shoes are advisable.

— Fill the gas tank outdoors with a funnel away from possible ignition sources. Replace the gas cap firmly.

— Check the lawn and remove any obstacles that could be thrown by the mower.

— Keep other people out of mowing area.

— Never cut grass when it is wet, or there is not enough light.

— Be sure the mower is on level ground, disengage all clutches, and stand to one side before starting. Keep hands and feet away from the blade area.

— Do not walk in front of the mower's discharge chute while motor is running.

— If your mower is self-propelled, it was designed to go at a certain speed. Do not force it to mow faster than that speed.

— Make sure all the guards are in place while mowing. Keep blades sharpened.

— If mowing on an incline with a walk-behind mower, mow across the incline — never up and down. If using a lawn tractor do the opposite, mow up and down to prevent the tractor from tipping on its side and pinning you underneath.

— Lay out the power cord of an electric mower carefully to avoid cutting it with blades. In addition, mow away from the electric outlet so that you will not be constantly crossing the cord and having to move it.

— Never leave your mower running unattended. Shut off and disconnect the spark wire or power cord. This should be done whenever you are cleaning or adjusting the mower.

— Store gasoline in a UL Listed safety storage can.

— Never yank electric power mower cords from the outlet. Always use the proper UL Listed extension cord for use with the mower.

— Always keep mower in top operating condition.

— If you should hit a foreign object, UL engineers advise to take the following steps:

1. Cut off the power. If an electric mower, disconnect.

2. Inspect the mower for damage.

3. Have the damage repaired before restarting the mower.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

Golda A. Towers
Our prayers go up for the friends and loved ones of Golda Towers who was called home by Our Lord on Saturday, June second. Mrs. Towers was born April 5, 1896 in Shelby County, Illinois. She lived here among us for twenty-four happy years. I remember many pleasant times spent at the restaurant she and her husband, Jack, owned in Ruidoso Downs. Her sister, Clara Jester, has also been a favorite friend to all of us here in the land of the pinon and pine.

Golda will be kindly remembered by all of us and we take comfort in knowing that our dear friend is safe and happy with our Lord in Heaven.

"Mr. Thunder"

We are all proud of our name. I am especially grateful for mine. I love the snow, and the rain, and the lightning and the thunder. And my name, Daniel, has been a blessing.

During my life I have had many nicknames — Typhoon, Sand Storm, Cyclone and many others.

The other day I was up town and had a visit with Mrs. Lynn Willard and the two boys, Lance and Cody, and the little princess, Lindsay. The Willard children, are great favorites of us all and they have been always great little friends of mine.

Just after our visit, Mrs. Willard came back into the store to tell me of a conversation between her two boys.

After I had left, Lance, the eldest son, said:

"That is such a nice man."

"Yes," said his little brother, Cody, "That is Mr. Thunder."

"That is Mr. Storm."

"Well," said Cody after thinking, "I knew it was something like that."

If Cody wants to call me "Mr. Thunder" that is fine. So now I have a new nickname. It is a great blessing to have friends like the great little Willard children.

The Year Of The Rain

Speaking of thunder, and lightning and rain, this is the rainiest May and early June I have ever seen. The big rains of 1966 came later in June, and they fell on a dry world, causing the creek to rise higher than I have ever seen.

On the night of June first there came three inches of slow rain here at the place. Then on Sunday the third there came a heavy downpour out of the hills to the south, another two inches of rain.

This morning, June four, the world was as green as Ireland, and when you walked across the mountain meadows, the ground was springy under your feet like a giant carpet. The ground lifted you along as you walked, as if trying to make your step lighter. Your heart is light, too, as you walk on the green meadows after the heavy rain.

For some reason, it is not muddy out in the mountain meadows, the rain has all gone into the ground. And this springy turf that lifts you as you step along — this is the first time I have ever seen this. Is the grass growing so fast, and the roots expanding so rapidly that there is this springy mat under your feet?

I have not crossed the river at the crossing since the December flood, and have had to go out on the old road. This is the longest time I have been unable to cross at the crossing and still the river keeps rolling along.

Today, in early afternoon (Monday, June four) it has been raining lightly since high noon, off and on. And this day reminds me of Alaska in my childhood, of the many rainy and cloudy days when the colors of the wild flowers and the blue of our mother's eyes were more beautiful to us children as we waited for the silver lining that mother said would soon appear in the sky — signalling the blue skies once more. Since those days I have always loved the rainy and cloudy skies.

No matter how much it rains now, the river will not flood as much as it would if all this rain had fallen on a dry world. You see, after the good rains and snows earlier, Mother Earth is protected by a good ground cover of grass, herbs and bushes, and flowers and a host of other growing things that have sprung up during the rains.

The rain has let up a little, and yet I do not know whether or not I can make it out on the old road. There are a few muddy spots. Still, I am going to try.

Let us thank God for the good rain and all our many blessings.

LINDAL PUSHES PRICES BACK.

