

Plans for new high school underway

BY JEAN PATTERSON
Staff Writer/Photographer

Architects for the planned Ruidoso High School were on hand at the Board of Education meeting Tuesday night to present preliminary drawings of the building.

These tentative plans call for a central core from which classroom wings will radiate. The two story core will include a commons area, a media center, cafeteria and administrative offices. One wing will house the science department and other classrooms, while a second wing will be used for drama, art, music and athletics. A gymnasium will be included in that wing, including locker rooms, with room to expand and build an auxiliary gym should the need arise.

The entry would feature two staircases leading to the second story, using as much glass as possible to provide an open atmosphere.

"We want to use as much glass as we can to take the inside out and bring the outside in," said Steve Strain, representative for the Alley-Connell firm, Roswell.

Because the 40 acre site chosen for the new high school slopes upward towards the mountain, the design of the school had to be two story. "We are working with the land. If it was one story, it would go all the way up the mountain," Strain said. The proposed playing fields will be in the flat, however.

In the design, all of the wings in the building are connected by doorways so each section may be closed off in the event of a basketball game or any other activity confined to one area.

Materials for the school include using a "dryvit" system for the exterior. It is a stucco fiberglass mesh that is harder and more durable than other materials, according to Strain. A steel structure is planned, using glue-laminated wooden beams in the commons area.

The roof will be gravel and, because of snow loads and problems with drainage, Strain said no part will be flat, allowing for the snow melt to drain.

Provisions in the preliminary plans include a public meeting room with access to the commons and to restrooms, but closed to the rest of the school.

Strain also said a passive solar system is planned for use in the new school. "We can

Downs plans changing mobile home ordinance

Most of the Ruidoso Downs trustees' discussion was centered around a mobile home proposal at Monday night's meeting.

The purpose of the proposal is to set guidelines for location of mobile home lots in Ruidoso Downs and to set regulations for the size and appearance of the homes.

One trailer can be used as a permanent residence.

"People can still bring them, hook them up to a water meter, the sewer, and a phone and they're a permanent home," said trustee Don Shaver. "We're leaving ourselves wide open. There's no restriction on how long it can sit there."

Another item Shaver questioned was one concerning size of a patio. The item stated that the mobile home must include a 100 square foot patio or breezeway attached to the home, painted in harmony with the rest of the home.

"We can't do that because of space restrictions," Shaver said. "Don't put a minimum size on it. Maybe we could put a restriction on construction or style."

Trustee Bob Power discussed one item dealing with trim on the homes. The

A DOUBLE FATALITY occurred in a traffic accident Monday morning on Highway 70 in Ruidoso Downs. The victims were Francisco P. Cazares, 83, and Elena Nunez Parra, 69, both of Ruidoso. The accident happened when a pickup truck driven by Cazares turned in front of a tractor trailer (background) that was headed west. The driver of the semi, Robert J. Fisher of Lorenzo, Texas, was not injured seriously, according to Ruidoso Downs Police.

Trustees deny petition asking vote on liquor license transfer

BY TIM PALMER
Staff Writer

Ruidoso trustees were told Tuesday evening, by village attorney Lee Huckstep, that a petition calling for a referendum on the question of liquor license transfers has been declared invalid because it lacked the required number of signatures.

The petition was presented to the village on October 28. According to state law, the document needed to be signed by five percent of the registered voters residing within the village limits to be valid.

Village Clerk Laurie Durham reported that due to a number of duplicate signatures and signatures of people from outside the village, the petition fell short of the required five percent.

"It is our opinion that the petition is deficient, and therefore we don't have to call the election," Huckstep said. He pointed out that though failure of the petition means that liquor licenses can be transferred into Ruidoso, the trustees must approve each transfer application.

Huckstep said that if a proposed license can be shown to be injurious to public health, safety or morals, or if it creates a nuisance, it can be denied.

The trustees voted to deny the petition.

In another liquor related matter, the trustees approved Ordinance 81-23, setting the yearly fee for a restaurant beer and wine license at $300. If the licenses are issued before the year is out, a prorated fee of $25 per month, payable in advance, will be charged.

The trustees also heard a presentation from architect John Moore, who described the proposed remodeling and expansion of the police facility. Moore's proposal was unanimously approved.

The plan calls for expansion of the facility with a new jail on the west side, an administrative section on the south and

Commission action postponed on Alto package liquor store

BY JEAN PATTERSON
Staff Writer

Public hearings dominated the agenda at Tuesday's Lincoln County Commission's meeting in Carrizozo.

The hearing raising the most controversy dealt with an application by Great Western Realty, Alto, to transfer a liquor license from Corona to Oscuro and then to Alto.

"The way we are transferring this is illegal under the law. It is the only way to do it," said John Conway, attorney for the applicant.

Several Alto residents attended the meeting to voice opinions concerning locating a package liquor store at Highway 37 and Sun Valley Road.

"I represent my neighbors, and four to one, they are against the transfer of this liquor license," said Yvonne Lanelli, Alto resident. She cited such potential problems as increased accidents caused by inebriated drivers, combined with what she labeled a "blind intersection" at that particular location.

"I fail to see where a package liquor store will cause those problems when they take it home with them. I think it's a great convenience. I'm all for it," said George McGill, Alto.

Jennifer Smith, owner-operator of the Incredible restaurant, lounge and liquor store, submitted a letter opposing the transfer of the license. One reason she stated in the letter was it would be devaluating other liquor licenses.

"The legislature has already devalued liquor licenses. I don't believe this will devalue Ben Hall.

Smith was also present at the meeting and defended her cause by stating that moving this liquor license into Alto might set a precedent that could ultimately hurt the economy of the area.

"For the permanent residents, it is adequate now," said Smith, concerning the availability of liquor in the area. "I don't think you are looking at the economic schools of it." She also added that there is a school bus stop at the point where the new package store would be opened, if the transfer is approved.

Vote on approving the transfer was split between commissioners John Allen Hightower and Ben Hall and was tabled until chairman Thomas P. "Cotton" McKnight can vote on the question at the next meeting.

Advertising and news deadlines for the Monday, November 30, issue will be 5 p.m., Wednesday, November 25.

The cooperation of everyone in meeting these deadlines will be appreciated, so that The News staff can enjoy Thanksgiving with their families.

Elks seeking hunters' hides for veterans

The Ruidoso Elks are conducting their annual drive for big game hides, to aid disabled and hospitalized veterans in New Mexico.

Hide drive chairman Ray Walker has announced that collection barrels are located at Gibson's at the "Y", KRRR Radio on Sudderth, Smokey Bear Ranger Station on Highway 37 north, Hughes Body Shop in Ruidoso Downs and at Capitan Hardware.

"We'll accept any big game hides," Walker said, "and, if anyone has hides from domestic animals, we'll be happy to have them also."

The hides, Walker said, are sold to a tannery by the New Mexico Elks Association, "with all proceeds from New Mexico's hospitalized and disabled veterans. The veterans then purchase any supplies they need to make items for sale, with the proceeds going to the veterans selling his products."

The hide barrels will remain on location until after the big game season closes, and pickup of hides will be on a regular basis, he said.

"One of the Elks mottos," Walker said, "is 'As long as there is a disabled veteran in our hospitals, the Elks will never forget him.' This drive for hides is one of the projects we use to help our veterans and the cooperation of all hunters, or anyone with domestic animal hides, will help us help our disabled veterans."

use passive at little cost and reap some benefits. We do intend to use it," Strain said.

Strain reported that because of the proximity of Bog Springs, it was feared water drainage might be a problem. However, he said the hydrologist report stated the area is acceptable. Soil tests and site surveying are scheduled soon.

"We are starting to tie the elements together. This is the direction we are going; they are not final presentation drawings," Strain said.

Rem Alley, architect with the firm in Las Cruces, estimated the project would be to the point of presenting working drawings by December. He said bids for construction may be sought by the first part of March.

The building of the school is planned to be completed in three phases. "My estimate is it will take about 15 months to complete each phase," said Alley.

Dave Parks, Board of Education president, said a lot of the work on the school depends on the money coming from the capital outlay program. "We won't stop spending until it's complete," Parks said. He suggested that people contact their legislators to request support for funding the capital outlay program.

Other board business included: — Reading a letter from Leonard De Layo, superintendent of public education in New Mexico, indicating his approval of purchasing the high school building site.

— Approval of checks written and transfer of funds. Five hundred dollars was transferred from purchased services account to local testing account, and $2,000 was transferred from improvement of land account to improvement of building account.

— Acceptance of a budget increase of $11,965 from Johnson O'Malley. This money is granted by the government because of the Indian population in the Ruidoso schools.

— Approval of a $43,000 bid from Bradley Construction for the building of a double wide portable classroom building for White Mountain Middle School. The bid was approved with the provision that it would be subject to ratification and approval by the architects.

— Personnel report approving the hiring of four new staff additions, Milton Jackson, bus driver; Shirley Neuhaus, instructional aide (bi-lingual) for White Mountain Schools; Carol Rasmus, speech therapist for all schools; and Inez Cochise, White Mountain Middle School aide. A letter of resignation from Clayton Allen, special education teacher at the middle school, was read and accepted.

— Superintendent Pat Valliant reported that, after 40 days, there are 31 more students enrolled in the Ruidoso Schools than what was anticipated, bringing the total enrollment to 1,490 students.

— Announcement that Wednesday's Coffee Cart is scheduled for 9 a.m., at Nob Hill Elementary School. It is sponsored by the Education Association with invited guests including New Mexico's United States Senators and Representatives, state representatives, the state superintendent of public education and members of the Capital Outlay Committee.

The next Board of Education meeting is December 8, at 7:30 p.m., in the Nob Hill Elementary School cafeteria.

Builders name officers and make awards

Paul Jordan was elected president of the Lincoln County Home Builders Association at a recent regular meeting.

Also elected were Ron Burton, vice president, Sandy Harrison, secretary-treasurer, and as new directors, Jeff Von Rosenberg, Bill Randle, Ben Casey and Carroll "Buddy" Bundick.

During the meeting Tracey Burton of Innsbrook Construction and John Von Rosenberg of Von Rosenberg Construction were jointly named Builder of the Year and Jack Reed of E-Z TV was named Associate Member of the Year.

Guest speaker State Senator Jack Stahl explained the bill "Residential Mortgage Purchase Act," he intends to introduce during the 1982 legislative session. "The act," Stahl said, "would provide low cost mortgages for new home purchases throughout the state."

The group's next meeting will be the annual Christmas party beginning at 7 p.m., December 1 at the Texas Club.

(and using them!), marking and recording serial numbers on high value items, and marking selected building materials for identifications as measures that improve security and aid police.

Swenor stressed cooperation among neighbors as a very effective deterrent to crime. Citizens should watch for and report suspicious persons and vehicles near homes, businesses and unoccupied building sites to police.

An increase in thefts during daylight hours is a nation-wide trend, Swenor said. He predicts that the increase in Ruidoso's permanent population will lead to more daylight thefts here.

The chief asks that citizens not be reluctant to report suspicious activity to police. As he explained it, one thwarted theft or captured criminal, out of many calls that prove unfounded, make all the calls worthwhile.

Lodgers' Tax funds sought to promote art in Ruidoso

Lodgers' Tax Committee chairman Ed Hyman, at Wednesday's noon meeting, told Dave Harris, spokesman for a "just forming" local Art Galleries Association, that it is possible the committee may "go a portion" of the advertising to promote Ruidoso as an art center, once there is an association and once they have a "specific plan and a tentative budget."

The committee referred Harris to Chamber of Commerce director Ed Jungbluth, who was not present, since funds for the project "could fall within the monthly budgeted expenditures of the Chamber's advertising committee."

While the three committee members present were receptive to the concept of "doing more with the art aspect of the community," Hyman favored helping with the "printing and stamps for a mailer" over Harris' thought of a full page ad and map in New Mexico Magazine. New Mexico Magazine is his choice, Harris said, because it is "art oriented." Harris said the cost of a page ad in the publication is $1,280 for a single insertion, with varying rates per page depending upon how often the ad would appear.

court rooms facing Wingfield Drive on the north. The design allows for separation of the public from the detention facility and the rest of the police station, police administrative officer Jim Alston said.

In other action, the trustees: — Instructed village manager Jim Hine to pursue an application to the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) for a loan for the Ponderosa Heights sewer project.

Hine had advised the trustees that the interest rate on FmHA loans has been raised from five to 12.25 percent.

— Approved a correction in the minutes of the October 27 meeting to state that the Ruidoso Care Center Auxiliary will have the use of the Senior Citizens van when it is not being used by the Senior Citizens or the village.

— Voted to accept a cooperative agreement with the state Highway Department through which salt up to an amount of $17,825 will be provided to the village for use on state Highway 37 and major arterial roads.

Al Junge asked whether the salt will be used all over town, noting that he had to wash his car about 20 times last winter to get the salt off. He was advised by Hine that the salt is for use on Highway 37 through town to the ski area turnoff, White Mountain Drive, Hull Road, and Paradise Canyon and Gavilan Canyon Roads.

— Were told that the joint agreement with Ruidoso Downs on building permits has been accepted.

— Agreed to pay Courson Corporation a $7,864 claim for auditorium seats for the Village Administrative Center.

