

Ruidoso Summer Festival en route to bright future

The Ruidoso Summer Festival (RSF) has enjoyed widespread publicity in the regional and national press almost from its inception.

The original purpose of the series, as formulated by Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra conductor John Giordano, was indeed noteworthy: to provide an unpressured setting where highly talented but unpublicized musicians could play a series of concerts with their more recognized peers. Other festivals have traditionally focused on either a major orchestra or a stable of internationally known soloists in a teaching situation (such as at Aspen, Colorado).

On a less idealistic level, the RSF also gave members of the Texas Little Symphony (TLS) a chance to work in the cool pine country, and gave the Ruidoso tourist industry a needed boost at a slow time.

But invariably, the spotlights have been turned almost exclusively on the conductor and the visiting guest artists/entertainers. This has raised the question among members of the TLS as to whether the yearly series will evolve towards entertainment or the presentation of fine music.

"I think we'll have to include both," Ann Denton told The Ruidoso News this week. Denton chairs the board of directors of Ruidoso Summer Festival, a non-profit corporation now entering its third season.

"This is a tourist area, of course, and it must be recognized that a great deal of the people coming to the concerts are vacationers, who want to relax and have a good time," Denton said. "So we'll continue to bring in guest artists and comedians. But at the same time we still have a commitment to giving classical music a foothold in the area."

Attendance figures at the RSF would seem to support the belief that many people come to see personalities as much as to hear music. Guitarist Pepe Romero attracted 502 audience members, while only 317 showed up the next night to hear conductor John Giordano's solo on saxophone. On the other hand, 959 people bought tickets to see Phyllis Diller, and 795 witnessed the show of Shari Lewis.

It is worth noting that the second largest audience, 893, came to the concert that featured Andre-Michel Schub. He is both a great musician and a public figure, by virtue of winning the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition May 31 in Fort Worth.

Shortly before the conclusion of the RSF, the News interviewed three members of the woodwind section of the TLS. In the following profile, they talk about their work, their experiences in the RSF, and take a glance at the possibilities for developing an ongoing tradition of classical music in the Ruidoso area.

Kevin Hall, principal bassoonist, was a music major at the University of Illinois. After graduation, he studied with orchestras in Chicago, Los Angeles and Atlanta. He auditioned for and became a member of the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra (FWSO) in 1977.

Kevin's wife Joanne plays cello as a part-time member of the orchestra, and is conductor of a string orchestra and the Youth Symphony Orchestra.

Hall said that the Youth Symphony Orchestra is something of a training ground or a "farm league" for its parent organization, the FWSO. James Miller, who is now associate conductor of the Texas Little Symphony, was originally with the Youth Symphony Orchestra.

"We've got a very unusual situation in the FWSO in that we're growing so rapidly," said Hall. "Our budget has gone from $80,000 in 1973 to $1.4 million at present. Therefore we're still in the process of defining ourselves, and as we're not a year-round orchestra, our members are involved in a number of different enterprises. The wind section is sub-

DECA 1st in nation

Ruidoso's Distributive Education Club of America (DECA) Chapter is No. 1 in the nation, winning the honor for their seafood sale project in national competition in Anaheim, California, Wednesday.

DECA sponsor Eddie Parker called The News this morning with the announcement. "The kids are really excited," he said. "We received 41 shares of Pepsi stock, valued at about $2,000 for our first place win."

"Also, Mike Clarke ranks third in the nation in advertising services competition."

"The national DECA will reproduce our contest manual, to make it available to every DECA club in the nation that wants a copy."

Parker said the DECA students will be returning to Ruidoso "sometime Saturday evening."

Village okays ordinances, animal pact

The village trustees Tuesday afternoon, meeting in special session, adopted three "control ordinances" and approved a contract for animal control services in Ruidoso through September of 1983.

Village clerk Jim Hine Wednesday said to The News, "These ordinances, under state law, due to dealing with an emergency, became effective Tuesday when signed by mayor Davis."

The ordinances adopted include:

ORDINANCE 81-9 — Establishing a Business Registration fee of $25 for one year's operation, effective July 1, 1981. Holders of current Occupational Licenses, good through December 31, 1981, will not have to pay the Business Registration fee until January 1, 1982. This ordinance abolishes the requirement for Occupational Licenses. Itinerant vendors will be required to pay the $25 Business Registration fee.

ORDINANCE 81-11 — Provides the village with the authority to establish tow away and no parking zones on Sudderth and Mechem Drives, or other areas should the need arise. The tow away and no parking zones will be marked with signs conforming to state Highway Department specifications. The two away zone ordinance empowers the village Police Department to move unattended vehicles constituting an obstruction or definite hazard to the normal movement of traffic."

ORDINANCE 81-12 — Requires liquor establishments featuring live entertainment to provide uniformed security guards inside the establishment when live entertainment is featured and during intermissions. Establishments providing customer parking will be required to provide an additional uniformed guard for the parking area during the times security service is required inside.

THE TRUSTEES accepted the bid of Jack Sniadecki, in the amount of $45,000 per year, to provide animal control services in Ruidoso. He must provide his own vehicles, all insurance, a secretary and pay for his gasoline.

Sniadecki's contract stipulates that 60 hours of service per week will be provided from May through September of 1981, 1982 and 1983, and 40 hours weekly from October through April those same years.

He must also provide 24 hour "on call" emergency service when requested by law enforcement personnel in the village or by state law enforcement personnel.

VILLAGE BUSINESS OFFICES are now located in the Ruidoso Administrative Building, on Cree Meadows Drive, just east of the entrance to Municipal Airport. The new telephone numbers are: 257-9141, 257-9142 and 257-9143. The Police Department, Municipal Court and Magistrate Court remain in the old village hall on Wingfield Street.

Village projects planned

Several improvement projects, and upgrading of administrative services, are included in expenditures from the village's $3,362,192 budget for fiscal 1981 and 1982.

Street projects scheduled this summer call for a two inch asphalt overlay on 6.8 miles of streets. Streets receiving this overlay include Blady Drive, Juanita Drive and South Country Club Drive, Cree Meadows Drive, Buckner Drive, Porr Drive, Main Road, Wingfield to Center Street, North Loop Road and D Street. Partial funding for this project is from $115,000 in cooperative funds from the state Highway Department.

A second street project depends on selling $600,000 in bonds, approved in the March 24 election, that will provide basecourse on about 40 miles of un-surfaced streets, and blacktopping of another five miles of streets. The work is scheduled to be started this year and completed during 1982.

Ramp and taxi strip improvements totaling $41,000 are to be completed this summer at the Municipal Airport.

Revenue Share fund expenditures include $40,000 for replacement of Police Department vehicles, $8,000 for street name signs, $13,500 for furniture for the new Administrative Center, $7,500 in capital expenditures for the Ruidoso Public Library and two new village vehicles, one for the administrative department and one for the zoning enforcement officer.

A new computer system for village records, at a cost of $65,000, will be installed in the Administrative Center that will record all expenditures and handle all receipts, billing and payrolls.

The Solid Waste Department will purchase a new rear end loading truck to service areas of the village not suitable for installation of the dumpsters now serving most of the residential and business areas.

Six additional employees are included in the budget to provide three new police officers, a water department employee, an administrative employee and a secretary to serve both Municipal Judge Sam Nunnally and the Police Department.

Water and Sewer Department expenditures include $87,000 in capital outlay for water meters, fittings, manhole covers and supplies; $182,000 for a water blending plant to utilize the Hollywood well and provide water in portions of the Gavilan Canyon area and $180,000 for three new water pumping stations.

A total of $700,000 will be spent for water exploration and improvements in the current system to provide additional service.

The village is also endeavoring to obtain $2.5 million in grant, or other type, funding to provide sewer service in Ponderosa Heights.

To continue the development of the Regional Wastewater System, currently under construction, $2.5 million has been budgeted. This system is expected to be operational in the spring of 1982.

Pending the sale of $650,000 in bonds, work is scheduled to begin on renovating the old village hall into a new jail and judicial facility sometime this year. This building is being designed to meet all state codes for a jail and will incorporate the latest in radio and communications systems.

"The next two years," village clerk Jim Hine said to The News Tuesday, "will see the biggest improvement in services that has happened in a like period since the village was incorporated in 1945."

RC&D meets here Tuesday

The South Central Mountains Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Council will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Ruidoso Public Library.

Highlight of the meeting will be a program on the group's wild turkey project, presented by Dan Sutcliffe, research biologist with the New Mexico Game and Fish Department. The project was adopted recently by RC&D with the aim of controlling grasshoppers by the introduction of improved strains of wild turkeys in the Lincoln County area.

The group will also hear reports from the executive committee, coordinator and committee chairpersons.

CPR course scheduled

A cardio pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) course, sponsored by the Bonito Volunteer Fire Department, will begin June 24, at 6:30 p.m., at the Sun Valley Station.

The three hour classes will be taught on three consecutive Wednesday evenings. The cost will be $5, to cover books and instructional materials.

Registration information is available from CPR instructors Mike Carbuto, telephone 336-4872, or Yvonne Lanelli, 336-4733.

Fire restrictions issued

Because of abnormally dry conditions, the Smokey Bear Ranger District has issued fire restrictions, effective 8 a.m., Friday, June 19. Campers are directed to use the following areas:

- All developed campgrounds
 - Cedar Creek picnic area
 - Monjeau Lookout parking area
 - Bonito Canyon bottom as posted around Nogal Lake
 - Upper end of Nogal Canyon
 - Baca Campground
 - Old sawmill site near Pine Lodge
- No camping permit is needed at this time.

Espree Party to be gala night

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce has developed a sure fire plan to help at least one person beat the inflation crunch — to the tune of $3,000, while providing a significant boost to Ruidoso's economy. The $3,000 — in credit with member businesses of the Chamber of Commerce — will be awarded Tuesday night at the Espree Party, a fund raising event similar to the Chamber's Cadillac and Jeep Parties.

However, instead of a particular prize, the winner will be able to choose from a seemingly infinite variety of goods and services offered by member businesses.

A second prize of $2,000 in credit will also be awarded, and numerous consolation prizes, including gift certificates at area businesses will also be given away. The party begins at 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 23, at Jerry Dale's, and includes a one-hour cocktail party, full dinner and dancing to the country western sounds of the Clay Mac band.

TICKETS are available at the Chamber of Commerce office, or from Chamber board of directors members, for $125 per couple.

Although the price of the party may seem steep, the ultimate value to the business community should far outweigh the investment, according to Chamber executive director Ed Jungbluth.

"The concept of the party is fantastic," he said, "because all the money from the party stays in the community."

