

Summer Festival to feature Phyllis Diller

BY GWYNETH JONES
Staff Writer

Guest artists Phyllis Diller, Sheri Lewis and Pepe Romero — as well as the winner of the Van Cliburn international piano competition — will highlight the second annual Ruidoso Summer Festival.

The Festival will again feature the Texas Little Symphony, a core group of musicians from the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra, and conductor John Giordano will headline one of the concerts with a saxophone solo.

The festival will showcase one of Diller's lesser-known talents. In addition to her career as a comedienne, she is an accomplished concert pianist.

Lewis, a puppeteer, ventriloquist, comedienne, actress and recording artist, will be hosting the "family concert, which will be staged in the early evening to accommodate attendance by youngsters.

Reduced rates of one dollar per person for bleacher seats also will be featured at the family concert.

Romero, classical guitarist and popular guest artist at the first Ruidoso Summer Festival, will return to open the concert series at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track Sales Arena.

The winner of the Van Cliburn competition will be making his or her first concert appearance after winning that title. The piano competition is scheduled for May 16-30 in Fort Worth.

An added attraction at this year's festival, scheduled for June 2-9, will be a Dixieland band, composed of Texas Little Symphony members and other musicians.

The schedule for the 1981 Ruidoso Summer Festival is as follows:

— Tuesday, June 2; evening concert at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track Sales Arena, featuring Pepe Romero, classical guitarist.

— Wednesday, June 3; evening concert, Sales Arena, featuring John Giordano, saxophone soloist.

— Thursday, June 4; noon concert, Cedar Creek picnic area, featuring Dixieland sounds.

— Friday, June 5; free early evening concert at the Lincoln Heritage Trust's new Interpretive Center, old Lincoln town, featuring Dixieland band.

— Saturday, June 6; evening concert at Sales Arena, featuring the winner of the Van Cliburn Competition.

— Sunday, June 7; free afternoon concert at Cedar Creek, featuring the Texas Little Symphony.

— Monday, June 8; early evening family concert at Sales Arena, featuring Sheri

Lewis, puppeteer, comedienne, ventriloquist, and recording artist.

— Tuesday, June 9, evening concert at Sales Arena, featuring concert pianist and comedienne Phyllis Diller, accompanied by the orchestra.

Ticket prices were also announced last week by Ruidoso Summer Festival board members.

Individual table seats for the five indoor concerts are $12 each. A five-performance subscription is also available at $55; however, reservations and payment for the subscription must be made by May 15.

Bleacher seats for all performances except the Sheri Lewis family concert will be $4.50 each. No reservations or subscription discounts are available for bleacher seats.

The Lewis concert will feature bleacher seats at $1 per person, while table seats will be the same as for other indoor concerts. The Cedar Creek and Lincoln concerts will be free to the public.

Tickets and further information may be obtained by writing the Ruidoso Summer Festival, Box 1338, Ruidoso, New Mexico, 88345; or by calling 505-257-5102.

Promotional efforts for the festival and the community as a whole are underway. A group of four travel writers will be hosted by festival board members this week in a three-day visit to the area.

The public relations firm of Carl Byoir and Associates, Houston, Texas, has again been retained to promote the festival and area, and is placing feature stories with wire services, major newspapers and free-lance travel writers.

Byoir and the board members are also attempting to secure the attendance of a nationally-known music critic.

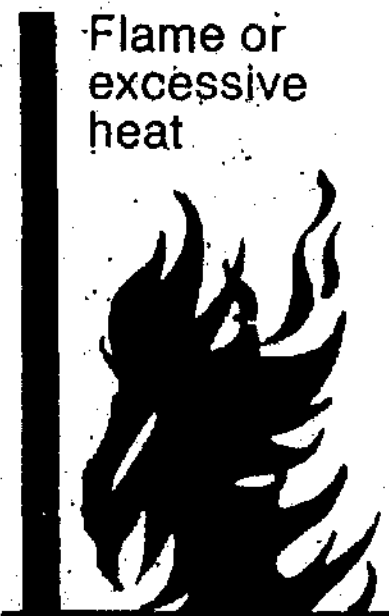

Total advertising and promotional budget for the 1981 festival is about $24,000. Of that amount, $10,000 has been tentatively approved by the Ruidoso Lodgers' Tax Committee and $2,000 was received in grant monies from the state Department of Development.

About $4,000 of the total budget will be spent for direct newspaper and radio advertisements, with most of the radio spots placed on classical music stations.

Ruidoso State Bank and Security Bank have agreed to underwrite the cost of the Sheri Lewis appearance, and some other funding has been obtained from private sources.

Board members said they expect that last year's festival attendance of about 7,500 persons will be doubled at the 1981 series, based on inquiries already received.

Intumescent action retards spread of flame

THE ILLUSTRATIONS above demonstrate how the newly developed fire retardant paint, intumescent, works against fires. It has proven effective in combatting fires in California and can be special ordered for use in this area.

Fire retardant paint available

A fire retardant paint in limited use in California has proven effective in avoiding fire-caused losses, according to members of the Committee for Insuring Ruidoso's Environment (ComFIRE).

The paint is called intumescent and its effectiveness was noted when a fire in California burned a structure to the ground, but a cabinet painted with the new latex flat paint was undamaged and its contents were saved.

Guntam "G. W." Werther, ComFIRE member, said he discovered the new paint while researching another problem for the United States Forest Service. "I was trying to find a way to fireproof some wood inside a mining shaft," Werther said. "So I called some friends I have in the Los Angeles County Fire Department (LACFD), and they told me about this."

Captain of the LACFD, Forrest Ray, saw the cabinet that was painted with the fire retardant paint and was impressed.

Werther said the paint is primarily for industrial use but also has household uses, such as storage rooms, kitchens, stairwells and garages — "anyplace where you have a high fire threat," he said.

The paint is manufactured by several companies, and can be special ordered in this area, Werther said. "I'm not sure how many colors it comes in."

One local paint distributor can special order the paint, but only in white, and can tint it in "mostly pastel colors," a spokesman said.

"We're interested in hearing more about this paint," Herb Brunell, ComFIRE chairman, said. "We will be discussing it further at our February 26 meeting."

Ski Report

Sierra Blanca: Undisturbed snow depth is 19 inches, with no new snow received the past week.

Poor to fair conditions exist on the upper mountain, with excellent conditions on the lower beginner novice slopes, due to a machine made base. Chairlifts one, two, three and five and the gondola are operating daily and the Captain Chair Four is operating from 9-11:30 a.m., Saturdays and Sundays.

Eagle Creek: Base averages 20 inches, with Boot Hill and Box Canyon open and in excellent conditions. Chisholm Trail is open and in fair to poor condition. No new snow was received the past week and the resort has been making snow nightly.

For updated ski reports, call Sierra Blanca, 257-9001, or Eagle Creek, 336-4211.

Public hearings, designed to allow local citizens to view environmental impact studies and comment on the impact of proposed improvements to United States Highway 70 will be held in Ruidoso Tuesday and in Hondo on Wednesday.

The Highway 70 Study Group will hold an "informal review" of the environmental statements and display a map from 5 to 7 p.m., on the two nights, followed by the formal public hearings from 7 to 9. In Ruidoso, the meeting will be held at the multi-purpose room of the public library. The Hondo meeting will be held in the school gymnasium.

The environmental study is also available for public inspection at the Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs municipal buildings, the Ruidoso Public Library, the Lincoln County courthouse in Carrizozo and the Hondo School.

Although the environmental statement has been available at those locations for several weeks, few citizens have made the effort to read the document, according to Ruidoso Downs village clerk Virginia Spall and Ruidoso village clerk Jim Hine.

Spall urged the local citizens and public officials to attend the meetings. "We want people to come now and make their feelings known, rather than waiting until the project is underway," she said.

Since the meetings are designed to gather comments from the public, "I hope that at least the business people who are going to be affected (by the widening) will attend," she added. Public input at several previous meetings has been negligible, she added.

Comments also may be submitted in writing for ten days following the local meetings. Written comments should be addressed to New Mexico State Highway Department, Shirley A. Montoya, Public Involvement Coordinator, Box 1149, Santa Fe, New Mexico, 87503.

Alternatives to be presented at the Ruidoso and Hondo meetings are 1) widening of the existing alignment of the highway and 2) abandonment of the project altogether.

The environmental statement dismissed all other possible alignments as unfeasible, including a suggested alignment which would be located north of the present route from east of Picacho to east of Tinnie.

That suggested alternative is no longer being considered, the study said, because of the longer sections of steep grade and the fact that 50 percent of the traffic would continue to use the existing route, necessitating improvements from a safety standpoint.

A third reason the new alignment has been dismissed is the cost — about $11 million more than the cost of widening the existing route, the study said.

In the Ruidoso-Ruidoso Downs area, the major immediate impact of the widening project seems to be the possible displacement of businesses, homes and public facilities, including the Ruidoso Downs municipal building and fire hall.

Proposed widening of the highway in the area of the municipal building must be done on the south side of the highway, to avoid cutting into the All American Municipal Park.

According to the study, widening in Ruidoso Downs "may displace three residences, five commercial buildings and two public facilities."

The study also stated that "if the Ruidoso Downs Fire Department and Municipal Building are not displaced, the access to these buildings would be considerably reduced and would need to be reconstructed in a new location."

Widening in the valley area, the study indicated, "may displace three residences and three businesses, representing five percent of the existing businesses..."

The accessibility of business and residences would also be altered by the project.

Residents whose homes have to be displaced will be eligible for compensation for their "property, moving and related expenses, as well as supplemental payments to obtain decent, safe and sanitary housing," according to the environmental statement.

The study also indicated that the six businesses in the valley and Ruidoso Downs which might be displaced, "with adequate lead time, ... could be relocated satisfactorily." It also stated, "financial assistance is provided for moving the affected businesses, losses in tangible personal property and expenses incurred in searching for replacement business, or the owner may, if eligible, elect to go out of business and receive a payment not less than $2,500 and not to exceed $10,000 in lieu of moving costs."

Economic impacts were also discussed in the study. It concluded that "the construction of United States 70 ... would benefit the local economy by providing new jobs directly and indirectly generated by the project, and would also stimulate sales of goods, which, in turn, would provide sales tax revenue."

Each highway-construction related job would create "1.4 indirect jobs related to services, food, transportation, utilities, etc.," the study states.

Widening of the highway would cost about $139.4 million (82 percent federal and 18 percent state funds) and would create a need for "6,000 man years" of employment.

With regard to natural resources and conservation, the study indicates that the improvements would "remove 9.0 acres of irrigated farmland and .3 acres of orchard land. All of the land to be taken is in the vicinity of Hondo to Tinnie." Additionally, the study states that "during the design state, efforts will be made to ... minimize effects on prime farmland by consultation with individual owners affected, regarding farmland operation."

Effects on vegetation along the Rio Ruidoso were considered also. In a letter included in the environmental study, the United States Corps of Engineers noted that "where the highway alignment does not encroach upon the river channel or overbanks, little adverse impacts to the riparian habitat would be expected. In the three locations (Fox Cave, near the historic bridge in Picacho, and just east of Seeping Springs) where channel realignment is proposed, significant adverse impacts to riparian habitat, wetlands and fisheries may result."

The Corps letter suggested that measures taken to alleviate the adverse impacts might include, "reseeded of disturbed areas with grasses, shrubs and trees that would enhance wildlife resources." It also suggested that "work in the waterway should be performed in such a manner so as to minimize impacts on water quality and fisheries."

Other "mitigation measures" suggested by the study group include erosion and sediment control measures, design of the relocated stream to have a natural appearance, and coordinating construction schedules with state wildlife agencies.

The study also addressed impact on water quality, air quality, noise levels, geology and soils, energy, historical and cultural considerations, visual and aesthetic conditions and flood hazards.

In most cases, the "mitigation measures," outlined by the study, minimize the highway's impact in these areas.

The meetings are being sponsored by the villages of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs, the New Mexico State Highway Department, the United States 70 Citizens Advisory Committee, and the Federal Highway Commission.