— Heard a statement from Huckstep on portable signs, about which he said a number of complaints have been made. He told the trustees that he checked with the counsel for the Municipal League in Santa Fe and was advised to withhold action pending a forthcoming state Supreme Court decision.

"I'm not going to file a rash of lawsuits in municipal court till I find out if our position is any good," said Huckstep.

— Approved a request by Ruidoso Downs to place a radio antenna atop a village tank in the Camelot area for improved reception, with the stipulation that the village not be held liable for damage to the radio equipment and that Ruidoso

Downs be held liable for damage to the water tank.

— Approved Sarah Crossley as Deputy Village Clerk.

— Received without taking action, a proposal from Terry Coe on water.

— Approved the following Planning and Zoning items: replat of Lot 78, Block B, Sleepy Hollow for Laverne Walkup; amendment to final plat of Granite Place Condominiums for A. D. Bell; approved plats of Deer Park Meadows and Gavilan subdivisions.

— Received copies of the feasibility study on purchase of the Ruidoso Natural Gas Company from engineer Willis Umholtz. The trustees agreed to study the document, which is not complete, before the November 24 meeting.

Trustee Sherman Atwood made a motion to adjourn into executive session for the purpose of discussing personnel matters, but the motion died for lack of a second. Trustees Benny Coulston and Frank Sawyer expressed reluctance to go into a closed meeting in light of the fact that news leaks after a recent executive session allowed that meeting to be reported by The Ruidoso News.

Police seeking residents' help to nab thieves

The Ruidoso Police Department is seeking citizen cooperation in its efforts to halt the rise in local residential burglaries and larcenies.

Police Chief Dick Swenor noted that thefts from building sites and residences under construction are becoming a significant problem. Building materials, appliances, power tools and other high value items are the target of thieves, said Swenor.

The chief stated that in many incidents investigated by police, it is clear that minor precautions could have prevented the crime, or helped in solving it. He listed equipping residences with adequate locks

Car mishap hospitalizes Ruidoso man

A Ruidoso man was in stable condition this morning at St. Mary's Hospital in Roswell with injuries received in an automobile accident Saturday evening in Ruidoso.

Gary Cooper was a passenger in a vehicle driven by Filbert Herrera of San Patricio which collided with a vehicle driven by Jeffrey Nunnally of Ruidoso near the intersection of Sudderth Drive and Carter's Lane.

Cooper was transferred to Roswell because he suffered head injuries which required examination by a neurosurgeon, a spokesman for Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital said. Nunnally was not injured.

Commission doesn't act

"I don't think an additional package liquor store will increase the intake of liquor, but I can't condone the way it's been done. They should not go around the back door with this," said commissioner Hightower.

Another public hearing took place to allow for adverse opinions concerning Deer Park Meadows and Gavilan subdivisions. In a previous meeting, it was determined there were certain environmental violations in the subdivision plans. However, Don Blaugrund, developer of the subdivisions, stated the state water engineer and state environmentalists had since approved the regulations. As there were no adverse statements received, the subdivision project was approved by the commissioners.

A third public hearing resulted in the approval of an application to transfer a liquor license ownership from Parsons Mining Company to Emmett Franklin Potter Jr.

In other business, Ken Moore, administrator at the Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital, requested an amendment on the hospital lease, transferring power from an advisory board to a policy-making board. The commissioners approved the name change.

Commissioners decided to table the selection of road projects for the 1982-1983 fiscal year for the State Highway Department's cooperative agreement program. The suggested list to be submitted is actually last year's list on which no action had been taken. Commissioners will vote on the list at the next meeting, pending any additions that may need to be made in relation to roads for the new Ruidoso High School.

Commissioners approved the termination of a contract for landfill maintenance in Hondo, because the job was not being completed as contracted.

Also approved were new by-laws for the Carrizozo Health Center.

A petition to call for a vote concerning liquor license transfers into the county was rejected for lack of enough signatures. Without the election, the transfer law will go into effect within 120 days, allowing intra-state liquor license transfers into the county.

The commissioners then went into executive session to discuss personnel matters, after which they announced no action was taken.

The next commission meeting will be December 1 at 10 a.m., in the Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo.

White's Auto Store in Carrizozo burns

White's Auto Store in Carrizozo was totally destroyed in an early morning fire Wednesday which may have been deliberately set, according to the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department.

According to the Sheriff's Office, the blaze was reported at 4:05 a.m., Wednesday. The Carrizozo Fire Department responded to the alarm, but the building on Central Avenue burned completely to the ground, a Sheriff's Department spokesman said.

There were no injuries in the fire. Cause of the fire was unknown as of Thursday morning. Arson is suspected, said the spokesman, who noted that the state Fire Marshal's office is investigating.

No estimate on the value of the property was available.

proposal allows for masonry, metal, brick or block, but eliminates wood. "I think they should be able to use it if they want it," Power said.

"I personally wouldn't want wood because of termites," said mayor Norman Wheeler.

Shaver pointed out that some mobile home manufacturers are now producing triple wide mobile homes. He suggested the trustees check New Mexico state laws to determine what the state allows for mobile home sizes.

One provision the trustees would like to see added to the proposal is a statement of specific areas mobile homes may be placed in Ruidoso Downs.

"I think there should be a special area for mobile homes and one for regular homes," Shaver said.

"I agree. It should be zoned," said Wheeler.

"If we get the terminology correct, I say go for it and approve the ordinance," said Shaver. Wheeler emphasized that the Planning and Zoning Committee has been working on the proposal for three years.

"I would recommend to the council that you be at the next Planning and Zoning meeting and let your reasons for the changes be known," Wheeler said. "They need support from this council. Help Planning and Zoning out on this very sticky subject." The committee meets next on November 17 at 7:30 p.m., at the Municipal Hall in Ruidoso Downs.

In other business, Wheeler reported on the November 4 Ruidoso Downs Volunteer Fire Department meeting. Results of the election at the meeting include Ray Walker, fire chief; Chet Southard, assistant chief; Barry Miller, Captain; Allen Temple, Lieutenant; Roger Drury, fire marshal; Jeanne Walker, secretary-treasurer. The trustees approved the election results.

The resignation letter of police officer Gary Nixon was read to the trustees. Nixon is moving to Arkansas, which leaves an opening at the police department.

The next Ruidoso Downs Trustees meeting is November 23 at 7 p.m., in the Municipal Hall.

Newest knit fabrics need understanding

Today's clothing buyer may need a translator or textile scientist to explain the terminology appearing on fabric labels, in advertisements, or on retail store posters.

One new term popping up today is interlock, a term used to describe a special kind of knit, according to Susan Wright, Extension clothing specialist for New Mexico State University.

Someone who does hand knitting will find it easy to understand the structure of an interlock fabric. When knitting alternates a knit and purl stitch, a one-by-one ribbed structure is formed. The fabric industry has found a way to knit two one-by-one rib structures at the same time into a single fabric layer.

The two layers are enmeshed, or interlocked, so that only the knit stitch shows on each side of the fabric and the purl stitches are hidden. The result is a fabric that looks like the right side of a plain jersey on both sides, or a jersey with no wrong side.

There's a simple test to reveal an interlock fabric. Stretching across the fabric will cause it to run or ladder, but only from one cut edge and in only one direction.

Unfortunately, this test can't always be made in a fabric store unless a piece is cut from the bolt. The cut edge accessible to the customer is usually the one from which running won't occur.

Still, it's important for the home seamstress to know the direction in which running will occur. Cutting the garment in the wrong direction can be an expensive mistake. If the garment edge will be subjected to stress during wear, consider this potential problem when placing the pattern on the fabric. For example, pants or a skirt with an elasticized waistline may eventually develop runs or ladders extending down from the waistline.

This problem can be avoided if the garment is cut so the edge from which runs will occur is at the lower hem edge.

To control roll when cutting, pin the pattern to the wrong side of the knit because these fabrics usually roll to the right side. When sewing these fabrics, pick a polyester or polyester cord thread that will have some stretch, and use a ball-point needle to keep from cutting fabric fibers.

Also, adjust the machine pressure so the pressure foot doesn't push the top layer of the fabric ahead of the foot.

Seam edges will also tend to roll, so something has to be done to avoid a bulky, unpressed look. Try double stitching the seam. Use one row in the five-eighths inch seamline and the next row three-eighths inch farther into the seamline. Trim off excess seam.

Another way to avoid bulk is to make the same two stitching rows, but with a zig-zag stitch or edge stitch. Always trim seam at the second row of stitching. Stretchy seams can be stabilized with seam tape or cotton twill.

Lightweight zippers should be used with these thinner fabrics.

Focus on Small Business

by E. Maine Shafer

Dear Mr. Shafer — What skills do I need to start a small service business? How much capital will I need?

Glad you asked those questions, because the Small Business Administration (SBA) is a bit proud of a new book it has published on service businesses.

Most businesses fail because of a lack of business skills, regardless of how well the owner might know the technical aspects of his or her product. So this booklet can be valuable because it contains management-type information, such as:

- Selecting the right service business.
- How to determine employee management skill levels.
- Determining capital needs.
- Management of inventories.
- Advertising.
- Managing finances.

The book is called "Starting and Managing a Small Service Business." The book, Stock No. 045-000-00207-1, can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402. The price is $3.75 payable in check, money order, VISA or Master Charge. Make check or money order to Superintendent of Documents. If you are in a hurry to see the book, drop by your SBA District Office. We are located at 5000 Marble, NE, Suite 320, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87110. Phone number 766-3588.

REVIEW OF THE RUIDOSO FOOTBALL SEASON

Warriors had a great season

Although Ruidoso High Schools' football team didn't make the state AAA playoffs, the Warriors still had an impressive season on all counts.

The Warriors had an 8-2 record, their best in nine seasons, and scored 224 points to just 100 for their opponents. This compares favorably to the 1980 squad which had a 7-3 record in scoring 230 points and giving up 97. This year's team also faced tougher non-district competition than the 1980 squad.

In addition both Ruidoso losses this season were to playoff teams (Tularosa and Silver City) and the Warriors beat another playoff team (Socorro) in the second game of the season.

All told, the Ruidoso football season had a lot more positive aspects than negative ones. Here is a brief capsule of each game this season.

In the first game the Warriors trounced Estancia 41-6. Chris Lopez started the Warrior barrage by running the opening kickoff back 85 yards for a score. The senior fullback scored two more touchdowns as did Scott Neal. Billy Woodul completed a pass to Darin Smith for the other Ruidoso touchdown.

The second week of play saw the Warriors handle a bigger Socorro team 21-12. Neal scored all three Warrior touchdowns and the defense, led by John Montoya and Dariush Rad, stopped the visitors completely in the second half.

Ruidoso traveled to Dexter for its first away game and a strong defensive effort stopped the Demons. Neal scored one touchdown and threw for another. Grady Williamson added the third Warrior touchdown.

For the fourth game, Ruidoso made the 250-mile trip to Jal to down the Panthers 20-0. Lon Nunley had one of his best games of the season, scoring one touchdown, recovering two fumbles and kicking two extra points. Williamson and Lopez added the other two scores.

Rain hampered the Warriors' offense in their 7-0 homecoming victory over the New Mexico Military Institute. The only touchdown of the game was scored on a pass from Woodul to Darin Smith.

Ruidoso opened district play with a 20-6 win over host Cobre. The game was highlighted by Neal's 156 yards rushing and scoring two touchdowns. Lon Nunley scored the other Warrior touchdown.

Week seven saw the Warriors drop their game with arch-rival Tularosa 13-0 on the latter's field. This game was a key in the failure of the Warriors to make the playoffs as the second-place team. Twice Ruidoso drove within the Tularosa 15 yard line in the first half, but failed to reach paydirt. Tularosa broke the game open in the second half with two touchdowns. The Warriors jumped back on the winning track the next week with a convincing 42-20 victory over the visiting Deming Wildcats. It was Ruidoso's highest point total of the season, and a complete team effort. Lon Nunley scored three touchdowns, Williamson two and Neal one.

Dariush Rad had a brilliant game on defense, recovering three fumbles. Kyle Flack, Byron Wright and Don Nunley each intercepted a Deming pass.

Ruidoso again got its offense moving against visiting Truth or Consequences (T or C) and took a 36-16 win in what was perhaps its finest all-around effort of the season. Lopez scored two touchdowns and Neal and Williamson each added one. Lon Nunley kicked a field goal and Neal threw a pass to Don Nunley for the other score. It all came down to the final game of the season against Silver City. The Warriors had to win the game to be district champions and the only way they could make the playoffs as the second place team was if Tularosa lost to Cobre. The Warriors took a 14-0 lead on touchdown passes from Neal to Don Nunley and Pete Garcia to Darin Smith. However the Colts came back with three unanswered touchdowns to take the victory 21-14. Tularosa routed Cobre 36-6 and the Warriors, despite their outstanding efforts the entire season, were out of the playoffs.

Warrior cagers priming for season-opener

No sooner has Ruidoso High School's football team ended its season than the Warrior basketball squad is taking to the gym floor.

Ruidoso, coached by Barry Nelson, will travel to Carlsbad Saturday for a double-scrimmage with the host team and Kermit, Texas. The first scrimmage is scheduled for 10 a.m.

The Warriors, who won the district crown last season and finished fourth in the AAA state playoffs with a 19-8 overall record, have two starters returning, 5-9 guard Scott Neal (just off the football team) and 6-3 center-forward Bill Richardson.

