

Jungbluth on state legislative action group

Ed Jungbluth, executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed to represent members of the New Mexico Chamber of Commerce executives on a state legislative committee.

Jungbluth said he was appointed by Ken Scarborough, an executive with the National Chamber of Commerce, (C-C), based in Dallas, Texas.

"This legislative committee will work with Congressman Joe Skeen," Jungbluth said. Part of the benefit to being a member of the national C-C is that the group sets up state committees to work with national legislators, and acts as a "go-between" for local governments and private business, Jungbluth said.

"I suspect the reason I was appointed is because I am on the executive committee for the New Mexico Chamber Executive Directors Association," he said.

Jungbluth said an official title for the board has not been selected, to his knowledge, and other members of the board have not been announced. "I know that several prominent businessmen around New Mexico will be asked to sit on this committee. I expect to receive a letter to that effect this week," Jungbluth said.

He said the group's first organizational meeting will be at the Inn of the Mountain Gods April 24 at 2 p.m.

"We will work closely with the national legislators and maintain contact with various local entities. It will also give us a stronger voice with our legislators," Jungbluth said.

Water, sewer rate hearings here tonight

The Ruidoso trustees will conduct a public hearing on proposed water and sewer rate increases at 7:30 tonight in the Ruidoso Public Library.

The proposed increases, planned for April 1, include:

Water — fixed monthly charge from $3.60 to $8.44 and the charge per 1,000 gallons from $1.20 to $1.71.

Sewer — fixed monthly charge from $3.75 to $5.43 and set a 9¢ cents per 1,000 gallon water charge.

Adopt a Utility Expansion Charge of $450 for water and $300 for sewer, to be paid by developers and builders, to pay the debt service on bonds financing water and sewer system expansion.

Set water connection charges at $250 with $25 for sewer connection, which is the cost to the village to provide these services.

The proposed ordinance would, July 1, increase the fixed water charge to $8.63, the per thousand gallon water charge to $1.81, the fixed sewer charge to $5.53 and the water rate for sewer to $1.03 per thousand gallons.

C-C's retreat in Santa Fe March 27-28

The regular March meeting of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce board of directors will be held March 27-28 in Santa Fe at the La Posada.

"This will also be the time when we will hold our annual board retreat, with present members and new board members meeting together to plan future activities of the Chamber," Ed Jungbluth, Chamber executive director, said.

"We normally hold this combined meeting and retreat in April, but it seemed to be more convenient to hold both in March, and right now, it looks as though all present and new board members will be able to attend."

The retreat is held so the budget can be approved and so committees for various activities sponsored by the Chamber can be appointed.

"We have set a tentative date of June 23 for the $10,000 shopping spree party we announced earlier this year," Jungbluth said. "That date must still be approved by the full board, and we hope to have it at Cousins' in their new addition," he said.

Other activities which will be discussed include continued planning for the 1981 Ruidoso Art Festival and final changes in the 1981-82 Chamber budget.

School board meets Tuesday

The Ruidoso Board of Education will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., in the central office.

The board will set a date for a bond election for the district, which has been proposed so a new high school can be built.

Other agenda items include calling for bids on instructional supplies and athletic equipment, reorganizing the board by electing officers, and an executive session to discuss personnel.

Lodgers group meets Tuesday

The Ruidoso Lodgers Association will meet at 2 p.m., Tuesday in the Ruidoso Public Library.

Major agenda items include discussion on the annual expenditures of Lodgers' Tax funds and Western Union's Insta-Cash, available on a 24-hour basis, that can be used in making reservations.

RUIDOSO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO 88345

MONDAY, MARCH 9, 1981

PROPOSITION 4 ON MARCH 24 VILLAGE ELECTION BALLOT

Village requires new jail

Approval of Proposition 4, in the March 24 village bond election, will provide up to $650,000 to renovate the present village hall into a new police, jail and judicial facility meeting the state code.

"Because our jail doesn't meet the state code," Chief of Police Paul Lukens said, "it will be closed if we don't get a new jail. What it boils down to is, with no jail we'll be looking at somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000 to $300,000 per year in prisoner transportation costs to and from Carrizozo, within three years. This means that within three years, in savings from prisoner transport alone, we'd more than pay for a new jail."

Based on $1.20 per gallon gas and 250,000 prisoner transport miles per year to and from Carrizozo, car replacement at today's costs and present police salaries, Lukens said the following costs would be incurred annually:

Gasoline	$45,500
Car replacement	80,000
Salaries for eight officers at $13,500	108,000
County jail cost for prisoners	9,465
Total	$192,965

"Now," Lukens said, "this figure doesn't include overtime, additional insurance costs or vehicle maintenance or repair."

"Also, with no jail here, should, as often happens during peak periods of activity in Ruidoso, arrests be made at 30 minute intervals, then we'd have two, three or four units on the road to Carrizozo, just because we couldn't hold prisoners here. This additional traffic would require payment of overtime to transporting personnel, plus the cost of operating the additional vehicles."

"Two officers must accompany a prisoner. If it is a woman prisoner, a woman policeman must be in the transport vehicle. The same thing applies when the prisoner is a juvenile, because we've learned that women communicate with juveniles better than men."

"Lukens said that it takes approximately two hours to make the round trip to take a prisoner to the county jail. This includes booking and other action so that the prisoner can be held until time for his court appearance in Ruidoso. It also means that, with one transport unit on the road to Carrizozo, if a second arrest is made, a second police unit must be put into service, with the officers being on overtime."

Lukens said that the local jail handled 638 prisoners in 1976 and 1,037 in 1980. "As the village grows in population, and as activities draw more and more people," he said, "it's only a matter of time until we'll be handling 1,250 prisoners per year, and that could well be next year."

"With no jail here, it's reasonable to project prisoner transportation costs to the $250,000 to $300,000 figure annually."

LUKENS OUTLINED the cost of the new facility:

New construction	$468,920
Remodeling	78,884
Contingency, inflation and architects' and engineer's fees 107,394

Total cost $653,198

"Before we can go to bids on the new jail facility," Lukens said, "the people must pass the $650,000 bond issue in Proposition 4, because we must have the money available before going to bid."

"What this means is, the cost of the new jail cannot exceed the estimates. Actually, when you come down to it, the price of completing the building should be somewhat less than $650,000, because these estimates were a little high, just to account for inflation."

In round figures, Lukens pegged the village's general fund, for operating costs from July 1, 1980 to June 30, 1981, the current fiscal year, at $1.2 million. Of this, the police budget is $600,000, street department $384,000, all other departments and operations $216,000. The latter includes the fire department, library, Senior Citizens, parks and recreation, financial and administration, general government, legislative and executive functions and ambulance service.

"Obviously, if the jail is closed, and all prisoners that would normally be held here overnight, or for a day or two, had to be transported to Carrizozo," Lukens said, "the money would have to come from someplace, and that someplace is the general fund, meaning other essential services would have to be cut. There'd be no other choice."

Lukens said that the 1,037 prisoners handled during 1980 were held 1,302 man days. "If they couldn't have been held here, it's easy to see that the costs of transportation would mount up."

"What this boils down to is, if a person was arrested for an offense requiring holding the prisoner for a court appearance, we'd have to take the prisoner to Carrizozo, bring the person back, then, if a jail sentence, of even a day or two were handed down, we'd have to make another trip to Carrizozo. Based on all cost factors, it's easy to see this would be expensive."

P&Z conducting public hearing Tuesday to amend ordinances

A public hearing will be held Tuesday at 9 a.m., at the Ruidoso Public Library, to amend the village's planning and zoning ordinances.

According to Mike Waldron, chairman of the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z), the ordinance is "a restructuring of zoning districts," incorporating four specific commercial districts and adding a separate section for planned unit developments.

Waldron noted that none of the new proposed zoning districts would take effect until a new zoning map is approved by the village trustees.

"It will be the responsibility of P&Z to draft such a map and I don't anticipate the first section being presented for at least 60 days after any ordinance is approved," Waldron said.

He said the maps would probably be presented in sections with the trustees approving amended zoning after each section is reviewed in public hearings.

"This ordinance is simply trying to tie up loose ends and establish some guide lines for various things. I really don't think there's anything in the ordinance that's going to be offensive to many people," he said.

be set aside for leisure use by all owners and tenants of the PUD.

Formal drawings, maps and other data must be submitted to P&Z, as with any other sections of the code, before a PUD can be accepted for consideration.

Another clause provides that if no construction has begun on the PUD within 12 months after filing the plans with the village clerk, the approval expires. Further, the development must be substantially completed within two years or approval is revoked. If the PUD is to be developed in stages, the schedule for development must be adhered to with the above guidelines observed.

An industrial district, M-1, has also been created to "accommodate automotive dismantling yards, contractors, heavy equipment, general gravel and sand stockpiling or cement batching plants, manufacturing plants and junk yards," according to the amendment.

A complete copy of the amendment is on file with Emory Hatcher, village zoning officer, at Village Hall.

