No. 13 In Our 36th Year Ruidoso, Lincoln County, New Mexico 88345 Thursday, June 25, 1981 25c PER COPY

ANOTHER FIRE in Pinecliff, started by children, had barely started flaring up in this sheltered spot, before a fireman doused it with a steady stream of water from the wide open fire hose nozzle.

Matches and lightning caused rash of fires

Quick action by area fire fighters Monday afternoon and evening, and Tuesday morning, kept seven potentially dangerous forest fires confined to small areas and damage at a minimum.

Listed in order, the fires extinguished included:
1 p.m., Monday, Gateway Fire, started by two small boys, equipped with a supply of matches. The fire, near the upper junction of Nob Hill Drive and Mescalero Drive, apparently was started in, or near, a pile of refuse, including some tree branches. Ruidoso and Forest Service firemen got the blaze under control with only a small grass area burned and some slight damage to trees.

5 p.m., Monday, lightning caused four forest fires on the Mescalero Apache Reservation. Two air tankers, carrying about 1,800 gallons of slurry were dispatched from Holloman Air Force Base and succeeded in confining fire damage to one acre, just above the Inn of the Mountain Gods. Three other reservation fires, with all reported by the Montezuma lookout, were controlled by BIA fire suppression crews, with little damage sustained.

9:30 a.m., Tuesday, small lightning fire, "Eagle Fire", two miles south of Montezuma lookout, quickly extinguished by Forest Service fire fighters.

10:30 a.m., Tuesday, small lightning fire south of Ruidoso, in Turkey Canyon, on Forest Service land, put out by BIA fire fighters, with little damage sustained.

10:35 a.m., Tuesday, four small fires, set by young boys with matches, in Pinecliff, Ruidoso and Forest Service firemen contained the fires with virtually no damage resulting.

"Our problem in Ruidoso," said Fire Marshal Darryl Waltrip, "is the same this summer as it is every summer: children and matches combine into a sure-fire method of starting forest or grass fires."

"I don't know what the answer is. We've tried about everything there is to try to get parents to keep matches out of the hands of their children."

"About all I can say, besides more supervision, is for parents to constantly keep telling their children not to play with matches."

"Right now, in Ruidoso, we have a layer of tinder dry pine needles, about two inches thick, wherever you look. These needles quickly flare up and in the case of those five fires started by kids, if they hadn't been spotted as fast as they were, and our firemen hadn't gotten to them as fast as they did, we could have had another Indian Hills fire, or any other of those big fires we've had."

FIREMEN REACHED the Gateway Fire, caused by children playing with matches, before it got a good start in the trees visible through the steam and smoke rising from the ground.

FICKERING FLAMES, in Pinecliff, are barely visible under the discs on the stick of wood. The fire, started by children, was put out before it spread into the ground cover.

TRUSTEES NAME P&Z COMMISSION Downs short on water

Unless the residents of Ruidoso Downs begin conserving water effectively, rationing may have to be instituted as early as mid-July, village trustees warned Monday night.

Village clerk Virginia Spall said residents are being asked to refrain from any outside watering, car washing or any other excessive or unnecessary use of water. Notices of the conservation effort are being mailed to residents with their water billing, she added.

Breakdowns of pumping equipment have caused village water supplies to drop, Spall said.

One pump at Denton Well and one pump, known as the Las Lomas and located in the main springhouse, malfunctioned recently. Because of the malfunction, Spall said, "once the main storage tanks get low, we can't fill them back up quickly enough."

The Las Lomas pump has been repaired, but the Denton well pump currently is being operated manually. The manual operation allows only 100,000 gallons per day to flow to the storage tank. Downs citizens, she added, "have been using 250,000 gallons per day" recently, and water use has doubled over last month.

In order to bring the Denton well pump to full automatic operation, "we may have to pull the submersible pump," Spall said. That contingency would cost the village $8,000 to replace the pump and cause a daily reduction of 100,000 gallons of water.

"Our two days of rain have helped — and people haven't used as much water," Spall said Wednesday. "But if we have another two weeks of dry weather, we will have to go to rationing."

At their regular Monday meeting, the trustees also approved a municipal budget of $574,156, based on expected revenues of $574,943.

The figures include expenditures of $257,644 in the general fund; $34,727 in revenue sharing funds; $96,114 for utilities; $44,405 for sanitation services; $29,645 for the fire department; and $84,612 for debt service.

Mayor Norman Wheeler also submitted the names of six persons to form a new Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) for the village. The trustees voted to name five persons to the board — Robert McGee, Carolyn Hardwick, Pat Watkins, James Rawhouser and Harold J. Knowles. Kevin Hayes was named alternate.

The trustees briefly discussed a proposed mobile home ordinance, which they referred to the new P&Z for their consideration.

In other business, the trustees: — Granted a request to change the name of the owners of a Downs liquor license from "Ethel M. Wheeler and the estate of Ed Pedigrew" to "Norman E. Wheeler and Ethel M. Wheeler." Downs mayor pro tem Lois Beavers presided over that portion of the meeting.

— Announced that a special trustees meeting will be held at 7 p.m., July 2 at the municipal building, to enact a gross receipts tax ordinance.

Named Boyle Engineering and Richard Parsons as representatives of the village in a planned application to the Farmers Home Administration for a grant to build a water storage tank.

— Were advised by Spall that she would be attending the Taxation and Revenue Committee meeting of the New Mexico Municipal League June 26, and were asked for suggestions on tax legislation to present for consideration.

Ruidoso man Espree Party winner

R. C. Bowers of Ruidoso won first prize at the Tuesday night Chamber of Commerce sponsored Espree Party, and was awarded $8,000 in credit with Chamber affiliated businesses.

Second prize of $2,000 in credit with Chamber members was won by Karl Franzer, also of Ruidoso.

The Espree Party, held at Jerry Dale's, was "a great success," according to Chamber president Richard Sandoval. "The best thing about the party is that we will be putting $10,000 into the economy of Ruidoso, which will turn over five or six times."

Although the party was not a sell-out, Chamber executive director Ed Jungbluth said, "We did make money, and the profits will be used to finance a slide show about Ruidoso."

The show will be available to local civic groups for presentations at out of town conventions and other gatherings, to help promote the area.

"We certainly appreciate all the people who supported the party," Jungbluth added. He also lauded Jerry Dale's for "excellent food and service," adding that "the mechanical bull was the hit of the evening." Jungbluth also expressed appreciation to the Clay Mac Band for providing music.

Consolation prizes awarded included the following:
Wister Clevenger, Hereford, Texas, $50 gift certificate from Smith Ltd. Gallery; Ray Black, Alamogordo, framed Peter Hurd print from the Artisan's Shop; Darrell Deming, Hobbs, Mimi Jungbluth print;

Wayne Dacy, Ruidoso, polaroid camera from Village Hardware; R. T. Foster, Sterling City, Texas, 12-inch black and white television from Gibson's; James Paxton, Ruidoso, clock from The Roadrunner.

School board sets bond bid opening

The Ruidoso Board of Education (BOE), in a special meeting Wednesday noon, set the opening of bids on $2.25 million in bonds, to be sold to finance school construction, for 11 a.m., August 5, in the school district's administrative offices.

The BOE also accepted the bid of McClain's of Albuquerque, in the amount of $87,700, plus an additional $4,700 for galvanized steel, to build a press box, and new bleacher section, at W. D. Horton Warrior Field.

McClain's submitted the second lowest bid, but won the contract because of two technicalities in New Mexico Statutes.

Statute 13-1-21 reads that "the contract shall be awarded to the bidder who is a resident dealer in preference from any competing bidder who is not a resident dealer, whenever the bid of the competing dealer is 5 percent or less lower."

The bid of Playtime of Mars, Pennsylvania, was only about 4 1/2 percent lower than that of McClain's.

School Superintendent Pat Valliant said that the BOE also discovered another problem with Playtime's bid. The Pennsylvania firm had neglected to obtain a license to do business in New Mexico before submitting their bid. This was in violation of Statute 13-1-22.

Construction of the new bleachers is expected to begin by July 13.

County cracks down on road cuts

BY GWYNETH JONES
Staff Writer

Lincoln County commissioners Tuesday warned local contractors that illegal excavations across county roads will, in the future, be regarded as destruction of county property, and enforcement action will be taken against offenders.

Road Department superintendent Guy Henley reported to the commissioners that a Ruidoso area contractor cut across a road, leaving a four foot ditch open for three days. No barricades were erected at the site, Henley added, which created a potentially dangerous situation.

Under state and county regulations, contractors or utility companies must obtain permission from the county road superintendent before making such "cuts" on the roads.

County manager Bill Billingsley advised that the offense is punishable by a $100 fine or 60 days in jail, and the guilty party may be ordered to make restitution to the county for damages.

In the most recent incident, Henley said, the road had just been regraded, and a fine of $100 would not come close to offsetting the actual costs to repair the road.

Comparing the offense to "blowing up a road grader," the commissioners advised District Attorney Steve Sanders to file charges against "all offenders."

The commissioners also approved the hiring of Mary Lou Brown, Ruidoso, as a part-time coordinator for the County ambulance service. The position involves about 15 hours per month, beginning July 1.

Brown, who is also director of nursing at the Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital, will be responsible for reviewing ambulance runs, setting protocols for emergency medical technicians and acting as an advisor. The commissioners requested that Brown make periodic reports to them on the status of the service.

In other business, the commissioners: — Agreed to assist the Ruidoso School District in applying for any available funding to assist with construction of a road to the planned new Ruidoso High School building in Bog Spring Canyon.

— Announced that the state Highway Department has approved a cooperative agreement with the county to pave a seven-mile section of the Fort Stanton road, beginning at Highway 37, leading to the county landfill. Funds for the project are to be made available July 1, Billingsley said.

— Agreed to allow county employees to join a deferred compensation (retirement) program sponsored by the National Association of Counties. The program is elective and employees may participate by allotting as little as $20 per month to the savings program, tax free.

— Heard a request from Capitan senior citizens for financial assistance to relocate a building, to be used for a senior center, onto a lot donated by the village of Capitan. The commissioners agreed they would consult with the Capitan town council on the matter.

— Named commission chairman Cotton McKnight to act as a liaison with state and local agencies and the Lincoln pageant corporation, to provide adequate law enforcement, sanitation, traffic and crowd control at the upcoming Billy the Kid Days celebration in Lincoln.

— Gave final acceptance to roads in the LaMay Ranch Estates and Pine Meadows subdivisions.

— Accepted a right-of-way easement from Robert Runnels.

— Agreed to appoint a road review committee to look into the requested closing of county road F-012.

— Heard a funding request from Bill Payne on behalf of the town of Carrizozo and Lincoln County Arriba, Incorporated, for maintenance of the Carrizozo recreation area.

— Approved a replat of Fox Run subdivision.

— Agreed to prepare a stretch of road near the Angus Nazarene Camp for paving, by laying subbase materials and basecourse.

— Tabled, until July 7, action to choose an accounting company for the county's annual audit.

— Approved a resolution setting property tax rates for 1981 at 8.85 mills, superseding a premature resolution passed May 5.

— Set annual liquor license fees, with no increase over the previous year.

POSTING NOTICES OF FIRE restrictions is the responsibility of Ira Caster. See page seven for details on fire prevention measures in the Smokey Bear Ranger District.

Court Report

Problems with employees.

- Legal suits by suppliers or distributors.
- Suits for business fraud or libel.
- Preparation of eviction notices.
- Legal actions brought by consumers.

The federal government also has become aware of the financial burden often suffered by small businesses in government actions. Public Law 96-481, sometimes called the "Equal Access to Justice Act," entitles specified parties who prevail in administrative proceedings or in civil suits brought by or against the federal government to collect attorney fees and related costs unless the government can prove its action was substantially justified. Under this 1980 law, federal judges are given the discretion to award attorney fees and other expenses to prevailing parties in civil litigation involving the government to the same extent that courts award fees involving private parties.

Yes, it's becoming more available from private insurers.

"Business Legal Expense" insurance is available from insurance agents. Generally, this type of policy provides a business owner with protection from unforeseen legal expenses.

The policy allows the insured to choose his or her own attorney and reimburses him or her for the cost of defending a suit, or for legal consultations and/or for plaintiff-action fees.

This type of policy can cover:

- Suits from unhappy customers.
- Debt collection legal expenses.
- Costs incurred by taking on the IRS or other federal or state agencies.
- Those legal expenses not covered under the deductible clause of a liability policy.

Taos isn't undercutting prices on Ruidoso, if you add 'em up

BY CALEDICKEY
Editor

How much time Ruidoso residents and our guests spend wondering about the prices charged here for food, lodging and libations... as compared to what those same items cost in Taos, we can't say.

However, Billie Blair, editor of the Taos News, got to wondering exactly that.

She got to thinking that Taos is a tourist town... as is Ruidoso. Both offer skiing, hiking, sightseeing. Taos probably has narrower streets, and they have a downtown plaza more designed for foot than vehicular traffic, surrounding which are arts/crafts and quaint shoppes.

Taos, at any given moment, probably boasts not quite as many artists as Ruidoso has Texans... with that conjecture subject to argument depending upon the season.

Just for sake of comparison, Blair bestirred herself to obtain some prices in Taos, challenging News staffers to do likewise... with both to compile same and put the findings into print for the edification of the readers of both newspapers.

What you'll learn from these price comparisons is of varying import, depending on whether you're here or in Taos, or figuring on going to Taos, or coming here... but the figures are interesting.

All prices quoted are in effect now, including the following classifications.

MOTEL/HOTEL

Taos: Holiday Inn, $50 per night, two people. Tennis Ranch, condos, with studio and kitchenette, $60 per night; no kitchen, $48. Taos East, efficiency apartment, $35 per night. Median price of all Taos motels $35 to $40 a night. Lowest price, double, Sundog at $22.45.