The combined credit prizes equal $10,000, Jungbluth said, and since each dollar "turns over" or changes hands six times within the community, "in effect, that's $60,000" in economic benefits to Ruidoso's economy, he said.

In addition, profits from the Espree Party will be used to develop a promotional film presentation about the Ruidoso area. The presentation will be available to groups for use at conventions and other gatherings, and will be aimed at attracting more tourists and, consequently, more economic benefits, Jungbluth said.

Espree Party's possibilities

With 546 members now affiliated with the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, the winner of the Tuesday night Espree Party probably will feel like "a kid turned loose in a candy store," as he or she prepares to spend $8,000 in credit with those businesses.

Just in case your imagination needs a boost, here are a few of the items you might be able to purchase, should you be awarded the Espree grand prize.

If your tastes run to large purchases, you might want to make a down payment on a house or property, or purchase a car at Sierra Blanca Motors. Original art could be your choice, purchased from any one of the many galleries who hold membership in the Chamber. You might even have some money left over for gas.

Food, too has eternal appeal, and the $8,000 credit at member grocery stores is an intriguing possibility. On the other hand, if you prefer to eat out, you could use the prize credit to purchase any of the following:

- 533.3 prime rib dinners at Cousins'
- 10,666 tacos from Ole Tacos
- 16,000 chocolate dip cones from Dairy Queen

Several bottles of each of the 75 brands of beer at Nottingham's. The possibilities are endless — here are more items you may not have imagined:

Boarding for your small dog for 4.8 years at Hondo Valley Kennels. Enough bookkeeping or CPA service to keep the IRS off your back for the rest of your life.

Motel rooms where your friends and relatives can stay while they're helping you spend the rest.

Pony Express Race August 8

The White Oaks to Lincoln 18th annual Pony Express Race, over a 41 mile mountainous trail, will be run August 8. The race is a highlight of the Old Lincoln Days celebration, including the presentations of The Last Escape of Billy the Kid pageant, and the arts and crafts fair along main street.

Prize money this year will be $3,500, to be divided between the first, second and third place winners. In addition, the winning team will receive a pair of Larry Mahan boots.

Entries will be limited to ten teams, with one or two riders, and four horses per team. Riders must use western saddles and wear western clothing.

Teams may register with Lois Clements, Box 41, Pecos, New Mexico 88343, telephone 653-4033. Entry fees will be $50 per team before July 31 and $100 per team after that date.

As an official United States Postal Service route, all contestants will be carrying first class mail in their saddle bags.

Letters to be carried by the riders, bearing an official gold seal as Pony Express Mail, are to be sent to: Pony Express, Lincoln, New Mexico 88338, to reach there by August 7.

These letters must be addressed and bear first class postage. The packaged letters must be accompanied by 50 cents per letter. After the race the letters, which are collector's items, will be forwarded through the mails to the addressee.

Following a 6:30 a.m. breakfast at historic White Oaks, served outdoors, ranch style, by the White Oaks Historical Society, the race begins at 8 and concludes at the finish line in Lincoln about 10. The crowd is kept informed of the progress of the race, and any incidents developing on the course, over loud speakers.

Annual Fourth of July action set at Capitan

The Capitan Chamber of Commerce is calling for entries for their annual Smokey Bear Stampede Parade, to be held July 4 in Capitan.

Theme of this year's parade is "Smokey's Big Roundup," a slogan submitted by Mary Shanks' second grade class at Capitan Elementary. The class will be presented a trophy during the festivities for that theme, which was the winning entry in competition among the school children of Capitan.

Chamber president Mark Delgado said Wednesday that handcrafted trophies, which include a replica of the famous bruin, will be awarded in ten categories this year.

Categories include best dressed cowgirl and cowboy, floats, most original entry, mounted groups, antique autos, organized groups, best theme entry, best miscellaneous entry, and bicycle entries by children.

Invitations have been mailed to past parade participants, and should be received by Saturday, Delgado said. He added, however, that other entries are welcome. Interested individuals or groups may register and obtain more information by contacting Delgado at 354-2211 days, 354-2581 after 5 p.m.; or by contacting Tommie Allen, 354-2432 days, or 354-2434, after 5 p.m.

The Stampede events begin Friday, July 3 with an 8 p.m. rodeo performance, followed by a western dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., with music by the Sagebrush Review.

Saturday's events will open with a new attraction, a Fun Run, sponsored by the Capitan Woman's Club.

Runners of all ages may compete, for a $5 entry fee, and all participants will receive a commemorative tee shirt. The event will actually consist of two routes — six miles and two miles long, respectively, along the Eneinoso highway. The run will begin at 8:30 a.m.

The parade begins at 11 a.m., winding down Highway 360 to the fairgrounds, and will be followed by a noon barbecue. A rodeo queen will be crowned at 1:30 p.m., at the fair grounds, and the second rodeo performance will start at 2 p.m.

The final rodeo performance will be held at 8 p.m., followed by a dance, with the Sagebrush Review, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., concluding the 1961 Stampede activities.

Sierra Blanca inmates jailed

Three Camp Sierra Blanca inmates were detained recently in the Lincoln County jail, Carrizozo, by the sheriff's department.

Jon Ruiz, 44, was taken into custody for "detoxification," on June 10. He was released to the camp on June 11.

David Sedillo, 34, and Pedro Tortuga, 48, were transferred temporarily to the county jail June 12, at the request of camp officials, "for security reasons," according to Sheriff Ernest Sanchez.

Grass, trash fire caused little damage

A fire which broke out about 9 a.m., Thursday burned a small area of grass and trash behind a cabin on El Paso Street, according to a spokesman for the Ruidoso Fire Department.

The blaze was brought under control within minutes. Cause of the fire is unknown, the spokesman said.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

"A Journey Into The Past"

Over and over it has surprised me how many interesting places are hidden out here in our mountain homeland on the slopes of the White Mountain.

Maybe this area of Lincoln County and the Mesquero Reservation does not look very large on a world map. And yet the more you travel around in it, you find that this is "big country" after all, as the old timers used to say — and full of scenic treasures and little miniature worlds all their own full of history, wild life individuality, and every other charm.

On Monday, June fifteen, brother Lynn, and his wife Maxine, and I made a little trip into one of these little worlds that I have heard about for a long time.

Ever since we came to this country in 1925 I have been hearing about "The Jicarillas" mountains, but had never been there, until last Saturday.

As nearly as I can find out the word "Jicarilla" in Spanish means "Little Chocolate Cup." Now, somebody track down for me the reason this name was given to this group of mountains and the once thriving village.

Anyhow, we traveled through the Capitan Gap, a pleasure that never grows old. (And, by the way, when you visit the different places around here, you always find the old pleasure increased, and also something new.)

After coming through the gap, the vast rolling country with blue mountains in every direction ahead was such a treat for your eyesight.

After going through a rolling country, the next thing you knew we were in a sandy, hilly country with pines, pinons, cedars and some kind of oak half way between oak brush and oak trees. On every hand the remains of gold diggings began to appear, and log cabins, with the square hewn logs still well preserved and the red clay chimneys in between. In the warm sun the aroma of the pine, and pinon and oak was baked into the air, mingling in pleasing incense.

It was a happy place this land of the Jicarillas, and it was a pleasure to dream of the hopes of the gold seekers, and the rustic joys of the dwellers in the log cabins, so carefully and cleverly made.

As we journeyed on, the country changed rapidly and the crimson-purple of the Cholla cactus appeared by the wayside, set off by the pearly blossom clusters of the yucca. And now you are in the flat country again with the light blue mountains on every hand, and many a pleasant breath of the desert plants filled the air.

The House Of Old Things

After imagining the lives of these pioneers, whose former dwelling places you had just passed, think of the delightful surprise awaiting you at a treasure house of countless beloved companions of the day to day lives of these early settlers.

By the railroad side in the former busy town of Ancho, here stood the old station house surrounded by a brick wall. (Brick made at the thriving brick plant of just a few years ago.)

And inside is the most remarkable collection of antiques your eyes could behold. In fact you could visit this place many times and notice something new every time. Where to begin looking, once inside? and how could you begin to describe this journey back into the lives of our pioneer forefathers!

The furniture, the chinaware, and the all-weather, the wood burning kitchen stove beautifully decorated with bright metal — these companions of the folks of

It was a happy place this land of the Jicarillas, and it was a pleasure to dream of the hopes of the gold seekers, and the rustic joys of the dwellers in the log cabins, so carefully and cleverly made.

As we journeyed on, the country changed rapidly and the crimson-purple of the Cholla cactus appeared by the wayside, set off by the pearly blossom clusters of the yucca. The House Of Old Things

After imagining the lives of these pioneers, whose former dwelling places you had just passed, think of the delightful surprise awaiting you at a treasure house of countless beloved companions of the day to day lives of these early settlers.

By the railroad side in the former busy town of Ancho, here stood the old station house surrounded by a brick wall. (Brick made at the thriving brick plant of just a few years ago.)

Moore named to board of health group

Ken Moore, administrator of Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital, was appointed recently to the New Mexico Health Resources (NMHR) Incorporated, by Governor Bruce King. He will serve a three-year term on the board.

NMHR is a non-profit corporation which attempts to "assist communities in recruiting and retaining health professionals."

In a letter to Moore, regarding his appointment, King said, "I know you will represent the interest of your part of our state as NMHR carries out its mandate to improve health care services in the rural communities of New Mexico."

Recently elected to a two-year term on the NMHR executive committee was Jerry Cantwell, vice president and regional administrator for Southwestern Community Health Services, which leases the local facility.

Auditions for the upcoming Backdoor Theatre production of Agatha Christie's "Mousetrap" will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m., at the theatre, located in the Chaparral Motel.

Under the direction of Betty Bennett, the production is scheduled for a five week run, Thursday nights, beginning August 13.

Anyone interested in acting, working backstage or in technical aspects of the production is urged to attend.

Free upholstery workshop offered

Deadline for registration for the upcoming free upholstery workshop, to be held in Carrizozo, is Saturday, June 20. Interested persons may register by calling the Lincoln County Extension Office at 648-2311.

The workshop, to be taught by JoAnn Less, housing specialist at New Mexico State University, will be offered June 29 through July 1, at the Rural Electric Association, next to the Carrizozo post office.

Participants will learn to upholster a furniture piece of their own, and should supply their own materials. Registration will be limited to about 15 people, and each student is expected to attend all three days of the workshop.

Ruidoso women who enjoy playing soccer are attempting to organize themselves into a league. Ralph Anaya, who is coordinating registration, emphasized that enthusiasm, not experience, is a prerequisite. Ladies aged 18 and up are invited to join. The registration fee is minimal ($5) and will go towards wages for certified referees. Sponsors and coaches are also needed.

