

Operation Trash heads into final weekend with various activities

Operation Trash heads into its final weekend with several activities scheduled for Saturday, April 24.
The Salvation Army truck from Roswell will be returning Saturday to pick up items such as large and small appliances, furniture and clothing, according to organizer Barbara Duff.

Persons needing items picked up should notify the Chamber of Commerce at 257-7395 before Saturday, she said.
Again this weekend, there will be no fee to individuals using the village landfill at Fort Stanton Mesa.

Operation Trash crews will be out making pickups in Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs again Saturday, said Duff, but she asked that refuse be bagged, bundled or boxed and set at curbside.

Residents are especially urged to take advantage of the opportunity to rake and dispose of pine needles, as these present a fire hazard due to the rate at which they burn under dry, windy conditions.
Also still in effect through Saturday is the recycling program for aluminum cans.

Safeway will pay 15 cents per pound of crushed can.

Paint supply stores continue to offer a cash discount to homeowners who specify they are participating in Operation Trash.

As a reminder of what Operation Trash seeks to accomplish, Duff compiled a list of ordinances from both villages which apply to trash.

Restrictive Ordinances in Ruidoso include:

- Prohibiting storage of "materials which may be classified as junk" unless tight buildings are used.
- Prohibiting disposal of refuse on public or private property, enforced by uniform traffic citations.
- Prohibiting throwing solid waste into rivers, streams or bar ditches.
- Prohibiting driving across streams, rivers and bar ditches except at regular crossings.
- Prohibiting leaving inoperable motor vehicles within the village, except within enclosed buildings as prescribed by ordinance. The police may remove such vehicles, when in the open, at the owner's expense.

- Prohibiting abandonment of any container in such condition that a child may be imprisoned therein.
Restrictive ordinances in Ruidoso Downs include:
- Prohibiting scattering trash within the village.
- Prohibiting maintenance of land or buildings containing an accumulation of refuse constituting a health hazard.

- Prohibiting the discharge of liquid waste upon the premises owned by another person.
- Prohibiting the discharge of liquid pollutants into water supplies used for irrigation or domestic purposes.
In Ruidoso Downs trash includes most solid waste and dead animals, garbage refers to waste food and refuse includes any type of waste not subject to spoilage. If there is any question as to the type of waste covered by these ordinances, or the enforcements of them, additional information is available at either village hall.

DEVELOPER ASKS RESTRICTION

New lake to be closed to public?

The price of the land upon which the village proposes to build a dam, water storage reservoir and treatment plant could double unless the village agrees to close the lake that will be created to the public.

Don Dorman, owner of the 32-acre site in Grindstone Canyon which is the proposed location of the capital improvements, appeared before a special meeting of Ruidoso trustees Wednesday night.

Protecting the value of an additional 300 acres he owns adjoining the reservoir site was the reason given by Dorman for prohibiting public use of the lake. He said that he plans to develop a subdivision, and called surface use of the lake "a vital item as to the value of this property."

Dorman acknowledged that a price of $500,000 has been discussed for the property the village is considering. "If there was a public fishing hole, so to speak," he said, the price would have to be adjusted for "condemnation of adjoining property."

Half of the property he plans to develop is outside the village, Dorman noted, and he is petitioning for annexation of this portion. "Water and sewer service are important to my overall plan," he said.

He also requested a stipulation that would enable him to buy back the reservoir property from the village if the lake were built and for some reason later abandoned. He cited property value in his subdivision as the reason for the request.

Trustee Al Junge asked if the people of Ruidoso would not be able to use the lake. Dorman said that if surface use is allowed, the lake "is contaminated, if you would, from the public."

Junge wondered about selling the bond issue to the public with public use of the lake prohibited.

Dorman said that as a "counterbalance," 70 acres of his proposed development is to be for commercial use, with 55 acres of that portion to be for recreational use.

He stated that fishing is the only conceivable surface use of the lake, and that its recreational potential is "very negligible" compared to commercial-recreational use.

There are not many people who live in Ruidoso and vote in bond issues who care about fishing, Dorman said.

"Water is a darn sight more important to the future of Ruidoso than recreation—water recreation," he said.

Mayor George White asked Dorman whether there would be a different price on the land if he did not have exclusive use of the lake.

Dorman said that he had not really asked for exclusive use. "I've asked that the surface be under my control," he said.

"That half-million dollar figure is predicated on no public use of the surface of the lake," Dorman said. He added that he did not have an alternative figure in mind, but that public use of the lake would require 200 yards or more from the side of the lake plus access.

"We're conceivably at least doubling the price," he said.

Trustee Don Dale asked Dorman whether the village could build a five million gallon storage tank at the site if the other projects did not materialize.

"Anything I can do to help the village solve its water problems, I want to do," said Dorman.

He was asked by water board member Newt Page what guarantee he could give that the proposed recreational developments would continue to be used or to exist into the future.

Dorman said that a market analysis had shown potential for family oriented recreational use, and that he did not intend to make a multi-million dollar investment without being there five or 10 years from now.

The non-use is a consideration, and the only consideration, Dorman said. He called the 55 acres of recreation space "a possible offset to the negativity" of not letting people use the lake.

Dorman said that access to National Forest land from the property will not be restricted.

The trustees discussed possible dates for a bond issue election on the water improvements program. It was decided to take the matter up at Tuesday's regular meeting.

July 6 was given as a possible date, providing that the state primary takes place on June 1, which would allow the required 30 days to pass before the bond issue election.

Village manager Jim Hine said Wednesday that the village plans to place the issue before the voters with three questions on the ballot.

The first would be a $2 million general obligation bond issue for water improvements; the second would be imposition of a one percent gross receipts tax for water improvements; and the third would be a $6 million bond issue to be paid off with revenue from the sales tax.

Cost of the first phase of the improvements program is a projected $8 million.

In other business, the trustees discussed utilities for the new high school with school administrators and school board president Dave Parks.

Assistant village manager Frank Potter reported on a proposal from a firm in Hobbs to rent overland pipe to carry water to the construction site. Steve Strain, representing Alley-Connell of Albuquerque, architects of the project, said that it would be cheaper to have contractors haul water to the site.

Strain said he was more concerned about permanent water service to the school. Parks said that plans originally called for the expenditure of $150,000 for sewer and water service to the school, but that spending that sum would be "extremely wasteful of the taxpayers' money."

The school board felt that the money could better be contributed to the village for needed extension of those services to the area, Parks indicated.

"We feel that is a mutually beneficial arrangement to both governmental entities," he said.

Parks also stated that Bill McCarty of White Mountain Development Company has agreed to donate right-of-way for a sewer line.

The trustees agreed to have a special meeting with the school board to discuss utility services for the new high school. Time and day of the meeting is to be determined.

After adjourning Wednesday's special meeting, the board had the first of three consecutive Wednesday evening budget hearings. Village department heads are presenting proposed budgets for the coming fiscal year at the hearings.

WINTER RETURNED TO RUIDOSO this morning and is expected to stay with us at least until Friday. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) flight service office in Roswell said the storm moved south from Colorado and will linger here throughout the day.

Chamber of Commerce elects new directors

The 1981-82 board of directors of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce met for the last time Friday, April 16, during the board's retreat in Santa Fe to discuss the year's achievements and to elect a new board for 1982-83.

Morgan Clough was elected to succeed Richard Sandoval as Chamber president. Ronnie Hemphill will serve as vice president of operations and management, and Joan Bailey was elected vice president of community development.

Vice president of advertising and publicity will be Dan Shaver. James Paxton was elected vice president of economic development.

As past president, Sandoval will serve the executive board in an advisory capacity. Chamber executive director Ed Jungbluth also sits on the executive board.

"We want to continue doing what's been done in the past couple of years. With the continual growth of the community, I feel very strongly that the Chamber can be a big factor in helping the commerce, the industry and the tourism of our village," Clough said.

"I look forward to working with the board of directors to achieve these goals in the next year," said Clough.

He said, "We're going to make Aspen Festival work. It's the most important project the Chamber will undertake this year."

Shaver, the new advertising and publicity director, said, "The main thing to do is to promote Ruidoso." He commented that this past ski season's advertising paid off very well.

"It's going to be hard to top last year," said Shaver, who was part of last year's successful advertising campaign. However, he noted that the Chamber has other promotion plans for the future.

Clough also emphasized his concern over the recent airplane accident in Ruidoso. He expressed the Chamber's support for a new airport.

"In light of the recent tragedy involving the present airport, if the village and business community would like the Chamber to help with the establishment of a new airport, the Chamber is more than willing to help in this matter," Clough said.

The retreat at Santa Fe was a working vacation for the Chamber board of directors. In addition to elections, they held a seminar, discussed the board members' responsibilities and took care of the usual board business.

Outgoing vice president of operations and management, Archer Wilson, reported that Lodgers' Tax funds received had not been kept separate from the general fund account. Board member Sheila Harris moved to establish a separate account for Lodgers' Tax monies. The motion passed unanimously.

New high school utilities discussed

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Utility service for the planned new high school was discussed at a special meeting Monday at the school administration building.

Steve Strain, from architectural firm Alley-Connell and Associates, Albuquerque, reported that plans call for temporary power poles to be erected by Texas-New Mexico Power Company, with electricity used during construction to be metered and billed to the contractor.

Representatives from Texas-New Mexico Power Company said they would need to enter a contractual agreement to serve the building, but that they could set up temporary service as soon as they know the plans. Permanent service would be from Gavilan Canyon Road to the building site, they reported.

Temporary water service will be provided from overland lines which the village will lay. The village can then sell water to the contractor, Strain reported.

No final agreement was reached with the village concerning water service, however, as Frank Potter, assistant village manager, reported that such a commitment by the village would need to be approved by the board of trustees.

Potter said it could cost as much as $6,000 or $7,000 for the 2,500 feet of overland water line which would be required to get service to the area.

Strain emphasized the need to establish—that day—the costs, how hookups will be made and who will pay for the water and electricity needed during construction, because bids on construction are to be opened April 27.

Potter said he would request a special meeting of the trustees to discuss the matter.

Arrangements were also discussed for natural gas service for the building to be provided by Ruidoso Natural Gas Company. Representatives from the company said they plan to bring a line from Hull Road to a meter on the site, and charge for gas used.

An existing road off Gavilan Canyon Road will be used as the construction road, it was reported, and the type of sewer to be installed "needs to be decided by the city," Strain said.

Questions from contractors about the plans and specifications for the building were also answered by representatives from Alley-Connell and the engineering firm, Fanning, Fanning and Agnew from Lubbock, Texas.

Strain reported that 14 general contractors are bidding on construction of the project, and 100 sets of drawings have been sent out by the architects.

DOWN S P&Z STUDIES TRIPLE CROWN

Water concern with high rise

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Water was the main topic of discussion at Monday's Ruidoso Downs Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) meeting with representatives from the Triple Crown Condominium project.

Plans were presented for a 16-story, 100-unit high rise condominium project to be constructed as phase two of the development, with requests for ordinance variations on the height and parking requirements.

Discussion of the village's water supply and potential future water shortage followed P&Z member Jim Tidwell's suggestion that the building have its own well to supply water for fire protection and landscaping purposes.

"This comes as a surprise," said Triple Crown representative Brian Lewis. "We were given absolutely no reason to expect a problem (with water)."

Trustee Jake Harris commented that the village lacks storage space for additional water, although the supply is probably available.

The village's current total water capacity is 418,000 gallons, it was reported, which is sufficient to supply normal demand, but inadequate in case of accidents.

"I'm surprised the situation is as critical as it is," Lewis said. He asked whether there is sufficient water to supply the next family wishing to build a residence in the village and whether development is going to stop in Ruidoso Downs.

Village officials admitted they were uncertain how serious the problem is and exactly how much water they are able to supply.

"This is new to us, and we haven't done our homework," Harris said.

He suggested a need to compare demand for water to the village's supply to determine whether the supply is adequate for the proposed 100 unit project.

"We'll do everything we can to help this town solve the water problem," Lewis said.

He indicated that the project developers would furnish a water supply tank for the village.

Lewis also made a commitment to purchase a ladder fire truck for the village, "due to the construction of this building."

Roger Riley, fire department secretary/treasurer, had earlier pointed out three problems the fire department would have accepting plans for the high rise building. He said the department has no ladder capability for exterior evacuation and firefighting, inadequate water supply and no building to house all its firetrucks.

It was determined that swimming pools at the condominium project would provide sufficient water to fight a fire, but the village will need to find housing for the truck to be donated by the project developers. Riley said the village may be able to lease purchase a building.

A variance was granted by P&Z to allow the height of the condominium building to reach 185 feet, with conditions that a fire truck, meeting approval of the state fire marshal, be made available and that the village has a sufficient water supply for the phase two condominium units.

A variance was also granted allowing the number of parking spaces to be reduced from 270 to 240.