Other returning lettermen include forward Michael Forte, guard Wade Wilson, Kyle Schautteet and Steve Sluder.

"We'll be competitive, that's for sure," said Nelson. "It'll be pretty hard to top last year's team because we lost some very good players but we'll be there."

Among those who graduated last year was all-state standout Glenn Ryan and Rodney Thomason, who made all-state honorable mention and all-district.

The Warriors open their season December 1 at New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell. The first home game will be December 11 against Goddard.

Ruidoso's Karen Boone named all-district spiker

Karen Boone has been an all-around standout for Ruidoso High School's volleyball team for two seasons so it comes as no surprise that the talented Warrior senior has been named to the All-3-AAA district team for the second year in a row. "Karen's best asset is her spiking ability," said Warrior mentor Sergio Castanon. "She's also a leader in team spirit and is a brilliant all-around player." There were 11 players selected to the all-star squad, dominated by district champion Tularosa and runner-up Truth or Consequences. Although Castanon was pleased that Boone made the all-district team he felt that another Warrior player should also have made the squad.

"Laurie Morel should have made the team," he said. "She's been outstanding this year and really helped us a lot."

Ruidoso finished at 2-9 in district play and 6-10 overall this season. The Warriors forced Silver City to three sets last week before losing in the battle for fourth place in the district.

Although volleyball season is over, Castanon will keep busy as he is coach of the girls' basketball team. The lady cagers open the season December 3 in the Weed Tournament.

Ruidoso sixth in grid poll

Despite the fact that Ruidoso High School's football team is out of the playoffs, it can take some satisfaction because it lost to the state's top-ranked AAA team in the final game of the regular season.

Silver City, which beat the Warriors 21-14 last Friday, is again rated number one in the poll. Portales, district 4-AAA champion, is ranked second while St. Pius of Albuquerque is third. Artesia fourth, Socorro fifth and the Warriors sixth.

Ruidoso handled Socorro easily, 21-12 in the second contest of the season. Tularosa, which goes to the playoffs as the district 3-AAA runner-up because it beat Ruidoso, is ranked seventh in the poll. Robertson, Lovington and Aztec round out the top 10.

DAs acting on worthless checks

Worthless checks are in for more scrutiny and uniformity in both handling and prosecution around the state, due to action recently taken by the state's District Attorneys.

12 of the state's 13 District Attorneys met with representatives of the banking and business community, during the recent annual meeting of the New Mexico District Attorney's Association, in Santa Fe.

First Judicial District Attorney Eloy Martinez led a two hour bad check discussion.

Martinez, the 1980-'81 association chairman, has had a Bad Check Assistance Program operating for three years, and has returned over three hundred thousand dollars to the business community of his district.

The District Attorneys adopted a resolution recognizing the need for a uniform approach toward handling worthless check cases.

Such uniformity would expedite prosecution and curtail the problem.

The District Attorneys further resolved that each member implement a worthless check program, and to work closely with each other and with the business and banking communities, to combat the problem.

District Attorneys attending the meeting were: Steven Schiff, Albuquerque; Benny Flores, Las Vegas; Michael McCormick, Carlsbad; Ralph Ellinwood, Deming; David Douglas, Socorro; Sam Pacheco, Taos; David Bonem, Clovis; Norman Runyan, Tucumcari; Paul Onuska, Gallup; Steven Sanders, Alamogordo; Thomas Esquibel, Los Lunas; Eloy Martinez, Santa Fe.

Business and banking representatives attending were: C. M. Anderson and Bob Gold, New Mexico Retail Association; Jack Hilligoss, New Mexico Pharmaceutical Association; Truett Gill, New Mexico Food Dealers Association; Mark Douglas and Pete Smith, New Mexico Bankers Association.

Crime Stoppers seek information

Most "Missing Person" incidents are followed by a tearful, happy reunion.

But the case of David W. Roder of Juan Tomas, just southeast of Tijeras, New Mexico, is one of the other kind. The 33-year-old Roder was reported missing by one of his neighbors on August 16 of this year. On August 17, Sheriff's deputies received information that Roder had a large plot of marijuana growing on his property. Armed with a search warrant, deputies went out to the Roder place to see what they could find. His four children were present, and so was his old green van. Deputies also found a very large garden of mature marijuana plants, but no sign of Roder.

Just one month later, Roder's body was found about nine miles northeast of his home. Sheriff's investigators say it appears that Roder was forcefully taken to the area just west of NM-217 and shot several times with a small caliber weapon. They speculate that the killing may be narcotics related, but have little to go on at this time. If you have any information which could lead investigators to the solution of this crime, call the State Crime Stoppers Commission, toll-free, at 1-800-432-6933. You do not have to give your name and the calls are not taped or traced. Information received by Crime Stoppers this week, will make the caller eligible for a $1,000 reward. Roder was 5'5" tall, 130 lbs., with sandy shoulder length hair, blue eyes, and a light complexion.

Las Cruces Crime Stoppers are seeking information in the disappearance of a University Co-ed. Twenty-three-year-old JoAnne Dodge was last seen on September 2, as she left a party on Triviz Drive at about 10 p. m. Dodge is a Native American Indian, 5'5" tall, 110 pounds, with black collar length hair. She left the party in her 1978 Ford Mustang, tan vinyl over turquoise blue with New Mexico license DAT-769, to return to her room on campus. Anyone having information on the whereabouts of JoAnne Dodge should call Las Cruces Crime Stoppers at 528-8000, or the State Crime Stoppers Commission.

While thieves in Tucumcari are stealing something to haul on, Alamogordo burglars are stealing something to haul with. Alamogordo police report the theft of a 172 cubic-inch Ford diesel engine, blue in color, weighing about 650 pounds, and valued at approximately $3,500. The engine was removed from a locked storage room at BFI Waste Systems sometime during the months of August or September. Anyone having information which could help solve this crime, should call Crime Stoppers of Otero County at 437-2000.

On Monday, October 12, Tucumcari police received a report that a flatbed trailer had been stolen from Marty's Equipment Company. The trailer was parked at the side of a building at South Lake, and may have been missing for several days before being noticed. It is described as a 1977 red Donahue 20' x 6' flatbed. A folding type jack on the trailer is also missing. Anyone having information which could lead police to the solution of this crime or recovery of the trailer should call Tucumcari Crime Stoppers at 461-3507, or the State Crime Stoppers Commission.

Most endangered birds threatened by habitat loss

Of the more than 9,000 bird species in the world, 274 "cling to life by a tenuous thread," and 37 have populations below 300, according to a report in the current issue of International Wildlife magazine on the world's 37 most endangered birds.

On small islands and on large continents, many species of birds are endangered because of destruction of their habitats by humans, said ornithologist Warren B. King, chairman of the United States Section of the International Council for Bird Preservation, in the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication.

"In the past 15 years, massive forest clearing for farmland, grazing, forest products, and expanding human populations produced a marked increase in the number of endangered birds in continental tropical forests," King said, and some of the 37 most threatened birds are on the endangered list simply because they are restricted to life on tiny islands.

As examples of birds imperiled by the destruction of forest habitats King cites the Mauritius parakeet and the imperial woodpecker. On Mauritius, in the Indian Ocean, the forests that the Mauritius parakeet needs for food, cover, and nesting have been replaced largely by sugar cane fields. Only five of the birds remain on the island where, coincidentally, the dodo bird became extinct.

The cutting of large nesting trees, plus some shooting for food, has reduced the population of imperial woodpeckers to no more than 20 birds in northwestern Mexico.

As examples of birds imperiled by their limited ranges, King cites the Aldabra brush warbler and Hawaiian crow. No more than 25 brush warblers survive on the 110 acres of the Aldabra Atoll, also in the Indian Ocean. The Hawaiian crow population has declined to fewer than 100 because some of its food supply has been reduced by the introduction of pigs into Hawaii's forests. The introduction of non-native plants and animals usually poses a threat to indigenous species, and the threat is greater when that species is restricted to an island habitat.

Is there any hope for saving these birds? In the past, the remedy for helping a declining wild-life species was to leave it strictly alone. Today, it's recognized that when a bird's natural support systems have already failed, direct intervention is the only recourse. By using imaginative techniques to help birds compensate for changes in their environment, scientists have accounted for some dramatic success stories.

The Puerto Rican parrot, for example, has apparently been saved with a management strategy that has begun to build its population up from a low of 15. Newly built nest cavities discourage attack from an aggressive thrasher, noxious fly larvae are under control, and captive-reared birds are returned to the wild. In another case, the reproductive output of the Spanish imperial eagle, population 150, was increased by 43 percent when third and fourth born eaglets, which hardly ever survive, were placed in nests with one or no young.

Unfortunately, such efforts are labor intensive and costly, and cannot be looked upon as ultimate solutions. As King's report in International Wildlife concludes, "if there is no hope for restoring a healthy habitat in which a species can survive on its own, such efforts, while noble, will inevitably prove futile."

The following is International Wildlife's list of the world's 37 most endangered birds:

1. Mariana's mallard. Population: 2. Gone from Guam and possibly Tinian and Saipan in the western Pacific. The last two were sent to Hawaii in 1978 for captive breeding.
2. Kauai O'o. Population 2. Limited to a swamp on Kauai, Hawaii. Introduced rats, plants, diseases, pigs and birds contributed to its decline. Little hope remains for their survival.
3. Chatham Island black robin. Population: 5. Reestablished on Mangere Island off New Zealand after burrowing seabirds in its former stronghold damaged its scrub-forest habitat.
4. Mauritius parakeet. Population: 5. Introduced monkeys on the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius steal its eggs. Vastly diminished forests and exotic vegetation are also serious problems.
5. Japanese crested bird. Population: 13. In June 1981, seven birds, including a breeding pair, were found in China, where they had been thought extinct. On Sado Island in Japan, six aging ibis are being bred in captivity.
6. Mauritius kestrel. Population: 15. Forest cutting, shooting and egg predation by introduced monkeys on Mauritius have hurt this small falcon, but the species is back from a low of six in 1974.
7. Ivory-billed woodpecker. Population: less than 20, with probably fewer than 10 in Cuba and fewer than 10, if any, in Florida, Texas and Louisiana. Forest cutting is to blame, but shooting also contributed.
8. Imperial woodpecker. Population: no more than 20, but last confirmed sighting was in 1958. Lives in Mexico's mature pine woodlands, which have been cut and burned. For years the species was persistently shot for the stew pot.
9. Madagascar sea eagle. Population: about 20. Shooting is a highly popular, largely uncontrolled pastime in the Malagasy Republic. It has reduced this species to ten pairs at most from several hundred birds just a few decades ago.
10. Aldabra brush warbler. Population:

fewer than 25. Clings to life on Aldabra Atoll in the Indian Ocean. Never known to be more widespread than at present, but is at risk from cyclones and other random catastrophic events.

11. California condor. Population: no more than 25. Extinction likely within 12 years without strong intervention. Major causes of decline unclear, but include habitat loss, shooting and pesticides.

12. Puerto Rican parrot. Population: 28, including 10 in captivity. From a low of 15 in the early 1970's, it began an encouraging comeback, but only after intensive management and research. Recovery is still not assured.

13. Lord Howe Island wood rail. Population: 30, with 10 in captivity. Formerly widespread on Lord Howe Island in the southwest Pacific. Now restricted by rat predation to two small mountaintop plateaus.

14. New Zealand black stilt. Population: 30. Stream alteration has seriously reduced its numbers. Endangered by proposed hydroelectric project and by hybridization with other stilts.

15. Kakapo. Population: 40. At least 30 of these flightless, nocturnal parrots were discovered in 1978, adding to the known population of 10. Stot predation on New Zealand caused their decline.

16. Seychelles magpie robin. Population: about 40. Cat predation remains a threat on Frigate Island in the Seychelles. Experimental translocation of several birds to another island was attempted but is not yet fully successful.

17. Rodrigues brush warbler. Population: 40 to 50. Clearing of brushy woodland for firewood and frequent cyclones on Rodrigues Island in the Indian Ocean are problems.

18. Okinawa woodpecker. Population: 40 to 60. The tops of five mountains on Okinawa retain patches of mature, moist forest large enough to sustain small numbers. Forest clearing for firewood destroys habitat.

19. White-breasted silveryeye. Population: fewer than 50. Loss of forest on Norfolk Island in the Pacific plus competition with a close relative that invaded Norfolk this century threaten the last few birds.

20. Mauritius pigeon. Population: 50, of which 30 are in captivity and relatively secure. Forest reduction, cyclones and egg robbing by introduced monkeys may destroy the wild population this decade.

21. Chatham Island oystercatcher. Population: about 50. Removal of sheep from Mangere and South East Islands, Chatham Islands, in the southwest Pacific has helped this shorebird, but it is still at risk from random, catastrophic events.

22. Chatham Island plover. Population: 50 to 60. Formerly widespread along New Zealand's shorelines, but eliminated there, possibly by cats. Now the species is restricted to South East Island in the Chatham Islands group.

23. Seychelles black paradise flycatcher. Population: 60 to 70. Formerly occurred on five islands in the Seychelles; now limited to one, La Digue. Suffers from lowland forest destruction and human persecution.