Mill levy on school election ballot

BY CHARLOTTE FELLERS
Staff Writer/Photographer

Voters in the Ruidoso Independent School district will elect two board members February 3 and will also decide a two mill levy proposal.

Carlton L. (Bones) Wright, incumbent, will be opposed by Ronald Gene Harris and Richard C. Hall for position one. Position two, now held by Donald L. Swalander, has Swalander seeking another term running unopposed.

A two mill levy, also to be decided, would provide the school district with $105,000 per year for three years to make emergency improvements to all school facilities.

The mill levy will add $20 to a property owner's taxes for every $10,000 of assessed valuation on the property, according to school officials.

A summary of needs of each of the four campuses within the district will appear in upcoming issues of The News, to better inform readers of how the mill levy money could be spent. Today's paper features the present needs of Nob Hill Elementary.

Nob Hill was built to serve approximately 220 students, and has housed about 320 since fall, 1980, according to principal Don Weems.

Weems said "classrooms are our single biggest problem. We just don't have enough of them." He said lack of space in general makes working at Nob Hill "a constant challenge to see if we can fit everyone in."

Weems said no designated storage areas exist. A book room which doubled as a maintenance workroom in days before overcrowding was a problem, now serves the maintenance crew, teachers and aides as a storage unit.

Villages' trustees to meet

Ruidoso Downs trustees will meet at 7:30 tonight in the municipal building. Major agenda items to be considered include a study of water needs in the Redman Club area, a flood hazard ordinance, and resolutions dealing with budget revisions and uncollectible accounts.

The Ruidoso trustees will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m., in the multi-purpose room of the Ruidoso Public Library, in a joint session with the Ruidoso Downs trustees, Citizens Advisory Committee and Highway Department personnel regarding the Highway 70 Corridor Study.

The village's regular business meeting will begin at 8, with agenda items including consideration, adoption and other action on Resolution 81-1, calling for a special bond election March 24 and a report on opening of bids on drilling of water wells and refuse removal equipment.

ONLY ONE STORAGE ROOM at Nob Hill Elementary is actually used to store supplies; it is shared by all 15 teachers and the entire janitorial staff. The overflow can be found in hallways, the cafeteria and extra wall space in restrooms.

ONLY ONE ELECTRICAL OUTLET in one first grade classroom at Nob Hill Elementary has created a hazard to children and teachers alike, who must use extension cords to accommodate electronic media equipment.

Mill levy on school election ballot

Rooms once used for broom closets and storage are now used for classrooms, mostly to accommodate special programs which have small class sizes.

Weems said another shortcoming at Nob Hill, apparent each day at recess time, is drinking fountains and restroom facilities.

"We have only six fountains to serve over 300 children," he said. "You just don't know what a problem that is until you come in here after a recess and every kid wants a drink of water," he said.

Five stalls in the girls' restroom, and four in the boys' restroom would seem adequate, but not all stalls work all the time, Weems said. "It's the same as with water fountains," he said. "We just don't have enough of them."

Nob Hill expanded slightly three years ago, when an old army barracks previously used as a storage area, was converted into a second grade classroom, The Little Red School House.

This year, an additional classroom was needed to handle the overflow of kindergarten children, numbering 105 so what was formerly the media center, became the second classroom for kindergarten.

The media center was shuffled up the hallway, where a small (approximately 9 x 12) room was built into the foyer beside the front doors to the school.

Books, sound, slide and film projectors, tables, chairs, and desks are now lining the halls, as well as other teaching supplies formerly stored in the media center.

Children who wish to check out books and read during that class must sit on couches in the hallways, which is distracting, Weems said, "because people are going by all the time."

Weems said additions to present buildings, or additions of many portable buildings is probably not feasible now. "We need adequate playground space, which we just barely have now." That space will be even less by the end of the school year, because the grounds are due to receive one portable building to "just take up the slack."

Weems said he realizes that all the needs probably won't be met with just the mill levy, "but it would help us a lot."

UP TO 25 children have to squeeze into the media center at Nob Hill Elementary to participate in reading classes. The media center measures 9'x12'.

THE MEDIA CENTER at Nob Hill Elementary was moved to a small room built into the foyer of the school, so the old center could be used to house another kindergarten classroom, added in mid-year. As a result, books, movie and slide projectors, and desks and chairs, are lining the hallways for lack of storage space.

THREE VILLAGE EMPLOYEES have passed state examinations upgrading themselves in their positions. From the left, John Ramos, to level four, the highest rating obtainable, wastewater plant operator; Blair Halladay, Sewer Superintendent; Richard Sanchez, level three, assistant water superintendent in charge of production, and level one in wastewater treatment; Becky Durham, level one as lab technician in water and wastewater testing; Jim Wills, Water Superintendent.

RC&D meets in Carrizozo

A program on the operation and potential expansion of Fort Stanton Hospital and Training School will highlight the meeting of the South Central Mountain Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Council Tuesday in Carrizozo. Fort Stanton administrator Mark Delgado will present the program.

The meeting will begin at 1 p.m., in the banquet room of Four Winds Restaurant. The group will also hear a report from RC&D coordinator Richard Ramsey on the Lower Rio Grande Basin Study and committee reports.

Schmitt offers book on cutting energy costs

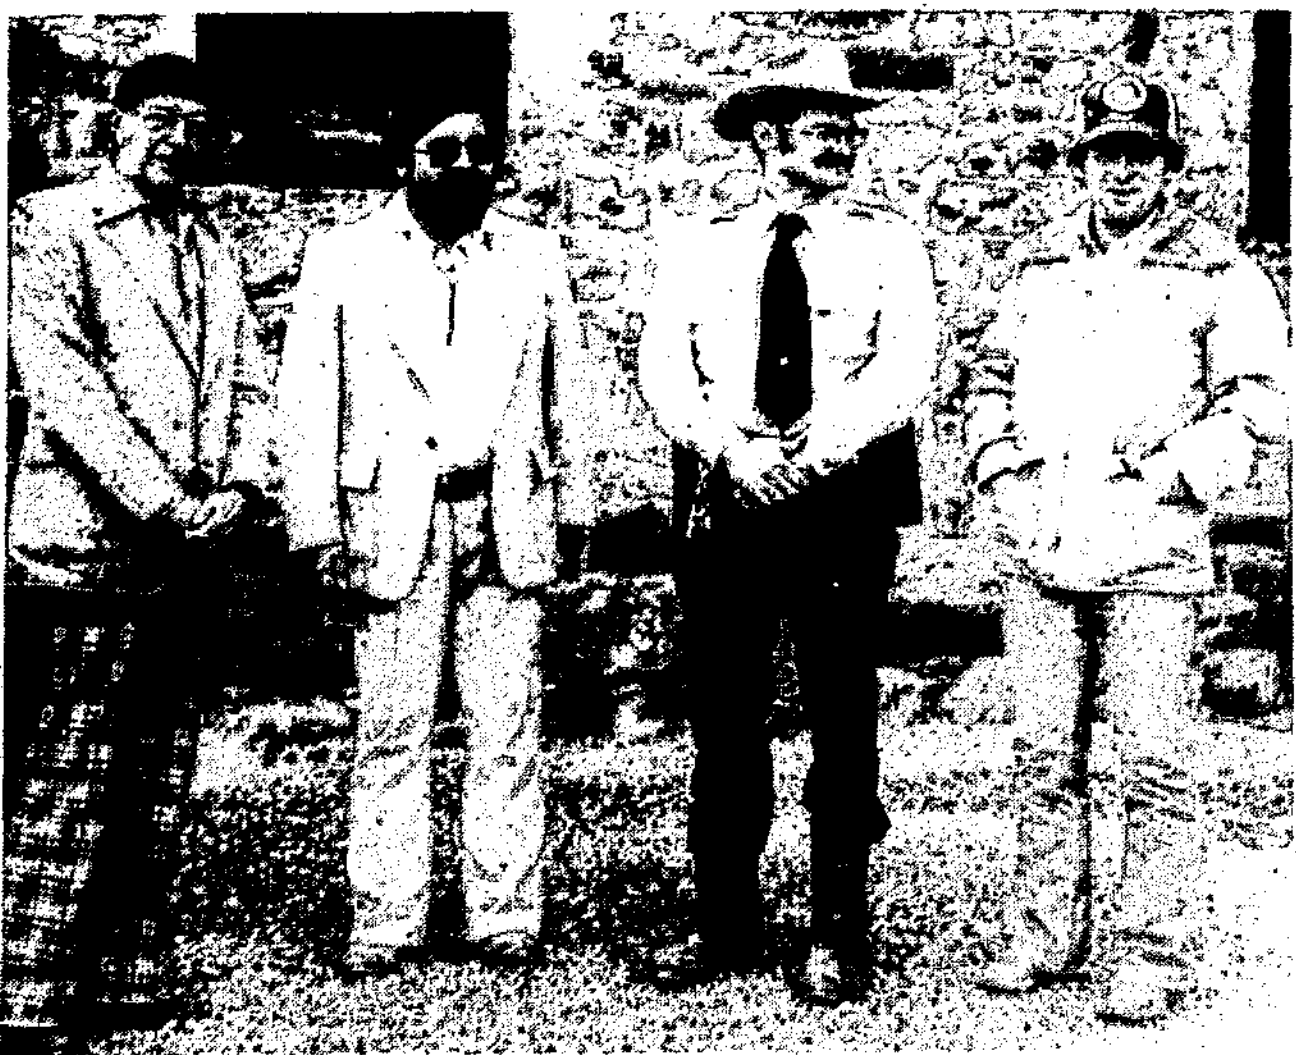

United States Senator Harrison "Jack" Schmitt said Thursday his office has a limited number of the 1980 Department of Agriculture Yearbook entitled "Cutting Energy Costs" and that it is available to interested New Mexicans at no charge.

The hardback book contains 408 pages designed to bring down energy costs of farmers, foresters, homemakers, communities and industry. It will be available on a first come, first served basis and supplies are limited.