Lewis pointed out that the high rise project would be "fairly dramatically changing the face of Ruidoso Downs" and would provide "a tremendous contribution to the area in terms of trade and tourism."

Objections were raised by P&Z members Jim Rawhouser and Carolyn Hardwick at the beginning of the meeting concerning the manner in which the meeting was called and two new members of P&Z were appointed.

Rawhouser read from P&Z ordinances that meetings are to be called by the chairman of the commission, and objected to the fact that mayor J. C. Day had ordered this special meeting.

"I'm not even aware of the purpose of this meeting," he said.

Also, Rawhouser objected to the appointment of two new members of P&Z by the village trustees at last Monday's meeting, as, according to ordinances, new members are to be recommended by P&Z.

If P&Z is not permitted to function according to its ordinances, Rawhouser explained, "we'll just be rubber stamps of the policy of this administration."

Hardwick agreed she had "no idea whatsoever" what would be presented at the meeting, and stressed a need for time to prepare.

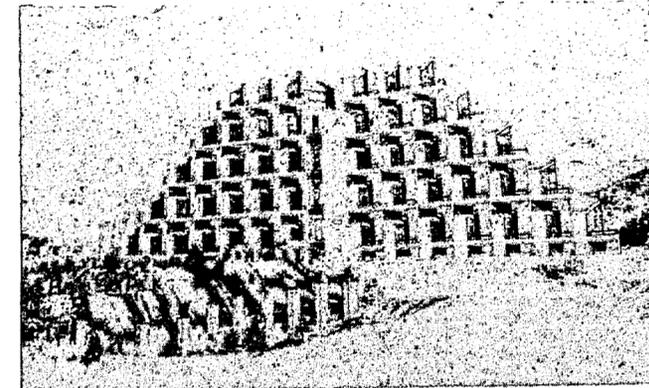

Trustee Harold Mansell said at the end of the meeting it was important for the commission to be "flexible" in scheduling meetings.

Hardwick emphasized a need to keep the line of communication open between the trustees and P&Z.

Mansell also spoke about his efforts to get a building inspector for Ruidoso Downs, as the village now has an agreement to use Ruidoso's building inspector, and the two villages divide the fee.

Mansell said that Ruidoso's building inspector would cover only Ruidoso and Alto if Ruidoso Downs gets its own inspector.

P&Z also heard a request by Marvin Sago for the Ruidoso Jaycees to use land in Ruidoso Downs for a circus May 2 in case Ruidoso turns down their request to have the circus there. P&Z indicated there would be no problem with the group setting up the circus at the site of the Chaparral Motor Hotel, providing they supplied adequate insurance, security and cleanup.

PLANS for a 16-story, 100-unit high rise condominium project were presented to Ruidoso Downs Planning and Zoning Commission Monday. The structure is being planned as phase two of the development to be constructed at the site of the Chaparral Motor Hotel. An ordinance variance allowing the height of the structure to reach 185 feet was granted at the meeting.

Downs to ask for storage tank

Ruidoso Downs Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) members voted Wednesday to write a letter to Triple Crown Condominiums recommending that the corporation furnish the village with a 200,000 gallon water supply tank to fulfill a condition of the ordinance variance granted at Monday's meeting.

P&Z reported that according to figures related to the village's water supply and demand, approval could be granted for both phase two and phase three of the development project, provided the village obtains a tank to store the water which is available. Plans for phase three include 80 additional low rise condominiums and a shopping area, it was reported at Monday's meeting.

P&Z members indicated that the village currently has the capacity for storage of only about half of its water supply.

They said a 100,000 gallon tank would hold sufficient water to supply the proposed 100 phase-two condominium units, but an additional tank would be required before approval could be granted for phase three of the development.

Police Departments study cooperative agreement

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

A draft of a mutual aid agreement between the Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs police departments is the first step in proposed compacts that may eventually lead to a merger of the law enforcement agencies.

The draft, which both police chiefs describe as a formalization of existing arrangements between the forces, outlines provisions of police cooperation across jurisdictional lines when "conditions of extreme peril" exist for personnel from either department.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor proposed the agreement at a joint trustees meeting March 29. He said then there was need for a written agreement between the police departments to protect each community from liability when police are rendering aid to the other village.

Swenor said this week that cooperation among local law enforcement agencies outside jurisdictional boundaries is given without hesitation when assistance is requested. He said it is a matter of "professional courtesy" to help out another officer when a code 933—request for backup—is heard on the police radio channel.

But Swenor is concerned the communities are liable for lawsuits in the event personal injury or damage to property occurs while one department is assisting the other. He said formalizing the agreement, which extends immunities from liability already enjoyed by the respective communities to each other—will alleviate legal risks.

Swenor said Ruidoso's trustees are in favor of the draft. Ruidoso Downs Police Chief Carl DuCept expressed hope the Downs trustees will consider the draft at their meeting Monday night.

The mutual aid pact is a sign of improved cooperation and communication between the police departments. At the March meeting, officials aired problems regarding a lack of communication between the law enforcement agencies.

Since then, Swenor and DuCept have discussed needs of their departments and have agreed to help out each other.

Another area of cooperation between the departments will surface in coming months.

Swenor said the Ruidoso Police Department (RPD) is looking for jail facilities where it can house "short term" prisoners when the department moves into temporary quarters. RPD will have no jail during construction of the police, courts and detention complex this summer.

To deal with the problem, Swenor has drafted another proposal, which he calls "alternatives to incarceration," in which he outlines plans to release prisoners on bond or jail prisoners in either the Ruidoso Downs facility or in the Lincoln County Jail in Carrizozo.

Swenor said he has worked out an arrangement with local judges by which he is designated "a magistrate court designee." This grants him the same authority judges have to release arrested persons on bond.

The chief said locally known persons who commit misdemeanors or felonies and are not a danger to themselves or others may be released on bond or into the custody of another person without going before a judge.

For persons who are violent, or must be jailed for whatever reason, Swenor said he will ask the Downs or the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department to provide temporary jail facilities to RPD. If the period is less than 24 hours, Swenor will ask the Downs to hold the prisoner, he said. Prisoners who must be held for more than a day will be transferred to Carrizozo.

Swenor said the detention will be without cost to RPD, except for prisoners' meals. In return for the services, Swenor said, RPD will provide whatever aid it can to the Downs or Sheriff's Department.

The two police departments also may have a merger in the offing.

At the joint trustees meeting in March, Swenor inquired about Ruidoso Downs' plans for the future. He said in planning for the new police facility, it was necessary to know if the Downs police department plans to continue as a separate entity.

Chief DuCept said Monday he and Swenor have been discussing a merger since the March meeting. He said the Ruidoso Downs Police Department (RDPD) would be assimilated into RPD if the merger goes through. But, he said, dissolution of his department is just speculation at this point.

DuCept said the merger has to be discussed by the trustees in each village from a "budgetary and economic standpoint" and that the police departments would like citizen input on the matter.

Swenor thinks a merger of the two departments would be feasible.

"From an economic standpoint, we could give better service if we were merged," he said.

Swenor said there is a trend nationwide of law enforcement agencies merging, and Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs is a "prime example" of where a merger would work. "We work so closely now," he said. "People coming into town don't think of us as separate villages."

Swenor included in the mutual aid draft he sent to DuCept a brief description of the details involved in a merger. A full departmental merger would be a contractual service at an estimated cost of $30,000 a year to Ruidoso Downs above the existing Downs police budget, the report reads.

The report also states that the Downs would be covered by four full-time police officers and their vehicles and equipment. The Downs would be protected by a 24-hour patrol, and full communications, detention and criminal investigation facilities would serve the village from the Ruidoso department.

Swenor said one of his concerns if the merger goes through is that the political and judicial sovereignty of Ruidoso Downs remains intact.

DuCept stressed that the merger discussions do not mean his department is on the verge of financial collapse. He said RDPD is in "good financial shape at this time," and indicated he expects to acquire another police cruiser with funds available in the present budget.

In addition, no serious preparations are evident in the Ruidoso Downs municipal building that the agency is about to disband. In fact, DuCept said the Ruidoso Downs ladies auxiliary will soon remodel the police department's office with money collected from several fund-raising events.

DuCept said he is "open minded" about a merger, but he thinks it will not transpire too soon because many complex issues are involved.

"You have to look at the legal end and the financial end," he said. "You have two municipalities and two budgets. If we remain two communities, the problem of modifying the budget to meet the needs of both towns is one of gigantic proportions."

Downs enforces junk auto, garbage rack ordinances

Notices will be given to residents of Ruidoso Downs pertaining to the removal of junked, inoperable or unlicensed vehicles in, on or about their property, announced village clerk Wilma Webb.

The removal of these vehicles is covered in village ordinances, she said. If the ordinances are not complied with, the village has permission to enter property and remove the vehicles. Sufficient time will be given for removal of these vehicles, according to the announcement.

Also, said Webb, Ruidoso Downs will begin enforcing ordinance 76-5 requiring residents to have garbage racks. Each resident should have a structure not less than 12 inches high nor exceeding 24 inches above ground level. Webb said persons not complying with the ordinance are liable for citations.

Anaya voices support for new Ruidoso airport

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Tony Anaya said in a press release to The News Tuesday that the recent deaths of three persons in an aviation accident at the Ruidoso airport is another tragic example that emphasizes the need for a new airport location.

"Human lives are much more important than the political games or protection of turf which apparently are preventing Ruidoso from getting a new airport location," the candidate said.

Anaya said he was made aware of Ruidoso's efforts to get a new airport location several months ago, and the frustration the community has had in not getting one.

"I spoke out then in favor of the New Mexico State University (NMSU) board of regents approving the transfer of land necessary for construction of the airport. I feel even more strongly about it now," said Anaya.

Anaya noted that NMSU has been reluctant to relinquish the requested 400 acres out of a 26,361 acre site it leases from the Bureau of Land Management for long-range grazing experiments.

"Not only is the current location dangerous for the people who fly in and out of the Ruidoso airport, but the danger of injury to children attending the nearby elementary school, as well as nearby residents, is also great," said the former attorney general.

"The people of Ruidoso should not live in fear because of the current airport's location."

"The governor will be in a position to help or hinder this community from getting a new airport location," Anaya said.

"If I am elected, I pledge to help Ruidoso get the approval of the NMSU board of regents for the transfer of land necessary. Enough lives have been lost already. Let's hope it doesn't take another major disaster to make people realize the urgency of the matter," said Anaya.

New bank to open in Ruidoso

Preliminary approval has been received from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, United States Treasury Department, for First City National Bank in Ruidoso.

Joe P. Loving, proposed president of the bank, said that the bank plans to open sometime this summer in a modular facility at the northwest corner of Mechem Drive and Rio Arriba Road. Plans are to begin building a permanent structure immediately after opening at that location.

The staff of the bank, including Charles G. (Chuck) Davis, vice president; Bill Mayton, cashier; Jamie I. McKibben, assistant cashier; and Gayle Martin, assistant cashier, are currently working out of the Sierra Professional Center.

LEONA FUGATE

Leona Fugate candidate for assessor

Leona Fugate has announced her candidacy for Lincoln County Assessor on the Democratic ticket.

"The challenge of the position appeals to me," said Fugate, adding that she believes there is a need for "political change."

An eight-year resident of Lincoln County, Fugate said, "I love Ruidoso and Lincoln County and welcome an opportunity to serve as tax assessor."

Pointing to the tax structure in Ruidoso, Fugate said, "I think we need someone in the assessor's office who is familiar with the problems of Ruidoso."

Fugate explained that many people have the wrong idea about Ruidoso's tax base and added that the tax situation is lopsided in some cases. Fugate said she recognized that some 50 percent of the taxes assessed county-wide are derived from Ruidoso.

Fugate owned and operated the Cro's Nest Motel in Ruidoso until its recent sale. Fugate's prior business experience includes serving as an office manager and bookkeeper.

She is a charter member of the Ruidoso Lodgers Association and is actively involved in Lions International. She and her husband, Bill, are the parents of three children and have one grandson.

Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Day Saturday at Sunland Park

This Saturday, April 24, is Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Day at Sunland Park Race Track near El Paso, Texas, announced Sunland publicity director Dick Alwan.

The custom of a "Ruidoso Day at the Races" at Sunland dates back at least seven or eight years, said Alwan, and is traditionally well received by Ruidoso area race fans.

The day has a two-fold function, he noted. It gives Sunland Park a chance to honor people from Ruidoso and the Hondo

THE RUIDOSO ROTARY CLUB Enchilada Dinner was a great success, according to Rotarian Ken Green. More than 1,150 people attended the Tuesday luncheon and supper which raises funds for various Rotary Club projects. "We appreciate everybody coming. We'll do it again in October," Green said.

