

Water department keeps system going

(Editor's note:
This is the second in a series of articles on Ruidoso's water supply. Today's article deals with the water department and the present water system.)

While village officials ponder millions of dollars in future expansion and improvements to the Ruidoso water system, water department employees have their hands full keeping the present system going.

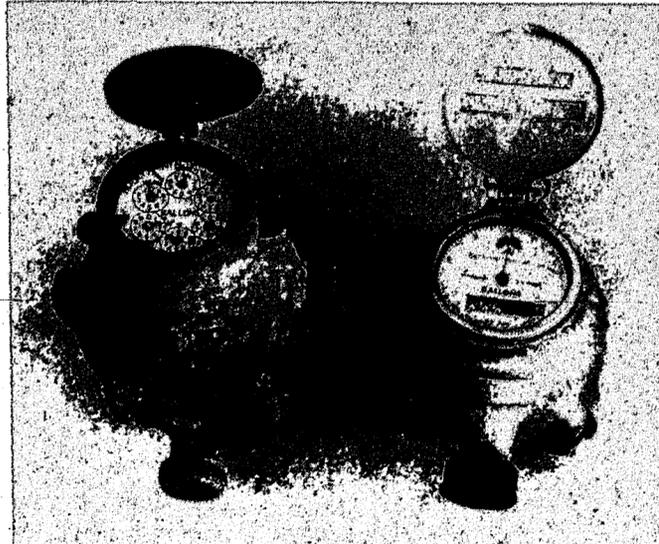

replacement," wrote water superintendent Richard Sanchez in a December report to the board of trustees.

been a prime concern of the department recently, said Sanchez. Two months ago, he said, meter readers compiled a list of worn out meters.

"A lot of them are meters that have been in the ground for 20 years or more," he said. "We're working on getting the worst ones out of the way."

since the replacement program began. In addition, 30 to 35 new connections are being installed by the department each month.

[SEE PAGE 2]

THE OLD AND THE NEW — Village water department workers have been busy replacing old worn out water meters like the one on the left with newer models like the one on the right. Water users are reminded that the meters are the property of the village and that tampering with a meter carries a $300 fine. Persons needing to disconnect their water should contact the water department, according to water superintendent Richard Sanchez.

Espree party coming up soon

Tickets are still available for the Chamber of Commerce Valentine Espree Party taking place on Monday, February 15, at Jerry Dale's.

The Espree Party is the successor in a long line of Chamber parties put on to raise funds for the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber director Ed Jungbluth said Wednesday, "The party promises to be a lot of fun with good people, good food and good dancing."

Consolation awards will be presented throughout the evening to those attending the party. Awards donated to the Espree Party are: an antique brass ceiling fan from Nunn Electric in El Paso, Texas; a season ski pass from Sierra Blanca Ski Resort; artists' proofs by Mimi Jungbluth and Gordon Snidow; a gift certificate by Brunell's Department Store; a family color portrait from Timber Trail Photography; a Tru-flect mirror from New Mexico Glass; a teddy bear from Gibson's and a television set from Village Hardware.

Jungbluth said the Espree Party is an alternative way to raise needed funds for the Chamber without increasing members' dues. "The 1980 Jeep Party raised enough money to paint the exterior of the Chamber," said Jungbluth.

Tickets for the Valentine Espree Party are limited to 180 and are on sale for $130 per couple. That includes a cocktail party starting at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner and dancing to the country and western music of the Silver Creek Band. For ticket information, contact a Chamber board member, or call the Chamber at 257-7395.

In order to continue to provide Chamber services and programs which people now enjoy, Jungbluth said that money must be raised. "This party is intended for the locals more than anything else," he said. The Chamber must come out ahead on this party, said Jungbluth.

The menu will feature: assorted canapes, chicken livers, guacamole dip and tostados, assorted cheese wheels, salsa de chili, cocktail breads, cheddar cheese spread, relish and crab claws.

Barbecue ribs, brisket, chicken and sausage, corn on the cob, pinto beans, potato salad, cole slaw, carrot salad, jalapeno peppers, cherry peppers, pepperoncini, three bean salad, assorted breads, fruit cobbler and ice cream top off the menu.

Questions about local code requirements concerning the height of planned condominiums to be built on the site of the Chapparral Motor Hotel in Ruidoso Downs were the main item of business at Monday evening's meeting of the Ruidoso Downs trustees.

Several representatives of 3-D International, Houston, Texas, architects for the condominiums, requested clarification of the height requirement for the buildings. Ralph Wayne, representing project developers John Connolly, Ben Baanes and Joe McDermott, said building height can be calculated from entry level, from the grade or from the average point of the grade.

It was determined at the meeting that the height should be calculated from the average point of the grade, with the architect's preliminary plans for the condominiums satisfying this requirement.

Jim Rawhouser, a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z), voiced concern about the location of the condominiums in what is now a commercial zone. Wayne said that according to most city codes there is no need to rezone an area when building involves moving from a higher to a lower density, such as from commercial to residential. "The laws are not written as a hierarchy here," Rawhouser said. "The plans should conform to the laws as they stand now."

Because it had not been announced that P&Z would be meeting at the time, Rawhouser said "this is not a prudent fashion to approve of something of this magnitude." He asked that P&Z be given time to closely review the plans for the condominiums. To accomplish this a special meeting of P&Z will be held tonight at 7, in the Municipal Building.

Because the architects were also concerned about conforming to fire regulations for the planned development, members of the Ruidoso Downs Fire Department agreed to be present at tonight's P&Z meeting.

There was also a question raised that right-of-way for a state highway may cross the property to be used for the development. Wayne said there is no road shown on the land survey given builders, but that they would investigate the possibility the right-of-way could exist.

Because of a desire expressed by the 3-D representatives to proceed with the building plans as soon as possible, the trustees gave their proxy vote to mayor Norman Wheeler and village clerk Virginia Spall to approve the project pending approval by P&Z tonight.

Also discussed at the meeting was the request for a canopy license by the Ruidoso Downs Jockey Club. Charles C. Spann, agent representing the Jockey Club, explained the history of the club's association with Ruidoso Downs and Sunland Park race tracks.

Spann emphasized that the two corporations are separate, have separate liquor licenses, and that Sunland Park "is not involved."

Spann explained that the Jockey Club signed a lease agreement with Ruidoso Downs Race Track to lease their liquor license when the Jockey Club's stockholders assumed control of the club. The Jockey Club is, therefore, requesting they be granted a canopy license to sell liquor at the track during the races.

Trustee Bob Power expressed some reluctance to vote in favor of the canopy license because of the recent vote not to grant any more liquor licenses in Ruidoso Downs. Spann said that the canopy license would not be a new license. He assured Power that there would be no change in the club's operation. "It will be a continuation of the operation you're all familiar with," Spann said.

Trustee Lois Beavers made a motion to approve the canopy license. There was no second. Trustee Harold Mansell made a motion to table the request until sometime in March. This motion was seconded by Power, who said he wished to discuss the matter with village attorney Dick Parsons before a decision is made.

Spall reminded the trustees that the request would have to be approved or disapproved within 45 days of the date the application was filed, which was December 30, 1981.

The meeting was adjourned to call Parsons and it was reported he agreed with Spann that the granting of the canopy license would not defy the earlier vote against granting additional liquor licenses in Ruidoso Downs.

The trustees then approved the Jockey Club's request for a canopy liquor license.

Other business covered at the meeting included:

—Approval of a requisition from the Fire Department for the purchase of films and manuals for a defensive driving course to be offered to members of the Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs Fire Departments and ambulance drivers.

—A move that the proposed flood insurance Ordinance 82-1 be tabled until the new council could vote on it.

—A report from P&Z regarding their approval of the building of a planned amusement park at the site of the former drive-in at Ruidoso Downs, with the request that the trustees look into possible traffic problems involved with cars turning in and out of the park.

Ski Report

Sierra Blanca—Undisturbed snow depth is 61 inches mid-way on the mountain. Two inches of snow fell Wednesday night. Novice and intermediate trails were machine cut Wednesday night. All trails and lifts are open and in excellent condition.

Eagle Creek—Average snow depth is 24 inches. Seven inches of snow has fallen in the past three days. All trails are open and in good to excellent conditions. There is night skiing from 6 to 10 Friday and Saturday.

Special ski race set for Handicapped Week

BY BARBY GRANT

The Sierra Blanca Handicapped Skiers Association (SBHSA), a non-profit organization formed six years ago for the purpose of teaching handicapped persons to ski and to provide them with a skiing experience, will hold a businessmen's handicapped ski race during Handicapped Week, February 22-27.

The week's events will include:

—a pre-race party on February 23 at Cree Meadows Country Club, at which local residents will be given the opportunity to support teams with "contributions."

—the races to be held Wednesday, February 24. The businessmen's handicapped race will pair a local businessman with a handicapped person for each team. The handicapped skier will race down the beginner's slope at Sierra Blanca once, while the businessman will race down twice—once blindfolded and once on only one ski.

Following the handicapped race there will be a match race between Shane Watts, Jerry Bigham, Ray Heid and Ray Bishop.

—a benefit dance at Jerry Dale's on Saturday, February 27. A portion of the cover charge and the $2 entry fee for a dance contest will be donated to the SBHSA.

The events during Handicapped Week are the only fund raising events held by the SBHSA all year. This year's race will be the first one held since 1979, but "we hope to make it an annual event, as long as we have snow," said Jerry Bigham, an SBHSA director.

The other directors are Rick Vincent, Dorothy Kimsey, Tommy Hornbuckle, Mary Lois Green, Frank Sayner, Preston Isaacs, Roy Parker and Ray Bishop. Diana Person and Hilde Strobel are the Association's two full-time instructors.

Skiing instructions will be given to "almost any handicapped," including blind, deaf, cerebral palsied, amputees, post polio and mentally retarded, according to Bigham. Instructions are given by appointment only, he said.

Gordon Snidow, local artist, Rick Bowers from Lela Easter Real Estate, Robert Donaldson from Pro Ski Sports, Ray Bishop from Bishop Enterprises, Morgan Clough from Morgan's Mountain Sports, Danny Brown from Three Bees Mart, Gary Lynch from SDC Realty, Martin Rose from Resort Properties, Dan Kelley from Cousins', Paul Southwick from Eagle Creek Ski Area and Ken Moore from Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital.

The businessmen who will be participating in the race February 24 are John Hall from SDC Realty, Tommy Hornbuckle from House of Shoes, Preston Isaacs from Ruidoso State Bank, Ray Heid from Ray Heid's Ski Shop, Gary Hall from Nottingham's, Ed Jungbluth from the Chamber of Commerce, Peter Strobel from Resort Properties, Ronnie Taylor from Mountain Ski Shop, and Lee Huckstep from O'Reilly & Huckstep.

Lon casts lot with Lobos

Lon Nunley, one of the finest football players ever to don a Ruidoso High School uniform, signed a letter of intent for the University of New Mexico (UNM) Wednesday morning at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Nunley.

Nunley, who was named to the AAA all-state football team and was selected as a member of the South All-Star Football team, also received a four-year scholarship to UNM.

In attendance at the Nunley home was UNM assistant football coach Stan Quintana, Ruidoso head football coach Darrel Stierwalt, Warrior assistant football coach Ronnie Maskew and several members of the Ruidoso football team.

Nunley, who has been a key factor in the Warriors' success the past three seasons, (they were 8-2 in 1981) played linebacker, defensive end, fullback and offensive lineman for the Warriors. Linebacker will probably be Nunley's position at UNM.

The 6-1, 200 pound, Nunley chose UNM over 20 other four-year schools.

Stierwalt, who has been head coach at Ruidoso for four years, had nothing but praise for his star athlete.

Why did he choose UNM? "I chose UNM mainly because of its high academic standards," Nunley said. "It's known for that and I also like the coaches and people at the campus."

"Lon's the best player I've coached here," he said. "In fact, he's one of the best players Ruidoso High School's ever had."

UNM, a member of the Western Athletic Conference (WAC), has academic requirements rivaled only by the Air Force Academy in that conference.

He also alternated with Chris Lopez at fullback and scored five touchdowns, three in the '82-20 victory over Deming. He also handled the extra point kicks and field goals for the Warriors. Nunley made most of his extra point attempts and kicked a 27 yard field goal.

Nunley's versatility could help him a lot at UNM.

"He could play either linebacker or tight end," Stierwalt said. "He's got good size and plenty of speed."

Although Nunley and the Warriors had many victories the past two seasons, a loss stands as the most memorable moment in his high school career.

"The game with Silver City (a 21-14 loss which cost Ruidoso the district title) was my most memorable moment in high school," he said. "It was for the title and it could have gone either way."

Although football is Nunley's first love he's also a standout track athlete.

Nunley has a best time of 11.2 in the 100-meters and is the fastest runner on Ruidoso's track team. He was a big part of the Warriors' 400 meter and 800 meter relay teams which made the state meet last year. The 400 meter relay squad finished fourth in the state meet.

The future Lobo also competes in the discus and shot put for the track team and has a throw record of 150 feet in the discus.

LON NUNLEY, Ruidoso High School football star, signs a letter-of-intent for the University of New Mexico at his home Wednesday morning. Nunley, who has been selected to the South All-Star football team, could play one of several positions for the Lobos. The Warrior star played linebacker, defensive end, fullback and offensive tackle for coach Darrel Stierwalt at Ruidoso.

Fish killed after gas runs in river

BY WILL TURBOW
Staff Writer

A study currently being conducted by the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish revealed that between 150 and 200 fish in the Rio Ruidoso have been killed due to the dumping of gasoline in the river the afternoon of February 4, said Monty Leishman of the Roswell office of the Game and Fish Department.

Leishman told The News on Wednesday that there was evidence of a fish kill. He said that he employed a measurement technique called electrofishing, which sends electric shocks into the water bringing fish to the surface, to estimate the fish population. However, he said that the water's muddy conditions just below the dumping site did not allow him to draw any clear conclusions and that he would have to retest in about a week's time.

The site of the dumping was on Mechem Drive where there is a culvert leading into the Rio Ruidoso. Leishman said that his department maintains permanent stations on the river to analyze the river's water and the animal life in the river. One such station is above the Mechem culvert, another just below the culvert and yet another farther down the river in the Paradise Canyon area.

Leishman said that testing above the culvert area showed no evidence of a fish kill. Testing in the Paradise Canyon area showed that populations were near normal. However, Leishman said that the area just below the culvert showed signs of a considerable fish loss, but he said that he would have to consult the records on that station and recheck the area later due to the turbid water which may have affected his testing.

Hari Mukhoty of the state Environmental Improvement Division (EID) in Ruidoso said that his office received an anonymous phone call about 2:30 Thursday afternoon that somebody was dumping gas into the river. "We followed up on the call immediately and the complaint was genuine," Mukhoty said.

Mukhoty said that three supposedly empty gas storage tanks of the former Exxon service station on the corner of Mechem and Sudderth Drives were being excavated, but that some gasoline remained in the tanks. The contractors excavating the tanks drained about twenty gallons of the remaining gas in the tanks onto Mechem Drive, he said. There is a storm drain there, and it is supposed that about five or six gallons ran into the river. "That was good enough to kill 100 to 200 fish," Mukhoty said.

Mukhoty said that he and his EID colleague, Jim Edwards, asked the contractors to stop the dumping and to lay soil and sand down along the road to absorb the gas before it reached the drain and ran into the river. He said the contractors complied with those orders, but that the damage had already been done.

The next day, Mukhoty said, a call from a resident living on the riverbank informed the EID that fish were dying. Edwards counted about 50 dead fish in that area, mostly rainbow and brown trout, but also other species. The fish have not been analyzed yet to determine the cause of their death. However, Mukhoty said that anything setting the dissolved oxygen level in the water off balance, like gasoline, will kill the fish, especially when the water volume is as low as it presently is in the Rio Ruidoso.

Mukhoty said that Southland Corporation is the legal owner of the lot which formerly contained the service station, and that the company hired S and J Construction of Albuquerque to tear down the service station in order to build a convenience store there. Inter-Con Construction of Albuquerque was sub-contracted by S and J Construction. Mukhoty said that it will be the responsibility of the Game and Fish Department to fine the Southland Corporation and seek compensation, if the department so decides.

contacted on the matter, but since the dumping did not seem deliberate, said Mukhoty, they will not be involved in the case. Both Mukhoty and Leishman believe that there will be no long term effect from the dumping on the river. "Some of the gas will evaporate over a period of time. Some of it will be diluted, and some will be absorbed by the shore," said Mukhoty.

Water department

"A lot of meters were not working," said Franzer. Customers whose old meters were showing zero monthly consumption are now being charged for water registered on the new meters, she explained.

Franzer added that this came as a shock to at least one customer—the owner of a nine-unit apartment complex which had been receiving free water for more than a year.

THE AMOUNT

of loss in the system, as measured by subtracting the amount of water consumed from the amount treated in the plants and pumped from Cherokee well, has been a concern of village officials for some time.

Therefore, accounting for some of the loss through faulty meters is a welcome sign.

Leaks are another ongoing problem. They are costly to the system both in water lost and time spent repairing them.

Sanchez said that reports of leaks have been coming in at a rate of two or three a day. Some are accidental breaks caused by contractors, a few are major breaks, but most are "small ones just showing up," said Sanchez.

Certain areas in the system are particularly troublesome, he pointed out. Thin-walled pipe in the section which serves the Cree Meadows golf course area averages at least one leak every week, said Sanchez.

But 8,000 feet of new six-inch plastic pipe—part of 12,900 feet authorized for purchase this week—will replace the old pipe in the golf course area. Another 1,000 feet are to be laid in a similar problem area behind Swiss Chalet, said Sanchez.

"It just won't take the pressures, especially this time of year," Sanchez said. He explained that varying soil temperatures cause the pipe to expand and contract, which causes cracking.

He noted that part of the consignment of pipe will be used to install a new six-inch line down Robin Road near Two Rivers Park. Users in that area are presently served by a two-inch line, said Sanchez, with the result that houses at the far end of the line sometimes have little or no water pressure.

This situation exists in other parts of town, according to Sanchez. Two-inch line is designed to serve eight houses at the most, he said, but in some areas it serves 30 to 40 customers.

The problem is aggravated by the fact that most of the two-inch line is galvanized iron, which begins corroding within a few years.

"It just starts closing up," said Sanchez. Circulation is also a concern of the water department. Sanchez has set rerouting and connecting of loops to eliminate dead ends as another priority.

He explained that water can collect in dead ends in the system and become stale, which gives it an unpleasant odor. Looping of water lines insures better quality and quantity by keeping water in circulation, Sanchez said.

FIRE HYDRANTS

are another ongoing concern of the department, according to the superintendent. In his December report, he noted that 13 fire hydrants were not working. Since then, he said last week, four of those have been fixed but others that are not working have been found.

Many of the faulty units are "slip on" hydrants—a type which is literally slipped on to a water line. High pressure causes these hydrants to blow out, Sanchez explained.

They are being replaced with mechanical joint hydrants which are bolted on to the water line. The replacement process takes three men an entire day, said Sanchez. He placed the cost of a new hydrant at about $800.

"We do too much work on a day to day basis—whatever comes up," said Sanchez. Asked whether the department has sufficient manpower, he said, "You could always keep another crew busy—and another and another, but it comes back to where does the money come from."

The present water department workforce is the largest ever, said Sanchez, and it is always busy.

So the department will continue to maintain and expand the village water system, taking care of problems as they arise and making improvements as time can be found.

"We're making progress," said Sanchez, "but it's going to be slow."

School land bought

Approximately 40 acres of land have been purchased for the building of the new high school, Pat Valliant, school superintendent, reported at Tuesday evening's school board meeting. Documents were signed that day, by the board vice president and secretary, executing formal proceedings on the $220,000 purchase.

The school board approved calling two special meetings, one to be held March 22 at 7:30 p.m., to call for bids for the building of the new school and one to be held April 13 at 2 p.m., to open bids. Bids will be awarded at the board's regular meeting at 7:30 p.m., April 13.

Also covered in Tuesday's meeting was a special budget hearing for approval of an increase of $89,674 in this year's budget. Valliant cited an increase in enrollment of 54 students and inflation as reasons for the increase. He said the district may need to purchase two portable buildings for next year to relieve the crowded conditions at Nob Hill Elementary School and White Mountain Middle School. White Mountain Elementary School is also crowded, Valliant said.

The board opened bids on the purchase of micro-computers and equipment for the high school, and accepted the bid of $6,225.95 submitted by Happy Hands Radio Shack in Ruidoso.

Also discussed at the meeting was the report of the North Central Association's (NCA) Evaluation team, which "was for the most part very good," said Valliant. The only complaints they did have "almost all related to space," said Tom Hansen, NCA Evaluation team member. Donald Swalander, school board vice president, expressed thanks and gratitude to the teachers and the community for their efforts and cooperation in preparing for the evaluation.

The board was advised that the portable building at the middle school is on the foundation. The electricity and gas have been installed and the carpet has been laid, according to Valliant. "There are still a few things we want to take a look at before we accept it," Valliant said.

White Mountain Middle School principal Sid Miller said, "We'd like to move in next week."

Other business covered at the meeting included:

—a decision to extend an invitation to the State School Board to hold its meeting scheduled for April 29 and 30 in Ruidoso.

—acceptance of the calendar for next school year.

—approval of hiring Glenda Farts as library aide at Nob Hill Elementary School.

—a report that the budget workshop in Albuquerque scheduled for March 25 and 26 will be attended by Valliant and Mary Hudson and Geraldine Tully, bookkeepers.

Trustees okay water project

Ruidoso trustees took action to improve the village water system in a regular meeting Tuesday night at the Village Administrative Center.

The board authorized a call for bids on improvements to water plant number one, Ruidoso's first water treatment plant, located at the Mescalero Apache Reservation boundary on the Rio Ruidoso in the Upper Canyon.

"This is to improve the filtering process," said village manager Jim Hine. The work is expected to increase the plant's water treatment capacity to 300,000 gallons a day from its present 250,000 gallons.

Trustees also authorized the purchase of materials and equipment requested by the water department. Nearly 13,000 feet of plastic pipe, a backhoe and 600 water meters were approved for purchase.

In other action, the trustees:

—Accepted the proposed location for a county substation on airport land, pending approval by the Federal Aviation Administration.

—Agreed to hear a presentation by water board member Newton Page on the proposed capital improvements program for the water system at their next meeting.

—Approved the final plat of Carrizo Lodge Condominiums.

—Approved the final plat of Deer Park Woods Condominiums.

—Approved a replat of three lots in Sleepy Hollow subdivision.

—Approved the final plat of Whispering Bluff Condominiums.

CAP forming in Ruidoso

An organizational meeting for persons interested in forming a Civil Air Patrol (CAP) squadron in Ruidoso is set for 7:30 tonight at the Ruidoso Care Center.

Colonel Lloyd Salice, commander of the New Mexico Wing of CAP, will address the meeting.

Membership in CAP is not restricted to pilots, according to organizer Dave Travis. Observers and communications and ground personnel are also needed.

For further information, contact Travis at 257-9826 or 257-2072.

Downs hosts candidates

Improving the roads, acquiring more water rights and putting the village on the sewer system were major topics addressed by candidates for Ruidoso Downs mayor and trustee Tuesday night.

The village sponsored a "Meet Your Candidate" forum at the village hall, with four mayoral candidates, three trustee candidates and one candidate for judge on hand.

Those running for mayor include incumbent Norman Wheeler; Bob Powers, current trustee; Melvin "Boots" Nelson; and J. C. Day Jr.

Mayoral candidates expressed their concern on the condition of the roads in the village, stating that nothing has been done to improve them for some time. Wheeler stated that, since there are only two city employees to conduct the needed road grading, it is difficult for them to maintain the roads.

"For four years there has been no grading done by my house. How much patience are we supposed to have?" said Day.

"I've been here many, many years and the streets were as good when I first lived here as they are now," said Nelson.

"The roads are the biggest complaint. I'd like to get the grader on the streets more," Powers said.

All of the candidates also agreed that, as the village grows, the need for water will also grow, causing more problems for the village.

"If we keep selling more water taps, we're going to have to have more water. It doesn't make sense to me to let water go out of our area, over the mountain," Day said. He was referring to a case currently taking place in the village in which a landowner wants to sell his water rights to another area.

"We need more water rights and we need more storage. We're trying to get a

Food meeting set

The state Environmental Improvement Division (EID) is sponsoring a food service sanitation school Tuesday, February 16, at the village of Ruidoso's new administration building from 1 to 4 p.m. Hari Mukhoty, head of the EID office in Ruidoso, said that the purpose of the seminar is to address people handling food on general cleanliness and food sanitation.

Other topics of discussion will include the importance of maintaining temperatures, water and food born diseases and how to control such hazards. Mukhoty said that all interested parties are welcome to attend, but anyone involved with food service should attend the food service sanitation school.

grant for a one million dollar storage area, but with the cutback on grants, it doesn't look good," Wheeler said.

Trying to get everyone on the new sewer system in the village is one of Powers' goals. "I will fight to get the rest of the city on the sewer," Powers said.

Candidates accepted questions from the gathering of approximately 50 people at the meeting concerning such things as beautifying the village, attaining more water rights and how to hook onto the new sewer system.

Jessie Charles "Jake" Harris, incumbent Lois Beavers and Lee Boyles, all running for one of the two available trustee positions, also made their speeches and handled questions from the audience.

Harris also expressed his concern about the condition of the streets in the village and said he will personally put the road grader in operable use and will operate it if necessary.

Boyles feels the streets will have to be paved eventually. "Whatever you do to the roads, it won't last one day," Boyles said. "If we don't get the money, we can't do it."

Beavers, the incumbent and current streets commissioner, said until the problem of the water washing the gravel off of the hill is corrected, "there isn't much the village can do."

"The only thing we can do is pave the streets," Beavers said. But she warned the people attending the meeting that property taxes will increase if streets are paved.

Fred Bernard, running unopposed for municipal judge, said he has always "tried to help people fairly" and will continue to do so if elected. He expressed his desire to help with the judgment of people whose dogs run loose in the village, causing maintenance problems.

Election for the municipal offices takes place March 2 at village hall.

Bonito firemen discuss territory

Redrawing of the areas served by the Ruidoso Downs and Bonito fire departments was discussed at the February 2 meeting of the Bonito Volunteer Fire Department (BVFD).

Ruidoso Downs fire chief Chet Southard said that changes in the population have made the existing boundaries obsolete and that limits presently in effect should be redrawn. Fire service boundaries between Alto and Ruidoso would also be affected, said Southard.

Don Rash of BVFD said that he is currently working on the redistricting plans, and that any final plan will have to be submitted to the Lincoln County commissioners for approval.

BVFD fire chief Howard Puckett reported that a phone-activated siren which BVFD owns may be operational within the month. The siren, which can be heard at great distances, will supplement the present telephone calling system now in use. The possibility of using a radio-activated paging system was also discussed.

The purchase of an air compressor and various pieces of equipment for vehicle maintenance was proposed at the meeting, as was the construction of a work bench and storage cabinets in the Alto station.

Reports from five BVFD members who attended the New Mexico Area Field Program in Roswell were also heard. Puckett said that he attended the management class where he was shown how to structure and organize a volunteer fire department. Larry Montero spoke on the handling of hazardous materials.

Steve Hezmail, Phil Onsrud and Ed Pennington said that they had received updated information on purchasing new equipment, including a new pumper truck. A fire department representative will be sent to the factory to personally select the vehicle and all of its equipment, said Hezmail.

Next meeting of BVFD is Tuesday, March 2. People living in Alto, Angus or Bonito are invited to attend the monthly meetings. For further information, call Puckett at 336-4513.

Aspencade alternatives discussed

Til Thompson, promoter of the Aspencade Motorcycle Convention, publicly announced Tuesday night at a gathering of local restaurant, motel and small business owners his intention not to hold the convention in Ruidoso in 1982. Thompson cited the lack of an appropriate place to hold the annual motorcycle convention as his primary reason for not putting it on this year.

Thompson said that the motorcycle convention had outgrown the community. "Last year, I had 4800 registered cyclists, but between eight and ten thousand of them showed up. I need a place four times as big as last year's," he said.

The race track had offered to let Thompson use the sales barn, said Thompson, but he added that two 60x400 foot tents would have to be set up to hold the trade show in. He said that the electrical wiring alone for four days would cost in excess of $8,000, and that he couldn't afford such an expenditure.

Thompson said that he is well acquainted with the people at Honda, but that the motorcycle company is hesitant about returning to Ruidoso because of the run down condition of the present convention center and that Honda desires 1200 square feet of exhibition room which currently does not exist in Ruidoso. "What we need is a convention center, a multi-purpose building. When we start filling up the center, we'll fill up the motels," said Thompson.

Responding to suggestions from the floor that the Aspencade Motorcycle Convention's scope be downsized to accommodate existing facilities, Thompson said that it was impossible to cut back as long as the name Aspencade is attached to the convention.

"People who come up here from last year will be disappointed and dissatisfied because it won't be the same big show.

They expect more every year. Problems will ensue, and the community will get a bad name. I'd rather do nothing than do something half-way," Thompson said.

Thompson explained to the group that there will be no Aspencade Motorcycle Convention anywhere in 1982. He said that he was contacted by some people in the state of New York who wanted to hold the convention there. However, after visiting with the potential sponsors, Thompson said that those people had not well enough researched the size of the undertaking and that motel and convention facilities were already booked for that time of year.

After being convinced of Thompson's intent not to promote the motorcycle convention this year, the businessmen in the crowd agreed that they could not afford to lose the business generated by Aspencade at a traditionally slow time of the year. "As a small businessman, I can't afford to see this thing go down the tube," said one citizen.

They were, however, convinced that many motorcyclists would in any event show up in Ruidoso at that beautiful time of the year, and that they would have to provide something for those people to do.

"Now you're on the same track that the Chamber of Commerce is on," said Bill Fugate, a Chamber board member. The idea of putting on an amateur moto-cross event was brought up. It was suggested that this would bring in competitive and sport motorcyclists, a group compatible with other motorcyclists if and when the Aspencade Motorcycle Convention is held in the future. The group formed a steering committee that would investigate other ideas to attract tourists to the area during early autumn. A meeting to further discuss the matter will be held at 7 p.m., February 16 at Hill's Pancake House. All interested parties are welcome.

MIKE PRITCHETT demonstrates on his wife Debbie Pritchett the technique used to dislodge a blocked air passage on an unconscious person. The Pritchetts were two of seventeen White Mountain Search Rescue Team (WMSAR) people who passed written and practical exam on cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) on Monday evening. WMSAR took CPR classes as part of an Altrusa Club of Ruidoso community project designed to teach as many people as possible the life saving techniques of CPR. If you club or organization is interested in learning CPR, then call Jeanie Whitwam at 257-2539.

State funding still available to vanpool commuter groups

Commuter groups can still get money from the state Highway Department to help finance purchase of vans for commuter vanpooling programs, according to Julian Roybal of the road agency's planning bureau.

Approximately $20,000 is still available for interest-free loans to groups wanting to start or expand local commuter service. Federal program guidelines allow qualified non-profit commuter groups to borrow 82 percent of vehicle acquisition costs.

The program, which uses a portion of the state's Federal Aid Primary Funds, has enabled commuter groups to buy more than 40 vans since the grant program was established in 1977.

Information about vanpooling programs and applications for the loan program can be obtained from the department's planning bureau, Post Office Box 1149, Santa Fe, New Mexico 87503. Roybal can be contacted through the department's toll-free phone, 1-800-432-4289.

Hansen joins board

Ruidoso High School principal Tom Hansen was recently named to the state board of the North Central Association (NCA), an accreditation committee for high schools.

The NCA announced their choice at the exit meeting last week after their study of the Ruidoso High School curriculum.

Hansen will be joining a committee of six other educators from throughout the state. His duties will include attending approximately 12 meetings in Albuquerque during the year and reviewing reports from member schools to determine if they should be rated "approved" or "warned."

Hansen explained that the NCA, which exists in 19 states, is a voluntary association of schools. "It fairly well insures that transcripts (of approved schools) will be accepted just about anywhere," Hansen said.

A team of educators throughout the state reviews a member school every seven years. "I have been lucky enough to have been on eight evaluation teams," Hansen said. In many cases, Hansen said a person is lucky to serve on such a team once in a lifetime.

Hansen will co-chair an evaluation team of 30-35 people in Carlsbad this month. "I hope I can use my privilege (as board member) to get my people on these teams," Hansen said.

Hansen said he enjoys going to other schools. "I learn so much, I probably bring more back with me than I give them," he said.

"I haven't done anything outstanding in my life. They (members of the NCA) took a fancy to me," Hansen said, speaking about his appointment to the position. "I've been real lucky."

Warrior track team uses new exercise

exercises are relatively new in this country. They were first used extensively by the Soviet Union in developing sprinters in the late 1960's.

BY GARY BROWN
Sports Writer

Track athletes are continually learning new exercises to improve their performances.

Ruidoso High School's track team is no exception. The Warriors are using polymetric exercises in their workouts on the football field.

What are polymetric exercises? "Polymetric exercises are designed to increase an athlete's leg muscles," said Warrior head coach Ronnie Maskew. "The athlete jumps up and down alternating on one leg at a time back and forth across the field. The muscles you use for jumping and sprinting are basically the same."

Although polymetric exercises are mainly for sprinters (100 meters to 400 meters) all the athletes on the Ruidoso track team are doing the workouts.

Polymetric exercises are new to this country but they have been used for some time by the Russians.

Valery Borzov, the Soviet Union sprinter who won the 100 meters and 200 meters at the Munich Olympics in 1972, trained on polymetric exercises.

"He (Borzov) was one of the slowest sprinters they had when he first started sprinting," Maskew said. "He started to develop and become a control sprinter after he used those exercises."

Although the Warriors don't have anybody who can match Borzov's speed yet they do have a promising corps of sprinters.

"We're strongest in the sprints," said Maskew. "Lon Nunley and Scott Neal are returning state meet veterans and we have several other promising athletes."

Included on that list are Don Nunley, Darin Smith, Robert Swanner and Eric Strobel.

"In the past we often didn't have enough guys to compete in all the relays and do well," Maskew said. "Sometimes the same guys would have to run three or four relays in a single meet. However this season we should have more depth to spread our relay runners out."

Ruidoso finished fourth in the AAA state 400 meter relay finals last year and the Warriors also made the 300 meter finals.

While those two relays were the Warriors' strong points last year, Ruidoso should also be stronger in the medley relay and the 1,600 meter relay this season.

However the Warriors are hurt by the lack of a track to practice on and lack of depth in the field events.

Still Maskew is optimistic. "We may not win any meets but we should be strong enough to do well in several events, particularly the sprints," he said. "We'll be aiming to place high in these events and getting good times."

The Warrior girls' track team hasn't started practice yet but coach Sergio Castanon (who is still coaching the girls' basketball team) has some good talent.

"We've got four or five girls who made the state meet last year who should be returning this season," Castanon said.

Rita Bob, a senior, finished fifth in the state mile run last year with a 5:09 mark. With any normal improvement she could break the 5:00 mark this year.

Valeria Garcia, a 400 meter runner, is another talented prospect. She's only a sophomore and also runs on the 1,600 meter relay team.

Other top athletes are Deanna Peso, Jackie Jefferson and Jenny Delhotel. Peso, a mile, could push Bob this season. Peso was one of the top 10 milers in the state last year.

Ruidoso's first meet of the season is March 11 at Artesia. Goddard of Roswell and the New Mexico Military Institute will also compete in the meet.

LON NUNLEY of the Ruidoso High School track team runs some laps around the Warrior football field during Wednesday's practice. Nunley, a sprinter and weightman, should score a lot of points for the Warriors this season. Ruidoso opens the season at Artesia March 11.

Sierra Blanca holds races twice a week

Sierra Blanca Ski Resort has National Standard Races (NASTAR) every Wednesday and Sunday.

The races are run on a handicap format. Before the start of the race a top skier from the resort tests the course and compares his time to that of any particular world-class skier. The rest of the skiers in the race are thus given handicaps in relation to the top local skier's time.

Skiers from all age groups and each sex compete in the races and are given handicaps based on their ages and the performance of the skier who tested the course.

The races give amateur skiers on any level a chance to compete and win medals for their performances in their particular age group.

The races begin at 10:30 a.m., each day of the competition. Skiers from all parts of the southwest compete in the races.

The Ruidoso News

SPORTS

Around Sports

with Gary Brown

Although winter is still with us, the sounds of starters' guns and the strained huffing and puffing of runners circling the track will soon be heard.

Ruidoso High School's track team started workouts this week and its first meet is only a month away.

The Warriors don't have a great deal of depth and they lack a track to practice on, so hopes of winning the district 3-AAA team championship are not that great.

Track is basically an individual sport, however, and the Warriors are not lacking in talent, particularly in the sprints.

Lon Nunley and Scott Neal should be two of the top sprinters in the district and they should give Ruidoso some fine 400-meter and 800-meter relay teams.

Distance running, however, is perhaps the best example of the individual in track.

I competed in the mile and two-mile in high school. Although I was not a standout, I have a lot of memories of what a distance runner goes through before, during and after a race.

Because of the long distance of the race (particularly in the two-mile), I was usually in a high state of nerves before the race. I would think about the distance, how I would feel at the end and how I would do against my competitors.

Once the race started I relaxed a bit, but the idea of running in front of a crowd was usually unsettling to me.

Most outstanding long distance runners get excited by a crowd and can get loose during the race. I couldn't, which was probably the main reason why I never finished higher than third in any one race.

But the end of the race was something that always brought mixed emotions to me.

As I crossed the finish line I'd usually be exhausted. At the same time I'd always be relieved that the race was over.

The races were almost always of an individual nature to me. Sometimes before a race those of us who would run in a particular race would gather together and talk about our opponents.

However we wouldn't really discuss team racing for points. Only the top high school runners did that and our high school team was definitely lacking in top-quality talent.

The highlight of my track career in high school came when I ran against one of the top two-milers in California high school circles.

Although I didn't place in that race, I was so psyched up I finished with my best time—even though the weather was rainy and the race was run on a poor track.

It was a three-way meet and our team had already clinched last place when the two-mile rolled around.

So personal performance more than ever was the primary concern in my mind.

The race started out and one of the runners from our team took the lead in the first 200 yards. He was setting a very strong pace, much stronger than he was capable of maintaining for the rest of the race.

There were nine runners in the race and I was eighth at the end of the second lap. The runner from our school who had set the strong early pace then slowed virtually to a walk and fell behind me and a runner from another school.

I moved up to fifth at the end of the fourth lap and had visions of a time around 18 minutes and 20 seconds, far better than my personal best.

All of a sudden the all-state runner started to make his move from sixth place. He passed me within seconds midway through the sixth lap and took the lead at the end of the seventh lap, putting up a furious pace going into the last 400 yards. I had nothing left going into the last lap. I couldn't even see the runners ahead of me clearly. All I wanted to do was finish the race and get some rest.

I had fallen back to eighth place entering the final lap but all of a sudden I got the desire to try and catch the guy just ahead of me. He had beaten me in three previous races and he seemed to have my number.

With one final surge I struggled to catch him. With 10 yards left, I edged by him and beat him by inches, breaking my personal best time by four seconds.

The results meant, nothing to the team scoring. The all-state runner had run one of his slowest times of the year and a lot of the people watching the meet were disappointed in his time.

It was, however, the finest moment of my brief and mediocre athletic career. I had struggled against my own physical agony and conquered the pain.

That's really the story of the long distance runner—running by himself against the obstacles of life.

RICHARDSON STANDOUT IN LOSS

Roswell rolls past Warriors, 63-38

Despite a fine performance by Bill Richardson the Ruidoso High School boys' varsity basketball team fell to visiting Roswell 63-38 Tuesday night in a non-district game.

Richardson scored 20 points but no other Warrior scored in double figures.

The Warriors tried to control the tempo of the game in the early going and were trailing by four points at 9-5 at the end of the first period.

Ruidoso worked for the good shot when it had the ball but the Coyotes, an AAAA team, used their quickness and jumping ability to gradually pull away from the Warriors.

The Warriors trailed at 11-7 early in the second quarter before Peter Garcia sank a short jumper to pull Ruidoso within two points.

However, the visitors scored five straight points to take a 16-9 lead and led comfortably from then on. With four minutes remaining in the period Roswell led 20-15 before outscoring the Warriors 15-2 for a 35-17 halftime advantage.

It was more of the same in the third quarter as the Coyotes used the scoring and rebounding of Tommy Byrd to increase their margin. Roswell poured 20 points through the hoop to 10 for the Warriors to lead 55-27 entering the fourth period.

The Warriors did outscore the visitors

11-9 in the final stanza but Roswell had control of the contest by then.

Besides Richardson's 20 points 6-4 Steve Sluder added nine points for the Warriors. Other Ruidoso scorers were Garcia with four points, Scott Neal with three and Marc Delholal with two.

Byrd led the winners with 18 points and Reggie Cheadle added 15.

"We were just outmanned," said Warrior head coach Barry Nelson. "They have a good team and they played better than the first time we played them (when Roswell won 75-68 on its court) as they showed more discipline."

Nelson was upset about the Warriors' free throw shooting.

"We try and shoot for 60 percent of our free throw shots," he said. "However, I don't think we even made that tonight and 60 percent isn't very good free throw shooting."

Despite the loss Nelson praised the play of Richardson.

"He played very well," Nelson said of Richardson. "He's improving and is really coming around."

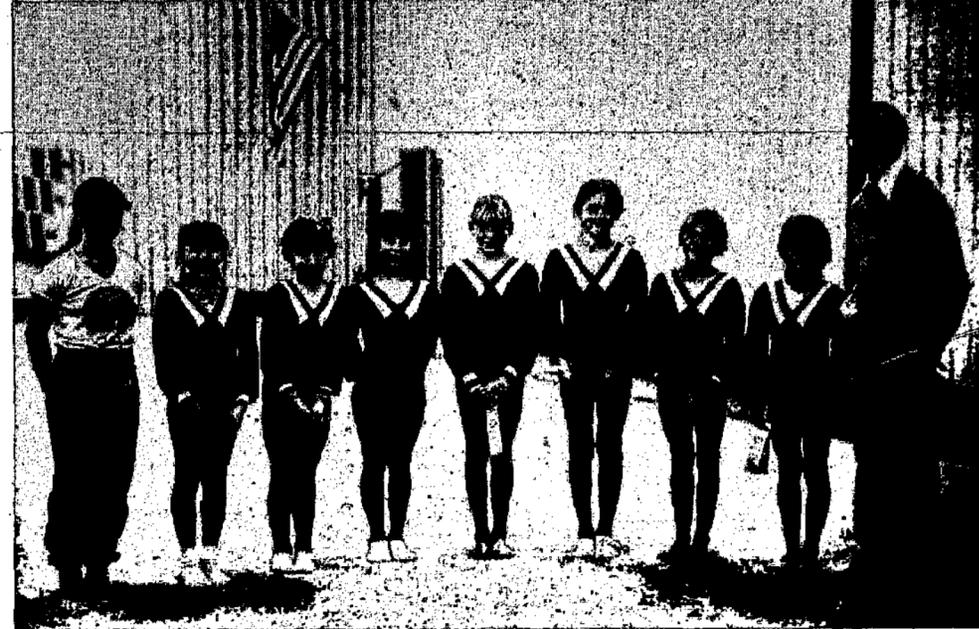

Saturday the Warriors host Cobre in a district 3-AAA game.

Cobre is 2-3 in district play as is Ruidoso. However the Warriors are only 4-13 overall compared to Cobre's 8-9 record.

"I don't know much about Cobre this year," said Nelson. "I do know we have to shoot better at the line than we did tonight."

The Warriors will tangle with Cobre at 7:30, following the boys' junior varsity and girls varsity games. The boys' junior varsity game will start the day's action at 4 p.m.

Following the Cobre game the Warriors will have four district contests remaining before the district tournament March 4-6 at Cobre.

THE MOUNTAINTOPS, the competition team for the Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy, is nearing the end of its season. Only the state meet Saturday, February 20, at Albuquerque is left on the schedule. Members of the team include (from left) Charlene Hickson

(also assistant coach), Daphnye Duncan, Amy Thornton, Stephanie Garms, Hillary Heid, Karen Gann, Amy Richardson, Angela Jones and head coach John Eberle.

THREE MAKE STATE MEET

Mountaintops gymnasts continue improvement in district competition

After watching his team finish third in the district meet last Saturday, Mountaintops gymnastics coach John Eberle likes the progress his athletes have shown recently.

"In the last two weeks before the district meet all of our athletes seemed to peak," Eberle said. "Everybody has really improved this season."

The Mountaintops, who represent the Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy (RGA), scored 121.35 points at the district meet in Alamogordo. The Mesilla Valley Gymnastics Club of Las Cruces won the meet with 138.00 points and the Sunkids of Alamogordo were second with 131.00 points. Roswell was fourth and last with 111.00 points.

Three Mountaintop athletes have qualified for the state meet in Albuquerque February 20.

Amy Thornton, who was the Mountaintops' leading point-maker last Saturday; Angela Jones and Hillary Heid will all compete in the state meet.

A minimum of 90 points in the all-around competition for one meet is required to qualify for the state meet. Both Thornton and Jones have surpassed that mark several times this season. Heid scored 30.35 points in district competition meet to qualify for the state meet.

Thornton scored 31.65 points Saturday to finish third in the all-around competition. Jones was sixth with 29.95 points.

No Mountaintop athlete took a first place in an individual event but Thornton and Jones placed in several events.

Thornton was third in the free exercise with an 8.05 total and second in the balance beam with a 7.95 score. She was also fifth in the vault and sixth in the uneven bars.

Jones was fourth in the vault with a 7.90 score, fifth in the balance beam with a 7.35 total and sixth in the vault with a 7.80 score. Amy Richardson failed to qualify for the state meet but she did still did well at the district level.

Richardson finished fourth in the free exercise with a 7.65 total and was sixth in the balance beam with a 7.00 score. She had a 28.40 all-around score, her highest of the season.

Karen Gann was a standout in the free exercise, scoring 7.55.

Stephanie Garms and Daphnye Duncan did not qualify for the district tournament but are only in their first year of competition and should improve considerably in the future, Eberle said.

The state meet will be hosted by the Gold Cup Gymnastics Club of Albuquerque at Del Norte High School.

Ruidoso wrestlers compete in Institute tournament

Ruidoso High School's wrestling team will compete in the New Mexico Military Institute (NMMI) Tournament Saturday.

The Warriors, who finished second in the Cobre Tournament last weekend, should be in the running for the team championship again.

Ruidoso will be paced by senior Doug Schmidt, who has won three tournament championships this season.

Schmidt, a 126 pounder, has won most of his matches this season by lopsided margins. In the Cobre Tournament Schmidt captured the championship match by a 15-5 margin.

Other top Ruidoso wrestlers are sophomore Scott Ciratolo in the 167 pound division, Henry Rus in the 119 pound class, Wade Torres in the 145 pound division, Ray Montes in the 105 pound division, sophomore Gary Burgess in the 185 pound class and Ronald Bell at heavyweight.

Ciratolo won the 167 pound title at Cobre and Burgess finished second. Impressive performances for sophomores.

"Both are very good wrestlers," said Warrior head coach Gerald Ames. "They could rank with the best we've had here before they're through."

Montes, Rus, Torres and Bell have been consistent throughout the season. Torres is coming off a shoulder injury but should be in top condition soon.

The district 3-AAA tournament will be held February 20 at the New Mexico School for the Visually Handicapped in Alamogordo.

Ruidoso girls host Cobre

Ruidoso High School's girls' varsity and junior varsity basketball teams will host Cobre Saturday in district 3-AAA competition.

The varsity Warriors, 3-13 on the season, are coming off a 57-37 loss to Deming last Saturday.

Despite the loss to Deming the Warriors showed improvement as they played the Wildcats evenly in the second half.

Seniors Claudia Branum and Bridget Alamager have played well for the Warriors in recent games. Guard Tammy Valdez led the Ruidoso scoring against Deming with 13 points. Lillian Lopez and 6-4 center Jan Huey did well in the Deming contest.

The junior varsity Warriors have won two straight after losing their first 10 games of the season. Saturday the Warriors nipped Deming 31-30.

The junior Warriors consist of one sophomore and the rest freshmen and that youth and inexperience has hurt them in some games this season. However, in the past two games the Warriors have shown improved shooting and have played mistake-free ball.

Freshmen Gia Rose and Erin Rad had 11 and 10 points, respectively for the Warriors in the victory over Deming.

The junior varsity game will begin at 4 p.m., with the varsity game at 5:30 p.m. The boys' varsity game with Cobre will start at 7:30 p.m.

Shane Watts in national handicapped ski finals

Shane Watts, 16, a former Ruidoso resident now attending high school at the Taos Christian Academy, has qualified for the Handicapped Skiers' National Finals March 26-April 3 in Winter Park, Colorado.

Watts, a skier with one leg, had the fourth fastest time in a qualifying meet Sunday and Monday in Vail, Colorado.

"Shane's been skiing for five years now," said his mother, Judy Miller, Ruidoso. "He's won medals in national competition before but this is the first time he's had to compete in qualifying meets in order to reach the national finals."

The Vail meet was an open affair, with men, women and different age groups competing. However, the national meet in Winter Park will be divided into divisions.

ATTENTION STUDENTS!

Any student wishing to ride a bus to the ski area on Tuesdays, make a reservation at the Holiday Inn. We must have 14 riders in order to make the trip. Cost is $8.00 per student.

UNM biologists probing past

In the basement of the University of New Mexico (UNM) biology building, four women are opening an unusual window on to the past.

By bringing together seemingly unrelated technical specialties, these women are increasing our understanding of Southwestern cultures dating back thousands of years.

Mollie S. Toll, Anne C. Cully, Karen H. Clary and Marcia L. Donaldson are the founders and primary staff members of the UNM ethnobotany laboratory, a lab which combines the discipline of ethnobotany, archeology and botany.

Ethnobotany examines previous human cultures in terms of the plants that were available and their uses. Through laboratory tests, ethnobotanists can help determine such things as whether an archeological site was inhabited throughout the year or only seasonally; what the diet of the people consisted of and how this changed over time; what agricultural activities people engaged in, and the kinds of environmental disturbances which influenced life in a particular place and time.

For example, analyses of pollen from Chaco Canyon reveal that late Anasazi-Period inhabitants were eating mainly cultivated plants and managed and semicultivated field weeds. Locally grown wild edible plants were also available.

"When compared to two other Anasazi sites of similar size and about the same period of time, there is great similarity not only in the kinds of plants found but also in their frequencies of occurrence," Clary said. "This indicates little variety in the basic subsistence of the Anasazi people from these sites."

Comparison of the Chaco samples through time, however, reveals that little or no cultivation took place either during the Archaic period or the later Navajo occupation beginning in the 17th century. "It appears people from these periods were making use of mostly wild collectible plant foods such as grasses, as well as game," she said.

Plant remains may also help date an archeological site. An example of this involves the number of rows of kernels on corn cobs found at a site.

"Row number is an attribute which has received considerable attention, as it is easily observed and is not subject to distortion or shrinkage as are size measurements," Toll said.

Ethnobotany studies also point out differences in the way some ancient structures were used. In kiva hearths, very few remains were found, the majority of which were juniper twigs. The hearths of inhabited rooms, however, yielded much larger quantities of plant remains and included many more burned seeds, particularly from economically important plants.

"It would appear that hearths in living quarters were used most often as a focus for food processing activities as well as a receptacle for food processing debris swept from around the room," Toll said. "Kiva hearths, on the other hand, may have functioned more frequently in ceremonial or medicinal contexts, and as a source of warmth."

Ethnobotanists use a variety of techniques to discover what plant remains are present in an archeological site and how they were used.

One method of separating plant parts from soil samples is flotation. "The technique takes advantage of the simple principle that organic materials, particularly charred ones, tend to be less dense than water and will either float or remain in suspension," Toll said. "Particularly when the soil contains a high proportion of sand, the sand particles sink rapidly in water, thus affording a clean separation of materials."

Plant remains are found in such archeological features as hearths, trash mounds and mealing bins. Pollen and small plant parts can also be washed from the insides of pots and metates — concaved stones used for grinding maize. But one of the best indications of what was actually being eaten at a site is to study plant remains in preserved human feces, or fossil excrement called coprolite.

Many times, the various types of analyses performed in the lab are complementary in that together they tell more than would each type of analysis if performed singularly.

"All of the methods have their limitations and they all give a skewed picture of things for one reason or another," Toll said. "You need to put them together and fill in the holes that one method is going to leave with data gained from another method."

In this respect, the UNM ethnobotany lab, which is the main lab of its kind currently in the state and one of only a handful throughout the nation, has an edge on many of its competitors.

"Between us, we do all the aspects of ethnobotanical work," Cully said. "We're all in the same place. We can coordinate our efforts and use each other's results."

"I think we're very fortunate. I think we're the right four people at the right time. It's a real fortuitous combination."

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

Abraham Lincoln's Birthday
This message is being sent to you on February ten, and will reach you on February eleven, the eve of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, born February twelve, 1809, in a log cabin on a farm in Kentucky.

The life of Lincoln has special meaning to America and to the world because of his rise from the most humble of beginnings to become not only one of our greatest Presidents but also a world figure whose stature in world history increases with time.

Lincoln is our traditional living proof that in America a person may rise to the heights of greatness in spite of starting out in a life of poverty — that all the human spirit asks is for the door of opportunity to be open wide to all.

It is fitting that this man who rose from the depths of poverty and hardship should be the one to guide this nation through its greatest crisis.

His Great strength
Abraham's physical strength is legendary. In height he was six feet, three, tied for second place with Lyndon Johnson in height of Presidents, the tallest being George Washington, at six feet, four.

There is an old print here in the house of "Honest Abe" as a young man, resting at noon, sitting upon a stack of rails, his axe by his side, while he reads a book.

In those days fences were made of rails, so that a rail splitter was much in demand. The rails were of oak or hickory or some such hard wood, about twelve to fourteen feet long. A log usually a foot and a half to two feet in diameter was used for the rails. Lincoln needed only three blows with the axe to make four rails.

In all the feats of strength on the frontier, Lincoln was easily the winner. Along with his almost super human physical strength, Lincoln possessed a mind to match, and a spirit also. His thirst for knowledge knew no bounds; and his moral character was admired throughout his neighborhood, and later throughout the nation, which gave him the name "Honest Abe."

His outstanding characteristic was a devout nature and an abiding compassion for his fellow man and for all creatures.

At the close of the Civil War he said, "With malice toward none and with charity for all, let us bind up the wounds of the Nation..."

His Gettysburg Address is universally acclaimed as one of the greatest utterances in any language, not only in the importance of its content; but also for the power, the beauty, and the inspiration of the writing.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us — that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion — that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

DR. JAMES BEALL, Ruidoso, has been named by Governor Bruce King to a term on the State Judicial Council ending December 31, 1985. Beall, a past president of the New Mexico Dental Association, has been a council member since 1969.

Dear editor:

You can't run a business without planning. This has been attempted by the Ruidoso Village management for many years without success.

This whole attitude can be changed by someone who has proven over many years an ability to make plans and carry them out.

In my own business, as well as with several corporations, plans were made and executed. This was a normal operation and not an exception to the rule. To do less meant failure to reach objectives and the loss of your job.

Why should the village operation be any different?

Lodgers hear White, Davis MLS board

Mayoral candidates George White and Lloyd L. Davis Jr., said that they favored the construction of a large convention center for the village of Ruidoso, in speaking to the Ruidoso Lodgers Association's (RLA) monthly meeting on Tuesday.

White said that at least some of the revenues collected from the two percent lodger's tax could go into the construction of a convention center. "Conventions don't pay for convention centers, though," said White, "An outlay of money is needed to build and maintain it."

White said that soon the new airport would be up on the mesa and that the present airport site would be suitable for such a convention center. Housing and Urban Development (HUD) must first approve of the use of that land for a convention center, said White, but since both a municipal and county building will soon be on that site, approval may come easier.

Davis said that the lodger's tax would generate about $90,000 this year and more next year. However, he said that current state legislation dictates that at least 25 percent of those tax funds must be used for advertising Ruidoso.

"We have been the victims of the advertising men of the world," said Davis, "and we still have a mid-week gap." He said that the remaining $67,500 might be better spent for the debt retirement of a convention facility. "That would be a step in the right direction of achieving a center," said Davis.

In RLA-business, members voted to request from the Lodger's Tax Committee that the $12,500 of lodger's tax presently going to the debt retirement of the auditorium in the new village hall be cut off after 1982. The Lodger's Tax Com-tee must seek approval from the village council. The lodgers are seeking the termination of the $12,500 of the tax money they collect now going to the debt retirement of the auditorium because they believe that those funds are not directly related to bringing tourists to Ruidoso.

The RLA will request the Lodgers Tax Committee to investigate agents renting condominiums on a nightly and weekly basis who do not collect the lodger's tax. The RLA membership does not feel that it is fair for those agents to provide a service very similar to their motel service and not collect the tax.

One member said that motel business is being taken away from her because condominium agents can offer accommodations at a six percent discount since they do not collect the lodger's tax.

Although the RLA board of directors and the membership said that they would like an Aspenada, with motorcyclists, they realize that no Aspenada Motorcycle Convention will be put on by Tim Thompson this year. However, the RLA feels that some motorcyclists will still come to Ruidoso and that something must be done to entertain the village's visitors.

Therefore, it was moved that the RLA sponsor a motorcycle poker rally with prizes and manpower supplied by the RLA. It is felt that this will continue to draw motorcyclist to the area in early October, a traditionally slow time of the year for local businessmen.

The RLA also decided to lend whatever support necessary to the Chamber of Commerce in sponsoring a motorcycle convention in the future, such as going before the Lodgers Tax Committee to obtain money to fund a motorcycle convention.

MLS board hears Junge

Stressing the need for more planning at village hall, J. A. "AJ" Junge, candidate for village trustee, Tuesday morning addressed the Multiple Listing Service Committee (MLS) of the Board of Realtors.

Tom Kelham, representing a group of local businessmen, introduced Junge as a man who shares their convictions about growth and progress for Ruidoso.

Junge related to MLS his experience in the business world. "I've been a businessman all of my life, and I'm an egotist. But, you have to be to get the job done," Junge said.

Junge said that more planning is needed to govern future growth in the village.

"There is no long range planning. I've yet to see anyone make a plan for the future," said Junge.

Under MLS business, Board of Realtors president Janet Warlick-Pearson said that a unit at Mystic Pines has been selected to serve as Board of Realtors headquarters. The contract would be subject to the approval of the membership.

Warlick-Pearson said that ten rooms upstairs could serve as offices and that a large area downstairs would be suitable for seminars and business meetings. Not all of the upstairs rooms would be needed by the board, said Warlick-Pearson, and she added that some would be rented, making the purchase of the facility economically feasible.

The building is priced at $145,000, she said. A down payment of $12,500 would be submitted with the balance being paid off at a 12 percent interest rate.

Wayne Whitlock reported that a new New Mexico Real Estate Commission regulation requiring that property management accounts be separated from all other trust or escrow accounts will go into effect in two to six months. The real estate commission, said Whitlock, is very strict on the issue of commingling of accounts and it has the power to freeze accounts. He said that the regulation is a good housekeeping measure on the part of the commission and suggested that local realtors begin setting up separate property management accounts.

New snow good for skiing, water

From seven to 12 inches of new snow in the high country of Lincoln National Forest this past week should increase essential water yields this spring and summer. In the meantime, skiing and winter sports conditions are excellent.

Visitors to the forest are asked to check on current weather, driving conditions and fuelwood areas by calling the districts. Telephone numbers are: Smokey Bear at Ruidoso, 257-4095; Cloudcroft, 682-2551; Guadalupe at Carlsbad, 885-4181; and Mayhill, 687-3411. For skiing conditions, call 257-9001 at Sierra Blanca Ski Area, or 682-2587 at Ski Cloudcroft.

On the Smokey Bear District at Ruidoso, Three Rivers Campground is open. Roads are snowpacked. Fuelwood areas are inaccessible.

Cloudcroft Ranger District has reopened the Silver Snowplay area. Upper Karr Canyon is open and the parking area is cleared. U.S. 82 through Cloudcroft is open, but all back roads are snowpacked and icy with chains advised. Fuelwood areas are closed.

Fuelwood areas are open on the Guadalupe Ranger District. Caving activity is moderate. Road and trail conditions are good. Sitting Bull Falls Picnic Area is closed. Visitors are asked to stay aware of rapidly changing weather conditions and gusty winds.

Roads are muddy on the Mayhill District. Fuelwood areas are closed. James Canyon Campground is open.

Sherrie Faulkner, of Hobbs, on left, received two round trip airplane tickets to Las Vegas from Dan King at last Saturday night's Junior Ski Racers, Casino Party. The tickets were donated to the Junior Sk

Racers to help raise money at their Casino Party. A total of $3,121 was collected at the party. Faulkner said, "I had a great time, plus, it went to a good cause."

Boots Nelson candidate for Downs mayor

A former board of trustees member and long time resident of Ruidoso Downs has announced his candidacy for mayor.

Melvin "Boots" Nelson believes that the village needs to "get behind city hall" to solve problems and accomplish goals in the village.

"If you don't get behind city hall, we will be flushed right down with the sewer," Nelson said. "This is your town, not mine, if I'm elected."

Nelson said there are several problems the village is facing and "the situation is getting out of hand."

He then mentioned the problem with drunk drivers in the area who he said are "going to kill our kids. It's going to take someone who is not afraid to step on someone's toes."

"Ruidoso Downs is a pedestal. It can be the most recognized little town in the world."

Municipal elections will take place March 2 at the Ruidoso Downs Municipal Building.

MELVIN "BOOTS" NELSON

Lois Beavers

Lois Beavers candidate for Downs trustee

Lois Beavers, current Ruidoso Downs trustee and 52 year resident of the village, has announced she will again run for one of the two openings on the village board.

As commissioner of the village streets department, Beavers said, "We have done our best. We get a lot of water on the hill when it rains. It washes out on the highway, we gather it up and when it rains again, the same thing happens."

She added that paving the streets is the only answer to improvement of the streets in the village.

Beavers has spent four years as a village trustee, has attended all of the municipal league meetings in Santa Fe since she has been a trustee and attended two highway corridor meetings.

"Our city is in good shape. We have equipment and it is all paid for," Beavers said.

Beavers and her husband own a sand and gravel company in Ruidoso Downs.

Land use certificates required

Planning and Zoning Enforcement Officer John Cupp issued a reminder this week that a land use certificate must be issued by his office before land can be altered from its natural state.

The village ordinance requiring a land use certificate "before turning one shovel of earth or cutting one tree" applies to land that has not been previously developed, Cupp said.

Land use certificates may be obtained from Cupp at the Village Administrative Center. Violation of the ordinance requiring a certificate carries a $300 fine and up to a 90 day jail sentence.

WMSAR team attends class

Nine members of White Mountain Search and Rescue (WMSAR) recently participated in a one day training session on an emergency locator transmitter, a device which sends a radio signal from a downed aircraft.

Members attending the session in Santa Fe were Roger Coble, Rick Ford, Kathy Mathis, Clenton Pritchett, Mike Pritchett, Steve Sandoval, Dave Travis, Alden Deyo and Toby Wilson.

WMSAR owns two direction finders, the devices which receive emergency transmitter signals.

"Our two teams are now capable of responding to an emergency locator transmitter distress signal anywhere in the southern part of the state," a WMSAR spokesman said.

Voters of Ruidoso:

It is your responsibility to elect proper representation to YOUR City Council with such major issues facing our community...

- 1) Good streets.
- 2) More water to keep up with our rapid growth.
- 3) Continued growth of Ruidoso.

These issues must be dealt with headon. We must have creative thinking and take positive action NOW.

With YOUR vote of support WE can make it happen.

Second income an important consideration

If both you and your spouse work, you might think that would supply enough financial resources to pay debts and save money, too. But ask your self how effectively that second income is used? Inflation has made two-income families commonplace, but that second salary, said the New Mexico Society of Certified Public Accountants (CPA), has created a need for effective, agreed-upon money management.

A problem to affluent young couples, CPAs said is their lack of proper record-keeping. Look at your system of payment. If you feel comfortable—and you know where your money goes—when you use a joint account for bill paying and spending money, that system might work for you. But CPAs said, too often joint accounts lead to overspending.

On the other hand, separate accounts help fix the notion of "his" and "her" money. CPAs suggest separate accounts if each spouse feels the need for personal discretionary money. In this situation, however, a joint account should also be kept to pay expenses for groceries, child-care and utilities. Contributing to a joint account should not leave a partner unable to pay personal expenses.

In either case, CPAs note, a spouse should realize how much he or she is spending, as well as how much is spent jointly. Although it isn't a comparison of spending habits, every one—married or single—should keep track of cash.

Once you know how much you are spending, take the opportunity to review your budget. Because both of you work, you may be spending more than is necessary. For example, evaluate how much you spend monthly on transportation and dining out. While your budget should allow some flexibility for spending, you should not be using both paychecks for daily expenses. Base your budget on records of recent spending.

As the same time that you are deciding how much to spend, also decide how much to save. Your financial plan, CPAs said, should include a general emergency fund that offers a cash reserve deep enough to defray three to six months of expenses. Although you certainly want higher interest on these funds than a savings account may offer, you would also require liquidity without the expensive penalty for withdrawal.

You might also want to start putting money away for major purchases. Experts say that affluent couples are often plagued by the desire to consume what they have rationalized as investments. If that's your problem, then save toward such investments as a second home, rather than buying consumer goods on credit.

Tax shelters protect your money from taxes. While some shelters lose money initially, other investments are less risky, and earn profits from the outset. To protect your earnings, look into forming a limited partnership with your spouse. Such an entity allows you to declare business losses and expenses.

Let's look at the purchase of a home. While a jointly-owned home belongs to neither spouse, it does provide a tax basis if it is sold after the death of one spouse. Under the new laws a jointly-owned residence is apportioned equally and, at the death of one spouse, the survivor inherits half the home. If she or he then sells the home, the capital gain is figured on half the original price and half the gain.

A Black Dog. In 18th century English slang was a counterfeit shilling.

A Fire Spaniel. In 19th century British military slang, was a soldier who enjoyed lingering around the fireplace in the barracks.

"The more I see of the representatives of the people, the more I adore my dogs." (Alphonse DeLamantine, 1790-1869, French statesman and poet.)

"A dog starved at his master's gate predicts the ruin of the state." (William Blake, 1757-1827)

"I am quite sure he thinks I am God—since he is God on whom each one depends, for life and all things that His bounty sends—my dear dog, most constant of all friends." (William Crosswell Doane, 1832-1913)

"Let Hercules himself do what he may, the cat will meow and dog will have his day." (William Shakespeare, Hamlet)

"Oh dogs," "Doggone it," "Fightin' like cats and dogs," "Rainin' cats and dogs," "Gone to the dogs," "Work like a dog."

Social Security information

As a result of legislation enacted in mid-1981, Social Security student benefits will be phased out for those attending post-secondary schools.

When student benefits were first provided in 1965, the rationale was that young people, 18 to 22 years of age, who were full-time students were as much dependent on their parents for their support as were children under 18 years of age or disabled. It was assumed at the time that students lost a source of support when a parent retired, became disabled, or died. However, the benefits were not related to any educational expenses incurred, to school performance, or to financial needs.

The situation today is markedly different from what it was 15 years ago. Since that time, a number of programs have been established to provide assistance to college students based on their own and their families' financial condition. Among the Federally funded educational programs now available are the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, National Direct Student Loan Program, and Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

The change in the law will affect about 600,000 post-secondary school student beneficiaries—65 percent in four-year colleges and 23 percent in two-year colleges. The remainder attend technical, graduate, and business or secretarial schools.

The new law defines an educational institution as an elementary or secondary school. Benefits will not be paid to students who begin attending a post-secondary school after April 1982.

Benefits to students who were entitled as of August 1981 and were attending a post-secondary school before May 1982 will be phased out in order to minimize the financial impact on those whose plans for pursuing their education were based on receipt of Social Security benefits.

Additional information about changes in the law regarding educational benefits can be obtained from any Social Security Office.

The Social Security office in Roswell is located in the Federal Building at Fifth and Richardson. The telephone number is 622-7785.

DIRECTOR OF NURSING, Mary Lou Brown, on left, and Ken Moore, RHHV executive administrator, pose with the new surgi-bed. The bed can flip patients in traction over from their backs to their stomachs without harming the patient nor wasting precious surgery time.

JOE NAJERA, supervisor of the radiology department, shows off the ultra-sound machine that was installed in his department in December. The machine creates moving pictures of the functioning of internal organs. It is used primarily for obstetric patients.

Hospital shows off its brand new equipment

The Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital (RHHV) recently acquired ultra modern equipment that may save people in the community time, money and travel, according to Ken Moore, RHHV executive administrator.

The respiratory and electrocardiograph (ECG) department has received several pieces of medical equipment that will allow diagnosis of patients from Lincoln County at RHHV rather than sending them to larger hospitals in other cities.

One such machine is a mini computer-assisted treadmill with a blood pressure cuff attachment. It will be used in conjunction with the ECG machine which the hospital already had, said cardiopulmonary technologist Brent Tullis. The new device cost approximately $10,000 and was purchased with the hospital's general operating funds.

Dr. Lance Kirkegaard explained that the advantage of the treadmill being attached to the ECG is that a person experiencing chest pain might take a regular ECG, but nothing would show up if that person was lying still.

"However, in response to exercise, there may be classic changes on the ECG which will unmask cardio-arterial disease," said Kirkegaard.

The treadmill takes a patient through seven stages, each lasting three minutes. As the stages progress, the speed of the treadmill increases from 1.7 mph in stage one to 6.7 mph in stage seven.

The pitch of the treadmill also increases from a ten percent grade in stage one to a 22 percent grade in stage seven. Only trained athletes can make it all the way through the test without having to stop, said Kirkegaard. Bill Carpenter, head of the respiratory and ECG department, said that the average person gives out during stage four.

Throughout the exercise, the electrical activity of the heart can be seen on the department's new oscilloscope. This is done by attaching stress electrodes to the chest and extremities.

The old type of electrodes were taped onto the body, fell off regularly during tests and did not always give uniform testing, said Tullis. The hospital's new electrodes are built into an adhesive circle which sticks to the sweatiest of bodies and are applied with a special drill which eliminates impedance. This makes for more accurate testing, said Tullis.

Also new to the respiratory and ECG department is an electro-encephalogram (EEG), which measures the electrical activity of the brain. Twenty-one electrodes are attached to specified areas of the head to diagnose epilepsy and to assess amounts of brain damage in trauma cases, said Tullis.

Because not everyone experiences heart symptoms in the presence of their doctor, said Tullis, a tape recorder-like machine has been purchased by RHHV for the respiratory and ECG department. The Holter monitor is a three channel electrical cardiograph that is worn by a heart patient for 24 hours. It records heart activity, and if the patient experiences heart palpitations or any other heart symptoms, he or she pushes a black button which marks that episode on the tape. That, along with a diary kept by the patient of his or her daily activity, can aid a doctor in determining the cause and extent of heart disease, said Tullis.

Tullis said the Holter monitor cost RHHV about a thousand dollars. He explained that instead of sending patients to Albuquerque to be tested, now just the data will have to be sent out of town.

An ultra-sound machine was delivered to the radiology department in mid-December. Joe Najera, supervisor of the department, said that sound waves are bounced off internal organs, creating echoes that delineate the images of those organs. He said that the computer-assisted machine's greatest asset is that it employs harmless sound waves instead of invasive radiation.

The $58,000 ultra-sound machine was purchased with money from the 1980 mill levy. The hospital's auxiliary group, the Pink Ladies, donated $15,500 toward the machine.

Najera said that the machine is used primarily for obstetric patients. It is used for determining how old a fetus is, locating the placenta, defining abnormalities, estimating the weight of a fetus and determining the sex of the fetus.

A special device called a transducer may be used in conjunction with the ultra-sound machine to monitor the actual mechanical activities of the heart, as opposed to the electrical activities of the heart which the ECG monitors. The transducer is a medical diagnostic sonar apparatus that allows any heart valve disease to be seen and readily diagnosed, said Tullis.

Tullis said that when the transducer is used with the ultra-sound machine in a process called echocardiography, doctors can map out the amount of damage done by heart attacks. He also said that physicians will be able to tell how much blood is being circulated throughout the heart and at what rate.

"We'll be able to do anything cardiac. We will be the only hospital in our hospital system with less than 250 beds that has the capability to do echocardiography. For a little 40 bed hospital like this, we have great capabilities," said Tullis.

A $3,000 surgical spinal bed for the treatment of patients with spinal fractures has also been purchased with RHHV's operating funds, said Mary Lou Brown, director of nursing. She said that the mobile bed will be used to turn patients in traction over from their backs to their stomachs without jeopardizing the patient's health.

The construction of a 16x32 foot storage building was completed behind the hospital. The building will store miscellaneous equipment and laundry, said Moore.

Moore said that donations are still needed for the following equipment: two Hewlett-Packard cardiac monitors; a Dupont ACA automatic blood chemistry analyzer; two intensive care beds; two Doppler ultra-sound units; two blood warming units and miscellaneous furniture.

DR. LANCE KIRKEGAARD, on left, runs his patient through the hospital's new computer-programmed electrocardiograph (ECG) treadmill. Kirkegaard said that exercising while taking an ECG may unmask cardio-arterial disease that might have otherwise gone unnoticed.

RICHARD RICHBURG prepares to receive an electrocardiograph using the hospital's new computer-assisted treadmill. The hospital's new stress electrodes lining Richburg's chest are applied with a special drill that eliminates electrical impedance, making for more accurate testing.

THE HOLTER MONITOR is worn by heart patients experiencing chest pains. The apparatus is worn for 24 hours and records the electrical impulses of the heart during a normal day's activities. A diary is kept by the patient to inform the physician what activities caused chest pains.

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE—Are we living in an Alice in Wonderland world?
Here is poor, lumbler New Mexico about to spend 1.2 billion dollars next year just to keep the doors open.

Most of that money goes into salaries for bureaucrats, not into projects to help the poor or the needy. Most of that goes into "overhead," not into productive spending with results for the taxpayers which can be measured or discerned.

And as this is written, the Senate Finance Committee is trying to increase that total. They say they want to get more of "the Governor's program" into the bill which funds the next fiscal year.

The Governor.
Does he want to save money for the state?
Well, one thing you have to remember is that this is his last year in office.

At the start of 1983, he goes out the door. Isn't it just possible that he wants to go out with a lot of people—recipients of state funding's largesse—deep in his debt?

You don't believe that's on of the things which motivates politicians?
Then turn your eyes to Washington, where Ronald Reagan, President of the United States, is proposing a series of world-shaking deficits for the nation we love, just to satisfy the hunger of the Pentagon.

As Tom Udall said in his announcement for Congress in the Third Congressional District, "Cost overruns during one fiscal quarter at the Pentagon would alone have made up the amount of money President Reagan has slashed from the country's social programs."

Yet the slashing from social programs goes on.
So, one fears, does the cost-overrun situation. Which of us, after all, gets to question the military? In Reagan's view, obviously, they are sacrosanct.

Udall further said, "As a Congressman, I would not vote to cut one more penny from social programs which have already been cut to the bone. I think we should follow the advice of David Stockman and Senator Domenici, who say there is up to $30 billion of waste in the current military budget."

Got that?
Thirty billion of "waste"—thrown-away, down the drain because the men and women in uniform have never had to deal with a tough President who said, "Shape up and operate your place as though it had to show a profit like a small business."

All they know is to do what they have always done.
Our President stands there so holly and asks us to have faith in him.

That we might have.
But faith in the generals and the colonels and the majors...?
How have they earned our faith?
What do they know but "spend, spend, spend"?

The entire food stamp program's expenditures last year, for example, would keep the doors of the Pentagon open for two weeks at most.

Yet the food stamp program is to be cut-or to be more accurate, turned over to the states, most of whom will abandon it almost immediately—while the hungry maw of the Pentagon stays open, sucking in more and more of our hardearned money every day.

Let a man say this as clearly and simply as he can:
Americans cannot stand these deficits. Americans will not stand them, especially if the major reason for them is to keep the military-industrial complex fat, while the rest of us grow lean.

Reagan's plans go too far.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

Re-federalization, as I see it in a finished form a decade from now, would result in an orderly "trade" of certain programs between local and state governments and the federal government. In essence, state and local governments would be relieved of helping fund national programs, and could use the savings to fund and entirely administer, if they wished, local programs now financed in whole or in part with federal grant monies.

Our federal system revolves around the concept that certain problems are national in character, such as defense, and demand attention from the national government; while other problems, which might be nationwide, are nevertheless the proper province of state and local governments.

I wrote these words in an editorial opinion piece which appeared in the Wall Street Journal exactly six years ago. If anything, these words are more true today and President Reagan's call for a "New Federalism" is a natural result of what state and local officials have called for over the past decade.

The major concept of the President's program is one I called for in this article—a straight "swap" between the federal government which will take over the Medicaid program and the state governments, which will take over the operation of the federally-run food stamp and aid to families with dependent children (AFDC). The estimated cost of the programs to the states is $16.5 billion and the federal government would assume responsibility for an estimated $19.5 billion obligation.

There are many other aspects of this "New Federalism" program that the President proposed, and while there are justified concerns over some of these proposals, let me assure you that these are only proposals. We will be consulting with city and county officials, state legislators, and governors to determine what is the best way to transfer the power and resources of the federal government back to the states. It will not be a quick fix program conceived in haste, but rather one that evolves over the period of the next few months.

There are those who have said that the reason the federal government was brought in to run these programs in the first place was that the state governments refused to take over their responsibilities. That may have been true a long time ago, but it is no longer true today.

State governments over the past several years have become more focused, more accountable, and more professional. State legislatures have also progressed and have professional staff available to help them decide the tough questions of spending and taxation. They have, in a sense, started to evolve to a point where they can take on this responsibility.

I do not believe that national legislators have a monopoly on compassion or concern for the poor and disadvantaged. I also do not believe that if certain federal programs are turned back to New Mexico, that our present and future governors and state legislators would turn their back on their state's needs and drop these programs. The people they represent in the state will see to it that their governor and state legislators respond to their needs.

We will be debating and analyzing this process of re-federalization over the next few months. It is highly controversial and I do not anticipate an easy legislative track for even the best proposal. But it is needed and is exactly what our founding fathers had in mind when they drafted our Constitution. They envisioned a less-centralized government as having the flexibility to respond to changing times and situations. All of us need to be involved in the discussions which could shape the future of this nation well into the 21st century. It is a time for action and I am happy to be serving New Mexico in the Senate at this time to help shape this action.

editorial

In view of anticipated commercial growth in this area in coming years, we believe low rent housing developments would materially aid that growth.

There's the problem of where the working people, those earning from minimum wage to $170, or so, per week can find living quarters they can afford.

Many good employees, or beginning employees who could be trained to be an asset to a business firm, often quit their jobs because they can't afford the rent.

It's possible to build one, two and three bedroom housing units in the 1,000 square foot range that can adequately house the single worker, or a small family.

Properly managed, such a housing development, either high rise or condominium style, could produce a satisfactory return to a developer.

It's possible such a development could be operated as a tax write off. It could also be operated at a loss, which would be the same thing in essence.

Ruidoso's commercial growth will be, in some measure, dependent upon the availability of a labor force.

It would seem that providing affordable housing for the working people should be a matter of prime importance to Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs business operators.

If businesses can't hire good help, those businesses can't provide the service that will make those operations profitable.

There must be someone, somewhere, willing to provide such housing, which could eventually be as important as having all the water we need.— CD

SS PAYING KILLER

An almost unbelievable example of the misuse of the Social Security system was the case of Charles Patterson, who killed his mother and sister five years ago.

He has been held since then by the California Youth Authority. Recently, Patterson was released from the authority's Chino facility, free on parole to face the cold, cruel world.

However, it won't be too cold and too cruel, because Charles Patterson, upon release, received $21,500 in Social Security survivor's benefits.

The Patterson case does not stand alone. There are many others. It is estimated 300 of the Youth Authority's 6,000 wards are held for murder, some for slaying family members.

The collection of Social Security funds is possible because of a quirk in the law. Juvenile killers are not officially considered felons. They have received payments ranging from $200 to $580 a month because they qualify as survivors and because they also qualify for survivor benefits.

The Social Security funds are placed in trust for the killers until they are released.

Then they receive the money from a system their victims supported during their working lives.

"People probably are horrified to find out a person gets benefits as a result of killing a person," a Youth Authority official said. "The Youth Authority has no way of stopping it. If they didn't get Social Security, they probably would go on welfare."

We're horrified all right. We think such expenditure of Social Security money should be stopped. When it was learned David Berkowitz, the "Son of Sam" killer who took the lives of seven persons in New York, was receiving Social Security money, that portion of the law was changed.

Berkowitz was getting $300 a month because he was unable to hold a job. One reason he was unable to hold a job was that he was serving a 315-year prison sentence. Similar payments to other felons were costing Social Security $60 million a year.

At the present time, a 15-member bipartisan commission is studying Social Security reforms. It is to report on its findings by the end of 1982. Cutting off funds to juvenile killers should not have to wait that long. The rules should be changed now.—News-Bulletin, Belen.

ON MAYLON LOVE

Mahton Love...in case you've forgotten ... is the sorta head honcho of a State Police commission of some sort ... that don't pay him no money ... even if he is a certified police officer ... who got a DWI citation back in November ... and then didn't have to face charges ... 'cause he was extended "professional courtesy" by members of the Albuquerque police.

Seems Mahton was involved in a little fender bender incident ... a three car mishap ... and, being's the other drivers smelled hooch on his breath ... it wound up that a policeman issued Love a DWI citation ... 'cause his blood alcohol count turned out to be .14 ... which ain't in the ball park with the .10 that means he was legally snorkered ... thus eligible for his DWI rap ... which didn't materialize ... because of the professional courtesy extended to him ... because he's head honcho of that police board.

Then came the paper work ... processing good old boy Mahton...a benefactor of the community ... who is a doer of good deeds ... and there musta been some confusion running rampant in the paper work department ... 'cause three separate reports on the incident have surfaced ... and there seemed to be some conflicting statements appearing on the forms.

Anyhow ... it finally came out into the open ... and Governor Kling ... who is known for treating his appointees with deference ... 'cause they are, after all his appointments ... ordered Love to pay for attending DWI school ... and to also pony up not less than $200 ... right outta his pocket ... as a donation to the school ... and that's all well and good.

Problem is ... the average Joe Doe'd have had to appear before a judge ... plead guilty ... and be sentenced to attend DWI school ... as a first offender ... and after he'd latched onto his certificate stating he'd satisfactorily completed the course ... the judge'd forget the whole deal ... and his record would be clear of that rap.

So ... there coulda been some more professional courtesy extended ... 'cause Love didn't have to appear before a judge ... at least it ain't been in print that I've seen that he did.

If nothing else Love's not being charged after being cited has brought to the attention of the driving public that it's who you are that governs what happens in case you wind up with a DWI citation ... which should be mighty embarrassing ... or, at least it should oughta be ... no?

work ... unless they get caught at it ... in which case it usually costs them more than the stealing was worth.

Now ... I ain't gonna commit plagiarism in presenting the following blurb ... 'cause I'm gonna attribute it to my source ... the Kansas Government Journal ... 'cause I don't want credit for it ... or blame, for that matter ... just because I thought it might provoke a chuckle or two for readers of this column.

It was entitled: "The Public Servant's Lament" ... and here goes ...
If I express myself on a subject, I'm trying to run things. If I'm silent, I'm dumb or have lost interest.

If I'm always at my office, why don't I get out and learn what's going on. If I'm out when they call, why am I not tending to business.

If I'm not home at night, I'm out carousing. If I'm at home, I'm neglecting important outside contacts and activities.

If I don't agree with persons, I'm bullheaded. If I do agree, I don't have any ideas of my own.
If I don't do what I'm requested, I'm a darn poor official. If I do agree, well, that's what I'm paid for.

If I give someone a short answer, I'm "too big for my britches." If I attempt to explain the pros and cons of an issue, I'm a know-it-all and long winded.

If I'm well dressed, I think I'm a big shot. If I'm not, I'm a poor representative of my office.
If I'm on the job a short time, I'm inexperienced. If I've been there a long time, it's time for a change.
Now whoever wrote that piece did a good job ... in my opinion ... and, I hope, in yours ... 'cause there's more fact than fancy in those words ... ask any public servant.

ON WINTER'S COLD

If'n you've been shivering of a frosty morning ... here in Harmony Valley ... don't sweat it ... 'cause if'n you do, you might get pneumonia.
But ... considering the weather that's been plaguing the residents of our states bordering on Canada ... we've been enjoying right bally weather in these parts ... why it's hardly been necessary to more'n barely cover our petunias ... and blooming onions ... in case they was planted in late fall and is about to mature.
Yup ... there's nothing quite so comforting these frosty mornings as not being up north ... unless you belong to the Polar Bear Club.

TURN HEAT DOWN

A few years ago there were tidings that brought groans from fanciers of charcoal-broiled steak. It seemed that preparation of this delicacy over red hot coals formed suspected carcinogens.

Further information along these lines comes now from food toxicology experts at the University of California/Berkeley. They have been cooking many foods in a variety of ways — broiling, frying, roasting, boiling, and so forth. All this culinary-laboratory activity has led to instructive conclusions.

We are told that prolonged, high-temperature cooking of certain foods, beef and eggs, for a couple of examples, produces substances which mutate bacterial cells in laboratory tests. It is thought that these substances may contribute to cancer or genetic diseases, though it should be noted that scientists also think there may be defenses of some sort against this in the body cells or from other foods that are eaten.

The idea was to find out which cooking methods are most likely, or least likely, to produce the mutagenic substances. Here it is, then, from an associate professor of food toxicology, Leonard Bjeldanes:

"In general, the results show that the longer and hotter these foods (high-protein foods) were cooked, the greater the mutagenic activity produced. Frying, grilling and broiling produced the greatest activity, followed by baking and roasting." At the opposite end of the spectrum there are cooking methods — stewing, simmering, boiling, microwave — which tend to retain the juices. This is especially so at low temperatures. A word to the wise, et cetera, et cetera. —Alamogordo Daily News.

BY MARK GORDON
VICKIE SMALLWOOD received a pleasant surprise when Saturday's 12-race program was completed. She won twice as many races as she thought she would. The 20-year-old rider from New Boston, Texas, became the first woman jockey in Sunland Park history to pilot four winners on a single program. "I really thought I'd win two races, but I sure was surprised to win four. It's pretty exciting," she said. Vickie also won four races two years ago on a program at the Downs at Santa Fe. "I always call my parents on Sundays after all the races have been over. It's hard to say who gets the most excited when I did well. Both Mom and Dad get pretty excited." The blonde-haired rider, who has become one of the top Southwest riders, started her streak in the first race by tallying a two and three-fourths length win on Lady Chairman ($3.20). "I thought she'd win," she said. Then she guided Honest Indian ($4.00) to a two and one-fourth length triumph. "I thought he'd win too," she said. She won with Danton One ($5.40) in the sixth race. "He was the class of the race, but you never know," she said. She completed her day with Breakage Insurance ($3.60) who took the ninth race by three-fourths lengths. "I wasn't too sure about him, but I thought he had a shot," Vickie said.
 Chuck Mattox trains Lady Chairman and Danton One while R. Frank Thompson handles Honest Indian and Ronnie Reed conditions Breakage Insurance.
 Saturday was really Ladies Day at Sunland Park. Beside Vickie Smallwood winning four races, Harla Webb and Rebecca Thompson each won a race as the women jockeys captured half of the 12 races. Harla won aboard Cin A Little ($11.00) for trainer Johnie Jamison in the seventh race while Rebecca Thompson triumphed on Cindi Seem ($12.20) for trainer William A. Thompson in the twelfth.
NATIVE GYPSY, who captured seasonal honors during Sunland Park's fall meeting, made a triumphant return to Sunland Park, when she scored a convincing one-length victory in Friday's eighth race. Ridden by Richard Bickel, the 5-year-old Special Secret mare defeated seven allowance foes by running the 400 yards in 19.85. Native Gypsy was selected best handicap quarter horse and best older quarter horse during Sunland Park's earlier season. She is trained by Bob Argett and is owned by the Three C Racing Stables of Pampa, Texas. Prior to returning to Sunland Park, Native Gypsy raced twice (a sixth and fifth) at Los Alamitos near Los Angeles. She paid $3.80 as the 9-10 favorite in Friday's race.

TROPIC RULER, who earned $374,440 while winning 10 of 13 starts in 1981 as a 2-year-old, finished third in the prestigious $136,839 El Camino Real Derby Saturday at Bay Meadows near San Francisco. Ridden by Jim Powell, the 3-year-old son of Key Rulla lead until the stretch run of the mile and 1/16th event. Then he tired slightly to finish a length and one-quarter behind the rapidly-closing Cassalera, who was a half-length better than runnerup Crystal Star. Tropic Ruler, who made his first start over a distance, earned $18,125 for owner A. Sam Coury of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. He's trained by Brooks Claridge. The colt won a four furlong allowance test by four lengths on June 27 at Ruidoso Downs in the rapid time of 45 4/5. Tropic Ruler, who tied for ninth on the Experimental Free Handicap for 2-year-olds of 1981, was a 6-1 risk in the inaugural running of the Bay Meadows event.
THE HORSEWOMEN'S UNITED is sponsoring a special showing of the movie "Casey's Shadow" at the Country Club Cinema Twin at 9401 N. Mesa. The movie, concerning quarter horse racing at Ruidoso Downs, features many Sunland-Ruidoso racing personnel in supporting roles. The showing will be on February 23 at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. only. Tickets may be purchased for $5 from any Horsewomen's United member. There will be no door ticket sales.
SUNLAND PARK AND RUIDOSO DOWNS connections swept both ends of the co-features on Friday's opening-day program at Oaklawn Park at Hot Springs, Arkansas. Jockey Casey Lambert, who started his riding career last August at Ruidoso Downs guided Cruzen Dude to a victory in the $25,000 Dixieland, a five and one-half furlong allowance race for 2-year-old colts and geldings. Cruzen Dude is trained by Hoot Herndon. Shesgot-tobeadandy, who won last August's Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity, captured the $25,000 Dixie Belle, a five and one-half furlong allowance sprint for sophomore fillies. The filly is trained by Billy Hitt.
F. O. MARTINEZ became the second jockey this spring season to win three races on a single program when he recorded a trio of triumphs on Friday's card. He started by guiding Cat Scrambler to a $4.40 win in the fifth race and then guided Brazos Native to a $6.40 victory in the seventh event. Both horses are trained by Paul A. Smith. He then took Sweet Persimmon to a $31.20 victory in the 11th race. Sweet Persimmon is trained by Thomas E. Wood.
 Wayne Buehrer tallied two victories on Friday's program. He won the opener aboard Reno Express ($24.60) and then took the final race on Penny Secours ($7.80). Both horses are trained by Phil Garrett.

SUNLAND PARK will present a special four-day weekend of horse racing this week. There will be 12-race programs as usual on Friday, Saturday and Sunday as well as a special holiday card of 12 races on Monday, February 15. Post time will be 12:30 p.m. for all four days of racing.
DOTTSY, the well-known country-western singer, was honored with a race named for her while visiting Sunland Park on Sunday. The ninth race was named the Dotsy purse; for the singer who has had seven of her recordings in the top 20 during the past seven years. She was accompanied in the winner's circle by her band, The Two-Way Street. Dotsy was performing at the Southwestern International Livestock Show and Rodeo at the El Paso Coliseum.
PAPPA J. who won Sunday's 10th and featured race by a nose over Merchant Investor, ran the 6 furlongs in a blazing 1:10 1/5, which tied the seasonal fastest time. Pappa J., who was ridden by Richard Bickel for trainer Jimmie Claridge, tied the time set on October 18 by Nervino.
LAST WEEKEND was a good one for favorite backers. Of the 38 favorites, 19 posted victories. On Friday, seven public choices prevailed, including six straight from the third through the seventh races. Winners included Wendy Features ($3.60) in the third, Terry Ville ($4.40) in the fourth, Cat Scrambler ($4.40) in the fifth, Hopeless Romantic ($5.20) in the sixth, Brazos Native ($6.40) in the seventh, Native Gypsy ($3.80) in the eighth and Penny Secours ($7.60) in the 12th. On Saturday, eight favorites won. They included Lady Chairman ($3.20) in the first, Mr. Slingshot ($6.00) in the second, Raven Sissy ($5.80) in the fourth, Honest Indian ($4.00) in the fifth, Danton One ($5.40) in the sixth, Rushing Silver ($4.80) in the eighth, Breakage Insurance ($3.60) in the ninth and Winged Feet ($5.40) in the 11th. On Sunday, four favorites won. Winners included Abatir ($8.40) in the first, Easy K Bar ($6.00) in the third, Rey Juan ($4.00) in the sixth, and Pappa J. ($3.80) in the 10th.
ON SUNDAY Kevin Scholl had two victories, scoring with Seven Too ($3.40) for trainer J. Michael Welch in the fifth and on Rebel Leader ($16.40) in the eighth for trainer Fred I. Danley. Richard Bickel also won two races, scoring with Abatir ($6.40) in the first race and on Pappa J. ($3.80) in the featured 10th race. Jon Arnett trains Abatir while Jimmie Claridge conditions Pappa J.
SUNDAY'S HANDLE of $419,279 — the third best of the season — pushed the weekend total up to $1,091,008. On the same day three-day weekend last year, the fans wagered $953,782. The seasonal daily average is now up to $313,621, a gain of 24.53 percent over the comparable period a year ago. Total handle so far in the 1981-82 season (after 47 race days) is $14,740,163.
 The leading post position over the weekend was the No. 2 with nine winners. The seasonal tally: No. 1 — 49 wins, No. 2 — 67, No. 3 — 53, No. 4 — 57, No. 5 — 55, No. 6 — 45, No. 7 — 51, No. 8 — 57, No. 9 — 49, No. 10 — 52, No. 11 — 0, No. 12 — 0.

HANDING OVER THE RUIDOSO TROPHY — Finis Westbrook (third from right), part-owner of Pappa J., accepts the victory ornament during the winner's circle ceremony of the Ruidoso Allowance at Sunland Park. The ornament was handed over by Sam Stevens of the Sunland board of directors. Mrs. Westbrook (sun glasses) and Mrs. Stevens were also on hand. The group is joined by Trainer Jimmie Claridge (right) and Jockey Richard Bickel.

Pappa J. the victor in Ruidoso Allowance

Pappa J.'s victory in Sunday's Ruidoso Allowance at Sunland Park didn't surprise many of the 3,564 patrons on hand. After all, Pappa J. was made a 4-5 favorite in the six furlong battle for allowance sprinters. But the surprising aspect was the fact Pappa J. really had a fight on his hands. In the stretch, Merchant Investor, an 8-1 outsider, was supposed to cave in like a house of cards.

Filly flies

Special Platoon, a filly owned and trained by Coy Hendrix of El Paso, made the second start of her career in Friday's five and a half furlong headliner at Sunland Park. Matters fell into place neatly as Special Platoon eagerly took control at the top of the stretch and outsprinted her foes to the wire.

The filly zipped across the finish with a booming four and one-fourth length lead, thus boosting her career record to a perfect two for two. Her only other try at racing came as a two-year-old in early December, and resulted in a three and one-fourth length win as a 5-2 favorite. Sunland patrons made Special Platoon a 7-2 shot in Friday's outing, and the sophomore filly returned $9, $4.20 and $3. Jockey Betty Harless turned in a perfectly judged ride.

Germes, a 6-1 outsider, ended up second and returned $5.80 and $4.80. Mabaroni, off at 5-1, bagged third and returned $4.40. The winning time was 1:04 2/5 seconds.

haymaker after another. The gelding was still full of fight when he reached the final jump or two.

At that point, Merchant Investor appeared to have the victory all wrapped up. But Pappa J., who never gave up during the long and punishing stretch struggle, reached back for every ounce of reserves and delivered an extraordinary surge on the last stride.

That final powerburst paid off, and Pappa J. hit the wire with a tiny lead. Judging by the photo-finish picture, this lead was about two inches. The favorite, owned by Royal T. Foster Jr., and Finis Westbrook of Sterling City, Texas, was piloted capably by Richard Bickel.

Sunland patrons who piled their financial interests on Pappa J. had to be content with meager returns of $3.80, $3.20 and $2.20.

Attesting to the depth of the struggle was the fact the winning time of 1:10 1/5 seconds equalled the seasonal mark set by Nervino on Sunday, October 18.

Pappa J. earned $2,220 out of the $3,700 purse and picked up his first win of the season. The triumph also reversed a habit of running second. In his two previous outings, Pappa J. had to be satisfied with the runnerup slot. The six-year-old is trained by Jimmie Claridge.

Merchant Investor, who benefited from a heads-up ride from Bobbie Doh Harmon (at one point in the stretch, the gelding was a solid two lengths on top), earned $814 for his game try and handed his mutual backers $5.20 and $2.80. Colonel Day, the 7-5 second choice directed by Louie Gomez, pieced together a steady stretch advance and finished third ($2.20). At no point was Colonel Day a threat.

Credit of some sort should go to The Cowboy, a staggering 120-1 longshot who came storming out of the gate, grabbing the lead and holding it until the top of the stretch. His dreams collapsed suddenly at that point.

Doctor McBee wears trainer's hat as well

BY DICK ALWAN

If you keep an eye on the mimeographed results sheets at Sunland Park, you'll regularly see the name, Dr. Alex McBee.

Dr. McBee, an owner and trainer, doesn't often win a race — but he's frequently up there with a second or third.

After seeing his name so many times, this reporter decided to find out a little more about the mystery doctor. Is he a chiropractor? A doctor of philosophy? Did he buy the title from a mail-order catalogue? Maybe he's a retired dentist?

We started asking around the racing office, and making some phone calls. "He's a real doctor alright," we were told. "As a matter of fact, he's an eye doctor."

Since Dr. McBee isn't listed in the El Paso phone directory, he's not the easiest man to run down. But we did manage to find out he's no longer a working ophthalmologist. At 64, he's in the midst of a new medical specialty — emergency services.

The easiest way to meet him — albeit on the wrong end of a stethoscope or suture tray — is to take your battered body to the emergency room at Sun Towers Hospital in El Paso. Dr. McBee now heads that department, and if he happens to be on duty when you drop by with a wound or two, he'll gladly get you on your feet, and if there's time, he can also give you an insight into the day's racing program at Sunland Park.

This is the same Alex McBee who grew up in El Paso, attending Crockett Elementary School, and later, Austin High School. It's also the same Alex McBee who, for 27 years, enjoyed a flourishing ophthalmology practice in Hobbs, N. M.

"After 27 years, I decided it was time for a change," Dr. McBee explained, after settling down comfortably in an uncomfortable chair across from this writer's desk and typewriter. A tall Texan with neat, gray hair, he looks every bit a trainer — dressed as he is in outdoor clothes and heavy cap. The look of the outdoors even shows in his easy-moving smile. He seems, in short, like someone's perfect grandfather — except there's nothing grandfatherly in the way he gets around. Obviously, this fellow is a healthy sort.

As the conversation perks along in high gear, Dr. McBee amplifies on his background: "I enjoyed my practice in Hobbs, but I wanted to get away from the telephone. Of course, after all those years, you do wonder if you're doing the right thing. I did have a case of butterflyflies just before I left my practice."

Another reason for giving up his practice was his thought of getting into horse racing, both as an owner and trainer — which explains why he moved back to El Paso. "Horse racing played a big part in my decision to leave Hobbs," he says.

It wasn't exactly an easy switch, since Dr. McBee had to get back into bookwork in order to get trained as an emergency room physician. In 1978, he set up shop in that capacity at Eastwood Hospital in El Paso. About a year ago, he took over the emergency department at Sun Towers.

The good doctor's connection with horse racing began during Sunland Park's early years, some 20 years ago, when he visited the races, and was taken by the sport. Since Dr. McBee raised pleasure horses on the family homestead in Hobbs, his interest in thoroughbreds is easy to understand. "I liked the competition involved in horse racing," he explains. "Like everyone else, you get to thinking you can do it better than the next fellow."

In 1964, he decided to test the water, and purchased a filly, Seranillo, from the veterinary, Dr. John Neale. He paid $600. After running in one race at Ruidoso, Seranillo was claimed for $1,500. So began the racing fever. For the next four or five years, Dr. McBee owned a succession of thoroughbreds, none of which made much money. "But I enjoyed going to the races," he says.

Reason and common sense finally prevailed, and Dr. McBee got out of the thoroughbred business, and concentrated on his medical practice. But in back of his mind lurked the thought of one day giving up his Hobbs practice, moving to El Paso, and becoming and owner-trainer of race horses.

That idea is now in full flower, and it's no small operation. Dr. McBee has an eight-head stable, a full-time groom, and he puts in full-time duty in the Sunland barn area. Frequently, he ends his emergency-room stint at Sun Towers at 8 a.m. and goes directly to the Sunland barn area.

So how is Dr. McBee's horse-racing career turning out? He says: "I like the people around the race track, and I like the challenge of trying to develop a good racehorse. I also like the exercise which goes with being a trainer. It's important to keep active. I have a little arthritis, and when I'm active, it doesn't bother me so much. I pony my own horses, and my pony isn't in the best of shape. Sometimes, people will say, 'Gee, that pony horse of yours sure is sore.' I'll reply: 'Yes, but I am too. If he can make it, so can I.'"

Dr. McBee's medical background is an asset in some ways. "As a physician, you're trying to help people. As a trainer, you're trying to help horses. Often, there's a similarity."

While Dr. McBee may have a sounder physiological understanding of a race horse than most trainers, that doesn't mean he has a head start on any miracle drugs. "Most trainers know far more about medications than I do, since they're constantly reading all the pharmacology books," he says.

Neither is his background in ophthalmology a particular advantage. Once, a fellow trainer asked him to look at a horse which had injured an eye. Dr. McBee obliged, just to give a pal an unofficial opinion. "But we had to call the vet," he says. "I couldn't get the horse to cooperate."

UNM anthropologist is claiming pseudo-archaeologists in error

Pseudo-archaeologists who write about ancient astronauts building airfields in Peru and secret knowledge stored in Egyptian and Mexican pyramids not only disregard scientific methods in their work but they may also be guilty of perpetuating racist views of third-world people according to a University of New Mexico (UNM) anthropologist.

Dr. Jeremy Sabloff, chairperson of the UNM anthropology department, is the editor of a new book titled "Archaeology: Myth and Reality" to be published in March by W. H. Freeman and Company publishers of Scientific American Readers.

"Non-specialists who write about archaeological topics without adhering to the tenets of scientific research, analysis and interpretation show little or no anthropological perspective on human achievements," Sabloff said. "They often seem to start with the premise that a given culture could not have created or built a given monument; therefore, some other beings — from across the oceans or outer space — must have provided the impetus necessary for creation. In some cases, this lack of an anthropological perspective appears to be a kind of naive racism."

He said an example of that mentality is the assumption by writers that the Maya, as Indians, were incapable of perfecting a sophisticated writing and numerical system and therefore some Old World people or extraterrestrial beings must have taught the Maya everything they knew.

"Pseudo-archaeologists often fail to understand the role of diffusion — as opposed to independent invention — in cultural change," Sabloff said. "For instance, the ancient Egyptians had vertical ceilings to build pyramids several millennia before pyramids were built at Teotihuacan in Mexico. Yet a few writers credit the Egyptians with stimulating creation of the Mexican structures."

Many so-called mysteries are readily explainable when they are examined in the context of a local sequence of development or a regional matrix of cultures, he said, and a greater public awareness of the insights of anthropology might cause many pseudo-archaeologists to rewrite their books or at least it might enable general readers to be more critical when reading works by non-specialists.

"One of the prizes we must pay for the privilege of sharing a free marketplace of ideas is the possibility that some writers will write unfounded speculations, some publishers will publish them, some bookstores will sell them and some media will sensationalize them," Sabloff said. "In this way, unfounded speculations become widely spread among the general population of interested readers. Perhaps the best solution to this problem is to help readers become aware of the standards of scientific research so that scientific approaches can be better appreciated and pseudo-scientific approaches can be read critically."

Sabloff's book, which includes an introductory overview by him, consists of articles reprinted from Scientific American on Stonehenge, prehistoric ground drawings in the Peruvian desert, the Hopewell mounds of eastern North America and the pyramids of Egypt and Mexico. Sabloff's essay and the articles show how professional archaeologists research, analyze and interpret data about these famous archaeological discoveries within their cultural and historical contexts.

For example, Sabloff notes that scientists now know that the prehistoric ground drawings of Peru date from 800 BC to 600 AD and that they were constructed by people who inhabited the nearby sites and manufactured the distinctive Nazca pottery in the Early Intermediate period.

"The exact purpose of the markings still remains unclear," he said.

Some archaeologists believe that the ground drawings were a product of social mechanisms for regulating the balance between resources and population; that the lines had astronomical significance to their creators to help predict the coming of water for irrigation, and that the markings had ritual or ceremonial significance.

Although scientists have not been able to determine the ancient purpose or purposes of the Nazca markings, they have put forth reasonable and testable hypotheses, unlike authors such as Erich Von Daniken whose popular "Chariots of the Gods" argues that the markings are an airfield used for landing vehicles from outer space.

"Von Daniken's conjecture is extremely ethnocentric," Sabloff said. "Why should extraterrestrial beings who presumably had sufficiently advanced technology to fly their spaceships through light-years of space need airfields that are similar to those used by our own conventional airplanes?"

Except for the impressionistic arguments based on form, he said, there is no archaeological evidence to support the airfield view.

"As Maria Reiche has pointed out, the technological skills needed to plan and execute the lines and figures were within the capabilities of the peoples who inhabited the nearby sites during the Early Intermediate period," Sabloff said. "Reiche shows how the lines and figures could have been planned and executed from the ground, perhaps using small-scale models, without any help from visitors from outer space."

"Von Daniken's argument is like a 'just so' story. It is not testable, it does not shed new light on other related data and it is not less complicated than existing archaeological hypotheses. Von Daniken's conjectures do not advance our understanding of the Nazca lines."

Sabloff is among the growing number of archaeologists who believe that pseudo-archaeology should not be ignored and that professionals should communicate effectively with popular audiences.

"It is the responsibility of archaeologists to correct the misinformation of the discipline that many members of the popular media and the general public seem to have," he said. "Scientific American has played an important role in this effort. I hope this short book contributes to the understanding of scientific information."

Salesman's murderers sought

Friends say Otho L. McCammon was a "friendly guy" who would be a good Samaritan to stranded motorists as he travelled around New Mexico.

Investigators believe that his willingness to help people probably cost him his life.

McCammon, 62, of Albuquerque, was shot to death on January 22 about seven miles south of Socorro. His body was found just off Interstate 25 at the 141 mile marker.

McCammon's vehicle, a late model Superior travel van, was left abandoned by his killers about two miles down the highway.

State Police Investigator Lawrence Montoya said robbery apparently was a motive in the murder.

McCammon was a salesman for Curtis Industries of Ohio and travelled extensively in the southwest part of New Mexico.

Around 3 p.m., on January 22, he was returning home after a week's business trip to Las Cruces.

Montoya believes McCammon came upon a disabled vehicle just south of Socorro. Witnesses remember seeing a dirty light blue van parked near the murder scene with the hood up. There were two occupants, one a white male in his early to mid-20's with wavy shoulder-length reddish hair and the other an Hispanic or Indian male with dark hair.

A cut radiator hose was found in McCammon's van, leading Montoya to speculate that possibly he helped fix the disabled vehicle.

Whatever happened next, investigators do know that McCammon was shot six times with a large caliber weapon and his body was rolled down an embankment.

Agent Montoya said he believes McCammon's killers got less than $50 from their victim.

"He wasn't known to carry large amounts of money," Montoya said. "Most of his business was catalogue sales, so he didn't need a great deal of money while he was on the road."

Montoya rules out the possibility that McCammon stopped to pick up a hitchhiker.

"He had a large bag of green chili and a catalogue in the front seat and there wouldn't have been any room for a hitchhiker to sit," he said.

In addition to whatever cash McCammon had on him at the time of his murder, also missing is his wallet containing credit cards from Sears, Wards, Shell and Mountain Bell. And investigators have not been able to find a .22 caliber pistol McCammon kept in his van. It had a four and one half five inch barrel with brown plastic grips and an interchangeable cylinder.

This week the State Crime Stoppers Commission is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrests and indictments of the killers of Otho McCammon.

Anyone having any information about the case is asked to call State Crime Stoppers at its toll-free number, 1-800-432-6933. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Meanwhile, the State Crime Stoppers Commission and Portales Police Department are offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the solution of a rash of arsons in that eastern New Mexico community.

Since January 16, a total of six arsons have been reported to the Portales Police Department. On Saturday, January 16, five fires were started in the 1400 and 1500 blocks of South Globe and South Abilene streets. A total of $24,200 worth of damage was reported to cars, garden equipment and a small travel trailer.

Then on January 25, a fire was reported in a duplex at 510 West 15th Street. Fire personnel said they had to put out three separate blazes in the apartment. Some $10,000 in damages were reported from heat and smoke. Anyone having any information about who is responsible for these fires is asked to call State Crime Stoppers at 1-800-432-6933 or Roosevelt County Crime Stoppers at 356-8100.

The State Crime Stoppers Commission and the 32 local Crime Stoppers programs, in New Mexico pay cash rewards on a continuous basis for information leading to the arrests and indictments of major crime offenders and the capture of wanted persons.

To date citizens have provided the Commission with information leading to the solution of 388 major cases and the recovery of $5.4 million worth of stolen property and narcotics. That works out to one case being solved every 15.7 hours the Commission is in operation, with $882.82 worth of stolen property and narcotics being recovered per hour of operation.

Village Lodge — It Leaves You Breathless

Located in the Sacramento Mountains of Southern New Mexico, the community of Ruidoso offers visitors tall pines, clean, refreshing mountain air... and four seasons of fun! And the place to enjoy it all is the Village Lodge.

Autumn and winter in its old-fashioned magic is yours at Village Lodge. Visitors can trail ride, picnic, backpack, and hike along scenic mountain trails, golf on bent grass greens, fish the streams and lakes, and even catch a game of tennis. There's the Aspencade in October, mule racing, Indian ceremonies, historical tours, fine night life, unique art galleries, Indian curio shops and "old world" antique shops, winter hunting, skiing, sledding and tobogganing — and just plain sitting with your feet up breathing the cool mountain air and relaxing — at the Village Lodge.

Village Lodge is located at Innsbrook Village on Alto Highway across from the Ranger Station. Each of the 32 units at Village Lodge is a three-room suite containing living room, fully equipped kitchenette, bedroom and bath. In addition, each suite features a wet bar and two color TV's with in-room movies, and a woodburning fireplace to add a cozy note.

For information and reservations, call (505) 257-9021 (or write Village Lodge, P.O. Box 2301, Ruidoso, New Mexico 88345, for free literature).

A look at the state's death penalty

BY MAURILO E. VIGIL

New Mexico may soon see the return of execution as a form of punishment if death penalty provisions the legislature passed in 1979 are enforced.

The law, effective July 1, 1979, reinstated capital punishment for persons convicted of first-degree murder with "aggravating circumstances." Among the aggravating conditions are murder of a police officer, murder in the commission of a rape or kidnapping, murder for hire or of a witness, and murder of a correctional employee or murder committed while attempting escape from a penal institution. The 1981 legislature, in response to violence during the 1980 New Mexico prison riot and after, added the killing of a fellow inmate by another in a penal institution to the list of aggravating circumstances.

The new statute provides that death will be inflicted by "a continuous intravenous injection of a lethal quantity of an ultra-short-acting barbiturate in combination with a chemical paralytic agent." The law requires that a separate hearing be held after conviction to impose the penalty and automatic review of the conviction and sentence be made by the state Supreme Court.

The reinstatement of the death penalty provides an opportune time to reflect on how changing attitudes affect the kind of death penalty given and carried out.

Before jurisprudence had developed, persons were not executed by the state. Rather, following biblical doctrines such as "an eye for an eye..." the victim's family avenged the death.

Capital punishment as a state-imposed penalty originated in ancient civilizations and became common in the middle ages, being imposed for many crimes that are today considered comparatively minor, such as crimes involving property. Because capital punishment was designed to serve as a deterrent as well as for retribution, it was quite severe and made public so as to warn potential perpetrators. The criminal was subjected to gruesome tortures before or as part of the execution.

Methods of execution used since ancient times have included almost any manner of inflicting death. Victims have been burned, thrown to wild beasts, flayed alive, drowned, hanged, boiled in oil, crushed, crucified, stoned, strangled, torn apart, smothered, beheaded and dismembered. Capital punishment was practiced in most European countries. Some forms became identified prominently in European history, such as the recently outlawed guillotine in France.

Reforms involving the death penalty resulted from the 18th century Enlightenment, when the writings of scholars such as Cesare Beccaria (Essay on Crimes and Punishments) led to a curtailment of executions and the manner of executions. Some countries eliminated the death penalty altogether.

In the United States, capital punishment was introduced along with other forms of English law, but variations developed between states in the application of the death penalty as well as in the form of executions. New Mexico, for example, was also influenced by Spanish legal principles.

In early American history the death penalty was invoked for crimes including murder, treason, kidnapping, rape, armed robbery, train robbery, burglary, arson, and even witchcraft as attested by the executions following the notorious Salem witch trials.

Hanging was the most popular method of execution during frontier days, probably because it posed the prospect of a public spectacle (since the body was often left on display for a few days) as well as being logistically easy (all that was needed was a good rope and a strong tree).

Technology has had an interest effect on the form of execution in this country, with each new period developing its innovative style. Thus we have evolved from the "barbaric" hanging method to the firing squad, the electric chair, the gas chamber and most recently a lethal injection.

In 1845, the American Society for the Abolition of Capital Punishment was organized, and it led a sustained drive to end capital punishment. Its main effect was to reduce the type and number of crimes for which capital punishment could be invoked. In the 20th century, efforts to abolish the death penalty continued and sometimes succeeded. By 1972, sixteen states had abolished the death penalty, and most others retained it only for exceptional crimes, usually murder. The decline of the death penalty indicated a growing feeling that execution was inappropriate in a civilized society.

On July 29, 1972, the United States Supreme Court, in the case of Furman v. Georgia, declared capital punishment as then practiced in Georgia and some other states, unconstitutional and in violation of the principle of "cruel and unusual punishment." The justices did not state that the death penalty was inherently unconstitutional; rather, their objection was to the discretion given judges and juries in imposing the death penalty that could become arbitrary and discriminatory.

The court's decision left open the possibility that such laws might be constitutional if uniformly applied for specific kinds of crimes. Although the number of executions had decreased markedly in the United States before 1972 (one in 1966, two in 1967 and none between 1968 and 1972), the Supreme Court decision resulted in a reprieve for over 600 prisoners facing the death penalty at the time.

After the 1972 decision, many states and the federal government enacted new death penalty laws, drafting them in such a way as to overcome the court's objections. On July 2, 1976, the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the new death penalty statute of Georgia, Florida, and Texas, while rejecting those of North Carolina and Louisiana.

Although the Supreme Court ruled on the circumstances for which the death penalty can be invoked, it has not questioned the method of execution. Of the thirty-three states that have capital punishment laws, fifteen use the electric chair, nine use the gas chamber, four use hanging, four use lethal injection and one (Utah) still uses the firing squad. The most recent execution was that of Steven Judy, electrocuted in Indiana on March 9, 1981. In widely publicized cases, John Spekelink was electrocuted in Florida on May 1, 1979, and Gary Gilmore was executed by a firing squad in Utah on January 17, 1977. As of March, 1981, the death row population in the United States was 739 (731 men and 8 women).

The recent executions prove that capital punishment is still an accepted punishment in American society, although it is too soon to tell whether it will become as common as before. A 1977 Harris poll showed that two-thirds of Americans approve of the death penalty.

In New Mexico the new death penalty law is the latest variation of a practice that dates back to the Spanish colonial period. Although historical records are sketchy, there are references in the Spanish archives of the death penalty being invoked for crimes such as murder, sedition, treason and mistreatment of Indians. The form of punishment in some cases is known to have involved mutilation. Later during the Mexican period the death penalty was also invoked for crimes such as murder. Probably the best known executions during the Mexican period were those of several leaders of the insurrection of 1837 who were sentenced by military court martial and shot.

The Kearney Code, invoked by General Stephen W. Kearney after the American occupation of New Mexico in 1846, provided for the death penalty in cases where a person was convicted of the crime of "willful murder." Public hanging became the accepted method of execution employed by sheriffs who were designated to carry out the execution. The territorial legislature later formally prescribed that execution would be by hanging.

One of the most notorious executions in New Mexico history involved a woman, Paula Angel, who was convicted of murdering her lover. According to a newspaper account, Paula was sentenced on March 28, 1861, in Las Vegas by Judge Kirby Benedict. Sheriff Abad Herrera, who was ordered to carry out the sentence, took apparent pleasure in his task, taunting his prisoner, "Paula Angel you have only - days to live," reducing the figure from day to day.

On the day of the execution, eager to carry out the execution, Sheriff Herrera stood Paula on the back of a wagon, tied the rope to a tree and the noose around her neck, and whipped the team and wagon away. Looking back he was aghast to see that having forgotten to tie her hands, the woman had grasped the rope and was trying to pull herself up. Excitedly Herrera grabbed the struggling woman from the waist and with tremendous jerks tried to pull her to her death. Shocked at this, the crowd interceded and pulled Herrera off.

Herrera's protests that the hanging had to proceed were shouted down as some claimed that she had already been hanged and the judgment executed. At that time a prominent local citizen interceded, reminding the crowd that the judgment had directed that Paula would be "hanged until dead," whereupon the crowd acceded and the execution was carried out.

A 1903 change in the hanging law declared that hanging would henceforth be conducted "privately" and even allocated a maximum of $200 to be used in constructing an enclosed gallows for execution purposes. Hanging continued as the form of execution after New Mexico became a state in 1912.

Reflecting the influence of technological change, the state legislature in 1928 changed the method of execution to electrocution and mandated that the execution would take place in the state penitentiary under the supervision of the warden. The law allowed the presence of one physician to certify death, no more than two ministers and twelve witnesses. Between 1933 and 1956 a total of 7 persons were electrocuted in New Mexico. All had been convicted of first degree murder.

In 1956 the legislature once again changed the method of execution to the administration of lethal gas and directed the construction of a gas chamber. Executions were to be supervised by the superintendent of the state penitentiary. Only one individual, David Cooper Nelson, was executed in the gas chamber. Nelson, in 1860, was the last convict executed in New Mexico.

As indicated, the new method of execution calls for injection of a death-producing dosage of drugs. Although the new method has not been employed, some controversy has developed over the method because the injection must be carried out by a person trained in the medical field. Officials of the New Mexico Medical Society have stated that the canon of ethics prohibits physicians from participating in such an execution and have raised questions about participation by other medical personnel.

As of December 1, 1981, three men are on death row at the New Mexico State prison. They are William Wayne Gilbert, Walter Scott Fimmel and Richard Reynaldo Garcia. All have been granted a stay of execution pending appeals in the higher courts. Gilbert was sentenced after conviction of first degree murder in the death of an Albuquerque couple. He was later convicted of murder in the slaying of his wife and waived his right to a jury trial for charges that he allegedly strangled another woman in Albuquerque. Fimmel was sentenced for the murder of a Lordsburg businessman, and Garcia was sentenced for the murder of a correctional officer at the New Mexico penitentiary.

The death penalty, while still an accepted form of punishment in the United States and New Mexico, has undergone some change as societal norms and attitudes have changed. The widespread usage of the death penalty has been reduced to the more limited applications of today. At the same time, the public spectacle and gruesome nature of past executions have given way to more "private" and "humane" forms of carrying out the execution.

LIGHTING

Automatic, on-at-dusk, off-at-dawn outdoor lighting can provide convenience, safety and security for your home or business. And since mercury vapor and metal halide lights provide more lighting per watt than incandescent lighting, you save money too. For full details on the Nite-Liter for your home or Leased Floodlighting for your business, call our office.