With home prices everywhere going up, up - at twice the rate of inflation, we have just rolled back prices on every Lindal cedar home.

Why? You already know that the best way to combat inflation is to invest in a quality home. By lowering our prices, we are going all out to stop the ever upward spiral in housing costs. And this means savings of up to several thousands of dollars for you. Also, by buying a Lindal home of quality now, you will insure that an already good investment becomes an even greater investment.

Come in and talk to your Lindal distributor today. This offer has to expire July 15, 1979, because, after all, even we can't afford to hold off inflation forever.

Forest Service seeking new planning act input

June 8 is the final day to submit comments regarding the proposed Resources Planning Act being considered by the United States Department of Agriculture Forest Service.

The assessment and list of five alternative programs being considered are compiled into a booklet explaining factors taken into consideration for forest use.

Factors considered include opportunities for public and private investment, capital and operational costs, personnel requirements to implement and monitor the program, identifying primary program outputs and associated costs, national goals, effects upon the quality of the environment and summary of work involved to bring forest lands to full productive capability by the year 2000.

The assessment must be updated every decade and includes long-range goals to the year 2030. Copies of the review draft and supplemental materials relating to the Lincoln National Forest and the Southwestern region are available at Smokey Bear Ranger District.

An open house was held at the district's office May 17, but District Ranger Paul Gordon, said the turnout was disappointing.

"We had one citizen come in and pick the information up. We really didn't have any comments," Gordon said.

Joe Spehar, Lands and Recreation Manager at Smokey Bear, said, "This will affect every individual in the country. It's probably twice as important as the RARE II proposals, because here we're dealing with more than just wilderness — we're dealing with the whole forest."

Gordon said many people don't think their one opinion will matter, but said the opinions of the citizens do have an effect on the final outcome of the decisions.

Gordon said the final proposal will probably not look like any of the five alternatives listed in the review draft, but will be a compilation of ideas collected from citizens, Forest Service personnel and data explained in the review.

Jicama drab, but tasty

The next time you're in the produce section of your local grocery store, don't squeeze tomatoes, sniff oranges or crave strawberry shortcake. Try something new.

Try jicama, a drab-looking, but tasty vegetable. Succulent and slightly sweet, jicama is larger than a softball, straw-brown on the outside and snow-white on the inside.

According to New Mexico State University horticulturists, jicama is grown in Mexico, the Philippines, Hawaii and Formosa where it reportedly cures fever and hemorrhage.

"We hope to begin growing jicama in New Mexico in the near future," Don Cotter, a research horticulturist with NMSU's Agricultural Experiment Station, and Ricardo Gomez, Extension horticulturist, said.

Cotter and Gomez began their joint research project because of the interest New Mexicans have shown in growing jicama.

In the spring of 1977, Gomez got two varieties of jicama seed from Mexico. He and Cotter planted the seeds in two rows and waited, hoping to reap a substantial crop of jicama roots.

"Unfortunately, all we got were long, tentacle-like vines and not much root," Cotter said.

After analyzing what went wrong, Cotter and Gomez decided jicama needs a short photoperiod.

"A photoperiod is the length of light and darkness plants need to grow and mature," Gomez said. "We decided jicama needs at least 12 hours of darkness."

Reducing the photoperiod meant building a special, but simple and inexpensive, chamber for the jicama.

"Anyone can build a photoperiod chamber," Cotter said. "Simply take a tarp, drape it over a supporting structure, and put the jicama plants inside the chamber."

To control the amount of sunlight plants receive, you simply pull the tarp over the supporting structure, leaving the plants in the darkness.

In a recent experiment, Cotter and Gomez found that jicama plants exposed to less sunlight produced a bushy vine and an edible root.

Now that they understand jicama's need for a long photoperiod, Cotter and Gomez plan to germinate jicama seeds in the photoperiod chamber, then transfer the jicama seedlings to a field.

The horticulturists think that once jicamas develop an adequate root system in the photoperiod chamber they can grow and produce in open fields, where they are exposed to more hours of daylight.

Cotter and Gomez have also found that jicama prefers temperate areas that are comparatively frost-free. The root, which is four to six inches in diameter, is ready for harvesting in about 90 days from planting.

After harvesting, jicama should be washed and stored in a cool area. Cotter says older roots that are six inches in diameter tend to store better because they lose less water and don't become woody.

Throughout the world, jicama is used primarily as a fresh vegetable. The straw-brown skin is peeled off and the meat cut into finger-sized bites. In Mexico and the Far East, jicama is eaten with chile pepper, lemon juice or salt. It is also boiled or pickled.

"Over the last 20 years, jicama has become more popular in the United States, where it is a substitute for more expensive water chestnuts used in Chinese food," Gomez said.

Currently about 400 tons of jicama root, coming mostly from Mexico, are brought into California annually.

Although there are six species of jicama, the two most important jicama imports are jicama de agua and jicama de leche.

Jicama de agua, which is widely adapted to the cooler portions of Mexico, has a translucent juice, while de leche has a milky or cloudy juice.