"It should be noted that the section of that ordinance which discusses condominiums is totally irrelevant to the amendment; it was an error and should not have been included," Waldron said.

"This amendment is the first step of many we will have to take for the continued planned growth of Ruidoso," Waldron said.

PUD's will be required to have at least 40 percent of their acreage remain usable open space. It also provides for individual lot sizes to be reduced below the minimum as defined, provided the overall density meets requirements. Additional land area gained by making such a change must then

Warrior cagers to state

The Ruidoso Warriors captured Saturday night their first ever 3AAA league title and a berth in the upcoming state tournament with a 65-54 win over Tularosa in the championship game of the District 3AAA basketball tournament in Silver City.

Tularosa, as runnerup, will also play in the state tournament.

It was the Warriors' 10th district win of the year, and boosted their overall record to 18-6. Senior players Glenn Ryan, Rodney Thomason and Gary Jones were named to the all-district squad following the game, and coach Barry Nelson was named league coach of the year.

"It feels good," Nelson said of the honor. "It makes you feel like you really did something. But I couldn't have done it without the team. They've got the talent, and good players make good coaches. It was a real team win."

The Warriors made it to the championship game with a heartstopping 50-48 win over Silver City in Friday's semifinals. Tularosa worked their way into the title match with wins over Cobre and Deming.

As district champion, Ruidoso will play in the AAA state tournament Thursday at 11 a.m., in Highland High School gymnasium, Albuquerque. The Warriors' opponent will be defending state champion St. Plus, which upset Albuquerque Academy Saturday to win the 5AAA title.

Tularosa will play St. Michael's, the 2AAA champion.

If the Warriors win Thursday, they'll play the winner of the Ft. Wingate-Pojoaque matchup on Friday in the University of New Mexico Arena.

A victory in that contest would mean a spot in the state championship game.

For more pictures and full details on the Warriors' weekend wins, see page five.

Villages' trustees to meet

Ruidoso Downs trustees will meet at 7 tonight at the municipal building. Agenda items include a personnel ordinance, proposed water meter tap rate increase, discussion of final inspection and release of the sewer system with Consolidated Constructors of Farmington and a resolution dealing with the open meetings law.

Ruidoso trustees will meet at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, in the Ruidoso Public Library. Agenda items include a request for a new computer system for village use, a change order on the new administrative building for a fan coil and two additional 220 volt outlets, a request from Lincoln County to have the village pave the parking lot at Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital with the county to pay the costs, a final hearing on new rates for Cablevision of Lincoln County and consideration of several final plans received from Planning and Zoning.

Boulder blasting blasted

Should you actually want to talk to some people who know what it's like to be caught between a rock and a hard place, you need look no farther than the crews drilling the new Hollywood Well or installing the sewer mains on Sudderth.

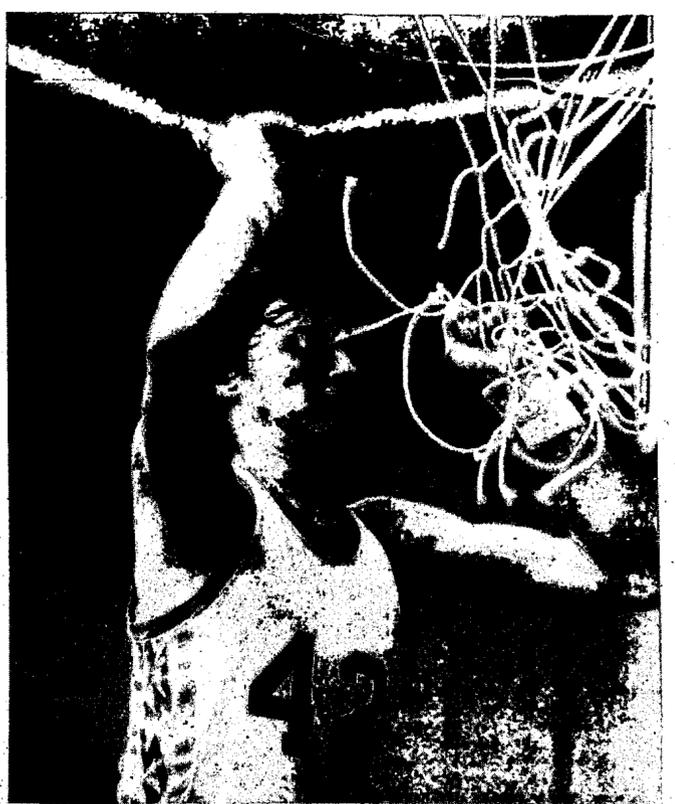

What happened is: both crews encountered boulders to huge they couldn't work around, through, over or under them.

The sewer project crew thought of blasting the boulder but that idea was blasted out of their minds, 'cause blasting might have resulted in repercussions from property owners who'd possibly not have thought it a real blast.

As to the well drillers, no way they could blast, 'cause it'd have probably caved their project in.

So, all work's ceased pending the arrival of special equipment to drill, demolish, penetrate or remove the rocks holding up progress.

With one though being, after a few days of idleness the crews will probably attack the rocks with renewed vigor, if not a vengeance, as a result of being caught between a rock and a hard place, with the hard place being their time schedule.

TO THE VICTOR GO THE SPOILS — Bill Richardson plays Jack the Ripper on a basketball net in Silver City following the Warriors' 65-54 triumph over Tularosa. The win earned the Warriors a berth in the upcoming state tournament and gave them their first District 3AAA cage crown.

What's happening here?

The Ruidoso News will periodically picture commercial and residential construction in progress to present current development in New Mexico's fastest growing resort community, Ruidoso.

NOTTINGHAM'S PUB will open May 1 at the former location of the Winner's Circle. The building is now under extensive interior and exterior remodeling. Owned by Gary and Melinda Hall, the new Nottingham's will feature many of their sandwiches and Mexican foods, as well as a selection of "more substantial entrees, including steaks and seafood." Alcoholic beverages will be available. An outdoor patio with seating for 40 persons will also be featured. General Contractor on the project is Village Hardware.

New jail

tended periods of time, all would have to be transported to and from Carrizozo."

Lukens also said that "without a local jail transport costs would be 100 percent additional to police department operations. With a jail, prisoners would be handled at no additional cash outlay, outside of providing meals, which we now pay for."

Included among the reasons the present jail has been condemned and subject to closing, are that it doesn't comply with jail standards, Lukens said. "It doesn't meet the space requirements, there's no separate cells for holding males, females, misdemeanor prisoners and felons, it doesn't meet the fire code or Environmental Improvement Division standards."

"There is no visitor's room, and we have a few problems with alcohol and drugs being passed to prisoners. And there's always the chance that a visitor might pass a weapon to a prisoner — and all it'd take is once to give us lots of problems."

THE NEW JAIL would provide, among other things, Lukens said, these facilities:

- Visitor's room, where the prisoner could not have physical contact with the visitor.

- Kitchen, with microwave oven, using disposable foods only, or package meals, at less cost than buying from local restaurants, as is now being done.

- A padded cell for the safety of alcoholics, drug addicts or persons emotionally disturbed. The only padded cell now available to the Ruidoso police is in Carrizozo.

- Two single occupancy cells for females.

- Nine single occupancy cells for males.

- A "sally port" or closed area to unload prisoners from police vehicles.

- A separate booking area for prisoners, that would contain them.

- A new radio room, including a teletype for obtaining records and wanted files from the National Crime Information Center, including listings of stolen vehicles and merchandise.

- A command center for emergency operations including fires, floods and other disasters.

- Direct access from the cell area to the courts, through controlled halls, that would allow the officers to handle the prisoner without any possibility of outside interference.

- Rooms that would be used for meetings, classes, briefings, training sessions, search and rescue briefings and other functions that now must be held in another building or in one of the judge's chambers, if available.

Lukens said that the 1981-1982 fiscal year budget for the police department will include two radio operators on duty, 24 hours a day.

"Right now, when we're busy, two operators just can't work easily. Besides, when there are a lot of people in town, or during emergencies, we also have to have three or four people on telephones. With a new radio room all these people would be together, which'd make working easier for everyone concerned."

Lukens said the present municipal hall would be remodeled to contain offices and judge's chambers and that the new jail complex would be built onto the present parking lot, to the west.

"The proposed building will serve our needs for the next 10 to 15 years. When it's necessary to enlarge this facility, the new jail portion will be built so that it can be added onto, thus keeping the cost as low as possible."

Woman's Club's Wednesday program to be on gardens

"And how Does Your Garden Grow?" will be the title of the program to be presented to the Ruidoso Woman's Club at their Wednesday meeting.

The program will be given by Mrs. Hal Yoder, of the Ruidoso Garden Club. She is also a member of the Mesilla Valley Garden Club, life member of the New Mexico Garden Club Incorporated and charter member of the Dona Ana Council of Garden Clubs.

Landscape Design School, has been general chairman of eight standard flower shows and has won numerous awards for her plants, flowers and arrangements.

