Capitan judge causes village audit problem

BY JEAN PATTERSON
Staff Writer

A special meeting of the Capitan Board of Trustees was called Sunday evening to discuss problems encountered in the annual village audit.

According to village attorney Gary Mitchell, the audit, conducted in December, could not be approved because of some problems in one area of the city's book-keeping.

"He (the auditor) certainly was not implying there is anything illegal. The books are just not complete in a certain area," Mitchell said.

Items the auditor is demanding more information on includes seven missing citations, three citations which were never recorded on a docket and three open dockets on which permanent records are required. All of these fall under the authority of municipal judge Leroy Montes.

Of the seven missing citations, Montes said he didn't know what happened to them. Of the three citations that had not been docketed, Montes said one of them had just been found and the other two were warranty citations. "I didn't know they had to be docketed," Montes said.

The open dockets were citations that were never paid. These are generally labeled "skipped", according to Montes.

The auditor requires sufficient information to explain the absence of these items before he can turn in a satisfactory report on the city's audit. Because the audit was conducted in December, the auditor requires the information as soon as possible.

"I recommend to the city that you get the information to the certified public accountant as soon as possible. If it checks out, he'll approve the audit and you will get a satisfactory report," Mitchell said.

The city was asked to get the information to the auditor in the mail by Monday (today).

Photography class on light Thursday eve

Timber Trail Photography is presenting a program on light, for area photographers, at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, January 21.

Rayford S. Kissiah, an assistant professor at the Alamogordo branch of New Mexico State University, will present the program. He teaches police science and photojournalism at the Alamogordo school, having developed skills in law enforcement photography while with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

According to Kissiah, "to really understand light, you must understand light."

Lost skier rescued

BY WILL TURBOW
Staff Writer

A lost skier was in good condition Friday morning, when talked to by a News reporter, after being rescued last Thursday morning by the Air Recovery and Rescue Service operating out of Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo. Orville McCallister lost his way in thick clouds and heavy snow at the top of Sierra Blanca Ski Resort around 3:30 p.m., on Wednesday.

Two friends with McCallister, not skiing with him, contacted ski area authorities after McCallister failed to appear Wednesday evening. Roy Parker, ski area manager, said that Sierra Blanca's policy is not to send searchers out immediately, but rather to wait and see if the person shows up. "Especially in bad weather, we don't want to get anyone else involved," Parker said.

Alden Deyo of the White Mountain Search and Rescue Team was contacted at 6:55 p.m., Wednesday, and the team began to investigate the situation. Deyo said, "By 10 p.m., we decided that with the limited knowledge we had, it looked as if the best thing to do was nothing until morning."

However, McCallister's two friends were very concerned and insisted on searching right away. Dave Travis of White Mountain Search and Rescue talked with them, and as a result, Travis supplied them with two-way radios and other rescue equipment. The friends started their search around 1 a.m., Thursday.

McCallister was picked up by the Army's rescue helicopter around 9 a.m., Thursday, flown to Alamogordo and then driven to his home near Ruidoso by a State Policeman.

McCallister's two friends were informed of McCallister's rescue, but Deyo said that the topography of Indian Creek Canyon is

McCallister describes night on the mountain

BY WILL TURBOW

Orville "Trip" McCallister didn't sleep at home with his wife Debbie last Wednesday night. Instead he unwillingly spent the night alone somewhere in Indian Creek Canyon after losing his way from the main ski paths at Sierra Blanca Ski Resort.

McCallister's ordeal began around 3:30 p.m., as it snowed heavily at the mountain top. McCallister, who's been skiing for 15 years, intended to ski in the trees south of the gondola. He was fully aware that he was leaving the main path, but intended to pick up a designated trail halfway down the mountain. McCallister claimed that he never crossed any visible ski area boundaries.

McCallister said that the clouds were low and the visibility was very poor. "I didn't know there was a ridge running north and south up there. I was actually traversing the hill going south when I thought I was heading east back to the gondola," he said.

When McCallister finally realized his predicament, he knew that he was too far off the backside of the mountain to get back home that night and decided that he'd better ski down as far as possible to stay as warm as possible. McCallister skied until dark and luckily found an overhanging rock with dry leaves and twigs. Having had experience in the wilderness before, he tried lighting a fire employing several different techniques, but each time the fire was snuffed out. McCallister made a bed out of bark he pulled off of a dead tree. He lay on that and blanketed himself with limbs. "I'd get up every once in a while and walk around to keep my feet warm," said McCallister. He said he slept for about four hours during the night.

McCallister said he started out before sunrise because he had the brightly lit moon to direct him down the mountain. "It was real slow going because I had to climb over rocks and trees and cross streams with my skis on. The snow was too deep to try to walk," he said.

McCallister hadn't yet reached level ground when he heard a helicopter. He found a clearing and just waited to be rescued. When he was spotted, the helicopter dropped a man down with a cable. McCallister was hooked on and pulled up to the helicopter which took him back to civilization.

NEW COMMISSION CHAIRMAN

Schuller outlines P&Z goals

BY TIM PALMER
Staff Writer

"We have to do an honest job—that's the most important thing," said John Schuller, new chairman of the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z), of the tasks facing the commission.

Schuller became chairman of P&Z January 4, succeeding Mike Waldron, who has moved to Odessa, Texas. A former insurance executive from El Paso, Texas, Schuller has been a member of the commission for two years.

Schuller, who has watched Ruidoso develop, recognizes that the community will continue to grow.

"I can't blame people for wanting to be up here," he said. But Schuller emphasizes the need for planned growth.

He cited Juarez, Mexico, as an example of unplanned growth and Salt Lake City, Utah, as an example of planned growth. Salt Lake City was a planned community from the very start, according to Schuller.

"We don't have that advantage," he said. Schuller recalled the days when Ruidoso had no zoning, no setback requirements and no building permits.

"I think the community has really progressed a long, long way," he said. Now that Ruidoso has planning and zoning ordinances, Schuller indicated, the commission is bound by them.

"We have to function in the legal area," he said. "If people don't like the laws, people are going to have to change them."

Schuller would like to see more public involvement in P&Z activities. Those who criticize an action of the commission without providing input at a meeting or public hearing, he said, are like people who do not vote yet criticize those in office. Workshops to assign priorities to problems, and assignment of various tasks to committees within the commission are two ways in which P&Z can function effectively, Schuller said.

He stated that defining areas of Ruidoso for C-1 (light commercial and office), C-2 (general commercial) and M-1 (industrial) zoning is the present major concern of P&Z.

"We determined that this had to be done," said Schuller. Asked about other concerns of the commission, he indicated that P&Z will primarily concentrate on one priority at a time. "We're not going to shotgun this commission," he said.

Other members of the planning and zoning commission, all of whom serve without pay, are: Alden Deyo, vice-chairman; Mike Muhlolland; George Shoemaker; Martin Rose; Betty Patton; Knud Ottesen; and Tom Kelham.

P&Z meets at 9:30 a.m., on the first Monday of each month at the Village Administrative Center. The commission agenda is published in The Ruidoso News on the Thursday preceding each meeting.

Schuller and his wife, Roberta, made Ruidoso their permanent home in 1977. But his ties to the community go back much further.

"My father built a house here in 1925," said Schuller. He recalled that in those days, it took two days to travel here from El Paso.

The family used to camp by the big rock in the Upper Canyon, just a block or so from where the Schuller's residence is located.

"You could classify us as old-timers—though we're newcomers as far as residency," he said.

Special Olympics benefit dance, auction, overwhelming success

Friday night's benefit dance for the New Mexico Winter Special Olympics in Ruidoso accomplished its purpose. According to Jeanne Culbertson, one of the organizers of the event and recreation supervisor at Fort Stanton Training School, the $4,508 raised at the event will pay all of the bills associated with the sponsoring of the Olympic event.

"I was expecting to raise only $2,500 to $3,000. You can imagine how excited I was," Culbertson said. Approximately 25 auction items were donated by local businesses and private persons, with all proceeds going towards the Olympic benefit.

"The people of the town are so generous.

I'm impressed with their open-heartedness and sincerity," said Nancy Radziewicz, another volunteer organizer of the auction.

According to both Radziewicz and Culbertson, most of the auctioned items were purchased by local residents. One item, a wooden executive desk, brought $2,300. "I was hoping it would go for $500 or $800. When it got up to $1,500, I had to sit down," Culbertson said.

"I have to give Nancy (Radziewicz) the credit. She hustled to get all of the gifts donated," Culbertson said. Hilde Stroble was also another volunteer who helped in organizing the auction benefit.

Three auctioneers were on hand to run the auction part of the benefit, conducted during band breaks at Jerry Dale's. A portion of the door receipts also went towards the Special Olympics benefit, however, exact figures on this fund are currently not available.

"I was a little worried about the attitude of the people," Culbertson said. "I mean, they came to dance, not to go to an auction." However, Culbertson said the people attending reacted well.

"Overall it was a successful auction," Culbertson concluded.

The New Mexico Winter Special Olympics in Ruidoso is scheduled for January 26-29 at Eagle Creek Ski Area. This is the first time the event has been scheduled in Ruidoso.

Environmentalists explain activities in Lincoln County

BY JEAN PATTERSON
Staff Writer

Making periodic checks of the food and milk quality at local restaurants is only one segment of the activities in which the Ruidoso Environmental Improvement Division (EID) is involved.

The Lincoln County office of the state agency, located at Four Seasons Mall, must coordinate activities of the main Santa Fe office as well as directly handle several activities in the county.

The EID works from both a long term five year plan and a short term one year plan, according to Jim Edwards, environmentalist at the local office. "A lot of what we do is geared towards our five year program," Edwards said.

However, many of the actions taken by the EID are governed by laws and regulations, said Hari Mukhoty, another environmentalist at the Lincoln County office. "Each program has regulations. There are only certain areas that we cover," Mukhoty said.

Occupational health and safety, radiation protection, water pollution control, air quality, noise program, hazardous waste and vector control (plague, mosquitos, etc.) are the activities the Ruidoso office coordinates with the Santa Fe office.

Direct responsibilities of the Ruidoso office are food and milk quality in restaurants, individual liquid waste (septic system), swimming pools, water supply (drinking water) and solid waste (landfills), according to Mukhoty.

"Twenty to 25 percent of our time is spent with food and milk control," Mukhoty said. Anyone selling food must first acquire a permit from the EID. Certain requirements must be met before such a permit is issued.

"We have no control over taste," Mukhoty said. However, if the office receives complaints from at least two persons regarding ill effects after eating at a specific restaurant, the EID will then inspect the establishment.

"A lot of times, they might or might not suspect a food source. They wait until they recover and then report the problem. If it's not reported early, then there's not much we can do about it," Edwards said.

"Sometimes there is a bad feeling when we inspect a place, but we have no grudge against them (the restaurant owners). We must use technical experience to implement regulations," Mukhoty said in defense of this aspect of his job.

Anyone serving food to the general public, whether it be a restaurant, or an institution, such as a hospital or a school, is subject to regulations and inspections by the EID.