Jicama has a long, distinguished history. Native to the New World, its long slender stems and three-part leaves are depicted in ancient Indian embroidery of the Nasca people and in murals in Peruvian tombs.

Its medium-sized flowers of blue and white are also depicted by Maya artisans.

In the 16th century, Montezuma mistook Cortez and his troops for gods. To pay homage to these gods, Montezuma sent them gifts of ground maize, eggs and turkey, and different kind of vegetables and fruits, including sweet potatoes, plums, mulberries, whitish-red cactus and jicama roots.

Today, jicama roots are finding their way into North America.

State's Health Coalition will assist Malaysians

The New Mexico Health Coalition, Albuquerque, has been awarded a $28,200 contract for consulting services to the Government of Malaysia. The 12 month contract calls for 110 days of consultation on program and organizational development for the Women's Development Program of the Ministry of Agriculture.

The contract was negotiated by the Coalition's recently formed International Center for Human Resource Development (ICHRD). Dr. Richard Reynolds of Albuquerque, who is senior consultant and team leader for development of ICHRD, will serve as the technical consultant. Reynolds will leave for the initial period of consultation, 40 days, May 25.

Reynolds is an internationally recognized expert on organizational and community development in health and population planning. He recently returned from Malaysia where he served as a member of a World Bank population activities evaluation team. Reynolds has also served as a Ford Foundation consultant to the Governments of Pakistan and Bangladesh. He is currently a self-supported (volunteer) consultant on organizational development to the Academy for Agro-Industrial Research, Faridpur, Bangladesh.

Frank G. Schultz, executive director of the New Mexico Health Coalition, noted that the Coalition's international activities would yield benefits to New Mexico and other poorer, low-income states in the United States through an exchange of experience and expertise among peoples with similar problems. "Very few of us recognize that the number of people in the United States living on incomes below the poverty line in the United States are a body larger than most nations. Billions have been spent on overseas development but very little of what has been learned about development has been applied to our own problems. ICHRD was established to begin that kind of knowledge exchange and application," Schultz said.

Schultz also announced that the Coalition is negotiating and bidding on contracts in the Middle East and Latin America. He emphasized the Coalition's primary role is in New Mexico, but that because of the state's multi-cultural background, it had much to contribute to other societies and much to learn from them, particularly in community development.

SANTA FE—A brisk review of topics which have occupied the state capital's attention this week.

FUEL CRISIS? The Governor says not yet. Though the President gave him authority to impose some minor forms of gasoline rationing, he doesn't think we need it now and hopes we won't till maybe next summer. Cold-eyed observers think that hope's illusory, are not impressed by announcement that the only stand-by plan state has on shelf is old odd-even system. Trouble with that is that it doesn't cut use; it just makes buying gasoline more inconvenient. Governor's summary of situation we face in this matter was typical Bruce King Special, which comes down on both sides of issue at once: "We just have to prepare for the worst and hope for the best."

UPPING REVENUE: State stands to make lots of bucks from that decision by Oil Conservation Division to let El Paso Natural Gas do infill drilling in Basin Dakota pool in San Juan and Rio Arriba counties. Production in that single pool will rise to four times as much gas as we have been producing in the whole state of New Mexico in recent years. Reason the state stands to gain is that this will be "new gas," which sells for higher prices than "old gas." El Paso presently pumps from that pool. Higher sale prices, of course, mean higher revenues to the treasury.

GUIDELINE: Al Clemmons, director of public school finance, reports most schoolteachers being gentlemanly and lady-like about fact they will get only 7 percent pay raise. Albuquerque teachers may not be so polite about it.

PLANNING: What do elected officials think about during odd-numbered year? What to run for during next even-numbered year's elections. Taking close look at governor's race, a full three and a half years away, are David King (naturally), Tony Anaya (likewise), as well as Senator C. B. Trujillo and Rep. Ray Sanchez, on the Demo side; Senators John Irick and John Conway and Rep. Colin McMillan on the GOP ticket. Two others who are known to lust after the post are both in Congress—Harold Rummels and Manuel Lujan. The two probably wouldn't run in the same race; they are friends and might work it out to take turns at the job.

OUTLANDER: Remember a young lad named Bill Richardson, who came out here from Washington to become executive secretary of the Democratic party, just before Dan Croy, who hired him, was replaced by Larry Ingram? He has evidently been brooding a lot since he got his job shot out from under him. Now he wants to go for a big one: to replace Manuel Lujan as Congressman from the first district. New Mexico hasn't always been kind to outsiders who came here and tried to walk away with one of our elective offices. Pat Hurley being the prime example.

WATER: That's a good plan Pete Domenici has introduced to let states set their own priorities on water projects within their boundaries in exchange for paying 25 per cent of the cost of such projects. The bill, to be sponsored by Pete, with support from New York's Senator Moynihan, will offend southerners, who get bulk of water projects now, because they have Congressional clout. New Mexicans ought to be for anything which brings more control back home to us, instead of leaving it in the hands of Congress, some of whose members aren't all that sure where our humble state is located.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

WASHINGTON, D.C. — As I said at a recent Senate Energy Committee hearing, there can no longer be any question but that the current energy shortage is caused by greedy OPEC leaders.