A club representative urged all local citizens interested in gardening or flower arrangement to attend the program, scheduled for 2 p.m., at the clubhouse.

Also scheduled for the Wednesday meeting is a report from Charlotte Jarratt, chairwoman of the Vial of Life program, on the assistance being given the program by Lincoln Extension Clubs. They will cooperate with publicity on the Vial of Life program, and distribution of the materials to county residents.

An executive board meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m., and the business session will begin at 1:30. Hostesses for the March meeting are Mrs. Conrad Keyes, Mrs. W. E. Knott, Mrs. Roy Jones, Mrs. W. M. Jarratt, Mrs. Gladys Knox and Mrs. Peggy Nobles.

Lisa Bennett earned 'Honors' at solo and ensemble contest

Lisa Bennett, a seventh grader at White Mountain Middle School, earned "Honors" designation at the winter solo and ensemble contest held recently in Las Cruces at Mayfield High School.

LISA BENNETT

Bennett is the daughter of Jane and Ted Bennett of Ruidoso, and performed "Crown of Thorns," a song written for sopranos.

"Honors is given to the best performer the judges heard all day in each category," Danny Flores, high school music instructor, said.

Bennett also received a I, or superior, for her performance on the clarinet.

Three high school students, Mike Hansen on percussion, Dee Sherwood, alto and Lou Ann Wilson, soprano, were considered for honors but were not chosen. All received superior ratings.

"The mid school students did exceptionally well overall, at this year's contest," Flores said. "Besides Lisa's two superior ratings, we had five other students receiving I's and two others received II's."

Those attending from the mid school and their ratings included Timmy Wadley, clarinet solo, I, and voice, I; Jeremy Lane, clarinet solo, I; Dalana Holly, voice, I; Rochelle Hornbuckle, flute solo, I; Mitch Rhodes, baritone solo, II; and Sherry Mizner, flute solo, I.

High school students participating and their ratings included: Percussion trio of Hansen, Sherrywood and Theresa Sanchez, I; Sherry Wheeler, clarinet solo, III; Jeanette Weems, clarinet solo, III;

Lois Covill, flute solo, II; Willie Dean, trumpet solo, II; Tad Haynes, trumpet solo, I; Leslie Carter, alto voice solo, I; Kerrie Prophet, soprano voice solo, I; Penny Clarke, soprano voice solo, I; Gene Reeves, baritone voice solo, II; Sherrill Ridgeway, soprano voice solo, II; Jenny Delhotal, mezzo soprano voice solo, II; Steve Sluder, bass voice solo, III; and Cyd Wright, alto voice solo, III.

"We wish to express our appreciation to our two accompanists, Sue Vinsant and Carlene Wadley. Without them, we would not have been able to have the great participation we did this year," Flores said.

Mimi Jungbluth's works featured in March Southwest Art Magazine

The works of Ruidoso artist Mimi Jungbluth are featured on the cover and in a seven page color spread in the March issue of Southwest Art Magazine.

Eleven of her paintings are reproduced in the magazine, along with an in-depth article about the artist by Byron Jones, New Mexico art editor.

The March issue focuses on "Artists of the Rockies," Jungbluth said, and also includes an article on the Pastel Society of America, of which she is a member, so "it all seemed to come together at once," she said.

The cover pastel is entitled "PO-VI-PI" (Red Flower) which is the Indian name of the model, Linda Marie Sandoval, whose heritage is Spanish, Hopi, Navajo and San Juan.

Jungbluth's works have appeared most recently at the Saddleback Roundup of Western Artists, a show held at the Saddleback Inn in Santa Fe, ending today.

Her works will be included at an April private preview show for members of the entertainment world at Calabasas, California. That show is being arranged by owners of the Peppertree Ranch, Santa Inez, California, who also will feature Jungbluth's works in a public show later this spring.

Copies of the magazine and prints of the cover work are available locally at the Artisan's shop.

Warriors whip Wildcats (again) for league crown

BY MARK BAGBY
Sports Editor

SILVER CITY — Sparked by Rodney Thomason's 24 points, the Ruidoso Warriors Saturday night claimed their first ever District 3AAA cage title and a state tourney berth with a 65-54 win over arch-rival Tularosa in the final round of the 3AAA district tournament here.

You couldn't have asked for a finer finish. The Warriors and Wildcats each held a win over the other this season, and each was ranked in the state's top ten before the clash.

A sterling defense and just enough offense provided the ingredients for the win, Ruidoso's 18th of the year.

But the Warriors were lucky to even be in the title game. The 17th win of the year, a 56-48 victory over Silver City Friday, was uncertain until the final buzzer and coach Barry Nelson thought he could see the whole season going down the tubes.

"Our defense saved us," Nelson said. "They manned (Glenn) Ryan, (Ruidoso's top scorer) and he never got the ball."

Well, that's not completely true. He got it once at a crucial moment.

With 38 seconds left in the game, the score was tied, 48-48. The Warriors had the ball but turned it over to the Colts, who brought it down court.

Ryan knocked the ball out of bounds before Silver City could get the fast break going. On the inbounds pass, senior Gary Jones stole the ball and brought it back down. He passed it to Ryan, who missed a layup. Bill Richardson snared the rebound but missed the tip-in.

Ryan, however, did not miss his second try. He put the ball into the hoop for the winning points. Fifteen seconds were left. The Colts missed a last ditch basket for the 50-48 final.

"Jones was a key factor in the win," Nelson said. "Man, if he hadn't stolen that ball . . ."

The Silver contest was a close affair all the way. The Warriors trailed much of the game, and were at a 39-37 disadvantage at the end of the third period.

"But we kept our character, and that helped a lot," Nelson said. "We felt the pressure. I felt relieved when it was over because so much of the pressure was gone (since a state tourney berth was assured)."

"I thought we were going to be in trouble in the pre-game warmups. We couldn't pass, we couldn't shoot. In fact, I told Vince (Collins, assistant coach), 'I think we're in trouble.'"

Thomason was high scorer with 15, followed by Jones with 11, Ryan with nine, Richardson with seven, Gene Reeves with five and Scott Neal with three.

But the Silver City game made all the difference in the world.

"I worried all day Friday about what we would try to do to Silver City," Nelson said. "I thought about defenses, offenses, everything. It took me all day to make up my mind."

"Then I got up Saturday morning and went over to the coffee shop (at the motel), saw the kids, thought about Tularosa for about five minutes and knew what we were going to do."

Whatever it was, it worked. Nelson said he felt much of the credit for the Tularosa win, like the Silver victory, must go to the defense.

"We played bad defense the last time we played them (a 78-71 Tularosa win), but we went to a man to man and just went after them," he said. "Our objective was just to keep them from getting the ball inside to (Bill) Turner or outside to (Chris) Cerny," he said, referring to Tularosa's two top scorers.

Nelson's strategy worked well. Turner scored nine points, a career low and well off his 30 points per game average. Cerny, who scored 24 points in the last encounter, went home with a meager six points.

"I felt pretty confident about the game after the first few minutes, but I thought we'd bought the farm when Glenn went down in the second period," he said. Ryan suffered a mild ankle sprain in the second period, but played the entire second half and is fine now, Nelson said.

The Warriors had little trouble with the Wildcats after the first period. Tularosa kept it close through the first stanza, but behind Ryan and Thomason, the Warriors pulled away for a 27-20 halftime lead.

The third quarter was a virtual massacre, as the Warriors extended their lead to 19 points just before the end of the quarter. A final Tularosa basket cut the lead to 50-33 at the end of the period.

Tularosa did not quit, however. The Wildcats were able to trim the Warriors' sails for a bit in the final stanza, and even pulled to within eight points.

But some clutch free throw shooting and a few baskets broke the Wildcats' collective back.

Thomason was high scorer with 24 points, followed by Ryan with 17, Neal with nine, Jones with seven, Richardson with six, and Reeves with two.

Nelson was still savoring both victories Sunday, but he was also preparing for St. Pius, the Warriors' opponent Thursday in the state tournament in Albuquerque.

"This week we got to work on everything, get refreshed on it. We didn't play well offensively, so we'll work on that this week. If we run into any big, slow teams, they better get ready, 'cause we're going to be coming right at 'em."

GLENN RYAN brings the ball downcourt in third quarter action of the Ruidoso Warriors' 65-54 victory over the Tularosa Wildcats. The Warriors are now headed for Albuquerque and the class AAA state tournament.

Sportin' Life

by

Mark Bagby

How can you gain when you lose? The only example that readily pops to mind is the health benefits one gets when one loses weight. You lose pounds, but you gain health.

Other than that, you only lose when you lose. Period.

That includes holding youngsters back to repeat a grade so they'll be better athletes. If you hold a kid back (i.e., make him repeat a year) in say, the eighth grade, when he's a senior in high school, he'll be a year older than his teammates.

In theory, the added year means extra strength, weight and maturity — qualities desirable for athletic achievement.

In practice, it's very harmful — to other students and to the athlete himself.