Sheriff candidate addresses Realtors

Lincoln County sheriff candidate Tom Sullivan, Democrat, asked the Multiple Listing Service (MLS) committee of the Ruidoso Board of Realtors Tuesday for their support and vote. He told the Realtors that he wants to provide better police protection and add an air of professionalism to the office of sheriff.

Sullivan briefed the Realtors on his law enforcement experience, which includes 14 years with the Texas Department of Public Safety, six years as a Texas state trooper, eight years in the Criminal Investigations Division and seven years as a criminal investigation supervisor.

Sullivan also worked one year at Camp Sierra Blanca as a classification officer.

Sullivan listed his law enforcement education as well. In addition to attending various police training schools, Sullivan holds an advanced and instructor's certificate from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education. He said he has taught law enforcement courses at five different colleges and numerous other police academies.

"The people of Lincoln County are not getting the protection they need," said Sullivan.

He stated that many builders throughout the county have had equipment ripped off at job sites. More property might also be sold, commented Sullivan, if proper police protection were provided in the county.

In MLS business, president Brad Johnson encouraged Realtors to get involved in making Operation Trash as successful as possible. He said Operation Trash was an opportunity to get rid of ugly eyesores that detract from neighboring properties' values and which slow down real estate sales.

"We can't blame anyone else but ourselves if we take the course to ignore it (Operation Trash)," Johnson said to his fellow Realtors.

Chamber elects new directors

Wilson also gave an Art Festival Committee report. He said the 1982 Art Festival Posters are now on sale. Artists have been chosen for the July 23 through 25 event, stated Wilson.

Retail Merchants Committee (RMC) president Larry Langford stated that the Easter Egg Hunt was a great success again this year.

Gasoline prices were also discussed. Jungbluth will contact some of the local suppliers and ask them to come to the next RMC meeting to discuss the matter.

On the Aspen Festival, Jungbluth said it's possible that Coors may sponsor the chili cook-off and the tractor pull.

Harris also moved for an amendment concerning appointments to vacant positions.

The amendment stated that "any vacancies will be filled only until the next election." Then, a new board member will be elected. The amendment passed unanimously.

A tentative date for the Chamber of Commerce banquet was set for May 11. It was decided the banquet will be held at Cree Meadows Country Club. That was the 1981-82 board's last business before the installation of the new board May 1.

Medical clinic now serves Capitan

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Full-time medical services are now available to Capitan area residents, since the opening April 12 of a general practice family clinic.

The office, located across from city hall in Capitan, is a satellite clinic of Dr. Lance Kirkegaard's office in Ruidoso. Staffed by Nancy Guck, a certified physician assistant, and Dorine Dye, receptionist and nursing assistant, the clinic is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Guck also makes house calls, she said, and is available to take calls during evening and weekend hours.

As a physician assistant, Guck is qualified to take medical histories, perform physical examinations, treat routine illnesses, write prescriptions—except for narcotic drugs—saw lacerations and run some tests. Some of the lab work is also done at the clinic.

Any serious or unfamiliar illnesses are referred to the Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital or one of the several doctors in Ruidoso acting as advisor to the clinic. Guck is required to be in continuous contact with a physician.

Guck said people in Capitan had expressed a need for a family practice clinic that would be open full time. Also, she said there was a need for additional medical services in the rural parts of Lincoln County, which do not offer the attractions necessary to entice physicians to open offices.

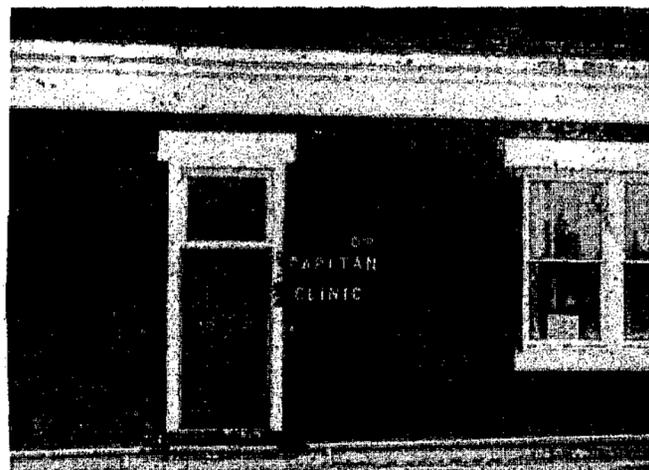

Fees charged at the clinic are comparable to most general practice fees in other rural areas, Guck explained.

She said if the clinic is able to pay for itself, she would like to add more office personnel to the staff, possibly a counselor and a few physicians to work on a part-time basis.

Guck previously worked as a physician assistant to Dr. R. A. Beechie in Ruidoso and earlier was a nurse doing x-ray and lab technician work in Carrizozo. She graduated as a physician assistant from the University of Utah and is a member of the American Academy of Physician Assistants.

THE STAFF of the newly opened family practice clinic in Capitan includes, from left, Dorine Dye, receptionist and nursing assistant, and Nancy Guck, physician assistant. The clinic offers general practice services for residents of the Capitan area on a full-time basis.

THE CAPITAN CLINIC was opened April 12 as a satellite clinic of Dr. Lance Kirkegaard's office in Ruidoso. STATE QUALIFYING MEET

Warrior thinclads compete at Artesia

The Ruidoso High School boys' and girls' track teams will get a chance to earn qualifying marks for the state meet when they compete in the Artesia Invitational tomorrow afternoon.

Tomorrow's meet and next week's competition at Las Cruces will both be qualifying meets for the state meet in Albuquerque next month. Powerhouse Lovington is one of the other teams in the meet.

The Warriors competed in a non-scoring practice meet at Tularosa High School Tuesday and dominated the competition.

"We didn't have any competition," said Warrior head boys' coach Ronnie Maske. "The track was slow and it was just a practice meet for us."

Senior Lon Nunley, who has the leading discus throw in the state (167-8 feet), won his specialty with a 158-0 throw at Tularosa. He also won the shot put with a 49-2 effort. He has a best of 56-1 in that event.

Junior Eric Strobel also did well at Tularosa, running the 200 meters in 24.3, a personal best for him. The Warriors also won three of four relay events, losing only the sprint medley.

Nunley will skip the shot put at Artesia and probably run the 1,600 meter relay instead. He also anchors the 400 meter and 800 meter relays.

Ruidoso's 800 meter relay squad of Nunley, his brother Don, Scott Neal and Grady Williamson finished second at Roswell last week with a 1:33.45 time. The same four runners also ran a 44.9 in the 400 meter relay but did not place.

The Warrior 1,600 meter relay team of Neal, Williamson, Peter Garcia and Don Nunley ran a 3:35.91 at Roswell. Lon Nunley will probably replace Garcia in that relay at Artesia.

Lon Nunley and Williamson have 100 meter bests of 11.2 and 11.15, respectively, and could qualify for the state meet in tomorrow's meet.

Junior Billy Woodul, who has a best of 150-8 in the javelin, won that event with a 145 foot effort Tuesday and could go over 150 feet at Artesia (156 feet is the state meet qualifying standard for the javelin).

Garcia, Don Nunley and Darin Smith will compete again in the high jump for Ruidoso. All have leaped in the 5-5 area and could go higher tomorrow.

Cisco Bob is the Warriors' top hope for honors in the distance races. Only a freshman, Bob has bests of 9:43.55 in the 3,000 meters and 4:21.0 in the 1,500 meters. Eighth-grader David Ordorica has also improved rapidly and could do well in the distance races.

"I don't see us winning the meet," Maske said. "Lovington should win it and Artesia will probably be second. We just don't have enough depth to challenge for first."

"The main point of the meet will be to qualify guys for the state meet."

Artesia has a fast all-weather track and times should be fast because of it.

The Warrior girls should do well in several events at Artesia.

Sheri Dennis has developed into one of the better sprinters in the area and she is also a fine long jumper. The senior was fifth in the 100 meters at Roswell with a 12.81 time and was fourth in the long jump with a 16-1 leap.

Ruidoso's 1,600 meter relay team of Jackie Jefferson, Deanna Peso, Lillian Lopez and Valerie Garcia has lost just one race all season. That came at Roswell where the Warriors recorded a 4:35.01 clocking for fifth place.

Jefferson will probably also compete in the 1,500 meters where she was fourth at Roswell. Lopez is a fine shotputter and could place in that event.

Gia Rose and Judy McCoy will probably join Lopez and Dennis on the medley relay squad. That team finished fourth with a 2:07.0 time last week.

Rose could do well in the low hurdles and McCoy the same in the sprints. The meet will start at 1:30 p.m.

GRADY WILLIAMSON is one of the top sprinters on Ruidoso High School's boys' track team. Williamson ran an 11.15 100 meters last week and will be trying to make the state qualifying standard of 11.10 in that event tomorrow at the Artesia Invitational.

MIKE DOUGLAS is one of the fine young sprinters on Ruidoso High School's boys' track team. The Warriors are strong in the sprints and most of the relays. Ruidoso will compete in the Artesia Invitational tomorrow.

The Ruidoso News

SPORTS

Around Sports

with Gary Brown

With the local youth soccer season beginning Saturday, it's a good time to view the state of professional soccer in this country.

The North American Soccer League (NASL) has had mixed success in its history. Some franchises have been very successful while others have fallen by the wayside.

Why has this been so? A variety of factors have determined why some franchises have boomed and others have folded. Often it's the attitude of the power structure within the city where the team is located that has determined whether a franchise makes it or not.

The ethnic makeup of the city a franchise is in can also be a factor. Cities with large Hispanic or European immigrant populations have generally supported professional soccer teams well. Sports fans from these backgrounds are generally quite knowledgeable about soccer.

Cities that have a soccer team as their only professional franchise have, also, generally done better than cities which have several sports franchises.

A good example of this was in Northern California, which had two professional soccer teams in the NASL for a while.

The San Jose Earthquakes joined the NASL in 1974 while the Oakland Stompers entered the league in 1978 and lasted just one season in Oakland.

The Earthquakes were and still are the only professional sports team in San Jose, a city of 650,000 people within a county of 1,800,000 (the population of New Mexico). The people of San Jose, which has a large Hispanic population, have supported the Earthquakes consistently.

However, the Oakland East Bay Area did not rally to the support of the Stompers and the team moved to Edmonton, Canada, the next season. Interest was lacking among sports fans and even the sports writers who covered the team.

It was not uncommon to see sports writers at Stomper home matches listening on the radio to baseball games instead of following the soccer match.

Other cities where soccer has succeeded with a bang are Tulsa, Tampa Bay, Fort Lauderdale, Chicago and New York City-New Jersey, where the Cosmos play.

All of these cities either have a soccer team as the sole pro major sports franchise, or have a large ethnic base from which to draw fans.

It's unfortunate that soccer hasn't enjoyed the mass success that football, baseball and basketball have enjoyed in this country. It's an exciting sport that requires a lot of skill and mental concentration.

With the gradual increase in youth leagues throughout the country, it's possible professional soccer may increase in popularity in future years.

Perhaps the biggest hurdle soccer has to overcome in this country is its image as a "foreign sport."

Since soccer is most popular in Europe and South America, many Americans have a hard time relating to it.

Still, soccer is a sport that can be played by virtually everyone, small or big. That is one advantage soccer has over other sports.

The more kids in this country are exposed to the sport, the better soccer's chances are of eventually making it big in this country.

Big turnout for Ruidoso spring grid practice

If sheer numbers mean anything, Ruidoso High School should have a very good football team next fall.

Forty-five players reported to the first day of spring practice Tuesday afternoon at the Warriors' field. That's 15 more players than last year.

"I was really pleased with the number of players that showed up," said Ruidoso head coach Darrel Stierwalt. "We've got a lot of young kids here and they seem real enthusiastic."

Coach (Terry) Wharton has done a good job over at the middle school. There seems to be quite a good carryover from the White Mountain School team to our spring practice this year.

The Warriors will work out with weights Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday the team will take to the field from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. to learn the basic offense and defense.

"We'll use generally the same offense and defense we had last season, with a few modifications," Stierwalt said. "I think our passing game could be our strong point this season."

At least 10 members of the Warrior football team are currently competing for the track team so they did not show up for yesterday's practice.

The football team will work with the three-day weight training session and two-day field session until May 20. Then the team will go on the field for five days and possibly more if needed.

Ruidoso had an 8-2 overall record last season and tied with Tularosa for second place in the district 3-AAA standings with a 4-2 mark.

Ovariohysterectomy: Althea gets spayed

by WILL TURBOW
Staff Writer

As usual, she woke me up around 6 a.m. and asked for breakfast. However, today was not to be a usual day for Althea. I looked at her knowing what was in store for her, and went back to sleep.

I suppose she suspected something was up when I put her in the car. Althea, my Labrador mixed-breed pup, was to be spayed that day so she wouldn't have baby dogs in the future.

We arrived at Dr. Lynn Willard's veterinary clinic at 8 a.m. Dog surgery is a lot like people surgery. I did not feed Althea 14 hours prior to surgery because anesthetics and food don't mix well in any earth creature's digestive system.