For more information, contact Anaya at 257-5516, or drop by Morgan Mountain Sports.

Wilderness Wisdom

with Wayne Calloway

Dear Wayne — It seems to me there is a steady increase in the formation of bass clubs. Local clubs are springing from national organizations and if you are a fisherman it's the "in" thing to be a club member.

My concern is whether this seemingly abundance of clubs is really healthy for bass fishing. I, too, am a bass fisherman, but I have reservations about joining a club that might make a joint effort to skillfully catch every fish in a given pond or lake. Would you comment on your position? Gary W., Alabama

Dear Gary — I don't believe the organization of local bass clubs, in itself, is bad. It depends entirely upon how the club conducts its activities and what ethical standards it develops.

Many fishermen are dedicated bass anglers with little interest in any other species. Bass is their game. Not that they necessarily desire to catch huge stringers full, but they simply are fascinated and intrigued with bass fishing. They want to learn from and share with other anglers who share this dedication.

Bass clubs, I suppose, are formed for different reasons, but if formed for the right reasons, I think they are an asset to the sport. If they are brought to life from a desire to share a common bond, promote conservation of a species, and to practice ethical sportsmanship, these are some of the right reasons. The fact is, a majority of organized bass clubs advocate the catch-and-release program where the catch is weighed, and maybe measured, then carefully released. In competition they are sometimes kept in live wells of the boat until officially recorded, then released.

The club members should be, and in most cases are, aware that they share heavily in the responsibility of perpetuation of a species. Without this effort the club will lose a reason to exist when bass fishing becomes only a memory. But with the effectiveness that can come from an organization of people, the sport can be preserved well beyond its natural term.

I-n-s-i-d-e the Outdoors

by Gary Dollahan

The stillness of a hot summer day in a remote area of the desert southwest was shattered by the sounds of two young men in their early twenties and their newly acquired four-wheel drive vehicle.

The vehicle spun and slid through the sand as its riders worked on their third six pack of cold beer. Suddenly, the vehicle found itself astraddle an old stump, and hopelessly stuck.

The two men challenged the obstacle and the 100 degree plus temperature, but to no avail; they were stranded in the desert.

The few beers left in the ice chest didn't last long, neither did the small amount of ice water, as the men tried to replace the liquids their bodies were losing at a rate of two quarts every hour.

Unfortunately beer is no substitute for water, and as their body liquids evaporated, their blood got thicker. The liquor only worsened the problem, and the situation became serious.

Then came the confrontation. One individual wanted to walk out for help. Each did his "own thing."

The one that remained at the vehicle was awakened the next morning by the sound of a passing airplane. The night's rest had done wonders in clearing his mind, and repairing his body. He quickly thought to signal the plane with a mirror from the vehicle. Soon, help was on the way.

The rescuers found the individual that had decided to walk for help about three miles from the vehicle. He was found face down on the desert floor - dead. He had second and third degree burns over 40% of his body. The cause of death: heart failure.

The above story is a true one that has been re-created in a new film called "Survival!" The film depicts four such stories, under four different situations, all of which can occur in New Mexico.

Yet, for some reason, when people think of survival, they generally think of being lost in the woods, or being caught in a deep snow, or some other winter time situation.

However, the above example is every bit as much a survival situation that could easily be encountered in our arid southwest this time of year.

While there are volumes and volumes of books that have been written on how to survive, there is no substitute for a little basic knowledge and some common sense.

If you should find yourself in a survival situation, there is one word you should think of — STOP. Each letter in the word STOP stands for one of four things you must do in a life and death situation.

First, you must Stop. Do not panic. If you are lost, admit it and stop travelling.

Second, you must Think. Judge the situation and the problems which might occur.

Third, you must Observe. Look around for possible solutions to the problems.

Fourth, you must Plan. Set up a course of action which will best use your energy and resources.

Sounds simple doesn't it? Yet, a survival situation can be a psychologically trying one in which fear and panic are your worst enemies. Therefore, once you have achieved these four steps, you will be ready to start working to better the situation.

Your basic knowledge should deal with energy, water, food, and shelter, and not necessarily in that order.

Water and energy are usually the most critical factors in all survival situations. You have to have water in order to survive. You can go over 30 days without food, but only one to three days without water.

That's where energy comes in, in the form of being a direct product of food and water. You must coordinate your energy expenditures according to your availability of water and food.

Shelter can help in storing your energy package. Shade in the summer heat can reduce your evaporation, just like a protected cave in the winter can reduce your loss of energy through shivering.

Needless to say, there are a great deal of "tricks" and "tips" on determining directions, obtaining food and water, and being rescued. But, their magnitude is too great to go into any depth in an article of this nature.

Therefore, anyone seeking such sources of information can contact me by writing to: The New Mexico Department of Game and Fish, 413 North Virginia, Roswell, New Mexico 88201.

One of particular interest is titled, "Desert Survival" and was produced by the Arizona Game and Fish Department. It provides some good information for anyone travelling in the desert southwest.

Ruidoso Summer Festival en route to bright future

contracted to the Dallas Ballet, for instance. And I'm going to be soloist at a Mozart concerto transcription series at the Kimball Art Museum.

Members of the TLS also do about 30 "run-off" concerts a year—playing in small to mid-sized Texas towns in high school auditoriums and converted theaters. Hall expressed hope that perhaps in the near future, when the TLS is already in West Texas, arrangements could be made for a winter concert in Ruidoso area. But recognizing that "you have to walk before you can run," he suggested that perhaps a more immediately realizable means of starting a year-round association with classical music here would be to hold a "Master Class."

A Master Class is basically a workshop conducted by an orchestra member, usually a principal, for his or her instrument. "It has the advantage of costing the fraction of what you'd have to pay for even a string quartet, but it would still attract people to drive here from, say, El Paso and Roswell."

Hall is a member of the orchestra committee, along with Rogene Russell. The five member committee has just finished negotiating a new contract.

Russell, who plays second oboe, received her Bachelor's from the University of Tennessee, and her Master's from Yale. She played with the Louisville orchestra on a full-time basis until her husband Doug landed a job with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in 1975. For the next three years, she commuted between Louisville and a part-time job with the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra. She became a full-time member of the FWSO in 1978.

"The chamber orchestra is a new idea, modeled after one in L.A.," said Russell. "The chamber orchestra in Fort Worth was (conductor) John Giordano's baby—he had worked with the English Chamber Orchestra, and thought that we could use one in a city that couldn't support a full-time orchestra. We only had five full-time players in 1978, compared to the 34 that you see now."

"John's idea was to expand to not more than a busload, which is just about where we are now. Our motto has been 'flexible, portable, and affordable.' It's an idea that really seems to have caught on."

The TLS had their national debut in 1979 in New York at Carnegie Hall's "Celebration of Chamber Ensembles" series.

Russell and Charles Price, the TLS member present, both-emphasized that it wasn't necessary to have an elaborate civic center to bring in chamber orchestras. "We played in an old theater in Texarkana that was refurbished by Ross Perot, and it was one of the finest facilities that we have been in," Price said.

Price is a native of the Dallas area. He attended Southern Methodist University and joined the FWSO in 1977 as second bassoon.

"We look at ourselves as 'bringing music to the people', but that doesn't imply that we're playing down to them. Of course, we have to play a few 'war-horses' that may get a little old, but on the whole, the concerts in small towns are very enjoyable. I look on them as an educational experience."

"As far as playing with the 'entertainers' in Ruidoso goes, I think I enjoyed working with Shari Lewis, for instance, as much as the audience enjoyed watching her. She's a real professional, she knows exactly what she wants, and she always makes an effort to make the orchestra members feel appreciated—unlike some 'stars' who have treated us like the hired help."

Price said that one of his biggest problems playing in Ruidoso is the havoc wreaked on his instrument by the altitude. "The air here is so thin and dry that the woodwinds are just constantly going out of tune. Players are bringing vaporizers and humidifiers up here, and some of us leave our instruments in the sauna during the day to keep them moist. If I have a pause of a few measures during the concert, I'll keep the reed in my mouth, and on a longer rest I dunk it in a bucket of water beside my seat. I think it would probably take a couple of months to really adjust."

One of the unusual aspects of playing the TLS, Price said, was that some of the orchestra members actually had most of their training in a field other than classical music. "Now I can't play anything unless I'm sitting in front of a sheet of music, but we have some people who are probably at their best improvising. Doc Severinson (of the Tonight Show) called Don Thomas (who plays in the TLS Dixieland Band) the best lead trumpeter in the United States. And Andy Crissanti (clarinetist of the Dixieland Band) has an immense amount of experience playing jazz and big band music on the east coast."

Price's own versatility includes part-time work in the orchestra of the Dallas Opera, and leading his own traveling group, the Dallas Chamber Players.

Price said that his group also does concerts as far west as Sweetwater, Texas. He would like nothing better than to bring them to Ruidoso for a day or two—including an evening concert and perhaps classes at the high school and middle schools the next day, followed by a "children's concert."

Price said that several Ruidoso residents had expressed interest in this idea. But for the next few years, funding for any activities outside the Ruidoso Summer Festival will probably have to come from private sources.

"We've already bit off about all that we can chew," said Ken Green, who is on the board of directors of RSF. "Of course we'd be happy to see additional music here, but the RSF is still a new enterprise, and we don't really have the means at present to expand beyond about a 10-day festival."

Denton said that once a tradition is established here, off-season activities such as the ones mentioned by Hall and Price might be able to obtain grant money. "But first we've got to establish our dependability, she said. "We have to pay our bills on time, and convince the people who control such grants that the RSF as it exists is going to be here to stay."

CONTINENTAL COMPUTERIZES TELEPHONE SYSTEM — 500 CUSTOMERS AFFECTED
The latest in computerized telephone switching equipment is being installed in the White Mountain Drive area by Continental Telephone Company of the West at an estimated cost of $848,000. With this installation, a variety of new calling services will become available to about 500 customers in portions of the White Mountain Drive area on August 15.
Because of the new equipment, the 500 affected customers will receive new telephone numbers beginning with the prefix 258. But they will also be offered call forwarding, call waiting and conferencing services which have formerly been unavailable to them.
Because of the unanticipated growth, Continental is forced to limit new residential customers to 4-party service until the new digital switching equipment installation is complete. At that time, customers with temporary 4-party service will be upgraded to single-party, private lines.
This project is part of a $3.8 million program to expand and improve telephone service in this area during 1981.

 DEVON DEVELOPMENT, INC.