Ruidoso: Holiday Inn, 1 person, king size or two double beds, $49 per night; $64 for two persons; with suites ranging from $83 to $100. Holiday House, two people, double bed, $30; two people, two double beds, $34. La Fonda, single, double bed, $18; doubles, two double beds, $25; and kitchenettes at $35 daily. Rates at the Inn of the Mountain Gods start at $45 per night, one or two persons, two double beds or one king size; same room, lakeside, $95. One bedroom suites are $175 and two bedroom suites $260. One bedroom lakeside suites are $195 and two bedroom, lakeside, $290.

CAMPGROUNDS

Taos: KOA, hookups, $9.25; Jack Denver, $9.75, daily rate.

Ruidoso: AOK, $7.50 daily for two persons, 50 cents extra for each additional person. KOA, trailers $9 daily; tents, $6 for two persons. Circle B, $7.50 nightly, two persons, either tent or trailer. River Ranch, hookup rate $9 for four or more persons; with $2.50 per person in tent area.

DINING COSTS

Taos: According to Blair, there is not the preponderance of steak houses there as in Ruidoso, however eight ounce sirloins cost from $9.25 and $9.95 with eight ounce filets ranging from $9.20 to $12.95.

Ruidoso: Cousins', 12 ounce ribeye, or eight ounce fillet, $14.50; eight ounce sirloin, $12.50. The Gambler, fillet or ribeye, $11.95. Nottingham's Pub, 12 ounce ribeye, $11.75 and eight ounce fillet, $11.95. K-Hob's, large T-bone, $9.50; large top sirloin, $8.50 and medium fillet, $7.95. Sosny's Bar B Que, 16 ounce ribeye, $9.95 and 12 ounce at $7.95.

Knocklads in Taos are priced at $4, with the tab in Ruidoso ranging from $3.50 to $4.10.

BEVERAGES

Taos: La Cocina, bar drinks, $1.50, as lowest, to $2 at Casa Cordova. Call drinks range from a low of $2 at La Cocina and Sagebrush Inn to $2.50, the high, at Ogevie's. The most expensive drink is a coffee/three-liqueur combination at the Holiday Inn, $3.50, with frozen daiquiris, and similar libations, priced at $3. The Holiday Inn is the only bar offering a two-for-one happy hour.

Ruidoso: Chaparral, happy hour, two regular drinks $1.50, with $2 per drink after dancing starts. Gambler's, regular drinks $2.25, call drinks, $2.50, with half price at happy hour. Canopy, regular drinks $1 during the day, $1.75 at night, with call drinks 25 cents higher. Kelley's Saloon, regular drinks $2, call drinks, $2.25, with half price at happy hour. The Inn of the Mountain Gods has a tab of $2.50 on regular drinks, $2.75 on call brands; beer ranges from $1.25 for domestic to $2.25 for imported. Margaritas and Bloody Marys run $3.75 with the fancy frozen concoctions costing $5.

Taos' beer: Domestic brands range from $1 to $1.25 in all taverns except the Holiday Inn, where suds is $1.50. Imported beers, all over town, range from $1.50 to $1.75.

Ruidoso's beer: Happy hour prices range from 75 cents for domestic brands, to half price, or two for one. Imported beer varies from $1.50 to $2.25. These prices are effective in most taverns.

Ergo, it appears that spending a weekend, a week, or a month in Taos really won't cost appreciably less than in Ruidoso, or vice versa.

Course, if you've pushed a pencil on those costs of living outlined above, you realize you can live higher on the hog in Ruidoso, if you're of a mind to, than you can in Taos. This may be due to the fact that there's more horse racing fans on Ruidoso's main street during the summer than there are art patrons making the rounds of artshops in Taos.

In either case, Taos or Ruidoso, it's possible, if you sort of keep track of expenses, that a couple can probably have an enjoyable and memorable stay in either place for somewhere in the vicinity of $150 per day, give or take a ten spot, or two or three.

Focus on Small Business

Dear Mr. Shafer:

Is legal expense insurance protection available for the small business person?

Yes, it's becoming more available from private insurers.

Lincoln scheduling opening of Visitor's Center, Wortley

The Wortley Hotel and Lincoln County Heritage Trust Visitor Center will open this weekend in Lincoln, with an open house scheduled at the center from 2 to 5 p.m., Saturday.

The Hotel and dining facility is scheduled for a Friday night opening, under the management of Eleanor Paul and Richard Watts, both of Roswell. The two have signed a lease with the State Monuments Division, which administers a number of properties in the town.

Most recent renovations at the hotel include replacement of kitchen equipment to bring it up to state Environmental Improvement Division standards. The state also funded a major renovation of floors, ceilings, walls, and replacement or refurbishing of furniture last fall.

The renovation also included period decorating, display of 1800's period art work in the dining room, and even new tableware.

Family style meals — breakfast, lunch and dinner — will be served daily at the Wortley.

The Heritage Trust's Visitor Center will house a large collection of southwestern art and artifacts, including a large collection of Peter Hurd prints, Billy the Kid movie posters, and a number of paintings by other southwestern artists.

Another featured display will be the Rogers-Aston exhibit, which includes saddles, chaps, an Apache Indian medicine vest, and other western relics.

RC&D setting project priorities

The importance of setting priorities on project measures aimed at rural development was emphasized at Tuesday's meeting of the South Central Mountain Resource Conservation and Development Council (RC&D).

The council is in the process of determining top priorities for submission to Governor Bruce King. The governor has requested that RC&D's and Council of Governments throughout the state assist him in determining what projects are most needed by rural communities in the state. The recommendations will be reviewed by King and other state officials, with the ultimate goal of channelling funding from the Rural Development Act to the most worthy projects.

RC&D committees are looking at a variety of ongoing projects, for possible priority designations, including establishment of a rest area on Highway 380 near Indian Divide; obtaining school bus radios for Lincoln County; improvements to the Capitan water system; expansion of home care services in Lincoln and Otero Counties; establishment of an alcoholism treatment facility at Fort Stanton; and other projects dealing with flood control, irrigation improvements and biological research.

At the Tuesday meeting, the RC&D council also heard a presentation by Charles Adams of Carrizozo. Adams advised the council that the Taera Foundation, of which he is president, is looking into the breeding of dogs as a natural means of predator control for sheep ranchers.

The foundation is importing two Akbash dogs, a Turkish breed, which are bred specifically for protection of sheep. The dogs must be raised with the herd, and reportedly will stave off attacks even by wolves and mountain lions. The success of the dogs can be measured in part by comparing figures of sheep production in Turkey and the United States, Adams added. Turkey has 25 to 40 million sheep to this nation's 12 to 15 million.

Efforts are being made elsewhere to introduce the dogs to the United States, but the foundation's will be the first in the New Mexico-Arizona-Utah area, he said. Adams also requested assistance in obtaining about six lambs to begin the project. The dogs will be arriving from Turkey in the next few months, he said.

The group also heard a report from Donald Sulcliffe, a research biologist with the New Mexico Game and Fish Department, on the propagation of wild turkeys. RC&D recently adopted a project to increase the numbers of the birds in the Carrizo, Jicarilla and Patos Mountains of the Lincoln National Forest, to benefit hunters and control insects.

Aid to policemen club being formed

Ruidoso attorney Bruce Stafford is organizing a "Ruidoso 100 Club," for the purpose of supplementing insurance costs and other payments incurred for injuries sustained by Ruidoso police officers in the line of duty.

Stafford is seeking $100 donations to the club, which he hopes will "demonstrate community support and appreciation for the excellent professional performance by the Ruidoso police."

"All too often, when an officer is injured in the line of duty, the insurance benefits which are available to him fall far short of his actual financial needs," Stafford said.

All monies received above the cost of administration are to be placed in a trust fund account at Ruidoso State Bank. Stafford, Ruidoso mayor Lloyd Davis and Ed Jungbluth, executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, will act as trustees for the fund, administering and supervising disbursements of the money.

Funds are to be disbursed according to the type and severity of injury sustained by the officer, including:

- Injury not permanent in nature: five percent of the total existing fund per month, until reinstated to active duty.
- Permanent injury: 25 percent of total existing fund, to be computed in line with degree of permanent disability.

- Loss of life: 50 percent of the total existing fund.

"If we expect to maintain the high standards which we have seen in our officers, we must show our support and appreciation for the professionalism, courtesy and respect with which they have dealt with our residents and tourists," Stafford said.

Donations may be made to the Ruidoso 100 Club, Box 1457, Ruidoso, New Mexico 88345. Automobile decals will be issued to identify members of the club.

State 4-H contests announced

Mexico State University.

"These senior events help youths demonstrate the skills they have worked so hard to perfect in county and district 4-H activities. The skills may range from performing confidently before a group to evaluating the quality of a product."

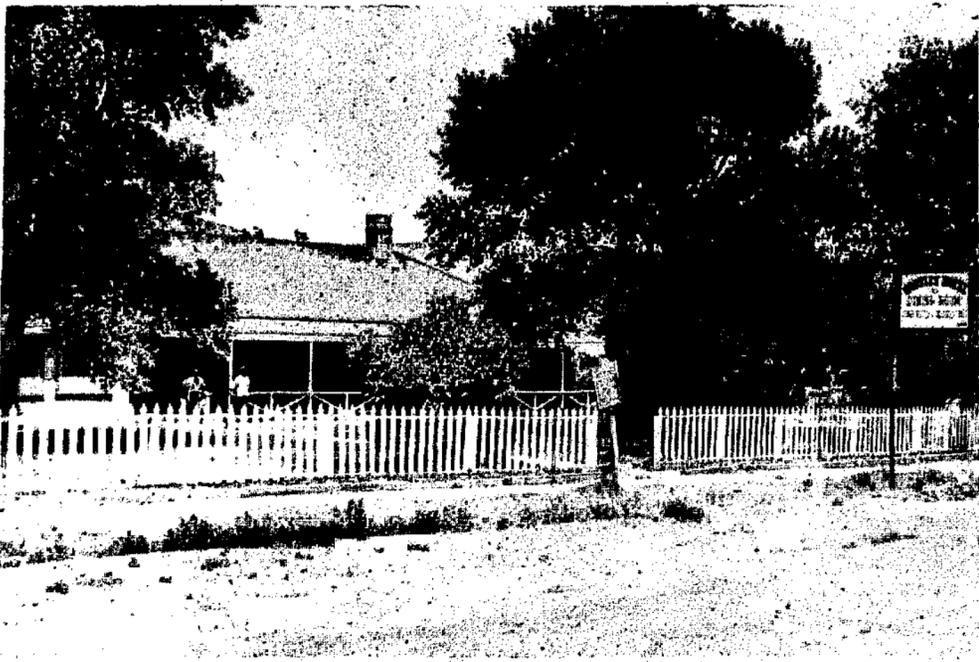

Special 4-H ribbons, medals and plaques are awarded to top teams and individuals as a reminder of their outstanding achievements.

Fruit crop to be bountiful

"Fruit production in New Mexico is going to be excellent this year," said Esteban Herrera, Extension horticulturist at New Mexico State University (NMSU).

There were few late frosts which usually reduces fruit yields by killing blossoms or small fruits.

This year there should be plenty of plums, apricots, cherries, peaches, nectarines, apples and even almonds. Almond trees on the NMSU horticultural farm are loaded with a full crop.

THE WORTLEY HOTEL will reopen this weekend, under new management, and will again be serving breakfast, lunch and dinner "family style." The hotel and dining room have been closed since last fall, when the former lessee became involved in a dispute with the state Monuments Division, which owns the facility.

PEOPLE

Miner/Hedin wedding vows repeated

Kathy E. Miner and Edward M. Hedin were married in a double ring ceremony May 23 at the First Baptist Church of Artesia, with the bridegroom's grandfather, the Reverend Alvin W. Hedin, Sapulpa, Oklahoma, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Marty E. Miner of Ruidoso and Dop Miner of Artesia. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Morris Hedin of Artesia.

The bride wore a formal gown of bridal satin which had been fashioned by the bridegroom's grandmother and worn by his mother. The bride's mantle and vest were made by her mother; her heirloom crystal necklace had been worn by her grandmother.

Maid of honor was Trudi Smith of Loveland, Colorado, and Rhonda Mooney, Lubbock, Texas, was bridesmaid.

The attendants wore floor length gowns in shades of dark blue.

Bestman was James Hedin, Artesia, and John Hedin of Lincoln, Nebraska, was groomsman. Both are brothers of the bridegroom. Serving as ushers were Johnny Angel, Artesia; Fred Wright, Alamogordo; and Danny Miner, Ruidoso, brother of the bride. All wore light blue tuxedos.

Organist for the ceremony was the bridegroom's mother, and his father performed a solo. David Ransberger of Tulsa, Oklahoma, accompanied himself on the guitar in another solo, and the bridegroom and his brother James presented a vocal and guitar duet during the ceremony.

The bride's chosen colors of blue and white were repeated in the reception which followed in Morgan Parlor at the church. Presiding at the refreshment table were Connie Krogan and Cheryl Heathington, both of Artesia; Lynda Durham of Lubbock, and Dianna Boucher of Las Cruces. Emily Simons of Artesia was at the gift table and Dianna Wolf of Artesia was seated at the guest book table. Other assisting with the reception were Byron Thompson, Lajuana Simons, Sue Lee, Rodean Jordan and Shirley Mooney, all of Artesia.

Following a wedding trip to Cloudcroft, the couple are at home in Las Cruces. The bridegroom, a graduate of Eastern New Mexico University, is employed as a teacher at Las Cruces High School. The bride is a May, 1981 graduate of New Mexico State University.