Having said that, though, what now do we do about it?

Greedy in itself is not a crime, albeit greed often develops into crime. And when you hold an entire nation for ransom, it's just a "camel's whisker short of being criminal."

Various theories on retaliatory measures are being bantered about by the American public, such as "A Bushel of Grain for A Barrel of Oil," and "Cheaper Crude or No More Food," and the halt of weapons sales to OPEC countries, to cite a few examples.

Those measures just aren't practical, and I think the American public, by large, knows that. It's just that when a nation gets as frustrated as ours, retaliatory measures of all ilk spring to mind.

Like a cornered wildcat, America is baring its fangs and claws.

But if we are to get out of this corner, the best retaliatory measures we can take are to begin consuming less and conserving more, decreasing demand and increasing supply. That's a tall order in our mobile and automotive society. And it's a measure even harder to stomach when the bureaucracy on one hand tells us we must seek alternate forms of transportation to the automobile, and on the other hand cuts back massive amounts of Amtrak rail service.

Domestic oil companies aren't Simon Pure in our present situation, either. They can't seem to give us a reasonable explanation for why gasoline prices have gone up by as much as a quarter in less than six months.

We still have price controls, but prices continue to shoot up and, as I said last week, we have a right to know why.

In short, we can't do a great deal about OPEC's greed and perpetual price gouging.

But we can demand some factual accounting and reasonable answers from our oil companies.

I'm hopeful that a motion of mine adopted last week by the Senate Energy Committee will provide some answers.

That motion demands a complete and expeditious accounting by the oil companies of reasons for the rapid increase in gas prices, subject to verification by the Department of Energy.

America is entitled to some answers, ones not couched in legalese or buzz words from p.r. men or doubletalk from corporate press releases and government bureaucrats.

I would think the oil industry would be beating the drum to explain price increases, rather than coyly blaming everyone but itself.

The American people are searching for an "enemy." Many believe they've already found it.

Without some facts, who is to say they're wrong?

editorial

As anyone who has ever slapped a brand on a critter knows . . . the time to strike is when the iron is hot.

Thus it follows, the time is now to keep the pressure on Governor Bruce King to exert all of the influence of his office on New Mexico State University and Bureau of Land Management officials to relinquish the necessary acreage in public use lands on Fort Stanton mesa to accommodate the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

This fact — keeping the pressure on our Governor — cannot be stressed too strongly, or too often.

Ruidoso's village and school officials, along with the Chamber of Commerce, have stressed the dangerous situation existing at the Ruidoso Municipal Airport following the air tragedy May 29 that claimed the life of one of our resident businessmen and maimed two young passengers.

The possibility that an airplane could crash into the elementary schools located close to the airport has been pointed out to Governor King. The governor has indicated that he'll look into the situation.

To date, we've succeeded in getting Governor King's attention. Other than that, we're unaware of any direct action being taken by the governor.

It should be apparent that the development of Sierra Blanca Regional Airport on Fort Stanton mesa hinges on who has the most clout.

Right now, in the aftermath of tragedy, and before the next airplane accident at Ruidoso is the time to keep the pressure on Governor King. This can be accomplished by having responsible persons, in positions of authority, exert their influence to have our airport relocated.