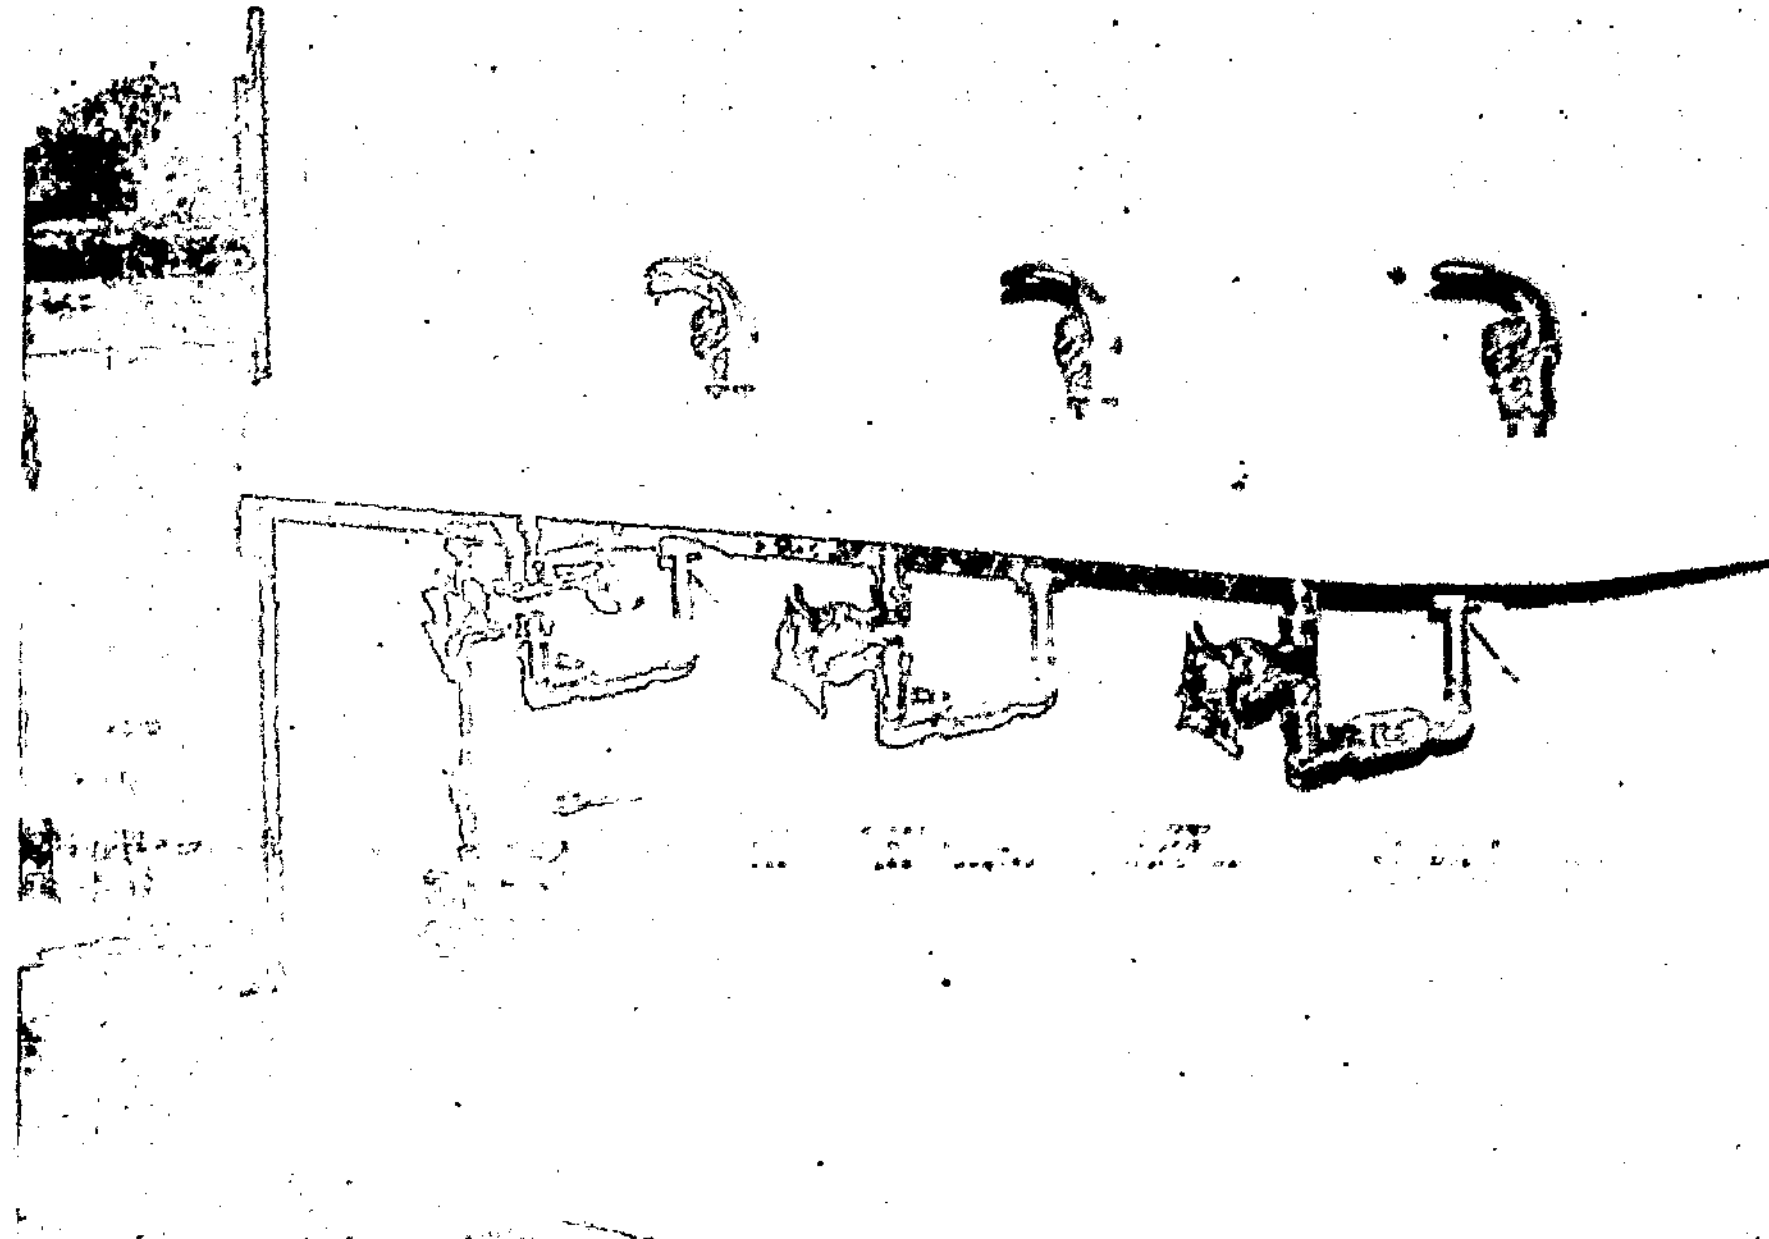

Schmitt said interested New Mexicans could obtain a copy while the book supply lasts by writing to: Energy Yearbook, Senator "Jack" Schmitt, 248 Russell Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

WATER FOUNTAINS are needed as badly as anything at Nob Hill Elementary, according to principal Don Weems, who said much class time is lost because more than 200 children must stand in line to get a drink after recess. The above fountains, and one other unit, must serve the entire student body at Nob Hill.

MAINTENANCE equipment and physical education supplies are stored in the cafeteria of Nob Hill Elementary, since their normal storage spaces have been turned into small classrooms.

Storage shed burned today

A storage shed, thought to belong to Wally Hess of Ruidoso, was destroyed by fire early Monday morning.

The blaze was reported about 8:20 a.m., Monday, and Ruidoso fire units responding said the structure was "engulfed in flames" when they reached the scene, at a home behind Kings Supper Club.

The fire was brought under control within thirty minutes. A cause has not yet been determined.

Police activities

January 21 — Vandalism at Gateway Texaco Station. $300 damage when front door plate glass window was broken.
January 21 — Vandalism at Big T Restaurant. $75 in damage to a roadway sign.

January 21 — Report of antique picture missing from Salas Apartment.

January 22 — Report of Sanyo 19-inch color television, valued at $300, missing from Lookout Estates.

Man charged with battery

Paul Dean Schiele, 33, Ruidoso, was arrested late Saturday night on Center Street, after an unidentified caller complained that he was beating a woman.

Officer Ron Hentges, who answered the call, said the woman was sitting on the sidewalk while a man was "beating her with his fists."

She refused to be transported to the hospital, Hentges said, and left the scene with a female friend.

Schiele was released Sunday on $200 bond.

Local church will present film series

A series of films, "Focus on the Family," will be shown at 7 p.m., Tuesdays, January 27 through March 10, at the Gateway Church of Christ building.

The films, at which no admission will be charged and no collections taken, feature James C. Dodson, Ph. D., Associate Clinical Professor of Pediatrics at the University of Southern California School of Medicine. He is a licensed psychologist in California, author of several books and speaks on a radio series, "Focus on the Family."

Films to be shown include: "The Strong-Will Child," January 27, "Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit," February 3, "Christian Fathering," February 10, "Preparing for Adolescence," — Part One, "The Origins of Self-Doubt," February 17; Part Two, "Peer Pressure and Sexuality," February 24, "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Woman," — Part One, "The Lonely Housewife," March 3; Part Two, "Money, Sex and Children," March 10.

Garden Club members told about ravens

Ravens were the subject of a Ruidoso Garden Club program presented recently by Bill Streeter, science teacher at White Mountain Middle School. Streeter brought two living examples of the species for club members to observe.

Club president Bonnie Richardson displayed posters which were made by local students for the Environmental Poster contest sponsored by the National Council of State Garden Clubs. Winning posters from the area have been forwarded to the state chairman for further competition.

Richardson expressed her appreciation to the Ruidoso Municipal Schools for their cooperation on the poster project.

Members were advised that the club's publication on high altitude gardening should be ready for distribution this spring.

Richardson and Jeanie Whitman were voted "Members of the Month" for their work on the poster contest. Hostesses Beth Daugherty and Walterine Hughes served refreshments to the group following the program.

his home this week, from committee member Mary Parsons, center, and Richard Sando right. Pat Healy was first place winner and Roger Holmes took second place honors.

Brownie troop holds 'tasting bee'

Brownie Troop Three got a sampling of international foods Wednesday, thanks to the efforts of four local restaurants, who provided the girls with a "tasting bee."

Brownies are working toward the Juliette Low World Friendship Patch, in honor of the founder of Girl Scouts of America, Juliette Low.

One of 16 requirements for receiving the patch was to sample foods from several other countries. Nottingham's Deli and Catering responded by providing several kinds of sausage served in Germany. Sierra Bake Shoppe treated the troop to several kinds of Danish pastry.

Pizza Hut provided several types of their supreme style pizza and Dos Amigos served beef and bean nachos, and sopapillas.

The "tasting bee" was one of 13 prescribed activities the girls have to complete to earn their badge, according to troop leader Kim Pickett. They must also do three activities they select on their own.

Other activities include learning how to become a United States citizen; studying five major religions of the world; prepare a friendship envelope with a message for a pen pal; study women of other countries who are artists, scientists and writers;

Make a new resident of the community feel welcome; celebrate a holiday using international customs; become familiar with currencies from six other countries; and learn how to say "Thank You" in other languages.

Pickett said the troop will earn the badge by late February. "We want to

State gymnastics championships here Saturday

Preparations for the 1981 New Mexico State Class III Gymnastics Championships are well underway, and "things are going well," according to Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy (RGA) director John Eberle. RGA is the site of the championships, set for this Saturday. Approximately 300 people are expected to attend, Eberle said. "We're expecting 65 gymnasts," he said, "and about 250 spectators."

The meet will be broken into two sessions because of the anticipated crowd — a 10 a.m., session and a 3 p.m., session.

Admission fees are $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. Admission will be charged for each session. "In other words, it will cost one adult $3 to attend both," he said. There will be a free awards session at 6 p.m.

Teams from eight New Mexico cities have entered the championships, with ten of the state's 18 eligible clubs represented. Albuquerque has four different clubs competing. Albuquerque Gymnastics School has the most gymnasts entered, with 18. Gymnastics Unlimited, Heights YMCA and Gold Cup Gymnastics are the other Duke City schools entered. Other teams are from Santa Fe, Silver City, Artesia, Los Alamos, Las Cruces, Alamogordo and Ruidoso.

To qualify for the meet, a gymnast had to score 28.0 or better in a compulsory (required) routine in actual competition. Many of the gymnasts competing scored 30.0 or better, Eberle said.

Among the top gymnasts to be in the meet are Debbie Marler of Gymnastics Unlimited, 33.30; Kim Culler, Gymnastics Unlimited, 32.20; Cathy Martinez, Gold Cup, 32.35; Michelle St. Oves, Alamogordo, 32.50; Ann Holms, Albuquerque Gymnastics School, 31.80. Ruidoso will be represented by Amy Thornton, 29.1, and Angela Jones, 28.20.

Awards will be presented to the top six finishers in three age groups for each of the four events (uneven parallel bars, floor exercise, balance beam and vaulting horse), as well as all around.

Plus, there will be awards for the meet-winning team, and commemorative T-shirts.

Though Gymnastics Unlimited scored the highest qualifying team (96.0), Eberle feels Albuquerque Gymnastics School is the favorite, but don't count out Gold Cup.