THIS QUILT, which includes 25 squares depicting scenes and attractions of Ruidoso and vicinity, will be given away in a fund raising effort July 18, in conjunction with the St. Anne's Guild Christmas in July Bazaar, at the

Library's Pet Show cancelled, summer programming scheduled

The Ruidoso Public Library's annual Pet Show, originally scheduled for Saturday, has been "postponed indefinitely due to lack of interest," according to children's librarian Ingrid Schmitz. Pre-registration for the show ended Wednesday, but less than a dozen pets had been signed up for the event, Schmitz said.

The pet show probably will be rescheduled later this summer, during the Summer Programs, she added.

Registration for the Children's Summer Programs end July 1. The programs are open to children ages three and up, depending on the subject.

Registration for the Preschooler's Story Hour program is "filling up fast," Schmitz said. Parents are urged to reserve a place soon in that category. In other programs, plenty of space is available.

Schedules for the programs, which begin July 6 and run through August 14, are available at the library. Classes, one hour in length, include the following: Preschool Story Hour, ages 3-5. Nature Crafts, grades K through 2 and 3 and up.

Sing Along, grades K and up. Folk Dancing, grades 1-3 and 4-up. Arts and Crafts, grades K-2 and 3-up. Summer Reading, grades 1-up. Twirling, grades K-up. Puppets, grades K-2 and 3-up. Cooking, grades 3 and up.

Lions Club's installation Monday eve

Officers of the Ruidoso Noon and Evening Lions clubs will be installed during an awards banquet Monday evening at the Holiday Inn.

A social hour at 6:30 opens the festivities followed at 7:30 by the banquet.

Athletic seal drive to end

The local "Fun and Fitness Contest," aimed at obtaining free athletic equipment for the Ruidoso Schools will end June 30, according to coordinator Jeannie Whit-wam.

Seals from Post cereals, Awake orange drink and Log Cabin Syrup are being collected at all three schools, and should be turned in by Friday if possible, Whit-wam said. Personnel will be at the schools to accept the seals during regular working hours.

The programs will conclude with a Fun Fair, scheduled for August 15, from 1:30 to 4 p.m., featuring storyteller Joe Hayes.

Crafts will be displayed at the fair also, and the children will give demonstrations of skills learned during the programs.

High school reunion plans progressing

Plans for the upcoming Ruidoso High School all graduate reunion are progressing, with a meeting scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Monday for the purpose of forming working committees. The meeting will be held at the Resort Properties office on Highway 37.

Ruidoso graduates and other interested persons are invited to participate in the reunion planning. The event is scheduled for July 18 and 19, with registration from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., July 18, followed by dinner at 6 p.m., at the Elks Lodge. A picnic is planned for Sunday, July 19.

Church fiesta, antique auction set at Capitan

The Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Capitan, is sponsoring an antique auction Friday, in the new parish hall.

Antique auction items include a Knight radio and a cruiser trunk. Also offered will be a hand carved walking stick and pool cue and a two weeks vacation at Lake LBJ in Texas.

A Fiesta Mass will be said at 6 p.m., with a pot luck dinner to be served before the auction begins. A pinata for children will conclude the evening.

Proceeds will go to the building fund, for the hall that is now under construction.

Harvesters increase state's forest demands

Who would drive 84 miles, work eight long, hard hours for practically nothing, and do it five or six times a year? Fireplace owners would.

That's the sacrifice the average free-use harvester makes to keep his home fires burning, according to a survey by researchers at New Mexico State University's Agricultural Experiment Station.

The research team, led by agricultural economist Dr. James R. Gray, conducted the survey to find out the economic characteristics of free-use harvesting.

Free-use fuelwood is "dead and down" wood harvested for personal use under National Forest Service permits.

Basically, there are two types of fuelwood harvesters, those who harvest for home cooking and heating, and those who harvest for the pleasure of burning wood in a fireplace.

"Historically, residents in north central New Mexico have relied heavily on local fuelwood supplies for cooking and heating," said Gray. They harvest during weekdays, mainly from the Carson and Santa Fe National Forests. They harvest six to 10 cords of wood a year compared with less than four cords for their urban counterparts.

"Harvesters in central New Mexico, mostly from the Albuquerque metropolitan area, travel the farthest for wood, a round trip average of 128 miles. In most areas, harvesters travel 30 to 70 miles," he said.

Pinon pine, popular in northern forests, was the most common fuelwood statewide at 40 percent of the total harvest. Juniper was more abundant in the two southern forests. Statewide, however, ponderosa pine made up 26 percent of total harvest. Oak, found mostly in the southwest area, was only 6 percent of total.

The investment for wood harvesting, at two to three times the value of the wood, was a bargain, according to Gray. "The investment rate was so low that 40,000 harvesters could afford it in 1977-78," he said. Of the average $822 investment, 53 percent went for trucks, 31 percent for chainsaws and the rest for equipment.

Harvesters used between 34 and 49 gallons of gasoline a year. Gallons per cord of harvested wood varied from 7.5 in the northern border area to 13.5 in the central area.

The researchers found that wood burned in fireplaces generated little usable heat energy, practically the same amount of energy required in harvesting. Oak was the only wood species that consistently yielded more heat energy than was spent in harvesting it.

Keeping in mind increases in both gasoline prices and fuelwood demands, harvesters were asked to estimate their harvest rate under 1980 conditions. They reported that if in the 1980-81 season prices and supply conditions remained at 1977-78 levels, they would increase harvest by 18 percent.

If energy prices continue to increase, harvesters anticipated cutting 49 percent more wood in 1980. But if supplies were reduced so that they had to travel twice as far in 1980, they would harvest only 13 percent more wood.

In comparing estimated price increases with fuelwood supplies, the researchers report that available dead and down wood in New Mexico's national forests would be exhausted in 17 to 53 years. This range reflects the variation in individual forest demand and supply patterns.

Carson National Forest would be the most vulnerable because it is near Albuquerque. It is accessible to both the urban population and those who harvest for heat and cooking.

In 1977-78, Carson had an inventory of 483,599 cords of wood. That year, 30,300 cords were harvested. However, the harvest rate was six times that of dead and down replacement wood. At 1977-78 use levels, the supply will be exhausted by the year 2000.

In contrast, the Gila National Forest in the southern area had an inventory of 1,589,181 cords of wood. Because it is farther from population pressures, its harvest rate was less than the annual dead and down replacement rate. At 1977-78 use levels, the Gila will never run out of fuelwood.

Matching the demand to available supplies may be one solution to fuelwood shortages. Urban users, who harvest on weekends anyway, could drive to forests with higher inventories and leave closer-in forests for those who need wood for cooking and heating.

Gray also said reducing the permit size for fireplace users from 10 cords to two or three would leave more wood for other users. "Only 60 of 569 harvesters surveyed actually harvested 10 cords or more in 1977-78, and half of them were from the northern border area," he said.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

A Present For Father's Day
You remember last time I said something about Wilbur Conley's new flag floating in front of his nursery down below Ruidoso Downs?

It turns out that this flag pole, fifty feet high, with a flag twelve by eighteen feet, was a Father's Day gift from his children, Susan, Doug, Ted and on behalf also of his other son Corkey, who was called home by Our Lord a year or so ago.

I have never seen a finer Father's Day gift, and the Conley children deserve a standing ovation for this tribute, which also goes to their mother, the former Edna Edger.

Edna and I used to have many a laugh together when we both worked on the old Roswell Morning Dispatch. The McEvoy brothers owned the paper, and the editor was Jason Kellahin, now a famous lawyer in Santa Fe.

Conley's nursery has long been a landmark in the valley, and now with this grand new flag the place will become famous from coast to coast.

The Drought Breaks
"Like the hart desireth the water brooks, so longeth my soul after thee, O God."

From the forty second Psalm of David. About this time of year after a dry winter, there are spots in the river that are bone dry. The very sight of this hurts your eyes and makes you thirsty. And I often think of the creatures who depend on the stream for their "waters of life".

Therefore it was a lullaby last night to hear the booming and rumbling of the thunder (this is being written on June twenty three). And today, after a nice shower in the early morning, you look up the valley and again you see the rain falling in streamers across the mountains, to the tune of the voice of the thunder.

Now the streams will be replenished, and the dry spots will give way to the beautiful clear running stream.

There is one thing to remember about the Ruidoso River: No matter how dry the weather may be, there is water in the stream bed, coming up from hundreds of springs all along the way.

In the more than half a century that I have been here, the river has never been dry here at the place. The nearest it came was in 1965 the year of the big flood, June seventeen.

Just when the stream here gets very low, then here comes the rain.

This time, the stream was not what you call low; and still the rains came. Surely this means good rains this year, especially since they have begun so early. They are not generally supposed to begin till the Fourth of July.

Now I see a rain cloud coming from over around Lincoln. And there is a smell of rain everywhere in the air.

Let us be thankful to the Lord for the early beginning of the rain.

Nogal Mesa Cowboy Camp Meeting set

The annual Nogal Mesa Ranchmen's Camp Meeting is scheduled July 15-19.

Work days, to prepare the area for this year's encampment, will be June 27 and July 11. Work will entail general repairs and installation of more lighting facilities.

"We welcome all volunteers," publicity chairman Dorothy Guck said, "and encourage everyone to bring basket lunches and spend both days helping us with this project."

Preaching at the camp this year will be the Reverend Bob Goodrich, Dallas, Texas, and the Reverend Reggie Creekmore of Oklahoma.

Memorial services will be at 2 p.m., July 18, followed by the Texas Master Four Quartet leading the youth sponsored musical program at 3.

Ham radio Field Day planned this weekend

Ham radio operators across the nation will participate in Field Day, during a 27 hour period Saturday and Sunday.

Members of the Pecos Valley Amateur Radio Club (PVARC), Roswell, will set up portable operations near the Ruidoso Lookout Tower, with site courtesy of Smokey Bear Ranger District.

Field Day is an exercise in emergency preparedness communications. Hams across the United States and Canada pack up their portable gear and emergency power supplies and install them in fields or mountain tops.

"CQ, FD" will be the pervading signal on all amateur radio frequencies as Field Day operators try to contact operators in North America and non-competitive foreign stations. Members of PVARC will operate under their club station call, K8LWU, club president W. C. Chamberlain has announced.

The exercise is designed to prepare ham radio operators for emergency operations including tornadoes, hurricanes and floods, in which hams are usually the only immediate means of rescue, health-and-welfare communications.

Field Day places a premium on operator ingenuity and inventiveness, Chamberlain said. "It's a contest of skills under trying conditions. Everything can go wrong — and usually does," he said. "But those hams who participate learn to get the message through — and that's what it's all about."

Crime victims may get financial help

Beginning July 1, victims of violent crime in New Mexico may be eligible for financial aid to pay for medical, hospital, funeral and other bills caused by the crime.

This reimbursement plan is covered by the Crime Victims Reparations Act, passed by the 1981 legislature, that was researched and sponsored by the Crime Victims Assistance Organization (CVAO).

The act states that the victims must make application and reparations may be awarded if certain requirements are met, such as:

1. The crime of violence was committed in New Mexico after July 1, 1981.
2. The victim was domiciled in New Mexico.
3. The victim was injured or died as a result of the violent crime.
4. The crime was reported to the law authorities within 30 days.
5. The victim cooperated fully with the appropriate law enforcement agencies.

Reparations may be awarded to the victim, or in the event of death, to the dependents of the victim, or to any individual who voluntarily assumed the funeral or medical expenses of the victim. Reparations may be awarded whether or not an offender has been found guilty.

There is no award for loss or damage to property.

No reparations shall be awarded if the victim is a relative of the offender, or was an accomplice of the offender, or if the victim is injured while confined in any correctional facility.

The maximum reparation award is $12,500 and payments from any collateral source available to the victim (such as social security, medical insurance, Medicare, Workman's Compensation, any other insurance, or restitution payments from the offender) will be deducted from the total award.

Until such time as the State Reparations Office is in operation, victims of violent crimes should contact CVAO which will take the names of the victims and the facts of the victimization. As soon as the State Reparations Office is in operation, this data will be turned over to that office.

For further information, write the Crime Victims Assistance Organization at Post Office Box 9411, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87119, or call 831-2100.

Care Center seeking program volunteers

Volunteers are needed to assist the staff of the Ruidoso Care Center in carrying out entertainment and other activity programs at the facility.

Programs already established at the center include games, arts and crafts, talking books, films, a cooking class and occasional special parties. Assistance is needed to continue these programs, according to social care director Debbie Garcia.

Musical entertainment and slide shows would also be welcome, she added.

The center, which currently has 68 residents, is also in need of vehicles to help the staff transport residents to and from community activities. Garcia said the center is organizing a fund drive to buy a van equipped with a motorized lift for wheelchairs. In the meantime, staff vehicles simply cannot accommodate the increased number of residents, she said.

An organizational meeting has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Monday at the center, to appoint a committee to work on the fund drive.

Should a volunteer want to work more closely with residents, the "one on one" program is also seeking volunteers, Garcia said. Under this program, an individual would visit and work with one resident, usually one "with no family whatsoever."

A volunteer may donate time according to their own schedule, Garcia said — any time and any day of the week. Anyone who wishes to volunteer or seeks further information may contact Garcia at the center, 257-9071.

Garcia expressed thanks to Peter Petroske and the St. Eleanor's Catholic Church for use of their van and hours of volunteer time. She also thanked the Pilot Club of Ruidoso for transporting residents to a recent park performance of the Ruidoso Summer Festival.

Garcia said the center staff are also appreciative of local restaurant owners who are participating in a "Dine-a-Friend program" under which, three residents and a volunteer are treated to a free meal twice a month. Current participants include Big T, Lillie's Restaurant, The Ranchhouse, Sonny's Bar-B-Que, Whispering Pines, Big John's, Larry's, Whistleberry's and Kentucky Fried Chicken.

The Care Center's patio project is progressing quickly, Garcia said, "and we want to thank everyone who has assisted us with it."