According to a recent Time Magazine article, holding back is becoming a widespread practice. It's quite common in the college ranks, always has been — there it's called "red-shirting," and is usually used when you've got so many excellent athletes, but only so many can play. So you red-shirt the younger ones, saving their eligibility for later.

Now this practice is becoming prevalent in high schools, junior highs, and even elementary level schools.

The big prize behind this idea is the sacred athletic scholarship. That's the piece of paper you can get — if you're good enough — when you go to college which will entitle you to four years of free classes, free books, free laundry, a summer job and maybe even a car, as well as a place to sleep and three squares a day.

(Note we don't give full scholarships to academicians, only to athletes. Says something about our priorities, does it not?)

This practice is costing you and me and all the rest of the taxpayers money each year. If you hold a kid back — for other than academic reasons — he has to repeat a year, meaning he gets 13 years of public schools for the price of 12. That means you're paying a teacher a lot of money to teach the same thing twice, you're paying for his books, the school lunch program, everything.

It's really ironic economics is at the root of this. A parent will request his son (or daughter) be held back for a year, so they'll be better athletes later. And, if they're better athletes, then maybe they'll get a full scholarship, and then Ma and Pa won't have to bear the cost of college, but you and I bear the cost of his extra year.

Meanwhile, the kid is learning he's a dummy. What other reason is there to hold him back?

If he doesn't learn he's a dummy, what he does learn is he can get a free ride if he's a good enough athlete. Sure, athletics are a talent, and heck, I like athletics as much as anyone. I wouldn't be a sportswriter if I didn't.

But I don't like this idea. The parents of these kids think by losing a year of school, their kids will gain from the experience. Uh-huh. You lose when you lose. You don't gain.

Reportedly, the practice is most widespread in Texas, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Louisiana and South Carolina. Sadly, there's nothing illegal in it. If a parent — perhaps aided by an unscrupulous coach — decides to hold his child back, the school must. (I mean, it's his kid, what do you do?)

Coaches don't exactly help the situation, but then they're in a "Catch-22" spot. When parents demand coaches win at all costs, the pressure comes down on the coaches, who then put pressure on the kids, et cetera, et cetera.

But not all coaches are that way. Take, for example, Georgia football coach Lloyd Bohannon.

"Anybody who coaches football only to get kids scholarships is in the wrong business," Bohannon said. "You coach to help kids, and holding back doesn't help kids."

Another Georgia coach, Buddy Windle, says, "A lot of kids are burned out with football by the time they get to high school. Of twelve players in our senior class who were held back, only four are still on the team. And for every holdback, there's another kid who didn't even come out for football because he thought the holdbacks would do all the playing."

One real problem of this practice is when a team composed primarily of 16 year old sophomores has to play a team of 19-year-old seniors. Talk about the chances of injury, not to mention the competitive imbalance.

Then there's the damage done to the psyche, where the youngster is damaged by his self-image and peer relationships. All the kids he grew up with graduate before he does. Why? 'Cause he's a dummy. A dumb jock, that's even worse.

The cruelest result of red-shirting on the public school level is the pinning of a future on athletic hopes only, rather than on a well rounded life of education, social activities and athletics.

Nearly a million boys play high school football each year, but only 21,000 win scholarships. And only 333 college players were selected in last year's NFL draft.

That means one out of every 50 players will get a scholarship, and only one out of every 3,000 will play pro ball.

Are those odds worth staking a future on?

Says Bill Fordham, executive director of the Georgia High School Athletic Association, "The marginal athletes are the ones who hold back, hoping something magical will happen. The kids who are good enough to make it on talent, the ones you read about in the sports pages, are never held back. But having a kid repeat a year just feeds the pipe dream."

Houston Oiler wide receiver Mike Renfro, who was a holdout in the seventh grade at his coach's request, feels the same way. (And here's a guy who made it in the big leagues.)

"I wouldn't keep kids back," Renfro says. "After all, football isn't everything."

This practice is most common for football, where size, speed and strength are stressed. I'm from Oklahoma, where football is king.

I can remember a few kids who were held back in junior high. Most didn't do very well on the gridiron.

One did, however. His name was Eloyd West. He was a good halfback. Made all-district, honorable mention all-state.

He didn't get a scholarship, though. Last I heard, he was serving time in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary, about four miles from where he played football for McAlester High. The taxpayers are still supporting him, and will be for quite a while.

Yup — unless you're overweight, you can't gain when you lose.

Area teams make it to state

The Ruidoso Warriors aren't the only area teams headed for the state championship tournament.

Capitan's Tigers, ranked 9th in the Class A Top Ten, will play Cimarron at 7 p.m., Wednesday in Albuquerque's Sandia High School gym in first round action of the Class A state tournament.

And, Carrizozo's lady Grizzlies earned a berth in the girls' Class A state championship tourney last weekend, beating Cimarron and Floyd, but losing in the finals to state champ Texico, 68-55.

Way to go, teams!

ROCKY KIRK gets in a little practice in preparation for the National Motocross Championships.

Rocky Kirk of Ruidoso has qualified for the Grand National Motocross Championships, set for March 13-14 in the Houston (Texas) Astrodome.

But he's got a slight problem. Kirk estimates his expenses — including food, travel, and three nights' lodging — will come to around $1,000, which he doesn't have.

So he's currently looking for sponsors. "I'll take whatever I can get," he said. "I really want to go, but if I don't get some sponsorships, I can't go. I just can't afford it."

Kirk is a relative newcomer to the sport of motocross — he's been racing only about three months or so, but finished fifth in qualifying races around the area.

But only the top four finishers would get to compete in the Houston nationals. Then the fourth place finisher had to bow out due to an injury, and Kirk took his place.

He's been on Cloud Nine ever since. "I'm really excited about going," he said. "I feel a little outgunned, because there are some guys who have been racing for years and never qualified, and here I just started and I made it."

Kirk will be one of about 400 racers in the open class in Houston, provided he comes up with the money to go.

As a matter of fact, Kirk is used to racing on a shoestring. He has about $1,700 invested in his equipment, which isn't much as dirt bikers go.

Kirk has only one bike, a pair of boots, a helmet and a jersey. He figures he needs at least $300 just to provide all the necessary equipment. That's in addition to the $1,000 he needs for expenses.

"I don't have a lot of equipment I need just for safety," he said. "I figured if there was any money left over from the $1,000 — if I get it — I'd put that on some equipment."

Though he races without being fully protected, Kirk has not yet suffered any serious injuries astride his Yamaha 400 YZ, a 1979 model motorcycle.

Kirk practices as much as he can, on the philosophy "you gotta practice if you want to be good."

"I really like it," he said. "It's a lot like skiing, or racing horses, where you move real fast. That's what I like about it, the exhilaration of the speed and the competition."

He admits he's hooked by the sport, although he hasn't been doing it very long. "It's great," he said. "I don't really think of it as being dangerous. You can get hurt doing anything, so you've got to do the things you like and not worry about getting hurt."

Kirk may or may not be racing in Houston, and he's not even sure what sort of prizes are involved.

He just knows he wants to give it a shot. "Heck, who knows, I might win it and get sponsored by a bike manufacturer," he said. "I could turn pro or something. That would be great."

Any persons wanting to help sponsor Kirk should contact him at 257-2820.

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Veteran legislators have learned not to pay attention to columnists in times like these.

Lawmakers know that, as the legislative session draws near its close, we'll wring our hands and remind them of how little they have accomplished so far and how few days they have left in which to get anything constructive done.

Happens every year, and they're used to it.

But this year things have been a little bit different. Frodded by John Mershon, who has been up here 22 years and knows where to prod, they wrapped up the big money bill which allows state government to operate for another 365 days earlier than they have in years.

That's a big plus.

The minus is something quite different.

It is that there are more members of the Legislature than ever before in history who have their heads down in their own ruts and are doing nothing at all but pushing for their very own projects and bills.

That's not unique in history; every year legislators do that.

But this year it has reached epidemic proportions.

It's like having 22 players on the football field, each playing his own independent game.

The reason is simple, of course: Up here this year there is no game plan from anybody. The Governor doesn't have one. His influence on lawmaking recently has been so slight he might as well have spent the whole session in Mazatlan. And there is no leadership in either House or Senate to whip folks into moving in the same direction.

We've got the equivalent of a lot of electrons and neutrons milling about without a nucleus.

Chaos, in short.

And what are lawmakers considering when they get into action? Big items like banning fireworks, and speaking for or against fighting cocks, and defying the federal government by lifting the speed limit, not to mention punishing people who cut or otherwise destroy fences.

Citizens' tax relief? Well, that's going to a conference committee because the Senate wants to give us back more than the House does.

And some other large measures are also finally getting some consideration.

We had two Children's Codes fighting each other, as we hope the children will not. They've now been blended into one, which really satisfies nobody, including the Governor's wife, who worked hard to get us get a good one.