DON'T HELP REALTOR SELL
 One of the best ways to move your house off the market in a hurry is to keep out of it when it is being shown! You should first tell the Realtor everything he should know about the house, especially unique features, and then let him do the selling.
 If you must be around when the house is being shown, greet the prospect graciously, take the children and the pets and retire.
 This may sound like uncharitable advice but, believe me, it's sound. The Realtor is a skilled negotiator; he has the experience and know-how to bring a buyer to an acceptable price without showing the emotional involvement which could put the seller at a disadvantage.

There are times when personality conflicts between buyer and seller have eliminated bargaining effectiveness and even lost sales. Not often — but it can and has happened. Why take the chance?

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at DEVON DEVELOPMENT, INC., 2904 Sudderth Drive, Box 1880, Ruidoso. Phone: 257-5511. We're here to help!

Anyone can tell you the investment outlook is changing. Paine Webber's free seminar will tell you how.

Technology is soaring. Spending patterns are changing. And inflation is three times higher than 15 years ago. It's an election year. A new decade. And a period of political upheaval and international unrest.

These facts may be familiar. But turning them into a sensible investment strategy is no easy task. Especially in a period where rapid changes are undermining traditional investment formulas.

Paine Webber can help. We're offering a free seminar on the outlook for the 80's—with specific industry and company recommendations. You'll learn how some companies are actually profiting from inflation. And which high technology and energy companies we think show the most promise in the years to come.

We'll also discuss ways to save money with tax sheltered investments. And a broad range of opportunities for high current income.

The seminar will be held on Tuesday, June 23 at 7:30 P.M. at the Public Library. There's no charge for attending. And you can reserve a seat by calling Daniel Worthington at (303) 861-2400.

But do it soon. When pros from Paine Webber take the stage, a lot of investors will be taking up seats.

Join us at our free investment seminar.

Quarks intrigue UNM physicists

Though the cat never returned from his trip down Curiosity Lane, scientists have for centuries used man's basic urge to know as an avenue to discovery and advancement.

Three University of New Mexico (UNM) physicists have let their curiosity lead them to the subnuclear world, a bizarre place in which such mysterious particles as anti-matter and quarks exist under their own set of physical laws.

Christopher Leavitt, Byron Dieterle and David Wolfe, UNM professors of physics and astronomy, have for the past seven years participated with national laboratories and top universities in detailed examinations of nuclear characteristics.

The Department of Energy is so interested in their findings that it has provided $1.3 million to UNM since 1974.

"We're studying nuclear particles held together by forces that aren't completely understood," said Leavitt. "They aren't like gravity or electricity. They don't obey the same rules as those you observe when you look out the window."

"What we're doing, very basically, is taking individual subnuclear particles, shooting them at each other and seeing what happens," Dieterle said. "The equipment used to do this (at Los Alamos National Laboratory and Brookhaven National Laboratory) is extremely large, complex and expensive. It's funny, but you need a very large hammer to smash these very small particles."

One unique facet of the researchers' work is their study of very unstable antiprotons, or anti-matter. "Anti-matter really doesn't exist anywhere in our part of the universe, as the science fiction movies would like us to believe," said Wolfe. "If anti-matter did exist, you'd know it. Things would be exploding all around us."

But anti-matter can be fabricated, if for only an instant, said Leavitt. Anti-matter consists of negatively charged protons that are made by converting energy into matter. The UNM physicists then fire a beam of anti-matter at a proton target, and when the two come into contact they annihilate each other and convert back into energy.

"The whole annihilation takes place in an incredibly small fraction of a second," Dieterle said. "The amount of time it takes is comparable to what one second is to 1,000 times the life of the universe."

While there are numerous theories as to what happens just before and during annihilation, none has been proven. But the UNM work has managed to disprove one of the beliefs, that matter and anti-matter can easily be made to form nearly stable combinations. "These combinations are far more unstable than even we expected," said Dieterle.

In the future, the three physicists are planning to perform detailed experiments on the stability of matter and anti-matter at CERN, a prestigious nuclear laboratory in Geneva, Switzerland.

The practical benefits of such research are spoken of in historical terms. "The electric motor is a fairly simple device," said Leavitt, "and yet years ago such a motor was inconceivable because there was no understanding of the principles of electromagnetism."

"The Greeks thought atoms were indivisible," said Wolfe. "But now we know of protons and neutrons, and we realize that there are even smaller particles known as quarks, which act very strangely, and which we don't understand. Are quarks the smallest existing things? Is there a definitive end to the structure of things? Are we within a lifetime of answering the great questions of nature? A lifetime ago, some people thought we were."

Wolfe further alludes to "technological fallout" produced by pure research. "The space program is a prime example of this," he said. "It was built partly upon cultural demands, upon our need to know what was out there. As a result, in addition to providing us with vast amounts of information, the space program helped launch an age of digital watches and microprocessors. Our work could produce similar results."

One useful device owing itself to nuclear technology is a new meter that measures blood flow with nuclear tracers, adding a new dimension to blood system studies by the medical profession.

"There's really no limit to what our understanding of subnuclear particles can lead to," Leavitt said. "If we gain nothing more than knowledge, at least we've satisfied one of man's basic urges."

BLM seeks advisory council nominations

The United States Bureau of Land Management (BLM) is asking for nominations for persons to serve on any of four district advisory councils in New Mexico. The 10-member councils work with BLM district managers in Socorro, Las Cruces, Roswell and Albuquerque to make recommendations on programs and policies for the management of 13 million acres of public land in the State.

Any individual or organization may make nominations to any BLM district manager. The nominations must include name and address, a biographical sketch and a category identification of the nominee's special interest. To provide balance on the councils, each will include members with particular knowledge in the categories of elected general purpose government (nominee must be a current office holder), renewable resources, nonrenewable resources, recreation, wildlife, transportation, environmental protection and the public-at-large.

Persons selected for the councils will be appointed to a two-year term beginning January 1, 1982. Council members receive no pay for service but are reimbursed for travel expenses to official meetings. Additional information about the work of the advisory councils may be obtained from any BLM office. Nominations for the councils must be received in the district offices before July 15, 1981.

BLM District Offices in the state are: Albuquerque District, Post Office Box 6770, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87107, telephone 765-2455.

Socorro District, Post Office Box 1219, Socorro, New Mexico 87801; telephone 838-0412.

Las Cruces District, Post Office Box 1420, Las Cruces, New Mexico 88001, telephone 523-5571.

Roswell District, Post Office Box 1397, Roswell, New Mexico 88201, telephone 622-7670.

Tourism up at Lincoln

Attendance at Lincoln State Monument for the first five months of 1981 continues ahead of the same period in 1980.

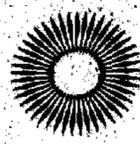

Through May 31, 6,235 have visited the 19th century courthouse museum, compared to 5,986 in 1980.

Visitation in May itself also increased slightly, to 2,390 this year from 2,347 in 1980.

All other state monuments, except one, also show increases for the year: Coronado 16,065, up 175; Fort Sumner 3,065, up 341; Jemez 8,195, up 748; and Quarai 3,167, up 485. Fort Selden is down from 4,710 to 4,383.

The Palace of the Governors museum in Santa Fe, most prominent of the state's historic structures, has had 123,963 visitors this year, 21,847 more than through May, 1980.

SOLAR FACTS

PASSIVE SOLAR COOLING

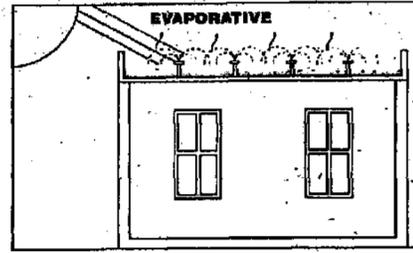

While most people think of passive solar energy as a way to heat a building, it can also be used to cool a building.

Simply stated, passive cooling systems reduce the heat within a building by drawing that heat away to a cooler object. These cooler objects—termed "energy sinks"—are often the air, ground or water.

As with passive heating, passive cooling systems require a minimal amount of mechanical equipment or outside energy sources to operate efficiently. In other words, the design of the building is used to help produce a cooling effect.

Most passive cooling systems are designed to work in one or two basic summertime climates—the hot-and-dry climate or the hot-and-humid climate.

Hot-and-dry summer climates are characterized by relatively high daytime temperatures and cool nights. In hot-and-dry summer climates, passive cooling can be achieved by evaporation, by radiating heat into the cool night sky or by circulating cool night air through the building.

By comparison, hot-and-humid summer climates are characterized by relatively high temperatures at all times. Since there is very little temperature fluctuation during a 24-hour period, and because there is often constant high humidity, other approaches to passive cooling should be considered. Common passive solutions in these climate areas include ground cooling and desiccant cooling (dehumidification). Increased air circulation can also have a cooling effect in these climates.

Passive cooling systems for both basic types of summer climates will be discussed in future columns.

Regardless of the type of passive cooling system used, the first priority should be to minimize unwanted heat-gain through basic conservation methods.

For example, a passive cooling system will be far more effective if a home is properly insulated (caulking, weatherstripping, storm windows, etc.) and efforts have been made to shade the building—especially the glass areas—from the direct rays of the sun. Such shading can be achieved through the use of awnings and shutters and the proper planting of trees and shrubs.

The effectiveness of a passive cooling system can also be enhanced through the proper use of color on the building's exterior surfaces.

For example, a light-colored roof will reflect away unwanted summer heat, yet won't affect the need for heat-gain during the winter, since the sun's path is much lower then and few of its rays will be reflected away from the roof.

Agencies seek reporting of all poisonings

The New Mexico Poison, Drug Information and Medical Crisis Center and the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) are charting the hazards of pesticides for humans.

The study, now entering its final stages, is designed to measure the danger to humans from insecticides, weed killers, rodent poisons and all other poisons used to control unwanted fungi, plants and animals.

William Troutman, director of the poison center at the University of New Mexico, said his agency's information for the study comes from reports volunteered by citizens who call the center's 24-hour crisis and information telephone service.

Annually, the center receives reports of almost 13,000 poison cases statewide. In 1980, 512 cases involved pesticides. Troutman estimated these figures represent only half the cases involved pesticides. Troutman estimated these figures represent only half the cases that actually occur, based on national trends for areas with similar population.

Troutman urged all residents to report suspected poisonings of any kind, even if the victim appears to be in no danger. People who call in reports receive qualified medical advice about how to handle poisonings, and in the process contribute data that will improve the accuracy of the EPA study.

Statistics on pesticide poisonings are forwarded to the EPA through Texas Tech University, which is also participating in the study, Troutman said. The New Mexico Department of Agriculture will also receive copies.