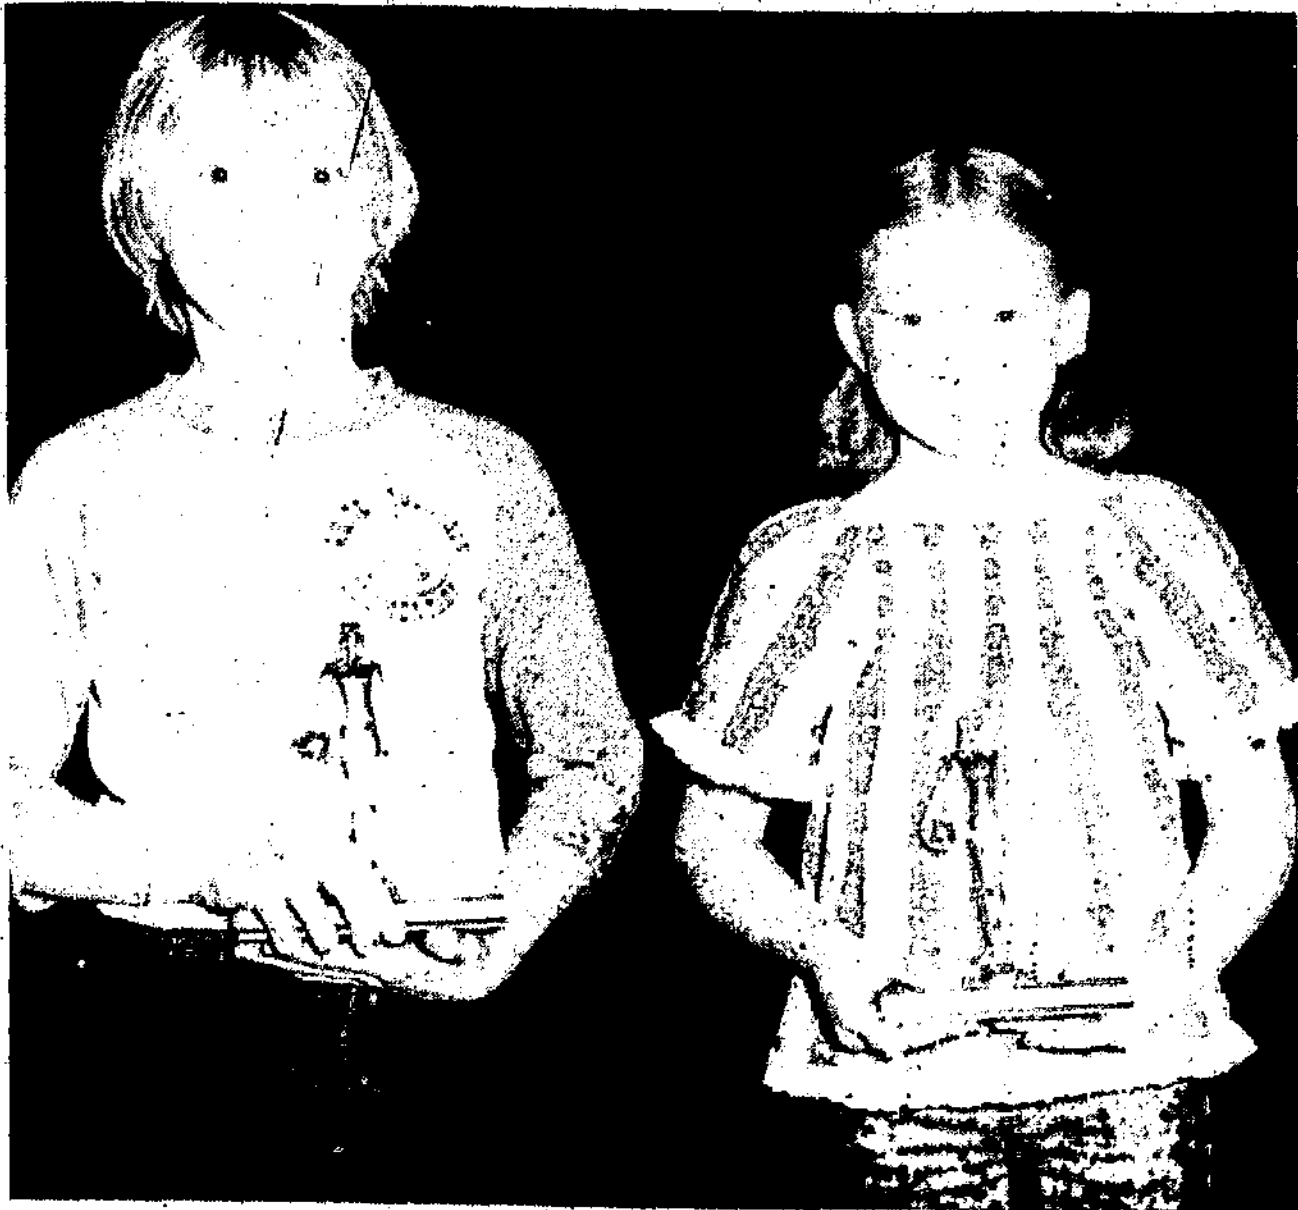

"Albuquerque Gymnastics had so many qualifiers with such high scores, I just think they have to be the favorite," he said. The school had a team score of 95.0, but so did Gold Cup.

But qualifying scores don't mean a whole lot, Eberle said. "Class III's had new compulsory routines this year and a lot of girls qualified early in the season before all the judges had agreed on how to score their performances," Eberle said.

Eberle hopes to host a state meet here each year, and is pushing Ruidoso hard in gymnastics circles.

In fact, the program for Saturday's meet has a map of Ruidoso and a few words on what the area has to offer visitors.

The Ruidoso News

SPORTS

AS THE ONLY entrant in the Girls' 10-11 bracket in Saturday's Elks Hoop Shoot, Lori Walker was first.

BOYS' 10-11 WINNERS in Saturday's Elks Hoop Shoot, from the left, Kirk Ryan, with 18 out of 25, first, and John Parker, second. Kirk will compete in regional play Saturday in Las Cruces.

Braves come from behind to beat Holloman

The White Mountain Middle School Braves decided to make things look dramatic against Holloman in Alamogordo Thursday, according to Dean Hood.

The final was 38-37 in the Braves' favor, thanks to Harry Ensor's game winning bucket with 40 seconds left. But the Braves scored exactly half their points — 19 — in the final stanza.

"We were on vacation the first three periods," Hood said. "Then in the fourth quarter we did everything right."

The first three, though, saw the Braves score only three, nine and seven points, compared to 29 for Holloman.

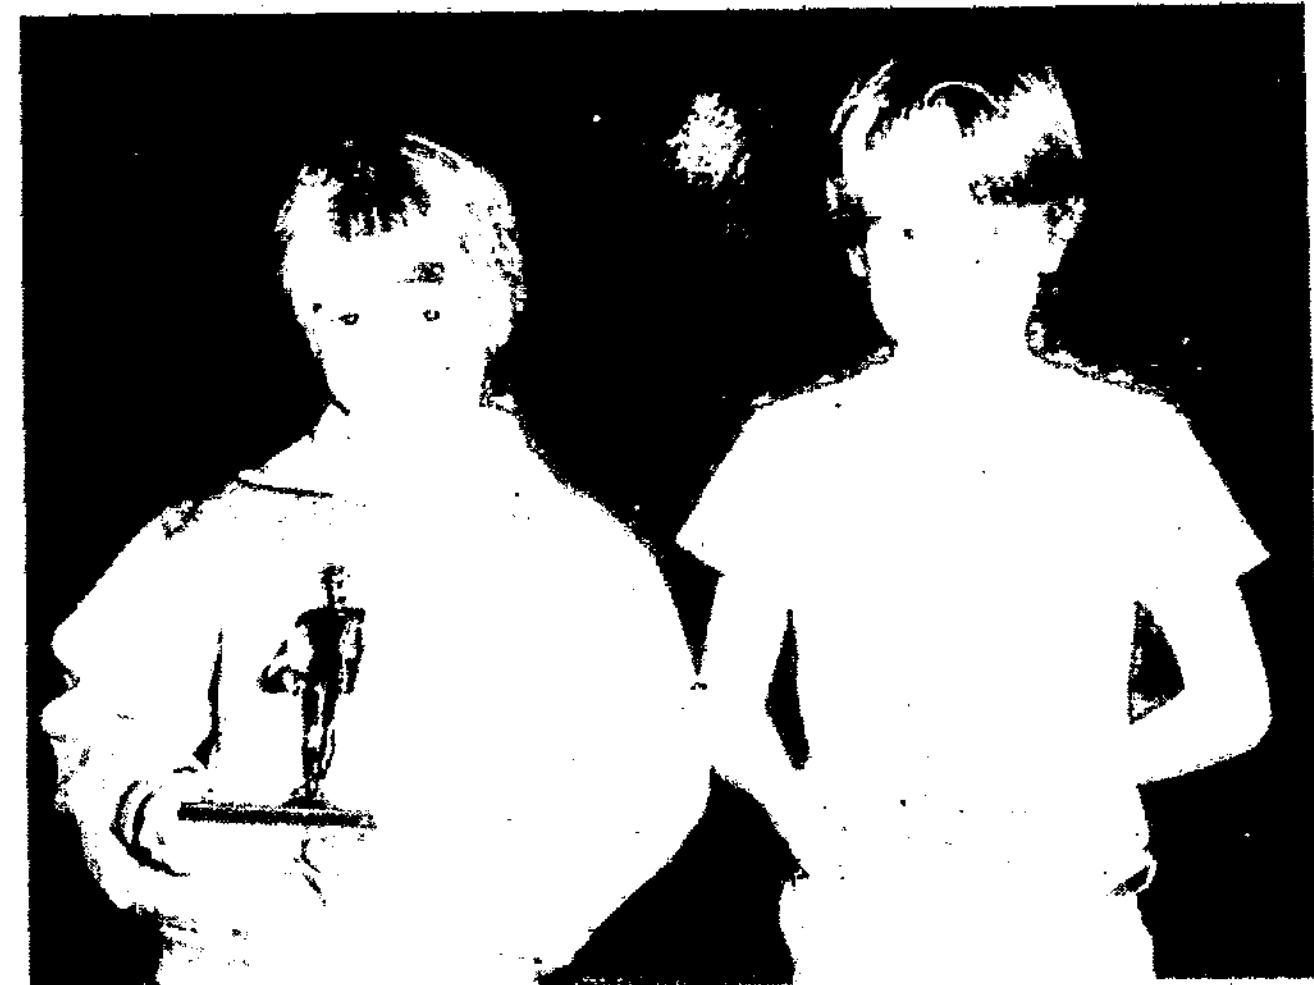

But Ensor, who claimed scoring honors with 16 points (10 in the fourth period) brought the Braves back and put White Mountain up by one with less than a minute left.

Then the defense took over and clamped a lid on the Holloman basket.

High scorer behind Ensor was Patric Pearson with nine, Jeff Knox with eight, Joe Bellinger with three and Chris Woodul with two.

BOYS' 12-13 WINNERS in Saturday's Elks Hoop Shoot, from the left, Joe Bellinger, with 14 out of 25, first, and Kirk Taylor, second. Joe will compete in regional play Saturday in Mayfield High School gymnasium, Las Cruces, beginning at 9 a.m.

Booster Club sponsoring Saturday dinner

The Ruidoso Warrior Booster Club is hosting an enchilada dinner this Saturday in the Ruidoso High School cafeteria.

Dinner will begin at 5 p.m., continuing through 8 p.m., in conjunction with the Warriors' Homecoming basketball game with Silver City.

Adult tickets are $3.50 per person and $1.50 for students under 12.

Desserts will also be available for a donation, with a 50 cent minimum donation required.

Softball league sets organizational meeting Thursday

The Ruidoso Mens' Softball League will have an organizational meeting for the upcoming summer season Thursday at 7 p.m., in the Community Public Service building, 394 Sudderth Drive.

New officers will be elected and plans for the season will be discussed. All persons interested in playing should attend.

Capitan edges Ruidoso in Mescalero tournament

The Ruidoso Warrior freshman cage team took second place in the recent Freshman Basketball Tournament held in Mescalero, losing to Capitan in the finals, 41-30.

Though down only 21-16 at the half, Ruidoso was outscored 9-2 in the third period, and that proved to be the difference.