She also invited the public to stop by and see the facility and visit with the staff and residents.

MAKE YOUR DRAPERIES STACK UP BETTER
Draw draperies are usually meant to draw back completely from the glass area of the window they cover. In measuring windows, a common mistake is to allow too little for this extra coverage at the sides, which is called the "stack-back."
You'll need about the same amount of stack-back for one-way or two-way draw draperies. The difference is that the stack-back goes all on one side for the one-way treatment, while it goes half-and-half for two-way draws.

Racquet Club Adult Open tennis results

In the featured match last weekend at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club's Adult Open, Sal Castillo of El Paso, Texas, defeated Alex Dorateo, the Racquet Club's pro, by a score of 7-6, 6-4.

Men's 35 Singles, Mike Kroelinger defeated Bob Garner 6-4, 6-1.

Men's 35 Doubles, Paul Whitman and Ron Brown defeated Knipp and Dennison 6-2, 6-1.

Mixed 35 Doubles, Brook Faulkneberry and Cynthia Nations defeated Phil Prieto and Judy Wysong 6-3, 6-2.

Castillo also went home a winner in two other divisions besides Men's Open Singles. In the Men's Open Doubles, he teamed with brother Mike to put away Robert Buckley and Don Durham of Ruidoso, 6-3, 6-4. The Mixed Open Doubles final was a come-from-behind victory for Castillo and Vicky Quijano over Aguilar and Castillo, 2-6, 7-5, 6-0.

Capitan July 4 10 kilometer run

In other divisions: Women's Open Singles, Allison Deputy defeated Karen Oppenheim 6-3, 6-3. Women's Open Doubles, Peggy Birkhead and Kathy Lawson defeated Oppenheim and Vicky Castillo 6-2, 6-2.

Women's 25 Singles, Karen Ollmans and Doug Ollmans defeated Howell and Knipp 6-7, 7-5, 6-2.

Women's 35 Singles, Margot Percy defeated Lana Garner 6-2, 6-4.

Women's 35 Doubles, Birkhead and Cynthia Nations defeated Jeannie Whitman and Jane Brown 6-2, 6-2.

At 8:30 a.m., on July 4, the Woman's Club of Capitan will sponsor a 10 kilometer "Fun Run." The first 10 kilometer run to be held in Capitan will start at the top of the hill just across the bridge behind Smokey Bear Historical Park. Registration is $5 before July 4 and $6 on the day of the race. T-shirts will be awarded to all participants and trophies will be given to the male and female runners with the best times in all divisions.

Age groupings will be: 19 and under; 20-29; 30-39; 40-49; 50 and over. Assorted prizes from Capitan area merchants will also be awarded to the oldest and youngest runner, and to the participant from the most distant point.

Women's Soccer League to form

The Ruidoso Women's Soccer League will hold an organizational meeting at 8 p.m., Wednesday at the White Mountain soccer field.

The league is open to all women. Additional information may be obtained by calling Butch Grantham at Morgan's Mountain Sports.

There will also be a concurrent two-mile "fun run" for those wishing to participate but unable to go the entire distance. Aid stations will be set up at the halfway point for the benefit of those running the 10 kilometers.

In addition to the prizes, winners will be invited to ride in the Capitan Women's Club parade entry immediately following the race.

For more information, call Daylene Huey at 354-2246.

Bogard has second ace in one month

Ira Bogard made his third hole-in-one on June 18 at Cree Meadows Country Club. The shot came on the 305 yard par four fifth hole, and followed by less than 30 days Bogard's hole-in-one at the par three fourth hole.

"I didn't actually get to see the shot roll in," Bogard said. "I'd been playing with borrowed clubs for several days and spraying shots all over the course. On this day, I'd gone back to my own woods. I hit the shot very well — I usually came up about 20 or 30 yards short on the fifth hole — but the ball hooked off to the left, and a tree blocked my line of sight. Apparently the ball hit the left bank and bounced towards the flag."

"When my partner George Shoemaker and I walked to the green we looked all over without being able to find my ball.

George went ahead and putted, then when he pulled the flag up, out popped my ball. I was able to identify it because I'd just bought the ball that day."

Bogard said that he was a little disappointed that he hadn't seen the ball go in, but that it hadn't detracted from the thrill in any way. His two holes-in-one within a month mark the first time anyone has ever had an ace on both a par three and par four hole at Cree Meadows Country Club.

Bogard's first ace came at a tournament in Roswell three years ago. Tournament officials gave him a gold putter for the feat. Another participant in the tournament also had an ace the same day, a feat occurring at odds of over a million to one, according to a computer readout.

IRA BOGARD sank his second ace within four weeks last week on the par four, 305 yard, fifth hole at the Cree Meadows Country Club.

Elks conclude regular season with a flourish

BY GREG STEPHENS
Staff Writer

The Elks concluded their regular season Little League play with a bang this week, taking their final two games over Ruidoso State Bank 13-4 and the Jaycees 11-3. The two wins clinched second place for the Elks.

The year had not begun so auspiciously for Coach Ky Scott's kids. They got off to a 1-3 start and seemed somewhat disheartened after losing an early overtime battle to the league champion Security Bank.

Security Bank routed the Elks in their second meeting, with star pitcher and hitter Russell Easter slowed by sickness. Then in mid-season Scott temporarily lost four of his starters to Boy Scout Camp and had to play two games with less than nine players. They lost the first in another lopsided contest to Security Bank, but then things began to turn around as the substitutes came through against the Jaycees to start the team on a four game winning streak.

The good luck continued when the Elks picked up a valuable "race-track kid" — D. W. Rausch, who under special Little League rules, was allowed to join the team late because his parents hadn't arrived in Ruidoso Downs until summer.

It was Rausch who pitched three innings of strong ball in the fourth meeting between the Elks and Security Bank, and keyed a last inning rally which enabled his team to break Security Bank's five year winning streak.

In this Monday night's game, all the pieces finally seemed to come together as the Elks demolished Ruidoso State Bank 13-0. Easter pitched a four inning no-hitter and clouted his eighth home run of the year. His teammates played errorless ball and batted around in all of their three at-bats before the game was called on the ten-run rule.

D. W. Rausch, Dickie Bruner and Russell Easter had two hits apiece.

Tuesday night the Elks bested the Jaycees 11-3 in a game halted by rain in the sixth inning. The victory was their seventh in eight games. Rausch was the winning pitcher, limiting the opposition to three hits, and helped his own cause with a single and a triple. Ricardo Garcia and Clint Walker had a pair of singles each, while Russell Easter upped his final batting average to .667 with a double and a triple.

Area residents to remove bleachers

After the Ruidoso Board of Education accepted a bid for stadium improvements at W. D. Warrior Field Wednesday, Ruidoso High School Athletic Director Doyle Howell announced that a dismantling party was being organized.

The Warrior Booster Club and other members of the community interested in high school sports will gather at the football field Friday at 8 p.m., to begin to dismantle the old bleachers.

Howell said the dismantling had to be completed by July 13, when construction of the new bleachers is scheduled to begin.

Other final batting averages for the Elks were: Garcia .328; Rausch .400; Dickie Bruner .376 and Darryl Clements .423.

The Ruidoso Little League will hold its awards banquet Monday night at the Elks Club. All players will be given trophies and an all-star team will be announced.

Tuesday and Wednesday nights the first and second place teams from the Alamogordo Little League will travel to Ruidoso for a tournament with Security Bank and the Elks. Following the tournament, the all-star team will go to Roswell for the district playoffs.

RUSSELL EASTER kept his eye on the ball all year for the Elks. He batted .667 with eight home runs, and had a 4-2 record on the mound, including a no-hitter.

Women's softball scores

Half and Half got by the Mesalero Orange Delight 14-11 in Monday night Women's Softball Association action. The win raised Half and Half's record to 6-0. Mesalero's best effort of the season went for naught as they fell to 0-6.

The Capitan Fire stayed within striking distance of first place by edging Whispering Pines 24-22. The Fire are now 5-1. The hard-luck Shady Ladies, who have now lost three games by a total of four runs, watched their record fall to 2-4.

The contest between Back to Nature and the Attic A's was rained out. It will probably be made up next Tuesday.

Women's softball standings

Half & Half	6-0
Capitan Fire	5-1
Back to Nature	3-2
Capitan Rebels	3-3
Whispering Pines	2-4
Attic A's	1-4
Mesalero	0-6

DECA's Learn and Earn project best in nation

BY GWYNETH JONES
Staff Writer

The Ruidoso chapter of Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) captured the top national prize for their Pepsi Learn and Earn project, in competition at Anaheim, California, last week. The Pepsi project entry by the local chapter has placed in the top eight nationwide for the past four years. DECA student Mike Clarke took a third place in his national competition, advertising services category, and Tina Killen placed in the top 15 for her apparel and accessories entry. Ruidoso DECA teacher/sponsor Eddie Parker said the state of New Mexico did well as a whole. An Albuquerque entry won the top spot in the anti-shoplifting program; Portales won a third place in the civic consciousness category. In addition, a Santa Fe DECA chapter won first place in the Western Division for a creative marketing project.

Parker praised state DECA adviser Ray Gornley and state superintendent Darrell Jones for their leadership and the good showing New Mexico made in the national competition.

As for Ruidoso's wins, Parker said it was "one of the biggest thrills" of his life. "We've tried for four years to win this... it proves that all that hard work will pay off," he said.

This year's sale here last December. For that sale, the club developed a sales training manual used by the students. They also used a computer to do sales analyses, and "keep up" with quotas, commissions and inventory," Parker said.

"It was a terrific learning experience for me and the kids," Parker said, to be involved in "the complexities of computer operation." The club also learned how to handle credit card sales and commission sales.

But past experience was a big factor in winning the first place ranking this year, Parker added. John Brown, who worked on the club's Pepsi entry four years ago went along on the trip as a sponsor. Tammy Miller, who submitted the first Pepsi project entry five years ago is Parker's student teacher this year.

Copies of winning projects are made available annually to chapters throughout the nation, and the local club also took advantage of that service. Talking to judges to determine details of requirements and guidelines for the projects was also helpful, Parker said.

Parker also praised Pepsi company representatives as "amazing people who are dedicated to free enterprise and helping young people learn how to work and what they can accomplish." The emphasis of the Learn and Earn program is on the "learn" portion, Parker added. Some of the chapters earned substantially more money than the local chapter, but the judges apparently felt the learning aspect was stronger in Ruidoso's case.

In addition to the top national ranking in the Pepsi project, the DECA chapter also received 41 shares of Pepsi stock. With stock earned from past ranking entries, the school now owns a total of 71 shares, Parker said.

Parker expressed thanks to the students who participated in the competition, to Darrell and Dlorly Stierwalt, sponsors Wayne and Mary Bradley, Eva Clarke, Sue Vinsant, Charlotte Fellers, and Lamar Osbourn; Security Bank, Ruidoso State Bank and The Ruidoso News.

Parker also expressed appreciation to Ruidoso school superintendent Pat

Valliant, high school principal Tom Hansen; the board of education; Consolidated Bottlers of Roswell; Tom's Candy Sales; school staff; and parents, for their support.

"I'd also like to thank my wife, Donna," Parker said. She also accompanied the students to California and assisted with numerous aspects of the trip and conference.

During the trip, the students also had the opportunity to visit such attractions as Disneyland, Universal Studios, area beaches, Knott's Berry Farm, Huntington Library and Art Gallery, Hearst Castle, Las Vegas, and Hoover Dam.

MIKE CLARKE, right, flashed a broad smile as he accepted his trophy for third place in winners, from DECA chapters in Texas and nationwide competition in the DECA advertising services category. Pictured at left are other winners, from DECA chapters in Texas and Indiana.

New quarter horse sale set here

The first Ruidoso Super Select Sale (RSSS) of quarterhorses is set to begin at 7:15 p.m., August 30, in the Chaparral Convention Center.

RSSS president and general manager Richard Thompson has announced that 54 yearlings and 48 broodmares, "the families of the greatest quarter horses ever to race," will be auctioned at the sale.

A $20,000 upset price will be offered for any yearling, Thompson said, with each having passed a pedigree evaluation and conformation inspection. "If an opening bid of $20,000 is not obtained," Thompson said, "the sale company will purchase the yearling for that figure."

Consigned yearlings include 12 sired by world champion Easy Jet and seven by two-time world champion Dash For Cash, Thompson said.

Broodmares to be offered at auction, Thompson said, are in foal to Easy Jet, Dash For Cash, Bugs-Alive in 75, Raise Your Glass, Lady Bug's Moon and last year's world champion Super Sound Charge.

Dams of yearling consigned to this sale, Thompson said, include Pacific Charger, Pacific Dream, Rare View, Miss Assured and Alamitos Doll Two.

Catalogs, and information on the sale are available from Thompson at Ruidoso Super Select Horse Sale Company, Box 100, Ruidoso Downs, New Mexico 86346 or by telephoning 378-9225.

State Fair premium books available for distribution

The 1981 New Mexico State Fair Premium Book has been published and is now available at fair offices in Albuquerque.

Considered the bible of fair activities, the book lists all of the competitions and schedules for the annual show.

This year's 341 page book has a yellow, red and black cover and a bright sun on the horizon. It notes that this will mark the 100th anniversary of the first New Mexico Territorial Fair.

The book is divided into six separate sections: livestock; juniors; poultry and rabbits; horses; agriculture, floriculture and womens center; and hobbies, fine arts, photography, Indian exhibits and contemporary crafts.

The sectional booklets are available to persons interested in only one particular area of the exposition.

Copies of the entire book are automatically sent each year to regular exhibitors, county agents, department heads, Chambers of Commerce and media representatives around the state.