24. Noisy scrub-bird. Population: 80 to 90. Persists in one patch of eucalyptus forest in western Australia. Once, more widespread. Declined because of massive forest clearing and burning, and cat predation.

25. Hawaiian crow. Population: about 100 in Hawaii's mountain forests. This crow's future appears bleak because of forest destruction, predation, disease, and loss of food due to browsing by cattle, pigs and goats.

26. Atitlan grebe. Population: about 100. This flightless waterbird, confined to one lake in Guatemala, is hurt by habitat loss and introduced bass. A recent earthquake lowered water levels, halving the population.

27. Kabayan nuthatch. Population: about 100. Discovered in 1975, it is confined to a forested "island" on one mountaintop in Algeria. Goats and cattle prevent adequate regeneration of nearby vegetation.

28. Whooping crane. Population: 118 to

123. A massive conservation education campaign as well as habitat safeguard in the United States and Canada have brought a gradual buildup from a low of 15 birds in 1941.

29. Rodrigues fody. Population: 120. The fody's forest habitat on Rodrigues Island in the Indian Ocean has been largely destroyed. What remains is cut for firewood and damaged by cyclones.

30. St. Lucia parrot. Population: 125. Forest habitat is decreasing in the mountains of St. Lucia in the Lesser Antilles. Shooting is also a threat. Most apparently survived a hurricane in 1980.

31. Hooded grebe. Population: 126. Since its discovery in 1974 on a single lake in Argentina, it has suffered poor reproduction because of predation of eggs and young by kelp gulls.

32. Spanish imperial eagle. Population: 150, but that estimate may be optimistic. Now confined to oak forests in Spain, it suffers from forest clearing, poisoning and shooting.

33. Imperial parrot. Population: about 150, divided between two mountains on Dominica in the Lesser Antilles. Shooting is the primary threat. A recent destructive hurricane may also have caused some losses.

34. Cahow. Population: 200. Once thought numbering thousands, then thought extinct for three centuries, it is staging a comeback in Bermuda. Intensive management is reducing rat predation and competition for nest holes by another seabird.

35. Short-tailed albatross. Population: 200. Japanese feather hunters killed thousands last century. Removal of people from Torishima, its breeding island in the western Pacific, led to a gradual comeback.

36. Takahe. Population: fewer than 250. On New Zealand's South Island, predation by stoats and competition from introduced elk for tussock grass seed heads, the bird's most important food, are major problems.

37. Philippine eagle. Population: about 300, on Mindanao, Leyte and Luzon. Each pair requires an enormous area of forest for feeding, so forest destruction is a threat. So is shooting for trophies.

About this list: Information about these birds was collected by Warren B. King for the International Council for Bird Preservation. Subspecies were not considered for this article and some population figures are estimates.

UNM team excavating Ice Age site in France

L'Abbaye d'Arthous is a 12th century monastery in southwestern France that now houses an archaeological museum and laboratory. For three months it was also headquarters for a University of New Mexico (UNM) anthropology professor and six UNM graduate students who began excavations at a late Ice Age site near the Abbey.

Working with multi-year funding from the National Science Foundation (NSF), Dr. Lawrence Straus and the students began their excavation by cutting through dense vegetation along a steep cliffside at Abri Dufauré in the Les Landes region to uncover an ancient site once inhabited by seasonal reindeer hunters.

The project was co-directed by French archaeologist Robert Arambourou. He is the person responsible for converting the Abbey d'Arthous into a regional museum and laboratory. He has also been excavating a nearby site, Abri Duruthy, for the last 25 years.

"Without Dr. Arambourou this project would not really be possible," Straus said. "His lab facilities at the Abbey are excellent. He is very cooperative and an excellent host."

Abri Dufauré, where Straus and the students have begun work, was first tested in 1900 by an eminent French prehistorian, Abbe Henri Breuil. Last year Straus conducted test digs at the site as part of an archaeological reconnaissance he conducted in the region for the National Geographic Society. He and the students returned in June to start the current round of excavations.

"This is a Magdalenian site," Straus said. "It is partially a rock shelter with a large terrace in front of it. Dr. Arambourou and I want to compare this site with his excavations at Duruthy. We suspect our site dates 12,000 to 11,000 years ago, but it probably has several more levels down below our present work level."

Bands of reindeer-hunting humans inhabited the northern piedmont of the Pyrenees Mountains during the Magdalenian period. At both Dufauré and Duruthy, the dwellers paved large areas with cobblestones because of the frequent rainfall.

"The population at Dufauré must have been fairly large," he said. "They paved an enormous area. The cobblestones came from the banks of the Gave d'Oloron. On the cobbled surface we've exposed so far there are flint tools and thousands of pieces of debris from the manufacture of those tools. Some samples of bone from the pavement are now being dated at the University of Lyon in France."

Remnants of reindeer and bovine bones and teeth as well as bones of birds, rodents, horses and elk have been uncovered. Faunal remains found at the site are being analyzed by Dr. Jesus Altuna of Spain.

"An important reason for this excavation at Dufauré is to compare it with the Duruthy site," Straus said. "They are both on the same cliff, they have the same passage across the river and their chronology is the same. We can study the functional differences and similarities between the two sites. We can try to determine if they were occupied during the same seasons as part of seasonal rounds to intercept reindeer as they crossed the river."

The project is also an opportunity to study clustered sites, he said. Duruthy and Dufauré may have been cyclically occupied in conjunction with two other nearby sites.

"People used these sites regularly for thousands of years and went to a lot of trouble to pave them and build huts," Straus said. "If Dufauré and Duruthy are indeed similar then we can say we have a pattern going here."

Another important aspect of the French excavation is the opportunity to compare pollen records and sedimentological records from the two sites and test a controlled case to get a better idea of the accuracy of pollen tests.

Pollen from the site will be studied by Dr. M. M. Paquereau and sediments will be studied by Dr. H. Laville, both from the University of Bordeaux. Wood charcoal samples from Dufauré will be examined by Dr. J. L. Vernet of the University of Montpellier, France.

"Students participating in this project not only learn how to do meticulous stratigraphic excavation, but they also do mapping and lab work including classification of lithic artifacts, digging and screening. They also have had the opportunity to meet distinguished anthropologists who visit the excavations."

Cancellation simple on door-to-door sales

Pots and pans, encyclopedias, Bibles, burglar alarms, family photo albums, and so on goes the list of products sold door-to-door. And everyone knows someone who has regretted a door-to-door purchase.

When people have second thoughts, they can cancel the purchase if they don't delay, according to Jackie Martin, Extension family finance specialist at New Mexico State University. A Federal Trade Commission ruling allows buyers a three-day cooling off period to cancel if the purchase is $25 or more.

The salesman must provide a completed contract including the date of sale, name and address of the seller and a statement in large business type explaining the right to cancel within three business days by written notice.

The salesman must also give the buyer two copies of a notice of cancellation form. When cancelling a sale, it is recommended that the buyer send the notice by certified mail with the return receipt requested so they can prove they cancelled the sale.

The contract and notice must be in the same language that the salesman uses in the sales pitch. If the sale was made in Spanish, then the contract-notice must be in Spanish.

If any payment has been made, the seller must refund the money within 10 business days of receiving the cancellation notice. After cancelling a sale, the buyer must have the merchandise available at their home for the salesman to pick up in the same condition it was received.

If the buyer agrees to ship the item back, the seller must pay the shipping costs. If the merchandise is not picked up within 20 days, the consumer can keep the goods without obligation.

Sales that are not covered by this rule include total sales under $25, sales of insurance and securities, sales of real property (land), telephone orders, and sales made entirely by mail.

State producing pistachio nuts

Pistachio nut trees have been growing in California for a number of years, but New Mexico growers are just getting started with this exotic nut.

California growers have had good crops the past three years and expect a bumper crop this year, but commercial pistachio nut production is just getting off the ground in the United States.

Traditionally, all but a few million pounds of the world's pistachio nut production came from Iran. However, Iran's production and exports plummeted after the country's 1978 revolution.

This is a supply void that American growers can fill, according to Esteban Herrera, Extension horticulturist for New Mexico State University (NMSU).

There are a few pistachio nut growers in New Mexico, but most of their orchards average only 100 trees, Herrera said. George Schweers has the largest pistachio orchard in New Mexico, between Alamogordo and Tularosa.

There were already about 600 pistachio trees on Schweers' ranch when he bought it. He liked the trees and has been expanding the orchard steadily.

Schweers now has the original 600 trees at eight years old, a healthy bearing age. He has added 400 trees that are now four years old and has another 400 that are two years old.

His crop this fall was about eight pounds per tree. It would have been a little better, but some of the pistachio nut shells were not filled.

Herrera said the species is dioecious (not self-pollinating) and needs a male barren (non-bearing) tree for every eight female trees. The trees bear fruit in clusters similar to grapes.

Herrera also said pistachio nuts grown in the United States are of a higher quality than those from Iran. "Our pistachios are usually a solid ivory color, while Iranian pistachios are red stained as the result of poor harvesting, storage and processing methods," he said.

Two commercial pistachio nut tree varieties are available from nurseries. These are Kerman, a female variety, and Peters, a male variety. Both were developed by the United States Department of Agriculture experiment station at Chico, California. Pistachia Atlantica is the species most widely used as a rootstock.

Pistachio trees are usually planted at 12 to 15 foot intervals and in rows 20 to 24 feet apart. This gives a commercial orchard 120 to 180 trees to the acre.

Schweers' orchard in Otero County is being successfully grown with drip irrigation, but flood irrigation is the most common in California. Pistachio trees are also highly salt tolerant, a characteristic that is not common among fruit and nut trees.

Fertilizer needs of pistachio trees are still not well known. Research is being conducted at NMSU to determine the types of fertilizers best suited for pistachio trees, and to determine fertilizer rates.

No major insect and disease problems have been encountered in New Mexico pistachio trees, but a wasp (Chalesed) may sting the nut and eat the meat.

Researchers have also found that cotton root rot also affects pistachio trees in some new orchards.

In areas where Verticillium wilt may be a problem, rootstock P. Intergerima is recommended. This rootstock is not recommended for all areas in New Mexico because it is easily killed by freeze.

Pistachio trees are usually pruned to a modified central leader in commercial orchards. This gives mature trees a size and shape similar to a semidwarf apple tree.

Harvesting is done by the middle of September and is still being done by hand in most small orchards. Mechanical harvesting is apparently possible with shakers and catching frames.

Pistachio trees bloom consistently by the second week of April; therefore, they should not be planted wherever freezing temperatures occur after those days.

State might support brush, weed controls

Governor Bruce King has appointed an advisory committee to meet New Mexico's growing rangeland brush and weed problems head on.

The committee will draw up legislation to fund expanded brush control research, and possibly to finance low interest loans and cost sharing plans with ranchers who control brush and weeds on their land.

Formation of the new committee was announced recently by Dr. Gerald W. Thomas, president of New Mexico State University (NMSU), at an international rangeland conference in Roswell.

Thomas told range scientists at the conference from New Mexico and Texas that brush and weed control is a major problem area in the two states. Half of New Mexico's 62 million acres of rangeland, and 85 million Texas' 92 million acres of rangeland, have brush and weed problems.

New Mexico's financial support of range brush and weed control research may stretch well into the future. Officials of the United States Department of Interior and United States Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service told ranchers at the meeting not to expect increases in financial assistance from federal sources for at least two years.

In spite of budget cuts, the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) has already started a million-acre spray program in the Roswell district to control mesquite. This land is leased to ranchers for grazing.

Bob Jones, president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association and former president of the New Mexico Public Lands Council, said, "Brush control can double the number of cattle we can produce, but so far we've gotten small results compared to the need."

"We need a joint effort by landowners, government and range researchers to put together land blocks and programs to treat a million acres a year, instead of small plots and pastures here and there."

The conference also laid the groundwork for a cooperative program between participating universities, chemical companies, government agencies and ranchers to develop computerized techniques to predict return on investment for controlling weeds and brush.

Kirk McDaniel, Extension brush control specialist at NMSU, and Ron Sosebee, Texas Tech, described their research in New Mexico where doses of Tordon herbicide knocked out broom snakeweed and quadrupled growth of desired grass varieties.

Broom snakeweed crowds out these grasses in normal range conditions. Snakeweed also causes abortion in cattle, doubling its financial impact on ranchers.

Many western and southwestern states have range brush and weed problems, but only a few have significant research and control programs.

Wyoming is into its fourth year of a six-year $7.3 million program to stop leafy spurge through use of herbicides. Local and state taxes are supporting the Wyoming program.

Fighter plane demonstration at Holloman Saturday

Captain Mike Larkin, a veteran fighter pilot with more than 2,000 hours flying time in the F-15 "Eagle" and F-4 "Phantom," is the pilot for the F-15 aircraft demonstration which will be the main attraction at Holloman Air Force Base's annual Open House on Saturday. Assigned to the 7th Tactical Fighter Squadron, 49th Tactical Fighter Wing, at Holloman, Larkin will demonstrate the performance capabilities of the Air Force's finest air superiority fighter.

With 50,000 pounds of thrust, the F-15's fan jet engines are powerful enough to allow the "Eagle" to climb straight up immediately after takeoff. This amount of thrust is roughly equivalent to 45,000 horsepower or the power generated by 65 Indy "500" racers.