The New Mexico Poison, Drug Information and Medical Crisis Center can be reached toll-free from anywhere outside Albuquerque by dialing 1-800-432-8866. Albuquerque area residents can call 843-2551.

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Some readers express themselves very pitifully.

A former legislator, who took himself out of contention for re-election last year, had something sharp to say about this column's proposal on how to divide the state into three Congressional districts:

"Dear Fred: Your plan just won't work. It's too simple, too logical and too fair to the majority of the people."

"You of all people should know by now that a bill like that just won't fly."

"Best regards."

How many of that 25-person group named by the Republican state chairman to help plan for success in the 1982 elections are Hispanic?

Less than a quarter. Is that smart?

Maybe that's in proportion to the number of Hispanics now in the Republican party in New Mexico, but it certainly isn't proportionate to their strength in the state.

That kind of treatment may help to explain why so few of them now enlist under the banners of the GOP.

Choice of State Senator Mike Alarid of Albuquerque as Aubrey Dunn's treasurer for his gubernatorial campaign is an action just opposite to that commented on above.

Dunn knows he will have to develop strength in the Spanish-speaking North, where he is not universally loved, if he is to win Democratic nomination — especially in a race which includes Fabian Chavez and Toney Anaya.

Making the first member of his campaign staff to be announced a Hispanic was therefore a graceful gesture.

Mike will not only make a good (and dependable) treasurer, but he is also an effective campaigner. If he had not been paired with Fabian when he ran for lieutenant governor in what some bigots saw as a "taco ticket," he would have gone into statewide elective office on his own.

One legislative committee has a good question:

Does the Legislative Council Service work for the legislators, or do they work for it?

The query came up when busy members of the important Legislative Criminal Justice Study Committee decided they would like to meet monthly on a Friday and a Saturday.

Clay Buchanan, head man at the Council Service, apparently told them if they met on Saturdays they would meet without any of the staffing his office was created to provide.

The committee voted to go ahead with its plans trusting to time to provide the wisdom which will modify Buchanan's judgment on the matter.

Governor King's weekly schedule, as distributed to news people, sometimes includes what is listed as a "personal holiday."

Nobody begrudges him those.

But if information reaching here is correct, he spent one such "holiday" last week actually conferring with District Attorney Eloy Martinez and his scheduler, Tom Florina, encouraging more and faster action on those court cases rising out of the penitentiary riot.

Nobody wants excessive speed, which could lead to injustice; but the Governor reportedly wants to see something happening.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

The response of New Mexicans to the President's Program for Economic Recovery and my work on the Budget Committee to implement these goals has been both rewarding and overwhelming. I've had more information and feedback from my constituents than I've ever had, information that helps me serve you better in New Mexico and make the tough decisions that have to be made over the next several months.

All of the talk today about apathy in America toward the political and legislative process, as evidenced by the mail I have received and the people I have talked to in New Mexico, is simply not true. Thousands have written to me, expressing their interest in pending legislation and how it affects their lives. Their opinions are important to me because they have taken the time and made the effort to write them down. Our New Mexico mail, which still makes up the bulk of our correspondence, has tripled, and our out-of-state mail, which was nearly non-existent before the changeover, has itself quadrupled, yet we have the same size staff.

While I am grateful for the wealth of information provided by these letters, replying to each of them and answering specific questions takes time. Some of you may not receive as prompt a reply as you have in the past, so I'd like to tell you a little about how we handle your letters.

First, let's start with a few figures on how our output of mail has increased since January. In January, we mailed out approximately 900 responses, and average load for this office last year. In February, this number jumped to 1,500, rose again in March to 2,400 responses, and went to 3,700 in April. This trend shows every sign it will continue. In the two week interval between May 20 and June 3, the office mailed out more than 4,500 responses. More than one-third of this correspondence dealt strictly with budgetary matters, with the rest falling into the wide classifications of immigration, foreign relations, health care, and education.

Our mail can be placed into three major categories. First, the bulk of our mail is the result of a write-in campaign, such as form letters, or petitions with a list of names of people who support the opinions expressed. These I will answer with one formalized reply in a letter sent out to each of these constituents. It's the only way I can express my views to the large number of constituents who send the same letter and want a forthright and firm opinion of the issue from me.

The next type of letter is the referral or request-for-information letter. These have also increased dramatically since I assumed the Budget Committee chairmanship. Whenever we receive a request for detailed information which cannot be answered by me or a legislative assistant in my office who is an expert in the area, we send a letter to the legislative liaison of the federal department or agency involved. Each has a specialist who can research and answer these difficult questions for us. We inform the constituent by letter when we have referred each request to an agency and then send an answer out when we receive the information, generally within 30 days.

The third type of letter is the personal letter, in which a New Mexican asks specific questions or states an opinion on how a particular piece of legislation will affect his or her life. These deserve a personal reply and may take a little more time, since they require research work from my staff so that I can have the information available to give a thoughtful and complete reply.

Our work on the President's Program for Economic Recovery is still in full swing and will be going on for several more months. I sincerely appreciate all of the letters you have written and the opinions you have expressed on a wide range of critical issues. While I would like to reply to each one of these letters immediately, I also know that it is even more important to you to have the most current and accurate information available in Washington when I draft a reply. I am doing everything I can to ensure that you are properly represented and kept up to date on the legislative issues that affect you in New Mexico.

editorial

The News owes an apology to its readers for the story "Australian official visits Lincoln County" that appeared on Monday, June 15's front page. The person referred to in the story as "Peter Nixon, Minister of Agriculture of Australia" was a professional speaker-comedian hired by Ruidoso State Bank to speak at the bank's annual barbecue in Capitan.

The News' reporter who spoke to "Nixon" did not cover his talk to the attendees at the barbecue. Rather, the reporter spoke to the man before the barbecue. "Nixon" maintained his impersonation of the "minister of agriculture of Australia" throughout the interview with the News' reporter.

The reporter had gone to Capitan to cover "Nixon's" appearance at the invitation, nearly a month earlier, of Robert Hays, president of Ruidoso State Bank.

At the time that Mr. Hays asked for coverage of the "Nixon" visit, he was told that The News would certainly take the opportunity to cover the visit of such a dignitary.

At no time before publication of the story in Monday's paper was The News told that "Nixon" was anything other than as presented. The News' reporter went to Capitan Saturday evening, took the front page picture of "Nixon" and Hays, talked for a few minutes with "Nixon," and left to attend to other commitments. If not for those other commitments, the reporter would have stayed, heard "Nixon's" punch line, and reported the story accurately. As it was, The News' reporter never heard the punch line, and our readers were misinformed.

Our stock in trade is accuracy. Our constant effort is accuracy. When an inaccuracy is reported, our future believability is damaged. Because we were the butt of a good joke, a poor joke was played on our readers. We apologize. — kg

QUACKERS TO RUN

Sometime this summer ... could be in August ... down Deming way ... there'll again be "The World's Richest Duck Race" ... with just a whole buncha folks duckin' the issue as to who's responsible for all the quacking tales as don't emanate from the tails of the quackers ... 'cause quackers don't carry no tales, no matter how often they flap their bills.

Now the thing about this upcoming race ... for the waddling set ... is that folks in these here parts ... as has some outstanding quackers in their ponds ... should oughta get into the swim of things and start training their hardest waterfowl ... for this webfooted dash ... 'cause it'd sure be a feather in someone's cap ... possibly even out of the duck's tail ... for someone living right here in, or near, Harmony Valley, to come up with the winner of the "World's Richest Duck Race."

Maybe the thing to do would be to sneak down to Deming and idly inquire as to the track specifications ... you know, sneaky like ... come back ... build a track just like the ducks use for trackin' down the pike when they're racing in Deming ... and start getting your quacker in shape ... though you'll probably have to put up with a lot of squawking protestations from your duck ... who'd probably choose to duck the whose issue ... assuming any choice was offered your fleet of foot feathered friend.

As to entering the queen contest ... if'n you have a likly prospect ... you might approach her on becoming "Miss Duck" ... from a safe enough distance so you can duck.

Back to this racing quacker ... if'n you get your entry in shape ... possibly through running its legs off in practice heats ... and possibly even a by a little judicious plucking of excess feathers ... from the inside ... so's this lightening process won't be noticeable ... you can come up with a racing entry that'll leave all the other quackers quacking in dismay as they watch the winner's tail feathers cross the finish line.

Just thought I'd put a bug in your ear about getting a racing duck in shape to becoming the champion in Deming ... with your problem being how to put a bug in your quacker's tail feathers without discombobulating him.

SHAKEY'S FLABBERGASTED

The other day ... as the cool of the evening was approaching to dissipate the heat of the day ... the thing to do seemed to be to have a refreshing glass of ice tea ... just to soothe nerves frayed by a hectic day.

As I entered the dispensary ... completely engrossed in the thought of the cooling refreshment I'd soon be quaffing ... it took just a moment to comprehend what was disturbing this train of thought ... but only a moment ... 'cause there, comfortably ensconced at a table, was none other than Shakey Pete ... waving his arms wildly in my direction ... issuing a summons of sorts ... that he indeed desired to converse with me ... in fact, so earnestly did he desire to converse that he was waving one hand at me ... and the other towards the lassie waiting on tables, to fetch for me a brimming glass of ice tea ... literally swimming in chunks of ice.

Shakey didn't even wait until I'd savored the first sip until he gave full vent to his enthusiasm ... 'cause he was really with it ... so far as this new law of the land that'll let juveniles enjoy the adult privileges of getting their names into print when they've pulled a no-no.

"I think this business of printing kid's names as gets into trouble is the best thing that's happened to this country since FDR," Shakey said. "Why, them troublemakers has been getting by with more things than my old tom cat ... and feeling just as smug." Now that was quite a mouthful for Shakey ... and to unparch his throat, he took a big sip of his ice tea.

"Way I see it ... if'n these smart young whippersnappers as gets picked up by the cops ... for possessing and drinkin' booze ... or mugging old ladies ... or breaking windows ... or smoking pot ... or such other carrying on ... like getting their sickly gloms on property as ain't theirs ... gets their names in the paper ... it'd give them more recognition than they're looking for ... and, you know, it just might stop some of this foolishness ... 'cause, if'n they wanna act like adults ... they might as well get their names printed ... so's they can brag about being somebody."

BRIEF BIT: When it's 114 above, a man yearns to rob a bank, bury the loot in Alaska's permafrost, and enjoy living off his frozen assets ... CD.

Sis Asmussen enjoys training race horses

BY MARK GORDON

Even in a race track environment, Sis Asmussen terms being a woman an asset and not a liability.