Persons interested in competing in the 1981 Centennial New Mexico State Fair are urged to write for copies of the various booklets of interest to them. Requests should be sent to: Premium Book, New Mexico State Fair, Post Office Box 8546, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87198. Requests should be typed or printed clearly, listing name, address, city, state and zip, and mention which booklets were wanted. Copies will be mailed on receipt of request.

Forest Service stressing fire prevention action

BY GREG STEPHENS
Staff Writer/Photographer

[Second in a series]

The Smokey Bear Ranger District (SBRD) allocates $61,706, or almost 14% of its Fire Management budget to fire prevention. This may seem like a great deal of money to be used in public education and patrolling campgrounds, when at any time a flash of lightning or carelessly strewn campfire ashes could start a forest fire capable of rendering millions of dollars in damages.

But fire management has its parallels in health care, where a dollar's worth of preventive medicine can be worth its weight in gold. The most cost-effective means of battling a destructive fire is to keep it from happening in the first place.

"People in Ruidoso have become much more conscious of fire prevention techniques," said Ira Caster last week. Caster is a patrolman in the SBRD, responsible for both making public and enforcing precautionary measures enacted by the Forest Service.

Caster said he believes the educational programs undertaken by the Forest Service have been a major factor in creating a fire-conscious citizenry. "Of course most of the programs are directed towards children. We send Smokey Bear out to talk to elementary school children in the fall and spring, and that's an experience they remember."

"Kids in this area all seem to know the Smokey Bear story by heart," says Marsha Gale, who mans the lookout tower within the Ruidoso village limits. "As they get older, some of them will learn methods of fire suppression and prevention in the Youth Conservation Corps."

During the dry summer months, adults do their part with public service announcements in the local media, and local merchants will often include a "blurb" about fire safety in their advertisements.

"Yet there are always a few children who don't get the message, as evidenced by the two boys, who, along with a supply of matches, managed to start four fires at Pinecliff this week."

Awareness of fire hazards also does not reach some tourists, although they seldom act maliciously. Many first-time tourists have simply not spent enough time in pine country to realize its inflammatory character.

"We usually look at a camper's license plates," Caster said. "If they're local, then we probably won't have to worry about them. We'll try to keep a closer eye on people who are up here from the desert. If they're from eastern New Mexico they probably have some awareness of fire hazards up here, while a camper from Texas may be coming for the first time."

"A lot of the campers I run into will be coming back year after year, and I've found that if I have to caution them once about building a fire on a windy day, or being outside a designated area, it usually doesn't have to be repeated. 99 percent of the campers are very considerate and comply by the rules they are aware of."

The problem, according to Caster, is simply having enough personnel to make the rounds reminding tourists of the regulations. In this, the driest summer in over a decade, the SBRD has only three people employed in Fire Prevention. They've had as many as six in the past, and there were four this year until Jim Rogge, who works out of Capitlan, was hurt in a motorcycle accident.

Back in 1976, when the SBRD had an all-time high budget of $547,000, $74,000 of that went to fire prevention. That's $13,000 more than Fire Management Officer Steve Makowski has to work with this year.

"It's possible we may have been a little fat that year," said Makowski. "The cutbacks have necessitated a personnel reduction in both suppression and prevention. What it does is reduce the number of contacts we can make with the public. Prevention can still make regular check-ups in the heavily used recreation areas, but we've had to let the outlying areas slide."

Members of the fire prevention division of the SBRD are also trained in law enforcement. Sometimes this enforcement involves nothing more than issuing a citation to a new camper. But with the TIMBER MANAGER MICHAEL FUNSTON, Girl Scouts after Tom Guck, right, had given center, gives a forest biology lesson to a camp of them a talk on fire hazards.

"FRIENDS OF SMOKEY BEAR don't play with matches," an entranced group of elementary school children were told. Smokey's visits to area schools form an important part of the Forest Service's fire prevention program.

increasing use of forest lands by the urban population, there are also occasions for a more serious type of enforcement. Because of this, each member of the fire prevention team goes through various degrees of law enforcement training.

They begin at Level I, which involves an eight hour training session giving an overview of the Forest Service's rules and regulations. There are about 10 Forest Service employees in this district who are Level II officers. They have gone through a 40 hour training session in Alamogordo which emphasizes fire investigation, inspection compliance, and the issuing of citations.

Two or three people in each district will be at Level III, which requires an 80 hour course in Albuquerque or Phoenix teaching the preparation of case reports and the filing of complaints. Each district will also normally have one Level IV Law Enforcement Officer. He or she will have attended a two-month session at a federal law enforcement academy, and will have the same qualifications as a state or city police officer.

So if you see a ranger with a gun on his hip, it isn't there for decoration.

A situation will occasionally arise when fire prevention personnel must be prepared to do yeoman duties as policeman. In 1977, there was a conflict here between an outlaw biker gang and the people here for the All-American Futurity. The bikers had hinted at violence when they returned for the Aspencade, and Ruidoso police requested that the Forest Service be on hand should the bikers decide to ride down Sudderth throwing inflammables. Nothing came of the threat, but the Forest Service did beef up on both its prevention and suppression personnel shortly thereafter.

For the most part, however, prevention involves a series of much more benign duties.

Tom Guck is manager of the Fire Prevention division of the SBRD. He comes from a family long associated with the Forest Service. His late father was District Ranger of the Smokey Bear District in the days before it consolidated with the Ruidoso District. And his brother is currently range conservationist at Gila National Forest.

Last week Guck talked to The Ruidoso News about the many responsibilities that go with fire prevention.

"To give you a current example, when the road crew begins work on the highway going up to the ski area, we'll have to go up there and make sure the contractors are using the proper spark arrestors on their equipment; that they don't use any open fires," Guck said. "They'll probably be required to keep a fire extinguisher and a shovel on each vehicle."

"But the restrictions won't be severe up there, since they'll be working in relatively cool wet country."

The Forest Service is responsible for drawing up such requirements any time construction is being done on land within its jurisdiction. After it is determined what the location and type of a proposed road is, for instance, we first have to notify the State Highway Commission of the specifications bidders will have to comply with. Then we have to check on the accepted contractor from time to time.

"Of course we can't be there much and a contractor could cheat on the specs. But we have the authority to shut them down if they're caught doing so. Most of them are more than willing to comply — they stand to lose a lot of money."

Up until 1975, Guck's main interest was in fire fighting. "But when you spend a lot of time in fire suppression, you gradually learn about how the fires get started and how they could have been prevented," he said. "I began working more in prevention and became manager of fire prevention in 1977."

Now Guck is responsible for overseeing the Forest Service's inspections of chain saws; of making spot checks on motor bikes. He supervises construction of fire breaks and sees that the floor is burned off once every five years.

Another preventive method is prescribed burning. With vigilant protection by man, some areas of forest land develop lush areas of undergrowth. Prescribed burns can also serve many other purposes such as increasing plant diversity or converting areas to rangeland for cattle. But when Guck sees an area which presents a particular fire hazard, he can recommend a burn to his superior, Makowski. They usually take place in the fall, after the rainy season has ended.

Guck said that his department also initiates fire precautions for special use permittees, for radio towers and for summer homes.

The Forest Service leased sites to people desiring to build summer homes as long ago as 1918. Many of the houses are still standing and receive yearly use. The Forest Service has long since ended the lease program in this area, but the older homes are sitting ducks for a flash fire unless stringent precautions are taken.

About 20 houses remain at Pine Lodge near Capitan, and there are 16 houses at the Eagle Creek Summer Homeowners Association.

While posting notices of the fire restrictions that went into effect last week, Caster pointed out potential hazards of the summer homes.

"Those pine needles collect on the roof and after the sun bakes them they're just like tinder. Whenever the summer visitors arrive we'll ask them to clean it off. We also have to make sure that no tree limbs protrude on the roof, that there's a screen on the chimney and that there are no flammables under the porch. If something is out of order, we give the owners a set time to clean it up. If they come up with an excuse later on, we're usually pretty lenient, but I'm sure that the owners are aware that the Forest Service reserves the right to terminate their lease."

One long-time homeowner in the Eagle Creek area, Al Gessler, said that this summer is the second driest in the 34 years he's been coming here. "The worst summer I can remember was in 1970," said Gessler, a retired railroad man from El Paso. "That summer they wouldn't even let us come up here. Other years they've put up roadblocks and only allowed homeowners in."

Caster's duties also include teaching campers how to build a fire ring and reconstructing culverts that floods occasionally wash out. When the Forest Service's "bulletin boards" begin looking run down, he repaints them. "Nobody believes you mean business if the sign looks like it's falling apart."

Caster worked in New Mexico public schools for over 40 years. He first worked for the Forest Service as a summer patrolman in 1948, during a 21 tenure in the Mountainair school district. He later served as a school superintendent in Capitan, Carrizozo, and Floyd before retiring in 1978. He had spent five summers working in a ranger station as a fire dispatcher some 30 years earlier, and when he came back to the Forest Service after retirement, he found that it had really changed.

"The radios we had to carry back then felt more like a five gallon water can — you couldn't just strap them on your hip like now," said Caster. "And of course there weren't any helicopters. You had to walk to wherever the fire was, and chances are by the time you got there you'd be popped out."

"I've really enjoyed working in fire prevention because I'm people oriented, and like work in the schools, fire prevention relies very heavily on good public relations. Whether you're teaching a kid to shoot a basket or showing someone how to clean a fire ring, if they can see it's more than just a job to you, they'll remember what you have to say."

A HORRIBLE THING HAPPENS WITHOUT ADVERTISING ... NOTHING

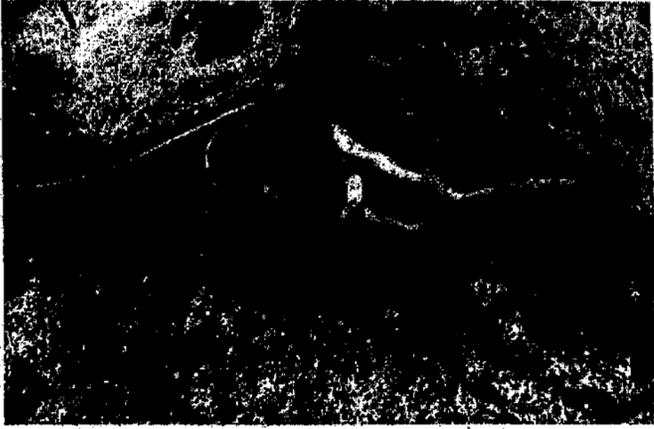

News photographer Laurie Snidow strolls through the forest, to record the quiet beauty abounding in the wooded mountainside

HARDLY A SOUND penetrates this leafy forest area.

HARDY TREES GROW well in this grouping of boulders.

THIS TREE is successfully striving for survival.

TINDER DRY ground cover crumbles underfoot.

LIKE WALDEN'S POND, the forest provides a place for quiet meditation, seemingly far away from life's problems.

ASPEN LEAVES quiver gently in a quiet breeze.

LIGHTNING must have shattered this tough pine.

HILL TOP SENTINEL thrives from its vantage point.

THESE TREES GLITTER in direct, bright sunlight.

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

BY FRED McCAFFREY
SANTA FE — Everybody feels sympathetic to the 2,000 New Mexicans liable to lose jobs because of Reagan budget cuts, but the truth is many of the jobs weren't necessary to begin with.

A newspaper story says 64 people will be put out of work in the Governor's Office of Community Affairs. Sad for them, but some citizens might think that was an agency which had been over-hired by almost that much since it came into being.

And if the State Planning Office loses 29 positions because 90 percent of its federal funding is to be cut off, others would say this kind of organization has been a product of the federal mind all along. It's hard to believe New Mexico could not get along without it.

As everyone knows, it's CIETA which will be hardest hit when jobs are being abolished. It looks like 1,200 or more local government posts in New Mexico will end abruptly when the axe falls here.

What's pathetic is that few of those affected will be in the jobs with the fat salaries here in Santa Fe. Those who know agree they're the ones who should be pared away, leaving money for people in the ranks who really need the work.

Or you could approach this whole thing like the Highway Department does. They expect to lose $14 million in federal funds, which doesn't sound like an insignificant sum. But will they fire anybody? Not a bit of it. Maybe everybody out there will just work a little bit less, and thus help preserve everyone else's job.

Some folks around that same Highway Department are well aware of the fact that more than 228 individuals and companies have been indicted in at least 11 states which are investigating rigged bids from Highway contractors.

Among states near ours now looking into the problem are Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Montana.

Indicted company officials have called the practice of bid-rigging "a way of life" or "just a form of gentleman's agreement that didn't hurt anybody."

Question: Is anybody looking into the situation here in New Mexico?

Like many states, New Mexico keeps looking for a way to take its judges out of politics.

We've got a constitutional amendment on the subject to be voted on in 1982.

This one would have the judge's name on the ballot, with a recommendation on whether he or she should be put back into office printed beside it.

The recommendation would come from the state's Judicial Standards Committee.

Trouble is, that group says it doesn't want to make that kind of recommendations, and doesn't have the manpower to make the investigations that would be necessary to make the proposal work.

Frankly, though we like Joe Mercer, who proposed the amendment, we aren't at all sure this one is workable.

Besides, why is it all right for the people who make the laws to be politicians and the people who administer the laws to be politicians, while those who judge the cases arising from the laws must be above politics?

Sure, elections are hard work, distasteful and sometimes painful, but why is it only judges we keep trying to exempt from them?

We just thought we'd ask. Now write and tell us how stupid we are.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

It was 1978. America was dependent on foreign oil that was produced in a politically unstable area — the Mideast. We needed to spur domestic production to reduce this dependency and move our nation towards energy independence.

The Powerplant and Industrial Fuel Use Act of 1978 was Congress' answer to this national problem. This legislation was expected to solve it by encouraging the use of America's plentiful coal reserves by utilities and heavy industrial users of foreign oil.