Larkin, who is Tactical Air Command's F-15 demonstration pilot for civilian and military airshows west of the Mississippi, will demonstrate the aircraft's vertical climb capability following a 1200-foot takeoff roll by pulling the aircraft straight up immediately after takeoff. In this climb, he rolls the aircraft 180 degrees to position for the split "S" maneuver.

He then goes over the top, inverted, as he enters the split "S." At the bottom he makes a pass over the field at 500 feet and 500 miles per hour in the opposite direction from Larkin. In front of the reviewing stands, Larkin will perform a high "G" turn, illustrating the F-15's exceptional turn rate. In this turn, he experiences seven G's, equivalent to weighing seven times his normal weight.

He will next pull the aircraft up into a climb and decelerate for the next maneuver — a low speed pass in the landing configuration. While the F-15 can fly over twice the speed of sound, it is also fully controllable at low airspeeds as will be demonstrated during this maneuver.

Larkin will then pass the reviewing stand with the gear down at 150 miles per hour. At this airspeed, the aircraft will be wing-rocked to 90 degrees of bank to demonstrate the F-15's excellent low speed handling characteristics. From the slow flight, he will perform a Cuban 8. The aircraft inscribes a figure 8 on its side over the airfield. Following the Cuban 8, he will execute a double Immelmann in only 6,000 feet of vertical airspace. The Immelmann was created in World War I as a tactical maneuver and today demonstrates the F-15's power and maneuverability.

At approximately 6,000 feet over the field, Larkin will perform a split "S" to 500 feet over the runway. The cockpit design provides superb visibility to the pilot of the F-15. The advanced radar serves as the "eyes" of the "Eagle" and extends far beyond the pilot's eyes. It enables the "Eagle" to detect intruders from treetop level to maximum altitude.

Larkin will next approach the field for a high speed vertical climb. He will cross the runway at 300 feet and begin a climb to demonstrate the aircraft's sustained vertical climb capability. His rate of climb in this maneuver exceeds that of the Apollo space launches.

He will then approach the field for his final maneuver, a tactical pitch up to landing. He will cross the runway at 300 feet and pitch up to downwind. During the pitch, Larkin will roll the "Eagle" 450 degrees. He will then decelerate to 300 miles per hour and lower gear and flaps during the final turn for this approach. During his approach he will hold approximately 150 miles per hour and will touch down at 130 miles per hour. Landing the F-15 requires less than 4,000 feet. This, coupled with short takeoff capability, permits the "Eagle" to operate from large numbers of available runways worldwide.

The public is invited to watch this demonstration. The Open House will also feature a variety of displays, demonstrations, entertainment and food. Gates open at 11 a.m. and close at 4 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Although handicapped persons are welcome to attend the entire day's activities, the events will begin at 9 a.m., with a "mini" Open House for handicapped persons wishing to avoid large crowds. This special preview, featuring static exhibits, is being sponsored by the Holloman First Sergeants, and will end at 10:45. Bus transportation from various Alamogordo locations is being provided for the handicapped not wanting to drive cars to the base. Escorts will be available.

At 11 a.m., the Holloman gates will open to the general public, with a RF-4 "Phantom" aircraft flyby. At 11:35, the 833rd Security Police Squadron will demonstrate rappelling from an Army Air Operations helicopter. From 12 noon until 1:30 p.m., there will be a demonstration of radio-controlled model airplanes, as well as a motorcycle safety demonstration. Also beginning at noon, the 4449th Mobility Support Squadron will erect a personnel shelter.

The New Mexico Military Institute (NMMI) High School drill team from Roswell, will perform at 1 p.m. A demonstration by 833rd Security Police dogs is scheduled for 1:10. Then at 1:20, the NMMI college drill team will exhibit their precision drills. Four AT-38 "Talon" and four F-15 "Eagle" aircraft will take off preparatory to flying over the crowd.

The Holloman Fire Department will demonstrate the emergency rescue of a pilot and navigator from a T-38 aircraft at 1:35. Then at 1:40 the department will demonstrate the emergency rescue of astronauts from the Space Shuttle "Columbia," using the shuttle mockup maintained at Holloman by the Contingency Response Force for training in the event the shuttle lands at Northrup Strip on White Sands Missile Range.

At 1:45 there will be an F-15 combat "quick-turn," a demonstration of rapid loading of air-to-air munitions by the 49th Tactical Fighter Wing maintenance and munitions teams. Then at 2, the 833rd Security Police Squadron will again demonstrate rappelling from a helicopter.

The program is subject to change due to the Support Requirements for the Space Shuttle flight and current weather conditions.

Following Larkin's performance, some of the demonstrations will be repeated until 3:30. All day long there will be a variety of exhibits offered, along with varied entertainment. Continuous movies depicting the Air Force mission will be shown in Building 302, Room 2, in the Open House area, from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m., and after the airshow until 3:30. Aircraft on display will include the F-15, the T-38 (used by the 479th Tactical Training Wing for lead-in fighter training at Holloman), the Navy TA-4J, a KC-135, A-11, A-10, B-52G, F-5 "Aggressor", A-7, F-16, and F-4.

The New Mexico and Texas chapters of the Confederate Air Force will fly in numerous World War II aircraft which they will exhibit. The aircraft include a replica of the Japanese "Val" dive bomber, a P-51 "Mustang," a C-45 "Expediter," a PT-22 "Recruit," several SN-3's, a T-34 and a Royal Air Force "Chipmunk."

The Order of the Deadalians Zia Flight will take Polaroid photographs of people in the cockpits of a T-38 or F-15; the Red Cross will offer free blood pressure checks; and a MARS (Military Affiliated Radio System) van from the 1877th Communications Squadron will send "MARS-GRAMS" for those desiring to send a message to family members or friends. (Persons desiring to send a message must have the name, address and telephone number of the person they would like to contact.)

Grumann Aircraft Company will show aircraft action films; the 6585th Test Group will provide a computer display, a high-speed rocket sled and videotapes depicting sled runs at Holloman. White

Sands Missile Range will have a traveling exhibit — a 45-foot walk-through van depicting the history of rocketry, beginning in China in the 11th century, history of the United States Army in the Southwest, and the WSMR role in testing rocket and missile systems. WSMR will also provide a missile exhibit.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

Joyce McKnight Cooper

Services were held Tuesday, November ten, at the Church of the Holy Mount for Joyce McKnight Cooper who was called Home by Our Lord from her ranch home near Tinnie, in blessed company of her devoted husband, John, and their loving family.

Joyce was born July twenty-six, 1925, in Roswell to Mr. and Mrs. Jud "Chato" McKnight. With her marriage to John W. Cooper in 1944, two pioneer ranch families were united.

From her mother and father, Joyce inherited a devout nature, and from her life-long worship in the Episcopal Church she became all that a Christian Lady could be.

So deep was their devotion to Our Lord, and so sincerely have they always practiced Christ's teachings in their daily lives, that the Cooper family is like part of our own family to all of us. So the services at Holy Mount were the tributes, and blessings and memorials for one of our very own. Friends and loved ones filled the church to overflowing, coming from all parts of the state, and out of state also.

Joyce's father, widely respected and beloved by all who knew him, was given the nickname "Chato" (Pug Nose) by his Spanish-speaking friends. The name stayed with him, and by it he was known in ranching circles all over the west.

Chato used to come up to services with Joyce and John and the children, while up in his nineties; and he was always a blessing to all of us.

He was a living story book, and told me once of driving a herd of sheep from the Oklahoma line to his ranch near Picacho.

A special day, still, sunny with a blue sky was perfect for the services, and I could not help but think of the old Negro spiritual, "Going Home."

"Going home. Going home.
I'm just going home.
Quiet like, some still day,
I'm just going home.

It's not far, just close by
Through an open door.
Mother's there, Father too,
And all the friends I knew. . ."

During this Thanksgiving season we send up a prayer of thanks for the blessing that Joyce Cooper will ever be in our lives. And we take comfort in knowing our beloved friend is safe and happy in Heaven with Our Lord.

Jasper Kansea Jr.

Hearing that my good Indian friend, Jasper Kansea Jr., was called home by Our Lord November seven, brought back happy memories of my youth here, when I used to spend all four days and nights at the July four celebration at Mesalero.

Jasper Junior was one of the Indian teenagers my age who used to see that I had a place to sleep and plenty to eat.

Jasper was born September 18, 1909, in Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where his people, the famous Chiricahua Apaches, had been taken after their surrender—after first having been taken to Florida. As a small child he made the trip from Oklahoma with his parents, after the Mesalero Apaches had invited them to come and live on the reservation.

His father, the late Jasper Kansea Sr., told of seeing from the train, the wagons at Tularosa and the camp fires of the Mesaleros who had come to welcome them and were waiting there at day break when the train pulled in. I think this was in 1913.

Jasper Jr., was a devout member of the Mesalero Reform Church and spent a life time helping his people.

We will remember Jasper Jr., fondly always, and we are happy that he has gone on to meet his fathers who have gone on before, and await him with our Lord in Heaven.

Ramon Padilla

Ramon Padilla, our friend of many years, was called Home by Our Lord from the veteran's hospital in Albuquerque on November five. A native New Mexico boy, he was born May 2, 1920, at the village of Pintada, and had lived for many years at Ruidoso Downs where he was a chef at the Chaparral Motel.

He was a veteran of World War II. The Funeral Detail came from Holloman Air Force Base at Alamogordo, complete with color guard, firing squad, and bugler.

Ramon and his wife, the former Emilia Romero, raised a fine family who have brought honor to their mother and father.

Both Ramon and his wife were devout members of St. Eleanor's Catholic Church in Ruidoso. Ramon has always been a good neighbor, helpful and kind always, and we will remember him fondly always. And we all take comfort in knowing he is safe and happy with our Lord in Heaven.

Raising chickens age old practice in United States

According to early historians, almost every shipload of colonists that came to North America in the 17th and 18th centuries brought a few chickens with them.

Easy to feed and maintain, they provided eggs and meat on the long sea voyage. On landing, they became a mainstay of the colonial farm, according to Dr. D. W. Francis, Extension poultry consultant at New Mexico State University.

Every farm wife kept a few fowls for family use. Geese and ducks were plucked for feather beds and pillows. Hens laid eggs and provided the main ingredient for chicken and dumplings, a favorite old-time dish. The farm wife often raised a few turkeys, which were native to North America, for food.

Surplus meat and eggs in the early days of poultry raising were precious commodities and well up into the 20th century provided household money on hundreds of farms. Eggs and frying chickens were sold to customers in town or bartered at the country store.

Turkeys were caught, crated up and shipped to city markets in November, and geese and ducks were treated likewise in December. Without poultry, many a farm wife would have had to do without coffee, sugar and other staples that could not be grown on the land.

Although poultry was of vital importance on farms in the good old days, when it came to raising the birds conditions were in a sorry state. These early fowl ate whatever they could wherever they found it. They foraged in fields and woods for weed seed and many flocks lived out their entire lives without a grain of corn unless they found it in the barnyard where an ear had fallen from a wagon. Most roosted in trees and were fair game for hawks, owls and predatory animals.

The chickens of the day were a mongrel lot, too. They came in assorted sizes, colors and degrees of inefficiency in both meat and egg production. This situation also continued well into this century before things began to change.

After land-grant colleges came into being and started their Extension services, poultry raising began to improve. Extension agents promoted better poultry practices by swapping purebred roosters for mongrel fowl of the same sex and giving instruction on better poultry housing and feeding.

These agents did such a good job of promoting these improved methods that a great wave of enthusiasm for poultry raising swept the country. With this kind of treatment, old hens started laying eggs in the wintertime and some farmers were producing fryers at all times of the year. Before that, fryers were available only in springtime and early summer.

So great was the enthusiasm for raising a few chickens, even people in the cities with a backyard started buying and raising a few baby chicks.

In recent years, however, a strange thing has happened. Not one in a dozen small farms has chickens. The henhouse is gone and there are few roosters to crow at sunrise.

Farm people buy their eggs now in pulp paper cartons or plastic boxes and get their fryers and baking hens from the grocery store meat departments. These former chicken raisers say it's cheaper to buy dressed chickens and candled eggs than to raise them. They are undoubtedly right; raising chickens old-style isn't feasible today.

"Thirty years ago, Extension experts recommended that every farm have a hundred chickens," Francis said. "Today, we suggest either 10 hens for home use or 10,000 as a part-time farming operation. Poultry raising for profit on a small scale is no longer worthwhile."

One thing for certain, from the way folks still take to turkey, fried chicken and chicken and dumplings, these birds will be with us for a long time to come.

EMT's participating in intermediate training

Eight Lincoln County Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT's) are undergoing the first three of a fifteen module intermediate training program under the sponsorship of the Emergency Medical Services Academy (EMS Academy), University of New Mexico School of Medicine. The classroom is in the Ruidoso Police building.

Instructors Jerry Beckman, training coordinator, and Mary Ann Brewington, R.N., of the EMS Academy staff, are "taking the Albuquerque-based course" to the state's smaller communities in an effort to train local technicians in emergency medical care beyond the Basic Life Support (BLS) level.

Modules I, II and III of the program cover training in Patient Assessment, Pneumatic Anti-Shock Trousers, Intravenous Fluids and Esophageal Obstructor Airway. Patient assessment is probably the most important phase of the course, Beckman said, despite the student's belief that "giving an IV is really neat."