Items checked during an inspection include temperature, sanitation, water supply, sewage disposal, personnel cleanliness, food handling and insect and rodent control. "Most of the people in Ruidoso are very cooperative in cleaning up their places. Most of them take pride in their business," Edwards said.

Once a restaurant has been inspected, it receives either an "approved" or "unsatisfactory" rating. This rating is identified by either a red tag indicating the establishment was rated unsatisfactory, or a green tag, indicating approval. This must be posted at each public entrance. Before a restaurant is issued an unsatisfactory rating, a certain number of serious violations must be recorded, said

Edwards.

Individual liquid waste systems (septic) in the Ruidoso area are also one of the direct responsibilities of the office. "I think Ruidoso is the worst area in the state, (in this regard)," Mukhoty said.

A permit is required from the EID for installing or modifying a liquid waste system. Lot size dictates the number of living units that may rely on one waste system. Mukhoty advises prospective landowners to contact the EID to find out about guidelines that must be followed when issuing permits.

Keeping an eye on swimming pool operations is another area in which the Ruidoso office of the EID is directly involved. Public swimming pools are divided into two classes: A and B, according to Edwards.

Class A pools are considered public baths, such as spas and hot tubs. Class B pools, however, are those with a limited clientele, such as pools at apartment and condominium complexes. Class A pools are required to have a lifeguard, while Class B only needs to post rules near the pool area.

The EID must make sure such pools have the proper equipment and the correct levels of chemicals such as chlorine.

"Our purpose is to prevent disease," Mukhoty said. Edwards added that the turbidity (how clear the water is) is also checked. Chlorine must be added by the Question: rent or buy?

The American dream of owning a home is becoming more elusive despite some peering off in home prices. Renting, an alternative to buying, is not as inexpensive as it used to be. Which is the better, more affordable plan for you? The New Mexico Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPA) says there are pros and cons in each situation including tax credits and deductions as well as the monthly payment you are able to budget.

Taxes and tax deductions should not determine your choice to rent or to buy, but they do make a difference in what you pay. In what used to be a simple consideration—the mortgage rate and term and your income compared with rental payments—you now have to consider inflation and your tax deduction.

Let's look, for example, at a modestly priced $73,900 house. If you could get a 60,000 mortgage at a fixed 12 1/2 percent and cut down $13,900, your monthly payments would total $440 for 30 years. When you add off your mortgage, you would have paid $230,472. If you could find a comparable living space to rent for $600 a month, after 30 years you would have paid $216,000. But none of these figures are the real story, CPAs say.

If we follow the old maxim that your living expenses should not exceed 25 percent of your gross income, you would need an income of $28,800 to afford the apartment. But, because of heating and electric bills and maintenance, your income would have to be $40,320 to afford the house. This income puts you in the 46 percent tax bracket. Because interest on mortgage payments is tax-deductible, your 12 1/2 percent mortgage is effectively reduced to a 6 3/4 percent mortgage, and your payments are greatly reduced.

Although income plays an important role in your decision to buy or rent, you can be deceived by looking at the income figure alone. The fact that neither rents nor mortgage rates are likely to remain stable for 30 years complicates the problem. The best advice is, buy when you can get a mortgage you can afford. If you earn over $30,000, you would probably be better off buying.

But let's look at the same house again. If you plan to stay in an area for a short time, say two years, how does buying compare to renting? In two years, you would pay $14,400 in rental. Your mortgage and utility payments for that time will cost $20,160. In addition you have tied up $13,900 in capital which could have been earning interest. In a boom time for housing you may be able to recover the difference between renting and buying plus your capital after two years. Recently, however, housing prices have stabilized and the value of a house as a short-term investment is no longer assured.

Let's examine, also, what constitutes an affordable mortgage. Mortgage holders are offering adjusted mortgage rates which, though tied to an index, rise only to a certain limit. If your payments rise five percent annually, your income should rise 29 percent to keep your payments at 25 percent of your income. What will happen if one spouse stops working, if your family size increases, or if your education costs double? If you have a fixed or unstable income, even today's flexible mortgages may be beyond reach.

Once you have examined the main factors, income, mortgage payments and rent, CPAs say you should consider the incidental costs of either buying or renting. If you rent, you need an initial supply of cash for the broker's fee and the security deposit. These amounts vary. If you buy, your initial expenses will include closing costs such as the attorney's fee, a title search and appraisal. You might also wish to have the structure inspected for solid construction, termites and compliance with local building codes.

Whether you rent or buy a house, you will be responsible for maintenance of the grounds. Renting does relieve you of responsibility for major repairs, such as plumbing, electrical work or a new roof. In an apartment, you don't have any of these worries, and your utilities are usually less costly.

When you own a home, you are required to pay real estate taxes. Like mortgage interest payments, however, this expense is tax-deductible.

Are you better off buying or renting? The decision will vary according to a number of changing elements. You may need some professional advice.

Missing student sought

Friends say Joanne Dodge was a typical college student.

She enjoyed sports, parties and all the things most normal 23-year-old college seniors would like.

She liked driving down to the Rio Grande south of Las Cruces because it reminded her of her home near Farmington.

But last September 2, Joanne Dodge stopped being a normal young woman — she became a missing person.

Dodge was last seen around 10:30 p.m., on Wednesday, September 2, 1981, leaving a girlfriend's house. She apparently was returning to her dormitory room on the New Mexico State University campus.

No trace of the attractive Navajo Indian has been found, although a friend said he thought he saw her in mid-September in an Albuquerque bar.

Also missing is her car, a dark blue and tan vinyl 1978 Ford Mustang II with New Mexico license plate DAT-769.

The missing woman is described as being 5-5 tall, 110 pounds with curly black collar-length hair. When last seen, she was wearing blue jogging pants with white stripes down the sides and a maroon and white pullover shirt with "New Mexico State University" printed on the front.

Investigators say they were told that Dodge had very little money on her when she disappeared and that her vehicle apparently had only about a quarter of a tank of gas.

What makes her disappearance even more perplexing is that Dodge had only a few hours left in college before earning her degree in elementary education.

This week the State Crime Stoppers Commission is reissuing a $1,000 reward for information leading to the solution of Dodge's disappearance. The Commission offered a similar reward last November without any concrete results.

Anyone having any information about the case is asked to call the State Crime Stoppers Commission at its toll-free number, 1-800-432-6933. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Last week, calls to the Commission resulted in the recovery of a 1981 Datsun 280-ZX in Albuquerque and the solution of two residential burglaries in Gallup.

To date, a total of 373 major crimes have been solved with the help of calls to State Crime Stoppers and $4,986,950 worth of stolen property and narcotics have been recovered. Another $367,767 in court-ordered welfare restitutions and fines have been returned to the State of New Mexico. Out of 101 persons prosecuted in court on Commission-related cases, 100 have been convicted.

Meanwhile, a tip to Uranium Country Crime Stoppers led Grants police to the arrest of a 22-year-old man in connection with a January 4, 1981, hit-and-run.

Police say Leonard Martinez turned himself in to Grants police after a Crime Stoppers call helped investigators locate the hit-and-run vehicle. A 44-year-old Grants man, Robert Kimbler, was critically injured when he was struck by a vehicle as he was crossing West Santa Fe Avenue.

Martinez has been charged with aggravated battery in connection with the incident.

And a call to San Juan County Crime Stoppers helped police arrest six suspects in connection with a rash of commercial burglaries in the Farmington area.

Two men and four juveniles were arrested in late December and charged with burglaries to the M. M. Sundt Company, San Juan Country Club and Creamland Dairies. Other charges are pending against the six.

Police said a call to San Juan Crime Stoppers led them to a Farmington residence where they located a tan Pinto, believed to have been used by the suspects in transporting several safes taken in the burglaries.

Investigators said they noticed that something heavy had been walked or pushed across a concrete porch at the residence. After discovering their car had been confiscated by police, two of the suspects turned themselves in to police.

Environmentalists explain

use of a machine called a chlorinator. Adding chlorine by hand is not acceptable by EID standards.

Another major area in which the EID is involved is the drinking water supply in the county. Classifications of the water are broken down into community, non-community and private supplies, according to Mukhoty.

A community system is defined as one having 15 service connections, serving at least 25 people for at least 60 consecutive days. Non-community systems include those that hotels or gas stations use, according to Mukhoty. A private system is one used by an individual residence.

"System owners are responsible for a bacteriological examination monthly, a check for heavy metals, nitrates and fluorides in the water," Mukhoty said.

"A problem we have in bacteria analysis is that the people wait until the last day—if the sample goes wrong, they are in trouble," Mukhoty said. Those with water supply systems are required to have an EID inspection periodically. If they wait until the period of time is almost up and the sample indicates there is an imbalance, that system may have to be shut down until the problem is alleviated.

"If they exceed the limitations (of mineral or bacterial content in the water), they must inform their customers. They would do themselves a favor if they do it (have it inspected) sooner," Edwards said.

Solid waste or landfills, is the final area in which the EID takes part. In the county, there are six modified landfills and one sanitary landfill. A modified landfill is checked approximately twice a month while a sanitary landfill is inspected on a daily operational basis.

"The problem here is people must take responsibility for dumping. A lot of people will dump their trash on the surface and figure the landfill operators will take care of it," Edwards said. A trench or pit is provided at these landfill sites for the purpose of dumping trash.

"It may be one to two weeks before that trash is covered. The system is not set up that way. There is no sense in throwing it all over," Edwards said.

The EID is one division of the New Mexico Health and Environment Department, which was officially established in 1978. The goal of the EID, as established under the Environmental Improvement Act of 1977, is "to insure an environment that in the greatest possible measure; will confer optimum health, safety, comfort and economic and social well-being on its inhabitants; will protect this generation, as well as those yet unborn, from health threats posed by the environment; and will maximize the economic and cultural benefits of a healthy people."

Goals and missions of the county division of the EID are centered around the main goal of the state department. "We are mainly concerned with public health; anything that could have an effect on the environment and the way it affects public health," Edwards said.

Three NMSU cotton researchers presented papers at conference

Three cotton researchers at New Mexico State University (NMSU) presented research papers at the 1982 Beltwide Cotton Production Conference January 3-7 in Las Vegas, Nevada. The conference was sponsored by the National Cotton Council of America.

The three researchers invited to describe their latest research results were Norman Malm and James Fowler, agronomy professors in NMSU's College of Agriculture and Home Economics, and Jerry Barrow, United States Department of Agriculture research scientist, who works with NMSU cotton research projects.

Malm found that cotton seed yields could be increased by about 15 percent if cotton farmers harvested their fields as early as possible, preferably just as the cotton plants mature.

Malm conducted his research with six Mesilla Valley cotton farmers near Las Cruces. Seed quality was expressed in terms of germination percentage, and samples were taken at 11 places in a normal, commercial production cycle.

The step that caused the most loss, according to Malm's research, was ginning where about 13 percent of the seed was lost as the result of physical damage. The next highest loss factor was 7 percent, which occurred in the field picker.

The best performing field of the six in the experiment was where a high quality, well matured cotton crop was harvested early. It showed a better cotton seed yield, from 14 to 17 percent, when compared to the other five fields.