Michael Forte led the Ruidoso scoring with 12, followed by Cyrus Simmons with six, Gary Burgess with five, Gary Gregson, Ruben Chino and Robert Swanner with two apiece, and Javy Cadena with one.

Todd Procter was Capitan's high scorer with 13, followed by Mike Rooks with seven, Danny Cummins with six, Rudy Saiz with five, Eddie Davis with four, Troy Herd with two, and Jerry Lobb and Cid Allen with one each.

Ruidoso made the finals with a 44-43 last second win over Tularosa, and Capitan earned its title berth with a first round 70-38 victory over Hondo.

Hondo finished third in the tourney, with a 65-45 win over Tularosa. Charlie Chavez was high point man for Hondo with an astounding 39 points.

Simmons, Chino and Burgess of Ruidoso made the all tournament team, as did Capitan's Procter, Cummins and Davis. Ruidoso's Forte was named the tourney's most valuable player.

Sportin' Life

... a column of opinion ...

by

Mark Bagby

Surely everyone who is within eye or ear shot of a television set has seen the commercial with Mean Joe Greene.

The one for Coca-Cola, I mean, where the little kid trades his cold bottle of Coke for Mean Joe's old nasty, smelly jersey.

According to a national poll, that commercial was considered the best commercial in the country last year.

And, now, are you ready for this? They're gonna take that kid and Mean Joe and make a whole movie out of it.

No fooling, this is on the level.

They're really gonna make a full length TV movie out of it. NBC is supposedly interested in it. They're about done with the script, I read in the Albuquerque Journal Thursday.

Mean Joe claims the commercial has brought him legions of fans — not that the star defensive tackle of the Pittsburgh Steelers is lacking in that department.

He said in an interview (again in the Journal) he's made tackles this last year and the running back says, "Say, Joe, I like your commercial, man."

(I have a hard time hearing Earl Campbell say that to Mean Joe. I wonder if Mean Joe tells Earl how much he likes him in his Skoal commercial?)

Now I got to admit Mean Joe did a heckuva job in that commercial. Did you know he had to drink like 12 Cokes in one gulp (or rather, at one gulp each), and it took 17 hours of filming to get it down just right?

You do sense a feeling between that kid and Mean Joe, though. The upcoming movie is supposed to be about the tender relationship between a football player and a disease stricken youngster.

I can hear the ol' heart strings twanging already.

I do have one question, though — what's gonna happen to the Steelers?

I mean, they've done a movie about Rocky Bleier, and he retired. Terry Bradshaw is talking about becoming a movie star and then he'll have to leave the pro football ranks. But what about dear old Mr. Greene? Does this mean one of the premier defensive tackles in the league is doffing his helmet for a star on his dressing room door?

Say it ain't so, Mean Joe.

He ain't no Bum.

Well, well, after all the speculation is said and done, Bum Phillips was finally hired as the head coach of the New Orleans Saints.

Surprise, surprise.

It was to be expected, to say the least. Now it remains to be seen if he can work the wonders he did at Houston.

Bum says New Orleans has better talent than Houston did when he took over there.

But, on the other hand, they don't have Earl Campbell, either.

Then, on the other hand, they do have a top quarterback in Archie Manning.

But again, on the other hand, he seems to get hurt a lot.

That's due, on the other hand (I'm running out of hands unless I get an octopus), to the lack of what you'd call an offensive line. They're not offensive — mostly nonexistent.

Let's see — the Saints have good backs and receivers, a weak line, a poor defense, but a very solid kicking game. Maybe Bum has something. Let's see if he can match his first season at Houston — 10 wins.

A tip of the hat (a Stetson, natch) to ya, Bum — good luck.

Gone fishin'.

Well, gang, I hope you enjoyed this column 'cause they ain't no more until next week.

Years truly is going on vacation for the same length of time.

To say I am ready for a vacation is to say the hostages were ready for freedom.

This is my first ever, honest to God vacation. Golly, I'm not quite sure of just what I'm gonna do. But I'll think of something, of that, I am sure.

See you later!

The Dreamer

BY DANNIE STORM

January Leads Us
Cheerfully On

This message is being written to you on January twenty-two, just at high noon. All the mountain world is in a mood of calm and quiet joy.

The blue silken sky outlines the mountain horizon all around ever so clearly, with the outlines of the evergreens plainly traced, even in the distance.

There is a crystal clearness in the air that lets your eyesight reach into the most distant places in the shining world of hills, dales, and golden meadows. The mid-day sun shines straight down upon the field of snow just south of the house, turning it into a blanket of glistening, sparkling white, almost blinding to your sight.

Now, from aloft in the still air comes that sound of the young year, the clear call of the crow gliding overhead, the only such sound in all the world — a special little song of the glad new year. It echoes from the sky like a voice in a dream, awakening for a moment the world from its drowsy resting in the noon-day lull. The voice of the new-year-crow tells us that the weather is fair, and that all is well, that we are off to a happy beginning in our new year.

The black Storm Ranch Dog, Solo Vito, was lying stretched out sleeping in the sun near the meate, and when the crow sent his call from the sky, Solo lifted his head, listening and looking up, and then a faint smile crossed his Coyote features. Then he got up and went over to a patch of snow under the cedar tree, and rolled over and over, taking a mouthful of snow, and then looking at you with an impish look in his golden colored eyes.

Solo dearly loves his home here and is proud of his mission of looking after the place. As the years go by he is getting more playful and full of fun. He begs me to take a run with him over the snow, and when I come home in the evening, he will go running in circles by way of welcome.

Little Shady Logan, the Little Spirit Dog was born with a playful nature. He would play touch football, run foot races, play tag, and all kinds of games and jokes. Solo had a rough time, raising himself in the wilderness; and at first the world was not much of a fun place. He took things seriously. Now he is beginning to see the lighter side of life.

the dog to be the companion in our pleasures and our toils, hath invested him with a nature noble and incapable of deceit."

Countless words of tribute have been written about the dog. And yet as well as I can remember the only person to make up a song about him is our beloved American composer, Stephen Foster, author of "Old Black Joe," "Way Down upon the Suwannee River," "Beautiful Dreamer," "Oh Susanna," "My Old Kentucky Home" and many other classics.

Like many who have brought great happiness to others, Stephen Foster had a great deal of sorrow in his own life. Some of his songs reflected this, yet most of his work has a happy tone; and even his sad songs have something about them that uplifts you after all. Such a song is his masterpiece:

"Old Dog Tray"
(first verse and chorus)

"The morn of life is past,
And evening comes at last;
It brings me a dream
Of a once happy day.
Of merry forms I've seen
Upon the village Green
Sporting with my Old Dog Tray.

Old Dog Tray's ever faithful
Grief cannot drive him away
He's gentle and he's kind.
I'll never, never find
A better friend than Old Dog Tray.

A Message From Jack Frost

Dear Friends In Lincoln County:
Well here we are over into the New Year toward the end of January. You will notice I brought you a little snow, and I have ordered some more. Snow lasts longer this time of year on account of the sun being lower in its journey through the sky.

I am trying somehow to spare you folks the cold weather that has fallen upon the people back in the East. Before we could get the cold wave settled in the right places, it stampeded and some of it wound up down in Florida.

If our plans work out we will bring you snow enough without real cold. Here in Lincoln County it is easier to do this than in some other places, on account of the sheltering effect of the hills, and the warm sun during the day.

I am sure we are started out on a very fine new year, and I will be seeing you through the winter and spring.

Adios for this time, till we meet again
As ever

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Governor's aren't supposed to electrify the citizenry with their annual reports to the Legislature, Governor King didn't.

But he did have one element in his State of the State speech, delivered last Tuesday, which some of us found rather startling.

That was his proposal to combine the functions of the Public Service Commission with those of the Corporation Commission.

It's not that this is a totally new suggestion. It isn't. Bills to that effect have even been proposed in past Legislatures.

What's unusual this time is that the suggestion comes from the executive branch.

It's not often, you see, that this part of government recommends abolition of an executive agency with three good appointive jobs at a high salary range.

Governors normally like posts of that kind and want to keep them around.

But maybe we're presuming too much when we suggest it would be the appointive PSC which would be absorbed into the elective Corporation Commission under the Governor's plan.

When his bill comes down from the fourth floor of the Roundhouse, it may go in just the opposite direction — though to disestablish the Corporation Commission would require a change in the Constitution.

The present system is confusing. One agency of government sets rates for gas and for electricity, while another (among other things) sets them for telephone companies.

Representative Ron Gentry is carrying around a draft of a simple bill to combine the two agencies — which includes, by the way, a stiff provision that any member of the new body who accepts anything of value from any company under his supervision is deemed to have ipso facto resigned from his post.

Gentry, you will remember, is a former employee of Public Service Company of New Mexico, one of the electric utilities presently regulated by the PSC. It is just possible that his disagreement with that company, which resulted in law suits and mutual recrimination, may have something to do with his interest in the matter at this time.

The Governor was aware of that interest when he wrote his speech.

Gentry tells us he did talk with the Governor about his intentions in this matter, and he has done considerable research on it as it applies to other states.

Unfortunately that research doesn't prove much. It shows that electric rates (which Gentry evidently chose as the most important criterion), are lower than New Mexico's in 13 states with elected groups which correspond to our PSC. Unfortunately for that as argumentation in favor of the measure, it also shows that 27 states with appointed commissions like ours also have lower electric rates than we do.

In other words, if you're for this move because you think it will cut your electric bill, maybe you'd better think about the matter a little longer.

It is just possible, however, that this is the bill about which a partisan was blabbing, in a spiritous mood, before the session was started. He said, "One thing we're going to do this year is make it clear that Jerry Geist (president of Public Service Company of New Mexico) doesn't own the state of New Mexico any longer."

Geist says he is unaware that he ever owned it or acted as if he did.

This proposal is fraught with great promise for under-the-surface in-fighting and for public voting by legislators for reasons which have little to do with the issue.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

A GREAT IDEA!

The drilling of a well at Sierra Blanca and the resulting "planned snow fall" will have a tremendous impact on the economy of Ruidoso.

It is a frustrating matter for the local merchants, and particularly for the lodger establishments, to plan the time of the year immediately following the Aspenade, Mule Races and other events which fill the void left after the closing of Ruidoso Downs.

Looking back over the weather reports for the past 4 to 5 years there simply isn't any pattern of when it will snow and how much. Being assured that the slopes will open about October 15 each year will allow some definite planning by all who serve the ski folks.

Additional man made snow will also fill in those periods of light snow which also creates problems for skiers who come to Ruidoso to find that conditions are less than adequate. Advertising can be planned long in advance and will eliminate a lot of guess work now going into our advertisement program. To the person whose idea was to drill this well — we should erect a monument in your honor.

This expected influx of additional visitors points up, again, the need for a well planned water development program, which, at this time we still await its arrival.

J.A. "Al" Jung

Dear editor:

This letter is in reference to the proposal of drilling a well in Sierra Blanca Ski Area to make artificial snow to improve skiing conditions.

"Hey! you want water in the Ruidoso area! Poke a hole and there it is in abundance — 400 gallons per minute from a 200 foot deep well." Sounds like a western movie!

This may not be true from geohydrological point of view. Experience shows that possibilities for successful development of ground water are always improved by careful study of regional and local hydrology.

This necessitates the development of the geologic map and sections and the accompanying explanations of just which rocks are likely to carry water and where they are beneath the surface.

One easy way to gather information pertaining to ground water development could be obtained from well logs. There is very little published information on the aforesaid topic for the Ruidoso area.

The general geologic formation almost dictates that there is no large aquifer in the Ruidoso area that can serve as a stabilized source of water over a period of time. There are a few water-bearing formations and artesian conditions in this area. These sources could be tapped for temporary sources of water supply.

However, the ground water sources are usually recharged from water generated from snow and rainfall. Therefore, careful study is necessary before getting involved with expensive well drilling operations. Otherwise, it might be very well an exercise in futility.