Also like human surgery, the first order of business was a routine general examination.

After six-and-a-half months of life on this planet, the little puppy I picked out of a litter in my back yard weighed 53 pounds. Willard felt around Althea's skinny body for tumors and listened with his stethoscope for heart palpitations. Next he checked her eyes to see that there was no evidence of infection.

Using an electric thermometer which checks body temperature in 10 seconds, Willard pronounced Althea's temperature at 101°. He assured me 101° was normal for dogs.

Then the veterinarian took a blood sample to check for anemia and blood infections. He placed a small amount of blood in the hematocrit, which separates the red blood cells from the blood plasma. The serum was tested to see if there was enough protein in Althea's blood.

Willard commented that unlike human blood types, there are 64 different types of dog blood.

"We're at 48 percent blood cells, which is within normal limits," Willard said. He stated that normal limits would be anywhere between 35 and 50 percent red blood cells in the blood.

To prevent Althea from salivating excessively during and after surgery, Willard injected her with Atropine. The sedative works on the nervous system for three hours to stop salivation.

Willard then injected Althea with an ultra short acting barbiturate, Sodium Thiomytal. This relaxed Althea's muscles and allowed Willard to place an endotracheal tube down her throat. During surgery, the tube was used to force respiration.

To anesthetize Althea, Willard put her under with a halothane and nitrous oxide gas mixture.

"From this point on, she has to be closely monitored," said Willard. His surgical assistant, Erin Frew, kept a close watch on Althea's blood pressure by checking pulse, heart rate and respiration.

Next, Althea was prepared for surgery. Frew first shaved off the dog's abdominal hair. Willard mentioned that hair is a great harbinger of bacteria.

After clipping the hair and exposing the belly for surgery, Frew scrubbed the area with Betadine, an anti-fungal antiseptic. The solution killed bacteria and viruses on the outside of Althea's body.

Althea's eyes were checked for reflexes. Willard explained that although Althea was not feeling anything, she knew something was happening to her. Her respiration was regular at 15 to 20 respirations per minute. Althea was in good shape and ready for surgery, stated Willard.

Willard has practiced veterinary medicine in Ruidoso since 1973. He put in six years at Kansas State University before graduating in 1969 with a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree. He was the base veterinarian at Kirtland Air Force Base, Albuquerque. Willard also practiced for two years in Roswell.

Frew and Willard carried Althea into the operating room. While Willard scrubbed her down with Betadine, Frew placed electrocardiogram (EKG) needles in various locations on Althea's body as he searched for her uterus and ovaries.

Althea's heart ticked at a rate of 90 to 100 beats per minute. Willard commented that was a "very strong heart rate."

Willard made a small midline incision. As he did, he pointed out that he was performing a complete ovariohysterectomy. Just as in humans, the term hysterectomy refers to the removal of the uterus. Willard said he was taking out Althea's ovaries and 95 percent of her uterus while leaving her cervix intact.

I was curious as to why the good doctor had made such a short incision. How would he get all of Althea's innards out of that small hole? Willard explained that the longer the surgery line, the longer it will take to close and the greater the chance of infection.

Those with weak stomachs may have been grossed out by Willard's pulling the lower part of the intestines out and stuffing it back into Althea's body as he searched for her uterus and ovaries.

Willard noted that because Althea was not in heat and was not actively producing eggs, her ovaries were four to five times smaller than they would be if she was in heat.

As Willard performed the ovariohysterectomy, he cited reasons for spaying pet dogs and cats and put to rest some of the myths of spaying.

"It (spaying) prevents reproduction. We have too many unwanted animals in the world already," Willard said.

According to an article written by Lanny Udell and published in the January, 1982

PRIOR TO ANY surgery, human or animal, a general examination is conducted. Dr. Lynn Willard, DVM, listens to his patient's heartbeat and checks for any tumors. Althea has a complacent look on her face, as if to say, "Gee, this might not be so bad."

"I CAN'T LOOK," seems to be what Althea was saying as Dr. Willard took a blood sample. Willard's surgical assistant, Erin Frew, supports Althea and keeps the dog from jumping off the table to bite her master for taking her there. However, Willard commented that Althea was a very good patient.

issue of Country Living which hangs in Willard's office, the dog population in the United States was estimated at 22.5 million in 1961. Since then, there has been an estimated increase of 900,000 dogs per year, reported Udell.

Udell mentioned that although the cat population has never been estimated, animal shelters receive two to three times as many cats as dogs. About 15 million dogs and cats are destroyed every year in pounds and shelters because homes cannot be found for them, claimed Udell.

Willard stated that a female dog goes into heat for 21 days every six months. During that time, explained Willard, a dog's uterus is prone to cancer. Tying a bitch's tubes may prevent her from having a litter, but it will not prevent her from going into heat. Thus, Willard declared that unspayed dogs and cats are more susceptible to uterine and mammary infections and cancer.

A misconception of the spaying process, Willard mentioned, is that a spayed or neutered animal will gain weight. (If weight gain) can be adequately controlled through normal exercise and diet," Willard said.

The Lincoln County Veterinary Medical Association (LCVMA) indicated that there are many overweight, unspayed females in both the human and animal species. LCVMA suggested that the operation is not to blame for an animal's weight gain and commented that many spayed females remain thin because it is their basic nature to be thin.

LCVMA also assured pet owners that spaying or neutering their pet will absolutely not alter the animal's intelligence, personality or disposition.

LCVMA added that it makes absolutely no difference to a pet whether or not she reproduces before she is spayed. The Association stated that it is merely an old wives' tale that it is advisable for a pet to have one litter before being spayed.

Udell reported that a female cat can be spayed at six or seven months of age, but added that as long as they have the capacity to breed, it's never too late. A male cat may be neutered any time after he is six or seven months old, wrote Udell.

Bitches should be spayed before the first heat, between six and nine months, advised Udell. Udell claimed that male dogs may be neutered any time after eight months.

"For Ruidoso, I probably do 20 percent more dogs than cats," Willard said. He commented that he performs animal surgery once or twice a day, five days a week.

Althea's surgery time was only 20 minutes long. Willard sewed Althea up with sutures that dissolve in two weeks, saving us the expense of having to return for another office visit.

The fee for spaying varies from around $85 to $90, noted Willard, depending on the weight of the dog. He added that it's around $80 for a cat.

Willard gave a rough breakdown of the costs involved in performing an ovariohysterectomy: $14 for the general examination; $4 for the injection of pre-anesthetics; $23 for the general anesthesia; $10 for the surgery room; $5 for the blood test; $5 for the clipping and prep; and around $30 for the actual surgery.

LCVMA asked the public to remember that an ovariohysterectomy is a major abdominal operation. It requires general anesthesia and sterile technique like that used in human abdominal surgery.

Veterinarians refer to spaying as "service surgery." The veterinary profession has tried to keep the fee to a minimum as a contribution to society and to help control the number of unwanted pets that flood the nation's animal shelters, said LCVMA.

Willard mentioned that birth control pills are available for animals, but still suggests the spaying route.

"Eventually, over a period of years with this size dog, you're better off doing a hysterectomy because of the expense," said Willard. He suggested that all cats and dogs be spayed, unless they are purebreds to be bred.

Frew and Willard carried the still unconscious Althea to her recovery cage. After the anesthesia wore off, she woke up yelping in bewilderment. I petted her, and I believe that smelling her familiar old master comforted her.

Willard informed me that Althea would be up on her paws and walking out of the clinic by 5 p.m. He advised me to keep her inside in a warm place during the evening. Regarding pain and ability to move around, Willard said Althea would be 80 percent back to normal the following morning and back to 100 percent within 48 hours.

Throughout the day, Willard and his assistants checked in on Althea to make sure she was not hemorrhaging. I picked her up around 5 p.m. and drove her home. She only threw up once in the car, but that's usual for most creatures when they experience my driving technique.

Sure enough, Althea did not eat anything that night nor the following morning. The next evening, she only nibbled at her kibbles. However, the following morning, she woke me up as usual around 6 o'clock, barking for her breakfast.

Ovariohysterectomy: Althea gets spayed

by WILL TURBOW
Staff Writer

As usual, she woke me up around 6 a.m. and asked for breakfast. However, today was not to be a usual day for Althea. I looked at her knowing what was in store for her, and went back to sleep.

I suppose she suspected something was up when I put her in the car. Althea, my Labrador mixed-breed pup, was to be spayed that day so she wouldn't have baby dogs in the future.

We arrived at Dr. Lynn Willard's veterinary clinic at 8 a.m. Dog surgery is a lot like people surgery. I did not feed Althea 14 hours prior to surgery because anesthetics and food don't mix well in any earth creature's digestive system.

Also like human surgery, the first order of business was a routine general examination.

After six-and-a-half months of life on this planet, the little puppy I picked out of a litter in my back yard weighed 52 pounds. Willard felt around Althea's skinny body for tumors and listened with his stethoscope for heart palpitations. Next he checked her eyes to see that there was no evidence of infection.

Using an electric thermometer which checks body temperature in 10 seconds, Willard pronounced Althea's temperature at 101°. He assured me 101° was normal for dogs.

Then the veterinarian took a blood sample to check for anemia and blood infections. He placed a small amount of blood in the hematocrit, which separates the red blood cells from the blood plasma. The serum was tested to see if there was enough protein in Althea's blood.

Willard commented that unlike human blood types, there are 64 different types of dog blood.

"We're at 48 percent blood cells, which is within normal limits," Willard said. He stated that normal limits would be anywhere between 35 and 50 percent red blood cells in the blood.

To prevent Althea from salivating excessively during and after surgery, Willard injected her with Atropine. The sedative works on the nervous system for three hours to stop salivation.

Willard then injected Althea with an ultra short acting barbituate, Sodium Thiomytal. This relaxed Althea's muscles and allowed Willard to place an endotracheal tube down her throat. During surgery, the tube was used to force respiration.

To anesthetize Althea, Willard put her under with a halothane and nitrous oxide gas mixture.

"From this point on, she has to be closely monitored," said Willard. His surgical assistant, Erin Frew, kept a close watch on Althea's blood pressure by checking pulse, heart rate and respiration. Next, Althea was prepared for surgery. Frew first shaved off the dog's abdominal hair. Willard mentioned that hair is a great harbinger of bacteria.

After clipping the hair and exposing the belly for surgery, Frew scrubbed the area with Betadine, an anti-fungal antiseptic. The solution killed bacteria and viruses on the outside of Althea's body.

Althea's eyes were checked for reflexes. Willard explained that although Althea was not feeling anything, she knew something was happening to her. Her respiration was regular at 15 to 20 respirations per minute. Althea was in good shape and ready for surgery, stated Willard.

Willard has practiced veterinary medicine in Ruidoso since 1973. He put in six years at Kansas State University before graduating in 1969 with a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree. He was the base veterinarian at Kirtland Air Force Base, Albuquerque. Willard also practiced for two years in Roswell.

Frew and Willard carried Althea into the operating room. While Willard scrubbed her down with Betadine, Frew placed electrocardiogram (EKG) needles in various locations on Althea's body to monitor her heart activity throughout the operation.

Althea's heart ticked at a rate of 90 to 100 beats per minute. Willard commented that was a "very strong heart rate."

The Silver Lining
 BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

Milestone For A Westerner
 Harlan Webb Reaches Fifty

Some of you might remember a while back I presented a little poem "Out Where the West Begins," in which it was brought out that the "West" begins — not at any geographical line — but where a certain way of life exists.

Not long after, I took down from the shelf one of our father's valuable books: "The Great Plains" by Dr. Walter Prescott Webb, former brilliant professor of history at the University of Texas.

The book brings out the importance of the great plains in American history, and makes clear that there is a geographical line that you can draw on the map with a pencil where the "West" begins. It begins at the beginning of the great plains and extends to the Rocky Mountains.

The line comes north in North Dakota and comes through West Texas down to the Mexican border; and marks the border line between our axe-swinging, log-cabin-building, land-clearing farmer forefathers — and what became known as "The Cattle Kingdom."

This kingdom began with the vast herds in South Texas which were driven north in the cattle drives; and in this vast treeless region, this endless ocean of grass, man and horses became inseparable companions, one helpless without the other — with the six shooter a companion to both. A way of life, typically American, and now world famous sprang up.

less vertebra in his back than other horses; and this must be taken into consideration. In my saddles and trees I have tried to strike a happy medium so that the saddles will fit as wide a variety of horses as possible.

Harlan was born with the art of saddle making, and this gift has grown with his life with horses. He has an instinctive feeling for the comfort and welfare of man's faithful friend and companion, striving to make the saddle as comfortable as possible for both man and horse.

Often times, says Harlan, a saddle will come into his mind's eye completely finished — or perhaps in a dream. He has made saddles for people all over the world, some of them world famous.