We've got a big fat liquor bill, which tries to cure all ills, real and imaginary, in a single measure. It has gotten fatter, as legislators have thought of a few more things they wanted to hang on it. (Not all who add things to your bill are being helpful. Sometimes they hope enough accretions will help it sink of its own weight.)

And we have the biggest single construction-money bill in the history of the state, for $97 million, to build prisons which will be outdated five years after they are finished and overcrowded after ten.

It's no wonder the aforementioned John Mershon, who has been watching the bills parade by for so long, grouches that he has never seen an omnibus bill like one of these that wasn't a failure.

Out of 1151 bills introduced, expect something like 350 new laws. Most of them won't be good laws — just new ones.

All the rest of those super things eager-beaver legislators came up there to get accomplished will, when it is over, have fallen through the cracks.

Thank God.

PRIORITIES FOR FBI

Attorney General William French Smith has let it be known that he intends to increase federal involvement in the effort to check violent crime. Officials high in the Federal Bureau of Investigation believe this could only be done either by increasing the number of agents to make up for declines in recent years, which would require more money, or by reducing the FBI's drive against organized crime and so-called white collar crime.

It is unlikely that many more agents will be added to the FBI roster, given the administration's demands for cuts in spending. As for the second alternative, to place more federal emphasis on street crime and correspondingly less on organized and white collar crime, that would be a bad move.

The various kinds of crimes, and the agencies best fitted to deal with them, must be kept in perspective. The amount of street crime in this country is intolerable; it should be fought hard. There is a question whether putting the FBI in the front lines of that fight, to the detriment of other battles it might be waging, would be the best use of law enforcement resources.

We think not. Federal funding to help local and state police crack down on street crime is justifiable, but a mugging, say, is basically a local problem which ought to be dealt with at that level.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, however, is better qualified than most urban or state police organizations to investigate organized crime and white collar crime, and amass the evidence for successful prosecution. This, rather than street crime, should be the agency's top priority.

Assistant FBI Director Charles P. Monroe made an illuminating comment in the course of a recent interview. He observed that both the present head of the agency, William H. Webster, and former director Clarence M. Kelley placed emphasis on the quality rather than the quantity of cases handled. Probes of such things as congressional corruption or labor racketeering, he noted, are more important than "trying to razzle-dazzle" you with a lot of statistics on relatively insignificant crimes." That is something Attorney General Smith should ponder well before pushing for a shift in priorities. — Alamogordo Daily News

TURN AROUND DUE

Now's the time for America to buckle down. For 30 years we've tried living beyond our means and found there's no magic in it. We've also found that the only friends worth having are the ones who will stand with us when we aren't trying to do something for them.

The chickens have been coming home to roost for the United States. The people realize this even if the politicians don't. The people have spoken in a loud and clear voice to get the country back on the track. We believe the citizens who have voted to return good sense to government will back their votes with determination.

The politicians — and the media — don't agree. They say that when the cuts start coming that will be necessary to balance the budget and restore confidence in the economy, the people won't take it. We say they deserve the chance. We have the feeling that the critics are in for a big surprise, and that the American backbone is still there.

As David Stockman reads off his list of budget cuts the howls are deafening. There are a lot of oxen getting gored. The big-city mayors, the governors, the regional development agencies, and the wide panoply of special interest groups ranging from food stamp coalitions to big industry protectionists are up in arms over the proposed reductions.

In our opinion all this yelling is going to impress the public about like a shower would impress a duck. It will just run off the citizens' backs.

A drastic change has come about in the thinking of the American people. The politicians, the bureaucrats, and the patronizing "leaders" we have who are doing all the yelling have failed to recognize this.

The more we talk with people in this part of the country, the more we are convinced that the public is ready to get the national act put back together, and to make whatever adjustment or even sacrifice — if it comes to that — may be necessary to have a part in the plan.

For a change we have come to a time when the people have sent a clear message to their leaders to take action to strengthen the country. We have had a taste of the fruits of socialism and big government. The taste is bitter.

We believe that America is about to make a turn-around. Don't you? — Hop Graham, Lovington Daily Leader editorial

The Ruidoso trustees tonight could adopt a rate increase schedule for water and sewer that will help alleviate financial problems plaguing the Water and Sewer Departments.

We feel that rate increases are not only justified, but absolutely necessary if adequate water and sewer service is to continue to be provided.

We also feel that this initial rate increase is only part of the solution to the village's problems in providing water and sewer service.

In our opinion the trustees should immediately begin work to transform these two departments into sound, profit making, business enterprises. Both departments should be operated as are the public utilities, as a business, as a profit making business.

As a business operation, the two departments could establish sinking funds, depreciation schedules and maintenance and replacement funds, so that they'd be able to keep both systems operating efficiently and not let either fall into a state of disrepair.

Our water problems will eventually be solved and if the Water and Sewer Departments would be operated on a profit making basis, then Ruidoso's future growth, and economic development could be promoted with confidence, knowing that these two services would be continued without interruption — or money problems.

This proposal, we feel, should be considered without delay. — CD

ARBOR DAY CONFUSION

Keep New Mexico Beautiful ... with the purpose of the organization not really needing any clarification ... has designated March 13 as Arbor Day ... which certainly must be news to the members of the Ruidoso Woman's Club ... 'cause those civic minded ladies are going to plant 53 oak trees in School House Park on Arbor Day ... but the Arbor Day ladies are gonna plant trees on is April 8.

Now the difference in Arbor Day dates is immaterial ... 'cause it ain't no national affair ... and not too many of our 50 states observe it ... so one Arbor Day date's good as another.

And congratulations ... maybe even a little assistance ... should be showered upon the Woman's Club's oak tree planters ... which could eventually result in bushes of acorns ... which could tend to increase our local squirrel population ... especially of the tree climbing variety.

MORE ON KNMB

KNMB president Jane Salers ... with KNMB standing for Keep New Mexico Beautiful ... of course ... has a promotion underway to kinda interest us New Mexicans in planting trees to ... naturally ... KNMB ... and that's a worthy promotion.

What's more ... as an incentive to get you putting your green thumb to work planting trees that'll add more green to the landscape ... KNMB wants all you green free thumbs to contact the County Agent ... and get all the dope on where to buy trees, what kind'll do best, how to plant 'em, and take care of 'em ... just to prove you're a good green thumber.

Why, if'n there was a good green tree growing everywhere in New Mexico as a good green tree could grow ... we'd have a lot more oxygen than we have now ... and, possibly, lots more leaves falling in the fall ... and adding their bright colors to help KNMB's desires to foster promotions to really KNMB.

Why, if'n enough people'd grab onto KNMB's notion on planting trees, there could be a lot of Arbor Days ... yes?

LUCKY'S SMOULDERING

Lucky Mulqueen ... one Ruidoso Vietnam vet who is gung ho relative to doing his ding-busted best to help all veterans obtain all the federal benefits veterans are entitled to ... is currently smouldering over some proposals David Stockman ... he's sorta a head honcho adviser to President Reagan ... is advising Reagan to promote to reduce benefits to veterans.

Smouldering? Now that's not quite true ... Lucky's so burned up there's more than the usual fire in his eye ... and in Lucky's case, where there's fire, there's sparks ... and he's busy spreading the word that the vets had best pay some attention to what Stockman's preaching to Reagan.

What got Lucky's dander up was when he learned that Stockman's plans call for a 25 percent reduction in benefits to veterans ... closing two veterans hospitals ... and cutting down on services to cardiac patients ... on dialysis machines ... rehabilitation programs ... and social services ... and really clamping down on the Vietnam Veterans Outreach Program, that assists those vets with job and health problems ... and other things.

But what really got Lucky smouldering ... and his temper blazing ... was when he was told that Stockman had never been in the military service ... which didn't bother Lucky all that much, exceptin' he figures Stockman needs a little briefing on how it was ... and is ... and, by jinkies, Lucky'd be a happy volunteer to do the briefing.

Stockman ... all you gotta do is offer to listen, with it being a definite conclusion that you'd get an ear full ... why, you might even get an eye full, if'n you didn't listen good.

'Cause, as I said, Lucky's so hot up, over what Stockman's whispering into Reagan's ear that he'd be more than happy to do whatever he could to change Stockman's outlook on veterans.

BRIEF BIT: Even if the speed limit is raised to 85 ... or 75 ... it won't reduce the number of people driving 95 ... CD

Game Commission sets 81-82 big game seasons

The State Game Commission set deer, elk, antelope and other big game seasons February 20, including the state's first hunt for Siberian ibex.

The rifle hunt for deer will be split into two hunt periods in the north and two in the southern half of the state. Deer hunters choosing bow or muzzleloader may hunt during bow season with bows and during muzzleloader season with black-powder firearms, rather than being restricted to only one season or the other.

Public land elk licenses will be issued by drawings, with certain numbers allowed for each hunt area and hunt period. Just under 7,000 public land elk licenses will be available, and hunters not drawn for their first-choice hunt may, if they wish, agree to be assigned to another area. Up to four people may apply on the same form.