Beyond the steps of harvesting and ginning, seed loss was similar for all six fields at each processing step.

WMSR lists club activities for January

White Mountain Search and Rescue (WMSAR) has announced activities for members during the month of January.

A business meeting for election of new members is set for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, January 19, at Ruidoso Care Center. A short program will follow the meeting.

CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) classes for WMSAR members and their families begin at 6:30 p.m., Monday, January 25, at the Care Center.

WMSAR members are encouraged to attend an emergency locator transmitter-direction finder school January 30 at the Police Academy in Santa Fe, according to Dave Travis, WMSAR president.

Malm said, "The results point out the importance of picking early to get the best quality seed. Germination falls off the longer the cotton plant stands in the field after maturity."

Fowler's research showed that a hybrid of Upland and Pima cotton varieties outperformed both parent stocks in water stress tests. Fowler tested both parent varieties, and a hybrid known as NX-1, over a period of 166 days after emergence and in two soil moisture conditions.

One soil moisture condition was comparable to normal conditions in irrigated cotton fields and the other was a moderate stress environment with soil moisture conditions.

One soil moisture condition was comparable to normal conditions in irrigated cotton fields and the other was a moderate stress environment with soil moisture potential maintained at -1.0 to -17.0 bars.

All the plants performed better in the normal soil moisture condition, although the NX-1 hybrid had a slightly larger leaf area. The hybrid also used the most water, with the Pima parent showing intermediate water use while the Upland parent had the lowest water use.

The NX-1 hybrid also had the highest water use efficiency in the stressed environment, with the Pima and Upland varieties having lower, but comparable, efficiency.

Barrow tested a new technique to determine cotton fertility which, in turn makes it easier to evaluate hybrid cotton development research program.

Barrow said his new technique was more precise than existing techniques that stain pollen grains, or test pollen germination in an artificial base.

Barrow sectioned cotton blossom pistils to see how far fertile pollen tubes had penetrated the pistil's style, and he then sectioned the cotton plant ovary to see how many immature cotton seeds were actually penetrated and fertilized by pollen tubes.

"We find this to be a much better indicator of pollen fertility, as compared to staining or germination tests. In many ways, staining and germination tests only indicate the presence of pollen, and are not specific concerning fertility," Barrow said.

Course on obtaining federal grants offered

Federal grants are being cut back, so funding from state sources is becoming more and more important. Competition for foundation grants is more fierce than ever, just when foundations have less to give. At the same time, however, many corporations are doubling the size of their contribution budgets.

To help local agencies locate funding sources, and become more competitive when they go after money, New Mexico State University's (NMSU) Cooperative Extension Service will host a Grantsmanship Center Training Program on NMSU's Las Cruces campus April 28-30.

The Grantsmanship Center is the largest organization of its kind in the country, according to Bob Coppedge, Extension agricultural economist at NMSU and coordinator for the training program. The center is a nonprofit educational institution with offices in Los Angeles, California, and Washington, D. C.

Coppedge said, "The Center has trained more than 10,000 people from public and private agencies over the past nine years.

They represented all areas of human service activity, and were from the smallest nonprofit agencies and from the largest public institutions.

"The Grantsmanship Training Program is not the usual stand-up lecture routine," Coppedge said. "It's an intensive, week long workshop combining instruction and practical exercises. Trainees will learn basic planning and proposal writing skills, and they will also learn the ins and outs of government, foundation and corporate grants."

The NMSU program is one of several programs the center will be conducting over the next six months in 33 states. Tuition for each participant is $395. Tuition checks should be mailed directly to Program Registrar, Grantsmanship Center, 1081 S. Grand Ave., Los Angeles, California 90015.

Interested persons can get additional information from Coppedge at NMSU Extension, 646-4122, or they can call the Grantsmanship Center direct on a toll-free number, 800-421-9512.

Firemen were called to the residence shortly after 8 a.m., Sunday when the occupants reported the house filling with smoke. An electrical short in heat tape may have caused insulation to smolder, according to one of the occupants. Damage was minimal.

State 4-H Foundation formed, officers named

Herschel Caviness, Roosevelt County rancher, has been elected president of the newly-formed New Mexico 4-H Foundation.

Other charter officers are Vergil Vaughan, Farmington, president elect; Wallace Lockmiller, Clovis, vice president; and Elberta Honstein, Espanola, secretary and treasurer.

The New Mexico 4-H Foundation was formally organized December 11 at an Albuquerque meeting that included trustees of the new foundation, state 4-H officials, and New Mexico State University (NMSU) administrators.

The new 4-H foundation is an integral part of the NMSU Foundation that manages gifts and endowments for a variety of purposes at the university. However, the New Mexico 4-H Foundation will be used only to develop and support 4-H programs and activities.

Bob Gilliland, state 4-H program director for NMSU's Cooperative Extension Service, said, "All gifts and endowments made to the New Mexico 4-H Foundation will be used only in 4-H programs. It's the best way to assure continuing support for New Mexico 4-H programs far into the future."

Gilliland said the 4-H Foundation will have four priorities. They are additional scholarships at NMSU, financing for additional trips to the National 4-H Club Congress each year by New Mexico 4-H members, volunteer leader training and development, and financing out-of-state trips for 4-H judging teams.

"It's not easy to set any one of these priorities above the others," Gilliland said. "Scholarships are a way of meeting the increasing cost of education for our deserving young people, and financing trips to the National 4-H Congress is a reward for long years of 4-H work and accomplishment."

"However, we also know that the future of New Mexico's 4-H program is in the hands of our volunteer leaders all over the state," he said. "We have an obligation to offer these people all the training they need and can use."

"Finally, we have never had the money to send our 4-H judging teams to major events out of the state, although we know many of them are highly qualified for regional or national competition. We're not being fair to them if we don't offer them every opportunity to compete," Gilliland said.

The New Mexico 4-H Foundation will accept gifts and endowments from private citizens, service clubs and civic groups, and from the business world. Gifts and endowments can be specified for special uses, but the fewer restrictions the better.

"We have scholarships and other grants every year at NMSU that can't be given to some young people because there are too many restrictions on the money," Gilliland said. "There are even some extreme cases where restrictions keep young people from applying."

The foundation's charter officers and NMSU 4-H officials are now selecting the other trustees who will help develop the foundation. Trustees will be selected on the basis of their interest in 4-H programs, and also to represent all parts of New Mexico.

The foundation's new officers selected Jan Carnes, state 4-H program leader, to serve as executive director. Gilliland said Carnes would continue to serve as a 4-H program leader and would eventually devote about half her time to the foundation's activities.

Since the New Mexico 4-H Foundation was organized as a part of the existing NMSU Foundation, gifts and endowments made to the 4-H Foundation will be tax deductible.

Two-paycheck families can face problems

The people who have decided that the best way to meet expenses is to become a two-paycheck family are not alone.

Few events have affected family organization and roles more dramatically than the large increase in the number of two-paycheck households, according to Jackie Martin, Extension family finance specialist for New Mexico State University.

"This large increase in two-paycheck households, along with reduced savings and increased use of credit, are the three ways today's families are coping with increased costs," Martin said.

There are more married couples today where both persons are wage earners than there are married couples where only one person is working. This can present a number of problems, including the obvious one about how to divide the money both persons earn.

There are three basic ways two-paycheck families handle their combined earning — equal share basis, proportional share basis, and the pooling of both paychecks.

Equal share couples put an equal amount of money into joint savings accounts to pay household expenses. The remainder of each paycheck is saved or spent as each person sees fit. With this arrangement, it's possible for resentment to pop up when one person earns considerably more than the other.

Proportional share couples contribute percentage of their salaries to cover household expenses and joint savings or investments. The rest is theirs to do with as they please. In this arrangement, each person is contributing a predetermined share of their salary, regardless of how high or low that salary might be.

Couples that pool their paycheck combine all their income to use for either household expenses, personal expenses or joint savings. Money can be held in either joint or separate accounts, but full sharing is assumed.

The advantage of the pooling method is that the work of each spouse is valued equally, regardless of the salary earned. Also, the part-time worker, or spouse who earns much less than the other, is not penalized by discretionary purchasing power when there is a difference in earnings.

These are only three ways to combine two-paycheck incomes. Each working couple has to set up the system that is best for their family.

Wrestling catches on at Ruidoso High School

BY GARY BROWN
Sports Writer

Wrestling as a sport has been in existence for over 3,000 years. It has only recently become popular in the United States but it's beginning to make its mark, even on the high school level.

"It's an ancient sport. It's the only sport mentioned in the Bible," said Ruidoso High School coach Gerald Ames. "Wrestling has come a long way in its history and we've come a long way in improving our program this season."

Indeed the Warriors have, Ruidoso has won one tournament this season and defeated AAAA powerhouses Roswell and Goddard on the same day in dual-meets.

"We've got a good chance to win the district title," Ames said. "Ames has around 35 athletes on the team. It's hard to keep squad members because wrestling is a sport requiring strict discipline.

"It's one of the most demanding sports," said Ames. "Also it's not one of the more rewarding sports in terms of recognition. It's not that popular a sport in this area."

"In some areas like Iowa and Oklahoma the sport is more popular than basketball. It's also big in states like Oregon, Washington and California."

The Warriors are especially strong in the lower weight classes. Ray Montes (98 pounds) and Doug Schmidt (128 pounds) are top wrestlers as is Henry Rue (119 pounds). Wade Torres at 145 pounds is also an outstanding athlete.

It's harder for a wrestler to become good in the lower weight divisions because there are so many fine wrestlers in those classes," said Ames. "Most of the high school age kids are in the 118-pound to 145-pound classes so there is more competition there. You generally need at least three years of wrestling experience to become good in those divisions.

"The heavyweight division, on the other hand, is easier to break into because there are fewer guys in that weight class. A guy could come into the heavyweight division and after two years be a very good wrestler."

The United States has never really been an international power in wrestling, particularly in the Olympics.

"Russia has generally dominated the Olympics," Ames said. "The United States did fairly well in the 1972 Olympics but not so well in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal. Of course, we didn't go to the 1980 Olympics."