"I've never had any trouble with men looking down at me," said the 38-year-old trainer at Ruidoso Downs. "I feel like I've had more respect than men get because I am a woman. Men have always extended me courtesies they wouldn't give to other men."

"I have kind of gained their respect. At entry time, lots of men will let me get ahead of them in line. In Texas, you have to handle your horse at the gate. You do everything, I don't think a woman should hold a license unless she's capable."

Therein is one of the biggest obstacles she has had to overcome — gaining a trainer's license. The "problem" is that her husband Keith is a jockey.

Except for New Mexico, Texas and Colorado, a woman can not hold a trainer's license while her husband has a jockey license at the same track. New Mexico only allowed that combination as of seven years ago.

That's when Sis first obtained her New Mexico trainer's license. She'd been a horse trainer for 13 years in Texas. While she could not be licensed in New Mexico during that time as a trainer, she had an assistant trainer's license until the New Mexico regulations were altered.

Now that she has a trainer's license, she's making the most of her opportunity. She supervises a 27 horse stable, including eight thoroughbreds.

While injuries, soreness and generally adverse luck limited her to just five triumphs at Ruidoso Downs in 1980; she has already surpassed that figure after the opening six weeks of the current meet.

Fourth in the trainer standings after 19 race days, she has trained nine winners, four seconds and five thirds from 38 attempts. That's a fine winning percentage of .250.

"So much of doing better is luck," she said. "We didn't run our stable much in Texas before we came here. They're fresh and that helps."

Although Keith rides the majority of her stock, if he doesn't fit one of her horses, there's no animosity between the two. In fact, Keith generally is the one to suggest Sis find another rider.

"Keith is a better judge of whether he fits a horse than I am. He's ridden since he was 11 years old. He's the first one to take off a horse if he thinks someone else would do better," she said. "His judgment is so much better than mine."

"There's lots of times he can't ride because of injuries. That's when I miss him the most. This is the first time in four years he's been able to ride. He's even won on some of my thoroughbreds."

The Asmussens, who have been married 20 years, have known each other since childhood. Sis lived next door to Keith's cousins in Mobridge, South Dakota. Keith, originally from Pierre, South Dakota, and Sis were married at Agar, South Dakota, while Keith was riding at Park Jefferson in Jefferson, South Dakota.

Keith quit riding for a while and trained horses. He was the leading trainer during the fall quarter horse meet at Centennial Race Track near Denver from 1965-67. Then he resumed riding.

Although Sis and Keith are famous in their own right in the Southwest, there's little doubt that their son, Cash, is the most renowned of the Asmussens.

While he began his riding career in the Southwest, Cash is now a premier rider at New York tracks such as Aqueduct, Belmont Park and Saratoga. Those New York Racing Association operations are generally regarded as one of, if not the, toughest circuits in the country.

The 19-year-old riding standout recently snapped a slump when he guided Wayward Lass to victory in the $111,200 Mother Goose Stakes at Belmont Park. He had gone almost six weeks without winning a stakes race.

"He called us a few days ago and said 'Mom, I've never done this badly. My check for the last two weeks was only $9,000,' she said. "But seriously, I'm pleased with his success because that's what he wants to do."

"I stayed with him a few weeks in New York and they all like him. He treats everybody with respect. Even the trainers that don't ride him like him," she said. "It would have been very selfish to keep him here in New Mexico just so we could be with him. There's no better stallman or worker than Cash."

"He used to call because he wanted to know how things were. Now he calls out of respect for his parents. He loves Ruidoso Downs. He says he'll come and stay a week later this summer. Last year, he came here and stayed four or five days."

Son Steven, 15, may be following in Cash's footsteps. He helps around the barn and may obtain his jockey license when he turns 18.

The Asmussens, meanwhile follow a general pattern with their horses. They live on a 55 acre ranch near Laredo, Texas, and occasionally run their horses at such Texas non-proprietary tracks as Columbus Race Course in Columbus, Valverde County Fair in Weatherford, La Bahia Downs in Goliad, L.I.F.E. Downs in Laredo and G. Rollie White Downs in Brady.

Then, in early March, they head for El Paso and Sunland Park. Their goals are the major quarter horse futurities and the Riley Allison Thoroughbred Futurity.

In the summer, they race at Ruidoso Downs, where they've owned a home for 13 years.

This summer, however, is starting a little differently, with so much success.

"We just hope it continues. In horse racing, you just never know what will happen," she said.

Managing horse sales is Lewis' challenge

BY MARK GORDON
Bobby Lewis loves a challenge. After a 20 year career working in official racing capacity at numerous race tracks, he opted for a different job at Ruidoso Downs and Sunland Park.

"It was a good opportunity and I wanted to try it. The All-American Sale is a challenge to see what you can do with it," said Lewis, in his first year as Director of Horse Sales for Ruidoso-Sunland, Incorporated.

Lewis will get his first opportunity to run a sale on July 31. That's the night of the Ruidoso-Sunland Select Thoroughbred Yearling Sale at the All-American Sale Arena. The sale, beginning at 7 p.m., will offer about 100 thoroughbreds.

It's the first straight thoroughbred yearling sale in Ruidoso Downs history.

His greatest challenge will come August 31 through September 3 when the Ruidoso-Sunland All-American Quarter Horse Yearling Sale is held in the All-American Sale Arena. With more than 900 quarter horses offered for sale, it's the country's biggest and most prestigious sale.

"I basically have been getting ready for the sales," said the 47-year-old veteran racing official. "I've hired people for it, been involved with cataloging the horses and overseeing the entire sale."

"It's a challenge to me to operate something like this. I'm trying to manage the millions of dollars involved in this and the best quarter horse yearlings in the world."

"It's quite a competitive business. Other sales around the country also want to be the best."

Besides running the sales operations, Lewis also assists Ruidoso Downs in other areas.

"He's (Lewis) valuable as an expediter and overseer in several different departments including racing," said Finlay MacGillivray, Ruidoso-Sunland general manager.

Although Lewis has worked for tracks from California to Ohio, he has a special feeling for Ruidoso Downs.

"Being at Ruidoso Downs ever since I was 15 years old is something special. I've seen horses and their offsprings run here. Since I've come here as a kid, I've seen Ruidoso Downs group by leaps and bounds," he said.

"I'm happy to be a part of it. Ruidoso Downs has been awfully good to me for so long. It's been my living off and on for 30 years. It's a place where I've always been real happy to be."

Lewis began his lengthy racing career galloping and grooming horses at Ruidoso Downs in the early 1950s. He also was an assistant starter on the Arizona fair circuit. During those winters, he worked in Arizona at the Fair Grounds and Turf Paradise in Phoenix. He spent some time as a starter and clerk of scales on the County Fair circuit in Arizona.

In the early 1960s he trained horses at Tucson and at Los Alamitos near Los Angeles, worked as a jockey agent and spent a year managing a non-pari-mutuel quarter horse track in Bandera, Texas.

In the early 1970s, he worked as an assistant starter at Florida Downs and helped maintain the racing surface. He worked at Keeneland in Lexington, Kentucky, River Downs in Cincinnati and Sportsman's Park near Chicago.

Lewis trained a world champion quarter horse stallion, Junior Meyers, who was owned by the Simon brothers of Colwick, Kansas.

In 1972, he worked at Rillito in Tucson as a stallman and track superintendent before working at Sunland Park as a paddock judge. He also served two years as a steward at Sunland Park and Ruidoso Downs.

At the New Mexico State Fair Race Meet in Albuquerque, he was the jockey room custodian and assistant steward. He has also worked as a jockey agent at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Arkansas.

"Finally in November of 1980, Finlay asked if I'd like to run the horse sales," Lewis said. "I'd never done anything like that. It's quite a bit different. I hope I've adjusted to it."

"This is my first sales and I'm really looking forward to it. To be involved with something as big as this, is really special."

Jockey/Trainer of the week

BY MARK GORDON
Leroy Coombs and Gerald Marr both zoomed into second place in their respective standings after the sixth week of racing at Ruidoso Downs.

Coombs advanced into the runnerup position in the jockey standings with a four-win week. Marr, meanwhile, tallied two victories to move into the place spot in the trainer standings.

Coombs also had one second and two thirds over the weekend. His winning percentage is .152 on 14 wins from 92 mounts.

Jackie Martin remains the jockey leader with 24 triumphs from 96 mounts for a winning percentage of .250.

Other top ten riders include Stuart Dolphus, Willie Lovell, Richard Bickel, apprentice Billy Byers, Wayne Buehrer, Robert Chesson, James Lackey and Henry Uriegas.

Marr has 11 wins from 50 mounts for a .220 winning percentage. He also has six seconds and three thirds.

The training leader remains William F. Leach. He saddled three winners over the weekend for a total of 18 wins, eight seconds and five thirds from 74 mounts. His winning percentage is .216.

Other top ten trainers include Billy Hughes, Marilyn Amussen, Harold E. Nolen, Johnie Goodman, J. C. Wiley, Jack Dube, Jack Brooks and Dwayne Glibreath.

This weekend trial races dominate the Thursday and Friday programs.

Thursday, three trial races for the Norgor Derby will be presented. Each trial race has an $1,800 purse and is at six furlongs for three-year-old thoroughbreds.

The estimated purse for the Norgor Derby, set for June 27, is $30,000.

Friday's highlights include trial races for the Rainbow Derby, the second leg of the Triple Crown for three-year-old quarter horses. The trial races will be at 440 yards. The Rainbow Derby carries an estimated purse of $575,000 and will be run July 3.

Saturday's feature will be the Lincoln County Claiming Stakes at seven furlongs, designed for three-year-old and older runners, it carries a purse of $5,000-added.

Sunday's main event will be the Aspen Stakes, for three-year-olds at six furlongs. The purse will be $6,500-added.

Post time for each day's program will be 1 p.m.

Ruidoso Downs Hoofbeats

BY MARK GORDON
FESTOS, one of the finest horses ever to compete in the southwest, died Saturday of an aneurysm of a kidney. Trainer Cliff Lambert said Festos was in Santa Fe on Tuesday and wasn't feeling well. He was taken to Ruidoso Downs on Wednesday, on Thursday his back became paralyzed and he died on Saturday. "He had a good temperament. He couldn't run on all tracks, but when the track suited him, he was a toughie. He was getting older, but I think he was getting better." Festos was named Sunland Park's horse-of-the-meet for the recent spring season. He roared to a seven length win on February 22 in the Cabin Fleur Handicap at one mile, setting a season's best time of 1:36 2-5. On March 8, he zipped to a seven and one half length triumph in the El Paso Times Stakes, clocking a 1:15 2-5, also a seasonal best handicap horse and best router. In the fall Sunland meet, Festos won the Don Lewis Memorial Handicap at six furlongs and the Mount Cristo Rey Handicap at one mile. Festos also won the 1979 Jockey Club Stakes at seven furlongs at Ruidoso Downs.

