

County plans filing fee hike for subdivision plats

BY GWYNETH JONES
Staff Writer

An increase in the filing fee for subdivision plats heads the list of proposed changes in county subdivision regulations to be aired at the April 14 meeting of Lincoln county commissioners. The changes were developed by the nine-member county Planning and Zoning (P&Z) Commission.

If the new regulations are accepted by the commission, the fee would increase from the present $100, plus two dollars per lot, to $1,000 and $20 per lot, county manager Bill Billingsley told The News Wednesday.

The change was proposed, Billingsley said, to bring the amount of the fee closer to the actual cost to the county in accepting new subdivisions.

Expense to the county includes payment of mileage to P&Z members who must inspect the subdivision, and administrative overhead costs, Billingsley said.

However, these are not as significant as the cost of "hiring a civil engineer to review the subdivision roads, to insure that they are all in accordance with good engineering techniques."

Some larger counties, Billingsley added, employ a full time county engineer to perform such work. But in the case of Lincoln County, the administrator must hire an engineer — other than the one who engineered the subdivision — to make the review.

The primary concern addressed by the reviewing engineer is erosion control, along with other problems related to road building, Billingsley said.

"We aren't trying to make the cost prohibitive," he added. "We're merely trying to put it on a scale close to the actual expense to the county."

Most county subdivisions, Billingsley said, are of the "Type Three" category, composed of "not less than five nor more than 25 lots consisting of less than 10 acres each." Thus a Type Three subdivision with 24 lots would demand a filing fee of $1,000 plus $480 for the per-lot fee.

A second proposed change would call for state agency review for all high density subdivisions. This change, Billingsley explained, will bring the county into compliance with state statutes.

State agencies involved in the review would include the State Engineering Office, the Environmental Improvement Division (EID), local natural resource conservation districts and the state Highway Department.

Once the agencies complete their review, they have 60 days to file an opinion with the county.

The third change would require an engineer employed by the county to physically verify the accuracy of subdivision surveys and sign the final plat of the subdivision.

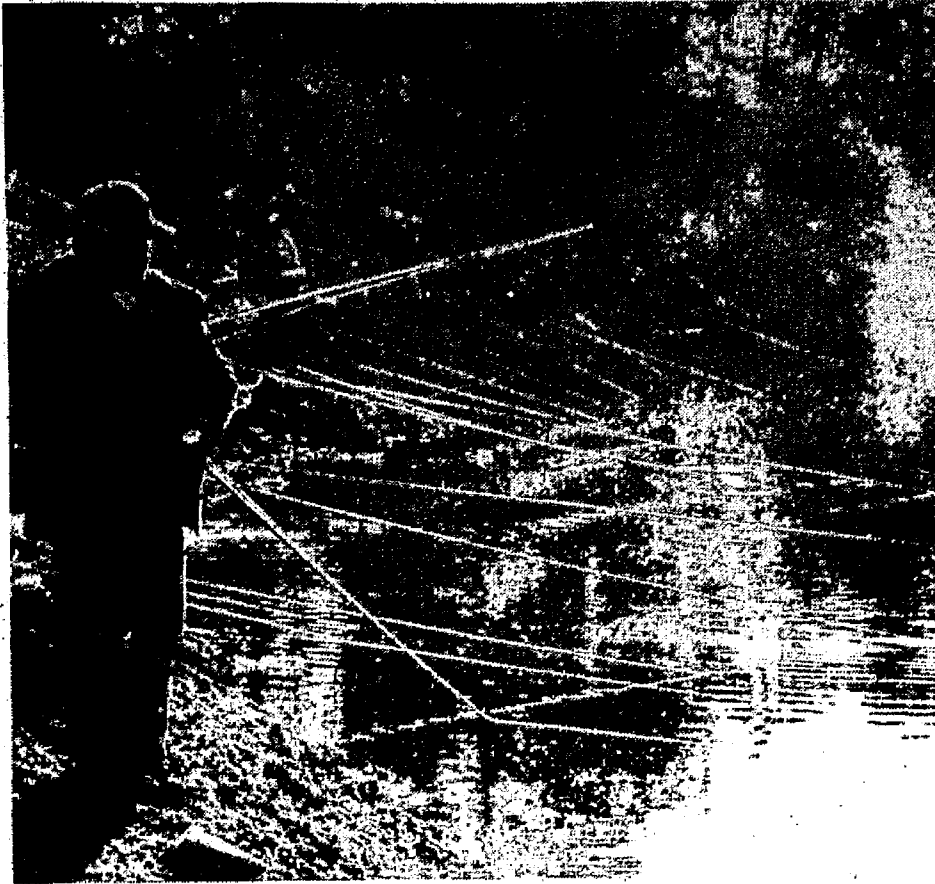

Under this regulation, the printout would have to submit a computer survey of the mathematical boundaries of each lot.

"The problem is," Billingsley said, "we're not getting absolutely accurate surveys in all instances. In the future, the computer printouts would be of tremendous benefit in any land dispute."

The cost of the printout would be "insignificant," to the developer, Billingsley said, since more surveyors or engineers already use electronic equipment designed to provide the information.

Another proposed change would require all roads in Type One and Two subdivisions to be surfaced with "plant mixed TROUT FISHERMEN were shoulder to shoulder on the shore of Bonito Lake Wednesday, as the mist rose from the water in the early light. Reports from some Ruidoso anglers trying their luck indicated that there were more fishermen on the banks than fish banked. Stalwarts among them said, however, that it sometimes takes a while for the fish to get used to the idea there's free food available, after which they get hooked.

Mule Skinners trail ride set May 2 and 3

The Ruidoso Downs Mule Skinners have scheduled their third annual trail ride, May 2-3, as an overnight excursion through the Lincoln National Forest to Lucas Wells, about a mile east of Hale Lake.

The ride gets underway at 10 a.m., May 2, from Gateway Meadows, with the entourage to return at 2 a.m., May 3.

A fee of $15, per person, will be charged which included dinner Saturday evening, breakfast Sunday and feed for animals. For those not desiring to make the actual trail ride, the dinner/breakfast tab will be $11; Saturday dinner only $8 and breakfast only $4.

Campsite activities scheduled include balloon busting, polo, pole bending, barrel races and horseshoe pitching; with live entertainment provided for campfire enjoyment.

"Entries for this ride are being accepted through April 24," Mule Skinners president Ed Hyman said. "Mail your fee, for each person in your party, to the Ruidoso Downs Mule Skinners, P. O. Box 2627, Ruidoso, New Mexico 88345.

"We welcome everyone, mule riders, horse riders, those just wanting to spend some time at the campsite."

Additional information on this trail ride is available from Hyman, telephone 257-7333, or from Dave McMath, 257-5292, evenings.

Chamber music concert here Sunday afternoon

A chamber music concert will be held in Ruidoso April 5 at 3 p.m., at the parish hall of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Mount, sponsored by the Altrusa Club of Ruidoso.

Tickets will cost $2 for adults and $1 for children and will be sold in advance at The Aspen Tree or from any Altrusa member. Tickets will also be available at the door.

The program will feature The Raphael Trio, a group of Eastern New Mexico University (ENMU) faculty members.

Katherine Thayer on violin, Arthur Welker, violoncello and Ruth Meyer on piano, will feature two selections, the "Trio in B Flat Major, Op. 99" by Schubert and a "Trio in E Minor, Op. 90" by Dvorak. Thayer is the Director of Chamber Music at ENMU. After receiving her bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan, Thayer studied with Charles Castleman in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She completed a two year fellowship in Montreux, Switzerland, at the Institute de Hautes Etudes Musicales and studied with Zino Francescatti and Christian Ferras.

Thayer's European performances include membership and soloists with the Camerata Lysy in Amsterdam; the Wurttembergisches Kammerorchester in West Germany and the Mozarteum Orchestra in Salzburg, Austria.

Thayer has also had extensive chamber music study with the Juilliard String Quartet and is a member of the Grand Teton Music Festival, which is held each summer in Jackson, Wyoming.

Welker is the Director of Symphony at ENMU and his background includes cello studies with George Neikrug and Karl Neumann, chamber music work with Nathan Gordon and conducting studies with Victor Plushkat and Henry Mazer. As a professional cellist, he has played with the Pittsburgh Symphony, Pittsburgh Opera, Bolshoi Ballet and the Caldwell String Quartet.

Since joining the ENMU faculty, Welker has been active as a clinician, adjudicator and guest conductor throughout the Southwest. A highlight of his guest appearances included guest conducting the Mississippi All-State Orchestra.

Meyer was a member of the faculties of the University of Texas at El Paso and Western State College in Gunnison, Colorado, before joining the ENMU staff.

She currently serves as chairwoman of the ENMU Piano Department and holds a degree from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, the Eastman School of Music and the University of Colorado.

Meyer received a grant for her doctoral studies and a Fulbright grant to study in Salzburg, Austria.

Her performance background includes solo appearances with the Eastman-Rochester Symphony, the Mozarteum Orchestra in Salzburg, Austria, and the El Paso Symphony, in addition to many solo recitals.

The Raphael Trio has performed in concerts on the ENMU campus and at invitational concerts for conventions of the New Mexico Music Teachers Association, the New Mexico Music Educators and the Southwest Division of the Music Educators National Conference.

They have also performed guest recitals at the University of New Mexico and Texas Tech University.

Other appearances have included portions of concert series with the Roswell Chamber Music Series, Otero Music Guild in Alamogordo, Santa Stage in Las Vegas and the Chamizal National Memorial in El Paso, Texas.

The program was arranged by the Fine Arts Committee of the Altrusa Club.

the sale to purchase a computer for the DECA program, and in turn, used the computer to prepare their project.

"In our project, we showed the benefit selling techniques we employed before and during the sale," Parker said. "We used the computer to determine what percentage of total sales each student's effort represented."

Parker said the seafood sale was relatively successful, "but the kids realized, after they read the computer printouts, that some kids are harder workers than others, and many students never recognized this until it was down in black and white."

Parker said this is the first year Ruidoso has "any real competition" in the Pepsi project category.

He said the Roswell High entry used a computer to print out biorhythms for students who wanted to purchase that service.

Mike Clarke, president of the Ruidoso DECA, said "Roswell did an excellent job of utilizing the computer in their project. I was impressed with their entry."

Clarke and Parker both feel, however, "that we're right in there with them."

Parker said the Ruidoso entry may win "because we hope to beat them in the sections where there are more points awarded, such as the project description and the outcomes — both are more detailed in our project than in Roswell's."

Being an optimist, Parker said he also expects Ruidoso to carry off at least one third of all individual awards again this year. "In past years, one third of our New Mexico delegation to the national contest has been from Ruidoso. While we aren't taking as many students this year to the state competition, I feel we have to expect that we may not take as many first place awards as we have in the past."

Ruidoso will, Parker added, "still have one of the largest groups at the state contest, but it's low for us."

Competition begins Friday morning and awards will be announced at a banquet Saturday night. "The future looks bright," Clarke said, "We wish the other schools the best of luck in the competition, but we feel confident we should qualify somewhere between 15 and 25 students for nationals."

Trustees plan special session

The Ruidoso trustees Tuesday evening, with mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr., and trustees George White and Benny Coulston present and trustees Frank Sayner and Sherman Atwood absent, voted to hold a special meeting at a date to be set next week, to consider matters at which no action was taken at this meeting.

Agenda items at the special meeting include action on the final plats of Lakeview Estates and Vista del Largo, in the Camelot development and approval of the appointment of Lee Huckstep as village attorney on recommendation of Davis.

Postponement of action on Lakeview Estates and Vista del Largo Tuesday evening was due to the insistence of White that the developer "post a bond," to insure that parking lot and other paving in the project would be accomplished, as required by ordinance.

Village clerk Jim Hine advised the trustees that a letter of credit, concerning the two projects, had been received from the Continental Bank of El Paso, Texas, guaranteeing sufficient funds were on deposit to pay all paving expenses.

Attorney Ron Harris, present on behalf of the project, advised the trustees they could accept "cash, bond, or letter of credit, or other satisfactory credit," to insure the project paving would be completed.

The trustees then directed Hine to obtain a legal opinion on whether the letter of credit would suffice to meet the village's requirements, or whether a bond must be posted. His findings are to be reported to the trustees at the pending special meeting.

Davis' recommendation of Huckstep to be village attorney was postponed by the trustees, on approval of a motion to withhold action "until the full board was present."

Lengthy discussion on the final hearing on proposed Ordinance 81-3, "amending Chapter 2, Article 4, and amending Chapter 9, to create a C-2 and M-1 district, and to make other minor changes there," was held.

Trustee Coulston took exception to many provisions of the proposed ordinance, with Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) chairman Mike Waldron defending the provisions and urging its adoption.

Waldron said adoption of the ordinance would "give P&Z something to work with," and that the C-2 (heavy commercial) and M-1 (industrial) zoning is needed now to keep pace with developments.

The trustees adopted the proposed ordinance, with the stipulation that certain changes be made, and that P&Z "look at recreational areas," for inclusion in the ordinance.

The trustees may give further consideration to this ordinance at the pending special meeting, Hine said Wednesday morning.

C-C's Espree Party set

Two hundred tickets will be available for the first annual Espree Party, a function sponsored by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce.

The party will be held June 23 at Cousins' Restaurant with tickets priced at $125 per couple, according to Chamber executive director Ed Jungbluth.

Jungbluth said final arrangements were approved by members of the Chamber's board of directors last weekend when the board met in Santa Fe for the annual Chamber retreat "to get the budget worked out and make plans for the upcoming year."