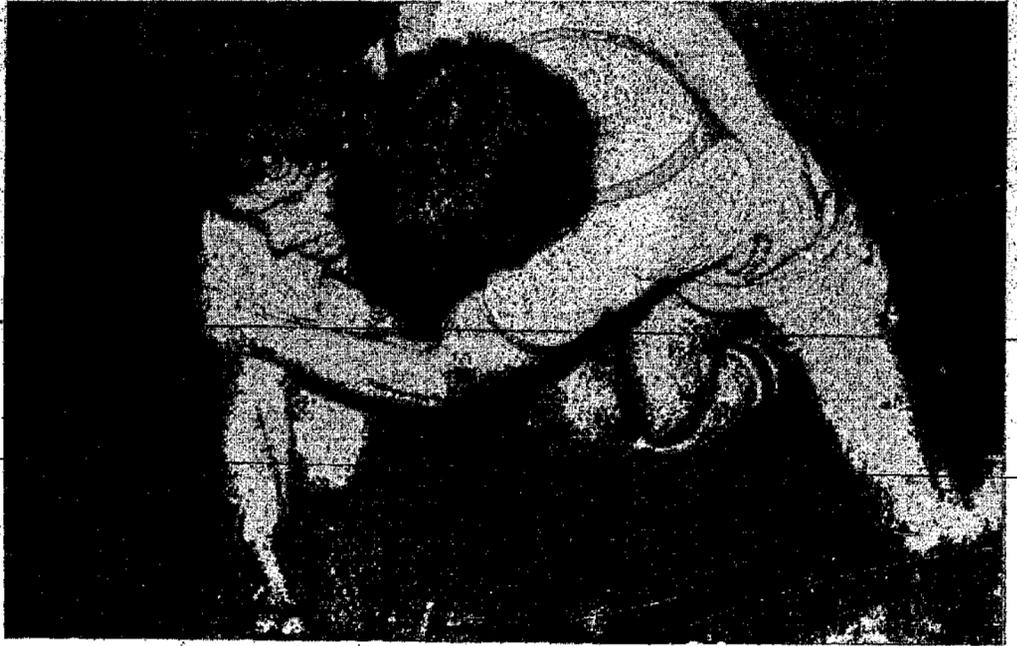

Despite the fact that the United States has not done well in international competition, Ames sees this country doing better in the future.

"The sport is getting more popular, particularly at the high school level," he said. "The key is getting enough people out in their freshman season so that they'll have plenty of experience when they're seniors. You need a lot of seniors on your team to be successful."

Wrestling on the high school level in this country is called folk-style, rather than the freestyle type used in most other areas of the world. Freestyle wrestling is becoming more popular in this country.

"Eventually freestyle wrestling will be adopted by the high schools in this country," said Ames. "And then we'll do much better in international competition."

Wrestling, as a whole, has been more popular in the eastern European countries than the United States for a long time. However, with the vast amount of athletic talent available in this country that gap may soon be closed.

DAVID SWALANDER (left) and Doug Schmidt of Ruidoso High School's wrestling team execute a hip-toss from a "wizzer" (a wrestling hold) in practice last week. The Warrior wrestlers go through many complicated exercises and holds during their practices. About 35 wrestlers are on the Ruidoso team this season.

LISA LAMB, who played for Capitan High School three years ago, is now a star basketball player for Eastern New Mexico University. The 5-9 junior is a standout free throw shooter.

Former Capitan cager standout in college

Capitan High School has a history of outstanding girls' basketball teams and one of its alumni is currently starring for Eastern New Mexico University (ENMU) at Portales.

Lisa Lamb, a 5-9 junior, is ENMU's second leading scorer. She's averaging 11 points a game and is hitting 45 percent of her shots. Lamb has also shown an ability to hit free throws, making 90 percent of her attempts. She made 10 of 12 shots against New Mexico State University (NMSU) last month. ENMU will play Lubbock Christian College, Texas, tomorrow night in Lubbock.

with Gary Brown

Playing basketball in the Missouri Valley Conference (MVC) can be a rough experience, particularly this season with most of the teams improved over last year.

New Mexico State University (NMSU) is finding that out. The Aggies are 8-6 on the year and 2-2 in conference play but must deal with powerhouses Tulsa and Wichita State besides a surprising Bradley squad.

Bradley defeated the visiting Aggies 68-62 Thursday night as NMSU had a decided height disadvantage. Center Renault Moultrie is only 6-6. Most college teams nowadays have forwards, and in many cases, guards taller than Moultrie. The Aggies can be competitive in the MVC this season. They even have an outside chance of winning the conference championship. But they will have to compensate for lack of height with hustle and speed.

Fortunately that's something NMSU has.

The University of New Mexico (UNM) basketball team, on the other hand, has more height than the Aggies but not as much quickness.

Outside of guard Phil Smith the Lobos don't really have anybody who can bring the ball up court quickly and break the press. That's a big key to a winning season.

The Lobos have been winning games with good play on the boards and perhaps a 150 percent effort. Center Mark Snow is an example of this. He doesn't have great natural ability but makes up for it with a lot of hustle and team play.

UNM has been very tough at home and its 72-70 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas last week was probably its finest victory of the season. It could lead to bigger things in the West Coast Athletic Conference (WCAC).

The Lobos have had their problems on the road, however. Their 73-82 loss to host San Diego State (SDS) last Thursday is a good example of this. SDS has about the same amount of talent as UNM and the home-court advantage shouldn't be as much as 11 points.

For the Lobos to be a strong contender in the conference title race they'll have to

If they don't, a losing season could be in the works for them.

Eagle Creek Ski and Recreation Area will be very busy January 22-January 29.

That's when the New Mexico Winter Special Olympics at Ruidoso will be held. The competition will be held at Eagle Creek while swimming and other informal games will be held at Fort Stanton.

About 80 people from Southern New Mexico, Juarez, Mexico, and Arlington, Texas, will participate in the competition, which will consist of both alpine and cross-country skiing.

What's so remarkable about the competition is that around 95 percent of the people have never skied before. They will be given instruction January 27 with the competition following the next day.

The competitors will vary in age from eight to 45 years. Anyone who wishes to find out some more information about a truly good cause can contact Jeanne Culbertson at 854-2211 during the day or 257-7225 at night.

Another good cause is rapidly approaching also.

The Las Piedras Boxing Team (LPBT) of Ruidoso is hosting the Ruidoso Invitational Tournament Saturday, January 30, at the Elks Club. The LPBT, sponsored by the Ruidoso chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, has four boxers entered in the competition, which will involve teams from all over New Mexico.

The competition begins at 7 p.m., and there will be two Most Outstanding Boxing trophies awarded. The admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for youths under 12. There will be a refreshment stand and all proceeds will benefit the LPBT.

Local sports fans can show their appreciation for some fine young men by attending the tournament. Besides the fact it's for a good cause it should also be a lot of fun.

Who knows? Spectators might get to watch a future Sugar Ray Leonard in action. Bear down and win more on the road.

Ruidoso tops Tigers for first district win

Taking control of the boards for the first time in a long while the Ruidoso High School boys' varsity basketball team gained its first district 3-AAA victory of the season Saturday night, topping visiting Truth or Consequences (T or C) 78-63 in the Warriors' homecoming.

Friday night the Warriors lost to a strong New Mexico Military Institute (NMMI) squad 61-47 in a non-district game.

Against T or C Ruidoso took a 15-8 advantage after the first quarter and never trailed. The Warriors had a height advantage and outrebounded the Tigers almost two to one.

Steve Sluder, who had his finest game of the season, with 19 points, scored a basket and free throw to give the Warriors a 3-0 lead within the first minute of play.

Moments later Marc Delhotal added another three point play and Ruidoso got its fast break going.

The Warriors took a 32-23 advantage into the locker room at halftime and stretched that margin to 58-38 at the end of the third period. Ruidoso increased its lead to 61-40 on a Sluder lay-up with 6:40 left in the game but then the Tigers made a brief surge at the Warriors.

T or C closed the gap to 67-60 with 2:38 left in the contest before the Warriors pulled together and outscored the losers 11-3 for the final margin of victory.

Besides Sluder's 19 points, 6-foot center Bill Richardson scored 20 points and Delhotal, 18 for the Warriors. Scott Neal added 11 as Ruidoso had four men in double figures.

Darwin Sullivan had 16 points and Ken Clifford 14 for the losers.

In Friday's game NMMI jumped off to a 12-9 lead after the opening quarter. However, the Warriors tied the score at 15-15 on two free throws by Richardson. But the Colts reeled off eight points while holding the Warriors to just two in taking a 23-17 lead into the locker room at halftime.

The visitors gradually increased their lead throughout the second half as hot-shooting Phil Krumm, who led all scorers with 23 points, canned 14 of his points in that period. Derrick Jones added 16 points for the winners. Neal led the Warriors with 16 points and Richardson had 14.

Ruidoso was in the direct opposite situation against NMMI that it was against T or C. The Colts had a height advantage all through the lineup against the Warriors and consistently got second and third shots at the basket.

Still it was a good weekend for the Warriors.

"We're getting better," said Warrior head coach Barry Nelson after the T or C game was over. "The big difference tonight was out height advantage and our rebounding edge. I know how they (T or C) feel. A lot of teams we've met this season have been taller than us."

Ruidoso, now 2-8 overall, will take a break from district competition when it participates in the Dexter Tournament Thursday through Saturday. The Warriors will tangle with Lincoln County rival Capitan in the first round Thursday.

Tigers top Lady Warriors

Ruidoso High School's girls' varsity basketball team dropped to 0-3 in district 3-AAA action with a 57-38 homecoming defeat at the hands of visiting Truth or Consequences (T or C) Saturday night.

Warrior head coach Sergio Castanon was not pleased with his team's play.

"If the girls continue to play like they don't want to win, they couldn't beat the staff of The Ruidoso News," Castanon said. "This team (T or C) is one of the bottom three teams in the district along with us."

The visitors jumped off to a 14-7 first quarter advantage and increased that to 24-14 at halftime. T or C blew the game wide open in the third quarter when it scored 17 points and held Ruidoso to six for a 41-20 advantage. The Tigers coasted the rest of the way.

Ruidoso had tied T or C at 2-2 with 4:50 left in the opening period but the Tigers never trailed the remainder of the game.

Freshman Erin Rad led the Warriors' scoring with nine points. Gia Rose had six points and Tresa Jameson and Robin Rhodes each added five points for the Warriors.

"We missed Brigid Almager (out with an injury) and Tammy Valdez (sick) for this game," said Castanon. "With them out we're hurting."

"We'll probably change a few things in practice this week. We may focus on going to one player more on the offense. We're still doing some things right and other things wrong."

Ruidoso junior varsity defeated by Colts, 47-26

It was simply a case of too much height as Ruidoso High School's boys' junior varsity basketball team fell to visiting New Mexico Military Institute (NMMI) Friday night 47-26.

The Warriors, now 1-8 on the season had to contend with 6-8 NMMI center Joe Carpenter and two other Colt players over 6-2.

"We were outmatched," said Warrior coach Ron Geyer. "They were just too tall for us and had about three shots for every one we had."

The visitors jumped off to a 14-2 first advantage and never trailed in the game. Ruidoso managed to hold NMMI to six points in the second period while scoring six of its own. However, the Colts tallied 14 points in the third quarter while holding the Warriors to just five and put the game away.

Gilbert Rivera led the Ruidoso scoring with seven points and Paul Jaramillo added six. Carpenter had 12 points and Marty Cooper 10 for the winners.

Geyer praised the efforts of Cyrus Simmons and Jessie Reynolds. "Cyrus played very well defensively and Jessie played a good all around game, particularly on the boards."

Ruidoso travels to Roswell tonight for a game with the Goddard High School sophomores.

Capitan meets Ruidoso in Dexter Tournament

Capitan High School's basketball team will meet Ruidoso High School in the opening round of the Dexter Tournament Thursday.

The Tigers are 7-4 on the season while Ruidoso is 2-8.