The legislation would have been fine, but Congress took it a step further and prohibited the use of one of our most plentiful domestic energy resources, natural gas, in order to encourage the switch to coal use. The Fuel Use Act prohibited the use of natural gas by public utilities by 1990, and prevented current oil-burning plants from switching to natural gas. These restrictions were based on information received by Congress that estimated our reserves of natural gas would run out by 1985.

This estimation proved to be inaccurate. With new discoveries of natural gas reserves being made every day, the current estimates show natural gas reserves holding up through the year 2000 and possibly beyond. It would be foolish not to use these resources in solving this still critical national problem of foreign oil dependency.

This is why I introduced S. 996, the Natural Gas Utilization Act of 1981, which will correct some of the well-intentioned, but misguided, provisions of the Fuel Use Act. It is not intended to change a fuel conversion policy that has already begun to be implemented and will not order plants that have already begun to convert to coal to re-convert to natural gas. This bill is an effort to utilize more of our domestic resources by allowing electric powerplants and major industrial users the opportunity to convert to natural gas. This is the common sense approach to the problem — permitting, but not mandating, the use of the nearest available and most cost-effective domestic fuels, thereby reducing our dependence on foreign oil.

By allowing the utilities to use natural gas, costs of producing electricity will be lowered in many areas, thus lowering the cost to consumers.

Because natural gas burns very little sulphur, we would reduce the threat of acid rainfall, a problem found in the eastern United States and rapidly spreading westward.

We have a better understanding today of the nature of our energy problem than we did at the time of the passage of the Fuel Use Act. The problem is still our dependency on imported oil, and our national security is still threatened if these supplies are cut off. But we have more resources at our disposal here in America than we originally thought and this bill, though a long way from passage, is a step in the right direction.

I am not proposing, however, a massive conversion of utilities and industrial boilers to natural gas based on some unproven prediction of boundless natural gas supplies in the future. It is a measured step which recognizes our present and near-term natural gas prospects, and deals with existing, not new, facilities. Passage of this bill would correct the deficiencies in the original legislation and get us back on track with the original goal — reducing our dependence on foreign oil and moving America toward energy independence.

Congress' concern for solving our nation's energy problems right now prevented us from taking the time needed to properly analyze the problem and come up with the best possible solution. Now it's time to correct the overkill of the 1978 law, so that we can use all available resources to achieve energy independence.

GOING UNDER

The financial strain of borrowing money at excessive interest rates, raging inflation and uneven business conditions — a recession in some industries — are forcing many United States businesses to close their doors.

One source (Dun and Bradstreet) reports that already this year about six thousand American businesses have folded — a 47 percent increase over the 1980 rate of business failures.

What is disturbing is the trend. In one week in twenty years. It's suspected that high interest rates, which traditionally hurt and which began to increase again in May after a long-awaited decline, was the straw that broke the back of many businesses.

The Reagan Administration's official view is that the most recent news — prices are rising much slower — means interest rates are in a long-term downward trend. This, it is said, will prevent so many failures in the future.

But for some who worked a lifetime building a business, the policies of the federal government in recent decades, which brought on today's inflation, rising costs and spotty economic growth, have done them in. They deserved better from the politicians in Washington. The News, Santa Rosa

'Old Lincoln Days' this year, due to the efforts of the Lincoln Pageant and Festival Corporation, will substitute educational exhibits in lieu of the customary arts and crafts fair.

It is the purpose of the Corporation to display crafts and exhibits of circa 1890, including gunsmithing, spinning and weaving, manufacturing and laying of adobe, wood carving, quilting and other crafts of that era.

Unchanged will be the popular attractions: The Last Escape of Billy the Kid pageant, the 41 mile Pony Express Race and the street parade, featuring many floats reminiscent of Old Lincoln Town, that has proven popular with crowds over the years.

The Corporation is seeking persons who wish to display crafts and exhibits of the 1890s, as well as service organizations of church groups desiring to operate concession stands. Information is available from the Lincoln Pageant and Festival Corporation, Box 92, Lincoln, New Mexico 88338.

Due to efforts by individuals and organizations to refurbish many of the Old Lincoln Town attractions, restoring them to their former splendor, we feel that this year's endeavor to include educational and cultural attractions along with the August 7-9 celebration is most commendable.

Pending the success of this year's venture, which should be assured, it's entirely possible that Old Lincoln Town may become known nation-wide as Lincoln County's "Best Kept Secret," and with that we can find no fault. — CD

ANY BEEFS, GOVERNOR?

In case you weren't aware of it ... Governor Bruce King, sometime back, proclaimed June as Beef Month in New Mexico.

Now, considering everything that's happened in the state during recent months, you certainly have to give his ribs credit ... 'cause he's been getting a lot of heat about things he's done ... or hasn't done ... and for the forthrightness, or lack thereof, in which he did, or didn't do, what ever he did or didn't do.

But we'd certainly like to know how many "beefs" he got.

Ruidoso folks than they are as of the nonce.

RAINMAKER, ATTENTION!

We know it's dry in Harmony Valley ... so dry the pine needles are starting to emit squeaking sounds as they rub together whilst the gentle breezes are whispering through them.

And, so far as we know, the lack of rain isn't from lack of efforts of local people to try and have it rain ... with efforts to date being of no avail ... 'cause we ain't had no deluges for people to claim they provoked.

However ... if you, or anyone you know, has any clout with the New Mexico Army National Guard ... there's hope in the offing for early rains ... maybe before The Fourth ... but you gotta hurry.

There's a Rudy Triviz in the Guard ... he's a Warrant Officer 4 ... and he's produced rain on the Dona Ana Range ... when it was so dry for so long that the whitened buffalo bones were starting to edge towards Lake Lucero ... and if you're so dry you start edging towards Lake Lucero for moisture ... brother, you're dry.

Anyhow ... seems Triviz ... a couple years back ... whilst it was hotter'n hot and drier'n dry on the Dona Ana Range ... up and whittled him a "rain wand" ... outta one long and one short chunks of tree branch ... about an inch or so thick ... and he did festoon said wand ... with the short piece making the top of a cross, when attached to the long piece ... with C-ratlon carton straps and camouflage netting ... and he painted orange and yellow rings on the wand ... and scorched bear paws and thunderbirds into the wood ... and then he did proceed, as the heat of the day was dissipated by the cool of the evening ... to complete a series of gyrations ... accompanied by a dance resembling an Irish jig ... all the time jabbing his wand towards the heavens ... and ... and this is a proven fact ... he brought so much rain to the range that his fellows-at-arms almost soaked his head in the puddles.

And he performed his wonders a second time. Seems we should invite Triviz to Harmony Valley ... after all, what do we have to lose?

Leased Floodlighting is no accident.

As a businessman, your decision to install leased floodlighting on your business property can mean added safety and security for the entire operation. Well lighted property and equipment is less subject to vandalism. And brightly lighted walkways, stairways, loading docks, and parking lots reduce the chance of accidents due to poor night-time visibility. Leased floodlighting provides directional lighting, and gives increased illumination per watt over standard incandescent lighting. Make a wise business decision ... call us for leased floodlighting, today.

State Fair increases purses

Close to a million-and-a-half dollars in purse and premium money is being offered to winners of various competitions at the 1981 Centennial New Mexico State Fair in September. This is the largest money offering in the history of the exposition.

The actual total is $1,482,752, an increase over the $1,470,112, which was set aside for winners last year. As usual, the biggest chunk of the money is in the purse offering at the pari-mutuel racing meet. This year, it is expected to top $1,191,015.

The all-star rodeo is also one of the heavy areas for prize money. This year's fair will have rodeo purses of $47,200, up from the $44,450 last season.

In regular fair departments, a grand total of $244,537 in premium money has been earmarked for winners. This is a nice jump from the $225,662 at last year's fair. Total premium money includes $211,977 in open divisions and $32,560 in the junior sections.

Traditionally, the largest premium outlay is in the horse department. This year it again tops the list, at $50,500.

Following are the premium totals for the other open competitions: beef, $40,640; dairy, $29,040; goats, $10,000; sheep, $14,874; National Hampshire sheep show, $4,500; wool show, $665; swine, $12,138.

Poultry, $10,600; rabbits, $7,500; agriculture, $3,890; women's center, $3,400; Indians, $5,204; hobbies, $4,475; art, $3,875; photography, $350; contemporary crafts, $1,850.

The $32,560 in the junior competitions is divided as follows: beef, $8,733; dairy, $8,597; sheep, $8,345; swine, $4,200; agriculture, $276; 4-H, $1,965; Future Farmers, $2,150; FFA ag mechanics, $1,950; Boy Scouts, $157, and Girl Scouts, $189.

The Centennial New Mexico State Fair — The biggest Show in New Mexico — will be held in Albuquerque September 18 through 27, with the 17-day pari-mutuel race meet and quality horse shows set to get underway September 11.

New Mexico State Fair entry office has opened

A sure sign that the New Mexico State Fair is coming up is the announcement that the Entry Office is officially open. The department accepts all competitive entries for the annual exposition.

Mrs. Effie Fitzhugh, entry superintendent, reported that a total of $244,537 in premium money is being offered this year. This includes $211,977 in open departments and $32,560 for the junior sections. She reported the office, in the fair administrative complex, would be open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday to provide information, entry forms and premium lists to prospective exhibitors.

Fitzhugh also announced the schedule of deadlines for entries in the various departments.

- August 1: dairy goats.
- August 11: horses.
- August 13: all other livestock (beef and dairy cattle, swine, poultry, rabbits and sheep) and wool.
- August 15: contemporary crafts.
- August 29: all art.

Ruidoso Downs Hoofbeats

HORSES OWNED by Texans and Oklahomans will dominate the finals of the $500,000 Rainbow Derby, the second leg of the Triple Crown for three-year-old quarter horses. The Rainbow Derby, at 440 yards on July 5 will provide the winner with $208,547.50. Of the 10 entrants who earned qualifying times from Friday's 13 trial races, six were owned by Texans, three had Oklahoma owners and one horse was owned by Coloradans. Three horses who ran in the Kansas Derby earned Rainbow Derby spots — Easily Smashed, who won the 400 yard Kansas Derby on May 21 at Ruidoso Downs; Native Tea, who was fifth and Mighty Pass 'Em who finished seventh. The gross purse of $500,000 is the largest in the 17-year history of the event. Last year's gross purse of $500,180 was the previous record. Trainers C. Dwayne Gilbreath and jockey James Lackey each qualified two horses for the Rainbow finals — Dr. Depot and Matty Mito. The 10 Rainbow qualifiers and their times include Easily Smashed (21.98); Higheasterjet (22:09); Native Tea (22:20); Sunst Moon (22:21); Mighty Pass 'Em (22:28); Dr. Depot (22:28); Heza Bunny (22:38); Matty Mito (22:38); Rule The Deck (22:38) and Porsperverance (22:40).

TEXANS ALSO OWNED nine of the 10 three-year-olds who qualified for the Norgor Thoroughbred Derby on June 27. The six-furlong race offers a total purse of $34,640 with the winner collecting $17,320. The only horse not owned by a Texan in the finals is Ambitious Appetite, owned by Dallas McCasland of Eunice. Those gaining berths after Thursday's three trial races are Clinkinman, Ambitious Appetite, Norgors Miss, Aminaus, Dynamic Sesenta, Count Zorba, Macksaredevil, Fill Mackis Cup, Special Special and Sunday's Night.

GEORGE W. PRATT JR., who was originally scheduled to analyze the Ruidoso Downs racing surface on June 23 has delayed his scheduled visit until July 14. A professor of electrical engineering and computer science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he will perform two tests on the racetrack. He has analyzed various American and Canadian race tracks with the same methods he will use at Ruidoso Downs.

WHAT LUCK sired two winners on Thursday's program. A two-year-old colt, Luckluster, won the fifth race over five and one half furlongs as the $3.80 favorite. Lucks Lighting, a four-year-old gelding, captured the seventh race at 870 yards, paying $7.40 to win as the third choice.

HIGHEASTERJET, who tallied a one-length win in the eighth Rainbow Derby trial race, caused a minus show pool of $1,475.62. The winner of last Labor Day's $1,200,000 All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, Higheasterjet was a 1-5 favorite. Of the total show pool of $13,550, $9,072 was wagered on the Johnie A.

Goodman-trained standout. He's owned by J. D. Highsmith of La Grange, Texas and was ridden by Billy Hunt.

JACKIE MARTIN, Ruidoso Downs' leading jockey, scored three wins during the 13 Rainbow Derby trials on Friday. He won aboard Easily Smashed ($3.40) in the first, A Smooth Bug ($8.40) in the fifth and on Runnin Barre ($3.60) in the tenth. Easily Smashed was the only horse whose time earned him a berth in the Rainbow Derby finals.

STEPHANIE THRASHER, sister of Ruidoso Downs identifier Jeff Thrasher, is back home for a two week vacation after completing her first year's training toward the 1984 Olympics at the National Academy of Artistic Gymnastics in Eugene, Oregon. This year, she competed as a Class I in Mexico City, Vancouver, Canada and many American cities. She has now reached the elite status, the highest level in gymnastics. She has maintained her goal of reaching the top in less than four years.

CRIMSON AVENGER became the highest priced horse to be claimed when he was hauled for $10,000 in Saturday's sixth race. He was taken from owners Dr. John J. And Ruth Kovaric of Corpus Christi, Texas, by new owner Virginia L. Byrd. The three-year-old colt's new trainer will be Johnny Burke.

IN STEWARDS' COLLARS: — Trainers Russel M. Harris and H. C. Werner Jr., were each fined $50 for entering a horse without the owners' license being registered with the New Mexico State Racing Commission.

— Jockey agent Terry A. Morris was fined $50 for being in a restricted area, the winner's circle.