JOCKEY MANUEL TOQUINTO was admitted to a local hospital for observation after an accident during Sunday's fourth race. Toquinto, who was aboard J. R.'s Loom during the four furlong dash for maiden two-year-olds, fell from his mount in the back stretch. A hospital spokesman said early X-rays indicated no apparent fractures nor serious injuries.

FAVORITES MAY HAVE set a record at Ruidoso Downs on Sunday when the first 10 choices posted victories. Winning favorites consisted of Kanu Disko ($4.80), War Sea ($3.40), Easy Dawnajo ($3.40), Nukidintown ($8.00), Pierre The Trus ($3.40), Finnegan's Farmer ($5.60), Dublin The Green ($4.40), The Heat Is On ($3.40), Lumberly Smashed ($2.60) and Native Gambler ($4.40). The favorites in the 11th and 12th races ran out-of-the-money.

TWO HORSES FINALLY reached the winner's circle after numerous attempts during Thursday's races. Victorious Bow, who talked a nose win in the seventh race, posted his first triumph since winning an allowance chase at Sunland Park on February 11, 1979. He was winless in six attempts last year and had gone 12 races this year without having his picture taken. He is owned and trained by R. Frank Thompson and was ridden by Angel Jacobo. In the eighth race, Dinos Baby posted his first lifetime victory after 16 unsuccessful efforts. The three-year-old filly is owned by Melvin G. Riggs, trained by J. Michael Welch and was ridden by Kevin Scholl.

JIMMIE HUNT RODE three winners on Friday's card. He scored with Hey Me Again and Feature Man for Trainer Carl Draper and then won the twelfth race for trainer Johnie A. Goodman aboard Duhon, a $5.80 favorite.

DANDY BINGE SET a seasonal fastest time with his 1:28 2-5 clocking in winning the $7,250 Sierra Blanca Handicap. His reading for the seven furlongs was off the track record of 1:24 3-5 set by Countess Blade on August 7, 1977. Ridden expertly by veteran Larry Byers, the five-year-old horse led throughout in scoring a one length triumph over Double B. Express. It was Dandy Binge's second win of the season and his third this year. He's trained by Billy H. Hill.

FRIDAY'S EIGHTH RACE honored Denny Lujan for his courageous outlook on life. Denny is the son of Richard Lujan, a jockey killed in a riding mishap at Ruidoso Downs about 20 years ago. Denny is a former Ruidoso Downs racing official who underwent a heart transplant last fall at Tucson, Arizona. There have been various benefits by horsemen's and horsewomen's organizations both here in New Mexico and other areas around the country to help pay for the medical expenses. Lujan, who was present in the winner's circle, received a tremendous round of applause after track announcer Bob Dudich described his attitude and the progress he has made since his operation.

RUIDOSO'S REMARKABLE business continued over the weekend as the four day total amounted to $1,817,930 — nearly a half million dollar gain over the same four day weekend a year ago. Saturday's handle of $616,657 was up 42.3 percent and Sunday's handle of $508,772 showed a remarkable 48.8 percent gain. The betting per race average. Both Saturday and Sunday, was over $50,000. The current daily wagering average (after 21 days) is a sparkling $438,056, up 19.5 percent over the $368,568 at this point a year ago. A total of 15,486 patrons attended the races over the weekend. That's a gain of 8.41 percent.

ONE UNIDENTIFIED woman from Lubbock, Texas, swept the entire Big Q pot on Thursday. She collected $20,177 for having the only valid exchange ticket. The eleventh race horses were Rockthora, who paid $8.60 to win as the second favorite and Soonerman, a 6-1 outsider. The twelfth race winners were Finale Queen, who paid $88.40 to win as the longest priced horse of the ten entrants and Skotempaw, a 29.30-1 outsider. The highest Big Q in recent Ruidoso Downs' history was a $29,906 on June 8, 1980. The winning horses included Just One Wink and Scatija Buck in the first half and Frosty Jimmer and Efficient in the final race.

IN STEWARDS' RULINGS:
 — Trainers Gary B. Black, Ronnie C. Ferguson, Walter L. Harris, Reginald R. Stone, Terry A. Walker and Paul L. Walters were each fined $50 for entering a horse without an owners' license being registered with the New Mexico State Racing Commission.

— Trainer H. C. Werner Jr., was fined $50 for failure to have a horse okayed from the starting gate, necessitating a program scratch.

— Trainer Ira N. Haddock and Sheryl S. May were each fined $50 for being late to the paddock, necessitating a late scratch.

— Trainers Jimmie D. Claridge, Sheryl S. May and Thomas A. Riley were each fined $25 for failure to sign the test card.

— Trainer Johnny G. Bustamante was fined $25 for slapping a horse away from the starting gate.

BLUE GAZI, who won Saturday's seventh race by one and one half lengths, and Sunday's Night, who tallied a six length win in the eighth race, each raced to a 1:09 1-5 reading for the five and one half furlongs. The times were just 2-5ths off the seasonal best time of 1:08 2-5 set by Glover D.

This horse owner would make movie material

BY DICK ALWAN
 Gary Benton of Lubbock, Texas, is one of those track types they like to make implausible TV movies about.

There's just too much crammed into his up-and-down career as a "horse-owner and full-time gambler." The storyline is too pat, overloaded with drama, suspense and big money.

Who would believe this stuff about picking out a yearling for only $5,500, then winning the $1,431,850 All-American Derby at Ruidoso Downs? But Benton's horse had to take his lumps — he conks out as a two-year-old, earns zero, has to climb on the operating table to get a knee repaired, then finally wins the All-American Derby.

The camera moves in for a close-up and we have Benton say, with all the cool savvy of the rock-hard gambler who's never lost faith: "It was a long wait. They really tested me."

But that's only part of a string of impossibilities which beg to be thrown on the cutting room floor. Try this one: for 17 years, Benton works in the contracting business in Lubbock. For 10 years, he owns and manages an outfit called Exterior Designers, which specializes in home remodeling.

Finally, Benton has enough — and decides to follow his instincts. He hands the remodeling business to his brother, and becomes a horse owner and gambler. So where does the money come from to fund this enterprise? Only God — and Benton — know for sure. He shrugs in that taut way of his, peers at you through a craggy smile, and says: "I'm a scumbag and I know how to make money."

With this out of the way, the interview between this reporter and Benton continues, with Benton talking almost too fast for notes to be taken. A colleague of this writer — having bet a little too much and tosses down a few too many — cuts into the discussion: "Say, where's that twenty you said you'd lend me?"

My response: "Wait until I'm finished, I'm doing an interview." My pal shoots back: "Look, I need that 20 right now."

Without skipping a word in an ongoing monologue, Benton — almost automatically — reaches into his pocket, withdraws a chunk of lettuce, and hands a $100 bill to the fellow in need.

Benton continues: "In 1976, I took the profits from the remodeling business and went into horse racing. In about four years, I'd dumped off a quarter-million dollars on thoroughbreds. At one time, I had 25 of them, running all over the country — Hialeah, The Fairgrounds, Hot Springs, Omaha, Louisiana Downs, Los Angeles, Ruidoso, Sunland Park . . ."

"I had a few good ones, like Due Flight and Sir James. But most were cheap thoroughbreds. It took me four years and a quarter million dollars to make the transition from a customer to an owner."

He began seeing the light at the end of the tunnel when he noticed what trainer

Johnny Goodman was doing with quarter horses. "Here was Goodman beating $100,000 horses with stock he'd picked up for $1,500. I said to myself: 'Wait a second, I'd better get with this kind of talent.'"

Another item: Benton was at Del Rio, Texas, one afternoon when Goodman's jockey, Billy Hunt, won 13 races on a 15 race card. That did it. Benton began unloading his thoroughbreds, signed up Goodman as his trainer, and got into the quarter horse business. "I was happy to get rid of those thoroughbreds, and I had my first peace of mind in four years," he said.

One of his first quarter horses was Some Kinds Hustler. With Goodman pulling the strings, Some Kinds Hustler won seven straight. "Johnny moved him from a $5,500 claimer to an allowance horse," Benton said. "He also won the Blue Bonnet Stakes at Manor Downs in Austin, and set a track record of 17.73 for 350 yards. That's when I thought: 'Hey, we've got something working.'"

Later, it was over to the All-American Yearling Sale at Ruidoso, where, at three o'clock in the morning, Goodman inspected the colt, Native Gambler. He was big, rangy, thoroughbred-looking. And his breeding, as Benton now likes to assess, "had to be pure fire." So Benton asked Goodman: "How much do you think it'll cost to get him?" Goodman responded: "About $15,000."

When Native Gambler came out of his corner like Joe Louis answering the dinner bell. The colt was such a flash that he quickly prompted a $100,000 bid from trainer Bubba Casco. Goodman told Benton: "We'll win the All-American Futurity with this colt." So Benton thanked Casco for his offer, and said: "We'll pass and play the band."

But bad racing luck, tardy get aways from the starting gate, and a chip in one knee, devastated Native Gambler's two-year-old career. "Here we were offered $100,000 for this horse, and all he winds up making as a two-year-old was $3,500," Benton now laughs. "We were ready for the suicide squad."

Finally, success: That came last year when Native Gambler, as a three-year-old, won the All-American Derby and handed Benton a check for $521,926.

Between his two and three-year-old seasons, Native Gambler had a chip removed from one knee, and following the All-American Derby, he was back in surgery to remove chips from both knees (again), and a chip from one ankle.

I-n-s-i-d-e the Outdoors

by Gary Dollahan

This time of year, with the warming days and the coolish nights, always makes me think of a song country singer Charlie Pride made popular several years ago called, "The Snakes Crawl at Night." While his song actually refers to a different type of "snake," it does apply rather well to the creepy crawlin' reptiles that are often seen squirming across the highways at night.

As a general rule, snakes are beneficial creatures that destroy rodents and other harmful animals. However, there are some snakes that should be avoided when possible.

These snakes are members of the family Viperidae and are the pit vipers; some of which are better known as rattlesnakes. Pit vipers are members of the Subfamily Crotalinae and are related to the Old World vipers. This group has the most highly developed venom injection mechanism among snakes. Large, hollow, moveable fangs are located at the front of the upper jaw. When biting, these snakes swing their fangs forward from their folded position of rest, and the victim is stabbed and poisoned in a single rapid thrust.