In action last Tuesday night the Capitan boys' varsity stopped visiting Hondo 29-17 in a game that ended at halftime due to the snowy weather outside the gym. The junior varsity rolled over Hondo 96-25, making its season record 9-0.

In girls' action the varsity crushed Hondo 78-23 and the junior varsity won 43-14. In other action last week the junior varsity topped the Roswell freshmen 65-26 and the varsity defeated the Roswell junior varsity 61-28.

SCHMIDT VOTED TOP WRESTLER

Ruidoso wrestlers third in tourney

Ruidoso High School's wrestling team placed 10 of its 11 members as the Warriors finished third in the Deming Tournament Saturday afternoon.

The Warriors scored 187 points to 134.5 for winner Tucumcari and 111.5 for second place Deming. Doug Schmidt of Ruidoso won the 126 pound division with a convincing 14-2 decision and was voted Most Outstanding Wrestler for the lower weight classes.

Heavyweight Randy Bell and 145 pound Wade Torres each placed second for Ruidoso. Bell lost an overtime takedown match and Torres lost 23-3 to one of the state's top wrestlers. Bell entered his match with the Warriors trailing the hosts by a half point for second place.

Ray Montes (105 pounds), Henry Rue (119 pounds) and Scott Ciraullo (185 pounds) each took third place. Jim Asker at 132 pounds and Dirty Bustamante in the 138 pound division each finished fourth in overtime. Gary Burgess, 167 pounds, and Don Gwyn at 155 pounds also placed fourth for Ruidoso.

"I was pleased with our efforts," said Warrior mentor Gerald Ames. "We're improving rapidly now. Before the holidays we were at a peak but we started out slow after school started again. Now we're coming on strong."

Ruidoso is 2-0 in dual meets, won one tournament and placed fourth in another besides the Deming Tournament. The Warriors will compete in the tough Carlsbad Tournament Friday and Saturday. Most of the schools entered in that tournament are AAAA division teams.

Reward offered for bighorn sheep killer

A $1,000 cash reward is being offered for information leading to the person who shot a Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep in the Manzano Mountains, according to Operation Game Thief coordinator Dan Pursley, of the Department of Game and Fish.

Game and Fish investigators have not found any solid leads, he said, and are turning to the public for aid.

"The sheep was a ewe, wearing a radio tracking collar, and was shot and left in Sand Canyon in the Manzano Mountains on or about November 30," Pursley said.

"Deer season was open then, and it is probable she was shot by a deer hunter."

The ewe was one of 16-nine ewes, a half-dozen lambs and a yearling ram—captured in the Pecos Wilderness in August, 1977, and reintroduced into the Manzano Mountains.

"The Manzanos historically were Rocky Mountain sheep range, and they were reportedly common there 100 years ago," Pursley said. "They were gone by 1900."

Capturing and moving big game animals is an expensive, risky business, he said and losses such as this one are a setback to restoration efforts.

Operation Game Thief is a statewide Crime-Stoppers type program that pays substantial rewards for information in game law violations. The toll-free number is 800-432-4283. Callers are not asked their names and are not asked to testify in court. Minimum rewards in big game cases are $250 and have ranged as high as offers of $2,500.

BODY REFLECTIONS
 LOSE 3-15 INCHES IN 7 HOURS
 Body Reflections Body Wrap Process Shows Why it Works! The reason a client will lose inches, but not necessarily weight is because fat weighs about 1/8 as much as muscle tissue. The solution: This is a unique formulation of many minerals, each of which has a special function. For instance Magnesium, one of the minerals, opens the pores of the skin allowing the other minerals to penetrate the skin, thus aiding in breaking down the fat, developing the muscle tone, activating the glands & enzyme systems and controlling water balance. The softening of the glands & enzyme systems requires energy. This energy comes from the closest source which is the fatty tissue. In order to create energy, the fat is broken down. Since the glands of the skin are not designed to eliminate fatty material, it must go into the bloodstream to be removed by the body's normal waste removal system. NOTE: Failure of the client to drink the required water will result in the skin becoming dehydrated. Also remember that the solution keeps working for hours after the wrap unless they take a bath or shower.

A Grand Snow

A snow here in the deep of winter stays on the ground a long time, holding the earth for the next one, so that this first snow sets the pattern for a snowy winter. Out in front of the house today, the snow is glistening in the sun, the winter picture unchanged from the day of the first snow. The new large flag shows its colors brilliantly beneath the snowy meadow and with the pure blue sky in the background over the green and white hills. The sky is cloudless blue, lending glory to the shining land of white below. Only on the sunny side of the world the snow is mostly melted away, leaving patches here and there, of gold and white along the fields. This type of snow is the best of all, greatly welcomed by Good Mother Earth, who sends up a prayer, along with us, for the blessing of the snow.

New Mexico's Fiftieth Birthday

In the rush of the holidays I forgot that our state celebrates its birthday on January six. It was on this date in 1912 that New Mexico entered the union as a state. Our young state has come a long way in these fifty years; and we have much for which to be grateful and proud. With history and traditions going back farther than those of any state; New Mexico on the other hand, is one of the most modern of all states, being an important center of The Atomic Age and of Space travel. New Mexico is a western state in every sense of the word. It is a land where thousands have made a new beginning. Where a man is welcomed and taken at face value. New Mexico is also a show case for the world as a land where all races live in harmony. And on this date, January fifteen, the birthday of Martin Luther King, let us send up a prayer to God for this man who did so much for good will among men. Next time or so we will go over some of the outstanding features of our state and the many blessings for which we have to be thankful.

Sun is energy saver for apartment dwellers

Apartment dwellers sometimes feel helpless in the fight to conserve energy because most of the structural energy saving measures — extra insulation, storm windows — are beyond their control. However, there are ways to take advantage of sunshine in the apartment's decorating scheme to combat cold winter temperatures, according to JoAnn Less, Extension housing specialist at New Mexico State University. Color is an important consideration when decorating for energy conservation, Less said. Rooms that don't get much direct sunlight should have walls and ceilings done in white or light colors to reflect as much sunlight as possible. Light colors in these rooms also reduce the amount of artificial lighting that is needed. Pile fabrics or rough textured fabrics transmit warmth because they trap air in pockets formed by yarn layers. Such fabrics provide this warming effect when used in draperies and upholstery, Less said. Open drapes and raise shades when direct sunlight is available to warm a room. On cold, sunless days, and during evening and night hours, shades should be pulled. If possible, drapes should be sealed on sides, top and bottom. The window shade is an excellent insulator for the amount of money invested. If draperies in the apartment can't be changed, make a window quilt in a complementary color to cover the window. It stops cold air from infiltrating the room and also traps heat inside. Use the same fabric to make some sofa and chair pillows, Less said. Arrange furniture in cozy groupings and use as many pillows as possible on furniture and on the floor. Arrange heavy, upholstered furniture pieces near windows of sunny rooms so the furniture absorbs as much of sun's warmth as possible. If furniture is light weight, it can be moved away from windows on dark days or at night. Furniture arrangements should permit free air movement throughout the apartment, and should not block heating units or cold air return registers. Walls can be made into better insulators by covering them with fabric or a heavier wallpaper, if the landlord permits. For walls that can't be changed, use bookcases, tapestries, decorative blankets, or insulating panels to hold heat in and keep cold out. Floors will be warmer if they are carpeted or covered with rugs. Carpet and rugs are good insulators, and they also hold warmth from the sun.

Social Security information

Changes in the Social Security program in the last few years make it essential that a person carefully plan for his or her retirement. Several factors may need to be considered in making a proper decision on when to file for Social Security benefits. The decision is somewhat easy for the person that is not working and wants to receive benefits upon attainment of age 62. Even though a person's benefit amount is reduced by 20% if benefits are elected at age 62, it is normally to that person's advantage to receive reduced benefits for three years rather than to wait for full benefits at age 65. The decision to receive reduced benefits is left up to the person. The person wanting to receive benefits at age 62 can file as early as three months before age 62. A very recent change in the law provides that a person's first month of eligibility is the first month he or she is age 62 for the entire month. The decision as to when to file becomes a little difficult for the person that continues to work beyond age 62. Because the law permits a person under age 65 to earn as much as $4080 a year and still receive all of his or her benefits it may be possible for a person of relatively low earnings to file for benefits even though he or she continues to work. The person earning over $4080 a year may be eligible for benefits for several months of the year depending on the earnings in excess of the $4080 limitation. Unless the person has extremely high earnings, it is recommended that anyone planning to continue working beyond age 62, to at least inquire prior to reaching age 62 so that the person can be advised based on his or her particular circumstances. For the person working beyond age 62 and not eligible for benefits because of high earnings, the point at which to retire or semi-retire may also require careful consideration. A representative at your local Social Security office can advise you on the various alternatives so that a proper decision can be made. A person not eligible for benefits because of high earnings and who plans to continue working beyond age 65, should at least file for Medicare benefits within the three months before attainment of age 65. Several other factors may be involved in a person's decision on when to file for Social Security benefits. When in doubt, a person is strongly encouraged to inquire at their Social Security office. Most of these inquiries, including the actual filing of the application for benefits, can be processed by telephone. The area Social Security office is located in the Federal Building at 5th and Richardson, Roswell. The telephone number is 622-7780. If you have any questions, please feel free to call.

Inside The Capitol

SANTA FE—By the time you read these words, the Legislature may have decided what way to go on shaping up its own districts.

Each House member should ideally represent 18,613 residents, and each Senator 31,021.

No matter what approach is used to try to make that possible, it is going to be lumpy with errors, to use a phrase coined by Clay Buchanan, boss of the Legislative Council Service.

Those errors begin with the census itself. In the first place, the numbers the Census Bureau provides us are not really timely. If they tell us anything, it is how things were at the start of last year, not how they are now and are likely to be in coming years.

In the second place, the Census Bureau admits it has a built-in error ratio of something like 8 percent in its work.

That's just the admitted error; there are obviously also unadmitted errors.

But bad as they are, these are the only figures we have to work with.

It's when we start deciding how to use them that the trouble really becomes apparent.

They work fine for any legislative district which is made up of one or more complete counties. They just don't tell us what we have to know when we are forced to use some portion of a county other than a full one for all or part of such a district.

For both voting purposes and representational purposes, New Mexico is subdivided into precincts. Trouble is, the Census Bureau does not do its counts precinct by precinct.

That means we have to have some method of estimating (guessing, really) how many people there are in any precinct.

The Legislative Council Service, acting on instructions from the lawmakers, devised a formula which would have distributed the population of a county to each precinct in proportion to the number of those who voted in that precinct in the last election. Some people, including civil rights specialists in the federal government, believe use of that formula would under-represent some minority groups which do not vote in numbers proportionate to their share of the population.

But if not that formula, what one do we use?

Some have suggested that we use pretty much the same system, but base the distribution on numbers of those registered to vote, instead of those actually voting, in the precinct.

That turns out to have almost all the same problems of the voting-total system, including numbers too small to be accurately representative of Indians, for instance. Such groups often fail to register, just as they fail to vote, but they are entitled to representation anyway.