Jungbluth said other highlights of the party will include a first prize of $8,000 worth of shopping with Chamber members, and a second prize of $2,000 shopping privileges in the village.

In addition, the Clay Mack Band will return to Ruidoso for the evening to

P&Z okays amusement park

Following nearly 30 minutes of discussion, the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning (P&Z) Commission Wednesday approved plans submitted by Ralph Rush to establish a bumper boat amusement park on Carrizo Canyon Road.

Rush had proposed the amusement park at the February P&Z meeting, but his plans were tabled so P&Z could make an on-site visit to the property, which was the former site of Swain's Flea Market.

Of primary concern was adequate parking, which Rush has provided according to the amount of land being used.

Rush said eight boats, with a capacity of one person per boat, will be available. P&Z members said the 19 spaces provided "are a tremendous improvement" over what was there previously, adding that Rush's plans will also improve "the aesthetics" of the area. Nancy Radziewicz attended to voice opposition to the proposal. She said another of Rush's amusement parks, located next to West Winds Motel which is owned by the Radziewicz, has been "a constant problem" because of inadequate parking, increased noise level from the go-

DECA competing at state

Fifty-six Ruidoso High School Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) students left today to participate in the two-day New Mexico Career Development Conference in Carlsbad.

Besides competing in individual proficiency examinations the chapter has entered a Pepsi Learn and Earn Project for judging.

DECA sponsor Eddie Parker, said only one other school, Roswell High School, has submitted a Pepsi project for state competition.

The project entered by the Ruidoso chapter was an analysis of the success of the December Seafood sale, co-sponsored by Trans-Alaska Seafood and DECA.

Parker said students spent profits from the sale to purchase a computer for the DECA program, and in turn, used the computer to prepare their project.

"In our project, we showed the benefit selling techniques we employed before and during the sale," Parker said. "We used the computer to determine what percentage of total sales each student's effort represented."

Parker said the seafood sale was relatively successful, "but the kids realized, after they read the computer printouts, that some kids are harder workers than others, and many students never recognized this until it was down in black and white."

Parker said this is the first year Ruidoso has "any real competition" in the Pepsi project category.

He said the Roswell High entry used a computer to print out biorhythms for students who wanted to purchase that service.

Mike Clarke, president of the Ruidoso DECA, said "Roswell did an excellent job of utilizing the computer in their project. I was impressed with their entry."

Clarke and Parker both feel, however, "that we're right in there with them."

Parker said the Ruidoso entry may win "because we hope to beat them in the sections where there are more points awarded, such as the project description and the outcomes — both are more detailed in our project than in Roswell's."

Being an optimist, Parker said he also expects Ruidoso to carry off at least one third of all individual awards again this

The trustees took no action on the final hearing on proposed Ordinance 81-2, establishing new rates for Cablevision of Lincoln County. Company manager Paul Crown said Wednesday that he would again present the ordinance for consideration at the April 14 trustees' meeting and that he would have financial information the trustees requested Tuesday evening, that Crown said he did not have available.

Trustee White, during this hearing, had asked Crown to clarify income and expenditure figures on Cablevision's operation. White said "the difference between income and costs," according to figures White quoted from, "indicated the company's profit," for last year exceeded $100,000 and he thought the proposed rate increase "not necessary," based on his figures.

Mayor Davis recommended the appointment of Clark Carpenter to membership on the Lodger's Tax Committee (LTC), replacing Ollie Cuddy, no longer a LTC member.

Carpenter's appointment was approved, subject to it being in conformance with statutory provisions creating the membership. This action was due to Carpenter being the operator of Dandee Cabins and classified as a lodger.

LTC membership includes two members associated with the tourism industry, one member at large, with the provision that "two members shall represent" the lodger's business.

The present membership includes Ed Hyman and Roy "Pinky" Jones from tourism, Al Junge as member-at-large, and Slover Cape as a lodger, according to village records.

Hins said Wednesday he "interpreted" the statutory provisions to make Carpenter's appointment to LTC official would be "in conformance," with these provisions.

The trustees also approved the recommendation of Davis that John Cupp succeed Emory Hatcher as zoning enforcement officer. Hatcher's resignation from his post was accepted by the trustees.

In other business, the trustees:

— Adopted Ordinance 81-4, accepting the canvass of the March 24 special election results, to bond the village for not to exceed $1,670,000 for improvement projects, and also authorizing the village to lease

Complainants drop charges of assault

Charges against a man implicated in a shooting incident at Eagle Creek Ski Area Sunday were dropped the following day by the three complainants.

Arturo Baezas, 28, had been charged with aggravated assault with intent to commit a felony.

A spokesman for the Lincoln County Sheriff's Office said the man allegedly became involved in an argument at the area and fired three shots at an employee.

Later, the man allegedly returned to the area and fired at two cars, damaging windshields and a tire. Charges against Baezas were dropped about 11 a.m., Monday, the spokesman said.

the Municipal Swimming Pool to private enterprise.

— Authorized, on request of Jane Deyo, use of Two Rivers Park from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., daily, June 15-19, for a day camp for Girl Scouts.

— Named trustees White and Coulston to meet with Police Chief Paul Lukens to review architectural firms, and to recommend one that could design the new police/judicial building authorized in the March 24 special election.

— Were advised that a Municipal League Regional Meeting, including Lincoln and Otero counties, will be held at the Holiday Inn, Ruidoso, April 8.

— Took no action on a request for additional help by Jim Wills, water superintendent, to complete improvements and replacements in the water system.

Accidental shot wounds Ruidoso man

Larry Herrera, 25, Ruidoso, was reported in satisfactory condition early Wednesday at Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital after suffering an accidental gunshot wound to the abdomen.

According to police reports, Herrera's 16-year-old brother was cleaning a .22 caliber rifle when the gun accidentally discharged. The shooting occurred about 10 p.m., Tuesday at the brothers' home located behind the Horseshoe Courts.

Illinois escapees arrested

Two persons were apprehended by the Criminal Investigation Division (CID) of the Ruidoso Police Department Tuesday on escape warrants issued by the Henry County Sheriff's Office, Illinois.

Roger Ihrig, 31, and Sharon Ihrig, 30, were transported to the Lincoln County Jail, and extradition proceedings took place Wednesday to return the couple to Illinois.

A CID spokesman said both were serving time for drug convictions at the time of the alleged escape.

Precautions against plague quite simple

"The word 'plague' probably causes undue alarm," said James Knight, Extension wildlife specialist for New Mexico State University. "However a few precautions are in order."

The recent plague infection involving a 25-year-old rancher and part-time trapper in Otero County has concerned everyone who might have direct contact with rodents, rabbits, coyotes, bobcats or foxes.

Plague occurring during the colder months, November through April, generally results from direct contact with plague-infected animal tissues or fluids. The more typical plague, usually occurring from May to October, is flea-borne. "If this warm weather continues, the plague season may be earlier than usual this year," Knight said.

While there is no reason to become alarmed, people who handle potentially infected animals should take a few precautions. Spray or powder furbearing animals with commercial flea products. Obviously, meat that will be eaten must not be contaminated by the insecticides. When transporting or storing a carcass, place it in a plastic bag to prevent fleas from leaving the animal.

Generally, if you avoid handling potentially infected animals and utilize precautionary measures when they are handled, plague concerns can be practically eliminated, Knight said.

Supervisor named for Cibola Forest

Phil C. Smith, a New Mexico native born at Hope and reared on a cattle and sheep ranch near Lovington, has been named supervisor of the Cibola National Forest, Southwestern Regional Forester M. J. Hassell has announced.

Smith began his Forest Service career in 1960 after graduating from New Mexico State University with a degree in range management. He succeeds the retired Keith Pfeiffer. The Cibola is headquartered in Albuquerque and includes the mountainous areas near Albuquerque and others near Grants, Gallup, Corona, Socorro and Truth or Consequences.

Since 1974 Smith has served as a range specialist, with the regional office in Albuquerque. Earlier, he was assigned to the Lincoln and Carson national forests in New Mexico, the Tonto and Sitgreaves in Arizona and the Lassen in California.

MEMBERS of the Board of Education for the Ruidoso Christian School were recently elected and include, from left, Roger Posey, president, and board members The Reverend James Huse and Paul Tapp. (Not pictured: A. A. "Junior" Behringer). The non-denominational Christian school is expected to open in Ruidoso in September.

Christian school plans registration during May

Plans for a non-denominational Christian school, scheduled to open in Ruidoso next fall, are progressing, with four of five board members elected and a book company chosen to provide the basic curriculum.

Roger Posey, a local construction businessman, has been elected president with A. A. "Junior" Behringer, a Ruidoso Downs construction businessman, Paul Tapp, owner of the Lazy T Motel, and James Huse, pastor of the Mescalero Baptist Mission, as board members.

A fifth board member will be elected within the next two weeks, Posey said.

A textbook company, A-Beka Books, based in Pensacola, Florida, will provide a "back to basics" curriculum for all grade levels needed.

"We have had a tremendous response to our initial contacts," The Reverend Dale McCleskey, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Ruidoso Downs, said Tuesday.

"We don't know a lot of specifics yet. The number of classes and the grade levels we will open with will depend upon the enrollment, of course. We have determined the minimum number of students we need to open at all, and we are currently trying to establish tuition."

McCleskey said pre-registration of students will be held the entire month of May. "This is a crucial step in our process," Posey said.

"We must impress upon those parents planning to register their children in the Christian school that they must do it now."

Posey said the success of the school "depends entirely on the cooperation of the parents to pre-register."

Board members said Tuesday they plan to keep teacher/student ratios at about one to 15, which will enable the school to offer a quality education.

"We chose the A-Beka Book series because it was favored by everyone we've talked to that is involved in the Christian school concept," Posey said.

A representative of the book company met with the board Tuesday night to highlight the features of the series. Wally Geiger of Albuquerque, said that one of the best reasons for using the curriculum "is because it's flexible. It can be used in any size school and it offers a kindergarten for four year olds."

Geiger said the program was developed by the Pensacola, Florida, Christian School over a nine year period and is now used by more than 10,000 schools in the nation. He said the curriculum is nearly complete for a 12 year program. "We are about 50 percent finished with the development of the high school portion of the program we're working on now."

Posey said early indications are "that we will have a great call for a kindergarten because we will take four year olds."

He said other requests "are about evenly divided" among the other grade levels.

Initially, board members plan to house classes at the First Baptist Church in Ruidoso Downs, since a new education building has just been completed there. "We have received a ten acre tract of land in Alto as a donation, where we are planning for future expansion," Posey said.

More information is available, and pre-registration can be completed, by calling the Ruidoso Downs church at 378-4811.

provide dance music, and a series of other awards will be announced.

"We plan to earmark these profits for development of a package which will become a travel promotional show for Ruidoso. It will not be limited to any specific season, but will be designed to break it up into sections as needed," Jungbluth said.

He said the main feature of the Espree Party which he and board members feel will benefit the community the most is that "all the money going into the party and the proceeds from it will be spent locally."

The only proceeds which may not remain in the community "would be those we would spend as travel expenses to take the program we are putting together out to the public," Jungbluth said.

Incoming Chamber president Richard Sandoval said the party "is one of our best ideas to come out of the past year's board. This money will remain in the community and be turned over again and again."

THE ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP meeting will be May 12 at Cousins' with only 100 tickets available. The price has not yet been set, Jungbluth said, and a speaker is still being sought.

Jungbluth said the new Chamber board also established several new subcommittees to "handle some of our special interests which, until now, have been juggled by other entities within the Chamber."

These include a Welcoming Committee, to visit all new businesses in Ruidoso as they open, chaired by Karl Franzer; an Arbitration Committee, chaired by Archer Wilson which "will act as a liaison between the board and the general membership," Sandoval said, and the Road Show Committee, which will be responsible for developing a plan to promote Ruidoso, chaired by Morgan Clough.

Sandoval said this year's Chamber board "is super. They're the most enthusiastic board I've ever worked with. The retreat was fantastic. We accomplished a lot and I'm looking forward to a great year." Sandoval's term begins May 1.

Sandoval commended outgoing Chamber president Sheila Harris "for the great job she did leading the Chamber the past year. One of the best things we've done as a Chamber, the membership drive, was instituted by Sheila's board. She was the driving force behind making us one of the nation's leaders in terms of members, with well over 90 percent of all Ruidoso businesses now members of the Chamber."

Sandoval also noted Harris' persistence in rewriting some parts of the Chamber by-laws "which is a real achievement. She spent most of her year as president working on the by-laws and I feel this is a very positive accomplishment on her part. I am looking forward to working with Sheila and the board in the next year," Sandoval added.

Sandoval also noted the dedication of Benny Coulston, who served a two-year term as board member, one year as Chamber president, and one year as past president and thus was a board member four years.

"That's a long time to give to anything, and I appreciate as I'm sure the entire membership does, the number of hours spent by Benny as a board member," Sandoval said.

He also noted that "we have a great staff at the office, in Ed (Jungbluth) and Doris (Baca, office secretary) who provide countless support services and a lot of input into our various projects," Sandoval said.

He added that "we have the best Chamber executive director in the state. We're very fortunate to have him."

bituminous pavement" before acceptance by the county. Type One subdivisions consist of 500 or more lots of 10 acres or less each. Type Two subdivisions have between 25 and 499 lots of 10 acres or less each.