For ten years he had a saddle shop and a saddle tree shop in El Paso before he came to his present home in Glencoe where he is busy making saddles to be sent all over the world.

One of the many interesting stories of his El Paso days follows:

"I was working late at night long after the shop was closed when two fellows came knocking at the window, acting like they were really anxious to get in. I started not to let them in but did.

"They were Germans. One was Mr. Wilford, designer of the Mercedes Benz automobile. His companion was the American representative of the firm. Mr. Wilford wanted a western saddle. So I made him one and sent it to him. After while word came that Mr. Wilford did not understand the workings of the latigo straps on the front cinch, so was riding the saddle with only the back cinch. I took photographs which showed step by step how you strap up the front cinch. Mr. Wilford, one of the most brilliant men in the world, understood the buckled cinch but not the latigo."

Later on we can go into a little of the code of the West, but briefly — all men were equal — there were no slaves and no masters. A man's wealth or high position meant little. The important things were: is his word good? Is he a good neighbor? Will he make a hand?

And in the language of the trail driving days, "Will he do to take along?" A whole book could be written about these few words.

One time out in Arizona the wagon boss was looking for a top bronc rider. A cowboy said he knew one, then stood on one foot and then the other and said, "The only thing, this fellow is black."

The foreman, with an impatient gesture, said that he did not care how black he was. "If he can ride the rough string, he has a job at top pay as long as he wants it."

A true westerner, Harlan has not the least prejudice toward any man, and considers helping his neighbors part of his life, a matter of personal pride and honor.

We wish our great friend and neighbor many happy returns of the day and all God's blessings.

Portrait Of A Westerner

In the mail Monday came an oil painting by our brother Mark Storm, as a present for Paul Jones. The picture shows Paul on a favorite horse, lasso rope in hand, as he appeared as a youth, thirty seven years ago.

Paul lives close to the spot where he was born in the Ruidoso Valley.

Next time or so we will have a sketch of Paul and the picture.

A Son Of The Horseback Tradition

I have come the long way around to tell you that I am surrounded on all sides by true western neighbors, one of which, Harlan Odell Webb, will celebrate his fiftieth birthday on April Twenty-Two.

Harlan was born in San Angelo, Texas on this date (the date this message will reach you) in 1932. When he was about four years old he came to Roswell where he was active in Four "H" work, and graduated from Roswell High School.

A friend of his father had a ranch near Pinon, Texas. This man had a son the same age as Harlan; and the two could go to the ranch in the summers. Here began Harlan's life as cowboy, rodeo hand, and race horse owner and trainer. And his career as one of the foremost western saddle makers in the world grew from this background.

The Art And Science Of Saddle Making

In the science of saddle making Harlan is something like Dr. Walter Prescott Webb, in that he has made deep study of the relation of the saddle to the horse.

"Horses are like people," says Harlan. "No two of them alike. And different breeds of horses have different backs. The thoroughbred one type, the quarter horse another, and so on. The Arabian has one petition in Roswell a few weeks ago. The project was also entered in the state competition in Socorro last weekend.

THIRD PLACE in the regional science fair competition in Roswell was awarded to Corky Rank (left) and Kenry Brunell for their solar water heater, built for White Mountain Middle School's science fair earlier this year. The students participated in the state competition in Socorro last Saturday as a result of their placing in Roswell.

PARENTS VOLUNTEER to help in classrooms at Nob Hill Elementary School each week, but are especially thought of during National Volunteer Week, April

GAME TIME is enjoyed by students as well as instructors. Karen Morris, one of the parents who volunteers to help out at Nob Hill Elementary, supervises a card game for kindergarten students. April 18-24 is National Volunteer Week, and parents who volunteer their time at the school all year are especially appreciated by school personnel and students.

FORMING LETTERS WITH PLAY-DOH is one of the activities parent volunteer Carol Shelton supervises at Nob Hill Elementary. Though April 18-24 is National Volunteer Week, Nob Hill invites parents to volunteer their help all during the school year.

NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK was celebrated this week by the 27 library club students at White Mountain Middle School. Students purchased t-shirts to wear; decorated the library in the theme "Libraries Share;" and sold book bags, book markers and buttons. Profits from the sales will be used for a trip to view a larger library in the state, said Ellie Keeton, library club sponsor. Students participating included, back

MAYOR GEORGE WHITE, right, reads to Ruidoso fireman Danny Garcia one of the two letters of commendation Garcia received as a result of his effective handling of a potentially dangerous situation when 1,800 gallons of gasoline were spilled in the Ruidoso midtown business area on April 6. "It is reassuring to know that we have professionals like Danny Garcia," wrote Ruidoso police chief Richard Swenor.

TWO LINCOLN COUNTY RESIDENTS were honored recently for service to New Mexico State University Cooperative Extension Service. Present and former county extension agents Barry Herd (left), and Ralph Dunlap (right) were presented awards by Dr. John Oren (center), extension director.

Small town businesses must consider market

New small town businesses probably won't succeed without certain minimum numbers of potential customers, but that's only part of the picture.

Bob Coppedge, Extension economist at New Mexico State University, said a small grocery and meat market can be profitable with only 1,000 potential customers, but other types of businesses may need as many as 60,000 potential customers for the same chance at success.

"Besides potential customers, it takes a lot of hard work, long hours, a good attitude and some management abilities for a small business to succeed," Coppedge said.

"However, the success of the business depends largely on the economic base for it. The number of people with money to spend and their willingness to pay for goods or service," Coppedge said.

"Developing this market potential is probably the catch," he said.

Anyone with a yen to go into business for themselves must consider other factors, such as the age and income level of potential customers in a specific market area, Coppedge said.

"The potential in the trade area, existing competition, and the amount of capital investment needed to build the business and its clientele are all important," he said.

Coppedge said information from several sources indicates that some types of restaurants might be profitable with as few as 750 potential customers. Gasoline stations need from 1,500 to 2,000 potential customers, beauty shops from 2,000 to 2,500, shoe stores from 5,000 to 8,000 and bookstores as many as 60,000 potential customers.

"That final figure of 60,000 potential customers reflects the fact that highly specialized stores, such as bookstores, need large numbers of potential customers because many other stores also sell many of the basic items the specialty store will handle," he said.

In rural areas, this means the specialty store must have a large geographic area from which to draw, or be located in a town that has an unusually good market potential.

The success of certain professionals also depends on the number of people who are potential users of the professional service. The American Medical Association says about 2,000 potential patients are required for the general practitioner.

Specialists in the medical field, such as a pathologist, will require about 100,000 people as a general population for success. "That's one reason why sophisticated medical services tend to locate in larger cities," Coppedge said.

These variables in population requirements means the potential small businessman has to consider a much larger area than the town where he is located.

"Some specialists or businesses may need multi-county areas if their service is to be provided, or if their business is going to succeed," Coppedge said.

"That's why support for business and services in sparsely populated areas can't be considered a strictly local problem. More than one town or city often has to be considered in the planning for success," he said.

- #### GENERAL TRAINING SUGGESTIONS
1. Conduct short, business-like training sessions, twice a day if possible.
 2. Give the dog exercise before each lesson begins, with ample opportunity to relieve himself.
 3. Begin each lesson with a review of one or more previous lessons so that the dog can earn praise right from the start, putting you both in a good mood.
 4. Make all commands definite and clear. Be firm.
 5. Never let yourself become impatient with your dog. One quality you must exercise is patience.
 6. Never let your dog disregard even one of your commands. From the first lesson on, once you give an order, see that it is obeyed. Stick with it. If you let a dog disobey you once — ignore one single command — he will feel that he can do it again. Your goal is to see that your dog never even suspects that he can do anything other than mind you. Your command must be law to him.
 7. Always end each lesson with some improvement. If you are working on one of
- the harder subjects, you may ease up a little if necessary in order to let the dog be successful. The dog must always succeed; if he fails to merit praise, keep on with it until he does accomplish his goal, even though slowly and clumsily. Quitting on a note of success, and meriting profuse praise, does wonders for the dog's morale.
8. If at all possible, conduct the lessons in strict privacy, without distractions. You should be able to obtain the dog's complete attention.
9. If any particular lesson is not going well, and relations between you and your pupil are becoming a bit strained, it is a good idea to switch to a review lesson for a few minutes to give you an excuse to praise and pet the dog, before resuming the tougher task. You will both feel a lot better for the interlude.
10. Equipment for training is:
- a welded chain choke collar.
 - a leash, six feet long.
 - a leash, 25 to 35 feet long.
- Mail questions to:
Ruidoso, Fort Stanton Animal Control, Post Office Box 905, Ruidoso, New Mexico 88345.

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Toney Anaya could be cracking under the pressure. He told an audience here last week that one reason the state has had trouble with its redistricting plan is that people are out to get him.

He called the present delay a plan designed to defeat him by extending the election, forcing him to spend more money and to give his opponents extra time to try to win support.

That kind of statement could be just an election ploy — but it could also indicate incipient paranoia.

Does Toney really believe such a plot is possible?

No matter how much people may want to keep him from the governor's chair, could they really pull off that complicated a deal?

To do that, they would have to control every step of the way to the present impasse.

They'd have to arrange for House and Senate to pass redistricting laws which don't meet federal tests.

Somebody did that, of course, but there is not the slightest evidence that it was done meticulously or as part of any kind of plot. It may have been done stupidly, but that's quite another matter.

Then, if there were the kind of plot Anaya sees, someone would also have to make sure that the laws didn't get upheld. Nobody with good sense would ever say it is possible to "fix" a three-man federal court — yet that is what Anaya is implying someone must have done.

Then, finally, in the third unlikely step, these master schemers would have to make sure those same three judges postponed all elections.

All that, just to get little Toney. Hardly worth the effort, even if it all were possible.

Now, it's quite possible that some of the dire predictions Anaya is making may come to pass. He may indeed run out of money; many candidates face that possibility under the conditions now prevailing. His opponents will undoubtedly have time to win more support — which is why Aubrey Dunn is smiling as Toney sings the blues.

But the fact that those things may come to pass doesn't mean they were planned that way.

Toney's seeing enemies behind every rock, whether they're there or not.

Representative Ben Lujan is normally the most pleasant of men. Most of us who know him didn't even realize he had a temper.

Yet that recent press release he put out on the matter of reapportionment was a real barn-burner.

Lujan says the Speaker of the House has no power to call a meeting of his own chosen "leadership" and to make decisions there which are binding on the whole Legislature.

The decision on whether or not to appeal to the Supreme Court, Lujan says, "should have been made in an open forum, with input from all members of the Legislature, not just those whom the Speaker wanted to talk to."

There's some cogency to that argument. Lujan then goes on to say that all the expense the state will be put to in this matter is because the so-called leaders want to gratify their egos.

He adds correctly that he and many other legislators said the votes-cast formula was unconstitutional when it was being considered.

"Forget the appeal," the Lujan statement concludes. "Get down to the work of reapportioning the way we should have the first time. The Speaker and his 'leaders' should put the welfare of the state first."

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

We would like to express our appreciation to the many compassionate people of Ruidoso following the tragic loss of my husband and two sons. Your acts of kindness and warmth help sustain more than you know during such a crisis as this.

A special thanks to members of the Gateway Church of Christ and the Carl Parson family for opening their homes to us.

Dear editor:

AN EXPLANATION

The standing room only crowd attending the April 13, 1982, Council Meeting was a welcomed sight. True, many came because of interest in the Hilton Hotel zoning, nevertheless — Welcome!

Please come back again.

The 6:30 p.m. meeting time was confusing to many who arrived at that time only to discover that the action started at 7:30 p.m., which is regular time for Council meetings. At 6:30 p.m., the Council meets for an informal study session to go over the impending agenda to enable each Councilman to be knowledgeable of the items to be discussed. The goal is to smooth out the handling of the regular meeting and handle items faster and more efficiently. The 6:30 p.m. meeting is an open meeting and anyone wishing to attend may do so but you will find that the 7:30 meeting is where the "action is."

Some folks complained about the smoking problem and the poor ventilation. To those who don't know the FRONT SECTION is the smoking section with ash trays fixed on the back of the auditorium seats — THE REAR SECTION is a NON-SMOKING section with no ash trays available. So, please make a choice of where you sit and either smoke or not smoke. We plan to do a better job of circulating the air which will also help with the smoke problem.

The Council encourages attendance at Council meetings. The interest you show will enable us to do a better job. We work for you.

J. A. "Al" Jung

Dear editor:

Before retiring and moving from El Paso to Ruidoso I checked out the facilities and reputation of the local hospital. I was impressed with what I saw and heard.

In the evening of March 24, my wife had to rush me to the hospital because of a heart attack. Now that I have been a patient I can truthfully say it is a great hospital. The people there really care, which is something one does not feel in the large city hospitals. The nurses are great, particularly those in the intensive care. In my opinion the doctors are highly qualified and dedicated. The hospital has some of the latest equipment usually found only in a large city.