Hunters whose mobility is confined to wheelchairs, two crutches, two canes or walkers, will also have a chance to hunt in special areas set aside for them during elk and antelope seasons.

The commission also adopted a Game and Fish Department recommendation that personal checks no longer be accepted with special hunt applications such as those for elk, antelope, bighorn sheep, oryx, ibex, Barbary sheep and javelina, nor will they be accepted for purchase of hunting and fishing licenses bought in person or by mail at Game and Fish Department offices.

Cashier's checks, certified checks and money orders will be accepted for mailed applications, and those or cash for across-the-counter transactions at department offices. The department reported it currently has $18,000 in bad checks it is attempting to collect.

Following is a summary of general hunt areas and season dates. For details, hunters must consult their 1981-82 New Mexico big game and turbeater proclamation, which will be available in early May. A supplementary proclamation covering furbearers, spring turkey, spring bear and spring cougar hunts will be available earlier.

DEER: Modern, centerfire arms only; hunters may choose one of four hunt periods: North: November 6-8, November 13-19; South: November 20-22, November 27-December 3. Deer and fall turkey seasons are concurrent with most deer hunts, including bow, muzzleloader and rifle hunts. Barbary sheep are available as bonus species to those purchasing proper licenses, as are cougar, most areas.

DEER ENTRY PERMIT AREAS: Oscuras (500 permits), November 7-8; Organ (200 permits), November 14-15; Texas Canyon (100 permits, bow or muzzleloader only), November 28-29; either sex, McGregor Range (700 permits), November 21-22 and November 28-29, buck only.

BARBARY SHEEP: Generally statewide outside Largo and Canadian River canyons, open during all deer hunts to those with both a B-3 Barbary sheep license and a deer license valid for the season during which they are hunting; includes rifle bow, muzzleloader and entry permit deer hunts. Weapons restrictions applicable to respective deer hunts apply to coinciding Barbary sheep hunts. B-3 licenses are also valid January 9-17, generally statewide outside Largo and Canadian River canyon areas. B-3 bag limit: any one Barbary sheep. No deadline for application, and anyone may apply, including those who held Barbary sheep licenses during the 1980-81 license year.

Anyone may apply for a bow elk or antelope license, including those who held an elk or antelope license last year.

WEAPON SELECTION AND HUNT PERIOD CHOICES

Changes in deer hunt weapons choice may be made through the day before opening of the first season for which the hunter's license is valid for hunting deer: from bow or muzzleloader, deadline is September 4; from rifle, deadline is November 5, November 12, November 19 or November 26, depending on the hunt period. The license is stratified for. Deadline for changing from one rifle hunt period to another is the day before opening of the hunt period for which the license is stratified: from D-1-N, November 5; from D-2-N, November 12; from D-1-S, November 19; from D-2-S, November 26.

Officers will be available statewide to change deer license stratifications on November 4.

Elk: Licenses will be stratified at time of issuance for a particular hunt period and hunt unit. These cannot be changed.

OFF THE BEATEN PATH hunters in the Sacramento Mountains off take brief respite from their walking forays after big game by pausing to lean against towering aspens, to drink in the beauties of nature while they catch their breath before again taking up the hunt.

I-n-s-i-d-e the Outdoors

by Gary Dollahon

There are those who say hunting is a cruel sport. And, having participated in my first elk hunt this past fall, I now have a tendency to agree with them. The events and circumstances encountered on that hunt were extremely cruel to us hunters. It all started several months ago when a hunting and fishing buddy of mine, Butch, suggested we go on a muzzleloader elk hunt. I pretended to ignore his suggestion, but before I knew it, we both had submitted our elk applications.

It was the Thursday before the Saturday opening day when I decided it was time to shoot my smokepole. So, I loaded up my two suitcases of accessories it takes to shoot one of those rifles and headed for my favorite dirt bank, accompanied by my wife.

The new bullet and new powder load I was experimenting with had me flinching badly after just a few shots. However, just as the sun was about to set, one of my shots put a neat, round hole in the middle of my target. My shoulder congratulated me and convinced me the gun was sighted in.

Back in town, I approached my front door and heard my phone ringing. I tried to set my two suitcases down, lean my rifle against the house and get my key in the lock all at the same time while my wife was chiding me to hurry up. Yet, trying to get a key in the door when the phone is ringing is like trying to bait a hook when the fish are biting furiously.

Finally, we were in and it was my boss on the other end of the line. He is a noted black powder enthusiast and was concerned with how my new loads had worked out.

He volunteered his services to check my rifle out and before I knew it, my gun was in his hands. The screydriver he was holding was rapidly elevating my rear sight.

He handed it back and said, "Now, that gun is dead on at a hundred yards for that load." My shoulder and I accepted it with tears in our eyes, and I said, "You're the boss."

Bright and early the next morning I found Butch and his wife, Netta, at my front door eager and ready to go. I loaded my gear and bid my wife farewell, telling her I wish she could go too.

My wife pretended she wanted to go and even went so far as putting fake tears in her big brown eyes. As I headed for the truck I heard her mumbling something about "some people having to work for a living."

Several hours and miles later we found ourselves southwest of Quemado in Management Unit 15, studying a map while our vehicle straddled a rough Forest Service road.

We were looking for a particular tank a friend of mine (and I use that term loosely now) had suggested we hunt near.

It was then we heard it, the unmistakable melodious tune of a bull elk. We all agreed this looked like a good camping spot.

The tents were pitched in record time, and Butch and I took off in separate directions to do a little scouting. We both returned at dark, comparing notes of the elk and the signs we had seen. We agreed our area looked good.

Up well before the chickens the next morning, Butch and I anxiously awaited first light. Meanwhile, we made our plans. I was going to sit for about an hour in a clearing I had found yesterday and then hunt to the west. Butch was going to hunt east.

Several hours later, dawn began to break. I looked at our identical rifles leaning against two different trees. I picked up Butch's, sighted down it, and carried it over beside mine. I compared the rear sight position of both guns, noting Butch's was in the exact position mine had been in before it was raised. I shuddered and put both rifles side by side.

Finally, it was time to depart. I told Butch I would give him a 15 minute head start with the hope that one of us might run an elk to the other.

As I left camp I thought to myself how easy this elk hunting is. I arrived at my opening and found a good spot to sit. After getting comfortable, I sighted down my rifle.

What I saw made my stomach turn over. The front sight had a large white head, something only Butch had on his gun. The great switch had taken place.

I sat there thinking about poor Butch carrying a rifle for which he had no idea as to where it would shoot. Of course, I didn't know where it would shoot either. My shoulder and I had a good laugh. I decided against trying to locate him, mainly because I had a gun I knew had been carefully sighted in.

Almost an hour had passed when a KABOOM to the west shattered the early morning quiet. I tried to convince myself it wasn't Butch, because he was supposed to be hunting to the east, not the west. Finally, I decided to work my way toward the shot.

I detected movement in the thick brush and froze in my tracks. Shortly, a large pair of white tennis shoes appeared and I recognized Butch.

It was obvious he had gotten a shot at a bull elk but had missed, so I decided I had better sneak off.

Too late, he had spotted me.

He approached while making derogatory remarks about my gun, about me, and about a certain boss. He explained he missed a big bull standing at no more than 40 yards. Then, while reloading, an even bigger bull stepped out and nonchalantly walked off. It had never even entered his mind to finish reloading and try and get a shot.

I prodded him about "bull fever" nevertheless, he insisted we trade rifles back. My shoulder sighed dejectedly. We decided to work out a ridge together while spaced out only a few yards apart in the thick pinon-juniper growth. My shoulder and I grinned as we watched Butch continually check his rifle as he separated from us.

Shortly after Butch and I had separated a few yards in the growth to work a ridge out together, I whistled softly to him when a nice buck deer bounded off in his direction. However, I got no response. I whistled louder, but still nothing. I moved in his direction frantically breaking through the brush while whistling shrilly and shouting loudly — nothing. He was not there. I wondered if he had separated intentionally. My shoulders shrugged.

So, I picked out another area to hunt and spent the remainder of the day exploring the new country. As sundown neared I headed toward camp.

Now, our camp was located on a real strange little ridge that magically seemed to blend in with the rest of the terrain. I missed it by about a mile, but found the road which went right by it and arrived at camp about dark.

Butch was already there. He denied having departed from me intentionally, but I detected a small grin. We compared notes on our afternoon findings. Butch admitted he had missed camp considerably that evening, too, describing it as being on a "strange little ridge."

Butch kept me and his wife in hysterics that night at supper, not with his stories, but with his eating. Half way through his second steak and several potatoes later, he leaned back in his chair and said, "I'm tired," referring to his eating. However, a short rest enabled him to finish any chances for left-overs and he eagerly eyed a box of endangered candy bars which then became extinct. I wondered how this man that was six foot, 4 inches or so kept from getting fat.

The alarm shattered the darkness early the next morning and we made our hunt plans for the day. We decided to hunt together. Butch made me close my eyes as he got his rifle out of hiding.