Harl Mukhoty

Dear editor:

I come to the citizenry of Ruidoso with a pressing problem: The Water and Sewer Rate Study. As most of you are aware, the village council ordered a study of the problem about three months ago to the tune of some $20,000. The report has been received and studied and, much to my surprise, the rate increase recommended is so far out one can hardly believe it.

At present your minimum rate on water is in the neighborhood of $4 per month for the first 1,000 gallons used, then $1.10 for every 1,000 gallons used thereafter. Your sewer rate is a flat $3.75.

The "Proposed Water Rate Ordinance" issued to us on January 7 suggests that, for residential use, a fixed charge of $8.44 be established and that $1.71 be charged for every 1,000 gallons of water used; also, that the sewer proposal for residential use be a fixed charge of $5.43 plus a commodity charge of 96¢ per 1,000 gallons of sewage discharged for the months of December, January, February and March. The commodity charge for winter months shall be based upon 94% of the metered or estimated volume of water usage during each of these months.

Rest assured we need an increase in rates but why not go to a minimum of $8.44 for water with every 1,000 gallons used credited toward the $8.44; the sewer rate to a flat $5.43 and forget the commodity use?

If you feel this important to you, call me or any of the trustees as to your thinking.

George P. White, Trustee

Village of Ruidoso

Dear editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many business people of Ruidoso who made the Ruidoso Gymnastics Association Benefit Auction such a success. Due to the tremendous cooperation of so many people, we were able to raise more than enough money for the installation of new light fixtures on our gymnastics facility.

There are some very special people I would like to recognize publicly for their generosity. They are Jim and Deanne Woodridge, Gordon Snidow, Don and Dorothy Dale, Ed and Mimi Jungbluth, Sonya Smith, Robert Hayes and Ruidoso State Bank, and Paul Southwick and Eagle Creek Ski Area.

Thank you and all the other people of Ruidoso for supporting the gymnastics program. Together we are building something very special for the children of Ruidoso.

The Class III State Gymnastics Competition will be hosted by the Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy, on January 31. Thanks to the good people of Ruidoso, the meet will be held in a facility of which our community can be very proud.

Jeanie Whitman

President,
Ruidoso Gymnastics Association

Yours and Ours

editorial

A serious effort is being launched by Ruidoso's trustees and the school board to upgrade the quality of living in our village.

The village's bond proposal, somewhere in the vicinity of $1.6 million, would provide improved fire protection, better garbage service, an excellent paved street system and as fine a jail, police and judicial building as exists anywhere in the state.

The schools' needs are basically those of providing adequate classroom facilities to handle the projected increase in enrollment in the years ahead. Based on a five percent growth formula, which school officials have determined is accurate, school enrollment will be about 1,900 by 1985 and will soar to more than 2,600 by the late 1990s. This need will cost the taxpayers about $3 million.

The schools' obligation to our children is to provide them with the best education possible. It would seem this is an obligation that school district patrons should willingly share. Ruidoso's school system is one of the highest ranking in the state for quality of education. This we should be proud of.

The village's planned projects will merely provide many of the services and conveniences the taxpayers have long been demanding — projects that the village can't finance without the bond money.

At this juncture, we're apparently standing on the first rung of the long ladder of growth in this area. Progress is coming — progress costs money.

The voters must decide the future of our schools and village growth. The problems that will develop in both areas if these projects are denied could result in Ruidoso becoming a virtual ghost town — instead of one of New Mexico's finest cities. —CD

IRAN'S COMEUPPANCE DUE

First reports by the freed Iranian hostages indicate that treatment meted out to United States prisoners by the Japanese in World War II was about on a par with the way the Iranians treated our people during captivity.

Now that President Reagan can call the shots ... we trust he'll begin by stomping on Khomeini's toes ... so hard that he'll have to walk on his hands between his bed and biffy.

As to that agreement signed by Our Jimmy ... et al ... that piece of paper has served its purpose ... and should be summarily discarded ... 'cause it's a whole new chess game now ... and Khomeini and his fellow barbarians should be made to realize they don't hold any pawns.

And ... considering Reagan's reaction to the Iranian situation ... if he don't get into no sweat about completing the agreement stipulations ... he should be able to come up with action that'll leave that tribe of barbarians wishing they'd never held our people captive.

And if Reagan's action is drastic enough ... other barbarians in other piddling nations might get the idea that thumbing their noses at Uncle Sam isn't the healthiest exercise they can perform.

Hopefully Reagan will advise Khomeini that the scrap of paper he holds is a joke ... and see if'n the Imam will laugh that off. Perhaps sending the signed agreement back to him ... with "steer manure" spelled in the common vernacular scrawled across each page in blood red ink'd get his attention.

Yup ... Iran got their pint of blood ... now it's our turn to collect the pound of flesh ... and not be concerned with how much it hurts.

Must be more than one way to curdle the Imam's curry.

ATTENTION GRABBER

If the news that Senator Ted Kennedy and Joan are permanently splitting the sheets didn't grab your attention ... chances are you are pretty well inured to sensationalism ... even if it's more or less expected as one of those eventualities that's bound to materialize ... sooner or later.

Ah, well ... being's they've been more or less apart for three years ... they won't have to go through that odious business of getting over togetherness.

HAIG'S OUR MAN NOW

Now that Alexander Haig is our new secretary of state, Reagan can be assured that he's made one point with the Democrats ... he's his own man ... and that $3-6 margin of approval in Haig's case should be the turning point in making Watergate water under the bridge.

There's this much about having a four star General as secretary of state ... he'll be able to size up military situations ... or possible military situations ... with an experienced eye.

Haig should be a forceful man ... 'cause it just seems as though his conduct during five days of interrogation ... and instances of attempted derogation ... indicate that he'll never be accused of mumbling when he's speaking to anyone in his official capacity.

Why it's not inconceivable that Haig might have some ideas to help Reagan curdle the Imam's curry.

THE BOY SCOUT FEED

Ruidoso's Boy Scouts ... that's who ... are sponsoring their annual big game feed at the Elks Lodge February 1 ... that's this Sunday coming up ... and those Scouts are sure hoping it'll be your Sunday for coming down ... to help eat up all the comestibles as they'll have ready for your consumption.

And now's the time ... like this very night ... for you to dig into your freezer ... for such hunks of wild game as you can spare ... and kinda get it sorta set aside ... to donate to the Scouts ... 'cause they'll appreciate same more'n you can possibly realize.

'Course the Elks as'll be helping the Scouts prepare this fabulous repast will also be duly appreciative ... 'cause, as much as variety is the spice of life, so is being able to offer a variety of wild game at a wild game feed.

Why, once you make up your mind on what kind of meat you can donate ... the next step is to bug Scoutmaster Rudy Flack ... nollin' to it ... just dial 257-2870 ... and tell him what you got to lay on him ... and you can get all the delivery information you'll need ... plus profuse thanks.

BRIEF BIT: Sure hope the weather moderates in Georgia to the point where Our Jimmy can get in lots of practice in how not to snap his titties off. ...CD

Wildlife transmitting information to scientists via biotelemetry

A loggerhead turtle swims a solitary southwest course in the Gulf of Mexico. Although out of sight of any person, her path is being carefully charted.

A polar bear crosses a vast Arctic expanse in search of a suitable den. Here is the only shadow cast on the frigid wasteland, but each mile that takes her closer to Siberia is being meticulously recorded.

Both the turtle and the bear have been subjects of studies which apply the same communications technology that beams live TV news and entertainment into the public's living rooms. Now, satellites are adding a new dimension to biotelemetry, the study of animals at a distance to record biological information without disrupting normal behavior. But whether satellites or standard radio units are used, telemetry continues to revolutionize wildlife research, yielding invaluable information to improve wildlife management.

Information may be beamed from a polar bear's 10-pound radio-fitted neck harness or a pine mouse's 1.4-gram, ring-sized transmitter collar: the electronics specialists and wildlife biologists at the Denver Wildlife Research Center (DWRC) tailor transmitting devices for dozens of species, depending on size, life style, habitat, and the type of information needed.

Radio telemetry came of age with the development of transistors in the 1960's and integrated circuitry in the 1970's, providing small parts and increased reliability so that electronic tracking became practical. DWRC, a major research station of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, is a pioneer in this area and works with other Federal, State, and private research teams to expand telemetry's capabilities.

Tracking sea animals is a special challenge, since radio signals cannot be carried through salt water. DWRC teamed with the United States Department of Commerce's National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) to develop ways to track endangered sea turtle species and in 1978, specialists released baby loggerhead turtles into the Gulf of Mexico with radio transmitters encased in floats tethered to their shells. Trackers hoped the transmitters would signal when the reptiles surfaced for air every few minutes. The experiment proved that telemetry could be a valuable information tool, although limited by small-power transmission to trackers in light aircraft.

To help save any endangered species, scientists must learn long term behavioral information. Toward this end, the Commerce agency funded a cooperative project with DWRC to track an adult loggerhead turtle by satellite. A 212 pound turtle was released in October 1979 with a cylindrical float containing a transmitter compatible with a NASA weather satellite system. The turtle's 1,400 mile movements were tracked for eight months, and indicated the big reptile preferred to stay offshore at about 10 fathoms. But, as the researchers were recording the turtle's movements, the satellite beamed the unbelievable: the sea turtle was in Galena, Kansas!

The riddle of the grounded reptile was soon solved. The transmitting device, its tether cut, was traced to a fisherman who had discovered it on a trip to Port Arthur, Texas. The souvenir served as a doorknob and child's toy until its signals led the team to it. However, the fate of the turtle remains unknown.

The Fish and Wildlife Service's electronics experts had been encouraged by their first satellite tracking experiment in 1978, despite one study subject which, unaware of such human conventions as national borders, crossed into Kansas. With the cooperation of NASA, the Service had begun to study the feasibility of satellite tracking to learn the possible effects of energy exploration on polar bear denning habits.

Uses for standard telemetry appear almost unlimited. A simple transmitter that can report an animal's movements to a field researcher may provide information to help resolve pressing wildlife-related problems. Such transmitters on vampire bats in Latin America enabled biologists to discover that the biting, blood-lapping carriers of rabies lived in colonies in certain caves, apart from other, harmless bat species. By the mid-1970's, selective controls could be applied to keep the vampire in check, protecting humans and saving millions of dollars in livestock losses.

Federally protected species like the loggerhead turtle and the polar bear are often subjects for telemetry studies. Service researchers use transmitters on endangered Florida manatees that congregate around warmwater springs in the winter to see where these elusive, otherwise solitary creatures go when spring arrives. Transmitters have also been used to study movements of the endangered shortnose sturgeon in the Altamaha River in Georgia. Service fishery researchers have even developed tiny transmitters that are ingested by salmon. The resulting information is being used to help restore depleted salmon runs on both coasts.

Grizzly bears, condors, falcons, and dozens of other species have been successfully fitted with transmitters. Each study brings needed information to scientists who constantly work to improve techniques for managing species, whether they are threatened by humans, or humans are threatened by them.

Down, fiberfill garments provide winter warmth

Goose down is considered to be the warmest insulation for its weight, according to Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist at New Mexico State University.

The network of fluffy down filaments traps layers of non-conducting, still air within the garment that keeps warmth in and cold out. Down is also recommended for winter garments because it breathes — that is, it absorbs moisture from the body and transports it to the outside of the fabric where it evaporates.

Down also tends to be form fitting, molding to the wearer's body and eliminating large air bubbles inside the garment that might cause a cold spot, Wright said. Down is extremely resilient, has a long life and is reasonably easy to clean by either washing or dry cleaning.

The major disadvantage of goose down is that it is expensive. It also takes a long time to dry if it gets wet. Anyone with a dust allergy should think twice about getting a down garment because, over time, down will collect dust and may aggravate dust allergies.

Another disadvantage of down is that it must be quilted horizontally into a garment, and cold spots may result where the stitching compresses the down fiber. Polyester fiberfilled jackets are good alternatives to those filled with goose down. It eliminates the dust allergy problem, and people who live where cold temperatures are accompanied with rain or drizzle might find fiberfill desirable because it dries much more quickly than down.