The final choice seems to be the 18-and-older formula, which would make use of census data for those who have the right to vote. It would still require some method of estimating how many of such people there are in each precinct.

Use of that system would change the number of representatives some counties would get. By the number-voting formula, Bernalillo county would get 22.56 representatives, for instance; but the 18-and-older formula would give it only 23.56 representatives.

One final word: Lawmakers should have begun doing the homework necessary for redistricting, including considerable use of computers, at least two years ago.

They chose not to, so we are confused and confusing in the midst of this process today.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

Many New Mexico taxpayers do not have the view of the federal government as the provider, but rather the recipient of their hard-earned benefits through taxation. However, they realize that supporting the government with their tax revenues is necessary for them to enjoy the peace, freedom, and security to earn their living and prosper.

What angers any taxpayers, though, is when they learn that their share of the financial responsibility of supporting the government is proportionately higher than their neighbor. These tax expenditures (called loopholes, credits, incentives, legitimate deductions or tax breaks) given to corporations or industries are unfair, the taxpayer claims, because they individually have to pay proportionately more taxes to support the same government than recipients of tax expenditures.

While not meaning to be oversimplistic about this very complex issue, I believe this claim by the average taxpayer is basically right, and is the very reason we need to examine closely our current tax expenditures. One reason we cannot give the American people a bigger individual tax cut is that tax expenditures are now so large that the present base for taxation has been eroded.

Tax expenditures have been placed in the United States Tax Code for as long as we have had a system of taxation. For the most part, tax expenditures were inserted in the Code to provide the incentive for Americans to do something they would normally not do because the cost was too high. When these are placed in the Tax Code, they are intended to provide specific rewards — more jobs, better working conditions, new resources being used, and benefits to disadvantaged Americans.

What happens, however, is that these tax expenditures, while specific in their goals and intentions, are left open-ended in many cases, leaving the opportunity for a business or corporation to take advantage of the tax expenditure, even when it is no longer needed or has outlived its useful purpose. These kind of tax expenditures remain in our tax code and are, in many cases, never removed.

The problem we have in Congress is how to get control of these previously uncontrolled tax expenditures. What is clearly needed is a review of all tax expenditures, so that all of them fit within Congressionally-established overall spending and revenue policies.

This was what I had proposed recently when I called for an increase in tax revenues to help balance the federal budget. My proposal would have raised an additional $48 billion in revenue by closing off just ten percent of the special exemptions, deductions, credits, and preferences which are now provided in our income tax laws. I did not want tax revenues raised from our 25 percent reduction in individual taxes, much needed tax cuts which we had already passed for individuals in August. We do not need higher tax rates, but rather a system that is fair and equitable for all Americans. The Senate Budget Committee, which I chair, has already begun a review of possible ways to close unnecessary tax loopholes. It is our duty within the committee to come up with methods to coordinate policies on tax expenditures and direct spending programs and report our recommendations and findings to the Congress on a recurring basis.

During the last several months we have concentrated our efforts on the Budget Committee on cutting federal spending through the reconciliation process. Now in this second phase of our efforts to restore integrity to Federal fiscal policy, it is particularly important that we review and consider ways of controlling tax expenditures. Only by doing this will we be able to bring federal deficits under control and reform a Tax Code that has been added to and deleted from on a piecemeal ad hoc basis, but has never been thoroughly reviewed or reformed.

Like most reforms, this work is much easier said than done. But we have begun the long process and I am hopeful that we will achieve the same historic precedents and achievements with tax reform that we have with bringing federal spending under control. The American taxpayer deserves no less.

OPEN LETTER TO ALL POLISH AMERICANS

DEAR FELLOW AMERICANS:

The actions of the Polish government in suspending basic rights and liberties of its citizens should cause every American to say a silent thank you for the foresight of the drafters of the U.S. Constitution.

The Associated Press story describing the Polish government's martial law actions is a litany of the precise types of governmental abuses which the Founding Fathers sought to prevent by the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

The "Great Writ" of habeas corpus in Article I prevents Americans from being seized and interned indefinitely, as Poles may be, and Lech Walesa and other members of the Polish Solidarity Union apparently have been.

The First Amendment prohibition against "abridging the freedom of speech or of the press" protects Americans from allowing government to require a permit for printing equipment and dissemination of literature, and controls us from the shutting down of all but one government-controlled radio station, one television station, and one newspaper — which has just been ordered in Poland.

The first Amendment's guarantee of the pre-Constitutional "right of the people peaceably to assemble" protects us from an equivalent of the Polish government's edict that "all gatherings, processions and demonstrations are banned."

And the Second Amendment guarantee that pre-Constitutional "right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed" prohibits a Polish government-type order that "all firearms, ammunition and explosives must be handed in to the police."

Poland has precisely the firearms laws that the NRA has been opposing in the United States. Handguns are allowed only to the privileged few; rifles and shotguns may be kept only with police permission, and every gun is registered. So seizing those guns requires only that the permits be revoked, and an order to turn them in or face imprisonment.

As several commentators have noted, the courageous Polish people are willing to continue their active year-long fight against repression by a tyrannical government; they are willing to fight the suspension of the fundamental rights of free men; but "the authorities have all the guns."

Fortunately for us, the Founding Fathers had great foresight. They knew that when all intellectual debate had ended, when all appeals for reasonableness have failed, when the only choice remaining is whether to submit or resist, then the overriding question becomes whether the people have the means to resist.

The writers of the Constitution had experienced, and resisted, a tyrannical government; they had both the will and the means to resist. And they wanted to be certain that their descendants also had the means to resist, which is why they wrote the Second Amendment as the ultimate protection for the rights guaranteed by the First Amendment and all the remainder of the Constitution.

And so long as the Second Amendment is not infringed, what is happening in Poland can never happen in these United States.

Thank you, Mr. Jefferson.

IRS WANTS TAXES

Along about this time of the year ... every year ... the IRS lads deluge the news media with pitches about paying federal income taxes ... like all honest, law abiding citizens should ... or else.

So their pitch this year is that taxpayers should pay no never mind to proponents of not paying IRS, through various and sundry scams, schemes and dodges ... "cause IRS is claiming that they get right on the donkey of tax dodgers ... and enforce the federal laws ... and that it's the taxpayer's right to protest income taxes ... but, by jinkies, you'd best protest them in accordance with the IRS's dictates in the matter.

"Course there's those statements that the IRS has made that they ain't even responsible for their own mistakes in telling taxpayers how to fill in their forms ... which, somehow, doesn't sound strictly kosher ... but they make the laws ... and bend them ... and enforce them ... and it's at the expense of the taxpayer.

Maybe Rompin' Ronnie could sorta peek into the way the IRS operates ... if'n he really has the interest of the little guy ... the guy who ponies up the bulk of the money the government operates with ... at heart.

Sure don't seem right ... though ... that you can flout the IRS ... with no problems ... if it's a bundle you owe ... 'cause if'n a taxpayer reneges on paying thousands or millions in taxes due, the IRS lets you make payments ... they don't take your car, furniture, home, refrigerator or tiddy-winks ... and that ain't right.

IT'S A DOG'S YEAR

If you have a sneaking suspicion that 1982 might go to the dogs, you're absolutely, positively, certainly and unquestionably right.

It's this way ... January 25 is Chinese New Year ... heralding in the Year of the Dog ... 4880 in the Chinese calendar ... and the Year of the Dog is following hard on the heels of the Year of the Rooster ... and will be followed by the Years of the Boar, Rat, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit, Dragon, Serpent, Horse, Ram and Monkey ... in case you always thought our Chinese friends were partial to furred and clawed and skin-covered beasts of the salty, briny, deep.

Seems odd, does it not, that there ain't a buncha "Confucius say" sayings about China going to the dogs ... which it musta been in his day ... same as it is now ... no?

TIRE WHININ' TIME

Yup winter kinda arrived overnight last Tuesday ... dumping bunches and gobs and heaps and piles of that white stuff that makes up the dreams of skiers ... and guys/gals as is concerned about an adequate water supply for Harmony Valley.

And there were fender benders ... and vehicles as wound up in ditches ... and stuck ... and there were short fuses ... and hot rodders ... and, all in all, it was just plain old tire whinin' time ... without too much complainin' being done ... especially the small fry as had the day off to make snow men ... and they did.

BRIEF BIT: If you don't know where you vote now, wait until the politicians settle redistricting, and there'll be lotsa folks to commiserate with ... CD

FRAUD MADE EASY

Members of two Senate committees sat through the eye-opening course the other day on how to bilk the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

The instructor, Dr. Richard Kones, knew whereof he spoke. The New York physician admits to having defrauded the government of at least $500,000 by filing phony Medicare and Medicaid claims.

While awaiting sentencing for his conviction on 67 counts of fraud, Dr. Kones decided to perform a public service by telling all on Capitol Hill.

"In my psychopathology, I wanted to be discovered," he said. "I deliberately made my forms so outrageous that they begged for discovery. I was astonished when some of these forms were paid."

Dr. Kones evidently grew bolder as he realized just how easy it was to obtain public funds under false pretenses from the somnolent Health and Human Services (HHS) bureaucracy. He even drew total disability payments while playing tennis twice a week. The paper shuffler at HHS accepted his fictitious heart attack claim without any attempt at verification.

Incredibly, Medicare and Medicaid inspectors haven't yet bothered to question Dr. Kones to determine how his larceny went undetected for years. Thanks to his appearance on Capitol Hill, that oversight least may now be corrected.

The point of all this is that while Dr. Kones is no doubt a particularly flagrant example of those defrauding Medicare and Medicaid, he is certainly not alone.

A 1978 study showed that fraud and waste were siphoning off as much as $7.4 billion each year from Health and Human Services Department programs, including Medicare and Medicaid.

Whatever the Democrats in Congress say, it's apparent that there are still plenty of targets for President Reagan's budget cutters, and for the inspectors general he has appointed.

They might start by taking another look at Medicare and Medicaid. — News-Bulletin, Belen.

BROTHERS MARTINEZ, F. O. (left) and Orlando (right), are both apprentice jockeys at Sunland Park. They are both "managed" by their father, Orlando A. Martinez.

Being jockeys natural to Martinez brothers

BY MARK GORDON

It's really no surprise brothers Orlando and F. O. Martinez would eventually become jockeys. "They would pretend they were riding horses sitting on pillows when they were little," said the brothers' father and unofficial adviser, Orlando A. Martinez. "They'd always be riding on fences or something. They'd have foot races and be hitting themselves with sticks just like they were jockeys riding in races."

With an equine interest from the start, the Martinez brothers are now both apprentices riding at Sunland Park.

Orlando, 16, a junior at Coronado High School in El Paso, Texas, has been riding for almost three months. He has six victories during the current Sunland Park campaign.

For the youngster, who rides primarily for Jimmy Loyd and Gib McClanahan, the biggest attribute is his weight. "I weigh 98 pounds. That's the lightest of anyone here," said Orlando.

"He eats everything," chipped in F. O. "Every night he has milk and cookies before he goes to sleep. He eats chips and cokes. I wish I could do that."