Community support for the program is needed, Brewington said, to include sufficient additional funding to enable area Ambulance Service/Fire Department Rescue Units to purchase and provide, on a continuing basis, the equipment and supplies needed for an advance life support system. Hospital and physician support also is needed, she said.

After the technicians have passed the EMT-P final written and practical examinations with a 75 percent or better grade, Beckman said, they must start five successful IV's on patients under hospital supervision.

Area EMT's enrolled in the training program are: Yvonne Lanelli, Alto; Jim Livingston and Bill Adams, Capitan; Gwen Jones, Fort Stanton; and Jim Wheeler, Dennis Harkness, Matt Jakusz and Larry Johnson, Ruidoso.

THE SPIDER

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was editor of a small Missouri paper. One day he received a letter from a subscriber, stating that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck. Twain replied: "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good nor bad luck. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

THE RUIDOSO NEWS

SANTA FE — Question: Name a group which truly believes it is the salt of the earth.

Answer: America's teachers.
Question: Name another group which holds more or less the same belief.

Answer: America's labor leaders.

Question: So what do you get when you combine America's teachers with America's labor leaders?

Answer: Something very like the group which appeared in Santa Fe last Monday to insist that it is undignified to test teachers to see whether they know anything . . .

Please note that Doctors of Medicine (those guys and women with the M.D. behind their names, who once ranked highest on the scale of persons we respected) do not hesitate to submit themselves to tests of their knowledge and ability.

Neither do attorneys, who, before being admitted to practice, have to take the hated bar exam.

Neither do Doctors of Veterinary Medicine, who only take care of our doggies and our pussy cats.

But those folks who train our human young . . . What do they say?

That it is indecent to ask them to demonstrate that they have: a.) the knowledge to teach; or b.) the skill with which to communicate the knowledge.

"How can you measure us?" they ask.

"As easily as we measure other professional people," we answer.

You are not so special.

You are not unique.

You are not — though this may be tough for you to accept — the salt of the earth.

And why would you be so frightened of tests as the meeting of the state Board of Education here in Santa Fe on Monday suggested you are if you had no doubts about the ability of your members?

Why fight a series of measurements if you are sure you could pass them?

The saddest group of all were the deans of the departments of education in the state's universities who came up here determined that nobody should measure their competence — or incompetence — in training teachers.

Having still some decency, one passes over in silence the mistakes in English grammar one heard in the presentations by such deans.

Hearing their own failures, however, one understands why they do not want their graduates tested.

Teachers — with or without membership in labor unions, named as such or disguised under other titles — would be wise to stand forward and say, "Test us, prove us, measure us in any way you will. We are sure we will measure up. We defy you to demonstrate that we do not have competence in our field."

They don't say that.

Why?

There would appear to be only two possible explanations.

Either they do not think they are good at taking tests, or they do not think they could pass them.

These are people who spend part of their lives administering tests to others. They should not now refuse the opportunity to take them themselves.

So, in justice, one is almost forced to say what scares them is the necessity of passing tests, individually and alone.

How sad.

How cowardly.

How frightening a prior admission of their own probable incompetence.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

NO CRITICISM BUT CONGRATULATIONS

The loss to Silver City was a shock and a tremendous disappointment for Ruidoso and the Ruidoso Warriors, but, it is my opinion, congratulations and not criticism are needed at this point. After all, I don't think there was a player on that field, playing or waiting to be played, that didn't give it his all. The players and the coaching staff were all under tremendous pressure from all of us in the community to bring home a state championship trophy. I truly believe that both the players and coaches gave their all to accomplish this feat. Not every man that tries for a gold medal in the Olympics succeeds at his dreams. After all, it is really the effort to achieve those dreams that counts, not the medal itself.

So, why should we be congratulating the Warriors, its coaching staff, and the community?

First, there was not one un-sportsmanlike conduct penalty or personal foul called against Ruidoso or Silver City, which is surprising in a game that meant so much.

Second, the Warriors never gave up, but instead kept the fire up and gave it all their determination.

Third, the fans and community, as a whole, backed the Warriors in their effort all the way.

Finally, but not last, were the coaches. They did the best they could and, I feel, would never do anything intentionally to hurt or hinder a player's dreams. After all, there isn't a love much greater than that of a coach for his players or vice versa.

So, let's not do any more harm or inflict any more pain to our family of Warriors and its staff with criticism of the game and what it should have been and could have been. It is gone, it is over, so let it go. Let's give our battered and weary Warriors what they need — a home, a family, and the love that goes with it, win or loose.

Tom Culbertson

ONE WATER SOLUTION

Several years ago Ruidosians went to the polls and voted in a $5,000,000 Eagle Creek Reservoir Bond. Everybody thought the money was supposed to be used to build a dam on Eagle Creek to catch water for us to use in the future. Instead the money was used to build new pipe lines and new steel tanks to hold the water that we still don't have.

Almost a year ago the Village Water Department concluded an Eminent Domain Condemnation suit against me in which they took 1 1/4 acres of land away from me. The land they took was out of the middle of a five acre tract I bought in Kingswood to build my home on. While I was away on a business trip, the Village came onto my land and cut all the trees and excavated out 11,000 cubic yards of earth and hauled it away without even notifying me of their intentions. They went on to build a 1,000,000 gallon steel water reservoir and spent much, much more of the money we voted for to build a water catching dam. This steel tank is very unsightly and only holds a half day of water supply for the town during peak season.

Why didn't the Village put in a 10,000,000 gallon earth reservoir similar to the one on Hull road which would cost just a fraction of what the steel tanks cost and holds ten times the water?

I want to make a proposal for you fellow Ruidosians to consider as a solution to our water problems. We could build five to seven ponds, with packed clay bottoms to keep the water from seeping out, down by the Ruidoso River and beside Carrizo River. Each pond would have 7-15 million gallons of water capacity. Only part of the water that flows down the Rio Ruidoso and Carrizo could be diverted into these ponds to keep them full and the excess run over to be channeled back into the river. They could be used for city parks with picnic tables and fishing like Alto. There would also be a ready reserve of water in case of forest fire in town. We don't have a single park with a pond by the river any where in Ruidoso for the Village residents to enjoy.

The water that flows down the Rio Ruidoso in the winter while there are no cress growing in the valley and the EXCESS SPRING RUN OFF could be pumped out of these ponds and run through a small treatment plant like is done in Alto Reservoir. The water then could be pumped directly into our water lines and stored for use in the summer in very large EARTH Reservoirs which could be built by the City without bringing in out of town steel tank contractors. These Earth Reservoirs can hold up to 100 million gallons of water and be built for almost the same cost that the Village spends to build a two million gallon steel tank.

We can never build enough steel tanks to supply us with water through the summer. We need these ponds and parks for the future of Ruidoso.

If you know the vacant land up and down the Rio Ruidoso and Carrizo Rivers then you know of at least a dozen perfect locations.

If you fellow Ruidosians like these ideas or have any of your own, then please contact your Village Trustees.

Thank you.

We believe that Roger Crist should be given a free hand to run the State Prison at Santa Fe.

However, the question seems to be: how good a job is he doing?

There have been a series of incidents, during his tenure, that indicate he is not getting the situation under his control. These incidents include the death of a guard, various altercations among inmates, and a furor about establishing cultural groups within the prison.

Considering these problems, Crist's directive requiring investigators to obtain his approval before taking any action should come under close scrutiny by legislators determined to work out a system of prison management that will keep disturbances at a minimum.

We believe Crist needs all the help he can get at this point.

Should a group of experts, used to dealing with large penal institutions, come up with solutions to the problems of dealing with the inmates at Santa Fe, then Crist should bend over backwards to obtain these solutions.

Once the prison is under control, Crist could implement the measures insuring that minimal problems would surface, and, as Governor King desires, Crist then could exercise a free hand to maintain that control.

This, we believe, is the message the Governor should convey to Crist. —CD

Want to pay about the same amount for electricity, every month?

The Average Billing Plan says you can!

The Average Billing Plan is a way of figuring your bill so that you pay about the same amount for electricity, each month. You'll know how much of a bill to expect, so budgeting will be easier. And at the end of the year, you'll find you paid the same amount for electricity as if you were on the regular billing plan.

Here's how it works:

FIRST MONTH
MOST RECENT 12 MONTHS ACTUAL USE	AVERAGE BILLING AMOUNT	*15% of accumulated difference is added when prior to the current bill, the calculated amount for electricity used is more than the accumulated amount billed under the Average Billing Plan.
EACH MONTH THEREAFTER
MOST RECENT 12 MONTHS ACTUAL USE	15% OF ACCUMULATED DIFFERENCE + AVERAGE BILLING AMOUNT

NOTE: If you have less than 12 months history at your present address, the "average" will be based on the number of months available.

CAT IN BOOT DEALIE

The other day . . . bud by accident . . . I got to visit with Quid Fenton of Portales . . . which is a switch from Shakey Pete . . . and, it was, by happenstance, over a glass of ice tea.

During our chitchat . . . somewhat centered on Rompin' Ronnie's problems with the nation's economy . . . I slipped the cliché: "There's more'n one way to skin a cat," into the conversation . . . a remark that led to some rather interesting possibilities.

Bud got that far away look in his eye . . . very similar to the look Shakey gets at times . . . fixed me with a deliberate stare . . . and said: "I don't think anyone can stuff a tomcat, head first, into a boot."

Now getting a tomcat . . . and a boot . . . ain't no major problem. Getting a cooperative tomcat just could be a feline of another color. And getting someone to shove the tomcat into the boot, quite another matter.

Anyhow . . . in passing . . . I happened to mention this conversation to Jerry Story and Tommy Hall . . . both of whom expressed considerable interest in this deal, that just could lead to noises bordering on caterwauling from the cat.

The deal is . . . at the present . . . that Tommy'll furnish the boot . . . and Jerry is somewhat of a mind to try to get the cat into the boot . . . and Bud's champin' at the bit to get this show on the road . . . and he claims to have a tomcat . . . and I figure it's up to Bud to get Jerry and the cat together . . . for the boot stuffing . . . and, as soon's a time and place is set . . . you'll be among the first to know.

Who knows what this kind of tomcatting around could result in?

Now this deal ain't quite got to the stuffing stage . . . and there are details to be worked out . . . like Jerry can't grease the cat like a pig . . . 'cause, being's it'll be Tommy's boot as the cat's to be shoved into . . . he don't want a bunch of grease in it . . . which do sound logical.

Anyhow . . . if'n there's a chance of this event occurring soon . . . it'd sure fill the gap betwixt what's going on now . . . and when the skiers'll be here . . . doing their version of tomcatting around.

FRIDAY'S THE 13TH

Speaking of cats . . . Friday's the day of the black cat . . . and what'll happen if'n such a critter should cross your way . . . especially if'n there's no way you can avoid crossing the cat's path.

Course superstition has nothing to do with Friday the 13th . . . especially if'n it's a mirror you're carrying as gets dropped as you cross over that black cat's path . . . naturally, positively and most assuredly.

This Friday the 13th the moon won't be full . . . it'll be two days past full . . . so that shouldn't deter you from walking under a ladder on Friday . . . providing anyone on the ladder isn't full of moon . . . or does the only moonshine in these hills come from that glowing planet . . . and this isn't the year for werewolves . . . 'cause they're afraid that Rompin' Ronnie'll find out some way to harass them . . . and maybe increase their taxes . . . or cut 'em off food stamps.

Being's I'm not superstitious . . . I hope you'll face Friday the 13th likewise . . . bearing in mind that carrying a salt shaker with you can't hurt nothin' . . . unless you sprinkle an antagonistic soul.

ON A HORSE ARENA

Margaret Gaddy's got an idea . . . having more or less to do with horse activities . . . not horsin' around . . . and she's talking up the possibility of getting a horse arena here . . . suitable for horse shows . . . and rodeos . . . and all sorts of horse events . . . and she allows as how, in her opinion, that such a structure would attract horse events here 12 months out of the year . . . 'cause we got a good climate . . . good location . . . and she figures the horse types'd be real interested in coming here.

Now this project'd take $$$$$ . . . naturally . . . but if'n a deal could be worked out . . . there'd be nothing wrong with having this added attraction . . . to bring folks into Harmony Valley . . . and maybe make horse enthusiasts outta folks as now figures horses are good for racing . . . and for making dog food . . . and producing glue. Hope she gets the arena.

Sunland Park Hoofbeats

BY MARK GORDON

SUNLAND PARK hosted more than 100 officials and representatives in El Paso, Texas, over last weekend for the 12th Annual Racing Conference of the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA). The three day meeting was only the second time in the group's history they met in El Paso. "We try to choose areas where race tracks run quarter horses for our racing conference," said Tom Mercer, AQHA director of racing. Two general meetings were held, featuring speakers such as Bobby Sykes, chairman of the AQHA's racing committee; Marten Clark, AQHA president; Finlay McGillivray, Ruidoso Downs-Sunland Park general manager; Tad Davis, legal counsel for the American Horse Council; Albert Becker, chairman of the American Horse Council's board of trustees; George Pratt, an expert in race track surfaces and Dennis Moore, track superintendent at Los Alamitos. The group attended the races on Saturday and Sunday and were luncheon guests of Sunland Park.