Ruidoso is most fortunate in having such an outstanding facility and staff as found at the Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital.

Sincerely,
 Jack Page

PEACE IN HORSE RACING

The "bute" question has caused quite an upheaval in the New Mexico horse racing industry for the last couple of years. Now that it appears settled, the public can have a little more confidence in the multi-million dollar industry.

The State Racing Commission is charged with seeing that horse owners and trainers do not drug their animals. That means urine tests on horses after races and, if anything is amiss, penalties.

Horsemen know that confidence of wagerers will be lost if horses are run while drugged. So horsemen have expected, and not vehemently opposed, the penalties they know are coming for "hard" drug violations. But phenylbutazone, horsemen say, is different from "hard" drugs.

Bute is an anti-inflammatory medication, not an amphetamine or pain killer. Horsemen use it mainly during practice sessions. Sometimes trace levels remain in a horse for days. The racing commission, for the last year, has ruled that any residual level at race time is a punishable violation.

The commission's stance on bute has been met by equally stubborn horsemen. They first complained about the limit, then threatened to strike. But at a recent meeting, the commission gave a little and the horsemen called not a strike but a truce.

The commission adopted the bute guideline set in 1980 by the National Association of State Racing Commissioners. To the NASRC, a trace level of two micrograms per milliliter was negligible enough to call it legal. No horse could receive a bute injection just before a race without showing a much higher bute level in the post-race urine test.

The commission called for progressively stiffer penalties for each successive violation of the two-microgram limit. That satisfied horsemen. And the commissioners promised to concentrate on "prohibited" drugs from now on. That should help to satisfy the public that the integrity of the industry is being restored. — Albuquerque Journal

DANGEROUS SPORT

The drowning of a middle-aged man in the Rio Grande and the death of a young climber in the Organ Mountains east of Las Cruces, are grim reminders that these natural wonders, which so contribute to the beauty of our area, can be treacherous.

Neither the Franklins nor the Organs are lofty mountains, but they are filled nonetheless with dangerous canyons and precipices, and not a few rattlesnakes. It is imprudent to go climbing alone, and foolish, too, to tackle the higher peaks unless one is an experienced climber.

Similarly, the Rio Grande is a deceptively placid stream; it harbors undertows that can carry a man away before he knows it. Even more dangerous are the irrigation canals, which flow swiftly and which, despite being fenced off, claim several lives every summer. Sadly, these are frequently children.

With warmer weather approaching, more people will take to the mountains and the river. We urge that everyone remember: Safety comes first. Let's try for fewer tragedies. El Paso Times

Editorial

One week ago today, an airplane crashed less than 50 yards from The Ruidoso News building.

It is terrible that the lives of three young men were lost in the accident. But, if their deaths provide the impetus for abandonment of Ruidoso Municipal Airport and construction of a new, safer airport on Fort Stanton Mesa, other lives may be saved.

Since our elected officials hold the future of the new airport in their hands, we propose to let them know that the citizens of Ruidoso are tired of delays and want action.

Politicians respond to their constituents—especially in an election year. If you are concerned enough to let our representatives in Washington know your feelings on the airport issue, we can suggest a way to do so.

Simply clip this editorial from the newspaper, sign it at the bottom, and send it to one of these three men:

On the village beat

by Tim Palmer

We have been experiencing a bit of a drought in talk about water recently, probably owing to postponement of the bond issue election on the village water improvements program.

This does not mean, of course, that the water problem has gone away. Though Alto Lake is presently full, precipitation figures from the state Department of Agriculture indicate that we may be hurting later on if we don't get some rain.

Normal precipitation for the first four months of the year is 4.12 inches. The total through April 11 was 2.53 inches. That's just enough of a lag to make make village manager Jim Hine, water superintendent Richard Sanchez, and the others who do our worrying about water for us worry a little more.

Mayor White recently suggested a study to find water rights available for purchase by the village.

Speaking or reading about water in these parts, the term "water rights" comes up frequently.

Did you ever wonder what the heck a "water right" is? I mean, can you see it, hold it in your hand, drink it or water your lawn with it?

R. B. Collins of the State Engineer's Office in Roswell was kind enough to try to fill in some of the gaps in my knowledge of water.

The basic concept for control of surface water in the state of New Mexico was established by the Territorial Legislature in 1907, Collins said. Since then, everyone—from individuals to cities—has had to apply to the State Engineer's Office for permission to use surface water.

Collins explained that people on the stream systems in the state were conscious of how much water was available long before the law came into being, and they controlled water use themselves.

But as this country grew in population, demand for water became greater than available water, and the need for centralized control arose.

The State Engineer's Office has an ongoing effort to "adjudicate" water rights, which means to enter them onto the records of the court. But the legality of a right is based on the priority of the water having been put to beneficial use.

So if a farm or a town has been using water since before 1907, it has a "prior right" to that water, whether or not the right has been adjudicated.

The "duty of water" concept came to be applied to irrigated land. This allows so many acre feet of water per year per acre of land. An acre foot, by the way, is enough water to cover one acre to a depth of one foot.

It works out to 325,851 gallons.

No one can own the "corpus body" of any surface water, such as a streambed, even though it passes through their property.

ly. But a person can own the right to beneficial use of some of that water.

That right is considered property in itself, and can thus be sold, bought or bartered. It can also be separated from the land and transferred to another point on the stream system, for a different use, such as municipal supply.

Thus the long range needs of Ruidoso will probably require purchase of water rights in the Hondo Valley, with the rights to be applied on the Rio Ruidoso.

There is an active market for water rights in this area, Collins acknowledged. Mayor White has indicated a desire to monitor that market, with the aim of acquiring more water rights for the village.

One thing for sure, the subject of water is going to be current in our village, area, state and region for a long time to come.

Speaking of our village, we may not be able to call it that for much longer. At its April 27 meeting, the board of trustees (we may not be able to call it that much longer, either) will consider "an ordinance providing that the Village of Ruidoso hereinafter be known as the City of Ruidoso ... and changing the designation of the governing body from the Board of Trustees to the City Council."

Instigator of this ordinance was newly elected trustee (though it pains him to be called that) Al Jung.

"It's a prestige deal," was the way Al described the change when he first brought it up around here.

Well, if the trustees want to call themselves councilmen, that's fine with me. All of them commonly refer to the board as "the council," anyway, so the new ordinance would just make it official.

But changing Ruidoso from a "village" to a "city" is another matter.

Sherman Atwood is fond of quoting Paul Harvey, who, on a visit here, cautioned Ruidoso residents not to forget what attracted them to Ruidoso in the first place.

I'm sure a lot of us moved here to "get away from the city."

Changing "village" to "city" doesn't automatically give us urban sprawl, inner city decay, organized crime, freeway traffic and all those other fun things.

But it does make us no longer a village, and I think it takes away something. A village employee told me one time that he sees his job as "trying to keep Ruidoso from looking like Lubbock."

Keeping the designation, "village," would serve to remind us all of what we do not want to become.

Anyhow, I would strongly suggest that if you have feelings on this, let the mayor and trustees know them. Otherwise, we will wake up one day next week and be a city.

ART, DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

Sunland Park Hoofbeats

BY MARK GORDON
 WHEN THE 12 RILEY ALLISON Futurity finalists line up to face Sunland Park starter Dean Turpitt on Sunday, May 2, they will be running in the richest race in the history of Sunland Park. The gross purse will be $327,651.31 with the value of the finale $114,474.80. The winner of the five-furlong chase will earn a Sunland Park record of $157,237.40. The previous record purse for a Riley Allison Futurity was the $291,980 gross purse in 1978. Trainers Clifford Lambert and Gerald E. Marr each qualified two horses for the 19th running of the Southwest's most prestigious event for two-year-old thoroughbreds. Lambert qualified Running Bucket and Twist Her while Marr earned finale positions with Lt. Pearle and Rhonda's Rainbow. Three of the four horses who were supplemented at a fee of $5,000 last week earned finale berths. They included Running Bucket, Valiant Avenger and Bad Man's Bluff. The list of Riley Allison finalists: Pleasure Maker, Sand Digger, Valiant Avenger, Running Bucket, Mini Slick, Broken Stirrup, Lt. Pearle, Cue Me First, Twist Her, Tudor Sol, Rhonda's Rainbow and Bad Man's Bluff. The list of First Consolation entrants: Lets Sait In, Jigen Jay, The Captain's Aide, Stepping E.J., Rodeo Codyo, Mlle. Lotaluck, Tauntingly, Hero's Lark, Hard And Bold, Canadiana Beauty, What A Mix and Az Tellum Bout It.

BROTHERS F.O. AND ORLANDO MARTINEZ finished one-two in Sunday's fifth race at six furlongs. Orlando won aboard Birdie's Baby ($14.40) for trainer Barry H. Germany while F.O. finished second on the 6-5 favorite Old Luck for trainer E. Lenard May.

NATIVE GYPSY CONTINUED her remarkable winning streak at Sunland Park when she roared to a one-half-length victory over the 3-5 favorite Runnin Barre in Sunday's sixth race at 350 yards. The five-year-old Special Secret mare won her seventh consecutive race this season at the west El Paso, Texas track dating back to November 7. Trained by Bob Arnett and ridden by Richard Bickel, Native Gypsy is owned by the Three C Racing Stables of Pampa, Texas. Native Gypsy scooted to a rapid 17.52 in winning the 350-yard contest. Three of her wins were in handicaps while Sunday's triumph was against allowance horses. As a $1.30-1 second-favorite, Native Gypsy returned $4.00 to win. It was only the second time this season she was not a wagering favorite.

LOUIE GOMEZ ENJOYED a three-win day on Saturday's 12-race program. He won the ninth aboard Sea Impression ($8.20), the 11th on Jackie Splash ($9.40) and the 12th on Armor Road ($6.20). Ike Danley trains Sea Impression and Armor Road while Jimmie Claridge conditions Jackie Splash.

ON FRIDAY, jockeys winning two races included Bobbie Don Harmon and apprentice Casey Lambert. Harmon won on Valiant Avenger ($8.20) for trainer Jack Brooks and on Tudor Sol ($28.00) for trainer Richard L. Brown. Lambert prevailed on Twist Her ($7.20) and Running Bucket ($9.40). Both horses are trained by Clifford Lambert.

ON SATURDAY, John Cushing won two races. He triumphed on Crimson Avenger ($13.20) and Crewvista ($9.80) for trainer William Thompson.

ON SUNDAY, Vickie Smallwood won two races. She scored with The Gene Machine ($3.80) in the second for trainer Charles Mattox and with Jiltaloom ($7.40) for trainer Bob Arnett in the ninth race.

WEEKEND WAGERING TOTALED $1,277,982, thanks in large measure to the remarkable handle of $504,576 on Saturday. That was the second-highest handle in Sunland history and the highest for the 1981-82 season. The seasonal daily average is now $343,230, a gain of 23.23 percent over the $278,519 figure a year ago. With only two weekends left to the meeting, Sunland is virtually assured of setting a flock of mutual records. The final average figures to approach the $380,000 range.

THE NUMBER 4 post provided seven winners over the weekend. Surprisingly, the No. 9 slot was second-best with six. The seasonal totals: No. 1—95 wins, No. 2—111, No. 3—100, No. 4—100, No. 5—88, No. 6—77, No. 7—83, No. 8—94, No. 9—89, No. 10—68, No. 11—0, No. 12—0.

OFFSPRING OF STAUNCH AVENGER won both halves of the daily double on Friday's program. In the opener, Valiant Avenger ($8.20), a Staunch Avenger colt, took a six-length victory while Pleasure Maker, a Staunch Avenger filly, scampered to a 12-length triumph and paid $17.60.

EASY PRINCE, who brought an All-American Select Quarter Horse Yearling Sale record price of $400,000 last September at Ruidoso Downs, won a major futurity last weekend. The Easy Jet colt raced to a one-length verdict in the 330-yard Rio Grande Futurity at Val Verde Downs in Del Rio, Texas. He collected $39,772.18 from the total purse of $90,565. Trained by Thomas A. Riley for owners Patricia Beck and Salley Dunigan of Burnet, Texas, Easy Prince was ridden by Tom Riley. Easy Prince tied for the 10th-fastest time in the trials and then won a shake to enter the finale.

RUIDOSO-SUNLAND, INC. Director of Horse Sale Rick Hanson reminds horsemen entries close on May 1 for horses entered in the 1982 All-American Select Quarter Horse Yearling Sale at Ruidoso Downs.

RACING SECRETARY DONALD RAUSCH has announced the first Buffalo Wooten Memorial Handicap will be run at Sunland Park on Saturday, April 24. The $6,000-added event for three-year-olds will be run at six furlongs. The race honors one of the Southwest's premier horse trainers who recently died after a lingering illness.