The junior Martinez, who terms rating a horse as the most difficult thing he must do, noted riding horses in morning workouts and during the afternoon races are two entirely different things.

"It's hard being a jockey," he said. "It's different riding in the mornings. There's a lot more horses in the races."

Still, if his older brother is riding in the race with him, he has an interest in F. O.'s position.

"I look to see where my brother is just a little bit. But I try to beat him. That's the name of the game," he said.

F. O., meanwhile, is becoming established on the southern New Mexico circuit of Sunland Park and Ruidoso Downs.

The 18-year-old jockey began last May at Sunland Park, then won two races at Ruidoso Downs last summer before getting one win at the New Mexico State Fair in Albuquerque. Overall, he has 12 winners.

"It's tough getting started. I started from scratch. I was always told to be patient. But it's terrible to only ride one or two horses at the start. It's good experience, but it's tough competing against the Lamberts, Rollers and Lovells."

The 1981 graduate of Coronado High School rides basically for Paul Smith, Phillip G. LaVoie and Jim Funderburg.

He enjoyed a productive weekend during the opening three-day session of the Sunland Park spring season riding three winners from just seven mounts. F. O. was named Sunland Park's jockey-of-the-week, quite an honor for an apprentice.

The 110-pound rider also tries to be somewhat aware of his younger brother's location during a race.

"It's hard to watch where he is, but I kind of glance to see where he is. There's really no time to look for a while. I try to beat him," said F. O.

The brothers, who are nicknamed Heckle and Jeckle by Sunland Park Clerk of Scales Bruce Brinkley, both appreciate their father's help.

"We both come to him for advice," said F. O. "He never did ride, but he's the boss."

The senior Martinez, who has lived in El Paso since 1959, has been involved with racetrack life since 1964. He's served as a groom, assistant trainer, trainer, clocker and jockey agent. He's also broken horses.

Still, he takes more than a personal interest in the success of his two sons.

"I really don't like both of them being at the same place. It raises conflicts as to who is better. Let's just say I'm pleased with both of their successes."

"I've been real happy that they're riding. When they first started, I got real nervous during the races. I still do, you never really get over it," he said.

Although the Martinezs are fairly well-situated in El Paso, Orlando Sr., foresees a move away from West Texas.

"We'll probably end up in the east. California is the toughest place in the country to ride. But before we leave, I want Orlando Jr., to get his education. And there's little old things we have to do here."

"I get a lot of compliments on both of them. Everyone says they are well-mannered and polite. I have the best kids most people have ever seen. I'm so proud of them," he said.

Both youngsters enjoy riding. As F. O. said, "We both want to keep riding. That's our life."

And they both knew about it from the beginning — even when riding on pillows.

THE PET CORNER

BY JACK SNIADOCKI
Animal Control Officer

What is a dog?
Sometimes a dog eats the neighbor's chickens, chases his sheep, cows and horses and knocks over garbage cans. He also chases you down the street, howls all night, and might even bite people. A dog sometimes wants out at 5 a.m., when you don't want to get up until 7. A dog keeps on having puppies, puppies and more puppies. And a dog can get your neighbor so mad he won't talk to you.

On the other hand, a dog carries a brandy barrel around his neck and finds people lost in the snow. Dogs saved millions of soldiers' lives during wars. They also rescue children from drowning and pull them out of the way of traffic.

Dogs enter burning buildings to rescue children and adults, they lead the blind, are ears for the deaf and pull sleds and wagons to the delight of small children. And a dog teaches children responsibility.

Wildlife seeking winter shelter pose problems

Cool weather means predators and furbearing animals are on the move, looking for food and new dens.

"Young coyotes, foxes, bobcats and raccoons are among the animals that will leave the area where they were born and start looking for a new place to live, particularly this time of year," said Jim Knight, Extension wildlife specialist for New Mexico State University (NMSU).

Some species, such as skunks, possums and raccoons, may only move short distances, sometimes less than a mile, Knight said.

"Others, particularly coyotes and foxes, may travel miles before they pick a new home. Some radio telemetry studies have tracked foxes 40 miles or more, and some coyotes have traveled up to 400 miles," he said.

During this annual movement, foxes and coyotes often move into areas where food and cover may be scarce. "In many of these situations, they turn to livestock, poultry and crops as a food source and can cause serious losses for farmers and ranchers," Knight said.

Skunks, raccoons and possums often move into farmsteads and even into urban areas. They select barns, haystacks and garages for den areas, and sometimes move into the crawl spaces under a house or into an attic.

"Harvesting these animals for fur during the winter can serve several purposes," Knight said.

First, it reduces damage in both rural and urban areas. Also, harvesting problem animals and others in excess numbers can be a benefit for other wild species by preventing spread of diseases and removing excessive competition for food and shelter.

Rabies, tularemia, distemper and mange are some of the diseases that appear to spread rapidly when there are high populations of flesh-eating animals. These diseases can be serious health hazards to humans and domestic animals, Knight said.

"Sport hunting and trapping can be beneficial for a number of reasons beyond the harvest of valuable furs," Knight said.

The NMSU Cooperative Extension Service can provide information on the kind of damage caused by wild animals, and the methods to best control and harvest such species, Knight said.

Publications on identification of predator kills, control methods and related information are available from Extension wildlife specialists, or the publications can be ordered through county Extension offices.

Veterans to receive insurance dividends

More than 21,300 New Mexico veterans who have kept their GI life insurance policies in force will share in a record $64.6 million dividend during 1982.

The New Mexico dividends will total more than $3.83 million, said Joe Cordova, director, Albuquerque Veterans Administration Regional Office.

Because of higher interest rates earned by insurance funds, the amount to be paid to policyholders during 1982 is $45 million above the 1981 figure.

No application is needed, Cordova stressed. Dividends will be paid automatically during 1982 on the anniversary date of the individual's insurance policy.

Policyholders will receive varying amounts depending on the type of policy, the amount of insurance in force, the insured's age at issue or renewal and time the policy has been in force.

Nationally, almost $24 million will be paid to 78,000 World War I veterans with current policies. The average dividend for term policyholders will be $307 and for permanent plan policyholders, $309.

Some 3,124,000 World War II veterans with active policies will share $500 million. Average dividend for term policyholders will be $121. For permanent plan policyholders the average dividend will be $246 and modified life plan policyholders will receive an average of $116.

Korean Conflict veterans who kept their GI insurance in force—a total of 496,000—will receive an average payment of $71. Their policies earned $35 million during the past year.

More than 181,000 disabled veterans of World War II and the Korean Conflict holding Veterans Special Life Insurance policies will receive an average dividend of $97. This is only the third year dividends will be paid in this program.

A greater share of the higher interest rates was earned by those veterans who converted their insurance plans to permanent type policies rather than continuing to hold the original term policies, Cordova said.

Each of the four participating insurance program funds are a separate entity, accounting for the difference in average dividends, he said.

IT TAKES TEAM EFFORT to get the job done. Since they had a day off from school, these kids decided to build a snowman for the Ruidoso State Bank contest. In front is Lou SOMETIMES THINGS INTERRUPT THE job at hand — like a snowball fight. John Norlander tosses a snowball at Wayne Watts while Derik White scoops up some snow for defense.

KYLE WICKWARE AND VICKY ELLIS decided the snow was too good to waste, so they sculpted a lumberjack Wednesday.

Wickware said he wanted to build an entire man, but the snow wouldn't stick together well enough.

PORTUGAL TIPS

Lisbon and the Algarve are Portugal's two prime tourist areas. Lisbon is historic city, good for sight-seeing and shopping. Don't miss: Castelo San Jorge, an old fort with tremendous views; Alfama, the old section of the city, narrow streets, colorful; lacily elaborate Geronimo monastery.

In Lisbon, several reasonable hotels are near the central Marquis de Pombal place, which offers good access to public transportation and city exit roads.

Fado clubs—restaurants featuring singers of famous emotion-filled folk songs—are the place to go at night. The later you go, the better; nothing much happens before 10 p.m.

The Algarve is Portugal's south coast, with beautiful weather most of the year. Your choice of tourist resorts and small fishing villages. Heavy Moorish influence, and loads of inexpensive seafood restaurants.

Throughout Portugal are a network of government-run inns, called pousadas. Often ancient, historic...and very reasonable. Charming and efficient. Pousada-hopping by car is one of the best ways to tour the country.

No matter what your destination, call Ruidoso Travel, Pinefree Square, phone 257-7361 for helpful information and prompt, courteous service in making bookings.

Bill would help fund planned regional airport

BY TIM PALMER
Staff Writer

Legislation introduced this week in Santa Fe could eventually help provide funding for construction of the planned Sierra Blanca Regional Airport (SBRA), which was recently given top priority by the State Aviation Division.

House Bill 4, introduced Tuesday at the regular session of the New Mexico Legislature by Representative Vaughn Rue Crawford of Deming, calls for distribution of certain taxes to the state aviation fund for airport construction and maintenance.

According to Ruidoso airport manager Tim Morris, president of the New Mexico Airport Managers Association, the bill would affect gross receipts tax charged on the sale of aviation products such as fuel, tires and batteries. This tax currently goes into the state general fund, he explained, and can thus be used for purposes other than aviation.

A just released priority list from the Aviation Division of the State Transportation Department places SBRA at the top of the airports' capital improvements program.

"So we're the ones who would benefit most from this legislation," said Morris. He noted that revenue for airport improvements is especially important to small airports, since federal funds are less available than previously.

"It's an important bill to us," said SBRA commission chairman Fred Heckman of the proposed legislation.

Heckman noted that "solving of the land problem" remains the first step toward a new airport. The proposed airport site on Fort Stanton mesa is to undergo a federal study to determine the compatibility of agricultural and aviation uses, as it is currently partly occupied by a New Mexico State University experimental farm.

"We've been pretty high up in the state plans for years," said Heckman when told of the top priority given SBRA by the State Aviation Division. He indicated that effort from the governor's office to effect a compromise on the land use question is what has been lacking on the state level.

Heckman said that the potential tax revenue source and the priority designation are important, "especially in this time when states are being asked to take over what the federal government used to do."

State Aviation Division director Bob White called his department's support of SBRA "a foregone conclusion." He cited the critical safety factor as the main reason: "You've got a bunch of planes flying in there that have no business flying in," said White, referring to the present Ruidoso Municipal Airport.

White noted that House Bill 4 is not an administration bill and thus he could not take a position on it. The official position will come out of the governor's legislative office, he said.

The bill was assigned to the House Rules Committee for review.

CC seeking parking plan from village

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce (CC) Wednesday approved a resolution from the Retail Merchants Committee (RMC) to go before the village trustees and propose that the Village of Ruidoso appoint a commission to look into a public offstreet parking program. Along with that suggestion, the CC will ask the village trustees to take quick action on acquiring a convention center for Ruidoso.

"Parking in this town is getting to be more and more of a critical public problem. As citizens of Ruidoso, we have the right to request this. We (CC) represent 500 local businesses, so let's get some action," said RMC chairman Larry Langford. He cited Ruidoso's "strip development" and its being situated against the mountains as requiring a planned parking program.