TRAINER JOHNIE GOODMAN hasn't lost his touch at training outstanding quarter horses at Sunland Park. Goodman has enjoyed unprecedented success at Ruidoso Downs by saddling the last two winners of the All-American Futurities and the All-American Derbies. He qualified three juveniles in next Sunday's finals of the $191,047 Sunland Park All-American Sale Futurity, the richest fall race in the history of Sunland Park. He has the fastest qualifier from Friday's 400 yard trial races. Chicks Passen All, the fourth fastest qualifier in French Jeans and the ninth fastest runner. Seventy One South. Nine of the 10 finalists were owned by Texans. The only non-Texas-owned runner is Broken Pedal, a Herten penit owned by Phillip and Anita Patterson of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

The winner will receive $95,523 for his second running of the classic, limited to horses sold in the 1980 All-American Select Quarter Horse Yearling Sale at Ruidoso Downs.

The top finalists and their qualifying times: Chicks Passen All (20:09); The Pipeliner (20:22); Jays Mainspring (20:22); French Jeans (20:25); Sissy's Breeze Bug (20:42); Shesachamp (20:42); Broken Pedal (20:46); The Timekeeper (20:48); Seventy One South (20:49); and Hertenpenit Jet (20:51).

HARLA WEBB WON back-to-back races on Saturday's program. She won the fourth race on Cin A Little ($11,000) and then took the fifth aboard Exclusive Venture ($9,600). Cin A Little, who scored his second straight victory this season at Sunland Park, is owned by John Hutton of Lubbock, Texas, and Douglas Shelton of Calderon, Texas. He's trained by Johnie Jamison. Exclusive Venture is owned by Chris C. Albersold of Pampa, Texas, and is trained by Jerry Jamison.

BARE BLADE HAS BEEN having an excellent Sunland Park meeting. The seven-year-old Blade gelding posted his second victory of the season by scoring a one and one-half length win in Saturday's 11th race at one mile. He also has one second this season. He's owned by Clarence and Diane Easley of Pueblo, Colorado, and is trained by Stephen Easley. Louie Figueroa is Bare Blade's regular rider.

Bare Blade was one of four horses who was tied or set fastest seasonal times on Saturday's program.

Bare Blade toured the mile in 1:38 2/5 which tied the season's best, set five races earlier when Born To Lead won the Texas Derby Prep Stakes in the identical clocking. In the eighth race, Native Gypsy scooted to a rapid 19.50 reading while winning the 400 yard race named in honor of the 12th Annual AQHA Racing Conference. In the featured $6,250 Danon Man Handicap at 870 yards Sunday's Native raced to a rapid 45.52 effort, also season's best. Although just one tick off season's best, Double B Express, still ran a fine 1:10 2/5 clocking while scoring a one length victory in the seventh race at six furlongs against allowance thoroughbreds.

ON SUNDAY, Tonkawa Charger raced to a 1:04 2/5 clocking at five and one-half furlongs while winning the featured $6,175 Cutarusty Stakes over eight furlongs. The Foggy Road colt is owned by Melvin G. Riggs of Ft. Stockton, Texas, and is trained by Michael Welch. He was ridden by Kevin Scholl.

WAGERING over the weekend soared up to $920,261, which was a 37.37 percent gain over the $669,919 recorded during a comparable weekend a year ago. On the season, the daily betting average now stands at $305,998, which is a solid 26.61 percent gain over last year's $241,677 at this point. Betting-per-race is currently $26,093, up 28.48 percent. The 1981-82 season continues to shape up as another record setter.

THE NO. 3 POST was the best over the weekend, producing 16 winners. Here's the seasonal tally: No. 1 — 12 wins, No. 2 — 17, No. 3 — 21, No. 4 — 8, No. 5 — 16, No. 6 — 11, No. 7 — 7, No. 8 — 15, No. 9 — 10, No. 10 — 12, No. 11 — 0, No. 12 — 0.

Tonkawa Charger wins stake race

Tonkawa Charger is a colt with a habit of making money, but his main shortcoming is an inability to win against stakes competition.

That problem was resolved in Sunday's Cutarusty Stakes at Sunland Park, as Tonkawa Charger poured on the coal to win in a hard-driving performance.

What made the victory particularly sweet is the fact Tonkawa Charger refused to buckle when put to crunching pressure by the two favorites, Luckluster and Shesgottobeadandy.

The colt first hooked Shesgottobeadandy throughout most of the straightaway and finally got the upper hand. But he still wasn't home free. In the final strides, the even money favorite, Luckluster, closed with a powerful run. But Tonkawa Charger held that salvo hitting the wire a half length in front.

Shesgottobeadandy, who ran with all the courage expected from a filly who's earned almost $83,000 this year, didn't exactly fade out of the picture. She lost the place slot to Luckluster by only a nose.

Tonkawa Charger, perfectly handled by up-and-coming Kevin Scholl, earned $3,705 out of the $6,175 purse. That income punched his 1981 earnings up to $31,061. His record for the year now stands at 4-3-2 from a dozen starts.

The Cutarusty Stakes, saluting the long time stakes star at Sunland and Ruidoso Downs, is conditioned for two-year-olds.

Tonkawa Charger, whose three previous wins came against maiden, trial and allowance company, is owned by Melvin G. Riggs of Ft. Stockton, Texas. Mike Welch is the trainer.

The Cutarusty was negotiated in 1:04 2/5 seconds, which established a seasonal record. The previous mark was set by Luckluster at 1:04 4/5. One reason for the snappy clocking in the Cutarusty was the quick pace carved out by the 14-1 longshot, Air Suisse. Tonkawa Charger settled in fourth place down the back stretch, then came on at the top of the stretch to overpower Shesgottobeadandy.

Sunday's turnout of 4,611 made Tonkawa Charger a $100,000 winner by setting up payoffs of $2,000 to $30 in the colt's previous races. He was easily a 3-5 favorite.

Luckluster, ridden by Kevin Scholl, earned $1,358 and finished second in the colt's previous races. He was easily a 3-5 favorite.

Carlos Rivas heading for big time race tracks

BY DICK ALWAN

Carlos Rivas wasn't any good betting on horses, but he sure knows how to ride them.

At 31, Rivas stands among the finest jockeys in the Southwest, and is now putting in his final campaign at Sunland Park. Around the first week in January, he'll be launching into a riding circuit which includes neither Sunland nor Ruidoso Downs.

"I'll miss the Southwest, but you have to make that money when you can," he said.

His new itinerary covers Oaklawn Park, Louisiana Downs, and two tracks in Kentucky: Churchill Downs and Keeneland. It'll be a pretty full schedule — one which takes up the whole year.

Born and raised in Mexico City, Rivas got an early exposure to racing when his parents regularly visited the Hipodromo and took him along. He was about five when his interest in the sport began to pick up steam.

At 17, he was going to the races on his own, and wasn't against the idea of plunking down a peso or two on this horse or that. The problem was he had no talent when it came to picking a winner. "I always lost, and I'd have to walk back home," he said.

The breakthrough came when a pal (and fellow horse player) looked him over one day and said: "Say, you've got the right size. Why don't you become a jockey?"

Although he'd never considered the idea, it struck his fancy, and soon he was enrolled in the jockey school at the Mexico City track. Normally, it takes a year to graduate, but Rivas wrapped up the course in seven months. But a fly dropped into the ointment when he took a spill while working a colt, and broke a collar bone. For a newcomer trying to break in, that's a bad blow — in more ways than one. Rivas said: "It's hard enough to get started, but after you get hurt, the horsemen think you'll lose your nerve."

With his prospects taking a nosedive, Rivas decided to try new territory, and headed to the border. He broke into racing at the Juarez track in 1973, and wound up as the leading apprentice. That provided the springboard to far bigger Southwest tracks.

Rivas was the Sunland champ in the fall of 1976 and the fall of 1978. He won the 1980-81 crown with 57 winners. The Ruidoso titles fell in place in 1976 with 80 winners, and again in 1977 with 84.

Earlier this year, Rivas staged a full-scale foray into the outside world, riding the entire season at Louisiana Downs, where he wound up as the sixth leading rider with 36 wins. That success convinced him to ride year-around on the bigger tracks.

Rivas has ridden many top horses over the years, and won numerous stakes races, but few were as satisfying as that time a few years back when he was called on to ride Limited Addition in a $35,000-added stakes race at Oaklawn. The colt's regular rider was Jorge Tejeira, the nation's third top rider at the time. But the owners of Limited Addition were a bit down on Tejeira when he failed to win in several allowance races.

So Rivas got the job on Limited Addition, and found himself playing the role of longshot in the mile-and-70-yard route. He said: "I was far back in the first part of the race, but when the pace started to slow down, I began coming through on the inside. Jockey David Whited was in the lead, and keeping an eye on a horse on the outside. He didn't see me until it was too late, and I won by a head."

Later, the owners of Limited Addition called Rivas to ride in the $100,000 Arlington Futurity in Chicago, but Rivas was already committed to riding Bloody Blade, at the same time, in Sunland's $270,904 Riley Allison Futurity. Rivas was eager to ride in the Arlington Futurity, but cold logic prevailed. After all, the Allison had a far bigger purse.

The outcome was ironic, since Bloody Blade finished second to Hy Lucky Jay — but was advanced to first when Hy Lucky Jay was subsequently disqualified.

One of Rivas' favorite horses here in the Southwest is Banquero, with whom he won the Fall Thoroughbred Futurity at Sunland, the Rio Grande Futurity at Ruidoso, the State Fair Futurity in Albuquerque, plus a few assorted races at Oaklawn. Rivas said: "He's a very good horse, but he has his own mind. He doesn't like to be rushed. If you try to push him, he'll just twist his tail, and won't go. He likes to rate himself, and he won't run until he gets hooked. It's hard for him to go a distance, but he can run at any racetrack in the country."

One of Rivas' favorites during the recent Louisiana Downs meeting was Dang Right, a gelding who missed the seven and one-half furlong turf record by only one-fifth second.

Early in the summer of 1980, Rivas ran into rough sledding at Ruidoso, when Ten Red Flags, a two-year-old he was working out, bolted to the rail. Rivas suffered a broken shoulder blade and a collapsed lung. As they were carrying him off to the ambulance, Rivas said to the gathered onlookers: "Don't worry, I'll be back tomorrow."

But a collapsed lung is no joyride — especially when you try to catch your breath. He survived the beating, but paid a big price: he had to skip almost the entire Ruidoso season. Once at Oaklawn, he suffered a hairline fracture of a vertebra. "It doesn't bother me much, except when I ride too many horses in one day," he said.

Rivas now rides first call for Bob Arnett, and Judy Paul, his agent, drums up any other business he might need.

Things are obviously going Rivas' way, and one reason is his new outlook. "I used to care too much about what everybody thinks, and I put too much pressure on myself. One trainer thinks you're terrific, another cusses you out. But I've gotten used to it. I've learned you can't please everyone," he said.

Gel pond producing heat at UNM

The world's first gel pond, which converts the sun's rays into usable heat, is now in operation at the University of New Mexico (UNM).

The pond, which is 18 feet in diameter, consists of a transparent polymer gel that floats on top of a pool of salt water. Acting as a thermal insulator, this gel layer allows the sun's rays to penetrate and heat the water while trapping the heat in the pond. Heat is extracted by circulating the hot salt water through a heat exchanger.

Designed and built by Dr. Ebtisam Wilkins, an associate professor of chemical and nuclear engineering at UNM, this innovative gel pond is based on modifications of the solar pond, which uses salt water alone to collect and store the sun's heat.

"This is timely research," said UNM President William E. Davis. "Dr. Wilkins is working in an area with far-reaching possibilities for both public and private use. Hers is a major contribution to the search for alternative energy sources."

Wilkins' gel pond is expected to be much more efficient as an energy source than the classic solar pond. The insulating qualities of the gel layer will significantly reduce heat loss from the pond. In addition, a large quantity of salt—salt makes up 23 percent of the gel pond's volume—is included in the pond, making the water heavier and decreasing the amount of heat which escapes into the atmosphere. Wilkins predicts that little or no heat will escape from a gel pond, even on the coldest days.

A solar pond has disadvantages which the gel pond eliminates. Water in uncovered solar ponds is continually evaporating, requiring constant additions of water and salt. Dirt and debris easily accumulate in uncovered ponds, thus fogging the water and diminishing the pond's effectiveness. The gel layer prevents evaporation and protects the pond from blowing debris. Dirt can simply be washed off the solid gel layer.

With today's rising utility costs, this new source of cheap and efficient energy has elicited interest from Australia, Switzerland, New Guinea, Jamaica and throughout the United States. In addition, a report on the gel pond was included in a recent edition of Newsweek magazine.

Describing the gel pond as simple technology, Wilkins noted the advantages of this solar collector. "The gel pond has excellent storage ability, even when the sun isn't shining. It will store heat overnight and in all seasons, continuously providing heat without fluctuations stemming from changes in the weather."

"The heat provided by the gel pond should be cheaper per square foot than the heat provided by flat plate solar collectors," she said. "And the gel pond concept is feasible in New Mexico, where land isn't as expensive as in other parts of the country."

During laboratory research earlier this year Wilkins tested the concept of the gel pond and developed a suitable polymer gel. When the gel pond concept was completed, Wilkins conducted a demonstration on campus. This gel pond is being used as a test operation to provide actual performance data.