Fiberfill comes in several forms. Polyester fibers can be given a special finish to make them slide back and forth against each other, providing softness and flexibility that is much like goose down. This form is often called synthetic down. Polyester fibers can also be crimped to form a thick, fluffy mass, or bonded to form a solid batt. This form, however, runs into limitations when used for clothing because it tends to hold a blocked shape and is less flexible than other forms.

A new polyester fiber made like a hollow tube reduces weight and has almost the same insulating qualities as down. It has been trademarked as Hollofil, and has become popular for winter garments.

Most fiberfill garments can be either machine or hand laundered, but will last longer with hand washing and air drying. None of the synthetic fiberfill fibers shrink, but they may be used in a garment whose inner or outer shell will shrink. Label instructions should be read carefully before washing a fiberfill garment.

Real Estate Facts

a public service of the
Ruidoso Board of Realtors

According to Federal government statistics, one American family in five moves each year. If you'll be making a move this year, the Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests the following guidelines for estimating costs.

The cost of a move is based on the weight and value of the household goods, the distance involved, and the special services the client may want, such as packing, storage, and delivery time.

Interstate movers are regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) and must file schedules of rates and charges. Moving firms will also furnish customers with rates upon request. Rates will vary from one company to another, but generally they are competitive. Since moving companies that operate on a local basis or city-to-city within a state are governed by different agencies in each state, their prices may fluctuate greatly.

Upon request, interstate moving companies must furnish a written estimate of the weight of the shipment and how much it probably will cost to move. If the client prefers, the company will furnish packing materials. Estimates are made on a "per cubic foot" basis. On an average, there are seven pounds to each cubic foot of furniture. Once a total weight is estimated, a price is determined for the distance the goods will be moved.

Remember, the exact cost of a move cannot be determined until all household goods are in the van and weighed. Estimates are not binding. The client is responsible for paying the charges based on the actual weight of the shipment.

The shipment's weight must be determined on a certified scale or by a certified weighmaster. The Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests that a client go to the scale and observe the weighing. The mover is required to notify the client in advance of the location of the scale, and he is obligated to permit the client to observe the weighing.

The weight of a shipment is determined by weighing the moving van before and after loading your shipment, and the difference (the net weight) is the weight upon which charges are levied.

The van should be weighed beforehand with the driver — but not the crew on board — all gas tanks full, and all pads, chains, dollies, hand trucks and other equipment needed for moving your goods.

There are three documents, all required by the ICC, that can be used to check the accuracy of the shipment's weight. The mover must furnish a "weight ticket," which indicates the van's weight before and after loading. A "bill of lading" will be issued at the time of pickup. This is the contract with the mover, and ICC regulations require that it carry the preloading weight of the van. In addition, each van driver is required to fill out a "driver's weight certificate" for each shipment transported in his vehicle. Any inaccuracies will surface in a quick comparison of these documents. Any errors or discrepancies should be corrected on the spot.

As an added safeguard, ICC regulations allow the client the right of having the van reweighed before and after delivery to the destination. The client is not required to pay for this reweighing if (1) the net weight is more than 120 pounds below the billed net weight, or (2) the billed net weight exceeds by more than 25 percent the estimated net weight.

What else will the client be required to pay for? Packing materials — boxes, cartons, barrels — provided by the movers are charged to the client. If the mover is requested to do the packing, an additional charge will show up on the bill. If the client is not ready to move into the new home or apartment immediately, he may want the mover to hold the goods in storage. For an additional charge, he will do so for up to 180 days.

How is payment made? Unless credit arrangements are made in advance, most movers expect full prepayment, or payment upon delivery in cash, certified check, travelers check or cashier's check.

Before moving, whether from state to state or locally, the Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests calling a number of moving companies for information on their services and estimates.

I-n-s-i-d-e the Outdoors

by Gary Dollahon

New Mexico has a variety of raptors, those known as chicken hawks and falcons. This group of birds is actually made up of hawks, vultures, owls, and eagles, and all are called birds of prey.

One of the most important things people should realize about these birds is they are all protected by law.

Hawks, owls, and vultures have been protected in New Mexico since 1971 and by federal law throughout the United States since 1972. Eagles have been protected by federal law even longer.

Yet, there is still considerable animosity toward this group of birds and they're often killed illegally.

Birds of prey are hunters with specialized beaks and talons which make them very adept at their occupation. Strong hooked beaks and sharp talons are their main weapons for catching, killing, and eating mammals, reptiles and fish.

Because raptors are accomplished hunters they sometimes come into conflict with man due to their competition for wild and domestic animals.

Sometimes the threat to human property is real, sometimes it is imagined. Often wild species of raptor poses no real threat to domestic food or livestock is killed simply because it is in the wrong spot at the wrong time.

Laws were enacted to protect these wild predators because they were becoming scarce. However, should raptors cause real problems for poultry and livestock owners, there are legal ways of handling them.

A large variety of raptors occurs in New Mexico, including several rare species protected by state and federal endangered species laws.

The rarer ones include the Mississippi Kite, bald eagle, osprey, caracara, and peregrine falcon.

Some of the more common hawks seen in New Mexico include the red-tailed hawk, Swainson's hawk, rough-legged hawk, ferruginous hawk, golden eagle, marsh hawk, prairie falcon, and American kestrel (or sparrow hawk).

There are nine other hawk species that occur in our state and three others that sometimes wander in New Mexico.

We also have one species of vulture in New Mexico. These are usually called buzzards by the average person, but they are actually turkey vultures. These birds are scavengers, which means they seldom kill their own prey, but instead spend hours gliding on air currents looking for carrion.

Several species of owls also inhabit New Mexico. Barn owls, screech owls, great horned owls, pygmy owls, elf owls, and burrowing owls are among these. Other resident owls include the flammulated owl, spotted owl, long-eared owl, short-eared owl, and saw-whet owl.

These birds of the night usually prey on small rodents and insects, and are thus beneficial to man, as are most raptors.

Under New Mexico law, it is illegal to take, attempt to take, possess, trap or ensnare, or in any manner to injure, maim or destroy hawks, vultures, and owls.

The only exceptions to this law are in the case of Indian religious purposes, scientific purposes, falconry purposes, and damage to commercial poultry and game bird operations. These exceptions are made in accordance with the laws and the regulations of the Department of Game and Fish, and through the use of special permits.

Chicken hawk or raptor? Varmint or bird of prey? Take a second look and think about what it really is, what purpose it serves, and what reason you have to let it live.

Newspaper logs stretch woodpile

Rolled newspaper logs are a good way to make the wood pile behind the house last longer, according to JoAnn Less, Extension housing specialist at New Mexico State University.

Such logs, whether rolled by hand or with a hand-cranked machine, will burn as long and give off about the same amount of heat as a wood log of the same size.

When paper logs are rolled with one of the hand-cranked, log-making devices, the paper is often moistened with water to make a tightly packed log. A tablespoon of liquid detergent added to a small tub of water will make a mixture that helps the paper stick together which, in turn, reduces the fly ash when the log is burned. A log made this way has to dry thoroughly before it is used.

Hand rolling usually is the fastest and easiest method to create a paper log. It's a good idea to stagger the newspaper sheets so pages are interlocking. This helps the log hold its shape better, and it results in an even density that aids thorough burning.

Newspaper logs sometimes need a little help to get started properly. A waxed milk carton can be split and used as the final outside wrap to aid starting and burning. The finished log can also be brushed with melted paraffin, or the ends can be dipped in paraffin.

Handmade logs can be made by wrapping the newspaper sheets around a broomstick, and tying the finished log in at least two places with string. When the broomstick is removed, the resulting center hole helps the log burn better.

If the broomstick method is used with dampened sheets of newspaper, the log should be tilted slightly when drying to make sure the center hole is fully dried.

Newspaper logs burn at a lower temperature than wood, so the fire is often not hot enough to consume the entire paper log. This can be overcome by burning wood and newspaper logs together in the fireplace.

Some people worry about the heavy metals, especially lead, that may have been used to make printing ink. However, most of today's newsprint inks are organic, and even the colored inks contain insignificant amounts of metal.

Wildlife transmitting information to scientists via biotelemetry

A loggerhead turtle swims a solitary southwest course in the Gulf of Mexico. Although out of sight of any person, her path is being carefully charted.

A polar bear crosses a vast Arctic expanse in search of a suitable den. Hers is the only shadow cast on the frigid wasteland, but each mile that takes her closer to Siberia is being meticulously recorded.

Both the turtle and the bear have been subjects of studies which apply the same communications technology that beams live TV news and entertainment into the public's living rooms. Now, satellites are adding a new dimension to biotelemetry, the study of animals at a distance to record biological information without disrupting normal behavior. But whether satellites or standard radio units are used, telemetry continues to revolutionize wildlife research, yielding invaluable information to improve wildlife management.

Information may be beamed from a polar bear's 10-pound radio-fitted neck harness or a pine mouse's 1.4-gram, ring-sized transmitter collar: the electronics specialists and wildlife biologists at the Denver Wildlife Research Center (DWRC) tailor transmitting devices for dozens of species, depending on size, life style, habitat, and the type of information needed.

Radio telemetry came of age with the development of transistors in the 1950's and integrated circuitry in the 1970's, providing small parts and increased reliability so that electronic tracking became practical. DWRC, a major research station of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, is a pioneer in this area and works with other Federal, State, and private research teams to expand telemetry's capabilities.

Tracking sea animals is a special challenge, since radio signals cannot be carried through salt water. DWRC teamed with the United States Department of Commerce's National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) to develop ways to track endangered sea turtle species and in 1978, specialists released baby loggerhead turtles into the Gulf of Mexico with radio transmitters encased in floats tethered to their shells. Trackers hoped the transmitters would signal when the reptiles surfaced for air every few minutes. The experiment proved that telemetry could be a valuable information tool, although limited by small-power transmission to trackers in light aircraft.

To help save any endangered species, scientists must learn long term behavioral information. Toward this end, the Commerce agency funded a cooperative project with DWRC to track an adult loggerhead turtle by satellite. A 212 pound turtle was released in October 1979 with a cylindrical float containing a transmitter compatible with a NASA weather satellite system. The turtle's 1,400 mile movements were tracked for eight months, and indicated the big reptile preferred to stay offshore at about 10 fathoms. But, as the researchers were recording the turtle's movements, the satellite beamed the unbelievable: the sea turtle was in Galena, Kansas!

The riddle of the grounded reptile was soon solved. The transmitting device, its tether cut, was traced to a fisherman who had discovered it on a trip to Port Arthur, Texas. The souvenir served as a doorstop and child's toy until its signals led the team to it. However, the fate of the turtle remains unknown.

The Fish and Wildlife Service's electronics experts had been encouraged by their first satellite tracking experiment in 1978, despite one study subject which, unaware of such human conventions as national borders, crossed into Kansas. With the cooperation of NASA, the Service had begun to study the feasibility of satellite tracking to learn the possible effects of energy exploration on polar bear denning habits.

Uses for standard telemetry appear almost unlimited. A simple transmitter that can report an animal's movements to a field researcher may provide information to help resolve pressing wildlife-related problems. Such transmitters on vampire bats in Latin America enabled biologists to discover that the biting, blood-lapping carriers of rabies lived in colonies in certain caves, apart from other, harmless bat species. By the mid-1970's, selective controls could be applied to keep the vampire in check, protecting humans and saving millions of dollars in livestock losses.

Federally protected species like the loggerhead turtle and the polar bear are often subjects for telemetry studies. Service researchers use transmitters on endangered Florida manatees that congregate around warmwater springs in the winter to see where these elusive, otherwise solitary creatures go when spring arrives. Transmitters have also been used to study movements of the endangered shortnose sturgeon in the Altamaha River in Georgia. Service fishery researchers have even developed tiny transmitters that are ingested by salmon. The resulting information is being used to help restore depleted salmon runs on both coasts.

Grizzly bears, condors, falcons, and dozens of other species have been successfully fitted with transmitters. Each study brings needed information to scientists who constantly work to improve techniques for managing species, whether they are threatened by humans, or humans are threatened by them.