The pit vipers get their name from a structure known as the "loreal pit." This is a temperature-sensitive structure found on each side of the face between the eye and the nostril which is used to sense the location of prey.

Some 30 species of rattlesnakes are found in the Western Hemisphere ranging from southern Canada to northern Argentina. However, they are the most common in the southwestern United States and northern Mexico. Twelve species are found in the western United States, but only two species are commonly found in southeastern New Mexico. These are the western diamondback and the prairie rattlesnake.

The prairie rattlesnake is actually a subspecies of the western rattlesnake. Its back is usually greenish in color with well defined brown blotches. A light stripe behind the eye extends beyond the corner of the mouth, and the tail has dark and light rings that do not contrast much with the body color.

The western diamondback is the largest western rattler. Its upper side is gray, brown, or pink with brown diamond or hexagonal blotches on the back and fainter smaller blotches on the sides.

However, this is not always true as some diamondbacks have indefinite markings that give the snake an overall speckled or dusty appearance. Diamondback tails are set off from the rest of the body by broad black and white rings. Because of this, they're sometimes called the "blacktail" rattler.

Rattlesnakes live in a variety of habitats and are found from sea level to elevations of more than 11,000 feet.

They are typically heavy bodied, dangerously venomous snakes with slender necks, broad triangular heads, and keeled scales.

The rattle, a series of loosely interlocking horny segments at the end of the tail, is not found in any other snakes. A segment is added to the base of the rattle each time the snake sheds its skin. A young snake may add three or four segments a year, but an old snake adds only one or perhaps none.

As a number of you are already aware from personal experiences, rattlers are often heard before they are seen. When abruptly disturbed or alarmed, they make a sound resembling a sudden burst of steam.

However, a snake that is only slightly disturbed may simply click its rattler.

If you hear a rattler, the best thing you can do is stand still until you locate it. Avoid jumping or running blindly.

If you kill one, or find one dead, be careful. People have been bitten by reflex action in the jaws of a supposedly dead rattler.

Also, avoid handling dead rattlesnakes as their venom may enter cuts or breaks in the skin and cause poisoning.

Be sure and familiarize all of your family members with rattlesnakes. Don't become careless when engaging in outdoor activities where rattlesnakes can occur.

Generally, rattlers are shy creatures that would prefer to rest undisturbed should you pass their way. However, once a rattler is disturbed, particularly the western diamondback, it will hold its ground and boldly defend itself.

A rattlesnake that detects you first can be an extremely unerving experience that can certainly spoil a day's outing.

YOU HAVE TO BE in the right place at the right time to catch an inquisitive squirrel in a quiet moment.

BY MARK GORDON
Jack Dube has experienced both ends of the financial spectrum in the livestock business.
"After I quit riding in 1966, I went into the cattle business," said the Giddings, Texas, horseman. "I went broke after nine years."
Then, in 1975, he started training horses. And success has followed him ever since.
Last year, he was listed among the top 20 trainers on pari-mutuel tracks in money earned with $230,000. In 1979, he was the leading trainer in the country on non-pari-mutuel tracks in races won and second in the nation in money earned.

That's why it's really no surprise the 38-year-old conditioner is off to a swift start at Ruidoso Downs. He was the leading trainer at the mountain track after three weeks. Through the month of May, he was third in the trainer standings with seven wins, four seconds and three thirds in 27 mounts.

"It's always a surprise when you lead the standings for a while," he said. "It feels good to be there, but I don't expect to be in the standings all season."

"I've basically got two-year-olds. It's hard to stay in the standings since after the futurities, it's hard to get two-year-olds in races. I only have four or five three-year-olds."

Dube has 24 horses under his care. All but one (Nezat) is a quarter horse. Nevertheless, his biggest success has been bringing fit quarter horses to Ruidoso Downs.

The majority of such Texas tracks as Columbus, Val Verde or La Bahia Downs in Goliad.

"My colts are good and broke. They're well schooled and that's what it takes," he said. "I gallop nearly all my runners. I broke 43 two-year-olds this winter and came up with seven or eight really nice colts."

"I just run them enough, in Texas to get them ready for Ruidoso. I just like quarter horses, although I used to ride thoroughbreds on Oklahoma and Texas tracks. I like to take a shot at the big money."

There's more money with quarter horses than thoroughbreds.

Dube was quite successful in the recent Kansas Futurity trials. He saddled five winners (Easy Diamond Jim, Texas Viking, My Viking Lady, Kid Natural and Tanya Gay Bailey) to wins.

Of the five, My Viking Lady and Texas Viking earned first consolation berths (Texas Viking ran second) and Easy Diamond Jim landed a second consolation position.

Dube praised Jackie Martin, who rode all seven of his winners.

"Lots of the credit must go to him. He's always been over here in the mornings. He'll take them over (to the track) when I don't take them. He knows the horses pretty well," he said.

Perhaps, Dube's most dependable runner is Charge It Papa, who finished third in last season's $1,22,789 All-American Derby at Ruidoso Downs.

Overall, the four-year-old Roma Charge runner won five of seven tests in 1980 with one third for earnings of $151,265 for owner James Keng of Giddings, Texas.

Another factor in Dube's surge in the standings has been the quality of the Ruidoso Downs' racing surface.

"The track is better than it's ever been," said Duke, in his third year of training at Ruidoso Downs. "It's even across. I've won two or three from the one hole and some from the outside. It's real even."

Duke, who is assisted in the barn each day by wife Peggy and daughter, Tammy, 12, is realistic about his chances of staying in the standings.

"It would be super, but I really don't expect to because lots of other trainers have more horses and more thoroughbreds."

"I brought some good colts and have some really good owners. That's what you've got to have to do well," he said.

Urban falcon may live on NMSU building

BY ROBERT COUGHLIN
NMSU Agricultural Information
Aspen is an urban falcon, but is being gently urged to return to the wild. If things go as planned, the falcon will adopt the roof of New Mexico State University's (NMSU) new Agriculture Building as home base.
Aspen is a female prairie falcon. She's just over a foot tall standing on a man's wrist and her back feathers are the color of hand-rubbed walnut. The feathers on her chest are the color of cream with a few drops of coffee added.

Falcons are a separate species among the birds of prey. The prairie falcon is a desert cousin of the peregrine falcon, long known for its speed and hunting ability.

Aspen's two best human friends are Paul Colo and Lonnie Bailes, wildlife science students at NMSU. Colo, equipped with a federal permit, took Aspen from a nest in Utah when the bird was only four weeks old and had not yet flown.
Colo spent more than a year developing the traditional man-bird relationship with Aspen known as falconry. He calls her with a whistle and she flies to him; she feels secure perched on his gloved wrist. She is well trained, but not tamed.

That's the relationship that's breaking up as Colo and Bailes prepare Aspen to live on the edge of man's civilized world.
Colo said, "Aspen still retains enough memories of her wild beginning that she can be returned to a wild situation without too much danger."

Returning a falcon to the wild is called hacking. It's done by providing a secure nesting place or perch, providing enough food until the bird begins to hunt on its own, and slowly cutting back on the bird's contact with people.
Aspen has been tethered on top of the new NMSU agriculture building for more than two weeks now.
Colo said, "She's about ready to make the transition. It could be in two or three days, or it might take a little longer. We won't know until it happens."
During the past two weeks, Colo and Bailes have flown Aspen off the roof a few times so she can become familiar with what will be her new hunting grounds south and west of the campus. Colo thinks she will eventually extend that range to the Rio Grande more than a mile away.
On one of the recent flights, Aspen refused to come back to the rooftop perch, even when called.
"She spent the whole night on a telephone pole down by the dairy barns and finally came back the next morning," Colo said. That overnight stay was the first indication that the hacking process was starting to work.
When Aspen has a hunting territory well established, she will become independent of human aid. The falcon's natural diet includes small birds and rodents, but the preferred delicacy is pigeons.
Colo said some bird fanciers may object to the falcon's choice of pigeons as a favorite food, but said it helps re-establish balance in the bird population.
"If things keep going as they are — if people keep killing game birds and birds of prey — we are only going to have three kinds of birds left in the world. They will be pigeons, English house sparrows and starlings," he said. All three are considered urban pests.
There are enough pigeons around the NMSU campus to keep Aspen well supplied with food. Colo compares this to recent peregrine falcon release experiments conducted by Cornell University in New York City.
"Cornell's falcons quickly adopted New York's high buildings as nesting places, because the buildings are similar to the high cliffs where falcons prefer to live in the wild," he said. "The falcons are surviving well in the city, and they are cleaning up the overpopulation of pigeons there."
Dr. Raul Valdez, fishery and wildlife science professor at NMSU, is helping Colo and Bailes develop a research proposal aimed at developing a falcon breeding program at the university.

Valdez said, "The prairie falcon is not yet considered an endangered species, as is the peregrine falcon, but we would like to have the breeding program established if the prairie falcon is ever seriously threatened by man."
Valdez said the breeding program would be similar to the one developed at Cornell for the peregrine falcon.
"We would hope to breed birds that can nest and live on tall buildings in towns and cities. That way we would have birds adjusted to a replacement environment if their existence in a wild habitat is ever threatened for any reason," he said.
Jim Knight, Extension wildlife specialist, said the proposed breeding program is a positive step.
"We can't protect falcons and other birds of prey entirely from man's encroachment on their natural habitat. This program would be a workable substitute, and should ensure the long-term survival of these special birds," Knight said.
Both Colo and Bailes had been involved with birds of prey for several years before coming to the university at Las Cruces.
Colo has been working with falcons and hawks for about nine years. Bailes got interested in birds of prey about a dozen years ago. He once tried to train a female eagle that had been shot and wounded in Wyoming.
"This particular eagle, because of her gunshot wound, absolutely refused to trust humans. We could hardly get near her while she was recovering. However, I eventually managed to get her to sit on my wrist, but that's all the training she would accept," Bailes said.
Although Colo and Bailes have devoted years to working with and training birds of prey, they think the future of these birds is also tied to education of humans.
"We have to teach people to put away their shotguns," Colo said. "There's never any reason to kill a hawk or falcon."
Guns are the only thing Colo and Bailes fear in their attempts to return Aspen to the wild.
When the falcon makes the full transition to the wild, she still won't fear people because of her past association with humans. She will, however, avoid them.
Colo thinks this will give Aspen the margin of safety that will keep her from being harmed by a human. Colo knows what that margin of safety will cost him in the relationship with Aspen.
"I really don't want to give her up completely, but this is the way it has to be. I hope I can see her flying over the ag building now and then," he said.