Jess Burner heads new board of directors of Ruidoso-Sunland

Jess Burner of El Paso, Texas, has been elected the new president of the Ruidoso-Sunland, Incorporated Board of Directors.

Ruidoso-Sunland operates and manages both Ruidoso Downs Race Track in Ruidoso Downs and Sunland Park Race Track in Sunland Park.

A rancher born in Chugwater, Wyoming, Burner has been behind Southwest winning horses such as Savannah Swinger, who placed third in the 1971 All-American Quarter Horse Futurity and Battle A., who has held the Sunland Park track record for five and one-half furlongs since 1972. He has been a member of the Jockey Club for 10 years and makes his home in El Paso and Ruidoso.

Subject to approval by the New Mexico State Racing Commission, Burner has announced that the following persons have been appointed to the Ruidoso-Sunland Board of Directors:

Jess Burner of El Paso, President; Ben Lanford of Albuquerque, Vice President and Treasurer; John Augustine of Las Cruces, Secretary; Jimmy Welch of Artesia; Bill Ross of Midland, Texas; Dick Worley of Clovis; Mark Caraway of Roswell; Carl Lee Kemp of Dimmitt, Texas; Sam F. Henderson of Odessa, Texas; and Robert Gentry of Lubbock, Texas.

One member vacancy will be filled at a later date.

The changes occurred at the annual meeting last Saturday of the Ruidoso Downs Jockey Club stockholders at Ruidoso Downs. At that meeting, a new Jockey Club Board of Directors was voted into control.

Ruidoso-Sunland, Incorporated is a wholly-owned subsidiary and the Board of Directors is appointed by the Jockey Club, thus the changes in the Ruidoso-Sunland Board of Directors.

The Jockey Club Board on Saturday elected the following persons: Jimmy Welch, President; Jess Burner, Ben Lanford, John Augustine, Mark Caraway, Carl Lee Kemp and Bill Ross.

Pleasure Maker contender in upcoming Riley Allison

Pleasure Maker is a filly few people had heard about prior to Friday's program at Sunland Park.

Before the day was over, Pleasure Maker was obviously a valuable property.

The transformation came in the second race, which was one of the 10 five-furlong trial races for the upcoming Riley Allison Thoroughbred Futurity.

With a gross purse of $327,651, the '82 Allison Futurity looms as the richest race in Sunland history. The winner reaps a handsome $157,237, another Sunland record.

Pleasure Maker emerged as a key Allison contender by winning her trial heat by a remarkable 12 lengths. She led all the way under Sabustio Burgos. At the top of the stretch, she was in front by eight lengths. It was an easy romp down to the wire, and she kept on gaining. The outing, the first of her career, was worth a win payoff of $17.60.

In other to secure a qualifying berth for the May 2 finale, a contender had to win his trial heat.

Pleasure Maker is trained by Carole Thiemans for Bobby D. Cox of Odessa, Texas.

Nominees sought for arts awards

The New Mexico Arts Commission, in cooperation with Governor Bruce King, is seeking nominations for recipients of the ninth annual Governor's Awards for excellence and achievement in the arts.

New Mexico's highest honor to its artists, the Governor's Awards will be presented by King in a special ceremony at the Capitol on October 8.

Artists who have received the Governor's Awards in previous years include Georgia O'Keeffe, Frank Waters, Eliot Porter, Felipe Archuleta, Yoshimi Takeda, Peter Hurd, Maria Martinez, Mark Medoff, Fremont Ellis, Maria Benitez and Rudolfo Anaya.

Any individual or organization in the State may nominate artists or lay persons who have made outstanding contributions to the arts of New Mexico.

Letters of nomination, which must include a complete biography or a resume, plus a statement of why the nominee is particularly deserving of this recognition, must be mailed before midnight May 31 to the New Mexico Arts Division, 113 Lincoln Avenue, Santa Fe 87501.

Nominations which are not accompanied by adequate biographical material cannot be considered. Special nomination forms are available from the New Mexico Arts Division office, but are not required. The Arts Division's telephone number is 827-2061.

May 1 deadline for All-American Sale entries

Entries for the 1982 All-American Select Quarter Horse Yearling Sale at Ruidoso Downs close May 1, reminds sale manager Rick Henson.

The entry fee is $500, and all nominees must be eligible to the 1983 All-American Futurity. Gross purse of the All-American Futurity is $2,530,000, with $1 million going to the winner.

"Last year's All-American Sale was the best, by far, in the history of the sale," Henson says. "A total of 964 head was catalogued and 908 passed under the gavel. Total sales amounted to better than $18 1/2 million, for an average price of $14,968. All of these figures were new records."

Another Sale record went into the books in 1981 when $400,000 was paid for Easy Prince, a colt by Easy Jet out of Go Galla's Lady. The colt was purchased by Patricia Beck of Burnett, Texas.

Painted Bug, who sold for $8,000 in the All-American Sale, hung up the fourth-best clocking for the Sun Country. Other Sun Country finalists and the prices they brought in the sale: Real Easy Step, $18,000; Heza Hombre; $9,000; Gotta Dash, $150,000; Itchy Skat, $57,000.

Sail On Bunny, the second-top qualifier, was a repurchase for $10,000 after the bidding halted at $8,000. (Earlier this year, Sail On Bunny earned over $74,000 with his conquest of the $222,920 West Texas Futurity.)

Easy Prince recently won the $90,565 Rio Grande Futurity (330 yards) at Del Rio, Texas, earning $38,772.

The quality of the sale graduates is also illustrated by the fact six of the 10 finalists for the April 25 finale of the $304,632 Sun Country Futurity at Sunland Park were in the '81 All-American arena.

The 1982 Sale begins with day sessions on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, August 30, 31 and September 1, and continues with night sessions, as necessary, beginning Thursday, September 2.

The sale is held in the All-American Sales Arena on the track grounds.

The 1982 season begins Saturday, May 8, and continues through Labor Day, September 6. Seventy-six race days are scheduled.

Highpoints of the brilliant stakes schedule include the $1 million All-American Gold Cup, the $1 million All-American Derby, and, on Labor Day, the All-American Futurity.

The Ruidoso Downs facility has been improved and expanded to the tune of some $2.6 million in preparation for the 1982 meeting.

Cascio hoping for great things with Sail On Bunny

BY DICK ALWAN
 Ask Trainer Jake Cascio to weigh his chances in the $304,632 Sun Country Futurity at Sunland Park and he's liable to tell you it's a case of good news and bad news.

First, the good news - Jake will be riding his star colt, Sail On Bunny. A few weeks ago, Sail On Bunny tore up the $220 West Texas Futurity, ending the yard trip like a panther running down lunch.

That excursion brought Sail On Bunny $74,000, and made him the nation's fourth richest quarter horse so far this year. It's still early to think seriously about the $1 million that goes to the winner this summer's All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, but Cascio, 75, is getting better.

"How good is this colt?" he asks. "He's really good - good enough to win the big one."

Jake, a natural-born talker with a Louisiana twang, doesn't need much encouragement to amplify his point. "The crew here at Sunland told me: 'If you care of this colt, and nothing happens to him, you've got a good chance to win the All-American.' You can't beat that. The crew has watched this colt work, and they've watched him run. They know a hot horse when they see one."

But Sail On Bunny has a more immediate objective, and another chance to prove himself. That's the Sun Country, which unrolls on Sunday, April 25, and ends the winner a tidy $106,621. This is where the bad news comes in. Sail On Bunny may not be in top shape.

At this writing, though, the situation is starting to look brighter—thanks to treatments administered by Dr. Sid Zarges and Dr. John S. McKee Jr. After working with Sail On Bunny one day from 30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Dr. Zarges was asked to estimate whether the colt would be able to make his date with destiny in the Sun Country.

Cautious man of science that he is, Dr. Zarges replied: "I would have to see considerable improvement before I'd recommend that."

But the next morning, Sail On Bunny was walking around without a limp, and it was almost as if he'd been touched by Sister Sharon Faulconer in a scene from Elmer Gantry. Jake was quickly on the horn, contacting Zarges by radio phone.

"Doc, he's a hundred per cent better," Jake piped up. Moving the phone away from his mouth, and with that gleam in his eye, Jake told this reporter, "If this colt keeps on improving, I think I'm going to make it."

The problem began in the trials for the West Texas Futurity, when Sail On Bunny took a hard blow to his right shoulder. He won the West Texas, looked fine after the race, then pulled up a little sore after scoring the second-fastest qualifying time for the Sun Country. (He ran second by a neck.)

Watching the colt limp around, refusing to put pressure on his leg, is enough to make a grown man cry. To say Jake was heartsick would be putting it humanely. Ugly visions danced through Jake's weary brain - visions of broken bones (could it be the knee?) or mysteriously pinched nerves that never heal.

"You don't get a horse like this but once every three or four years, and something like this happens," Jake moaned. "You'd be surprised how much sleep a trainer loses with these horses. You go to bed at night thinking about it, and you wake up thinking about it."

Because of the nature of the injury, it was difficult to get any diagnosis from an x-ray. The good doctors "blocked" the leg, which, as this reporter gets the picture, is a step-by-step anesthesia which allows the area of the injury to be pinpointed.

Dr. Zarges feels the clues "strongly suggest a muscle injury or possibly an injury to the scapula (shoulder bone)." Since there's no swelling, that appears to rule out a fracture.

The treatment of choice: ultra sonic therapy. This procedure "generates high-frequency sound waves that stimulate the healing of the tissue." So far as Sail On Bunny is concerned, the ultra sonic machine is playing the music the colt wants to hear. He's been improving rapidly.

As a result, Jake Cascio has every right to begin redreaming his old dream of winning the All-American Futurity. He says: "I've won more futurities and derbies than anyone else in the Southwest, but about the only big race I haven't won is the All-American."

On more than a few occasions his chances of winning a big race were snuffed out by the worst of luck. For example, a few years ago, his superstar was Mongo Jet. On the eve of the Sun Country, the colt was given a blood-builder, but a poor reaction set in, and the colt's feet swelled.

Jockey Jerry Nicodemus went into the stall to take him out for a workout, and the colt couldn't stand up. "That's what makes you want to kneel down and cry," Jake says.

Another time, he had the crack filly, Found Worthy, and she set a Sunland track record for 330 yards in her first try. Right after that, she came down with colic - a kind of intestinal upset - and the doctors administered so many drugs to save her life that the drugs nearly killed her. Later, she ran a fine second to Byou Bird in the Kansas Futurity at Ruidoso.

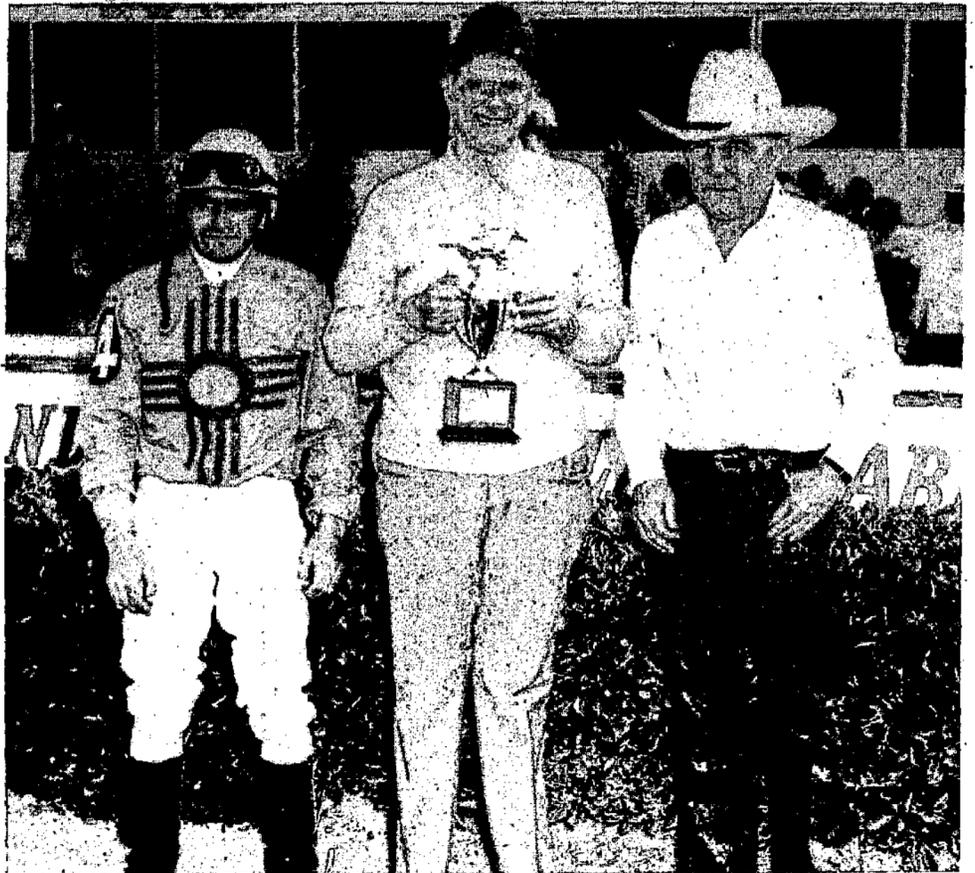

At one point, Jake qualified a horse to the Kansas, Rainbow and All-American Futurities at Ruidoso for four straight years - but couldn't pick off the All-American. He's had six horses in the All-American finale over the years.