While the CC directors gave their full backing to a parking proposal, Chamber president Richard Sandoval said that it was also most appropriate for the board to suggest to the village trustees that action be taken on a convention center.

The directors approved the nominating committee's list of board member nominees. Fourteen people were nominated for eight positions, seven two year terms and one one year term. The selection of the one year term is a replacement position for a board member who resigned. Jungbluth said that this is a departure from the board of directors' by-laws which stipulate that the board may arbitrarily appoint a replacement. "This year, the seven who get the most votes will sit on the board for two years. The eighth person who receives the most votes will get a one-year term," said Jungbluth.

Ballots will be mailed out to Chamber members next week in February's newsletter, Jungbluth said.

Those nominated for directors are: Jim Goodwin, Joan Bailey, Ron Hemphill, Dan Brown, Walt Lindborg, Dorothy Dale, Ellen Miller, Scott Schrader, Tom Kelham, Bill Rawlins, Nancy Radziewicz, Jim Paxton, Bill Braudt and Phil Hamilton. All have accepted their nominations except Dorothy Dale who has not yet responded.

The Hn-Zhu-Ne Committee reported to the board its nominees for the Third Annual Hn-Zhu-Ne Award, which rewards the local enterprise that most enhanced their neighborhood by making improvements to the exterior of their existing building.

The committee decided that the standards for eligibility for the nomination of the award would be improvement or remodeling of a business's exterior in 1981 and that the premises still be occupied or owned by the individuals who did the remodeling.

The committee also decided not to limit the nominees to only four Chamber members, as it's been done in the past, but to include as many as were necessary to represent all types of remodeling from the least to the most expensive. Those nominated are: The Innsbruck Lodge, Jim Pless Gallery, Mack Kizer's Arcade, Pawn Shop and Cleaners, the Maytag Laundry, Nottingham's Pub, the old part of Pine-tree Square, Pete's Mexican Fare, Wayne Wood's building, Sierra Vista Center, Twenty-Twenty Gallery and Whispering Pines Cabins.

Lincoln County Commissioners discussed preliminary plans for two new buildings at a special commissioner's meeting Tuesday morning.

One of the new buildings is a sub-office planned for the Ruidoso area and will house such county offices as the Sheriff's Department, District Attorney, Juvenile Probation Officer and a health center. A general purpose room is also planned for conferences.

The second structure discussed at the meeting was the administrative building to be built on the south parking lot of the existing Lincoln County Courthouse in Carrizozo. This building will house the county manager's office, computer room, commissioner's meeting room and one office for the county commissioners.

Kenneth Guthrie and Miguel Cheng-Guajardo of Herkenhoff and Associates, architects for the project, were on hand to make any changes on their preliminary plans that the commissioners called for.

One change made in the sub-office plan was to make the offices 10 x 12 feet rather than the originally planned 10 x 10 feet. Also trimmed was the amount of space allotted the deputies for writing reports. "Do we need space for five deputies? There will probably only be one or two writing reports at one time," said Commissioner Ben Hall.

A storage file room for the county secretary was also included in the plans. With the various changes suggested, Guthrie said they will be taken into consideration for more advanced plans. Guthrie said he will return to the next commissioner's meeting February 2 with revised plans.

Concerning plans for the administrative building in Carrizozo, the commissioners decided they needed only one commissioner's office, rather than the three originally called for. Extra space for the computer room was requested as well as extra space for the bookkeeper. The book-

New county buildings eyed

LINCOLN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS met Tuesday in a special meeting to discuss architect's plans for the county sub-station in Ruidoso and the additional administrative building that will be built south of the existing courthouse. Pictured from left are Ken-keeper and county manager's secretary will share some of the space for their filing systems.

Commissioner John Allen Hightower requested that outside building materials be compatible with the existing courthouse.

Guthrie said his company plans to call for panel similar to white aggregate for the exterior.

After plans have been finalized for the two new buildings, the projects will go up for bid, tentatively sometime in March, ac-ording to County Manager Truman "Bill" Billingsley. At that time, estimates will be available for the construction of the new buildings.

Currently, the county commissioners plan to use excess money in their general fund for the project.

Local Realtors support proposed mortgage act

BY WILL TURBOW
Staff Writer

The Multiple Listing Service (MLS) committee of the Board of Realtors Tuesday expressed support for the state's Residential Mortgage Purchase Act of 1982 and asked its members to write their legislators for support in getting the bill passed.

"The act will put mortgage money back into the state. Right now that money (money set aside in the state's severance tax fund) is just sitting up in Santa Fe collecting interest. This way, the housing industry, realtors, the state economy and the populace as a whole are helped out," said

Janel Warlick-Pearson, president of the Ruidoso Board of Realtors.

Presently, the severance tax fund approximates $540 million and it is anticipated the fund will exceed two billion dollars by the end of 1986. The Residential Mortgage Purchase Act proposes to invest $200 million per year for four years, out of those New Mexico funds.

According to Warlick-Pearson, the act will help revitalize the housing industry—60 percent of the funds will be allocated for new construction—thus putting New Mexicans back to work. She also said that passage of the act would generate more ad valorem taxes, sales tax and income tax in the state.

Warlick-Pearson said that these funds would be available only for owner-occupied primary residences. On a negative note, she pointed out that the mortgage interest rate would be lower than is presently generated by investing the tax funds out of state in a national money market.

In other MLS business, Jim Carpenter declared that there are still some outstanding dues to be paid by February 1. Darlene Hart announced that the New Members Committee is set up. New members in any realtor's office should contact Hart or Al Lane to take a by-laws and ethics test to receive their lock-box keys.

Noon Lions sponsoring street address numbers

The Ruidoso Noon Lions are promoting, as a community service project, the sale of street address numbers for businesses and residences.

Club members will begin the canvass in the commercial district, followed by the residential solicitation.

The commercial signs are white, 10x24 inches, with brown raised numerals, at $20; with two way signs, for angle mounting, priced at $30.

The charge for residences will be $4 per number.

The club, in connection with this program, will donate 17 signs to the village to be located on main thoroughfares, giving directions to the Ruidoso Municipal Center, Police Department, Municipal Airport and Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital.

The location of these signs has been selected by village officials.

"The redwood signs the club is donating to the village," project chairman Art Townsend said, "have a retail price of $2,400, but we're getting a discount from Bob Yeager Sign Company, and the club considers this a token gift to make this public service project possible."

Club members, Townsend said, "are assembling the signs, by that I mean the sanding, staining and fastening the numbers, we're making them ourselves as it's our project to serve the village and live up to the Lions' motto: 'We Serve.'"

Townsend said that the commercial signs, as well as the numbers for homes, have been tested to prove they withstand the temperature extremes prevailing in

Ruidoso and that "they'll last at least 20 years."

For businesses, Townsend is recommending they be placed "12 to 15 feet above street level, so they will be easily visible to people in cars."

Townsend, in describing this Lions' project, said, "This plan will enable every business, and residence, to have street numbers at an affordable price."

"It will be of benefit to our visitors, and will certainly make it easier for the fire department, police, and utilities' workers to find their way around, especially in the residential areas."

"Coupled with the Ruidoso Rotary Club's project to install street name posts throughout the village, in a short time giving directions to find any specific location should be a cinch."

Swenor, Huckstep, attended police liability workshop

Ruidoso's Chief of Police Dick Swenor and village attorney Lee Huckstep returned from a workshop on police civil liability feeling that they and the village benefited from their participation.

"I thought it was just excellently done," said Huckstep of the workshop, held January 11-13 at Orlando, Florida. It was sponsored by Americans for Effective Law Enforcement (AELE).

Swenor called the program "extremely informative." He said, "It will definitely benefit law enforcement services as far as alleviating liability risks."

Court decisions holding municipalities liable for employee misconduct have made liability a major concern of public administrators in recent years.

"Ten years ago, no one would have thought of suing a cop or a municipality," said Huckstep. "Now, it's common."

The AELE program was inclusive in the areas of employment and supervision, Swenor said, from the initial stage of employee selection through equal opportunities on the job.

Since supervisors can be held personally liable for the acts of subordinate officers, these topics were of special interest to the many chiefs and high ranking command officers in attendance, Swenor said.

"Every aspect of law enforcement now has incurred a liability constraint of some nature—arrest, booking, incarceration, transport," said Swenor. He noted that the workshop also dealt with certification, invalid retention of employees and use of deadly force.

Prevention of lawsuits against a municipality; defense of such suits once they are brought; and handling of initial interviews in any federal investigation of a civil rights complaint were among the legal aspects touched on by the program, Huckstep said.

Swenor and Huckstep both stated that the interchange of information which took place in questions from the floor and the informal discussions were very valuable.

Someone would bring up a problem, said Swenor, and someone else would tell how they handled the same problem. Thus each person got a better overall picture of law enforcement nationwide, he explained, as well as awareness of coming trends.

Although workshop participants agreed on the value of preventive measures in the liability area, the chief noted, they also voiced almost unanimous concern over the failure of laws to be enforced judicially.

Criminals not getting what they deserve, with the death penalty the main point of contention, is causing disobedience of the law to filter down through the population, Swenor claimed.

"People who before never thought about breaking the law are now saying, 'why not?'" he said.

But the AELE is encouraging police to stand up for their own rights. "What they're telling us is 'start suing back,'" said Swenor. The workshop showed the Ruidoso Police Department to be in relatively good

Downs' race dates set for 1982 meeting

The 1982 meeting at Ruidoso Downs Race Track (RDRT) will be from May 8 through Labor Day, September 6.

The dates were approved by the State Racing Commission January 15 in Santa Fe.

The 76 racing days, an increase of six days over 1981, include extra cards Wednesdays in August and two days for Rainbow and All-American Futurity time trials.

RDRT general manager Finlay McGillivray obtained permission from the commission to change the date of the All-American Futurity from Labor Day to Saturday, September 4, to adjust to a telecast schedule with ABC Sports. McGillivray said the telecast plans are still tentative, and that he didn't know if ABC plans to televise the race in its entirety, or as a segment of a regular sports program.

PORTUGAL TIPS

Lisbon and the Algarve are Portugal's two prime tourist areas. Lisbon is historic city, good for sight-seeing and shopping. Don't miss: Castelo San Jorge, an old fort with tremendous views; Alfama, the old section of the city, narrow streets, colorful; lacy elaborate Geronimos monastery.

In Lisbon, several reasonable hotels are near the central Marquis de Pombal place, which offers good access to public transportation and city exit roads.

Fado clubs—restaurants featuring singers of famous emotion-filled folk songs—are the place to go at night. The later you go, the better; nothing much happens before 10 p.m.

The Algarve is Portugal's south coast, with beautiful weather most of the year. Your choice of tourist resorts and small fishing villages. Heavy Moorish influence, and loads of inexpensive seafood restaurants.

Throughout Portugal are a network of government-run inns, called pousadas. Often ancient, historic...and very reasonable. Charming and efficient. Pousada-hopping by car is one of the best ways to tour the country.

No matter what your destination, call Ruidoso Travel, Pinetree Square, phone 257-7381 for helpful information and prompt, courteous service in making bookings.