As we walked down the road toward the ridge we decided to hunt, I realized how Butch was able to stay so physically fit. I had to trot to keep up with his long, quick strides. My shoulder and I grinned as we watched Butch continually looking at the rifle he was carrying.

We arrived at the ridge, spaced ourselves about 50 yards apart and started up it. The first few minutes I could hear Butch breaking through the brush. He could snap a two inch sapling as easy as could a bull elk. A short time later, it was quiet again. Butch had disappeared. One of us apparently couldn't walk a very straight line.

I continued on up the ridge and crossed a path of small broken trees and branches. I finally decided it was Butch's trail so I turned more to my right in order to hunt new country.

As I eased along I heard a bull elk trumpet, bugle, flute, whatever they call it. I froze, but there was nothing. I let out the breath I had held, and there it was again, followed by silence. I then developed a theory as to where the tune was coming from.

I raised my head and breathed slowly through my nose. Sure enough, it bugled beautifully. My shoulder, nose, and I went on our way whistling and humming together.

Later that day, Butch and I met back at camp. We had a good laugh at getting separated again, and the fact that both of us had missed camp again. I told him about an area that was full of elk sign and we went back there to investigate.

Then we found it — a tank with fresh elk, deer, and turkey sign. We congratulated ourselves and knew we had discovered the secret to success. It was getting dark, so back to camp. We found it on the third try.

Back at camp, Netta, who was along just for the outing, had all kinds of wild stories about coyotes surrounding the camp and howling menacingly. Apparently, Butch had already broken her of the bad habit that most hunter's wives have of telling their husbands about all the "game" seen walking right through camp while they were out hunting. We congratulated her on her originality.

Butch again entertained at supper. He made some comment about how the large, black olives rolling around on his plate was the freshest "sign" he had seen all day.

The next morning I decided to sit at the water tank for awhile, and Butch was going to hunt in that same area.

About 11 a.m., I heard the brush breaking directly behind me and knew my bull was on the way. I froze and waited, afraid to turn my head. Soon, it was close and I slowly turned. My eyes met with Butch's and we both let out a holler.

We decided to try to hunt together, working our way back to camp. We made a conscious effort to keep each other in sight. If one of us wandered out-of-sight, the other would whistle frantically until he was relocated. Of course, we didn't see anything, so we decided to split up for the remaining two hours of our hunt.

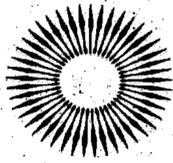

When I walked directly to camp right at sundown, I found Butch standing there smiling. His smile told me that he, too, had walked directly to camp. We congratulated each other. Our hunting trip ended with success. We didn't bag an elk, but we had found camp.

We're already planning our next hunting trip.

SOLAR FACTS

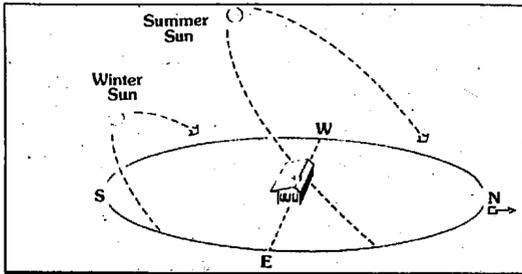

by Robert E. Lewis

HOW PASSIVE SOLAR HEATING WORKS

During the next 10 years, millions of Americans will begin using passive solar energy systems to heat their homes. The growing popularity of this type of solar design can be attributed to its simplicity, effectiveness and reliance on few, if any, mechanical devices.

To understand how solar energy can be used to heat a home without roof-mounted solar collectors or mechanical systems, two basic scientific principles need to be reviewed.

First, the sun follows a "low" path across the sky during the winter, and a "high" path across the sky in the summer. This means the south-facing windows of a building can gain the sun's direct rays during cold winter months, but not during the summer when the sun's path is higher.

Second, a warm object will always seek to transfer some of its heat to a cooler object in an attempt to reach temperature equilibrium. As the heat is transferred from the warmer object to the cooler one, a heat flow is generated.

Passive solar technology unites these two principles with architectural planning and special solar materials to produce a building that can provide its own heat naturally. In other words, the building itself becomes the passive heating system.

To understand exactly how this works, consider the following example of a simple passive heating system:

In order to gain as much of the sun's heat as possible, a house is built so that it contains a large expanse of glass facing southward. Inside the home, behind the glass area, heat-absorbing masonry is used extensively for the floors and walls.

During the day, as the sun's rays enter through the glass, they strike the masonry walls and floors, which in turn absorb and store the heat. These heat-loaded walls and floors will then seek to transfer some of that heat to their cooler surroundings (the air and objects within the room). The resulting heat flow provides warmth throughout the room.

The heat-storing capacity of the masonry assures that plenty of heat will be available for distribution throughout the room for extended periods of time. In fact, well-designed heat-absorbing walls of this type (sometimes called thermal walls) can store enough heat to warm a room through several days and nights of cloudy weather.

The basic components of a passive solar heating system then, are orientation of the dwelling to the south, south-facing glass or special plastics, and the use of heat storing and absorbing construction materials.

To avoid overheating during the day or loss of heat at night, most passive designs also incorporate shading devices for the windows or insulated curtains. Because of their simplicity, the popularity of passive heating systems has grown dramatically in recent years.

In addition, passive systems are feasible throughout the United States, regardless of climatic conditions. Depending on the region and how well a house is insulated, up to 80 percent of a home's annual heating needs can be supplied by a passive system. To meet the remaining heating needs, a back-up system is required.

At present, there are dozens of passive heating systems available to consumers. Some are extremely simple, others are more complex. But even the most sophisticated passive systems require little more than common building materials and proper design techniques to provide heat without mechanical means.

Some of the more popular passive heating systems will be discussed in future columns, as will passive systems that can be used for cooling.

New wildlife specialist at NMSU

James Knight, Las Cruces, is the new Extension wildlife specialist at New Mexico State University (NMSU). His appointment was effective March 2, said Dr. John Oren, director of the Cooperative Extension Service at NMSU.

As a member of the Range Improvement Task Force, Knight will work with the interdisciplinary team to analyze wildlife habitat needs especially as they relate to range management. He will also assist ranchers, urban groups and government agencies dealing with wildlife management issues on public and private lands.

Knight, a native of Michigan, received both his bachelor's and master's from Michigan State University in wildlife biology. He completed his Ph.D. in wildlife management from the University of Michigan.

Prior to joining the NMSU Extension staff, Knight worked for eight years with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. His work with that agency as well as his graduate work dealt with the effects of oil and gas exploration on elk populations.

Knight also owned a wildlife consulting firm which helped private land owners set up effective and profitable game management plans.

Village Lodge at Innsbrook Village Completed

SPECIAL
Jack Stahl has announced the opening of Village Lodge, located at Innsbrook Village on Alto Highway across from the Ranger Station. Each of the 32 units at Village Lodge is a three-room suite containing living room, fully-equipped kitchenette, bedroom and bath. In addition, each suite features a wood-burning fireplace, wet bar and two color TV's with in-room movies.

"Each one of our suites is ideal for up to four persons," said Stahl. "The living room contains a hide-a-bed and the bedroom can be closed off for privacy. We've planned Village Lodge to be the utmost in resort living," Stahl continued. "Our guests have full use of all Innsbrook Village facilities such as swimming, tennis, golf and trout fishing in the stocked pond. Initial occupancy rates have been very high, so reservations are necessary," said Stahl.

Energy credits

PORTALES — Americans can keep warm in the winter, cool in the summer and get paid for it by the federal government through energy conservation and renewable energy source credits.

Both owners and renters of personal residences are eligible for the energy conservation credit if they have installed items like insulation, storm windows and doors.

To qualify for the energy conservation credit, the home must have been substantially completed before April 20, 1977. The items installed must be new and last three years.

Americans can also be credited for placing insulation on a water heater, caulking or weather stripping exterior doors and windows, making furnace modifications, installing clock thermostats or other automatic energy saving setback thermostats, and placing a meter in their home that displays the cost of energy use.

The amount of credit that can be obtained on the energy conservation credit is 15 percent of the cost for the first $2,000 spend on qualified items. The maximum credit is $300.

Renewable energy source equipment must have been installed after April 19, 1977 to qualify for a renewable energy source credit. The equipment must have been installed new and last at least five years.

Qualifying renewable energy sources include solar energy equipment for heating or cooling the home or for providing hot water or electricity within the home.

Home energy equipment or geothermal energy equipment for generating electricity or other forms of energy for personal home use also qualify.

Individuals can obtain 40 percent of the first $10,000 of cost for a maximum renewable energy source credit of $4,000.

To claim the credits, complete Form 5695 and attach it to Form 1040.

Additional information may be obtained by writing the Forms Distribution Center, Post Office Box 2924, Austin, Texas 78769 and request publication 903, "Energy Credits for Individual."