In the past, paving requirements were based on "residential density" Billingsley said, meaning paving was required in subdivisions with three or more residents per acre. The paving requirement will affect few developers, Billingsley said, since most subdivisions now have lots of one-half acre or more, in order to comply with EID regulations for septic tanks.

The paving will be "a small initial cost factor to the subdivider," he said, "and the cost will eventually be passed on to the purchasers. However, there will be a reduction in costs to the general (county) taxpayer," since less funds would be needed for road maintenance.

Under another proposed change, a soil survey would also be required for Type One and Two subdivisions.

"This is another attempt to improve the soil conservation practices," Billingsley said. Other minor changes are proposed which would simply "correct typographical errors" in the current regulations, he added.

Community water systems would also be required for Type One and Two subdivisions if the recommended changes are approved.

Because the present subdivision regulations are "ambiguous on that point, the P&Z Commission has been forced to grant variances in some cases in the past," Billingsley said. The new regulation would remove the ambiguity.

cart track, and minimal supervision. Radziewicz said she "wanted to make sure you aren't creating another problem with this proposal."

Rush said bumper boats "are virtually an accident-free sport — insurance rates are very low" and some safety measures have been planned to prevent accidents. The plans must be approved by village trustees before Rush can proceed with construction, according to P&Z.

Vista del Lago, located in Camelot, has been approved by trustees subject to receipt of a letter of credit, according to P&Z Chairman Mike Waldron.

Phase Two of the Vista del Lago project was presented and was approved subject to streets and parking lots being constructed according to the minimum requirements of the village, and after a letter of credit is on file in village offices. P&Z also:

— Denied a request by Mr. and Mrs. Don Crockett to change zoning from R-1 (single family dwelling) to R-2 (multi family dwelling) on lots one and two, Apache Park Subdivision, because it would create spot zoning, according to P&Z members.

— Approved the master development plan for phase one of White Mountain Villas; final plats for The Crest townhomes in White Mountain Estates, Unit Four, Sierra West, phase one, and a replat of lots 42-48 and 71-73, Ponderosa Heights, for Dean Beeman.

— Approved the preliminary plat for Green Meadows Addition, Unit Two, for Myron Palermo and Jeffrey Palmer, subject to approval of village department heads.

— Approved final plats for two subdivisions outside the village limits, Deer Park Valley Subdivision, units one through nine, for Lakeside Corporation, and Fox Run Subdivision, for Leo Villareal. Both are subject to approval of the Lincoln County Planning and Zoning Commission.

Ministerial Alliance sets special services

The Ministerial Alliance in Ruidoso will observe the week before Easter Sunday by hosting daily worship services at the Community United Methodist Church, beginning April 12, at 12:10 p.m. Services will last until 12:30 with everyone attending invited to join in a sandwich luncheon in the Methodist fellowship hall. Ruth McGuire, secretary for the group, said a free will offering to cover costs of sandwiches will be accepted at the luncheon. "We hope to have a turnout from the business people in town, so we are trying to accommodate their schedules as much as possible," McGuire said. Participants from the Ministerial Alliance include The Reverends Ed Reimer, Charles Spooner, Richard Hall, Ed W. Campbell, Dale McCleskey, Ken Cole, Don McNamara, Jack Leavitt, Ivor Lake, Father Bernard Loughrey, and associate ministers Jay Graves, Jerry Mauldin and McGuire. "We would like to thank the women's organizations of all the churches for assisting with the sandwich luncheons," McGuire added.

Care Center hosting bake, garage, sale

Ruidoso Care Center (RCC) will host a garage and bake sale Saturday, with proceeds to be used toward the patio project. The sale will be held 8 a.m.-5 p.m., in the parking lot at RCC. Donations of baked goods or salvagable items for the garage sale will be accepted. To arrange to have items picked up call RCC during the day, 257-4071, or at night, 378-4863. The patio will be constructed just outside the present recreation and therapy rooms of the Care Center, and will incorporate walking paths which are also accessible to wheelchairs, planters of varying heights, picnic facilities, and a central attraction, such as a fountain.

Home talent three-act play in Carrizozo

A three-act play, "Stranger in the Night," will be presented Friday and Saturday nights in Carrizozo. Cast is composed of local residents and the proceeds will be donated to Multiple Sclerosis, the Carrizozo Schools, Ancho Community Building and Lincoln County Arriba. Friday's performance will be held at 7 p.m., at the old gymnasium, Carrizozo school, with an admission price of two dollars for adults, and one dollar for students through high school. The Saturday performance will include a dinner at the Carrizozo Country Club, at a cost of $12.50 per couple. The play will begin at 8 p.m., but serving will begin about 6:30.

Obituaries

Mrs. Alfred Collins

Mrs. Alfred (Bess) Collins, Ruidoso summer resident for more than 30 years, died Tuesday in Midland, Texas. Services will be Friday at 10 a.m., from the Church of Christ in Burnet, Texas, with burial following in a Burnet cemetery. In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials to the Cancer Society or Stehlin Institute, St. Joseph's Hospital, Houston, Texas.

Library week observance in Ruidoso

National Library Week will be observed at Ruidoso Public Library April 5-11, with special programs beginning at 1:30 p.m., Wednesday and Thursday in the multi-purpose room of the Library. Dr. Howard Tate will review the book "The Stone Maiden" by Velda Johnson on Wednesday. Thursday's program will feature author Eva Zumbait of Nogal, who will discuss authorship. Zumbait has had six books published, including young adult and adult fiction. Titles include "Masquerade of Evil," "Briarlea," "Sun Dust" and "The Yearning Years," and three books scheduled to be released soon are "Mansion of Dark Mists," "The Unforgiving," and "Bloody Sands." Zumbait's talk will consist of comments on the pains and pleasures of writing fiction, with some practical details of the craft, including book length for fiction work. Zumbait was born in Eunice, New Mexico, and has lived in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. She has been a resident of Lincoln County the last 27 years and is the mother of two daughters.

AT HOME IN RUIDOSO are Mr. and Mrs. James Howard, pictured after their recent wedding in Ruidoso. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John N. Sears of Ruidoso and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Judith A. Howard, also of Ruidoso.

Foster parents training offered

Foster parents throughout New Mexico, particularly those who care for children with special needs, are receiving specialized training in a pilot project developed at the University of New Mexico (UNM).

Funded by the 1980 New Mexico legislature, the Specialized Foster Parent Training Project is headquartered at UNM and directed by Dr. Richard Smith, chairman of UNM's department of home economics.

Now operative in six New Mexico cities, the project is reaching out to couples who provide foster care to more than 1,200 foster children.

Based on a model curriculum developed at the Institute for the Study of Children and Families at Eastern Michigan University, the project includes 96 hours of specialized training and is divided into three segments.

The first segment of 24 hours focuses on basic issues in fostering, including separation trauma, how to work with social service agencies most effectively and an overview of the special needs of foster children.

A second segment of 36 hours deals primarily with fostering the battered and abused child, the mentally retarded and the emotionally handicapped.

According to Smith, foster parents are trained by "identifying the special and complex developmental needs—physical, emotional, social and mental—of the battered or abused child so that they can provide a corrective and healing environment."

Also demonstrated are the generational cycle of child abuse and the skills needed by foster parents to reduce the risk of the battered child becoming an abusive parent.

Foster parents who care for children with mental or emotional handicaps are offered insight into their own attitudes and values in order to become more comfortable in working with foster children.

They are taught techniques for coping with a child's day-to-day behavior "so that the child not only functions at a higher level but is helped to feel better about himself."

The third component of the Specialized Foster Parent Training Project includes 16 hours devoted to techniques for handling lying and other destructive behaviors.

The final 20 hours, Smith said, finds the participants focusing in-depth on topics which they, as a group, choose.

Individuals who complete the 96 hours of training will be certified as Specialized Foster Parents, Smith said. Certification will be by the state's Department of Human Services which oversees foster care programs in New Mexico.

"Once these parents are certified they will be paid more for taking care of special needs children," Smith said. "They should be viewed as professionals, as persons who have become very good at what they do."

Shirley Van Haron, who has a master's degree in social work, coordinates the training project. The project office is located in UNM's Onate Hall.

Instructors, all screened and selected by Smith, himself a former foster parent, all have social science or teaching backgrounds. Most have master's degrees or higher and have undergone special training at UNM to prepare them for their outreach to the state's foster parents.

Instructors in the Albuquerque-Santa Fe area are Margaret Bartlett, Peggy Young and Elaine Solomon. Other instructors are E. C. Shaffer, Clovis, Mary Ann Delgado and Janet Henry, Roswell; John Gutierrez, Alamogordo, and Dr. Kathy Eastman and Dr. Mary Fenton, Las Cruces.

Instruction has been underway since January and Smith is pleased with the reaction he is getting from participants. "They're really excited about the training they are receiving," he said.

Smith said that foster parents in New Mexico "range from Ph.D.'s to your average citizen. They come in a range of ages and economic backgrounds."

Chiefly, he noted, foster parents have in common "the ability to care, the interest in caring for someone else."

Present or prospective foster parents may apply for training by calling the project office, 287-6543, or by contacting their local human services representative. New classes begin periodically.

Special Olympics Games underway in Alamogordo

A group of 15 Fort Stanton students will leave today to compete in the Area Special Olympics Games, to be held in Alamogordo. The students will be participating in swimming and track and field events Thursday and Friday, according to coach Jeanne Culbertson.

Other members of the coaching staff include Jimmy McTeigue, Ubaldo Skinner and Billy Herrera.

About 50 students will take part in the local Roswell Special Olympics Games on Saturday, April 11, where they will compete in track and field events again.

In the International Winter Special Olympics held recently in Smuggler's Notch, Vermont, Fort Stanton student Mamie Williamson took fourth place in the one kilometer race and fifth in the 100 meter race.

Culbertson said Williamson had learned to ski cross country only this year. "So we're really proud of her."

Competing in the International Meet was "A tremendous experience for everyone. Some of the students didn't want to come home," Culbertson added.

The meet was the second International competition, held every four years. New Mexico sent 11 representatives to the games, where over 650 handicapped athletes from around the world participated in a week of activities.

Woman's Club tree planting on Arbor Day

The Ruidoso Federated Woman's Club will commemorate Arbor Day in Ruidoso Wednesday by planting a pinon tree at Nob Hill Elementary and at School House Park.

According to Nellie Vickers, president of the Club, a total of 53 trees will be planted at School House Park, in honor of the hostages released from captivity in Iran in January.

The Club will also hold their regular meeting Wednesday, with a board meeting at 1 p.m., followed by the general meeting at 1:30 p.m. Members are encouraged to attend since delegates to attend the state convention in Carlsbad May 1-3, will be elected.

Hostesses for the day include Mrs. W. E. Knott, Mrs. John Nale, Mrs. J. M. Fields, Myrtle Arrington, Ardeth Patterson and Beulah Shaver.

ADVANCEMENT awards were presented to members of Cub Scout Pack 95 in ceremonies Monday night at First Christian Church. Pic-

Collins, who also advanced to Bear status; David Edwards, Conrad Streeter, Kevin Craft and Jason Paad, who all advanced to Wolf.

Golfers finish seventh in Roswell tourney

The Ruidoso Warrior golf team has finally broken out of its rut, but not for the better.

Lately the duffers have been placing sixth in tournaments, but Tuesday in Roswell, they finished seventh out of nine teams, with a 344 total for 18 holes.

Roswell won the tourney with a 318. Individually, Kevin Savage turned in the best round with a 75, followed by Mike Dale with an 87, Todd Pertwee with a 90, and Don Nunley and Virgil Reynolds both shot 92s.

"I think we'll get better," coach Leroy Gooch said. "I don't know when, but I think we'll get better."

Maybe this weekend, as the Warriors travel to Lovington Saturday for another 18 hole tourney.

Little League baseball signups still underway

Little League Baseball registration continues this Saturday at Mountain Ski Shop, from 1-4 p.m.

Signups began last Saturday, and about 20 youngsters have signed up so far.

Children ages eight through 15 may register, for a $7.50 fee. Two or more eligible children from the same family may sign up for a flat $12 rate. All enrollees should be accompanied by a parent.

Registration concludes April 11 at Mountain Ski Shop, also from 1-4 p.m.

OVER THE TOP, MEN — Glenn Ryan barely clears the bar at five feet, four inches during track practice earlier this week. The senior placed third in the high jump at Deming last Saturday, with a leap of five feet, six inches. Coach Darrel Stierwalt (background) thinks Ryan could be a top class high jumper before the season is over.

Lady tracksters lacking experience

It could be a long season for Sergio Castanon and his lady Warrior tracksters.

Consider this: he started with about 30 young ladies and now has 15 still interested in the sport, and of those 15, seven of them are freshmen and one is an eighth grader.

Some of the girls who first came out for track apparently had quite a bit of potential, but Castanon isn't sad to lose them.

"Girls don't work as hard for track as they need to," he said. "It's tough to get them to work themselves hard. I don't know exactly why that is — I think it's too much sacrifice for them or something."

"Track is an individual sport, without much glory or show," he said. "I had to cut workout schedules down just to keep interest in the girls I've got. That's not fair to them, because I don't want to baby them. If they don't work hard in practice, they don't have any hope in a meet."

Castanon is pleased with the 15 tracksters he has remaining, however.

"These 15 will represent us well when we go to track meets," Castanon said. "I'm happy with the girls I have left, and I think one third to half of them have a pretty good chance of qualifying for state."

The lady Warriors' first competition of the 1981 season is a Saturday meet at Portales. Castanon isn't sure how his squad will do, since it is their first meet.