This project is Mexico Legislative Mexico Energy Research Institute.

Data concerning speed, temperature is collected daily information enable the relationship between temperature and amount of heat loss. The gel pond's efficiency collection and storage.

The gel pond maximum efficiency conditions next because it takes surrounding the pond.

"The ground taking in heat from she said. "The

however, and actually acts as an insulator to the pond. Once stabilized, the ground takes very little heat from the pond. I expect the temperature in the gel pond to reach its highest potential next summer after the ground has stabilized and the summer sun increases the heat in the pond."

A minimum temperature of 160 degrees F. is necessary for the pond to provide heat, Wilkins said, but she expects temperatures of at least 195 degrees F. and thinks even temperatures as high as 330 degrees F. are possible. During its first week of operation in August the temperature of the gel pond reached 133 degrees F.

Next summer, when the gel pond is operating under optimum conditions, Wilkins will determine how much heat can be extracted from the pond. She estimates the 16-foot gel pond will provide enough energy to meet the heating demands of a small house.

"By learning how much energy can be extracted from this pond, I can develop a model for building gel ponds in a variety of limited cover, he has much better ability to defend himself against an enemy," Knight said.

"We know that prairie dogs are encouraged to come into areas where there is short grass, so it's reasonable to assume that prairie dogs are going to find suitable habitat where ranges have been overgrazed.

"On the other side of that same coin, we know that prairie dogs keep vegetation near their burrows clipped short, which encourages shorter species of grass. These shorter grass species are less productive and are associated with lowered range conditions."

From a grazing management standpoint, according to Knight, ranges in better condition, with taller vegetation, are less vulnerable to prairie dog encroachment.

After prairie dogs are removed, it may be necessary to revegetate that area with taller growing grass species. Controlling the prairie dogs alone may not increase forage production because prairie dogs have already eliminated the taller growing grass species.

"Prairie dogs damage our range because they keep it in a low condition, which means low production for livestock and other large grazing animals," Knight said.

Zinc phosphide has a minimal effect on the endangered black-footed ferret and other non-target species, and is not a secondary hazard to animals that eat the carcass of a poisoned prairie dog, Knight said.

OLD BALDY lived up to its name briefly, after the first snowfall

Gel pond producing heat at UNM

The world's first gel pond, which converts the sun's rays into usable heat, is now in operation at the University of New Mexico (UNM).

The pond, which is 16 feet in diameter, consists of a transparent polymer gel that floats on top of a pool of salt water. Acting as a thermal insulator, this gel layer allows the sun's rays to penetrate and heat the water while trapping the heat in the pond. Heat is extracted by circulating the hot salt water through a heat exchanger. Designed and built by Dr. Ebtisam Wilkins, an associate professor of chemical and nuclear engineering at UNM, this innovative gel pond is based on modifications of the solar pond, which uses salt water alone to collect and store the sun's heat.

"This is timely research," said UNM President William E. Davis. "Dr. Wilkins is working in an area with far-reaching possibilities for both public and private use. Hers is a major contribution to the search for alternative energy sources." Wilkins' gel pond is expected to be much more efficient as an energy source than the classic solar pond. The insulating qualities of the gel layer will significantly reduce heat loss from the pond. In addition, a large quantity of salt—salt makes up 23 percent of the gel pond's volume—is included in the pond, making the water heavier and decreasing the amount of heat which escapes into the atmosphere. Wilkins predicts that little or no heat will escape from a gel pond, even on the coldest days.

A solar pond has disadvantages which the gel pond eliminates. Water in uncovered solar ponds is continually evaporating, requiring constant additions of water and salt. Dirt and debris easily accumulate in uncovered ponds thus fogging the water and diminishing the pond's effectiveness. The gel layer prevents evaporation and protects the pond from blowing debris. Dirt can simply be washed off the solid gel layer.

With today's rising utility costs, this new source of cheap and efficient energy has elicited interest from Australia, Switzerland, New Guinea, Jamaica and throughout the United States. In addition, a report on the gel pond was included in a recent edition of Newsweek magazine.

Describing the gel pond as simple technology, Wilkins noted the advantages of this solar collector. "The gel pond has excellent storage ability, even when the sun isn't shining. It will store heat overnight and in all seasons, continuously providing heat without fluctuations stemming from changes in the weather. "The heat provided by the gel pond should be cheaper per square foot than the heat provided by flat plate solar collectors," she said. "And the gel pond concept is feasible in New Mexico, where land isn't as expensive as in other parts of the country."

During laboratory research earlier this year Wilkins tested the concept of the gel pond and developed the formula for a suitable polymer gel. When research was completed, Wilkins took the gel pond concept out of the laboratory and built a demonstration unit at UNM's north campus. This gel pond is presently not being used as a source of heat, but is in operation to provide information about the actual performance of a gel pond.

This project is funded by the New Mexico Legislature through the New Mexico Energy Research and Development Institute.

Data concerning solar intensity, wind speed, temperature increase, and heat loss is collected daily at the gel pond. This information enables Wilkins to determine the relationship between solar intensity and temperature increase in the pond, the amount of heat loss to be expected, and the pond's efficiency in terms of heat collection and storage.

The gel pond will be operating at maximum efficiency and under optimum conditions next summer, Wilkins said, because it takes one year for the ground surrounding the pond to stabilize.

"The ground acts as an energy sink, taking in heat from the sun and the pond," she said. "The ground keeps the heat, however, and actually acts as an insulator to the pond. Once stabilized, the ground takes very little heat from the pond. I expect the temperature in the gel pond to reach its highest potential next summer after the ground has stabilized and the summer sun increases the heat in the pond."

A minimum temperature of 160 degrees F. is necessary for the pond to provide heat, Wilkins said, but she expects temperatures of at least 195 degrees F. and thinks even temperatures as high as 330 degrees F. are possible. During its first week of operation in August the temperature of the gel pond reached 133 degrees F.

Next summer, when the gel pond is operating under optimum conditions, Wilkins will determine how much heat can be extracted from the pond. She estimates the 16-foot gel pond will provide enough energy to meet the heating demands of a small house.

"By learning how much energy can be extracted from this pond, I can develop a model for building gel ponds in a variety of sizes," Wilkins said. "A large apartment complex, for example, will require a much larger gel pond than a single home."

The cost of a gel pond for residential use, when mass produced, is expected to be $2,000 to $3,000. The most expensive component is the gel pond liner, followed by the salt and polymer gel. UNM's gel pond contains salt from the Salt Lake in Utah, but Wilkins said less expensive salt is available near Carlsbad.

Although a heat exchanger is installed in UNM's gel pond, coiled plastic pipes can be used instead. Water pumped through coiled plastic pipes in the gel pond would be heated, and then returned to a building to provide heat and hot water. Using plastic pipes reduces the cost of a gel pond, and actually uses the pond itself as a heat exchanger.

If funding is available, Wilkins will also study the possibility of using gel pond energy to drive an engine which generates electricity. Successfully using a gel pond to generate electricity, in addition to providing heat, would accomplish Wilkins' ultimate goal: using solar energy collected by a gel pond to provide a building's total energy needs.

Prairie dog colonies strip range vegetation

A combination of poison bait and good range management practices can help reduce prairie dog towns in New Mexico's rangeland.

Wildlife specialists recommend zinc phosphide treated oats, used in accordance with label instructions, which includes prebaiting with untreated oats, to wipe out prairie dog colonies.

The best time to bait prairie dogs is from July until November or December. This is an active period for prairie dogs when forage is normally cured, weather is balmy, and prairie dogs are active and feeding.

Equally important as the poison bait are range management practices that maintain good ground cover. This is a cultural control for prairie dogs.

Prairie dogs like bare ground for self preservation, according to Jim Knight, Extension wildlife specialist for New Mexico State University.

"A prairie dog has two defenses—good eyes to see an enemy approaching and his burrow to hide in. If he is in an area with limited cover, he has much better visual ability to defend himself against an enemy," Knight said.

"We know that prairie dogs are encouraged to come into areas where there is short grass, so it's reasonable to assume that prairie dogs are going to find suitable habitat where ranges have been overgrazed.

"On the other side of that same coin, we know that prairie dogs keep vegetation near their burrows clipped short, which encourages shorter species of grass. These shorter grass species are less productive and are associated with lowered range conditions."

From a grazing management standpoint, according to Knight, ranges in better condition, with taller vegetation, are less vulnerable to prairie dog encroachment.

After prairie dogs are removed, it may be necessary to revegetate that area with taller growing grass species. Controlling the prairie dogs alone may not increase forage production because prairie dogs have already eliminated the taller growing grass species.

"Prairie dogs damage our range because they keep it in a low condition, which means low production for livestock and other large grazing animals," Knight said.

Zinc phosphide has a minimal effect on the endangered black-footed ferret and other non-target species, and is not a secondary hazard to animals that eat the carcass of a poisoned prairie dog, Knight said.

"Five Steps For A Successful Deer Hunt."
"How To Bag a Trophy Mule Deer."
"Famous Hunter Reveals Secret Hunting Tips."

All of these are titles one might find in any of the fall issues of the numerous hunting related magazines. Their appealing nature has a tendency to make you feel that at long last the big secrets for a successful deer hunt have finally been released.

However, after a day or two in the field of trying these secrets, the majority of hunters are greeting the Game and Fish Officers with the familiar question, "Where are all the deer?"

Some of these hunters have gone on to explain to the officers that even after having driven a great many miles each day that they have yet to see their first deer.

Others like to pick up on the popular rumor that the Game and Fish Department was in the week before the hunt started with helicopters and firecrackers in order to run all the deer out. (I don't know where they think we run the deer to.)

However, what it all boils down to is the fact that deer hunting requires a great deal of hard work.

First of all, you have to do some pre-hunting planning. Scouting trips into your hunting area are a tremendous asset. Determine existing conditions; browse, water, deer sign, etc.

Secondly, know about the species you are hunting. For example, mule deer, so named because of their oversized ears, have extremely sensitive hearing. However, their greatest sense is that of smell. Their eyesight is sharp, but mostly attuned to motion.

It is important to know that the mule deer is typically an "edge-dweller," a lover of broken country, heavy understorey, and dense forest borders.

The mule deer utilizes many plants to some extent, but its dietary mainstays are oak, juniper, mountain mahogany, pinyon, ceanothos, bitterbrush, Douglas fir, white fir and ponderosa pine. Its daily use of free water varies from none to about one and one-half quarts per 100 pounds of body weight.

Finally, when it comes time for the hunt itself, accept the fact that you are going to have to work hard for your deer. Plan on parking your vehicle and WALKING away from the roads. You would be surprised at how much more game you would see if you followed this one "Secret" tip and got well away from the road hunters.

Meanwhile, as you await the arrival of your hunt, save some of your reading time to study the current New Mexico hunting proclamation. Pay particular attention to the section inside the front cover entitled, "It Is Unlawful." Also, carefully read the section on "Tagging."

Furthermore, pull your big game license from your wallet to make sure that it is properly validated for the desired hunt. It must have one of the four seasons indicated on the license. These are: D-One-North, November 6-8; D-Two-North, November 13-19; D-One-South, November 20-22; and D-Two-South, November 27-December 3, 1981.

Take the time and make the effort to make this year's hunt a memorable experience.

Enjoy everything that New Mexico's great outdoors have to offer. Happy Hunting!

New Mexico's dairy production increasing

New Mexico dairymen reached a new milestone in 1980 when cash receipts from milk and cream reached $83.5 million.

The 1980 sales total was up sharply from $67 million in 1979, according to Borden Ellis, Extension dairy specialist at New Mexico State University.

Not all of New Mexico's dairy production is consumed within the state. Many tanker loads of milk went to west Texas markets, Ellis said, and some went to plants that converted the milk and cream to other dairy products.

The total retail value of New Mexico milk and dairy products was more than $160 million in 1980 because cash receipts to dairy farmers represent only about 51 percent of the retail value. The remaining 49 percent went into processing, packaging, transportation, storage and merchandising.

New Mexico's growing dairy herds are directly responsible for the increased cash receipts from milk and cream. There were only 33,000 head of dairy cows in the state in 1978, but that went up 20 percent to 38,000 head in 1979 and climbed to 45,000 head in 1980.

Ellis said most dairy herds increased in size as demand went up over those three years, and several new dairy operations were started in the state.

Milk production averaged 13,022 pounds of milk per cow in 1980, down slightly from the previous year. New Mexico now ranks sixth in average production per cow in the United States.

Although the average production per cow fell slightly, total New Mexico milk production in 1980 was 586 million pounds, a 16 percent increase over the 507 million pounds produced in 1979.

Most of the $83.5 million received by New Mexico dairy farmers is spent within the state for feed, labor, fuel, utilities, veterinary services and other operating expenses, Ellis said.

The average dairy cow consumes about six tons of alfalfa or other roughage a year, and about three tons of grain mixture. More than 325,000 tons of alfalfa hay or other roughage are needed each year for the dairy herds in New Mexico. This provides a market for the state's alfalfa crop.

The dairy cow population in New Mexico was estimated at 49,000 head as of January 1, 1981, the largest statewide dairy herd since 1957. The state's top dairy producing counties are Dona Ana with 13,100 head, Roosevelt, 6,700; Valencia, 5,100; and Bernalillo, 5,000.