Down, fiberfill garments provide winter warmth

Goose down is considered to be the warmest insulation for its weight, according to Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist at New Mexico State University.

The network of fluffy down filaments traps layers of non-conducting, still air within the garment that keeps warmth in and cold out. Down is also recommended for winter garments because it breathes — that is, it absorbs moisture from the body and transports it to the outside of the fabric where it evaporates.

Down also tends to be form fitting, molding to the wearer's body and eliminating large air bubbles inside the garment that might cause a cold spot, Wright said. Down is extremely resilient, has a long life and is reasonably easy to clean by either washing or dry cleaning.

The major disadvantage of goose down is that it is expensive. It also takes a long time to dry if it gets wet. Anyone with a dust allergy should think twice about getting a down garment because, over time, down will collect dust and may aggravate dust allergies.

Another disadvantage of down is that it must be quilted horizontally into a garment, and cold spots may result where the stitching compresses the down fiber.

Polyester fiberfilled jackets are good alternatives to those filled with goose down. It eliminates the dust allergy problem, and people who live where cold temperatures are accompanied with rain or drizzle might find fiberfill desirable because it dries much more quickly than down.

Fiberfill comes in several forms. Polyester fibers can be given a special finish to make them slide back and forth against each other, providing softness and flexibility that is much like goose down. This form is often called synthetic down.

Polyester fibers can also be crimped to form a thick, fluffy mass, or bonded to form a solid batt. This form, however, runs into limitations when used for clothing because it tends to hold a blocked shape and is less flexible than other forms.

A new polyester fiber made like a hollow tube reduces weight and has almost the same insulating qualities as down. It has been trademarked as Hollofill, and has become popular for winter garments.

Most fiberfill garments can be either machine or hand laundered, but will last longer with hand washing and air drying. None of the synthetic fiberfill fibers shrink, but they may be used in a garment whose inner, or outer shell will shrink. Label instructions should be read carefully before washing a fiberfill garment.

I-n-s-i-d-e the Outdoors

by Gary Dollahon

New Mexico has a variety of raptors, otherwise known as chicken hawks and buzzards. This group of birds is actually made up of hawks, vultures, owls, and eagles, and all are called birds of prey.

One of the most important things people do not realize about these birds is they are all protected by law.

Hawks, owls, and vultures have been protected in New Mexico since 1971 and by federal law throughout the United States since 1972. Eagles have been protected by federal law even longer.

Yet, there is still considerable animosity toward this group of birds and they're often killed illegally.

Birds of prey are hunters with specialized beaks and talons which make them very adept at their occupation. Strong hooked beaks and sharp talons are their main weapons for catching, killing, and eating mammals, reptiles and fish.

Because raptors are accomplished hunters they sometimes come into conflict with man due to their competition for wild and domestic animals.

Sometimes the threat to human property is real, sometimes it is imagined. Often some species of raptor that poses no real threat to domestic fowl or livestock is killed simply because it is in the wrong spot at the wrong time.

Laws were enacted to protect these wild predators because they were becoming scarce. However, should raptors cause real problems for poultry and livestock owners, there are legal ways of handling them.

A large variety of raptors occurs in New Mexico, including several rare species protected by state and federal endangered species laws.

The rarer ones include the Mississippi Kite, bald eagle, osprey, caracara, and peregrine falcon.

Some of the more common hawks seen in New Mexico include the red-tailed hawk, Swainson's hawk, rough-legged hawk, ferruginous hawk, golden eagle, marsh hawk, prairie falcon, and American kestrel (or sparrow hawk).

There are nine other hawk species that occur in our state and three others that sometimes wander in New Mexico.

We also have one species of vulture in New Mexico. These are usually called buzzards by the average person, but they are actually turkey vultures. These birds are scavengers, which means they seldom kill their own prey, but instead spend hours gliding on air currents looking for carrion.

Several species of owls also inhabit New Mexico. Barn owls, screech owls, great horned owls, pygmy owls, elf owls, and burrowing owls are among these. Other resident owls include the flammulated owl, spotted owl, long-eared owl, short-eared owl, and saw-whet owl.

These birds of the night usually prey on small rodents and insects, and are thus beneficial to man, as are most raptors.

Under New Mexico law, it is illegal to take, attempt to take, possess, trap or ensnare, or in any manner to injure, maim or destroy hawks, vultures, and owls.

The only exceptions to this law are in the case of Indian religious purposes, scientific purposes, falconry purposes, and damage to commercial poultry and game bird operations. These exceptions are made in accordance with the laws and the regulations of the Department of Game and Fish, and through the use of special permits.

Chicken hawk or raptor? Varmint or bird of prey? Take a second look and think about what it really is, what purpose it serves, and what reason you have to let it live.

Newspaper logs stretch woodpile

Roller newspaper logs are a good way to make the wood pile behind the house last longer, according to JoAnn Less, Extension housing specialist at New Mexico State University.

Such logs, whether rolled by hand or with a hand-cranked machine, will burn as long and give off about the same amount of heat as a wood log of the same size.

When paper logs are rolled with one of the hand-cranked, log-making devices, the paper is often moistened with water to make a tightly packed log. A tablespoon of liquid detergent added to a small tub of water will make a mixture that helps the paper stick together which, in turn, reduces the fly ash when the log is burned.

A log made this way has to dry thoroughly before it is used.

Hand rolling usually is the fastest and easiest method to create a paper log. It's a good idea to stagger the newspaper sheets so pages are interlocking. This helps the log hold its shape better, and it results in an even density that aids thorough burning.

Newspaper logs sometimes need a little help to get started properly. A waxed milk carton can be split and used as the final outside wrap to aid starting and burning. The finished log can also be brushed with melted paraffin, or the ends can be dipped in paraffin.

Handmade logs can be made by wrapping the newspaper sheets around a broomstick, and tying the finished log in at least two places with string. When the broomstick is removed, the resulting center hole helps the log burn better.

If the broomstick method is used with dampened sheets of newspaper, the log should be tilted slightly when drying to make sure the center hole is fully dried.

Newspaper logs burn at a lower temperature than wood, so the fire is often not hot enough to consume the entire paper log. This can be overcome by burning wood and newspaper logs together in the fireplace.

Some people worry about the heavy metals, especially lead, that may have been used to make printing ink. However, most of today's newsprint inks are organic, and even the colored inks contain insignificant amounts of metal.

Real Estate Facts

a public service of the
Ruidoso Board of Realtors.

According to Federal government statistics, one American family in five moves each year. If you'll be making a move this year, the Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests the following guidelines for estimating costs.

The cost of a move is based on the weight and value of the household goods, the distance involved, and the special services the client may want, such as packing, storage, and delivery time.

Interstate movers are regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) and must file schedules of rates and charges. Moving firms will also furnish customers with rates upon request. Rates will vary from one company to another, but generally they are competitive. Since moving companies that operate on a local basis or city-to-city within a state are governed by different agencies in each state, their prices may fluctuate greatly.

Upon request, interstate moving companies must furnish a written estimate of the weight of the shipment and how much it probably will cost to move. If the client prefers, the company will furnish packing materials. Estimates are made on a "per cubic foot" basis. On an average, there are seven pounds to each cubic foot of furniture. Once a total weight is estimated, a price is determined for the distance the goods will be moved.

Remember, the exact cost of a move cannot be determined until all household goods are in the van and weighed. Estimates are not binding. The client is responsible for paying the charges based on the actual weight of the shipment.

The shipment's weight must be determined on a certified scale or by a certified weighmaster. The Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests that a client go to the scale and observe the weighing. The mover is required to notify the client in advance of the location of the scale, and he is obligated to permit the client to observe the weighing.

The weight of a shipment is determined by weighing the moving van before and after loading your shipment, and the difference (the net weight) is the weight upon which charges are levied.

The van should be weighed beforehand with the driver — but not the crew on board — all gas tanks full, and all pads, chains, dollies, hand trucks and other equipment needed for moving your goods.

There are three documents, all required by the ICC, that can be used to check the accuracy of the shipment's weight. The mover must furnish a "weight ticket," which indicates the van's weight before and after loading. A "bill of lading" will be issued at the time of pickup. This is the contract with the mover, and ICC regulations require that it carry the preloading weight of the van. In addition, each van driver is required to fill out a "driver's weight certificate" for each shipment transported in his vehicle. Any inaccuracies will surface in a quick comparison of these documents. Any errors or discrepancies should be corrected on the spot.

As an added safeguard, ICC regulations allow the client the right of having the van reweighed before and after delivery to the destination. The client is not required to pay for this reweighing if (1) the net weight is more than 120 pounds below the billed net weight, or (2) the billed net weight exceeds by more than 25 percent the estimated net weight.

What else will the client be required to pay for? Packing materials — boxes, cartons, barrels — provided by the movers are charged to the client. If the mover is requested to do the packing, an additional charge will show up on the bill. If the client is not ready to move into the new home or apartment immediately, he may want the mover to hold the goods in storage. For an additional charge, he will do so for up to 180 days.

How is payment made? Unless credit arrangements are made in advance, most movers expect full prepayment, or payment upon delivery in cash, certified check, travelers check or cashier's check.

Before moving, whether from state to state or locally, the Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests calling a number of moving companies for information on their services and estimates.

Television Schedule For The Week Of Jan. 26 through Feb. 1

through channels

by Joey Sasso

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT: The producers of the faltering action-adventure series 'Charlie's Angels' think they've found the answer to their prayers in new Angel Tanya Roberts. Cast as a street-wise, tart-tongued former criminal from a broken home, the 26-year-old New Yorker was dazzling in the Angels' recent three-hour Hawaii extravaganza, which opened the season. The word from producers Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg in Hollywood is that she just might single-handedly turn around the show's fortunes. Even though the show is up against some heavy-duty competition on Sunday nights 'Archie's Bunkers Place' and 'CHiPs' ABC execs think the new Angel and her good-girl/bad girl character will be a winner. "The choice was made to inject something we hadn't had before," a director of 'Charlie's Angels' told me from location in Hawaii. "We wanted someone with presence and a different attitude. Someone who could look and act it, and be believable." One of the most beautiful new faces on the town this season in New York is the TV model Nina Reeves, whose home base is the 'hiding-to-hounds' country, Far Hills, N.J., where one of her horse companions is none other than Jackie Onassis. As a matter of fact, her dad is none other than Richard Stone Reeves, who ranks as the leading painter of race horses in America.

TV BACKSTAGE: The girl who shot to worldwide notoriety when she was revealed as J.R.'s attacker is aiming to make an even bigger name for herself even though she's out of TV's 'Dallas.' Mary Crosby has boldly left behind the show that was helping to make her a household name in 87 countries, captivated by the Ewing saga. And, ironically, her first big step into another limelight puts her finger on the trigger again. She wields a more ancient weapon in the bigger movie 'Dick Turpin.' There is a reason why she was chosen as a member of a power trio for the big screen. In the ABC TV movie 'Golden Gate,' she was the first to point the right direction for the series. "I was at a point that playing the caddy girl was a dead end. I didn't want to end up being type-cast like Jean Stapleton was in 'All in the Family.' Mary was a good choice. That is why I asked the producers of 'Dallas' to write me out of the show."

TV GOSPEL: Take a whole Dick Cavett isn't naming names but... "I have known many guests who turn up at night in all kinds of way," he says. "I've seen plenty of them into marijuana. I think that only makes them more interesting to themselves." A controversial offering from Columbia TV next season will be 'Fallen Angel,' a docu-drama about child pornography. "It's a strong subject which has been researched with cooperation of the DA's office in Los Angeles," says publicist Cheri Nicklaus, tennis playing cousin to top golfer Jack. The lead role in the movie will be played by newcomer Dana Hill who is 13. Actor William Holden's desperate struggle to keep his young love Stefanie Powers has failed. She has broken off their long romance and is now dating French movie director Just Jakin. Stefanie left Holden a year ago because she said he had a drinking problem, but she went back later when he swore off the bottle.