Real Estate Facts

a public service of the Ruidoso Board of Realtors

A condominium simply is a form of real estate ownership.

Long established in other countries, the condominium is a relatively new phenomenon in the United States. It involves a limited form of joint ownership — in that parts of the property, called the "common elements" are owned jointly by all the individual unit owners in the project. The individual units, themselves, are the exclusive property of the individual condominium owner. None of the other owners in the building or project have a legal ownership interest in that particular unit.

Although the concept of condominiums can be traced to Roman times, the condominium form of ownership did not appear in the United States until the early 1960's. Condominiums came to the continental U.S. via Puerto Rico in 1958. Each of the 50 states has adopted statutes specifically allowing condominium ownership after Section 234 of the National Housing Act of 1961 first authorized FHA mortgage insurance for condominium homes. Acceptance of the condominium device has grown slowly.

Since the 1960s, according to the National Association of Realtors, the American real estate industry has shown great ingenuity in adapting the condominium form of ownership to a wide array of development projects including commercial, industrial and recreational properties.

Before 1970, new and converted cooperative apartments outnumbered condominiums by more than four to one (cooperatives are not owned outright by the unit resident. Instead, the resident owns shares in a corporation which is the legal owner of the entire building.)

During the 1970's, the popularity of condominiums far outpaced that of cooperatives. The Department of Housing and Urban Development estimates that between 1970 and 1979, about 366,000 rental units were converted to condominiums nationwide as against only 18,000 converted to cooperative apartments.

Condominium and cooperative conversion activity was very limited in scope until the early 1970's, touching very few American cities. But in the first five years of the 1970's, conversions increased dramatically in New York City, Chicago and Washington, spreading to other cities as well.

An average of 8,125 units a year were converted to cooperative or condominiums in New York City during the period. At the same time, about 20,000 units were converted in Washington D.C. and 10,500 units in Chicago. Boston, which had experienced the conversion of only 111 units in 1969, had almost 5,500 conversions between 1970 and the end of 1974. Conversions also began to appear in Los Angeles and San Diego.

Although conversions slowed in the wake of the 1974-75 recession, by 1977, activity had quickened. In that year alone, some 45,000 apartment units were converted to condominiums and in 1978, an additional 80,000 units nationwide were converted. Estimates for 1979 go as high as 145,000 units, with almost all of the conversions taking place before the steep hike in interest rates after the October change in Federal Reserve Board policies.

It is expected that the number of conversions nationwide in 1980 and 1981 should be less than the 1979 figure, but the expansion of conversion activity in the last five years proves that residential conversions are here to stay.

TELE Pulse

by Steve K. Walz

Every week this column reviews the merits or demerits of a network series, miniseries, movie or special. More importantly though, we'd like you, the viewer, to get involved with the column by sending in your opinion about a certain show so we can register your tele-pulse. We'll pass on some of the more interesting comments to the network honchos in New York.

BUCK ROGERS

NBC has made a valiant effort to make this sci-fi series into a second 'Star Trek.' Unfortunately, 'Buck Rogers' falls way short of that lofty goal. Last year, under the direction of Glen Larson, 'Buck Rogers' was nothing more than a series of weekly inter-stellar battles with little or no character development. Larson was promptly jettisoned and John Mantley, who was responsible for the success of 'Gunsmoke,' was brought in to pump new life into the show.

Erin Gray and Gil Gerard

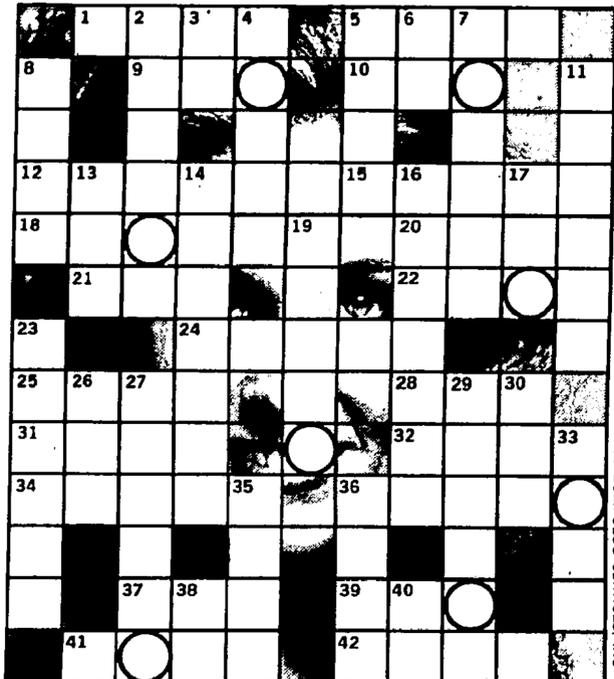

This year 'Buck Rogers' has a totally different mission. He's left Earth in a silly looking star vessel called The Searcher, which is doing just that—searching for Earth's lost tribes. Did I hear the Klaxon of the 'Battlestar Galactica' again? The Galactica was also a far more impressive ship, worthy of 25th century technology, but as for The Searcher, well, let's just say that the ship's bridge appears as if it could be operated by a five-year-old.

Oh, there are some improvements. Buck Rogers (as played by Gil Gerard) now has a real mission to fulfill, and Colonel Deering (Erin Gray) has developed into something more than just a military officer—a beautiful lady with a heart.

Some of the new cast additions include the wily veteran comedian Wilfrid Hyde-White as a brilliant but bumbling professor, Thom Christopher as the Spock-like Hawkman and a smarty pants computer.

But the show fails because of its imitative scripting. Each episode becomes a poor Xerox copy of 'Star Trek' or 'Battlestar.' Originality is kept to a bare minimum. Mr. Mantley should have also convinced the NBC honchos to lense a transitional episode between the 'Buck Rogers' of 1979 and the 'Buck Rogers' of 1980. They are literally two different series which is enough to bewilder even the most ardent sci-fi fan.

I believe 'Buck Rogers' is doomed and recent Nielsen ratings would seem to verify that prediction. TV does need a cerebral sci-fi series, but 'Buck Rogers' doesn't even come close.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT: Angel Cheryl Ladd was rescued from the depths of depression by her new husband, Brian Russel. "Cheryl was in real danger of suffering a physical and emotional breakdown," confided one source close to the TV superstar. "She needed a strong dynamic guy like Brian to bring her life back under control." The friend says of 6-foot-3-inch Russel: "It almost seems as if Cheryl saw in Brian a huge, hulking man whose sheer bulk would protect her from the cruel world. She's in heaven now. I think this marriage will definitely last." Cheryl who married for the second time in a secret ceremony earlier this month—suffered a breakdown a year ago following the shattering split from first husband David Ladd. She flung herself into a frantic high-living Hollywood lifestyle of one wild party after another. At one stage, the farm girl from North Dakota, was even juggling three boyfriends at the same time. She needed psychiatric help and was once rushed to a hospital after collapsing at a TV studio from exhaustion. "Brian has ended all that," her friend says. "He's a solid rock kind of a guy... exactly the sort of man Cheryl needs at this particular trying period in her life." Cheryl's trials include doubts over the future of her troubled show, 'Charlie's Angels,' which is plunging in the ratings. Now there's talk of axing the show whose success helped wreck her first marriage as well as those of other Angels like Farrah Fawcett, Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith.

TV BACKSTAGE: It must have been all that practice in the shower at Stalag 13, because now Col. Klink—actor Werner Klemperer—is headed for a new career as an opera star. "I will make my operatic debut as a singer during the 1981-82 season of the Seattle Opera," says Klemperer, 59, who for seven years was the nasty Nazi of 'Hogan's Heroes.' "I have been appearing as a narrator with various orchestras. And last season, at the Metropolitan Opera in New York, I played a speaking role in a Mozart opera. Now, at last, I'm ready to sing. And I can hardly wait." While the German-born Klemperer's new calling may surprise TV viewers, his Hollywood friends have been expecting it for decades. "All you have to do is look at his background to know it was inevitable," says one friend. "After all, his mother, Johanna Geisler, was a famous opera star in Europe. His father, Otto Klemperer, once head of the Berlin Opera, was an internationally renowned conductor."

TV CLOSEUP: On Wednesday, March 11 a new National Geographic Special will air on PBS, 'National Parks: Playground or Paradise?' 'National Parks' is the third in the 1981 National Geographic series produced by the National Geographic Society and WQED/Pittsburgh with a continuing grant from Gulf Oil Corporation. Today, more than 250 million visitors enjoy Yellowstone, Yosemite, the Grand Canyon, and other U.S. national parks each year. In the summer season these popular parks suffer from overwhelming crowds, traffic jams, pollution, and environmental damage. The situation has placed the park service in a dilemma: how to fulfill its mandate to protect and promote the use of parks as vacation wonderlands, and yet restore them as much as possible to their natural condition. New plans would reduce, relocate, or eliminate completely parking lots, gas stations, supermarkets, restaurants, shops, and hotels; and campgrounds would be cut out or cut back in many parks.