Sail On Bunny is something of a colt from the wrong side of the railroad tracks. He's by the mare, Miss Myrna Mix, who was purchased for only $700 by Jake Box of Clovis. When Miss Myrna Mix was bred to Bunny Bid (for about $3,000), the result was Sail On Bunny.

As a yearling owned jointly by Box and Ray Starbuck of Portales, Sail On Bunny was entered in last summer's All-American Yearling Sale at Ruidoso. Cascio liked the yearling's conformation, and he liked the pedigree on the mare's side.

"Don't give this horse away," he cautioned. "If you can't get more than $10,000, take the colt home."

When the bidding stopped at $8,000, Box and Starbuck heeded Cascio's advice and kept the yearling. They recently turned down $500,000 and said they wouldn't even consider $1 million.

ED SLEIGH, the well known El Paso, Texas, broadcast executive and director for the El Paso Chamber of Commerce, hands out the victory ornament following the Chamber of Commerce Handicap at Sunland Park. The trophy was accepted by trainer George Cosper. Jockey Salustio Burgas looks on.

Saturday handle second best ever

Saturday's wagering handle at Sunland Park finished up at a thumping $504,576.

That was the highest handle of the 1981-82 season, and the second-best in track history.

The previous seasonal high was set at $485,556 on Sunday, April 4. The all-time was established at $539,055 on May 3, 1982 - the final day of the '81-'82 season and the day of the Riley Allison Thoroughbred Futurity.

Saturday's hefty handle was chalked up despite the fact there was no stakes event on the 12-race card. But the agenda included two mile elimination races for the upcoming $51,847 Riley Allison Thoroughbred Derby.

The second trial - which went as the day's feature - turned into another big performance for the impressive colt, Western Series. He fended off attacks from Ferro Fair, a 9-1 outsider, and Onestoteneranger, a 3-2 second choice, to win by a neck in a windswept clocking of 1:39 flat.

Western Series, ridden by Richard Bickel, returned $4 to win.

The first Derby trial went to Kacy Dawn, a 32-1 outsider, who, like Western Series, was clocked in 1:39. Kacy Dawn led all the way under Carlos Rivas and won by one and one-fourth lengths. The filly returned tote payoffs of $85.80, $29.80, $8.60.

John's Mary got in second, and Five R's Tequila finished third.

The top six finishers in each trial will advance into the April 25 finale. Qualifying berths also went to Gunsmoke, Mark Ten, Shesgottoheadandy, Pocketpurse, Flashy Laine and Spanker Did.

Eve Ball: Ruidoso's writer in residence

One of Ruidoso and Lincoln County's favorite daughters—and she can certainly be called that even though she was not born here—is author Eve Ball.

The 82-year-old writer received the latest of many honors with her induction Saturday into the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame at Hereford, Texas.

She played down the tribute with customary modesty and good humor. "I don't belong there ... I never bulldogged a buffalo in my life," she said.

Eve Ball has found time to do many other things in her life, however.

She was born in Kentucky, "by accident," in 1890. Her parents, who made their home in Clarksville, Tennessee, were on a weekend visit to her grandfather's plantation when she was born.

By the time the family moved to Boerne, Texas, five years later, Eve's mother had taught her to read. She credits the influence of her "damn yankee" grandfather on her mother for the early start at reading.

"He thought if you had a kid who couldn't read by the time he was four, you ought to drown him in a rain barrel," she said.

Ball recalls her mother reading to the children at night from works like the Iliad and the Odyssey, Grimm's Fairy Tales and Aesop's Fables. But her mother, who was a school teacher, insisted that Eve do her arithmetic lessons first.

After two years in Texas, the family moved again—this time to Cherryvale, Kansas.

Eve got an early taste of the writer's life when her mother required the children to writes letters to relatives in Tennessee. Her mother edited the letters, she recalls, and would not let them be mailed if they had any mistakes.

"I think that did a lot for me," said Ball. Having finished the eighth grade at age 12, Eve entered high school, where many of her classmates were 19 and 20-year-olds.

"I loved to study," she said. She recalled that studies were a way in which she could compete with her older schoolmates.

After high school, Ball attended what was then called "teachers college" at Pittsburg, Kansas. After graduating, she taught at a rural school. She also did shorthand and typing for the school superintendent, experience that was to prove valuable later.

In her first year of teaching, she recalled, seven students were older than she. No problem, though—"The big boys made the little boys behave."

After teaching four years, Ball went back to school herself, earning a master's degree in education from Kansas University. Later, she taught at Ransom, Kansas, and Wink, Texas. She also lived for a time in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Phoenix, Arizona.

"During the several changes of residence," she recalled, "I began interviewing old settlers. I took their accounts in shorthand and typed each with two carbon copies."

In the late 1940s, Eve Ball moved to Ruidoso. She lived, then as now, at a house on Nob Hill overlooking Highway 70.

She recalled her early contact with the people who were to play such a big part in her life and work.

"Mine was at that time the first house off Highway 70, and close to the Mescalero Apache Reservation. Few of the Apaches had cars; a good many at that time—32 years ago—had teams and wagons. The majority walked. June is our hot dry month. Women trudged miles with long full skirts trailing in the dust, and stopped at my home to ask for water."

For a long time, she tried without much success to talk with her visitors. But "gradually they became friendly and began telling me of their families," she said.

"History was literally on my doorstep—unrecorded history," she discovered. "And I began interviewing them. Those I knew brought others, and I met Eugene Chihuahua, Ramona Daklugie, Amella Nalche, George Martine and many others."

"I tried to interest historians in writing their stories, but the academic attitude was that if an event was not in print in a book that it didn't happen."

Ball feels that this attitude contributed to the difficulty she encountered in trying to sell the articles she was writing from interviews with Apaches.

Rejection slips? "I could have papered a room with them," she said. Despite discouragement, she persisted.

Finally, True West magazine bought and published an article dictated to Ball by Old Big Mouth, who was by then the last living Apache Scout.

Since then, True West has published nearly 90 articles by Eve Ball.

Eve Ball: Ruidoso writer

The next hurdle was to have a book published, and it was cleared in 1966 with Bob Crosby, World Champion Cowboy. It was followed by Ma'am Joxie of the Pecos (1969), In the Days of Victorio (1970) and My Girlhood Among Outlaws (1973).

Her most recently published book is Indeh, An Apache Odyssey (1980). Indeh won the Zia Award of the New Mexico Press Women's Association, for outstanding accomplishment in the communications field.

Today, Eve Ball's books are used as texts in Southwestern history courses in universities in this country and in Europe.

Eve is presently working with Lynda Sanchez, who collaborated with her on Indeh, on a book on the Lost Apaches.

Their method of working involves finding out who the authorities on a subject are and writing to those persons for information, Ball explained. It is surprising how much these persons do to help, she noted.

Thus, a work session begins with the two authors going through their mail and comparing notes on new information they have received.

Eve dictates to Lynda, who uses Ball's own method of transcribing in shorthand, then typing up the notes so the two can go over them in a subsequent session.

They go through the material sentence by sentence, said Ball, checking spelling, accuracy and facts.

"You think it's done," she said, "then here comes more information, and you have to go back and rewrite. You've got to have limits."

There seems to be no limit to the writing projects that Eve Ball will take on, however.

A book on the Choctaw Chickasaw Nation was recently completed by Ball and Connie Shepperd of Alamogordo.

Eve says that her books sell because they are easy to read, and they have humor and "little personal things" in them.

Although she separates herself from her subject in most of her writings, the writer inevitably came to play a part in some of the Apache history of which she writes.

In Indeh, she tells of attending a meeting on land claims which took place at Fort Stanton and being "literally pushed from my chair" to testify.

"Then I found myself pouring forth the story of the injustices done to the Apaches—the broken promises, the indignities ... (Senator) Dennis Chavez demanded that I tell by whom I was employed, and I told him that I alone was responsible—that I deplored the treatment meted out to both the Spanish-Americans and Indians. I could feel keenly the disapproval of the white claimants in the room, and when I dropped into my chair I was seething at the way Daklugie had trapped me into sticking my neck out so far. Then, for the first and only time in my life, I heard the Apache war whoop. The Indians stood, threw their hats in the air, and raised the roof. Daklugie, for once, laughed."

Eve Ball is sometimes self-deprecating about her writing career.

"I often wondered why I stayed with it," she said. But her thousands of readers—to whom her books are a window on the Apache way of life and the Old West—are certainly glad she has.

COLLABORATORS Eve Ball and Lynda Sanchez discuss their upcoming book on the Lost Apaches. Ball is proud of the fact that she has helped 14 writers get started.

THE AUTHOR AT HOME in Ruidoso.

George Martine, a man whom Eve Ball called "the best source I had for many years," died earlier this year. She wrote the following tribute to George Martine.

IN MEMORIAM

George Martine, son of the famous Scout, Charles Martine, passed away Saturday, January 30, 1982, at the Public Health Service Hospital at Mesalero, New Mexico. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Imogene Mendez and Mrs. Evelyn Gaines and one son, Ringlin Martine, all of Mesalero.

George was born September 16, 1890 at Mt. Vernon Barracks, Alabama, where his parents were prisoners of war. When his father met the interpreter, George Wratten, he told him he had a newly born son.

"Name him for me," said Mr. Wratten. "This is my birthday too." Consequently among the children born during those years in Alabama, George Martine is the only one who know his exact age. Christian Naiche was a year or two older, and others younger. When Eugene Chihuahua and I were interviewing the Chiricahua and Nednhi several years ago we called on the families who had lived at Mt. Vernon Barracks, and had been moved to Fort Sill. At that time Gillet Griswold was attempting to locate the graves of the prisoners of war. A few older people who endured that imprisonment could not give their exact age, but would say they were older or younger than George Martine and estimate the time.

When the Chiricahua were promised release if they could find a reservation that would give them a home, Eugene Chihuahua, Asa Daklugie, George Martine and two others went to the old Warm Springs Reservation northwest of Truth or Consequences, and also to the Mesalero Reservation. They found the former had been largely settled by white people and not large enough for their needs.

At Mesalero they were welcomed. They found abundance of good grazing land, of timber, water, and game. They had cattle, but the Mesaleros were running sheep.

By obtaining the consent of the Superintendent of the Mesalero Reservation and the Chiefs they succeeded in getting that of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Senate. In addition each male prisoner of war was given his choice of coming to Mesalero or being given land near the reservation in Oklahoma. Four-fifths of them decided upon the move to New Mexico.

They could not bring cattle with them because some cattle in Oklahoma were infected with a disease carried by ticks.

It was illegal for one to be taken across the state line. They sold their cattle at intervals extending over a year and with their horses, farming equipment, household goods and wagons boarded a combination train to Tularosa.

Meanwhile the hospitable Mesaleros had secured and pitched tents for them near the Agency building. They took wagons and teams to the railway station at Tularosa to welcome their friends and help haul their possessions to their new homes.

Not all the prisoners decided to come. One-fifth remained near Cache, Oklahoma, and were deemed home-steads by the government.

The Chiricahua, often called Fort Sills, established homes at White Tail and lived there many years.

George Martine married Lillian Mangus, daughter of Chief Mangus.

He was descended from famous families and was a remarkably fine and intelligent man. He knew the legends and history of his people and was one of the best sources of information among the Apaches.

For years while I was writing my book IN THE DAYS OF VICTORIO and INDEH, An Apache Odyssey, George was one of the best sources of information. Now that he has left us, only Amelia Naiche and Barney Naiche, daughter and son of Chief Naiche are left.

George was a gentleman and a scholar whose research has enabled the world to know and understand, and evaluate his people as nothing written from military records has done. They were the product of the enemies of Apaches and until he and Amelia and other elders of the tribe consented to give of their experience, knowledge and accounts of their parents, the military reports were seldom questioned.

For hundreds of years people will read of George Martine and his contemporaries. He will go down in history as a great and good man. And well does he deserve the recognition. He was a man of whose friendship every person should be proud. It was an honor and a privilege to have known George and to have learned from him many things that no living person could give the world today.

George attended school at Cook Christian Training School in Phoenix, Arizona. He helped the church a good part of his life after returning from school. This is the reason the family has requested donations for a memorial plaque or something to be put in the church. He was a member of the Reformed Church at Mesalero, New Mexico.