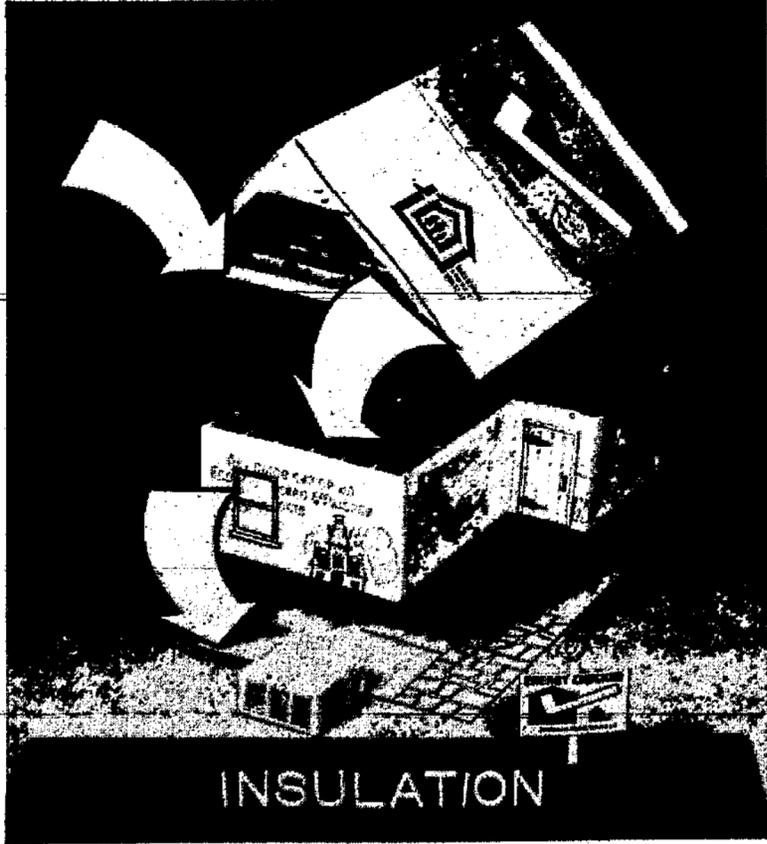

If you have clout, now's the time to begin using it. — CD

INSULATION

Energy Checked makes hidden improvements show up as utility savings Adequate insulation in floors, ceilings and walls is just one of the energy saving features of the Energy Checked Home. Insulation retards the flow of heat . . . helps keep heat out during the summer, and keep heat in during the winter. Because climates vary, it is important to match the R-value of insulation to the R-value requirement of the area. And whether batting, loose fill or foam insulation is used, as long as the R-value is the same, each type will insulate equally well. Insulation can help slow the loss of both winter heated and summer cooled air in your home, resulting in big savings on your utility bills. To be sure you get the most for your energy dollar, look for the Energy Checked sign the next time you build, buy, or remodel.

CONNALLY'S WAGON

Political experts, assessing results of the recent Midwestern Republican Conference at Indianapolis have almost unanimously concluded the big gain there was former Texas Governor John Connally.

He led the CBS poll of delegates there as best speaker, the Republican most likely to win in 1980, best on the issues and as the personal choice of more delegates than any other candidate. That had to boost Connally's G.O.P. nomination hopes.

The latest Gallup poll shows Connally has pulled ahead of Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee as the third choice of Republicans across the country. Ronald Reagan and former President Ford were in the two top spots.

What this means is that Connally is now a serious threat to Ronald Reagan, who perhaps made a political mistake in declining to attend the Indianapolis gathering. Ford won't actively campaign for delegates, so that leaves the early infighting over Mr. Number One to Reagan and Connally.

If Connally, in that contest, can win a few primaries, he might be off and running. Many of the old pros think he would be the best campaigner in the general election — perhaps the only Republican who could beat Senator Ted Kennedy, if the Massachusetts Senator decides to seek the nomination. — Santa Rosa News

SEATTLE SLOUGHVILLE

Way it's been raining in these hills . . . and dampening spring spirits here in Harmony Valley . . . past few days . . . it's like living in Seattle . . . 'cause some of the fresh planted yards are starting to resemble sloughs . . . and there's mildew forming in the long Johns of those as had 'em hanging to have the sun/warm weather remove the final residues of a long winter's wear.

A few examples of the farsightedness now being observed by some of our erstwhile shortsighted natives . . . 'cause, after all, this time of the year in Harmony Valley there's supposed to be nothing but sunshine and cloudless skies . . . and fire suppression crews are starting to be indicative of the concern our Seattle sloughville weather's causing. For instances:

Ed Jungebluth was seen shopping for floatation chambers for his van . . . Sam Nunnally was recently dicker for a canoe and didn't like the trade-in offered for his four-wheeled mountain climber . . . Mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr., seemed disturbed that water wings are no longer on the market . . . Carmon Phillips was inspecting the water wheel on the Old Mill and calculating the cost of an umbrella for same . . . and Dan 'I Storm' was considering felling a few stout pines to build himself a raft, so's he could ford the creek for a peek at civilization.

On the bright side . . . though . . . we ain't had no forest fires.

NO GASLESS DAYS

Ain't been no such thing nobow as gasless days in Ruidoso . . . gasless nights, 'ybe . . . 'cause most of our gasoline vendors do close up for a night's sleep before spending another busy day mending the gas pumps . . . and there wasn't even any complaints registered from the visiting contest dance Indians at the Mesalero/Ruidoso Pow Wow over the weekend that they'd had any trouble keeping bang juice in their tanks.

I checked with one dealer who opined he was on 95 percent of last June's gallonage allocation . . . and said he'd have no problems if that continued . . . and he wasn't even griping. 'Course he'd a been a lot happier if'n his distributor'd given him 25 percent of the price bike he's paying.

TIGER BY THE TAIL

Those as was living here 10 or 12 years ago well remember when the movie "Tiger by the Tail" was filmed here . . . and, by jinkies, but it's some night owls didn't get their memories revived here a few days back . . . 'cause that film was on the boob tube.

Seems that Sherman Atwood and Ken Geaslin . . . possibly in the company of others . . . had been out on business that detained them until the late/early hours of darkness . . . and, upon completing their endeavors of spreading joy and happiness . . . they ceased and desisted in their efforts and took refuge in Geaslin's abode. So happened that Ken up and switched on the idiot box . . . and there, before their very eyes, was "Tiger by the Tail" . . . which provided the conversation piece of the moment.

Sherman and Ken got to reminiscin' . . . about the film . . . and the local stars . . . and how morally uplifting it was . . . and all such carrying's on . . . when suddenly came the famous "rape" scene . . . carried out in the by then abandoned upper rooms of the Navajo Lodge . . . and Ken 'n Sherman reminiscenced some more . . . but being's this is a family newspaper . . . nuff sed.

Anyhow . . . as both of them allow . . . life here in Harmony Valley in those days had a bit of spice that didn't necessarily come outta shakers . . . or need a mortar and pestle to pulverize the ingredients of what then went into scintillating conversation as to what went on with whom.

FUN TIME AHEAD

Exactly two weeks from-today we'll notice whole herds of men and women running around town wearing blue overseas caps . . . I think, when the wearers were overseas, they carried a different designation . . . anyhow, the state American Legion and Auxiliary convention'll be here . . . June 21-24 . . . and though there'll be plenty of business to keep 'em busy . . . these Post and Unit members don't believe in all work and no play . . . and, by jinkies, those as ain't familiar with the fun side of living here'll flat up and get themselves educated . . . and learn why so many of us choose to live here.

BRIEF BIT: As of today, if'n Our Jimmy'd accomplished one tenth of what he figured he'd get done as President he'd be smiling more'n he is. . . CD

INFLATION FIGHTING IDEAS

7 "What's in a Name?"

The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs states: "Most large supermarket chains sell private label foods and household products. These private label or house brands are usually less expensive and equal in quality to national brands. In many cases supermarkets purchase their house brand goods from the same companies that manufacture nationally advertised brands."

Because of various cost savings, including lower promotional cost, house brands can be sold for less.

Safeway generally prices its own top-quality (S) Brands lower than national brands of comparable quality and you can always depend on their consistently high quality. Every (S) Brand is unconditionally guaranteed to please.

Each product in the entire (S) Brand line is identified with the red (S) and the words "FINEST SAFEWAY QUALITY." Rigid quality specifications must be met before the familiar (S) goes on the label. Customers acquainted with (S) Brands know the products are comparable to top national brands... but they cost less.

Get to know Safeway's family of (S) Brands, including Town House, Bel-air, Lucerne, Edwards, Safeway, Mrs. Wright's, and many others. They're your staunch allies in the battle against inflation!

Summerow rode all five of Valdez' winning mounts, then added another win to finish with six victories.

The profitable weekend bolted Summerow into second place in the overall jockey standings. Summerow had been in eighth place the previous week. Summerow now owns a record of 11-4-8 in 60 starts.

Summerow was on a total 24 mounts over the weekend. In the previous three weeks of racing, Summerow had averaged only three mounts per day. With an impressive victory in the Mescalero Apache Handicap two weeks ago, his trips to the starting gate picked up immensely.

Summerow won three races each on Friday and Saturday, but failed to come into the winner's circle on Sunday. Summerow also recorded two seconds and three thirds over the weekend.

Valdez had only one victory entering the weekend. His charges won three times on Friday and twice on Saturday. With the five wins, Valdez moves into fourth place in the overall trainer standings.

Gary Sumpter continues to lead the overall jockey standings with 15 victories. He scored only one win last week. Behind Summerow is Richard Bickel in third place with 10 wins and eight runnerups. Steve Fuller owns 10 wins and five seconds.

William F. Leach extended his overall lead in the trainer standings with three victories, including the Norgor Futurity on Saturday. Leach now has 15 wins followed by Hugh L. Tucker with eight wins.

Racing continues Thursday at Ruidoso Downs with a 13-race card. Friday's agenda includes trials for the June 17 Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity. Another full card spotlights Saturday's slate, and the Aspen Stakes tops the list on Sunday. The Aspen stakes will cover six furlongs and carries added money of $6,500. Post time all four days will be 1 p.m.

Cut Shot proved his two previous easy wins were no fluke Saturday when he destroyed the field in the first running of the Norgor Futurity. The Blade colt blazed the four furlongs in 47 2/5 seconds on a track labeled good, winning by three lengths. Cut Shot quickly took a two length lead in the backstretch, then stretched it out over 1 Fool Around in front of the grandstand. The public has listed Cut Shot as a 1-2 favorite. Placing third was Lovens Question. Cut Shot had won his previous two races by a total of 10 1/2 lengths. Henry Uriegas was Cut Shot's rider.

An 18-1 longshot won the first consolation of the Kansas Futurity Saturday. Maxfield, whose only previous victory had come on a Texas bush track, bolted to a length win in the 350 yard dash. The winning payoff to owners Hubert Vestel and Delores Gentempo of Houston, Texas was over $12,000. Placing second was Johnny Drake and taking third was Call Me, Smooth. J. C. Wiley was aboard Maxfield.

Denim N Diamonds, a horse purchased for $32,000 in the All-American Sale last year, won the Kansas Futurity Second Consolation Friday. The brown filly by Timeto Thinkrich pulled out to a full length win as an 8-5 favorite. Jerry Nicodemus was aboard the H. Don Farris trained pacer. Streaking Six was second and placing third was Brown Wind, who is a full brother to 1976 All-American Futurity champ Real Wind.

Friday's fast track and tailwind down the stretch helped four horses set seasonal best times. Lucky Wilma adjusted the 5 1/2 furlong standard to 1:08; Mr. Tom lowered the seven furlong time to 1:29 1/5; Denim N Diamonds bumped the 350 yard time to 37.98; and Chigger's Good moved the 400 yard time down to 20.41. Saturday, Cut Shot equalled his previous seasonal best time of 47 2/5 seconds.

A record number of 713 horses have been consigned to the 1979 All-American Sale, according to sale director Richard Thompson. The sale will be held August 27, 28 and 29 in the arena located next to the race track. Thompson estimated that over $6 million worth of stock will be sold in the three day sale. Last year, a total of 589 horses were cataloged.

Easy Dimple, an Easy Jet filly who was purchased for a record $160,000 in last year's All-American Sale, is recovering from an operation in El Paso to repair her right front knee. Dr. Sid Vargas and a Kentucky veterinarian inserted five screws to hold Easy Dimple's shattered knee together. Easy Dimple broke a carpal bone while running in the Kansas Futurity trials. Despite the break, her time was fast enough to reach the first consolation. Easy Dimple is expected to serve as a broodmare.

The Number 10 post provided three consecutive winners Friday, but the Number 5 hole continues to lead the season. In the fourth race, Picky Summerow guided 10-1 outsider Pickalick to the winner's circle, then Joe Reyes rode 47-1 longshot Lady Ho Chi to a victory in the fifth race. Summerow then came back to claim the sixth race on 6-5 favorite Chigger's Good. After 14 race days, the number 10 post has sent home 19 winners while the five post leads with 23 winners.

Gentlemen's Feature, winner of the 1978 Kansas Futurity, was back on the track Saturday in an allowance test. The bay filly, who failed to qualify for the Kansas Derby a few weeks ago, ran a distant second to Mr. Reville, who was making his first 1979 outing. Gentlemen's Feature was an even money favorite while Mr. Reville was an 8-1 outsider.

Quimby Demmitt, one of the founding fathers of the Kansas Futurity, was at Ruidoso Downs to watch one of his son's horses compete in this year's Kansas Futurity. Demmitt helped initiate the Kansas Futurity in 1861 in Meade, Kansas. The race was moved to Colorado and La Mesa Park in New Mexico before Ruidoso sponsored it in 1968. Demmitt's son, Tom, owns Tonya Jay Bar, the tenth fastest qualifier for the Kansas.

Jockey Ruben Bustamante will be out of action for approximately three to six weeks with a broken collarbone. The young helmsman was thrown from his mount, VI Countess, in the 13th race near the grandstand. VI Countess had collapsed from exhaustion from the 5 1/2 furlong race. Doctors report no other serious injuries.

Moon Lark, the 1978 All-American champion, added another $55,500 dollars to his already huge bankroll last Saturday night in the Los Alamitos Derby in California. Moon Lark now has earnings of just under $700,000 and is quickly gaining on the all-time money winner, Easy Day—who retired with earnings of $849,809. Moon Lark went off as a 3-5 favorite and won by a neck over Kipy's Charger. Regular jockey Jackie Martin was aboard.

Visitors to the press box to cover the Kansas Futurity included: Helena Blasatti of the Quarter Horse Journal, Harry Headel of the Roswell Daily Record, Mark Leibson of the El Paso Times, Ben Hudson of the Quarter Horse Track Magazine, Cale Dickey of the Ruidoso News, Jim Orton of the Quarter Racing Record and photographer David Kennedy of the El Paso Times.

In a stewards' ruling, owner-trainer Coy Hendrix has been suspended and referred to the New Mexico State Racing Commission. The ruling stemmed from a report from the official racing chemist of the State Racing Commission that said tests on Flaming Lark—who finished first in the fifth race May 20—and Lady Bethany, who finished first in the sixth race May 20—proved positive for the drug, Phentermine. The ruling does not affect the pari-mutuel payoffs.

In other stewards' rulings, the horses Lady Bethany and Flaming Lark were reinstated after a report from the track veterinarian said that both are capable of racing without medication. Trainers Carl D. Wooten and William F. Leach were fined $25 each for being late to the paddock for their respective races.

Gasoline is deadly out of the car's tank

The untimely arrival of the summer holidays in the midst of predicted worsening of the nation's gasoline shortage may tempt careless motorists into taking a dangerous shortcut to keep their tanks full.

Faced with uncomfortable prospects of long lines at many service stations and no gas at all at some, too many drivers may consider gambling with their lives by resorting to storing extra gasoline supplies in their cars and vans.

Such action could be fatal, warns the Insurance Information Institute (III).