— Jockey Pedro L. Herrera was fined $50 for failure to have control of his mount Man O Grit away from the starting gate during the eighth race on June 14.

— Jockey Steven F. Fuller was fined $50 for failure to maintain a straight course while astride his mount, Becky's Filly, during the running of the third race on June 19.

— Trainer Melvin Don Maines was fined $10 for illegal parking.

FOUR SEASONAL best times were recorded over the weekend. Easily Smashed was timed in 21:98 for winning his 440 yard Rainbow Derby trial race. The Kansas Derby winner tallied by three and one fourth lengths, the largest win margin of the six winners who qualified for the July 5 finale. Other bests included a 1:35 3/5 by Yosemite Dancer in Winning Saturday's 10th race at seven and one half furlongs, a 28:16 by Pass Em Up Deck in capturing Saturday's fourth race at 550 yards and a 1:13 1/5 by Ruffast, who won Sunday's ninth race at six furlongs.

TRAINER J. Doyal Roberts saddled three winners on Sunday: Ruffast ($4.40) in the ninth, Glover D. ($2.80) in the Aspen Stakes and Vinton Scout ($13.40) in the 12th.

Jockey/Trainer of the week

BY MARK GORDON
Richard Bickel and J. Doyal Roberts certainly prospered during the seventh week of racing at Ruidoso Downs. Both enjoyed productive weekends to make major advances in their respective standings after 25 days of racing.

Bickel won seven races last weekend to move from fifth to second in the jockey standings. Roberts saddled five winners to move into third place in the trainer standings after being off-the-board last week.

RICHARD BICKEL

Bickel opened with one victory on Thursday and then won two races on each of the last three days. Bickel's best day may well have been Sunday when he guided Ruffast, a stakes-winning mare, to an easy four length win in the featured allowance race. Then he booted home Glover D. to a two and three quarter length win in the $7,350 Aspen Stakes.

Bickel has 19 winners with 11 seconds and 13 thirds in 89 mounts. That's a .220 winning percentage. A week ago, his winning percentage was .164.

Jackie Martin, however, still leads the jockey standings. He has 27 winners with 25 seconds and 19 thirds from 115 mounts. His winning percentage is .234.

Other top ten jockeys include Leroy Coombs, Stuart Dolphus, Willie Lovell, James Lackey, Wayne Buehrer, W. R. Hunt, Jack Wallace and apprentice Billy Byers.

Roberts, meanwhile, enjoyed a three-win day on Sunday to give him five for the four day weekend. He now has 11 victories, six seconds and six thirds from 62 mounts.

The leaders in the trainer standings remained unchanged.

William F. Leach leads with 18 wins, 9 seconds and 7 thirds from 88 mounts. That's a .204 winning percentage.

Gerald Marr is still second with 14 triumphs, seven seconds and six thirds from 59 mounts. He has a .237 winning percentage.

Other top-ten trainers include Johnie A. Goodman, Harold E. Nolen, Billy Hughes, Marilyn Asmussen, C. Dwayne Gilbreath, Jack Brooks and J. C. Wiley.

Racing resumes today at Ruidoso Downs with 32 horses entered in four trial races for the $89,824 Norgor Thoroughbred Futurity. The Futurity, at four furlongs on July 12, will provide the winner $34,464.

Friday will feature 12 races, while Saturday's highlight will be the finals of the $34,840 Norgor Derby at six furlongs.

Sunday's highlight will be the Flying Charm Stakes at 870 yards. The race, with a purse of $7,500-added, is for three-year-old and older horses.

Post time each day will be 1 p.m.

Race horse painter a rare breed

BY DICK ALWAN
Of all the people connected with race horses, the rarest is the fellow who paints them.

There's only a handful in the western states — gentlemen with big time reputations and a steady flow of commissions.

Let's say you own a quarter horse, and this horse won the All-American Futurity, or the All-American Derby, or the Kansas Futurity, or any other blue ribbon classic at Ruidoso Downs.

You'd be proud beyond words, your pockets would be padded with green stuff, and you'd be ready to immortalize your champ in oil. This modest work would hang over your fireplace, or in the board room down at the plant, and maybe you'd use this painting in the quarter horse magazines when it comes time to start your champ's breeding career.

So whom would you call to do the portrait? The chances are you'd reach Warren Mixer in Edmund, Oklahoma, or Darrell Dickerson in Colorado. Or you'd call Sherrill Brooke, 33, whose long suit used to be painting livestock. For the past two to three years, Brooke has specialized in the race horse, and his list of credits — and the list of portraits still to be done — just might put him at the top among quarter horse artists.

"I try to capture the 'sense' of each horse," Brooke said. "Each horse is different — the way he stands, the structure of his muscles, the kind of personality he reflects. I'm a realist at heart, and I try to portray realism in my paintings. But I'm after more than realism. I'm after a 'dimensional' quality you can't get in a photograph. I try to capture the animation and effervescence of a given race horse."

Strictly a self-taught artist, Brooke says he's known, since the age of four, that his mission was to hold paint brush in hand and sit in front of a canvas. He's never been to art school, but he's been painting professionally since high school. Many of his paintings of meticulously bred cattle now hang in board rooms around the country.

But Brooke, who works in a small studio in his home in Mansfield, Missouri (about 50 miles southwest of Springfield), is now making a big move in the racing world. His clients are an imposing lot, which pretty well assures that Sherrill Brooke won't have many idle hours on his hands.

Brooke's recent works include a portrait of the quarter horse champ, Miss Thermolark, for Ronny Schlep, for Paul Howard. He's done That's Haney for Bill Reed. He's been commissioned to paint Hempen for Walter Merrick, Easy Angel for Myron Palermo, Money Lender for Dee and Betty Rapler, Little Blue Sheep for Cole Jungers, Lady Bug's Moon for George Middleton, and Merridoc for Fred Seane.

Currently, he's negotiating on Bold Ego, the Ruidoso Downs and Sunland Park Stakes winner who recently finished a close second in the Preakness Stakes. He's also been contacted by the owner of Summing, the Belmont Stakes winner.

Brooke paints in two sizes: 20 by 24 inches, which costs $5,000 and 28 by 32 inches, which costs $10,000. Brooke also requires a round trip plane ticket from his home to wherever the subject is standing. In addition, there's the incidental expenses connected with the trip — lodging, food, and incidentals. So his fee usually includes about another grand.

Once it's established that Brooke is to paint a horse, he packs up his camera and catches the next plane. He spends several hours taking photographs, usually about 40 or 50 shots. Then it's back to the studio, where he works up a preliminary black-and-white pencil sketch.

This sketch is sent to the owner, who reviews it and suggests alterations, if any. Brooke makes these adjustments, if any, sends a copy to the client, and the client forks over half the commission.

Brooke now settles in at his studio and paints the portrait. Usually, he works on three or four paintings at the same time. (Working on several concurrently, he says, "Keeps you fresh.") He needs six to eight weeks to finish the job.

Before the finished painting is shipped to the client, Brooke takes a color photograph. This goes to the client, and gives the client an opportunity to make any final adjustments. "I guarantee the paintings," Brooke said. "If the painting doesn't look exactly like the horse, I'll refund the client's money. So far, that's never happened."

The client reviews the color photograph, gives the project a once-and-for-all blessing, mails in the balance of the dough, and Brooke ships off the canvas.

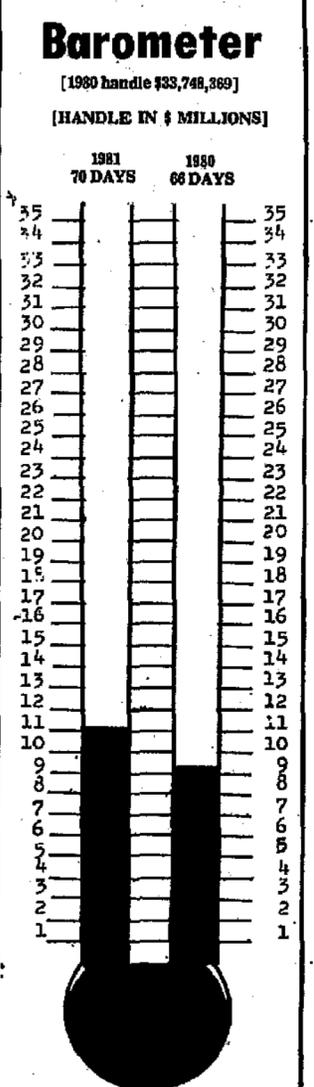

Since Brooke's object is to capture in oils the effervescence and "life-likeness" of a great quarter horse, and to show this animal in all his glowing physical beauty, what happens if he's commissioned to paint a dud? What if a certain fellow's champion happens to have all the personality of a mud fence? Brooke handles the situation simply: "I've turned down commissions because the subjects weren't suitable. Either the personalities of these horses were flat, or their conformation was deficient. If I started 'correcting' these horses, I might as well have been a veterinarian."

Brooke says he's yet to come across a bona fide stakes horse whose temperament couldn't be interpreted on canvas.

Two well known horsemen, B. F. Phillips and Ronny Schlep, helped indoctrinate Brooke on the finer points of equine anatomy when he was making the switch from livestock to race horses. He also gets critical input from three local pals, Johnny Watterson, Floyd Lansdown and Don Freeman.

When the finished painting is shipped to the client, Brooke, veteran that he is, still gets a nervous, hollow feeling. "It's not the money that worries me," he said. "It's trying to please the client. I always pray these people will have a piece of work they'll be proud to display."

So far, Brooke has kept his clients awfully proud, and those commissions keep rolling in.

"AFTER THE STORM" — an Arizona landscape by artist Evert Furrey, executed in transparent watercolor.

Furrey plans summer painting workshop here

Examples of Furrey's work are on display at the Old Adobe Patio Gallery, managed by his wife, Diane. Recently opened in Ruidoso as a regular summer gallery, they also operate a gallery of the same name in Tucson during the winter. Information regarding class schedules can be obtained at the gallery in Adobe Plaza or telephone 257-2684 between 10 a.m. and 8:30 p.m.

He enjoys teaching and schedules several months of teaching each year. Furrey said, "I find it a challenge to teach whether it's a group of beginners or an advanced workshop. We all have something more to learn about art and it's a real satisfaction to see beginners lose their fear of the transparent watercolor medium which intimidates so many artists."

Evert Furrey, a well known Arizona artist from Tucson, will hold a series of summer watercolor painting classes and art workshops at his studio in Adobe Plaza beginning July 8.

Furrey is noted for strong paintings of Southwestern landscapes, Indian and cowboy subjects. Although he works in several mediums, he prefers transparent watercolor and many collectors consider him a master of this challenging medium. Winner of many competitive awards and a member of numerous art organizations, he teaches and judges art shows in Arizona, Florida and California. Recently, his portrait "Woman and Child" won the Laguna Beach Art Museum's coveted "Richter Award" for first place in traditional watercolor in Laguna Beach, California, a city known for fine art and fierce art competition.

Simon and Bard charting new musical territory

BY GREG STEPHENS
Staff Writer/Photographer

Ruidoso jazz fans were treated to three night of outstanding music last weekend at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club.

In a return engagement to the private club, the Simon and Bard Group from Chicago demonstrated a brand of music that, although labeled "jazz fusion", is really a category of its own. Reflected in their sound are strains of classical, rock, swing, and more exotic elements of world folk music. The result is one of the most innovative approaches to "fusion" music since the inception of the phenomenally successful ensemble "Weather Report" in 1970.

Before going on to concerts in Albuquerque, Tucson and San Francisco, members of the Simon and Bard Group took time out to talk about their careers and the direction they hope to see their music take.

Pianist Fred Simon and Michael Bard, who plays reeds, formed the group about three years ago. They had both been playing in the big band of the late Stan Kenton. As Kenton's health began to fail and the group dispersed, they decided the time was ripe to begin performing an extensive book of their own material.

In late 1979, the group began recording material for Flying Fish Records of Chicago. Their first album, titled "Music," was recently pressed. In the manner of first releases of unknown jazz groups, it features the work of a more famous musician — guitarist Larry Coryell.

Simon and Bard had known each other since 1963, and went to the same Illinois junior high and high schools together (Evanston High). The two had some early experience playing together before Simon went off to college at the University of Illinois and Bard to Lawrence University in Appleton, Wisconsin.

While Simon was completing his music degree, Bard left school to play in the now defunct ensemble "Matrix" — one of the original practitioners of the musical form coming to be called "fusion."

Bard recorded one album with Matrix and then left to join Kenton's big band. It was at Bard's suggestion that Simon came in to replace the ailing Kenton, after graduating in 1978.

"One thing we've found out about our music is that it doesn't matter how it's categorized — people respond to the energy and the good feeling in it," Bard said. "Almost all our songs have a tight basic structure, but we've played together long enough to where we have a lot of freedom to improvise within that structure. So what you're hearing is never the same from night to night. We try to play music accessible to the listener without ever boring ourselves."

In concert, the group may start off with a whimsical melody, move into a swing-like section and include a long bridge of Balinese polyrhythms before returning to the original melody. The "free jazz" they employ has often been accused of degenerating into a private conversation between musicians. Although Simon and Bard do occasionally sound self-consciously complex, the surprise is that even when their music takes the most unexpected turns, they usually retain enough direction to hold the audience's interest.

Simon said that several major record companies — including Warner Brothers — have approached the group with the possibility of signing a recording contract. In the meantime, when their concert schedule permits, Simon and Bard are recording their second album for the Flying Fish label.

"We feel that it will be a lot stronger than the first," said Simon. "One of the main reasons is that we've never had a permanent rhythm section until the last six months."