"We look weak in relays, high jump, long jump, hurdles, all because we have no experience," he said.

Castanon thought he was going to have a tough distance squad, since top runners Gleda and Ruta Bob and Deana Peao are all back. But the Bob sisters are suffering from injuries at this time and are something of question marks on Saturday. The lady Warriors look tough in field events and middle distances (200, 400 and 800 meter races), thanks to senior Lisa Shaw.

Shaw will be running several events, and just might be the fastest girl on the squad this year. Also, she'll be competing in the shotput and discus events as well.

Also, top shotputter Tammy McEnalley is back for another year of competition and should do well in that event, as well as the discus.

Castanon is expecting things to happen with his mile relay squad, composed of Cyd Wright, Jenny Delhotel, Gleda Bob and Valerie Garcia. All but Garcia are upperclassmen — Garcia is a frosh.

Castanon is also expecting Garcia and Delhotel to do well in the 400 — both ladies were running under 50 second 400s in practice earlier this week.

"But I really can't say how we'll do," Castanon said. "We're very inexperienced — we could do very well and we could bomb. It's hard to say."

"I enjoy working with the girls. Track is such an individual sport and it takes a lot of time and dedication," he said. "The girls who have stuck it out can be very good at track, if they want to be."

The girls' schedule looks like this: Saturday, April 4, Portales; April 10, Dexter; April 24, Artesia; April 25, Tularosa; April 28, Deming; May 1, T or C; May 8, District meet at T or C; May 15-16, State meet at Hobbs.

Gun club sets Sunday shoot

The Ruidoso Gun Club will hold a .22 caliber rifle metallic silhouette shoot this Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m.

Trophies will be awarded to winners of the competition, which will take place at the club's range, located about two miles off Highway 70. The range may be reached by taking the first right turn across from Conley's Nursery.

Entry fees have been set at $6, plus an additional dollar for a classification card. For further information, call Charles R. Moore at 378-4603, after 5 p.m.

Junior bowling league forming

Any boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 17 interested in joining a junior bowling league for this summer should contact Karen Marquardt, 257-5951, or Holiday Bowl, 257-7847.

Also, anyone interested in sponsoring a team in said league should contact Marquardt or Holiday Bowl. Marquardt is also trying to start a ladies' summer league. Interested women should call her at the above number.

"The moving finger writes, and having writ, moves on..." — Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

This is not an easy column to write. This is the 168th "Sportin' Life" I've written, and there have been times the past couple of weeks I would gladly have rewritten the first 167 rather than writing this one.

This is the last "Sportin' Life" I will probably ever write. After spending the past year and a half here at The Ruidoso News, I am changing jobs and going to work elsewhere. (Where, I cannot say — that would be free advertising.)

It wasn't an easy decision to make, leaving this job. I've had a lot of fun as the sports editor of The News.

Much of the past 18 months has been fun. Some of it hasn't. A little of it has been downright rotten.

But most of it was a blast.

When I arrived here in August of 1979, football season was just starting. I began covering sports at Ruidoso High School, later at Sierra Blanca and Ruidoso Downs, the middle school, a little of everything.

I've met some terrific, wonderful people, and I've met a couple I didn't care for. Which, I guess, is about average. People are pretty much the same everywhere.

I've seen Warrior football come out of the depths of obscurity and enter the foreground. People are starting to notice the Warriors — don't be too surprised if they wind up at state next year.

I saw a good basketball team become a great basketball team, and had the pleasure of meeting some great kids.

I got to meet the head basketball coach of New Mexico State, and shook hands with a former professional soccer player.

I was there as the Ruidoso Sertoma Soccer Association blossomed from nothingness to a huge league, with nearly 250 youngsters taking part.

I arrived on the scene at just the right time. Ruidoso is becoming very sports-minded, and I was lucky enough to be at the right place at the right time.

I keep looking back over the past year and a half, thinking about the things I did right, and the things I did wrong, and if I had things to do over again, what I would do different.

I feel pretty good, because I think I did more things right than I did wrong.

Of course, I didn't do it alone — and this is probably going to sound like an Academy Award speech.

I'd like to thank all the coaches at Ruidoso High School — Darrel Stierwalt, Barry Nelson, Ronny Maskew, Vince Collins, Sergio Castanon, Margie Andrus, Gerald Ames, Leroy Gooch and athletic director Doyle Howell — for all their help and co-operation. It takes a lot of patience to put up with phone calls at odd hours, and that crew was more than helpful. Indispensable is not too strong a word, in fact.

(The same feeling applies to the coaches at the middle school — Terry Wharton, Jean Wright and Dean Hood.)

I'd like to thank my editor, Cale Dickey, for helpful advice and counsel, and my publisher, Ken Green, for letting me sit here and ram about whatever bugged me at any given moment. It takes some big people to allow a guy space in which he can say what he pleases, the Bill of Rights notwithstanding. Ken and Cale are a couple of the biggest-hearted folks I know.

I'd like to thank Butch Grantham, and Blake Starr, and John Eberle, and Jeannie Whitman, and Pat Loomis, and ... (The problem with giving thanks to all these people is you never quite know when to stop, you know?)

And don't forget Tommy Morel, and Ronnie Taylor, and Ky Scott, and Flo Maul and Karen Marquardt and Joan Chase and L. Ray and Mary Nunley, and Martin Rose and Jamie Temple, and Gwyn Jones and Charlotte Fellers, and Ray Held and Roy Parker and Paul Southwick, and Barry Bellinger, and Bob Hickson and Jeff Chapman and Jack Warlick, and Lynn King, and Cathy Allen, and Dub Holt and many others too numerous to mention.

I must, however, address thanks to five others: Dan'l Storm and Ira Bogard are two of 'em. Dan'l keeps telling me I'm the best thing to happen to sportswriting since the typewriter. I personally think he's off his nut, but you don't argue with Dan'l. Ira has been a great friend since I learned about his "secret past" (he was a big sports star years ago, that's all, nothing shady), and we've had some great talks since then.

I have to thank the staff of The News, from advertising to production. A newspaper, like most modern endeavors, is always a group achievement. I may have written 167 of these things, but someone set them in type, someone else printed them and someone else delivered them to the world. Like I said earlier, I didn't do it alone.

The next person I'd like to thank is you, the reader. Without you, there wasn't any reason for this column. Heck, I wouldn't write it if you wouldn't read it. It's been nice to meet with you twice a week and shoot the breeze. I'm gonna miss that. (I feel just like Walter Cronkite — sniff.)

And lastly — I'd like to thank my wife, Dee, for her support and encouragement. A sportswriter leads a strange life, with very odd hours and long trips on the road to away games — well, I'm not gonna be doing that anymore, honey, but thanks for being understanding about it. Without you, I probably wouldn't have been as successful as I have been. Thanks, babe.

Well, I hate long goodbyes, and this one has gotten long enough, and certainly more than sentimental enough, so I guess I'd best end it.

It's been fun. See ya 'round.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

"The Luck Of The Irish"
The miraculous survival of President Reagan, Jim Brady, and the F. B. I. man, and the Policeman — men all of Irish descent — has prompted a great many people to take their cue from President Reagan himself, who joked about the ghostly event of March thirty; and bring up mention of the traditional "Luck of the Irish."

A man seventy years old, shot at close range, with the bullet coming within an inch of his heart, who tells his wife he "forgot to dodge", and later on remarks,
"If I had gotten this much attention when I was in Hollywood I would never have left", — this man has something greater than luck on his side.

And Jim Brady, with a bullet completely through his brain, has a mighty power guiding his destiny. The same for the other two wounded men. To think that they are not only surviving, but have every chance of carrying on practically as good-as new — with the exception of Jim Brady — this is such good fortune as to stagger one's belief.

"The Luck Of The Irish," then, is an old saying, the true meaning of which is the protecting hand of Almighty God, who looks after not only the Irish but all His children.

President Reagan has gained worldwide admiration for his cheerful and courageous actions during his narrow escape during an event which has horrified the world. He makes us prouder than ever to be Americans.

Our prayers go up for President Reagan, that he may continue to improve and regain his strength. And we ask Almighty God to help Jim Brady, and other two men who were wounded.

And we ask Our Lord to guide us in finding ways to protect ourselves from all adversities and dangers. We also ask God's blessing upon the doctors, and all who helped in this tragic emergency.

Winter Returns Briefly

On March twenty-seven and twenty-eight winter returned for one more last visit with us, bringing cold, with snow increasing the white mantle of the mountain, and stopping the flower and fruit blossom parade in its tracks.

The two days before had been mild and it was strange to see the snow flakes falling into the amber colored snow-melt water running in the stream.

Then on the thirtieth, from somewhere out on the vast reaches of the desert to the west — where summer has already arrived — came the wind, blowing a warm draft down the valley. Out came all the apricot blossoms, and the early plum, awakened by the warm wind and the thrashing of the branches in the sun. By mid afternoon, the peach trees, anxious to join in the spring festival came out with their pink blossoms — ahead of their usual time.

Swallows Arrive

To make the picture of returning spring complete, two little swallows appeared and lit on the telephone wires close to the house, and stood there with their feathers blown and ruffled in the wind. They are very early this year. Last year the swallow scout did not arrive until April eight.
Surely there is very good news in the early arrival of the little messengers of spring from their winter home in Mexico. Let us be thankful to The Lord and rejoice.

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Sheesh! Those legislators are a thinskinned lot!

We suggested briefly and obliquely that Boyd Scott from Farmington might have sometimes thought of running for Congress, based on our firm belief that those who hold public office often consider moving onward and upward in that game. Scott denied the whole thing sharply, as though we had accused him of having some loathsome disease.

Says his little Irish wife is too smart to let him make that mistake.

That's as may be, but we note she already let him run for Mayor and for the Legislature, so who knows what might happen next?

(Actually, Scott is one of the pleasantest members of the Legislature. If more of them had his sunny disposition life up here would be a lot more pleasant than it is.)

Representative Scott's rejoinder was not the only thing in our mail sack recently.

One long-time correspondent, for instance, harks back to words said here about the state's Motion Picture Promotion Bureau by asking what's the latest in "the Larry Hamm saga at the Department of Comedy and Indolence?"

There's nothing to report from there, but that title he gave the place was so good we just had to work it into a column somehow.

Another writer, speaking about Corporation Commissioner Jimmie Glenn being on probation for drunk driving, reminds us that "Mr. Fred McCaffrey said he would watch Mr. Glenn."

Indeed he did, and indeed he does. It keeps a person fairly busy, too.

For one thing, there are numerous folks out there who pass on the word whenever Glenn gets up to something — like coming out of the Bull Ring late in the evening and misplacing his state car, which he then had his secretary report as being stolen.

For state officials, Glenn should know by now, word of that kind always gets out, from the kind of anonymous tipsters Ernie Mills calls "birdies."

So do other misadventures, like the recent airplane flight to Washington he and his brother Commissioner, Eric Serna took, during which they are reported to have ousted the third member of their body, John Elliott, from his post as chairman of the Corporation Commission.

(That's the body Governor Bruce King often calls "the Cooperation Commission," though cooperation seems to be the one thing the present group is fresh out of.)

David Steinberg of the Albuquerque Journal suggests that if this all took place in the air over Kansas, Glenn and Serna may in fact have elected Eric chairman of the Kansas State Corporation Commission.

That might be a good thing. At least it would break the string of outlandish and unacceptable actions that have been coming out of our Corporation Commission since the day Glenn surprised everybody by getting himself elected to that body.

If these guys, who have such serious responsibilities as ruling on whether or not Ma Bell can increase our phone rates, don't straighten up and start acting like adults, we're going to have to get them into the program for Children in Need of Supervision.

In government, acting like a lot of babies is not very comedic.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

Changes in aid to student has become one of the most misunderstood of President Reagan's proposed budget cuts. Comments have ranged from optimists who say that nobody will be affected by the cuts, to alarmists who say that the cuts will close down all private colleges, deprive students of educational opportunities, and severely curtail programs at public universities. As usual, the truth lies somewhere in between.

First, there are actually six ways that a needy student can obtain funds for attending college, and only two of the six programs will be affected in the proposed budget cuts. The remaining four programs will be funded at the same levels, with the possibility that the government may direct more money to these programs in the future.

The two major programs affected are the Guaranteed Student Loan Program (GSL) and the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG or "PELL" grants) Program. Both are entitlement programs — anyone who qualifies is entitled to receive aid — and comprise 80 percent of the $8 billion plus budget for federal student financial aid for fiscal year 1981. Growth in these programs occurred in huge amounts between 1978 and 1980. The GSL program increased by more than 50 percent in 1979 alone, and the number of qualified applicants under BEOG rose from 33,000 in 1978-79 to 431,000 in 1979-80. Because so many students qualified, there was no way to control spending under these programs.

Changes must be made which redirect and refocus the funding to achieve the original objective of federal student aid — offering truly needy students an opportunity to finance their education when no other options are available.

These changes were proposed by President Reagan and have my support as Chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

In the area of Guaranteed Student Loans, the federal government will still subsidize some of the high interest on the loans, but will no longer pick up all of the interest subsidy payment while students are in school. The loans, which in the past were given out to families regardless of income or need, will restrict and limit the amount students and families can borrow, based on need, and will raise the amount of interest on the new parent loan program.

BEOG grants are also in for some tighter restrictions which include limiting the size of the maximum grant, increasing the amount parents are expected to contribute toward a student's education, and requiring students (except in cases of extreme financial need) to provide $750 a year in self-help. These reforms and changes should have little or no effect on the truly needy student and those who find themselves cut out of the present programs should have little trouble covering their costs through other means, such as the four federal student aid programs that will be left intact.

These four programs include National Direct Student Loans, a program administered by the colleges and universities through revolving funds which the federal government contributes and will continue to contribute to, and supplemental educational opportunity grants which make grants of up to $2,000 for truly needy students. The other two are College Work-Study programs, in which the government subsidizes up to 80 percent of a needy student's wages for part-time work, and state student incentive grants, in which the federal government matches funds with state supported student aid programs.

The budget cuts, while they may appear severe, are simply the only means available to bring uncontrollable spending under control, while assuring that the truly needy students are not denied a college education because of financial need. Even with the cuts, there will still be more than $4.8 billion in federal student financial aid, and that will go a long way toward providing the opportunities of a college education for students in financial need.

PEANUT BUTTER

The peanut butter line may soon join the gasoline line as a sometime phenomenon of life in America these days. Reports of supermarket shelves bare of this vital substance have come from New York City, where the price is said to have hit $2.80 a pound in some stores.

Unfeeling people venture witticisms on this subject, but little they know. It is not a joking matter to small boys and girls accustomed to ingesting a daily dollop of the stuff, perhaps delightfully mingled with jelly, between slices of bread. Many a young American, confronted with a choice between ice cream and peanut butter, would opt for the latter. This is no time for snickers! — Alamogordo Daily News editorial

Even though 14 inches of snow fell on Sierra Blanca the past weekend, spring's in the air and in just 35 days the 1981 meeting begins at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

Outside of the hustle and bustle horse racing will bring to our area from May 9 through Labor Day, there'll be much activity in improvement programs in the village including street projects, water and sewer extensions and an anticipated flurry of building activities.

This year, however, the local action will continue through October 11 with these events now scheduled:

Ruidoso Summer Festival, June 2-9, featuring the Texas Little Symphony of Fort Worth Texas.

Arabian Horse Show, September 19-20.

Aspenade and the 11th Annual Aspenade Motorcycle Convention, September 30-October 3. The popular Aspenade Parade will be October 3.

Ruidoso Downs Mule Skinners mule racing, including arena events, October 8-11.

Hunter/Jumper Show, October 8-11.

These June, September and October functions, with the possibility of adding others now being talked about, will serve to expand "the season," as each of these events will be much improved over last and past years.

This is just to point out that there's going to be more high quality action in Ruidoso this year than ever before, and suggesting that everybody concerned cooperate in every way to make this Ruidoso's most successful summer and fall ever. —CD

PRESIDENTS VULNERABLE

Monday's shooting of President Ronald Reagan ... leaving White House press secretary James Brady fighting for his life with a gunshot wound in his head ... and two officers, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and Thomas Delahanty of the presidential security detail, in serious condition from gunshot wounds ... points out the fact that no security measures ... as long as the President appears in public ... can be effective to prevent assassination attempts.

Personally, I don't believe handgun controls will solve this problem ... four Presidents have been assassinated ... five Presidents escaped assassination ... because, as long as handguns are made anywhere in the world, any person wanting one can obtain same ... then, too, there are always zip guns ... deadly homemade devices to fire cartridges ... plus rifles, shotguns, grenades and Molotov cocktails.

Ergo ... it appears that a President is vulnerable to gunmen as long as he wants to "press the flesh" ... and gain exposure to the public ... with being subject to assassination going with the job.

Now ... forcing a President to live in a controlled, protective, environment ... sheltered completely from violence ... would be tantamount to serving his term in solitary confinement ... which wouldn't do much for our image as the "home of the free" ... whatever.

Perhaps, for public appearances, protective clothing would be in order ... hockey, football and baseball players are forced to wear such gear. This might be drastic action, but it'd help protect our President ... and still let him be mobile ... so he'd not fall victim to cabin fever.

Maybe we're going to have to devise new campaigning procedures for Presidential candidates ... with all major candidates following the rules ... like making TV and radio speeches ... and having print media coverage, with pictures, taken only under the most rigidly controlled conditions, arranged so as to present them as human beings ... with attributes and shortcomings ... like everyone.

We trust that John Warnock Hinckley Jr., won't have any opportunities to escape from custody, as he's whisked here and there, as he awaits action on Monday's attempted assassination of President Reagan ... and the wounding of three other men.

True, it's only alleged he fired the shots ... and there were no TV pictures like those showing Jack Ruby shooting Lee Harvey Oswald ... but, judging from the way officers manhandled him, they must have been mighty suspicious of him ... or, at least, had their reasons.

One day, perhaps, a buncha shrinks'll make educated guesstimates as to Hinckley's motivation ... or lack thereof ... on what they think could have sparked Monday's tragedy ... which'll certainly serve as interesting conjecture to psychiatrists ... which'll be of small consolation to the four victims of the shooting.

Perhaps ... for persons found guilty of assassination of a President, or of attempted assassination ... a national law should be passed that would make mandatory the performing of a lobotomy ... that's an operation in which nerve fibers of the brain are snipped to remove tendencies to violence, and quiet mental disorders and tensions ... that leaves the patient peaceful, agreeable, smiling, happy and contented ... and certainly not a threat to society, his keepers or any other person with whom contact could be made. And if that'd accomplish no more than assuring that the same person wouldn't make the same attempt again, it'd at least accomplish that much.

Sure going to be interesting, though, watching the developments in this shooting unfold ... and wondering how Hinckley's defense will operate ... and how tightly the prosecution will have their case wrapped up ... and how the judge'll handle the trial ... and how the jury'll react ... and how good the rhetoric'll be ... and finally, if the end result is that we'll all feel that justice was done.

BRIEF BIT: No matter how you slice it, guns don't kill people ... it's people firing guns at people that kill people ... CD make your home Energy Checked for lower utility bills.

Efficient hot water systems

Making your home Energy Checked can mean lower utility bills all year long. An energy efficient hot water system is just one checkpoint on the Energy Checked qualification list. In the Energy Checked Home, only hot water systems with high efficiency ratings are installed. Water tanks are insulated to slow down heat loss, and tanks are located close to points of use, such as the kitchen and bathroom. If long pipe runs are unavoidable, pipes are also insulated. Along with energy efficient hot water systems, the Energy Checked Home features insulation, caulking, weatherstripping and efficient heating systems. To make your home Energy Checked, just look for the Energy Checked sign on a new home, or call us for a qualifying inspection on your current home.

ART, DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

Storyteller Joe Hayes is reviving an almost lost art

BY CHARLOTTE FELLERS
Staff Writer/Photographer

It is said that there are millions of people in the United States working at jobs they dislike, but are unable to quit. Joe Hayes never disliked his job, he just took a chance and found one he liked a lot better — storytelling.

Hayes paid a visit to White Mountain Elementary School last Thursday to share his stories with children, and received good reviews, both from teachers and students.

Hayes, a resident of Santa Fe, used to be a high school English teacher. About five years ago, he started "telling stories" to children at local elementary schools and public libraries. But once he found how much he liked it, he gave himself a choice. "I realized that the only way to see if it was viable was to stop everything else and determine if it was an idea people would support. If it failed, I could get into debt a little, but I could always go on to something else," Hayes said.

So, Hayes decided to become a full-time storyteller about a year ago. What is life like for the average full-time storyteller?

"I work three to four days a week, and sometimes five, but that can get pretty hectic," Hayes said.

"I've been offered a residency with a school district, which would be a good opportunity to try some new things."

Storytelling is a vocation that nearly died earlier in this century, when radio, the movie industry, and television, attracted the attention of children. But, now the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling in Jonesboro, Tennessee, has thousands of members, who are working to preserve the art.

"The important thing in storytelling is to get the listeners to use their imaginations ... the key to good storytelling is suggesting what you want them to imagine is happening," Hayes said.

Hayes said "It's worthwhile to do research about the various stories, maybe because it interests me — I like to learn about them. Then I can share what I know with the audiences."

One thing research has revealed about storytelling is that "people do tell similar stories in all different cultures." He said many have the same general outcome or have the same themes.

Hayes keeps about 100 stories in his repertoire. "My biggest frustration is that I can't add new stories any faster. And, some stories are more successful than others, depending on the audience." Hayes finds new material by doing a lot of reading and when a story "just jumps off the page at me, I will usually use it."

He doesn't necessarily select stories that have a moral, such as Aesop's Fables. "I believe that stories do their work in nourishing the growth of people in lots of different areas ... they help with growing up."

Storytelling is becoming a notable movement in the country again, but it has its low points for Hayes. Because many of his clients are elementary schools "summer's are slim pickings ... but I will be teaching storytelling courses at the University of New Mexico and the College of Santa Fe this summer — that will help."

Hayes also supplements off-season income by working at summer camps in New Mexico and at children's parties. He said Ruidoso's elementary students were nearly an ideal audience.

"They were fantastic — real warm. They came up to me afterwards and shook my hand or gave me a hug. That's sort of unusual to get that kind of response," Hayes said.

He hopes to eventually be able to select the jobs he wants to take, and judging from the reactions of White Mountain Elementary children, that day may be closer than he thinks.

"It's something I do well and like a lot. It satisfies a lot of needs for me. I like working with kids — they make a wonderful audience and there are no hassles that classroom teachers have."

And, storytelling is not yet extremely competitive, Hayes said. He plans to keep on doing it until there are no more stories to tell or no more audiences to listen.

JOE HAYES, a professional storyteller, fascinated students and teachers at White Mountain Elementary last Thursday, with the many images he created using inflections in his voice, facial expressions, or movement of his arms.

Just A Play Mate wins West Texas Futurity

Just A Play Mate, running as a 13-1 outsider, scrambled to a nose victory in Sunday's 10th staging of the West Texas Futurity at Sunland Park.

The 330 yard dash carried a gross purse of $254,894 and handed the winner $85,548. The amount disbursed in the finale alone was $189,865.

Just A Play Mate, guided by Joe Ruiz, broke in third place in the 10 head field, then had to close with a tremendous finish in order to salvage the victory.

Mitos Money Maker, a 7-2 shot, was in the thick of things all the way and made Just A Play Mate work for her money. The latter barely managed to wave her nose in front on the last jump. The two leaders were trucking at full blast when they charged under the wire.

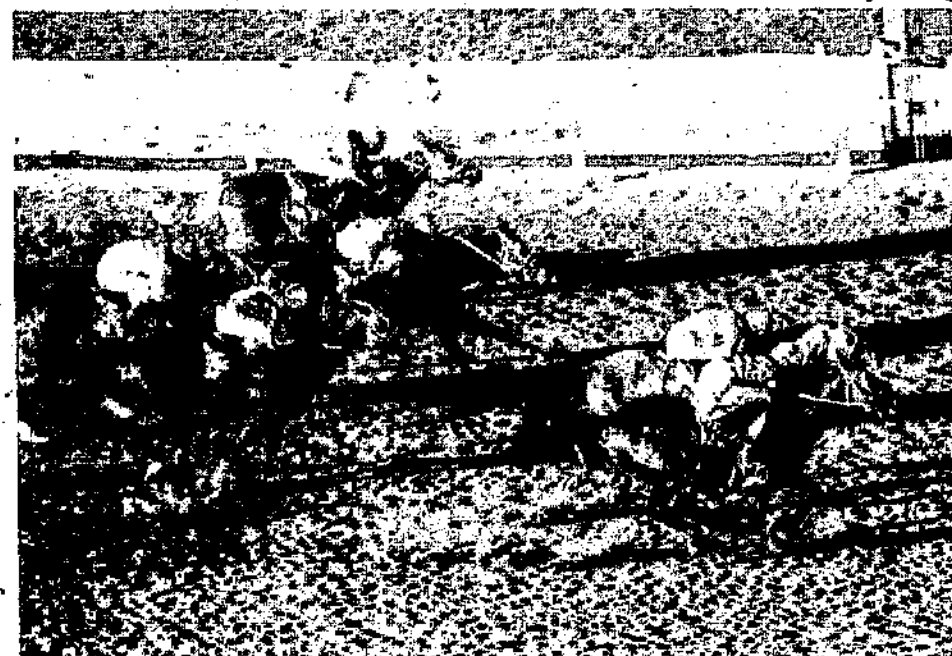

Just A Play Mate is owned by Victor and Jose Diaz and Jesse Valdez of Anthony. Valdez also does the training. The Diaz family is well known as a pioneer El Paso, Texas, family whose interests include ranching and real estate on this side of the border, and coffee exporting in Mexico.

Just A Play Mate traveled the West Texas Futurity course in a tailwind clocking of 18.78 seconds and returned mutual payoffs of $27.80, $7.80 and $5.20. Mitos Money Maker, the property of Barbara A. Smith of Lewisville, Texas, earned $35,708 for second and handed out mutual payoffs of $5.20 and $3.80. James Lackey was up.

Third went to Tarbug, a 14-1 shot carrying the colors of Betty Lou Shebester of Wynnewood, Oklahoma. Larry Byers did the piloting. Tarbug broke in seventh Sun Country Futurity at Sunland, plus those super-futurities at Ruidoso Downs this summer.

In last week's West Texas Futurity trials, Just A Play Mate hung up the eighth fastest qualifying time of 18.84 seconds. The top qualifier, Tinsy-Gay Bailey, delayed the start of Sunday's West Texas Futurity, then finished seventh at even-money.

place, then closed with a big rush to bag third. He hit the wire a length behind Mitos Money Maker.

Backers of Tarbug got a show payoff of $5.80. The third place purse amounted to $16,698.

Just A Play Mate came out of the West Texas Futurity with a perfect career record of two wins from two starts. He also looms as the one to watch in the upcoming

Sunland Park Hoofbeats

BY MARK GORDON

BERT SONNIE is one of the country's most respected trainers of thoroughbred champions. That's why his opinion carries added weight. Sonnier, commenting to Terry Wallace of The Arkansas Democrat said: "Bold Ego is still the best three-year-old I've seen in the country this year. He'll sure win the Arkansas Derby."

If Bold Ego does indeed capture the mile and 1/16th fixture for three-year-olds at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Arkansas, on April 11, it surely will propel Bold Ego into the spotlight among the nation's sophomores. Even if he doesn't win the Arkansas classic, Bold Ego will probably compete in the Kentucky Derby on May 2 at Churchill Downs in Louisville, Kentucky. Area race fans need no introduction to Bold Ego. Under Cliff Lambert's training last year, Bold Ego was last year's Sunland Park champion two-year-old. He captured all three Sunland starts, including the $206,359 Rileys Allison Thoroughbred Futurity. He also won the Kindergarten Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

TEN THREE-YEAR-OLDS qualified with rapid times last Friday for next Sunday's 10th running of the West Texas Derby for quarter horses. They will scamper 400 yards for the winner's share of $48,014.87 of the total purse of $96,029.73. The entries and their qualifying times: Mister Te Jay, 19:58; Soul Long, 19:58; Mighty Deck Three, 19:50; Native Sparkle, 19:55; Zevi Dial, 19:59; Flaming Pass Em, 19:70; Easy Six Arrive, 19:75; Heart Snatcher, 19:78; Another Maiden, 19:78; and Barging Miss, 19:82. Two sons of Mighty Deck earned Derby spots. The more prominent is Dan and Jolene Urschel's Mighty Deck Three. He was undefeated before suffering a nose defeat in last Labor Day's All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs. Heart Snatcher is the other Mighty Deck offspring in the Derby. Another Mighty Deck offspring, Mighty I Can, captured the second division of the Derby trials. His time, however, was not fast enough to qualify for the finals.

MATCH STRIDES roared to a 10 1/4 length victory in Friday's 11th race, a four furlong dash for 10 two-year-old maidens. After setting a 22 3/5 quarter-clocking, he completed the test in a rapid 45 2/5. That's just three ticks off the track record of 44 4/5 set by Tamran's Jet, way back on March 22, 1968. The colt is owned by Coy Hendrix and Elizabeth J. Smith of El Paso, Texas, and was ridden by Betty Harless. Hendrix also does the training. It was a popular decision as he was bet to 9-10 favoritism by the fans.

DESPITE RUNNING fourth and out-of-the-money in Saturday's featured allowance race, Bet On Me is still a gem of consistency. The six-year-old gelding has 13 wins, 17 seconds and 15 thirds in 53 career outings for an in-the-money percentage of slightly better than 84, certainly one of the top figures for a competitor that durable. He's owned by Patrick D. Brown of Anthony, and trained by James W. Curry.

IN STEWARDS' RULINGS: — Jockey Carlos Rivas was fined $50 for failure to have control of his mount, Dashing Widow, leaving the starting gate during the third race on March 22. — Jockey Joseph Ober was fined $50 for failure to have control of his mount, My Hula, leaving the starting gate during the fourth race on March 22. — Jockey agent Orlando A. Martinez was fined $25 for creating a disturbance. — Trainer Michael E. Chambliss was fined $25 for entering a horse without first obtaining a trainer's license. — Practicing veterinarian Bruce Talsman was fined $10 for illegal parking. — Jockey Gary Sumpter was fined $10 for illegal parking. — Practicing veterinarian Sidney T. Zarges was fined $10 for illegal parking. — Trainers Donald E. Marr, Carroll

Gordon named to publicity post at Sunland and Downs

Mark Gordon, a 15 year veteran of daily newspapers, has been appointed Assistant Publicity Director of Sunland Park and Ruidoso Downs, according to Sunland News Director Dick Alwan.

Gordon, 32, replaces Mike Magda, who accepted a similar position at Los Alamitos near Los Angeles, California.

Gordon has worked for the past 14 months as sports layout editor for the Albuquerque Journal. He also handled horse racing coverage for The Journal.

Prior to that, he spent 10 years with the Lincoln Journal and Star in Nebraska where he covered Nebraska thoroughbred racing at the state's five tracks.

He has also worked at newspapers at Omaha, Nebraska; Worthington, Minnesota and Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

He has covered three national Eclipse Award Ceremonies as well as the Kentucky Derby and this All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

Hall, Robert Glasgow, Odis Craighead, G. Otis Fenton, Clifford C. Lambert Sr., Albino C. Valenzuela were each fined $25 for entering an ineligible horse.

TWO HORSES SCORED their first career wins Sunday in their racing debuts. Sam F. Henderson's Maskeo Rocket tallied a two length win in the third race, a 350 yard dash. He is trained by Clifton Dean and was ridden by Danny Lavergne.

Virgil J. Callaway's Spanish Spade zipped to a two and one-quarter length triumph in the fifth race, a four furlong chase for maidens. The colt is trained by Billy Hitt and was ridden by Billy Byers.

JOCKEY RAMON APODACA was the only rider scoring a triple. He scored triumphs Sunday aboard Emiliano Fernandez' Spicy Venture ($25.80) in the second, Irvin DeCordova's Tony Oh ($6.40) in the sixth and on Alvina Sanchez' Foggy King ($9.00) in the eleventh.

THE LEADING POST position over the weekend was the No. 5 with eight winners. Here are the seasonal totals: No. 1 — 109; No. 2 — 120; No. 3 — 98; No. 4 — 91; No. 5 — 93; No. 6 — 89; No. 7 — 74; No. 8 — 62; No. 9 — 57; No. 10 — 43; No. 11 — 0; No. 12 — 0.

Burglars like automotive store

Alright, crooks, enough is enough. You've got the folks at the Quality Automotive Repair Center in Alamogordo pretty upset with you.

After all, three burglaries within three weeks is mixing insult with injury. This week the State Crime Stoppers Commission is offering a $1,000 reward and the Otero County Crime Stoppers Program is furnishing up to $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the burglars.

The first break-in occurred sometime during the late evening or early morning hours of February 10-11, while the second took place around the same time February 27-28. The third burglary occurred between 5 p.m. and 7:30 a.m., on March 3-4.

The parade of after hours visitors has resulted in the loss of about $7,000 worth of merchandise, including some $5,800 in snap-on brand and miscellaneous hand tools, a large amount of cash, a 23 channel CB radio, a 12 inch color television set, and two black and white televisions.

Anyone having any information about the burglaries can become eligible for a reward by calling the State Crime Stoppers Commission at its toll-free number, 1-800-432-6933, or the Otero County Crime Stoppers program at 437-2000. In all cases callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Meanwhile, burglars are the prey of a number of other Crime Stoppers programs around New Mexico.

Curry county Crime Stoppers is offering a $115 reward for information leading to the solution of two burglaries at the same residence on Diamondhead Street in Clovis. Two bicycles were taken from the garage on November 17, 1980, while a third disappeared on February 22. Curry County Crime Stoppers can be reached at 763-7000.

The November 27, 1980, burglary of the Rock Museum at New Mexico Tech is the subject of this week's Crime of the Week in Socorro. Some 40 ounces of quarter-inch silver shot was taken by the offenders, who also tried to break into a floor safe in the building. The offenders apparently gained entry by using keys. Extensive vandalism occurred during the burglary. Socorro Crime Stoppers, at 835-1883, is offering a $200 reward.

Lea County Crime Stoppers, at 393-8005, is offering up to $1,000 for information leading to the solution of the January 6-7 break-in at the Moose Lodge, located on the Carlsbad Highway. The offenders forced their way through some double doors on the northeast corner of the building or near the west wall and then broke into the safe. Taken was $1,603.95 in cash.

As estimated $20,000 worth of property was taken by burglars during a break-in of a residence at 1696 Arlene Road in Rio Rancho on February 24. Among the items taken were several pieces of jewelry and some pistols. A $300 reward is being offered by Rio Rancho Crime Stoppers. Anyone with information can call 1-800-432-1833.

On February 15, the Wayne Hubbard residence in Gallup also was the victim of a burglary. The offenders made off with a silver tea service, a man's silver and turquoise bracelet with a watch and a silver and turquoise squash blossom necklace, as well as some other pieces of jewelry. Gallup Crime Stoppers, at 722-6161, is offering a $500 reward.

Quay County Crime Stoppers, at 461-3507, is offering up to $300 for information leading to the solution of a break-in to the Blevins McKenzie residence at 2122 South Second Street in Tucuman. The offenders took a large amount of jewelry, including two diamond rings, a diamond stick pin, some pearl necklaces and silver dollars.

For sheer gall, some crooks in Carlsbad take this week's prize.

Some bold burglars walked off with some $3,500 worth of items when they broke into a trailer rig parked at the Holiday Inn. The thieves used the trailer's hand truck to cart off three microwave ovens, two gas ranges and a tire and tube. Then they put a new padlock on the truck. Police had to cut the padlock off before investigating the theft. Officers are offering a substantial reward to anyone with information who calls Carlsbad Crime Stoppers at 887-1888 and helps solve the case.

Real Estate Facts

a public service of the Ruidoso Board of Realtors

The price of a home and its appraised value are not always the same, according to the Ruidoso Board of Realtors.

Harold D. Albritton, president of Albritton, Schultz and Associates, a real estate consulting and appraisal firm in Atlanta, Georgia, asserted in an article in real estate today* that substantial controversy exists among real estate professionals, lenders, buyers, sellers and appraisers regarding the commonly used terms "price" and "value."

Sales people frequently are confronted with this problem when listing property for sale, since the seller may be entertaining unreasonable expectations.

Albritton explained that it is understandable that a seller wants the maximum possible price for his property, but a misconception of "value" might affect market receptivity if the listed price is excessive.

The reason for this discrepancy, lies in a failure to understand the difference between the terms "price" and "value," according to Albritton.

The monetary sum paid for real property customarily is reported as "price" and represents a cold fact.

"Value," however, is always expressed as an opinion or estimate. Basically, "value" represents a relationship between a person and the object desired. It is defined as the "estimated present worth of future benefits."

The value of a home to a particular owner or buyer is the sum total of the present worth of the rights-of-use; the anticipated joy and tax advantages of ownership; and the prospects for equity growth through debt amortization and increasing prices.

That value differs among individuals is evidenced by the substantially varying prices for virtually identical properties in the same market area.

Albritton pointed out that price reflects the value relationship between a buyer and a seller for a property on a particular date. "It cannot be argued, however, that price establishes value," he said. "This is especially true when the market reflects sales of similar properties at widely differing prices on approximately the same date."

He concluded that in such instances, prices are reflective of value to specific buyers of specific properties and say little or nothing about the objective value of the property.

So when it's time to put your home on the market, the Ruidoso Board of Realtors suggests that you remember the terms "price" and "value." It could mean the difference between a quick sale and months of frustrating effort.

Wildfire conditions prevailing in forests

Federal and state land management agencies in Arizona and New Mexico are anticipating a severe wildfire season that must be handled with reduced manpower, the Forest Service has announced.

Jim Hickman, director of aviation and fire management for the Forest Service's Southwestern Region, said the moisture content in forest and range fuels is far below normal. "The spring rain and snow showers we've been receiving so far are too little and too late," he said. Drought conditions vary from moderate in most of the region to severe in the north-central mountains of New Mexico.

Hickman urged visitors to the public lands to use extreme care with all fire. He added that moderate fire danger conditions can be pushed into the extreme range by a few hours of wind. Budget reductions, Hickman added, will mean fewer fire fighters. "Part of this can be overcome by greater cooperation among land management agencies but we also must ask the public to help by being more careful," he said.

Since January 1 the national forests in Arizona have reported 39 fires with 37 that were man caused. New Mexico reported nine fires, all man-caused.

Cooperating agencies include the forestry departments of both states, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Bureau of Land Management, the National Park Service and the Forest Service.

Are you protecting a $1200/acre ranch with $200/acre life insurance?

If your life insurance plan hasn't kept up with the increased worth of your ranch, your heirs risk losing part — even all — of their inheritance. Estate and property taxes, among other things, are levied against current values. And an out-of-date ranch conservation-life insurance program won't provide enough cash to pay them. Poultry scientists puzzling over thin egg shells

Poultry scientists don't spend much time anymore trying to decide if the chicken or egg came first. Dr. Robert Roberson, poultry science professor at New Mexico State University (NMSU), said, "Nobody I know wants to take a firm position on either side of that question."

However, Roberson and other researchers are busy trying to find out why chickens start to produce thin-shelled eggs near the end of their first year's laying cycle.

So far, the answer has been as elusive as the answer to the classic chicken versus egg question.

Thin-shelled eggs are a serious problem for commercial laying houses where much of the egg handling is automated. When breakage goes up, profits go down. The same problems extend through the transportation cycle as fresh eggs are delivered to supermarkets.

"People have been working on this problem for several years," Roberson said, "and all we have been able to do is eliminate most of the things we thought might cause the problem."

"For instance, we know the egg's shell is made of calcium carbonate, so it seemed logical to increase the calcium in chickens' feed rations. We got nice, hard shells early in the laying cycle, and up through the middle of the cycle, but the same old problem turned up again near the end of the laying cycle."

Roberson is also a poultry judge. He knows a top-quality laying hen when he sees one, but he also knows that a fair-sized grand champion laying hen will eventually lay thin-shelled eggs.

"We don't think genetic improvement is going to help the thin eggshell problems. As a matter of fact, our breeding emphasis might have helped cause the problem," he said.

Before they were domesticated, chickens laid only a few eggs in the spring to reproduce the species, like all other birds. "Now that we have bred birds to lay eggs all year round, we may have contributed to the problem," Roberson said.

There's also a possibility that a hen's body chemistry produces a specific amount of calcium carbonate for each shell. As the hen matures, the eggs get larger. Stretching a limited amount of eggshell around the larger egg may cause a thinner shell.

"This idea has a nice mathematical ring to it, and it's also the only thin-shell theory that we haven't been able to completely disprove," he said.

Recently, poultry researchers have come across a partial solution to thin-shelled eggs in the same area they believe causes thin shells — increased production.

Chickens normally go into commercial laying houses when they are 20 to 22 weeks old. At first, they produce at a 90 percent rate, nine eggs every 10 days. The rate usually drops to one egg every other day at the end of a year.

When a hen's egg production falls to 75 percent, of 275 eggs in 365 consecutive days, the hen becomes a candidate for the food processor.

Laying hens produce beyond a year in the family farm environment, and a new technique has extended their productive life in commercial egg production.

"It turns out that chickens are a lot like people," Roberson said. "After a year on the job, they need a vacation to get charged up again."

Researchers found laying hens return to somewhere near the 90 percent production level after about eight weeks rest. They can continue producing at an efficient rate for anywhere from nine months to a year.

And the thin eggshell problem turns up again near the end of the second laying cycle.

"We haven't solved the thin shell problem this way," Roberson said, "but we seem to have interrupted it somehow. That's an improvement and it may also be a clue to the final answer to this perennial problem."

New Mexico has about one million laying hens in commercial egg production operations near the state's largest cities. One is south of Las Cruces, another is near Anthony and the Texas border. Two are operating in the rural area near Albuquerque.

"There are really more than a million laying hens making breakfast for us in New Mexico," Roberson said, "but we can only get accurate counts from the commercial egg producers. There are plenty of small farmers around the state who have small flocks, and they manage to make a little money supplying local demand."

The active life of a laying hen probably can't be extended much past the second laying cycle, according to research data.

When a commercial laying hen no longer produces, she does not turn up as a baking hen on the meat counter. "By that time the meat's not really that good," Roberson said.

Old laying hens are most often converted to canned chicken soup, but poultry products are now being blended with beef in bologna and wieners.

"Some processors have started making an all-poultry bologna and franka, which we consider a plus for the poultry industry," Roberson said.

NMSU researchers also have to cull non-producers out of their flocks. "We can get attached to some of those old hens; we hate to see them go," Roberson said.

"First we try talking to them to get them out of their laying slump. If that doesn't work, we set some Campbell's chicken soup cans around the pen. But if that doesn't work..."

Wilderness Wisdom

with Wayne Calloway

Dear Wayne — A couple of years ago, I remember seeing something you did on poaching, but I don't recall the gist of it. I can get very riled with people who poach wild game, particularly for resale. I can understand, and maybe forgive those who illegally kill game for food, but those who profit from it are at the bottom of my list of despicable persons.

Is poaching as serious a problem as it several years ago, or are we making progress in eliminating its curse? Samuel C., South Carolina

Dear Samuel — Poaching is still a very serious problem, maybe more so than twenty years ago. Several very large illegal operations that sold meat and fur have been broken up, and no doubt others exist still. Thousands of birds and animals may be taken yearly by just one such organization. There are many other two or three man operations that profit at our expense.

I, like you, can see some justification for taking game to feed a family, if the need is legitimate, but in the eyes of the law that is poaching and subject to punishment. In all fairness, I don't see how the law could be enforced otherwise.

From where I sit, it seems that hunters and professional wildlife people are the ones who are most aware of the poaching problem. They also seem to be the ones most concerned. I sometimes believe the non-hunting public is too far removed from the problem, and apt to consider it less severe than it really is. Well, even by conservative estimates, far more game is taken illegally than by fee-paying hunters. It is, of course, a form of stealing. Robbery of our natural resources above and beyond what our management programs are able to maintain. The cost of this plunder is well into the millions. And guess who pays. The hunter bears the brunt of the tab, but every citizen pays dues to support poaching.

So, why not get tougher with poachers? Well, it's a big task. Jack lighters use CB's, look out vehicles, and other effective forms of evasion from capture. Game wardens are too few to adequately cover their assigned areas. At times prosecution is difficult. Some judges don't seem convinced that it isn't a big joke. But there are indications this may be changing. Large fines and suspension of hunting privileges, as well as confiscation of firearms and even vehicles are convincing poachers how expensive their game can be.

Several states now have reward programs, funded by private citizens, that make it quite worth while for a citizen to report a poacher. And these programs seem to be working. So, there is some good evidence that poachers are in for a rougher life. To which I say, it's about time.

Dust bags control flies

Forcing cattle on pasture to walk between dust bags of insecticide on the way to and from water, or salt and mineral, will control costly flies this summer, said Larry Foster, Extension beef cattle specialist at New Mexico State University.

This easy, self-treatment method is effective against horn flies and face flies, the two major pests of cattle on pasture.

Both pests reduce weight gains and studies have shown the incidence of pinkeye increases with an increase in the number of face flies on cattle.

For cow-calf operators, Foster said that increased weaning weights potentially can return $10 for every $1 invested in dust bags and insecticide.

He bases this on tests where horn flies were controlled with dust bags, and weaning weights increased an average of 13 pounds per calf. At 75 cents a pound for feeder calves, the extra sale weight would be worth $9.75 per calf, Foster said. He estimates the cost of fly control at 75 to 90 cents per head.

An even larger return is possible, considering the link between face flies and the incidence of pinkeye. In other experiments, calves that had pinkeye at least once average 36 to 40 pounds lighter at weaning than calves not infected by the disease.

Cattle used about one-tenth ounce of insecticide dust per animal per day. The normal fly season extends from May through September, about 150 days.

To set up for fly control in a 100-head herd, a cattleman will need to buy two dust bag kits costing about $24 apiece. Each kit comes with 25 pounds of insecticide dust.

Two 25-pound refills, which cost about $12.50 apiece, should last the entire fly season, Foster said. Total cost per head comes to 74 cents for the kits.

To be effective, dust bags must be installed where cattle are forced to come in contact with them every day. Fencing off the water supply works best, Foster said.

But if this isn't practical, he recommends setting up the dust bags so cattle have to go through them to get salt and mineral.

"Watch the cattle as they walk through the treatment area to make sure dust bags are hung at the proper height," Foster said. "The bags must cover the entire opening so the cattle have to pick them up with their heads."

Investment credit

Owners of machinery and livestock purchased during 1980 for use in a personal business may be entitled to a tax credit of 10 percent of the qualifying cost.

This investment credit applies to new or used depreciable property. Real property, which is land or anything permanently attached to it, is generally not eligible for this investment credit. Exceptions to this include elevators, escalators and bulk storage facilities. Horses do not qualify.

The amount of credit that can be claimed depends on the cost of the eligible item and the length of time it will be used. If the property will be used in the business for three to four years, one-third of the cost qualifies for the credit. Five or six years of intended use will qualify two-thirds of the cost for the credit. If the item will be used for seven or more years, the total cost qualifies for the credit.

A limitation exists on the amount of used property on which the credit may be claimed. The credit may not be claimed on more than $100,000 total cost of used qualifying property.

A limitation also exists on the total amount of credit that can be claimed in any one tax year. The credit is limited to the lesser of your income tax liability for the year or $25,000 plus 70 percent of the tax that exceeds $25,000.

Any unused credit may be carried back three years to offset income tax paid in those years and then carried forward for seven years. The carry-back may be achieved by filing Form 1045, "Application for Tentative Refund," if filed within 12 months after the end of the tax year in which the credit was earned. Otherwise a Form 1040X amended return may be filed for each year to which the credit is carried. The 1040X must be filed within three years after the due date of the return in which the credit was earned.

If a taxpayer disposed of any property on which he had claimed investment credit in a prior tax year, he may have to recapture part or all of the credit claimed in the prior year. Property is considered disposed if sold or traded, lost through theft or casualty, or ceased to be used in the business.

To compute the possible recapture, refigure the credit on the property disposed of by using the actual life. If this is less than the credit claimed, the difference must be added to the tax in the year of disposition.

The investment credit may be claimed by attaching a completed Form 3469, Computation of Investment Credit, to your return.

AVOID FINANCIAL HEADACHES

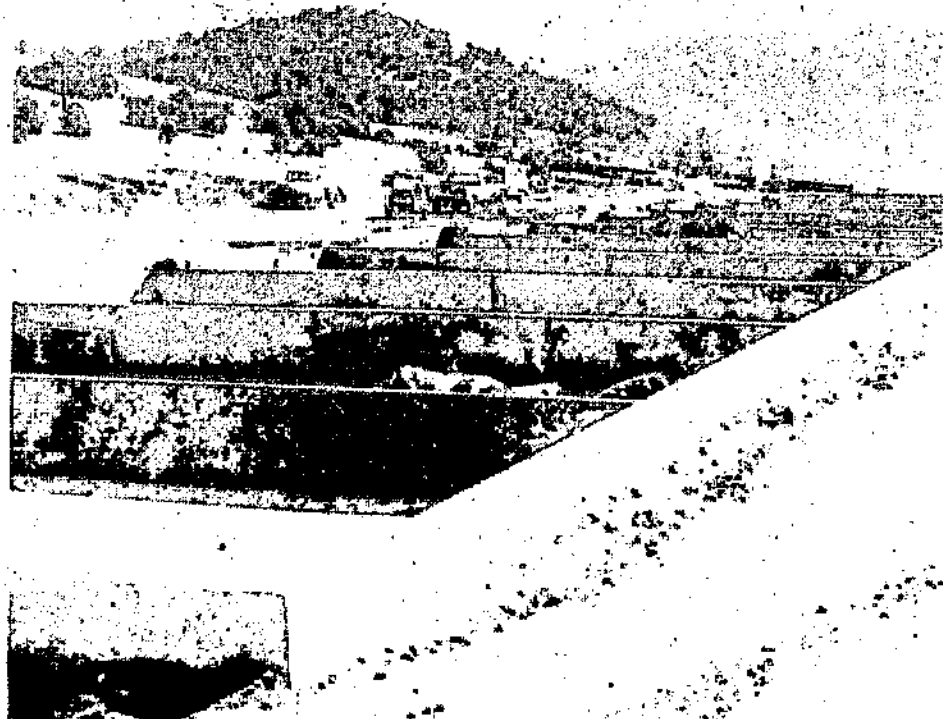

Thinking about selling your home on your own? If so, you should commence a cram course in financing. How much money will you want down? How will you determine the prospect's credit history? Will you accept a second mortgage? Have you been in close contact with financial institutions? Can you advise a prospect where to get mortgage funds and who will pay what closing costs?

On the other hand, Realtors know that many sales are lost strictly for want of proper financing. They also know the intricate methods and sources of financing.

Honestly, the best way to market your home — probably your most valuable asset — is the professional way. Just as you would go to a doctor for medical aid, you should go to a Realtor for assistance in selling your home. It must make financial sense. Over 75% of all home sales are handled by people in the profession.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at DEVON DEVELOPMENT, INC., 2904 Sudderth Drive, Box 1860, Ruidoso. Phone: 257-5511. We're here to help!

Potter Tim Weirwille draws inspiration from nature

TIM WEIRWILLE, a native of Ohio, served an apprenticeship with Santa Fe potter Frank Willett, before settling in Lincoln County. Weirwille works at his home studio in Angus and his pottery is available at Armadillo Studio in Ruidoso.

THE INFLUENCE exerted on the artist by the New Mexico landscape is obvious in this White Mountain Pottery pitcher.

Promoters of the tourist industry like to call it enchantment — the feelings of awe, or even reverence which the spectacular landscapes of New Mexico evoke in the newcomer and native alike.

Those feelings are known by another name — inspiration — to New Mexico's artists, who earn their livelihood and personal satisfaction by translating those feelings into their work.

If those works are good enough — if they "do justice" to the natural world which inspired them, they will, in turn, inspire people by their own intrinsic beauty.

The pottery of Tim Weirwille belongs in that category. Weirwille, discovered the beauty of New Mexico and the enjoyment of creating pottery at the same time; so it was only natural that his work would clearly reflect his love of both.

A 31-year-old native of Cincinnati, Ohio, Weirwille earned a degree (and a secondary teaching certificate) from Miami University of Ohio.

"But I didn't have the patience to teach," he said. In the early 1970's, "with a wing and a prayer," he headed west.

Weirwille got as far as Santa Fe, where he discovered himself "in the right place at the right time." Santa Fe potter Frank Willett needed an apprentice, and Weirwille needed something to do.

He worked with Willett for almost five years before striking out on his own. He moved to Ruidoso in 1978, and he and his wife, Nan, opened a studio, White Mountain Pottery.

Last year, the Weirwille family, which now includes daughter Chloe, moved their residence and his studio to the banks of the Bonito River near Angus. His pottery is marketed through his home studio and at Armadillo Studio and Gallery, Ruidoso.

Over the last six years, Weirwille has developed the pottery for which he is best known — also called White Mountain Pottery.

The inspiration he derives from the mountains is the starting point of a lengthy technical process which produces the stoneware pottery. Eight "stages or steps" are involved, he said.

Unlike earthenware pottery, which is made from local materials including clay from streambeds, stoneware is a more durable form of pottery, fired at a higher temperature, Weirwille said.

Clay for the stoneware comes from special mines located around the country — not in New Mexico, Weirwille said.

He mixes four clay ingredients according to his own "secret recipe," with clay he buys in 100-pound sacks from local lumberyards. "It's the same kind of clay they use to lay bricks," he said.

He cuts the clay, weighs it for the particular piece he is working on, and "wedges" it, a process similar to kneading bread dough.

Most of his pottery is "wheel thrown," after which measurements and calibrations are made for the pieces which require lids. The thrown pottery is allowed to dry for a day, to the "leather hard" stage, Weirwille said.

At that point, he does "trimming, attaching of handles and carving of designs," on the pottery's surface. Another drying period follows — the greenware stage — in which all moisture evaporates from the clay. This stage may take from two days to two weeks, depending on the humidity and the size of the piece.

Once it's completely dry, and following a short "bisque firing" the pottery is ready for glazing. Weirwille defined the glaze base as "powdered glass suspended in water," but, again, he adds his own formula of special ingredients, including feldspar, dolomite, silica and iron oxide.

Glazing may be accomplished in several ways — dipping the piece into a bucket, applying with a paintbrush or even with an air sprayer. During this stage the item is decorated with the glaze and excess glaze is removed by hand, he said.

Firing of stoneware takes three days, with the first day devoted to heating the pottery and the last two days to cooling it. The high temperature (2,400 degrees) used in firing and the glaze make the pottery strong and non-porous.

Weirwille's kiln holds 180 to 190 pieces of pottery, and he waits until he has a full load before firing up the device, "to get all my eggs in one basket," he said.

Getting all those "eggs" ready for firing may take up to three weeks. A kiln load may include mugs, dinnerware sets, pitchers, bowls, lamp bases, tiles, goblets, canisters — even drams and sink basins.

"It's still a surprise when I open the kiln," he said. "I feel fortunate that my work is as spontaneously rewarding as it is. With no formal art training to rely on, pottery continues to be a process of experimentation and discovery."

The process is also influenced by some specific goals.

"To me, the complexity of a work demonstrates one's technical capabilities. The simplicity of a work demonstrates one's sensitivity and gives the piece its personal distinction," he said.

"That's what I want and try to convey in my pottery — technical competence and aesthetic creative feeling."

Still, he said, it's also important "not to take yourself too seriously. For example, I'm doing the Women's Bowling League trophies for the third year. I love doing them — it helps put things in perspective."

"I try to be an integrated craftsman and not let pottery consume me — which it easily could," he added.

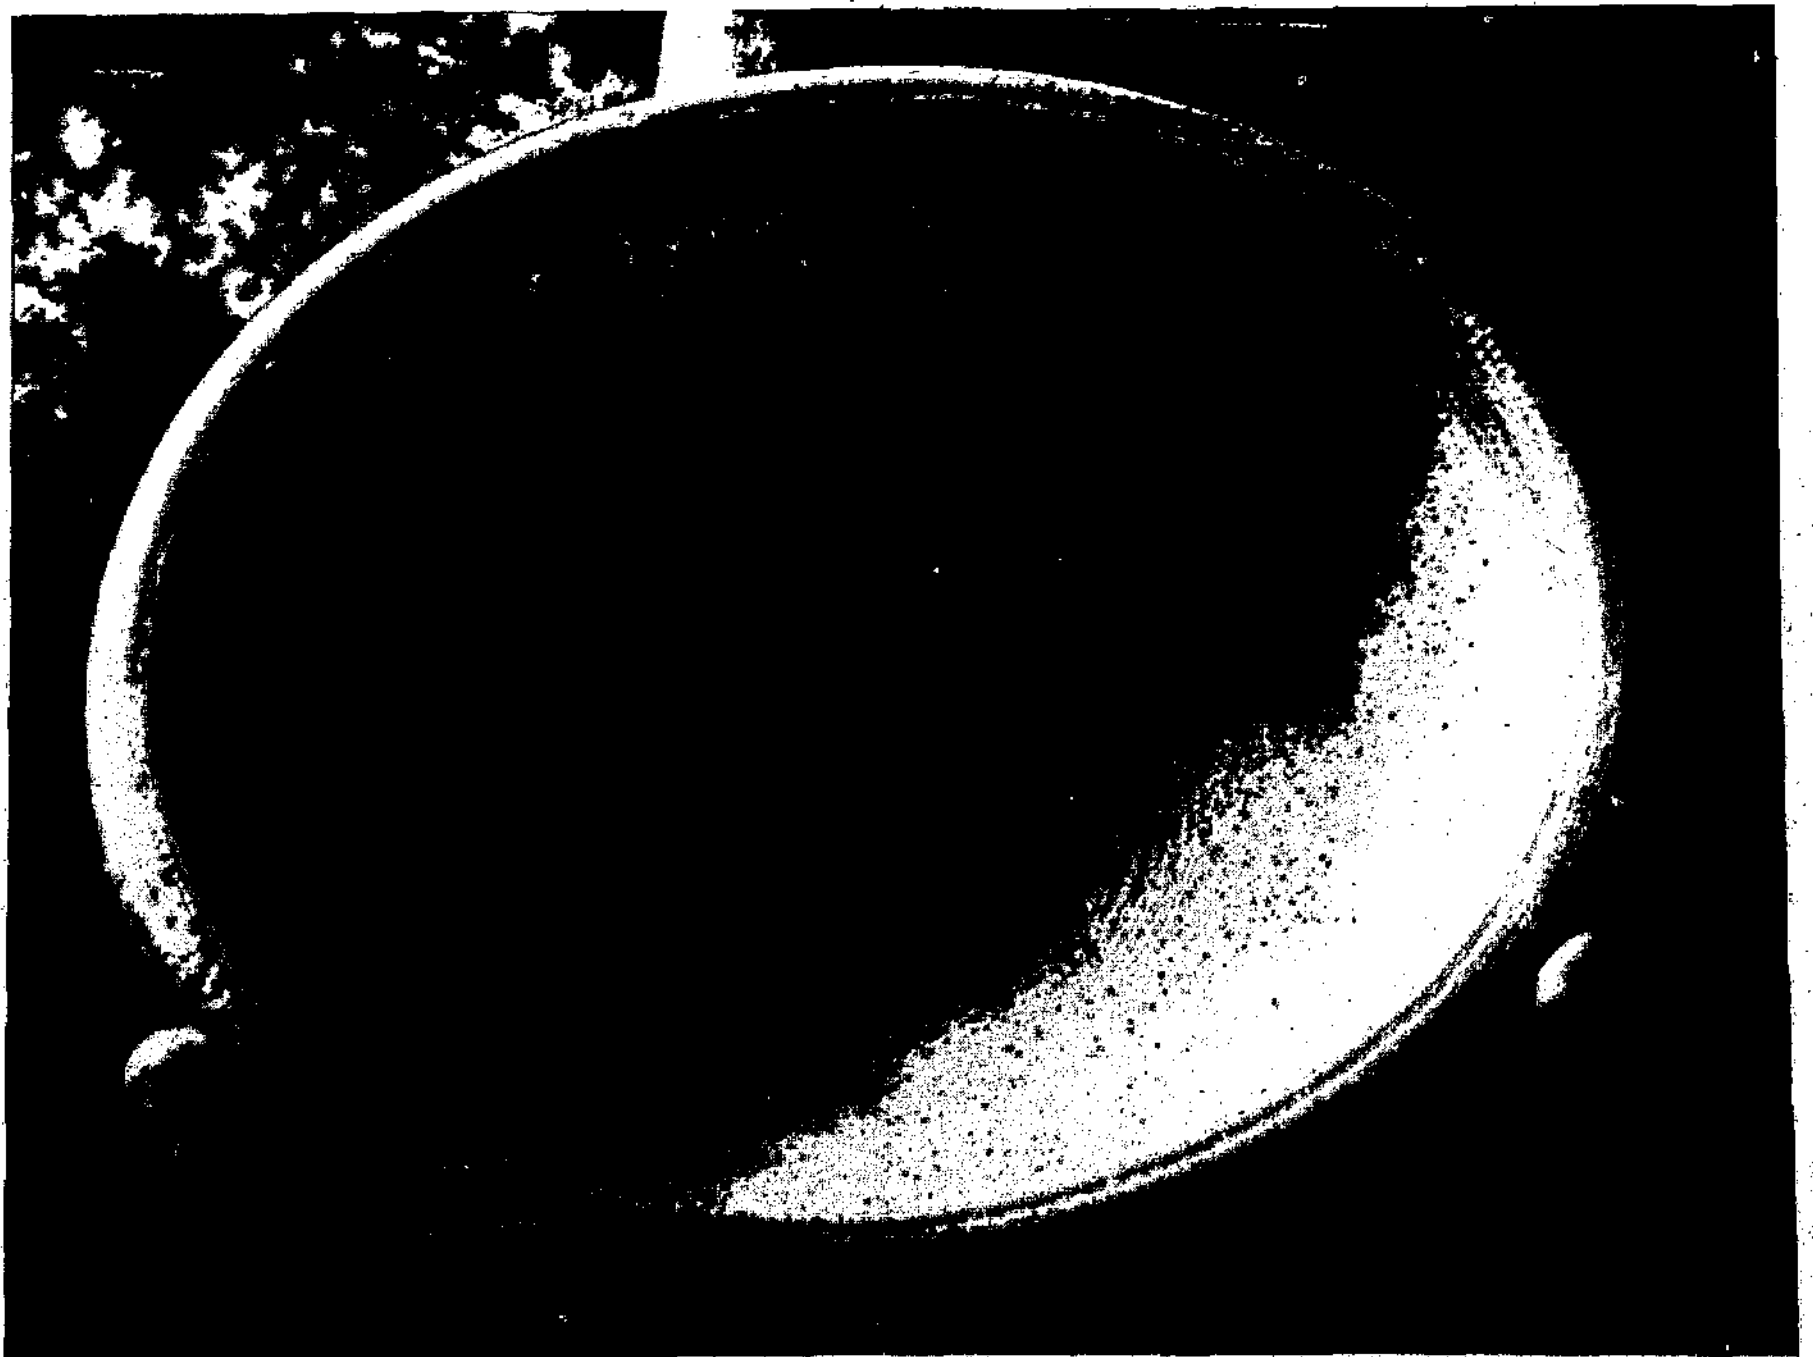

In talking about his work, Weirwille can't help but return to that starting point — the earth's natural beauty.

"The environment and the mountains are a continual source of inspiration," he said. "I think everyone in New Mexico realizes that — that's why they're here."

His regard for the unique geography of New Mexico is at least part of the reason Tim Weirwille is here, and why he and his work, like the mountains which inspire them, persist and evolve in this particular moment of time and space they share.

WHITE MOUNTAIN POTTERY, for which Weirwille is best known, depicts his interpretation of the Sacramento Mountains near his home.

ALMOST PURE FORM, a stoneware sink basin will add a natural accent to its future home.

SOLAR FACTS

HEAT STORAGE

Everyone is familiar with what happens to a metal porch chair when it is left in the sun. It gets very warm, sometimes even uncomfortable.

If the metal chair is placed in the shade, out of the direct rays of the sun, it continues to stay warm for awhile but soon gives up its heat. The metal chair is, in effect, a reservoir accumulating the sun's radiation or warmth.

In a dwelling that uses a passive solar system for heating, a heat storage reservoir is a vital part of the system. Quite obviously the sun's heat is incoming only during the day. Heat must be stored from day to night and from sunny day to cloudy day. Various materials can be used to store the heat of the sun, but preference is given to those that are relatively inexpensive, have high heat-storage capacity and are good conductors. For these reasons, water or masonry (concrete, bricks, adobe, etc.) are often used for heat storage. In the language of solar energy these heat storage materials are said to have "thermal mass."

Thermal mass commonly takes the form of masonry floors or walls in a building. If water is used for a thermal-mass wall, it is usually placed in metal or fiberglass tanks or tubes. Regardless of what material is used, it must be positioned so that the sunlight coming through the south-facing glass wall will strike the thermal mass.

The basic concept of heat storage via thermal mass is the same in all passive solar energy systems, whether they use direct-gain, indirect-gain or isolated-gain methods. In each system, the thermal mass stores the sun's energy for release at a later time.

In direct-gain systems, masonry floor and/or walls usually serve as the thermal storage area. With indirect-gain systems, the thermal storage wall forms the south wall of the building and is covered with glass on the outside. In the isolated-gain system, where the sun's radiation is collected and stored away from the living area, water or rocks are commonly used as the storage medium. If water is used as the thermal mass, it is usually with indirect-gain.

Increasing the thickness of any thermal mass will allow it to store more heat, although it will also take longer for the mass to absorb its capacity. Conversely, the thicker the thermal mass, the longer it will take to cool.

Because a too-thick thermal mass can actually slow the rate of heat transfer and make a system less efficient, optimum thicknesses for thermal mass walls have been calculated. Such calculations are based on the material used, location of the building and type of passive heating system being used.

This same system works in reverse for cooling. If you cool the mass off at night by opening windows it will serve as a heat sink during the day to cool the area.

Whether one chooses masonry or water for heat storage is a matter of preference; there is only a slight difference in the efficiency of the two.