The Institute emphasizes, as warm weather and vacation times approach, that storing of gasoline ANYWHERE but in the tank of your car is extremely dangerous. Technicians have compared the destructive force of a two gallon can of gasoline to that of several sticks of dynamite.

Last year, the explosion of an ice cream truck in New York City injured 180 persons and shattered nearby office windows; the blast was caused by a can of gasoline stored in the vehicle's cab.

The III points out that improper storage of gasoline in the home can be equally dangerous; homes have been lifted off foundations and set afire by a basement full of gasoline fumes ignited by a furnace or water heater pilot light. Earlier this month, four members of a California family were burned to death in an explosion and flash fire that was blamed on the presence of three five-gallon metal containers of gasoline that exploded when fumes reached the pilot light of a wall heater.

However, the trunk-storing acts by motorists afraid of running out of gas on a highway hundreds of miles from home have fire department and police officials equally concerned.

Among the reasons that gasoline is dangerous is the fact that it contains more energy than any explosive and is one of the more hazardous types of flammable liquids. It has a relatively low ignition temperature and is easily ignited. An adequate spark can be produced from the friction between a person's clothing and a seat cover when sliding across a car seat — all that would be necessary for an explosion under these conditions would be gasoline fumes from a nearby container of fuel.

What might look like a convenient way to beat a gasoline shortage on the road or in the home can have tragic side effects if precautions are not taken.

Here are a few tips from the Insurance Information Institute:

- Keep all gasoline containers tightly capped if they contain any quantity of the fuel.

- Once a container is empty and thoroughly ventilated, leave the cap off to allow fumes from the remaining drops of gasoline to evaporate. (Allow the evaporation to occur near open air.)

- Never put gasoline in anything but a container specifically designed for the fuel (preferably with UL or FM markings).

- Keep gasoline where only an adult can get at it. The smell of gasoline is often intriguing to children; don't let their curiosity cause them or anyone else harm.

- Store gasoline must always be kept away from heat and flame. Remember that gasoline will expand in volume as temperature rises and may seep out of even the best container.

- Keep in mind that liquid gasoline burns furiously and that gasoline-air mixtures explode violently — that's what makes it dangerous — so don't do anything foolish with gasoline.

Questions about the safest way to store gasoline around the home can be answered by your local fire department. Don't hesitate to ask.

OWNS THE Horserace

VICTORY HARDWARE—Dr. Jack Frost and Mrs. Frost (with glasses) collect the victory ornaments after their filly, Favorite Past Time, won the $26,500 Kansas Quarter Horse Futurity at Ruidoso Downs. His son, Jeff, is at his right. Helping make the presentations were Gordon Crone (right), president of the Kansas Quarter Horse Racing Association and Mr. and Mrs. Woody Erwin. Erwin is general manager of Ruidoso Downs.

Four methods to save gas and stretch energy dollars

If you're a typical driver, you drive your car about 11,000 miles per year, and it consumes nearly 800 gallons of gasoline, for an average fuel economy rating of 14-16 miles per gallon. Gasoline costs over 6 cents per mile, or over $600 per year. And the price is rising.

If you'd save only 1/10th of a gallon daily, your savings would amount to a 5 percent discount on every gallon you buy.

Passenger automobiles account for about 31 percent of all the petroleum consumed in the United States, and almost half of the total is imported. And though Americans have cut back the growth rate in overall oil use, their demand for motor gasoline is up substantially.

Here are four gasoline-saving tips to help you — and your country — save this essential fuel:

1. Share the ride. About one-third of all private automobile use is for commuting, frequently with only the driver in the car. If only one person were added as a passenger, the two occupants of the car would use about half the gasoline required if each drove alone. It should be easy to ask a neighbor or a fellow employee to join in riding with you to and from work. More than 20 million commuters now share the ride. Many employers offer incentives such as free or reduce-rate parking for carpools, and the trend toward vanpools is increasing in New Mexico.

2. Combine trips and eliminate unnecessary trips. Plan your trips — to market, to the library, to school or to visit friends. You'll find that many neighborhood trips could be combined, and you could help your neighbors by offering to run errands for them. Some trips might be better handled — or even eliminated — by telephoning, writing or combining with another trip.

3. Drive at a moderate speed. The most efficient range usually is 35 to 45 miles per hour. On the highway, where you may need to maintain a higher speed, stay at 55 mph. Most automobiles get about 18 percent better mileage on the highway at 50 than at 65 mph, and 20 percent better mileage at 45 than at 70 mph. You may note that some drivers abuse the speed limit on superhighways, but state police are cracking down on speeders.

4. Have your engine tune-up recently? Do you need one? If your engine is hard to start, hesitates, sputters, idles roughly, or the like — you are losing mileage and should check its condition immediately. You may need to clean and adjust spark plugs and ignition points, replacing if necessary, check timing, and replace air and fuel filter elements. How much you will save on gasoline consumption will depend on the condition of your engine and how much you drive in the course of a year, but savings could range up to 12 percent on your gasoline bills.