The group's bassist at that time, Steve Rodby, left to play with the ECM recording artist Pat Metheny and was replaced by Larry Gray. Before joining Simon and Bard, Gray had studied classical string bass, piano, and theory in Chicago. One of his tutors was Joe Guastafeste, 1st bass of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Gray still uses the piano for many of his compositions. One of his pieces, "I Hope and Pray," recently appeared on an Arista album by Paul Berliner called "The Sun Rises Late." Berliner is an ethnomusicologist studying African folk music (two of his albums appeared on the Nonesuch series), and the Arista album features a cross between jazz and an African music known as "Shona."

Gray was also a guest artist along with Simon and Bard's drummer, Paul Wertico, on an album by saxophonist Mike Smith. Wertico has been with the group 18 months now. "This is really the most challenging music I've ever played," he said. "It keeps you thinking but at the same time I find it very enjoyable."

Because of finances Simon only plays acoustic piano at present, but said he's including some electronic keyboards on the next album. One of the most distinctive sounds of the group is Bard's lyric, an instrument that looks like a cross between a flute and an alto saxophone. Played through its own synthesizer, Bard is capable of evoking sounds ranging from a gentle woodwind to a high-pitched wail.

When the group can afford it, Bard hopes to add a violin, guitar, trumpet and perhaps a percussionist. Bard jokingly refers to the group as "The Grateful Dead of the jazz fusion world," and he hopes the added instrumentation will enable them to put an even more distinctive signature on their music.

Simon and Bard plan to be back in Ruidoso sometime this fall or winter, for their third booking at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club.

PIANIST FRED SIMON composes most of Simon and Bard's material.

Oil thieves rob boxcar

Call it a sign of the times.

Jessie James robbed trains for money; Pancho Villa robbed them to make a revolutionary statement. But in Clovis, someone robbed a train for oil.

The theft occurred on May 14, around 1 p.m., at the Ray Bell satellite storage area on South Prince Street in Clovis.

Police say the offenders apparently had a key to a box car located at the storage area. During a 45-minute period, they cleaned out the boxcar of a wide variety of oil, including Pennzoil, Trop Artic, Conoco, Gulf, Havoline, Quaker State and Amalite brands. The owners estimated the oil was valued at more than $8,000.

The boxes of oil were apparently put in a light blue 30-foot double axle gooseneck trailer, which was pulled by a white pickup.

Curry County Sheriff's officers, who are investigating the case, believe the theft must have been witnessed by a number of citizens. They're hoping one of them calls Crime Stoppers.

This week the State Crime Stoppers Commission is offering up to $1,000 and the Curry County Crime Stoppers Program is chipping in $300 for information leading to the solution of the theft.

Anyone having any information is asked to call the State Crime Stoppers Commission at its toll-free number, 1-800-432-6933, or Curry County Crime Stoppers at 763-7000.

Meanwhile, Deming Crime Stoppers is offering a reward for information leading to the solution of a bunkhouse theft at the Flying Y Ranch around May 15. Among the items taken by the offenders were an antique hall tree and a faded black, red and white Navajo saddle blanket. Anyone with information is asked to call 546-7800.

Fortales Crime Stoppers, at 356-8100, is after an auto thief. It seems someone drove a brand new tan and red Chevrolet half-ton pickup off the Cooper-Huddleston car lot. A $100 reward is being offered.

Armed robbery is the crime on the mind of Espanola Crime Stoppers, at 753-6664. On Sunday, May 3, a white male armed with a handgun robbed the Espanola Safeway Store. The offender, described as about 5-6, medium build, with blonde hair and some facial hair, entered the store before noon and pointed his gun at the store manager and demanded money. The offender fled on foot after the robbery. A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered.

Armed robbers also are the targets of Otero County Crime Stoppers. The Alamogordo based program is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the solution of a May 19 residential armed robbery. Two men, one a white male 23-25, 5-7, 160 pounds, with a full beard and blonde stringy hair, and an hispanic male, 30, 5-9, 180 pounds, forced their way into an Alamogordo residence and demanded money from the occupants. Anyone with information is asked to call 437-2000.

You have to sell a lot of hot dogs to make $1,000. Just ask Der Wienerschnitzel in Las Cruces, who were the victims of a sneak thief. On April 11, the thief, who had a slender build and stood 5-8, and had dark hair combed straight back to his collar, took a money bag containing about $1,000 from a Der Wienerschnitzel at 1028 E1 Paseo. Dona Ana County Crime Stoppers, at 526-9000, is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the capture of the thief.

The State Crime Stoppers Commission and the 32 other Crime Stoppers programs in New Mexico pay cash rewards for information leading to the solution of major crimes. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

To date Crime Stoppers Programs in New Mexico have helped solve 3,623 crimes with the help of citizens' calls. A total of $4.6 million in stolen property has been recovered and 1,337 persons have been successfully prosecuted.

Pilot plant breaks new ground on alternate energy

Recent ground breaking ceremonies for a fuel alcohol pilot plant at New Mexico State University's (NMSU) Plains Branch Agricultural Experiment Station also has opened up new territory in agricultural research.

"I never dreamed 10 or 15 years ago that agriculture would have taken a direct role in fuel production," said Dr. Koert J. Leasman, Agricultural Experiment Station director. He told a crowd of more than 200 people that challenges such as fuel alcohol production make agricultural research an exciting science.

It was about 10 years ago that Dr. George Morin, the project agricultural engineer, began taking an interest in alternate fuels. Morin said although he didn't seriously consider energy problems in the late 1960s, he was concerned with irrigation efficiencies in his research at the University of Arizona. "I realized then that if you conserve water you automatically conserve energy," he said. "By 1971 or 1972, I could see problems in terms of energy available for pumping water."

The 1978 oil embargo was conclusive evidence in the case for changing agricultural practices.

That's when he began to look at alternate energy sources from an energy efficiency standpoint. In the next few years he continued his irrigation research and earned a Ph.D. in soil and water science.

However, it wasn't until April 1980 that he was able to concentrate his studies on producing alcohol fuel from plants. His position at the new pilot plant gave him this opportunity.

Morin has devoted most of the past year to developing a fuel alcohol plant model and ironing out production problems. He also has modified diesel and spark emission engines to run on alcohol instead of an alcohol-gasoline mixture.

"We plan to use the alcohol produced at the pilot plant in a diesel engine to pump irrigation water and to power farm truck engines," he said.

The ground breaking ceremonies also included a sneak preview of the plant. A scale model and the plant's actual components were on display. The components will be assembled and in working order before the end of August, according to Morin.

The plant will house cooking, fermenting and boiler units, while the distillation column and crop residue burner will be constructed just outside. The tanks will be able to distill 800 gallons of 190 proof alcohol to fuel the modified engines, and 720 gallons of spent mash suitable for livestock feed.

One crop, the Jerusalem artichoke, is high in sugar content and shows promise for alcohol production. Its knobby, twisted roots could produce as much as 380 gallons of alcohol an acre.

Another addition to the branch station's alternate energy package is now under construction. A 56-foot-tall wind charger, which looks like a cross between an old fashioned wind mill and an airplane propeller, will provide electricity to the station.

Although the charger will provide about 21,000 kilowatt hours of electricity a year, its primary purpose is to demonstrate how wind generated electricity can reduce the costs of energy for deep well irrigation pumping. The wind charger is a cooperative project between NMSU and the University of New Mexico.

Researchers aren't the only ones with far sighted ideas on energy. Flinkner, who is also the station superintendent, said the station's advisory committee originated the idea for the pilot plant.

"It was based on their recommendation that we initiate a proposal for a fuel alcohol plant," he said. The advisory committee, which includes farmers from a four-county area, took the idea from its grass roots beginning and followed it through with economic and political support, Flinkner said.

State Representative Hoyt Pattison and Advisory Committee Chairman Wayne Baker brought the proposal before the New Mexico Legislature. The proposal was approved December 1979. In addition to legislative funding through the New Mexico Energy and Minerals Department, the project received funds from the Four Corners Regional Commission and NMSU's Agricultural Experiment Station.

Morin views criticism of fuel alcohol as a fad solution to the energy crisis from a researcher's long-range perspective. "In the long run, petroleum has a finite limit. We should start building our plants and doing our research now so that when we reach that limit, we will be prepared," he said.

What's happening here?

The Ruidoso News will periodically picture commercial and residential construction in progress to present current development in New Mexico's fastest growing resort community, Ruidoso.

THE 20-20 CO-OP GALLERY will open about July 1 at 1407 Sudderth. The building is currently being remodeled by artists whose works will be displayed there. The combination studio and gallery will include Travis House Graphics (Dave Travis); the Nancy Fleharty J.D. Yoakum studio; and the Jo Cunningham-Mike Torrez studio. Graphic arts, paintings and pottery by Tim Weirwille will be exhibited in the 1200 square foot building.

ODESSA FILLY GOES IN NORGOR — Sunday's Night, a filly owned by Sam Henderson of Odessa, Texas, goes in the $34,640 Norgor Thoroughbred Derby at Ruidoso Downs on Saturday. Earlier in the season, Sunday's Night won by six lengths. She's earned some $50,000 since the start of her career. Larry Byers does the riding.

A DYNAMIC CONTENDER — Dynamic Sasenta, a sophomore gelding who's made over $100,000 so far, is eying the $17,320 victory purse connected to the Norgor Thoroughbred Derby at Ruidoso Downs on Saturday.

'The Horse Show' set at Nottingham's Pub

"The Horse Show," an art show and sale will open Saturday night at Nottingham's Pub, under the sponsorship of Art Futures, a non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion of the arts. Six Santa Fe artists will exhibit works in various media, all with horses as the primary theme. The show will run through July 15. Artists participating include Kevin Red Starr, oil paintings; Earl Biss, lithographs; Robin Laughlin, photography; Richard Hooker, mixed media collage; David Parsons, silk batik; and Maurice Burns, oil paintings.

COULD THIS HAPPEN TO YOU?
YES, IF NO THOUGHT IS GIVEN TO CAREFUL ESTATE PLANNING!

It is our pleasure to announce a six-month educational series on Estate Planning continuing June 30 at 8:00 p.m. on PBS, KENW-TV, Channel 3. We will be bringing together a team of professional estate planners, consisting of an estate planning attorney, an accountant, a trust officer, and ourselves as life insurance consultants, to inform you of the advantages of estate planning. There will be special guest appearances of an IRS agent and a probate judge.

The series will hypothetically present a typical estate comparing the benefits of a properly planned estate versus the catastrophic effects of little or no planning.

Tune in to the Don Criss, "YOU SHOULD KNOW" show, and take advantage of this valuable free information, which could avoid a forced sale of your estate to pay your inheritance taxes.

Real Estate

By Realtor Mike Wallzer
DEVON DEVELOPMENT, INC.

HOW CAN A REALTOR HELP?
Selling your home through a Realtor will bring you as much or more profit — with none of the attendant problems and headaches you can expect when you try to sell it on your own.

Besides his knowledge of the market and the skill to suggest realistic prices, the Realtor has built up a list of prospects that no homeowner can possibly match... prospects who are honestly interested in finding a home and financially able to buy... not casual lookers. He knows how long to hold out, whether to take a second mortgage, how to handle earnest money, whether to lease with option to buy or sell on contract.

He's prepared to arrange the intricacies of financing and has the "know-how" necessary to close the transaction properly. Believe me — listing with a Realtor will save you time and make you money.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at DEVON DEVELOPMENT, INC., 2904 Sudderth Drive, Box 1500, Ruidoso. Phone: 257-5511. We're here to help!

INSULATION

Today's energy crisis has given new importance to insulation, which serves the twofold purpose of keeping heat out in summer and in during cold weather.

While passive solar homes can conserve energy and reduce fuel bills by using the sun as a source of fuel, their efficiency will be greatly diminished without adequate insulation. In fact, all homeowners should view insulation as the first step toward effective energy conservation.

All insulation today has an R-factor—an important consideration when buying or having insulation installed. It is an industry standard of measurement for comparing the insulating values of various materials. The higher the R-factor, or thermal resistance, the greater the insulating properties.

Insulating the Passive Home

Proper insulation of a passive solar home is necessary to insure maximum energy efficiency. For example, if a masonry wall is used as part of the heat storage reservoir, or thermal mass as it is usually called, it is necessary to insulate the exterior side, for masonry is a relatively poor insulator, even if the wall is very thick. Standard 3 1/2-inch fiberglass is equivalent, for example, to approximately 12 feet of concrete in insulating qualities.

Insulation when applied to an exterior wall used for thermal storage should be applied not only above ground level but should extend at least two feet below. For this purpose, a rigid type insulation such as polystyrene is used to reduce heat loss by conduction.

Insulation is equally important in the south-facing glass window wall, but this takes a different form. Generally, the south wall is double-glazed with glass to reduce heat loss at night. In some passive solar homes being built today, triple glazing is used on the south wall to further reduce heat loss. However, in areas of the country where temperatures seldom fall much below the freezing point, double glazing is adequate.

Glass Poor Insulator

Glass is a poor insulator, so special insulating shutters or shades should be installed in the passive solar home to prevent heat loss at night. To be effective, such insulating devices must make a tight seal around the window opening.

Window insulation also takes the form of interior moveable panels or exterior shutters. The interior panels, which can be either fixed or removable, are put in place at night by sliding them across the glass area. Exterior shutters are simply opened during the daytime to allow as much heat gain as possible, and closed at night to block heat loss.

Shutters are somewhat more effective than the moveable insulation, mainly because a tighter seal can usually be obtained with them. Insulated draperies that can be drawn across the window area at night are also effective, although less so than either the panels or the shutters because they do not provide a tight seal. In milder regions of the country, the insulated draperies may suffice as a means of reducing heat loss at night.

Actually, in regions with cold winters, the moveable insulated panels or shutters are the two principal means of preventing heat loss through the glass area. The moveable panels may be preferable from a decorating standpoint at the window area and are just about as effective as the shutters if care is taken to obtain that tight seal.

For more information on insulation, send a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to:
