

Classic to longshot Bojacs Magic

By DICK ALWAN and MARK GORDON

Denim N Diamonds and Rule The Deck both carried extended winning streaks — and considerable national prestige — into the 14th running of the $135,495 World's Championship Quarter Horse Classic at Ruidoso Downs on Sunday.

The two mares dominated the wagers to the point all other contenders in the 440-yard duel were longshots.

But the Classic ended in an ironic twist. The win streaks of both mares were snapped, and the highly anticipated confrontation between the two standouts was aborted by a disqualification.

The outcome was probably as frustrating to the fans as it was to the owners of the two mares. But the bizarre turnaround played into the hands of the 65-1 longshot, Bojacs Magic, who was handed the victory — and $67,747 — after the stewards disqualified Rule The Deck.

Bojacs Magic, owned by Robert Wallers of Tomball, Texas, lit up the totalisator board with payoffs of $132.20, $24.40 and $5.40. Jimmie Hunt was in the saddle.

Denim N Diamonds, the 3-5 favorite going after her eighth straight win, crossed the finish line in third place, but was moved up to second. The payoffs: $3, $2.60. Owned by R. D. Hubbard of Wichita, Kansas, Denim N Diamonds earned $23,034, which lifted her career income up to $694,382. The five-year-old mare is among the top money-makers in quarter horse history.

Rule The Deck, a four-year-old mare owned by Dirk Jones (a law student at Texas Tech University in Lubbock), had hoped to convert the Classic into her ninth straight win. A triumph over Denim N Diamonds would have placed additional luster on her already brilliant reputation. She went off at 6-5.

But after slamming into Denim N Diamonds shortly after the break, there appeared little doubt Rule The Deck's number had to come down. The stewards took a prolonged look at the video tapes before issuing the expected verdict.

So Rule The Deck was dropped from first and placed behind Denim N Diamonds. The maneuver elevated Bojacs Magic from second to first, and boosted Denim N Diamonds from third to second.

Rule The Deck, ridden by Jack Wallace, collected $13,549 to go with the $79,873 she's already earned this year. The mare paid $2.80 to show.

Rule The Deck, after drifting in to collide with Denim N Diamonds, quickly regained her stride — but found herself about a head behind the high-flying Bojacs Magic.

With about 100 yards to go, Rule The Deck was nearly on even terms with Bojacs Magic. In the final 50 yards or so, Rule The Deck wrenched the lead aggressively and soared into the clear under a hard ride from jockey Wallace. It was a magnificent performance. But Rule The Deck's accomplishment was obviously minimized by the interference she caused.

Thrown badly off stride, Denim N Diamonds was unable to recover, and could not generate her customary closing attack. Jockey Jerry Nicodemus lodged an objection as soon as he could reach a telephone.

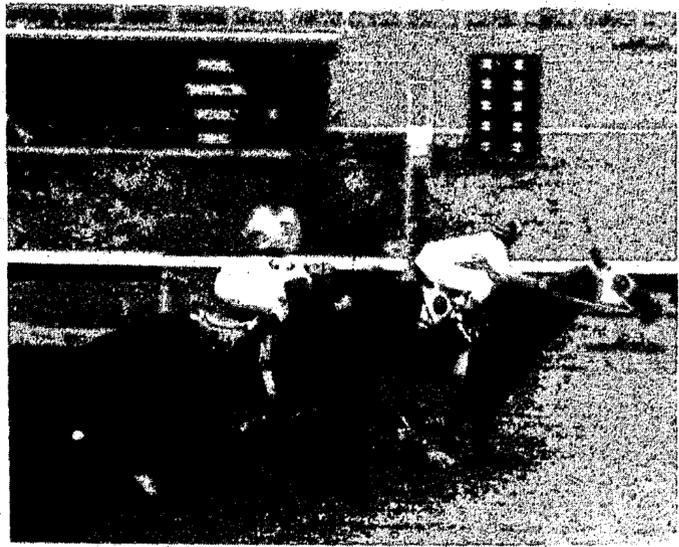

Rule The Deck was a half-length in front of Bojacs Magic at the wire in a heavy clocking of 21.81 seconds. A week earlier, Rule The Deck had set the top qualifying time of 21.67 on a fast track (with a tailwind).

Bojacs Magic ended the Classic one and one-half lengths in front of Denim N Diamonds. A gelded three-year-old trained by Dale Baker, Bojacs Magic is by Sir Winsalot out of Texas Bar Jet.

For Bojacs Magic, the Classic was probably a case of being in the right place at the right time, but his jockey, Jimmie Hunt, didn't see it completely that way. He commented: "It sure was a crazy way to win the thing, but Bojacs Magic is a real good horse any way you look at it. He's honest-running, and if anyone makes a mistake, he's right there to gain from it." Jockey Wallace, the rider of Rule The Deck, admitted his mare "veered in a little," but said he didn't think she bothered Denim N Diamonds enough to be disqualified. He said: "My mare went in a little way. But I didn't think we stopped the other mare. Rule The Deck ran a beautiful race. Today, she was a bunch better than the best mare (Denim N Diamonds) in the world. She just keeps getting better."

AN UNCLASSIC FINISH. Rule The Deck is a half-length in front at the finish of the $135,495 World's Championship Classic at Ruidoso Downs, but the mare was disqualified for bothering the 3-5 favorite, Denim N Diamonds.

Electronics lease addendum raises questions

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

The engineer who wrote an addendum to the bid specifications on the electronics portion of the police, courts and detention complex remodeling project said Friday Ruidoso purchasing agent John Cupp "possibly" requested the addendum, and that he believes project architect John Vanoy Moore of Ruidoso relayed the message.

Jerry Inzer, the electrical designer with Travis Brauer and Associates of Dallas, Texas, who designed the electronics specifications, also said the addendum was intended to clarify the desired location for a repeater site. The original bid plan, dated June 15, showed the repeater located only in a general area, he added.

After being informed of Inzer's statement, Cupp denied knowledge of the request. Moore said he had no part in relaying instructions for the addendum.

"Apparently Moore told him (Inzer) to write it, and say that I asked for it," Cupp said Sunday. He had also said the first knowledge he had of the addendum was Wednesday, July 21—two days after the addendum was submitted to bidders, and a day before the bid opening.

Moore said Sunday he thinks Inzer was requested by someone to be more specific about the repeater site. Such a request would naturally come from Cupp, he added.

Monday morning, Inzer said he had been unable to search his files to find the exact source of the request for the addendum. He said he had been instructed to work on another project, and he was unsure when he could go through the file on the electronics project.

Problems with the addendum were brought out at last Tuesday's council meeting. By week's end, the matter had been dubbed, "Communigate."

The Jail Liaison Committee recommended that the council reject the only complete bid on the electronics portion (from Lincoln Leasing of Ruidoso). The committee determined that the addendum—a section of which pertained to the repeater site—was worded in a way that may have suggested the repeater be placed on land owned by Lincoln Leasing.

The addendum was submitted to bidders July 19—just three days before the bid opening—and was never approved by the council or by the jail committee. The council rejected the bid on the electronics portion, and it rejected the only bid for the police building remodeling at its Tuesday meeting.

The addendum to the repeater site plan reads, "Contractor shall purchase (or minimum of 7 year lease) the land for the Repeater Site on Alto Hill. The site shall consist of one acre ± and sides of approximate equal dimensions. Two sides shall border Pikes Peak Road (right of way) and the existing Repeater Site Tract. Make arrangement with property owners for services required which cross property owned by others."

The jail committee, in a letter dated July 26 explaining its recommendation, interpreted the addendum as being "exclusionary in nature." The letter continues to say, "Depending on how the language is interpreted, it would appear that only one, or a maximum of two parcels of land would satisfy the bid specifications." The committee indicated that one of the sites is owned by someone with "close connections to the holder of the current communications contract."

A committee member said the person referred to is Carl Kelley Jr., who is partner with Rick Volquardsen of Lincoln Leasing—the holder of the present village communications contract.

In his explanation of the addendum, Inzer said a drawing in the original bid package showed only where the repeater should go, but did not specify land relationships in the area. The drawing shows the proposed repeater being located adjacent to Lincoln's repeater, which is situated on Kelley's land.

He added that the existing repeater site referred to in the addendum is intended to mean the site owned by Kelley.

Inzer said, "Wherever his (Kelley's) property line ends, then the other one (proposed repeater) should start." Inzer also said that surveys of the area show the best location for a repeater is the area where Lincoln's unit is located.

Adjacent to Lincoln's tract on the north side of Pikes Peak Road—but on the opposite side of Kelley's land from where Inzer proposes the new repeater—is a Continental Telephone microwave station, and the present repeater used by the Ruidoso Police Department (RPD).

Inzer, who was away from his office when contacted, said he would have to check his records to find out who instructed him to write the addendum. He said he assumed Moore relayed the message, but he thought Cupp had desired the clarification. He said the instructions were included in a list of several items relayed by Moore that needed looking into.

Both Cupp and Moore denied requesting the addendum. Members of the jail committee also said they had no previous knowledge of the addendum, as did Kelley and Volquardsen of Lincoln.

In response to Moore's published comments last week about Cupp having had contact with Travis Brauer, Cupp said Friday there is "not a word of truth to what Moore said." Cupp said his only contact with Inzer had been to ask the designer for the bid package so he (Cupp) could review it from the standpoint of purchasing agent.

Cupp added that Moore was advised by the jail committee—composed of Cupp, councilman Don Dale, Ruidoso police officer Jim Alston and building inspector Don Hendricks—that he was responsible for all contact with Inzer. Dale, chairman of the committee, and village manager Jim Hine also said Moore was instructed to maintain communication with Inzer.

The line of communication between Inzer and Moore also was outlined in a letter dated May 19, 1982, from village attorney Lee Huckstep to Moore. The letter gave Moore permission to retain Travis Brauer for assistance on the electronics. It stated that the contract was to be between Moore and the firm, and not between the village and Travis Brauer.

But Inzer said Friday that he made several phone calls to Cupp, RPD and Moore during the course of designing the specifications. He also said he was helped by Volquardsen with technical data, and that Volquardsen saved the village several thousand dollars by providing information that only could be obtained otherwise by extensive aerial surveys.

Cupp said Sunday his first knowledge of the addendum was the day before the bid opening. He said assistant village manager Frank Potter noticed the wording in the addendum and showed it to him.

When asked about the matter, Potter replied that when he showed the addendum to Cupp, on either Tuesday or Wednesday, July 20 or 21, Cupp told Potter not to get involved. Potter quoted Cupp as saying he was "having enough problems with it as it is."

"I think he already knew about it," Potter said.

Cupp said Thursday morning he had not known about the addendum until July 21. He made the comment during a break in a jail committee meeting that was scheduled to discuss alternatives for the police building project. The meeting was attended by Cupp, Alston, Hendricks and RPD chief Dick Swenor. Dale did not attend.

Cupp asked this reporter to leave the meeting, which took place at village hall. Because Dale was not present, Cupp said, the gathering was only a discussion. Cupp asked Volquardsen into the room afterwards. Later, when asked why a reporter was not allowed into the room (while a non-member of the committee was admitted), Cupp maintained it was an informal discussion.

Swenor confirmed that it was an informal meeting. He said the meeting was a discussion of lack of communication on the project.

Dale said he was informed by Alston that Volquardsen addressed the group. Dale reported that Volquardsen wanted to let the committee know that he knew nothing about the addendum, or the purpose for it. Dale also said that if he had been present, he would have recommended that Volquardsen not attend the meeting.

Volquardsen said he requested an audience with the committee Thursday morning because he wanted to find out who wrote the addendum, and that he wants a public explanation on the matter. Volquardsen indicated that the situation has hurt his business reputation.

Moore said Friday he thinks the matter is now a moot point because both the electronics bid and the construction bid were rejected by the council. He also said he cautioned Cupp to scrutinize the project closely from the beginning, and that he assumed Cupp instructed Inzer to write the addendum.

Moore also speculated that Inzer may have composed the addendum without it being requested. He said Inzer made many mistakes and caused delays on the project, and that the wording of the addendum was ambiguous.

Late addendum information received

Just before press time this morning, The News received information from architect John Vanoy Moore and designing engineer Jerry Inzer which seems to clarify certain questions raised about the police electronics leasing addendum.

Moore said Monday morning that he had talked to Inzer and that the designer told him the addendum was Inzer's own wording.

"That's the skinny—it wasn't John Cupp and I know it wasn't me (who asked for the addendum)," said Moore.

Contacted by telephone in Dallas and asked about Moore's statement, Inzer said, "I believe that's correct." He added that he believed writing the note in the addendum referring to the repeater site was his own action.

Inzer stated that it would be "ridiculous" to specify a certain piece of land for building. "I can't call for you to build a building on my land if I don't want you to," he said.

Inzer was told that confusion over which repeater site he was referring to in his note was raising problems. "I never thought about that happening," he said.

"I'm referring to the existing repeater site owned by Lincoln so that the land to the east of that is free," he stated.

"I think you've got the crux of the matter," he said. He explained that he thinks of the police repeater site as a microwave relay station, but acknowledged that it could be called a repeater site.

He said he wrote the addendum to refer to land east of the Lincoln site which is owned by the village or another party. "At any rate, it would not be Lincoln-owned," he noted.

Inzer said it would not make sense to specify land owned by one bidder because no one else could bid it. He added that he believed he had made an honest mistake in the note's wording (which could apply to either of two repeater stations) and that he will be writing a letter to the village clarifying the matter.

Future of proposed Hilton unclear

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

It seems that Ruidoso is destined to have a Hilton hotel, but whether one will be built in the near future remains undetermined.

Jim O'Leary, developer for the proposed hotel, said Thursday he is continuing with plans to construct a Hilton in Ruidoso, despite the recent District Court ruling reversing the governing body's rezoning of the proposed Hilton site to commercial.

Present plans call for the Hilton to be constructed at a site adjoining the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club. The club is being threatened with foreclosure from default, according to Rick Bowers, real estate agent involved in the sale of the property.

O'Leary said Thursday that he has chosen some alternate sites in Ruidoso for the hotel in case the racquet club site is unattainable for commercial development.

The racquet club tract was rezoned from residential to light commercial by the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) in February, upon the request of O'Leary. This decision was appealed to the governing body by several owners of property in the racquet club area.

The village council upheld P&Z's decision after conducting a de novo hearing on the case in March. An appeal was then submitted in District Court and was heard July 20. District Judge George Zimmerman reversed the decision of the Ruidoso governing body, thereby reverting the zoning of the property to residential.

But attorney Charles Hawthorne, representing owners of the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club, said Thursday he plans to submit a motion for a rehearing in District Court.

"He's wrong," the attorney said about the judge's ruling. He explained that Zimmerman was supposed to rule only on the governing body's decision and not consider the previous action of P&Z.

In announcing his decision, Judge Zimmerman reported that P&Z had not acted properly in placing conditions on its rezoning of the site to commercial. P&Z had stipulated that only a Hilton hotel be built at the site and that construction begin within one year. The council should have returned the matter to P&Z for reconsideration rather than hear the case itself, the judge explained.

Hawthorne said the judge was supposed to base his ruling only on whether the governing body had given proper notice of the hearing, had indulged in spot zoning, and had a sufficient vote.

"He found okay on all these points and then decided against," Hawthorne pointed out.

If Judge Zimmerman denies the motion for a rehearing, Hawthorne said he will submit an appeal to the state Supreme Court. He is hoping that the Village of Ruidoso will also decide to take such action.

Village councilmen discussed the matter

at Tuesday's council meeting but decided to postpone action until final judgment on the hearing is delivered. Options discussed include appealing to the state Supreme Court, sending the case back to P&Z or dropping the matter altogether.

Santa Fe attorney Frank Coppler, representing the village in the case, declined to comment on any recommendation he may make. He said he has not been given authority by the village to pursue further action on the case and is waiting for an opportunity to discuss the matter with village officials.

Myrna Rheadasil of Lewisville, Texas, one of the petitioners in the District Court hearing, said Friday she and her husband have not discussed the case with their attorney. No decision has been made concerning whether they will pursue court action should the village win in a rehearing or an appeal, she reported.

B. F. and Ann Phillips were the other petitioners requesting the court to reverse the commercial zoning decision of the Ruidoso council. Mr. Phillips said Friday he is no longer interested in the case. Ann Phillips could not be reached for comment.

O'Leary reported that his company is committed to constructing a Hilton hotel in Ruidoso and has not been set back by the obstacles presented thus far.

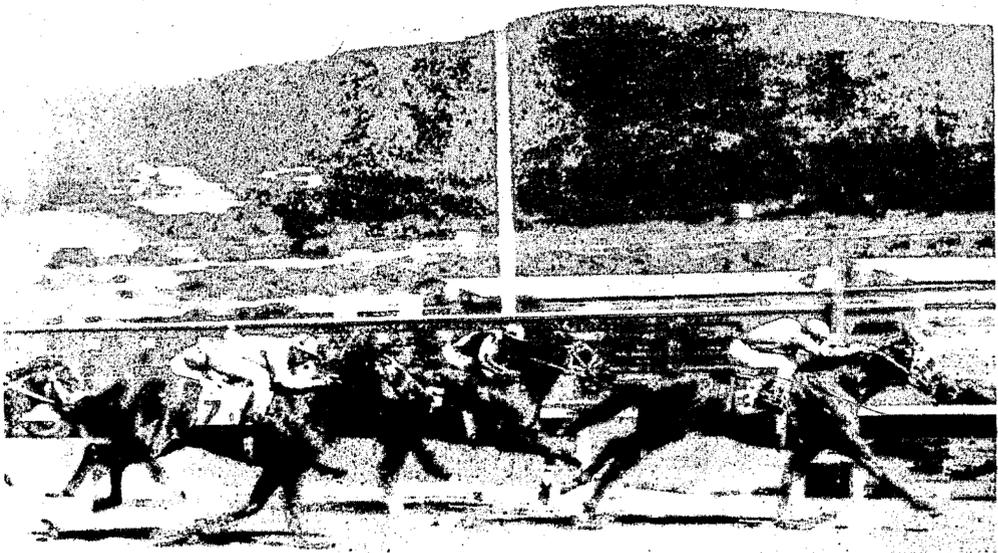

"I feel the town is ready for another hotel," he concluded.

Where and when it will be built are the questions which remain unanswered.

GROUND WAS BROKEN Friday by county commissioners meeting room and offices, an administrative office and a computer room. The addition should be completed in the latter half of December.

Suitably enough, Call Me Favorite raced as the favorite. She earned $23,121 out of the Consolation purse of $105,570.

maintain communication with Inzer.

The line of communication between Inzer and Moore also was outlined in a letter dated May 19, 1982, from village attorney Lee Huckstep to Moore. The letter gave Moore permission to retain Travis Braun for assistance on the electronics. It stated that the contract was to be between Moore and the firm, and not between the village and Travis Braun.

But Inzer said Friday that he made several phone calls to Cupp, RPD and Moore during the course of designing the specifications. He also said he was helped by Volquardsen with technical data, and that Volquardsen saved the village several thousand dollars by providing information that only could be obtained otherwise by extensive aerial surveys.

Cupp said Sunday his first knowledge of the addendum was the day before the bid openings. He said assistant village manager Frank Potter noticed the wording in the addendum and showed it to him.

When asked about the matter, Potter replied that when he showed the addendum to Cupp, on either Tuesday or Wednesday, July 20 or 21, Cupp told Potter not to get involved. Potter quoted Cupp as saying he was "having enough problems with it as it is."

"I think he already knew about it," Potter said.

Cupp said Thursday morning he had not known about the addendum until July 21. He made the comment during a break in a jail committee meeting that was scheduled to discuss alternatives for the police building project. The meeting was attended by Cupp, Alston, Hendricks and RPD chief Dick Swenor. Dale did not attend.

Cupp asked this reporter to leave the meeting, which took place at village hall. Because Dale was not present, Cupp said, the gathering was only a discussion. Cupp asked Volquardsen into the room afterwards. Later, when asked why a reporter was not allowed into the room (while a non-member of the committee was admitted), Cupp maintained it was an informal discussion.

Swenor confirmed that it was an informal meeting. He said the meeting was a discussion of lack of communication on the project.

Dale said he was informed by Alston that Volquardsen addressed the group. Dale reported that Volquardsen wanted to let the committee know that he knew nothing about the addendum, or the purpose for it. Dale also said that if he had been present, he would have recommended that Volquardsen not attend the meeting.

Volquardsen said he requested an audience with the committee Thursday morning because he wanted to find out who wrote the addendum, and that he wants a public explanation on the matter. Volquardsen indicated that the situation has hurt his business reputation.

Moore said Friday he thinks the matter is now a moot point because both the electronics bid and the construction bid were rejected by the council. He also said he cautioned Cupp to scrutinize the project closely from the beginning, and that he assumed Cupp instructed Inzer to write the addendum.

Moore also speculated that Inzer may have composed the addendum without it being requested. He said Inzer made many mistakes and caused delays on the project, and that the wording of the addendum was ambiguous.

Late addendum information received

Just before press time this morning, The News received information from architect John Vanoy Moore and designing engineer Jerry Inzer which seems to clarify certain questions raised about the police electronics leasing addendum.

Moore said Monday morning that he had talked to Inzer and that the designer told him the addendum was Inzer's own wording.

"That's the skinny—it wasn't John Cupp and I know it wasn't me (who asked for the addendum)," said Moore.

Contacted by telephone in Dallas and asked about Moore's statement, Inzer said, "I believe that's correct." He added that he believed writing the note in the addendum referring to the repeater site was his own action.

Inzer stated that it would be "ridiculous" to specify a certain piece of land for building. "I can't call for you to build a building on my land if I don't want you to," he said.

Inzer was told that confusion over which repeater site he was referring to

in his note was raising problems. "I never thought about that happening," he said.

"I'm referring to the existing repeater site owned by Lincoln so that the land to the east of that is free," he stated.

"I think you've got the crux of the matter," he said. He explained that he thinks of the police repeater site as a microwave relay station, but acknowledged that it could be called a repeater site.

He said he wrote the addendum to refer to land east of the Lincoln site which is owned by the village or another party. "At any rate, it would not be Lincoln-owned," he noted.

Future of proposed Hilton unclear

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

It seems that Ruidoso is destined to have a Hilton hotel, but whether one will be built in the near future remains undetermined.

Jim O'Leary, developer for the proposed hotel, said Thursday he is continuing with plans to construct a Hilton in Ruidoso, despite the recent District Court ruling reversing the governing body's rezoning of the proposed Hilton site to commercial.

Present plans call for the Hilton to be constructed at a site adjoining the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club. The club is being threatened with foreclosure from default, according to Rick Bowers, real estate agent involved in the sale of the property.

O'Leary said Thursday that he has chosen some alternate sites in Ruidoso for the hotel in case the racquet club site is unattainable for commercial development.

The racquet club tract was rezoned from residential to light commercial by the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) in February, upon the request of O'Leary. This decision was appealed to the governing body by several owners of property in the racquet club area.

The village council upheld P&Z's decision after conducting a de novo hearing on the case in March. An appeal was then submitted in District Court and was heard July 20. District Judge George Zimmerman reversed the decision of the Ruidoso governing body, thereby reverting the zoning of the property to residential.

But attorney Charles Hawthorne, representing owners of the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club, said Thursday he plans to submit a motion for a rehearing in District Court.

"He's wrong," the attorney said about the judge's ruling. He explained that Zimmerman was supposed to rule only on the governing body's decision and not consider the previous action of P&Z.

In announcing his decision, Judge Zimmerman reported that P&Z had not acted properly in placing conditions on its rezoning of the site to commercial. P&Z had stipulated that only a Hilton hotel be built at the site and that construction begin within one year. The council should have returned the matter to P&Z for reconsideration rather than hear the case itself, the judge explained.

Hawthorne said the judge was supposed to base his ruling only on whether the governing body had given proper notice of the hearing, had indulged in spot zoning, and had a sufficient vote.

"He found okay on all these points and then decided against," Hawthorne pointed out.

If Judge Zimmerman denies the motion for a rehearing, Hawthorne said he will submit an appeal to the state Supreme Court. He is hoping that the Village of Ruidoso will also decide to take such action.

Village councilmen discussed the matter

at Tuesday's council meeting but decided to postpone action until final judgment on the hearing is delivered. Options discussed include appealing to the state Supreme Court, sending the case back to P&Z or dropping the matter altogether.

Santa Fe attorney Frank Coppler, representing the village in the case, declined to comment on any recommendation he may make to the village regarding action to be taken. He said he has not been given authority by the village to pursue further action on the case and is waiting for an opportunity to discuss the matter with village officials.

Myrna Rheudasil of Lewisville, Texas, one of the petitioners in the District Court hearing, said Friday she and her husband have not discussed the case with their attorney. No decision has been made concerning whether they will pursue court action should the village win in a rehearing or an appeal, she reported.

B. F. and Ann Phillips were the other petitioners requesting the court to reverse the commercial zoning decision of the Ruidoso council. Mr. Phillips said Friday he is no longer interested in the case. Ann Phillips could not be reached for comment.

O'Leary reported that his company is committed to constructing a Hilton hotel in Ruidoso and has not been set back by the obstacles presented thus far.

"I feel the town is ready for another hotel," he concluded.

Where and when it will be built are the questions which remain unanswered.

GROUND WAS BROKEN Friday by county commissioners (from left) John Hightower and Thomas P. "Cotton" McKnight; county manager Truman A. "Bill" Billingsley; and commissioner Ben Hall for the courthouse additions, on which construction will begin this week. The new building will house a commissioners meeting room and offices, an administrative office and a computer room. The addition should be completed in the latter half of December.

Disqualification gives Classic to longshot Bojacs Magic

Hubbard, owner of Denim N Diamonds, expressed the views of most observers when he said he was sorry the disqualification marred what had been expected to be a duel between the two mares more regard as the finest today in quarter horse racing.

"I would rather the incident hadn't have happened," he said. "You hate to see anything like that, but I think it cost us the race. I think Denim N Diamonds and Rule The Deck are the two best mares in the world. Denim does her best running at the end and today she didn't have her best shot at it. She was knocked off stride. I still think Denim N Diamonds is the best quarter horse mare ever."

The twisted Classic outcome propelled Jimmie Hunt, the younger brother of Special Effort's regular rider, W. R. Hunt, into the Ruidoso spotlight. Earlier in the meeting, he'd guided Cute Investment to victory in the $688,620 Rainbow Derby. So Jimmie came out of the Classic with two straight major wins. "It feels great to win two big ones," he explained.

EXCITING SCENES LIKE THIS are in store for those attending "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid" pageant, one of the highlights of the three-day Old Lincoln Days festivities August 6, 7 and 8. The pageant will be performed all three days.

Lincoln pageant to be held despite problems from state

by BARBY GRANT Staff Writer

Old Lincoln Days festivities will be held as scheduled this weekend, despite problems presented by the State Monuments Division, which owns the pageant grounds. The state division is requiring payment of $1,375 or one-half of the pageant's net receipts from the Lincoln Pageant and Festival Corporation, organizers of the weekend event, according to Betty Shreengost, chairman of the corporation board.

The state wants to be reimbursed $500 for materials used to repair a building on the pageant grounds and $875 for the cost of providing four extra persons to patrol the area during the weekend.

"I don't think we're being treated quite fairly," Shreengost said. She reported that the state never discussed their intention to repair the building with the pageant corporation. She also said she does not agree that the extra state personnel are needed, as State Police, sheriff's deputies and night and day watchmen will be on hand to patrol and manage the crowds.

Shreengost said the pageant corporation has sent the state one dollar for a license to hold the pageant, as has been required in the past. This fee will enable the group to use the grounds for the pageant this year, and negotiations will be held afterwards on payment of the $1,375 or one-half of the receipts.

Old Lincoln Days festivities get underway this Friday, with the "Last Escape of by way of Ronnie Stewart, his agent, who happened to know trainer Baker. "I had never been on Bojacs Magic before," Hunt explained. "He left the gate really well and ran a big race. I couldn't have asked for more."

The victory was Bojacs Magic's fifth with one second in eight trips this season. His 1982 winnings stand at $102,197.

The also-rans checked in this way: 4th — Rocket Jet Bug, earning $9,484; 5th — Solamente, $6,774; 6th — She Mite Go, $5,419; 7th — Runnin Barre, $4,064; 8th — Ichi Rocket, $2,709. Wise Hi and Native Gypsy were scratched. Each earned $1,354.

The qualifying order: Rule The Deck, 21.67; Denim N Diamonds, 21.71; Native Gypsy, 21.87; Bojacs Magic, 21.88; Runnin Barre, 23.89; Ichi Rocket, 21.93; Wise Hi, 21.95; She Mite Go, 21.98.

DOUBLE B. EXPRESS, the durable old-timer in Ruidoso Downs stakes circles, placed together a remarkable stretch attack and snared a three-fourths length victory in Saturday's renewal of the Billy The Kid Handicap.

The seven-year-old gelding came from at least 10 lengths off the pace to win the seven-furlong struggle on the final jumps.

Double B. Express, well-handled by youthful Casey Lambert of El Paso, Texas, mustered his winning bid on the rail. First, he had to overtake the tough front-runner, Captense. Finally, he had to hold off the onrushing favorite, Fill Mackis Cup.

So close was the finish of the Billy The Kid that five of the seven horses in the field were separated by only one and one-fourth lengths at the wire.

For Double B. Express, the victory was a lucrative one, since he hauled in $7,860 out of the gross purse of $13,100. That pushed his 1982 earnings to $24,837. It also put his career bankroll at $188,032.

The victory also kept Double B. Express on course toward the Ruidoso Thoroughbred-Of-The-Meet title — an honor he collected in 1979. Earlier in the meeting, he annexed the Mescalero Apache Handicap and the Governor's Handicap. The gelding hauled the top weight of 120 pounds on Saturday, as compared to 119 for Fill Mackis Cup. The latter was foiled in his attempt at four straight wins.

Double B. Express negotiated the muddy course in 1:28 2/5 seconds and refunded betting prices of $3.40, $3.40, $2.60. Fill Mackis Cup, who earned $2,882 in a game effort, returned $3.20, 12.40. Joe Martinez was up.

Captense, handled by Mike Lidberg, earned $1,310 for third and paid $2.60.

Double B. Express is owned by the Double B. Ranch of Anthony, New Mexico. He's trained by Clifford Lambert (Casey's father). The younger Lambert is a senior at Coronado High School in El Paso.

SOMETHING DARING, a recent import from the West Coast, scored his first win of 1982 in Friday's six-furlong headliner at Ruidoso Downs.

But the colt had to survive a prolonged struggle before pulling out a half-length win. Willie Lovell was in the saddle.

Time To Sail, the 6-5 favorite directed by Mike Lidberg, was in contention almost from the first jump, and hounded Something Daring throughout the journey. But Time To Sail was unable to deliver sufficient stretch punch and finished second. Something Daring, owned by Joe Peacock of San Antonio, Texas, went off at 7-1 odds and collected $3,120 out of the $5,200 allowance purse. In his only other Ruidoso spin this season, he'd finished fifth at 13-1.

Earlier this year, Something Daring staged five outings at Santa Anita and Hollywood Park on the West Coast but was unable to seriously challenge allowance and claiming competition.

Friday's victory was worth mutual payoffs of $16, $6.80 and $5.80. The colt is trained by Morris Marshall. He was timed in 1:15 1/5 seconds.

Time To Sail refunded $3.40, $2.60. Musical King, a 41-1 longshot, rallied out of seventh place to take third, paying $7.80.

LOOM COMMAND found the level of competition she could handle in Thursday's six-furlong feature at Ruidoso Downs and cruised to a five-length win.

The victory was her first since a four-length win over Ruidoso maidens on June 19. Since then, she'd fruitlessly tried tougher allowance company three times.

Thursday's outing was limited to two-year-old fillies which had never won two races, and those conditions provided a winning combination for Loom Command.

Ridden by Mike Lidberg, the filly broke in second place, then took charge strongly at the halfway point. It was a romp down to the wire. The clock was stopped in 1:16 2/5 seconds on a fast track.

Owned by the powerful stable of Hugh C. Preston Jr. of Burkburnett, Texas, Loom Command returned mutual payoffs of $10, $4.60, $3.60. Bob Arnett, currently second in Ruidoso trainer standings, trains the filly.

Mark Of Sovereign ($4, $3.20) came in second. Justafar ($4.80) took third at nearly 10-1.

Thursday's agenda also included three six-furlong trial races for the upcoming Rio Grande Futurity. The top three finishers automatically qualified. The final berth was to be filled via a draw among the fourth-place finishers at 9 a.m. Friday.

The nine qualifiers so far: Dragon's Mist, Incredible T., Smart Salute, Draconic Deck, Prissy Missy, Code's Draconic, Teeny Blade, Cue Me First, Arabist. The three winners and their times: Dragon's Mist (1:18 1/5), Draconic Deck (1:17 2/5), Teeny Blade (1:16 4/5).

Moore said he suggested Travis Braun design the electronics portion of the project because the firm was working on the electrical and mechanical specs for the police building, and that the firm was doing a good job.

Moore said he distributed the addendum to bidders on July 19—the same day the addendum was dated. When asked how the paper could have reached bidders the same day it was dated, Moore said he changed the date on the addendum after it arrived from Dallas. He said he was unsure if the entire addendum had been retyped in his office.

Regarding the jail committee's interpretation of the addendum, Huckstep, whose advice on the addendum led the committee to recommend rejection of the bid, maintains that the repeater site in the addendum means the site now used by the police (on Continental's property), and that the proposed site refers either to Kelley's land, or to land on the other side of Continental.

Huckstep concedes that, because of unclear wording in the addendum, Inzer may have meant the preferred repeater site to be adjacent to Lincoln's site, on land not owned by Kelley. But Huckstep said, when considering the existing repeater mentioned in the addendum, and the fact that the bid was for a second police repeater, he comprehends the addendum as referring to the existing police repeater.

Volquardsen and Kelley interpret the addendum as referring to their repeater as the existing repeater site.

Kelley pointed out Sunday that the deed to his land specifies the site as being .08 of an acre, and the addendum calls for approximately one acre. The deed is dated December 1977. Kelley said he bought the land specifically for the Lincoln repeater, which he noted has been on the land four years.

Kelley also noted that guy wires for the repeater tower, as required in the original specs, would reach 90 feet from the tower in three directions. Because of the guy wires, he pointed out, the site would have to be at least 180 feet across, which he said is nearly an acre.

Kelley said he believed that Lincoln's repeater was meant as the existing one, and that the Continental site could satisfy the addendum, as well as land on the other side of his.

According to a county assessor's map, Continental's tract lies west of Kelley's, and is much larger. Also shown on the map is a large tract of unincorporated land to the east of Kelley's. Assessor's records show Hubert Rutherford as the owner of that tract.

Kelley believes that the addendum was poorly worded, and he said the council did the proper thing in rejecting bids because of the ambiguity.

Volquardsen also believes the addendum does not imply Lincoln's land is an exclusive choice for a repeater. He added that he felt there was no intent by anyone to do something illegal.

He said a number of sites exist on Alto Crest that are satisfactory for a repeater. He also believes that the repeater—meant to be a standby for the police—could be located in the same area on Continental's land as the main repeater now used.

Continental area sales manager Gary Sims also points out telephone company land would be adequate for another repeater. Sims, who bid on the telephone portion of the specs only and protested at the bid opening July 22 that the addendum excluded Continental from competitively bidding, said Thursday the addendum was received too late for the company to investigate land acquisition to satisfy the requirements.

Sims also said Continental bid only on the telephone system because the bid specs were received too late—July 13—for the company to seek competitive prices from manufacturers on related items in the electronics project. Also called for in the bid contract were radio transmitters, transmission tower, computer and terminals, a fire alarm system, video equipment, teletype writer, recorders and other equipment.

Moore said Continental could have obtained the bid package as early as June 29. Volquardsen confirmed that—he said he picked up the package on June 30.

As far as there being a violation of the State Purchasing Act, Huckstep said that because the council rejected all bids, there is no cause for prosecution arising from the situation. He said because the jail committee recommended rejection of bids, it did its job very well.

Wednesday racing this week features Dark Shadow

Dark Castle seeks to regain her brilliant form of 1981 when she faces seven foes in Wednesday's featured race at Ruidoso Downs.

The Wednesday program has been designated as Ladies Day and Senior Citizen Days. Each of the four Wednesday programs in August will admit those two groups free to the grandstand areas.

Dark Castle should be in a favorable spot to gain her first win since last season's Ruidoso Downs meeting. The six-furlong race is restricted to three and four-year-old fillies running under allowance terms for a purse of $4,500.

Dark Castle's main competition may come from the speedy Phans Miss, a four-year-old Master Salls filly.

She likes to get an early lead and let the others catch her. In her latest start, she led throughout to register a neck win over Special Platoon in 1:06 against three and four-year-old fillies running under allowance conditions on July 10 at Ruidoso Downs.

Racing continues Thursday with trial races for the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby. Three-year-olds will travel one mile for a chance to compete in the Derby on August 15. The purse will be $20,000-added.

Friday's highlight will be the Futurity Prep Stakes at six furlongs. Two-year-olds will race under allowance terms for a purse of $7,500-added.

Saturday's main event will be the Ruidoso Speed Handicap at four furlongs. Three-year-old and older runners will compete under handicap weights assigned by racing secretary Rick Menzop.

"Sunday's feature will be the Rio Grande Futurity for two-year-olds who qualified from three trial races last weekend. The six-furlong dash will pay the winner $28,032 from the total purse of $56,064.

MC Festival organizers meet

The Ruidoso Business Association (RBA) met Thursday at the Holiday Inn in a special meeting concerning the September 29 through October 2 Ruidoso Motorcycle Festival. RBA board director Nancy Radziewicz told The News.

She stated that the Ruidoso village council accepted RBA's non-profit corporate status application, thus assuring that the village will level the three acres of land released to RBA by the Holiday Inn.

Radziewicz said an independent surveyor will mark off the property's boundaries. Once the corners are flagged, she added, the village is expected to level the land for the Ruidoso Motorcycle Festival.

Other RBA business discussed was: —Holiday Inn has donated the services of its banquet room to RBA.

—RBA members decided to order a third tent as a hospitality tent.

—Confirmation was given that flooring will be supplied for all tents.

—Receipt books were handed out to solicitors of award and contingency prizes.

—A Monday, August 30, copy and advertising deadline for the festival program was set.

Lilly not enthusiastic about possible NFL strike

by GARY BROWN
Sports Writer

Former Dallas Cowboy all-pro defensive lineman Bob Lilly isn't excited about a possible National Football League (NFL) strike.

In fact, Lilly is in disagreement with at least one of the goals of the NFL players' union.

"I don't understand it," he said. "I can see a need to represent players for injuries and grievances but not 55 percent of the gross profits with everybody on a scale that has no business in pro sports."

Lilly, who spoke at the Inn of the Mountain Gods Friday night under the sponsorship of the Full Gospel Business Men's International, has a summer home in the Ruidoso area. He lives most of the year in Vaco, Texas.

He admits that football players don't make as much on the average as baseball or basketball players.

"I agree somewhat with that point," he said. "However, there's a lot of difference when it comes to numbers of players on a team and the total amount of games. You don't have to play the game either."

"I think the league will lose a lot of fans if the players go on strike. It's like after the baseball strike. I don't think baseball is as popular now as it was before the strike. It's particularly bad now at a time when there's 10 percent unemployment in the country. I have a hunch that the owners might call the season off."

On another subject the NFL is currently embroiled in, the former defensive tackle believes only a small minority of the players are involved with drugs.

"Probably less than 15 percent of the players currently in the league are involved with them," he said. "I think it's basically a lack of education as far as using drugs is concerned."

"The drug use probably started back in the late 1960s during the Vietnam War. It was very rare then. You could generally tell who the guys were who took drugs because they usually acted goofy. There's no place in professional athletics or anywhere for drugs."

Lilly's career with the Cowboys was one associated with success and winning. He made all-NFL 11 of the 14 years he played before he retired in 1975.

The former Texas Christian University (TCU) athlete (he made All-American there) joined the Cowboys in 1961 when Dallas was a second-year expansion team. Lilly and the Cowboys went through four losing seasons before getting a winning campaign in 1965.

The next year Dallas won the Eastern Division of the NFL (before the league merged with the old American Football League) and was edged by Green Bay for the league title.

From then on, Dallas was a perennial powerhouse in the NFL, making the playoffs 15 of 16 years and earning the nickname, "America's Team."

The highlight of Lilly's career was the Cowboys' Super Bowl championship in January of 1972 (for the 1971 season). Dallas rolled over Miami 24-3 and the defense was awesome.

"We held three playoff teams to nine points total," Lilly said. "That was definitely the highlight of my career."

Before beating Miami, the Cowboys had topped Minnesota 10-3 in the first round of the playoffs. They then defeated San Francisco for the second straight year, taking a 14-3 decision in Dallas.

The previous year, Dallas made the Super Bowl but lost to Baltimore by three points. They defeated Detroit 5-0 and San Francisco 17-10 in the National Conference (NFC) playoffs to reach the Super Bowl.

"That loss (to Baltimore in the Super Bowl) was the biggest disappointment of my career," Lilly remarked. "We were the better team and should have won."

"Our team in those years had great execution. We made very few mistakes. The linebackers were probably the biggest difference."

Lilly played beside Jethro Pugh, Larry Cole, George Andre and Pat Toomay in the Cowboys' defensive line. He carried 265 pounds on his 6-5 frame but has lost considerable weight since his playing days.

"I don't think there's any real difference between the defensive linemen of my days and the ones now," Lilly laughed. "I remember 'Big Daddy' Lipscomb from the Baltimore Colts played before me and he was big and talented."

Tom Landry was the Cowboys' coach when the franchise was formed in 1960 and he still is the Dallas mentor. What's it like to play under a man that is a near-legend in Texas?

"He's probably the best coach in the game," Lilly said. "You always knew exactly where you stood with him. He lays everything on the line and is very fair. His biggest asset is that he's a very good organizer and thinker. He communicates very well with his assistants."

Lilly likes the present Dallas team but feels the Cowboys still need some help at linebacker. He still rates his old team as the club to beat in the NFC Eastern Division.

"I guess the Cowboys should be favored," he said. "However, they're in a tough division, probably the toughest in the league."

"New York should be tough again and Washington and St. Louis should be improved. I'm not sure about Philadelphia."

As far as the rest of the conference goes, Lilly is still impressed with San Francisco.

"I think last year they were the best team," he said. "They should be back again this year and Atlanta should be tougher. In the Central Division, Green Bay should be good and Detroit also. Chicago could do well also but I'm not sure about Tampa Bay."

Lilly, who played high school football and basketball in Throckmorton, Texas, before going on to TCU, now makes personal appearances and has done commercials for Black and Decker.

He looks back on his football career realistically.

"Football is really a microcosm of life," he said. "You learn self-discipline and the ability to work with other people and respect them."

BOB LILLY, former Dallas Cowboy all-pro defensive tackle, has a summer home in the Ruidoso area. The ex-Cowboy, who retired in 1975, spoke at a gathering sponsored by the Full Gospel Business Men's International last Friday at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

Comment from reader: A couple of years or so ago you did a column explaining how to build nesting boxes for wood ducks. About the time the article appeared I had some spare time and a few odd pieces of lumber left from a project, so I put a couple of boxes together. I was interested in the idea because the back of our lot slopes down to a cove of a small river. We had seen wood ducks in the area several times before and I wondered if they would use a homemade box. After the shelters were complete I took them out in the boat for placement. I placed them in secluded spots about a hundred yards apart. I was careful to get them far enough away from the house so the occupants wouldn't feel threatened, but close enough to be observed closely with binoculars. They were mounted about five feet above the water on poles, and an inverted, funnel-shaped cone of painted aluminum flashing around the pole kept predators from climbing the pole to enter the nest. Well, as you may have guessed, I probably wouldn't have written this letter if the results were negative, so you get the gist of the ending. We were delighted when a wood duck decided that our farthest away box was a close enough approximation of a nesting habitat to take up residence. We were so excited we could hardly wait for another to occupy the second box, but one never did. Maybe it was too close to us, or maybe there wasn't another duck around that was in need of a nest. Who knows? At any rate, we are going to leave it where it is for another season and see what happens.

It's a great feeling when a wild creature accepts something you fashioned in order to perpetuate the species. To believe that you have loaned nature a hand in return for the things that we have taken sets pretty well with me. I don't know of a living soul who doesn't get a warm feeling from observing the everyday routines of wild critters from a secluded spot. Dennis W., New Jersey Author's note: Super! That's all I can add. Anyone interested in a reprint of the column on building nesting boxes can get one for the price of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send questions to: Wilderness Wisdom, P. O. Box 237, Pittsville, Maryland 21850.

ALL-STAR PREP FOOTBALL GAME

Nunley and mates stop North

Around Sports
with Gary Brown

Even though a strike is a good possibility, I've decided to go ahead and make my predictions for the upcoming (hopefully) National Football League (NFL) season.

All of the division races should be close. The one exception is the American Conference (AFC) Central Division, where Cincinnati should win easily.

Let's start with Cincinnati's division. The defending AFC champions are young and can only get better while the rest of the division teams are getting a bit over the hill. I see the Bengals winning the division with a 12-4 mark. Pittsburgh should finish second with a 9-7 record but the Steelers are a bit old.

Cleveland improved its defense during the off season but still has too many weaknesses to seriously challenge for the division title. Look for the Browns to go 8-8 and finish ahead of the aging Houston Oilers (5-11).

In the AFC Western Division, San Diego appears to be the best of a tough group. The Chargers' offense, with quarterback Dan Fouts throwing to Kellen Winslow and Wes Chandler, and Chuck Muncie running, is probably the best in the league. San Diego improved its defense during the off season, getting standout defensive back Tim Fox in a trade with New England. Look for the Chargers to go 11-5.

Denver and Kansas City are about equal, with the Broncos finishing 10-6 last season, losing the division title on the last week when it was upset by Chicago. Craig Morton should still have throwing ability left in him and the Denver offensive line is one of the best. The Broncos' defense is always rugged and makes the big play frequently. Look for Denver to go 10-6 again this season.

Kansas City is a run-oriented team that should probably get a more balanced attack if it's to make a serious challenge for the division title. However, the Chiefs have a tough, improving defense, including potentially one of the best defensive backfields in the league. Look for Kansas City to go 9-7.

Oakland appears on the way down. The Raiders won the Super Bowl two years ago but suffered from injuries and an abundance of age last season. Injuries can be cut down from season to season but age can't. Look for Oakland to finish at 8-8.

Figure Seattle for last place again. The Seahawks had a poor draft and have a weak defense. Look for Seattle to go 5-11.

The Eastern Division is very tough. However, look for the New York Jets to win by a slight margin.

Quarterback Richard Todd is getting better all the time and he has a bevy of swift receivers to throw to. New York should finish at 10-6-1.

Buffalo should finish a very close second to the Jets and should make the playoffs as a wild card team. Joe Ferguson is one of the better quarterbacks around and the Bills defense is strong at almost every position. I see Buffalo finishing at 10-6.

Miami has a good team but in the tough Eastern Division may only finish in third place. The Dolphins have one of the best coaches in the league in Don Shula and have a lot of young talent. However, they don't seem to be as capable of making the big play as the Jets and Bills. Look for Miami to go 9-6-1 in this very tough division.

Baltimore and New England have a long ways to go before they become solid contenders. Both teams had excellent drafts but they were so inept last season it will probably take at least three years before they become contenders. Look for Baltimore to go 5-11 and New England 4-12.

The National Conference (NFC) Eastern Division should be won by Dallas again. Still, this division might be the toughest in the league. It had the best record against outside competition last season and should be even better this year.

The Cowboys still have too many horses for the rest of the division, however. They should win the crown with an 11-5 record. Second place should go to the New York Giants. New York went 9-7 last season and made the playoffs for the first time in 38 years. The Giants play defense as well as anybody in the league, and Rob Carpenter is a solid, driving running back. New York also got some help for its running attack in the draft. Look for the Giants to go 10-6 and probably make the playoffs again.

The Philadelphia Eagles appear to be slipping from their conference championship peak of two years ago. Coach Dick Vermeil seems to wear his players out by the time the playoffs come around. This year that probably won't be a problem as the Eagles should not make the playoffs. Look for them to finish in a third place tie with the improving and aggressive Washington Redskins, each team ending up with an 8-8 record.

The St. Louis Cardinals will probably be the best last place team in the NFL this season. They have some strong points, particularly on offense, but can't compete in this rugged division. I see the Cardinals finishing at 6-10.

The NFC Western Division should be closer than last season.

San Francisco won the Super Bowl last year but Atlanta has too much talent to have another 7-9 season. I see the 49ers winning the division again with an 11-5 record while the Falcons improve to 10-6 and a hard wild card berth. The main difference between the two teams is San Francisco's superior defensive backfield. Atlanta's defensive backfield is still its biggest weakness.

The Los Angeles Rams added quarterbacks Bert Jones and Vince Ferragamo to their team during the off season. However, the Rams' biggest problem last year was their defense. Traditionally a strong defensive team, Los Angeles was weakened through trades and free agents getting away. Look for the Rams to finish at 8-8 in third place.

All New Orleans has is George Rodgers, the NFL's rushing leader in his rookie season last year. But the Saints have little else to help raise themselves out of the cellar. Defensively, the Saints have always been weak, and they didn't help themselves much in that category in the draft. I see New Orleans finishing at 5-11.

The Central Division should be really close with none of the teams rated as a powerhouse.

Detroit has the best talent, however, and should squeak in for the division title it has narrowly missed the past two seasons. The Lions have running back Billy Sims, two good quarterbacks and the top quarterback-sacking defensive unit in the conference. I see Detroit going 9-6-1 and winning the division.

Green Bay, with an outstanding passing attack, should be in the thick of the race the entire season. The Packers won't come back all the way this season but should finish at 8-7-1. They stand an outside chance at making the playoffs.

Tampa Bay won the division title last season but was probably the weakest team in the playoffs. The Bucs' offensive line was destroyed by the Dallas Domsday Defense in the playoffs, and Tampa Bay went for offensive linemen in the draft. However, it usually takes offensive linemen around three years to make it in the league. I see the Bucs going 7-9 in the tight Central Division race.

Chicago has a tough defense but not much else. Look for the Bears to finish at 6-10, the same mark they had last season.

It's hard to imagine the Minnesota Vikings in last place but all they have is a passing attack. The Vikings' running attack doesn't exist and they're without a pass rush on defense. The Viking defensive backfield could use some help. Look for Minnesota to go 5-11.

That's how I see the division races now. Of course, a strike even for part of the season would throw all the races into turmoil.

I'm not making any predictions on the playoffs' outcome until mid-season. If there is a mid-season.

Former Ruidoso High School star Lon Nunley and his South teammates put a virtual stop to the North offensive machine in taking a 16-7 victory in the 38th annual New Mexico All-Star football game at the University of New Mexico (UNM) stadium in Albuquerque Friday night.

Nunley, who played at linebacker and also on kickoff and kickoff return teams, played about half the game. He will play for UNM in the fall.

The South held the North to 147 yards total offense while gaining 283 yards of its own. The South's advantage was particularly clear on the ground. The South rolled up 213 yards rushing while the North was able to gain just 95. The South had a 70-52 advantage passing.

There wasn't any scoring in the opening quarter but the North hit the scoreboard first with 4:56 remaining in the second period.

After a South fumble on its own 40, the North drove 40 yards in nine plays culminating in a 14 yard touchdown pass from Bill Rucker of Gallup to his former high school teammate, Brett Dominguez.

Dominguez made a fine leaping catch in the left corner of the end zone for the score. Lynn Reece of St. Pius of Albuquerque kicked the extra point and the North had a 7-0 advantage.

However, it didn't take long for the South to strike back and take the lead for good. Starting from its own 31, the South drove 69 yards in 11 plays. The big play in the drive was a 32 yard pass from quarterback Steve Sides of Roswell to Tony Alexander of Hobbs. Sides had three completions in five attempts for 70 yards in the game.

Joe Harton of Roswell, who was the leading rusher in the game with 85 yards in 12 carries, got a first down on the North 13.

Three plays later, Joe Newton of state AAAA champion Clovis ran around the left side for seven yards and a touchdown.

Sides then hit Alamogordo's Don Doherty for the two-point conversion and the South took an 8-7 advantage into the locker room at halftime.

The second half was pretty much all South. The "Rebels" had two great scoring opportunities and scored on one of them.

Early in the final quarter, the South drove to the North's two before giving the ball up on downs.

However, following an interception several minutes later, the South scored its final touchdown.

The South drove 38 yards in nine plays for the score. Talented Johnny Poe of state AAA champion Portales went over from the one to end the drive. Another two-point pass play, this one going from Sides to Poe, gave the South its final margin of 16-7.

The North didn't get beyond the 50 in the remaining time of the contest.

Nunley, who made AAA all-state as a linebacker, had two unassisted tackles and seven assisted tackles. He came into the game for the first time early in the first quarter and immediately made his presence felt, getting an unassisted tackle on his first play.

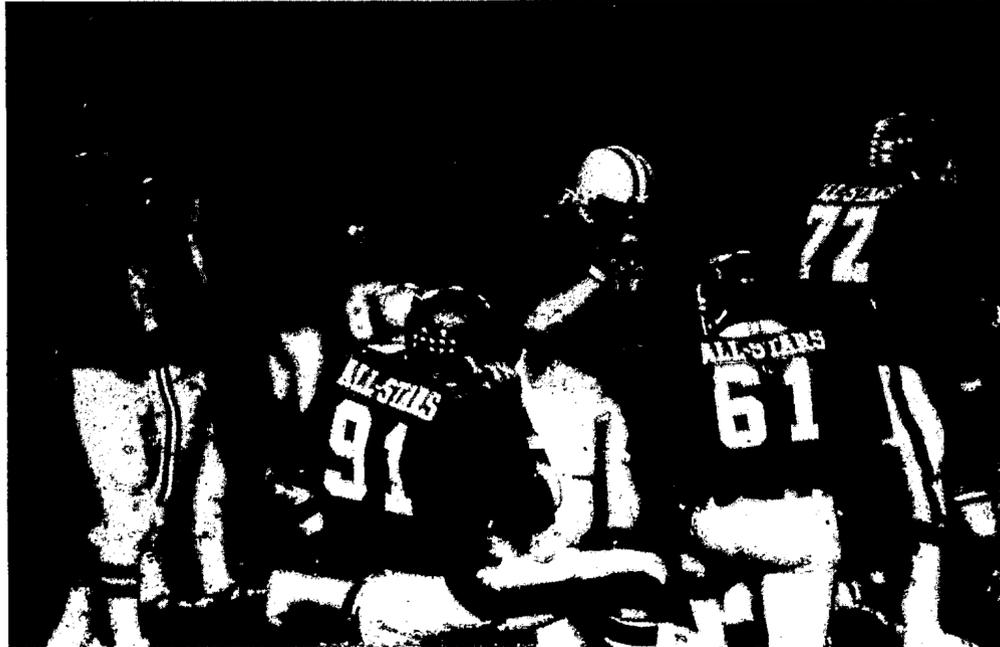

"I was pretty satisfied with the way I played," Nunley said. "I would have liked to play more but I was pleased with my play."

"I knew we were going to win the game all the time. It seemed like the North players weren't ready to play the game."

The only other district 3-AAA player on the South team, lineman George Rivas of Silver City, also made himself a factor in the contest.

Nunley will go to Albuquerque Thursday for the opening of UNM fall practice. He'll begin classes at the UNM campus August 23.

NOTES: The South now leads the series with 23 victories to 13 for the North. There have been three ties. The last Ruidoso player to play in the All-Star game was wide receiver Clifton Neal in 1976. Clifton scored the South's first touchdown in that game. He was the Warriors' quarterback as a senior but was switched to wide receiver for the All-Star game. He's the older brother of Warrior Scott Neal, who made all-state honorable mention last fall as a defensive back. Scott also played quarterback and halfback for the Warriors. Joe Harton of Roswell was named Most Valuable Player on offense for this year's game.

LON NUNLEY, (number 42 in center) confers with his South All-Star teammates during the second half of Friday night's game with the North All-Stars in Albuquerque. Nunley, who graduated from Ruidoso High School in May and will attend the University of New Mexico in the fall, played at linebacker during the game. The South won 16-7.

Kinder gym classes held in RGA gym

Nancy Radziewicz teaches kinder gym for children three to five years old at the Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy (RGA) gym every Tuesday and she enjoys the classes a lot.

"One of the main goals of the classes is to have fun," she said.

Nancy, who along with her husband Mike owns and operates West Winds Lodge, teaches the children some gymnastics and body awareness skills.

"We teach them self-testing," Radziewicz said. "They do activities at their own level. A child of three may do something at a different level than a five-year-old child."

Radziewicz has considerable experience in gymnastics and physical education. She has a degree in physical education and health from Ithaca College in upstate New York. She taught children's classes similar to the kinder gym class while she attended college, and continued afterwards in New Jersey.

The children in the class gradually progress in each activity they do. They work with hula hoops, uneven parallel bars, balance beams, trampoline and ropes, among other exercises.

There are 10 children in the program at present but the classes are held year-round. The class is from 11 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. each Tuesday. There is a $10 fee per month for each child.

The programs at the RGA gymnasium are constantly expanding. Besides kinder gym, the RGA is expected to have beginning gymnastics, advanced gymnastics, team gymnastics and twirling in the fall.

There is a possibility dance classes and other programs will also be held.

Anyone wishing to enroll their children in the classes can call Radziewicz at 257-4031 or Nancy Richardson at 378-4661.

are 10 children in the class, which is open to youths three to five years old. The class is held year round.

hula hoop exercise is just one of several the children, ages three to five, do during the weekly class.

are Rachel Hall, Nicole Radziewicz and Valarie Bergloff.

Police train for deadly force

Training was the name of the game last week at the Ruidoso Police Department (RPD).

Larry Simon, deputy chief and director of training at the department, supervised officers as they underwent semiannual firearms certification. The training, which involved accuracy and alertness drills, underscores RPD's emphasis on continuous upgrading of its personnel.

"We're always going back to the basics," Simon explained. "You just can't afford to forget them. Any department is asking for trouble if it doesn't have (training) programs constantly."

Simon's specialties are firearms, weapons, street survival and the legal system. Simon, who is an RPD captain, is just one cog of the in-house training machine that Chief Richard Swenor puts to maximum use. Other officers instruct their colleagues on defensive techniques, street tactics, radio procedures, accident investigations, and traffic and criminal procedures, among other specialties.

All the training is designed to maintain a force that, on a per capita basis, is one of the most skilled in the state, according to Simon.

"Almost everybody here has their intermediate certificates ... and we have more in the Advanced II category than anywhere in the state," he said. Simon added that New Mexico requires an officer to participate in 400 hours of sanctioned training to qualify as an Advanced II officer, and from 100 to 200 hours to be certified in the intermediate stages.

The firearms program last week focuses on one of the most recognizable aspects of police work—training for the event when an officer would use "deadly force."

Simon explained RPD officers are instructed to use deadly force only to "defend themselves or innocent public from the threat of death or great bodily harm." He said the policy is more strict than state law allows, which provides broader alternatives for use of service weapons.

The firearms certification is a two-part process combining classroom and range testing. The classroom gives officers more knowledge to work from in the field, Simon noted. At the gun range, officers hone their skills to develop practices that Simon hopes become automatic in threatening situations.

"We emphasize firearms and baton training a lot," Simon continued. "But we hope the training will never have to be put to use. If we ever have to use it, though, we have to be the best."

Simon compares the instinctive reactions learned in the use of weapons to defensive driving skills. When an officer has only a split second to assess a threat, handling a weapon should be automatic, Simon suggests, giving the officer more time to concentrate on a response.

Simon instructs officers in the motor skills involved to pull a service revolver from the holster and go into a ready stance. With repeated practice, the motions should be performed instinctively.

At the range, officers are drilled on fixed and moving targets for accuracy and firearms handling. Simon would like to incorporate a combat weapons course into the program, with movable objects to simulate more life-like encounters such as officers meet on the street.

To compensate for the limited facilities at the range, Simon manufactures scenes at the police station to simulate "shoot-don't shoot" situations: Officers are led through the setting, and graded on their reactions to unknown targets.

"If officers have to use weapons, they have to weigh several factors," Simon said. "What citizens sometimes don't understand, is we have to key a lot on what they're doing with their hands, we can't judge from their eyes or their thoughts."

Simon said RPD has put about seven years into its firearms training program, using state Police Academy techniques as well as information from law enforcement agencies around the country.

"The firearms program is designed to give officers the best odds of surviving a confrontation, yet not placing citizens in any more jeopardy than we have to," he explained.

When asked what his goals were concerning firearms and defensive skills training, Simon replied, "The optimum hope is that you never have to attend a police funeral ... But it doesn't always work out that way."

The pervasive paranoia in police work leads to a consistently high level of stress among officers: Simon noted that stress is a tremendous liability—it can be something that affects the whole department if not handled correctly.

Another element of training is to alleviate stress on the force. Employees, including dispatchers and secretaries, are taught how to recognize symptoms of the problem brewing in their colleagues.

"Stress used to be blamed on alcohol or a person's personality," Simon said. "But now we are trying to detect what the signs and symptoms are—they can be typical of any human."

Agitation, aggression, drinking and exhaustion are all characteristics of constrained emotions that betray the underlying cause as stress, he explained. When officers show these signs—which he said are also typical of burn-out—Simon said the best remedy is to show support and communicate with the victim.

"The ability to communicate is 'one of the best weapons' a police officer can have, Simon believes. He adds that communication, and a person's attitude to public contact, is hard to instruct because much of police contact comes during hostile circumstances.

"Communication is compounded by the fact in our job, anytime you are in a bad situation people are already scared or mad. Policemen have to be amateur psychologists, with a little bit of priest thrown in."

If an RPD recruit exhibits signs contrary to maintaining good public rapport, Simon said, the officer would not succeed on the force.

"When some guys put on a badge it really changes their personality," he commented. "Sometimes they'll just get themselves, the public and the department in trouble."

Insisting on a quality force is a matter the RPD captain doesn't take lightly. He feels the department has achieved a respectable status because employees are motivated to do a good job.

"If there is anything unique about this department, it's the people," he said. "Most are motivated to do a good job because most like the town and people. We all stand by each other a great deal."

Ruidoso, thanks for putting us on your map.

It all began a few months ago when the land was cleared and building materials began to arrive on the scene. Rumors flew around Ruidoso. "Will it be a bank?" "Is it a new service station?" "Maybe a restaurant!"

The building slowly but surely began to take shape, and when the word "McDonald's®" went up on the roof, everyone was happy. McDonald's and its world famous food had arrived in Ruidoso.

Of course, there is still some work to do before the first Big Mac® Sandwich is served.

Lamb and wool producers referendum this month

Lamb and wool producers will have an opportunity during an August 16-27 referendum to vote on whether they want the American Sheep Producers Council Incorporated to continue its market promotion and improvement program on their behalf by entering into a new agreement with the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

By approving the referendum's proposed deductions from producer incentive payments, lamb and wool producers would authorize deductions of up to four cents per pound on shorn wool and 20 cents per hundred-weight on unshorn lambs marketed in 1982, stated Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Rank said deductions would be used by the council to finance advertising and sales promotion programs for wool and lamb. Deductions would also support programs to develop and disseminate information on product quality, production management and marketing improvement for wool and sheep.

The Lincoln County office of ASCS in Carrizozo will distribute copies of the agreement and ballots to sheep producers in early August. Producers may cast their ballots by mailing or delivering them in person to county ASCS officers by the close of the referendum.

Lincoln County is one of the largest wool producing counties in New Mexico, stated Colleen Salazar, Lincoln County ASCS executive director.

Anyone may vote who has owned sheep six months old or older for at least 30 consecutive days during 1981. Votes may be cast by individuals or by cooperatives. Members of cooperatives which cast votes are not eligible to vote as individuals in the referendum.

The agreement requires approval by two-thirds of the total volume of producers, or two-thirds of the total volume of production represented in the referendum.

Accident kills Ruidoso man

A Ruidoso man was killed Thursday in a two-vehicle accident on Highway 70 near Mesalero.

Tyson P. Van Dyke, 30, died of massive head injuries sustained in the accident.

Police reported Van Dyke was driving eastbound on Highway 70 and crossed the center line, striking the left front of a semi-truck towing a mobile home. The driver of the truck, Bobby J. Henson of Albuquerque, was uninjured.

Inmate escapes

An inmate who escaped from Camp Sierra Blanca Thursday remained at large Monday morning.

Scott Williman, 29, who was sentenced in 1981 to a three-year term for armed robbery, escaped from the minimum security prison sometime after a routine bed check at 9:30 p.m.

Williman is described as 5-foot-11 and 175 pounds. He has brown hair and blue eyes, and he is missing two upper right teeth. "Debbie I Love You" is tattooed on Williman's left hand, state Correction Department spokesman Jeff Pederson said.

The Dreamer

DANNIE STORM

The Juneau Miracle
There is something about the City of Juneau, Alaska, that sets your imagination free. There it is at the foot of the high green steep mountain, right next to the light blue bay. You wonder how a city happened to be there, and yet there it is, a sparkling little many-colored jewel, almost proof that nothing is impossible.

And something happened here during our trip that was a true miracle.

Across from the house at the foot of the mountain, in the early days, sixty-five years ago, there used to be what we called the Siwash Indian Cemetery. Bordering it was a steep walk, made by two two-by-twelve planks. Lynn, at the age of about four years, took his kitty car up to the top of the sidewalk and came racing down to crash through a chicken wire fence into some rocks. I remember, Mother running up there with her blonde hair waving. A Doctor Mooney, who lived down the street from us, sewed up a cut on Lynn's forehead, leaving a scar which he bears to this day. Dr. Mooney praised Lynn's courage during the operation, giving him candy and chewing gum; and Lynn and the doctor became great friends.

Joe Redigner knew that the grave of his stepfather, W. H. Wilson (War Horse Wilson), an Alaska pioneer, was somewhere in Juneau.

We could not tell from the Juneau Maps for sure whether or not there was a new cemetery; and I could not remember where the old cemetery was, or whether or not the Old Siwash Indian Cemetery was still there.

Anyhow we went in the rented car around the point on along the paved highway where the wagon road used to be. Sure enough there was a cement curb where Lynn had made his "Wreck of old 97" run. A green rolling meadow showed up where the old Indian cemetery was, and here appeared several ancient head stones. Farther on you could see other markers down the hill. It turned out that there were a great many graves at this cemetery, many of them of many years back. We went down the road bordering the cemetery and stopped the car where a row of grave stones could be seen extending to the other end of the cemetery.

Joe walked down this row, and then we heard a shout. He stood pointing down to the ground.

"I've found it," said Joe. There it was, W. H. Wilson. Joe had walked straight upon his stepfather's grave, realizing a dream come true.

We all looked at each other in silence a moment and then it came to us that we were led there by the Almighty Hand; and we all agreed that The Good Lord had guided us to this spot, as He surely guided us throughout the whole trip.

"White Knuckle" Dan
I have been given a new nick-name by my brother Lynn. We were at the airport in Juneau in the early morning ready to fly to the historic little city of Skagway. After a bit here came what looked to be a cotton-headed teen-ager in blue jeans chewing his bubble gum. With a word of greeting he began throwing our suit cases into the tiny plane.

I though he was sort of a baggage helper, and that the pilot would be along soon. We got in the plane; and after blowing a great bubble with his gum, the cotton-headed boy got in the pilot's seat.

"He is probably just getting things ready, for the pilot" I thought, when with a roar the plane began bounding along the runway. I reached for pencil and paper to make a quick will, but it was too rough for writing.

I happened to look over at Lynn and he was in a great fit of laughter. He pointed down to my knuckles where I had a death grip on the rail next to the window. They were miniature replicas of the snow-capped mountain peaks, which stretched away on every hand. Lynn laughed halfway to Skagway.

The description of the pilot might have been just a shade of "strong tobacco", as the old timer says.

He was about twenty-one years of age, and had been flying since he was fourteen. And he was a born pilot with the smooth coordination of a juggler; and he gave us a very pleasant ride.

Next time or so we will have a little something about Skagway, Anchorage and Valdez.

Old Lincoln Days
This Weekend

This message will reach you on Monday August second; and the following weekend will see the thirty-third enactment of the Old Lincoln Days, which began as a tribute to the pioneers of the Southwest, in 1941, the four hundredth birthday of New Mexico.

The pageant is shaping up fine under the direction of Dianna Shreengost, with her husband, Bill Shreengost Jr. playing the role of The Kid.

The pageant grounds and the set have been spruced up and the countryside is all green from recent rains. A set of young actors, cut out of the same cloth as their pioneer forefathers, are teaming up with the veterans of the show to make this "Last Escape of Billy The Kid" one of the best.

The pageant is in a class by itself, being the only Western show to take place on the very spot where the real action took place. And the little town of Lincoln is hardly changed at all from what it was more than a hundred years ago.

Come on over and let us all turn the clock back to the colorful frontier days.

 No American tourist to Holland should be without the "Holland Culture Card." This inexpensive pass (which must be bought in the U.S.) gives you free or reduced-rate admissions to museums, galleries, castles and tours all over Holland, plus discounts or last-minute tickets to cultural events.

 Amsterdam has great open-air markets; browsing is free. Some of the best: the Singelgracht floating flower market, Valkenburgerstraat flea market, Oudemanshuispoort book market.

+++
 For an inexpensive bite, try a broodje (sandwich) at any local Broodjeswinkel (sandwich shop). For a lot of food for the money, try the Rijstafel buffet at any of Amsterdam's many Indonesian restaurants.

+++
 Canal cruises in Amsterdam, by day or night, are a great way to explore the city. The best deals are on the canals furthest out from the town center; you get a longer cruise for the same price. Ask the friendly people at Ruidoso Travel.

Attic and Friends like their new location

The Attic and Friends complex on Mechem Road near Innsbrook Village offers a great variety of food and merchandise for its customers.

Susan Ruch, who owns the entire complex, operates the Attic and leases out space for five other businesses.

"I used to rent a building in midtown," she said. "I bought a couple of lots up here and had this complex built. It's nice here because I'm out of the traffic and I like my own store a lot more."

The total complex has about 6,000 total square feet. The businesses moved into the complex in mid-May.

Other businesses in the complex include Back to Nature and the Daily Plant-it, owned by Jackie Brewer; Tiffany Rose and the Construction Company, owned by Ed Pipkin; and Janusz Kozikowski's, owned by Nancy and Janusz Kozikowski.

The Attic offers clothing for women, men and children plus accessories. It also has gift items and antique jewelry, among other things.

Back to Nature has a variety of health foods and drinks plus books on health.

The Daily Plant-it has several types of plants and flowers for sale.

Tiffany Rose has antiques and art pieces by local artists for sale.

Kozikowski's offers weavings done by the owners. There are also paintings by Jack Good, a realistic painter. Nambeware, a collection of metal serving pieces, is also for sale.

THE ATTIC AND FRIENDS, located on Mechem Road, has been in operation there since May. Susan Ruch owns the property and The Attic. She leases out room for five other businesses. The Attic used to be located in midtown on Sudderth Drive.

"YO," shouts a ringman to a bid down at the All American Brangus Production Sale July 24 at the Ruidoso Cattle Race Track Sales Arena. Canning Ranches of Capitan and Diamond A Cattle Company of Roswell received prices from $2,000 to $16,000 a head for 50 head of cattle. SANTA FE — Five hundred dollars a vote.

That's not the rate bagmen are paying for votes in New Mexico this year, so don't plan on earning it by showing up at the polls.

It's what it's likely to cost us, the taxpayers, for that special primary we have to hold on August 31.

If not for the foresight of the Legislature, it could have cost a lot more. At least the lawmakers had sense enough to decree that in legislative districts in which there is no contest (we will be voting only on legislators on that fateful day) we will not have to hold an election.

That alone, of course, will confuse the voters.

Do you, for instance, as of the moment you are reading these words, know whether or not you will be expected to show up at the polls on August 31?

Are you sure whether or not your district is electing a new representative this year? Most voters have no idea.

Thus, if they should be voting that day, it will be a miracle if they show up at the booth.

And with a low turnout, what do you get? Some legislators will be elected by a magnificent margin of three votes.

On a percentage basis ("he won 54 percent to 46") that may sound like a landslide.

The facts, however, will demonstrate that such a person could have gotten into office by garnering a mere 14 votes.

That hardly constitutes a mandate from the voters in the district.

All it adds up to is that one person got more votes than the other from those who bothered to a.) remember that, for some odd reason, August 31 of 1982 was a primary election day, and b.) go to the polls to vote solely on the representative who wanted to be nominated to the Legislature from his or her party.

You have to care a lot to act in such special circumstances.

The bottom line is that most voters don't care a lot.

All that above depends on what the federal courts may still do.

They could, before August 31 comes, call off the whole misbegotten election.

If they heed the pleas of the plaintiffs in this case, they will do just that, because these people claim at least 21 of 70 House districts have been pushed around in such fashion as to disenfranchise minorities.

About that, there is considerable difference of opinion.

The attorneys for those who brought the original lawsuit to overturn the redistricting our state has done twice this year seem set on proving that if there is a "minority" in large numbers in any legislative district, that "minority" must be able to elect one of its own members in every election from that area.

That clearly reduces the "majority" to a "minority," which complicates everything.

Besides, what if the members of the "minority" happen to prefer a member of the "majority" who is running from that district? Must they reject him or her because of the wrong sort of last name or hue of skin?

Even those who have proved by years of commitment that they care about the neglected in New Mexico find the argument which is now going on a kind of reductio ad absurdum.

Yet here is the Justice Department flying in a clutch of lawyers from Washington to spend time, at our expense, taking depositions from everybody and his brother who had anything to do with redistricting.

C'mon, guys. Enough is enough.

We're all for human rights, but you're wasting our money, our time and our lives. Let's get the show on the road.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

What a GREAT Art Festival Ruidoso had this year. Especially on SUNDAY, when everyone from all over was thrown together to make one great "picture" or collage of brotherly love and cooperation!

The RAIN wasn't "ordered" but it smelled so good, felt so good, looked so good except around our feet! Nobody really stopped looking, buying and admiring what was there to enjoy. Some of the art work was exceptional and outstanding. We look forward to the next Festival. But please, in the ads, SAY where it can be found, once we get to Ruidoso! Ads this year did NOT give directions. And I could not see any ads or signs up to direct people.

Mrs. Ella May Frazer

Dear editor:

LAWYERS THE BEAST
America is one of the most over "governmented" countries on earth. We have more lawyers than all the other countries put together. Some 30,000 new ones each year, from ambulance chasers to Congressmen running our government.

Out of high school into college, to law school then private or public practice. Where do these men get their self-proclaimed expertise to run the United States of America? No background in farming, industry, manufacturing, economics, engineering, trades or labor, just very profuse at oration and BS in general. This is what gets them elected by very gullible Americans. Our government is constantly plagued by all these fine Senators and Representatives trying to take care of #1 either with money, drugs, or sex.

How many of you are sick and tired of our government spending $100 billion each year (more than they can milk us for)? With less than 20% benefitting the average person, over 60% of the people in the U.S.A. are supported by 40%: "How?", you ask. Well for one, children are educated by government employees—teachers! We drive on government made and maintained roads. All the Indian Reservations are supported or subsidized by the government. Police, Postal Service, Welfare, and FREE FOOD, Medicare, Medicaid and thousands of homes for the poor are supported by the FHA, VA, Farmers' Loans, college loans, grants; just for a few of the "small boys".

America the rich, takes in all the refugees and supports them, yet the general respect for America in other countries is, and has been, low. Castro sent us a bunch of refugees and cleaned out his prisons!! On prisons: over 90% of today's crimes are seen as entertainment on TV and at the movies, the High Priests of religions are getting rich.

Now, for the "big boys".... Military is running a close second to the already broke Social Security System. In October we will begin hearing about our Social Security System when they start tapping other charity programs in order to maintain Social Security payments until the Big, Big Eagle defecates in April of each year in order to support this same system from YEAR to YEAR. Military is the one. Look at your Eagle on your dollar (if you have one!). He owns half of that dollar. Military spends over $200 Billion each year, not to defend us, surely, for we have had the power to destroy Russia or any other "enemy" since we shot off the First Atomic Bomb just over the "hill" from Ruidoso in 1945 at Trinity!!! So why the Hell all the (clear), in the black money we take in, in taxes each year has to go to killing the enemy off over 500 times each, I have a hard time understanding, don't you?? American diplomacy??

I guess we need to protect this incredibly high standard of living we take for granted and expect from the government, whoever that is....

GOOD LUCK AMERICANS,
Terry Coe

Editorial

A moot point?

Some have commented that whether there was a mistake in the bid specifications for the police-courts complex makes no difference, now that the whole project is back to square one.

We disagree. Public money and the time of village officials was spent helping to prepare those specs, and that expenditure should be accounted for.

The proposed remodeling of the police building was thrown into limbo last week when just one prohibitively high bid was submitted on the construction project.

That bid was rejected, along with the lone bid which met specifications on leasing of the electronic equipment portion of the project.

The electronics bid was rejected because an addendum to the specifications specified a single site for a repeater station. That site is owned by the company, or principals in the company, which bid on the electronics portion of the project.

The addendum, which was submitted just three days before bids were to be opened, was not approved by the committee overseeing the police building project or by the village council.

There was obviously a motive for specifying a single site.

The village council should call for a complete investigation of the circumstances surrounding the bidding on the electronics equipment.—TP

FUTURE RUIDOSO?

If you want to know what Ruidoso is going to look like in 20 years, go visit Gatlinburg, in the Great Smokies. This mountain village is a strip development along a stream in a narrow valley, up against a national forest. It has about 3,500 permanent residents, but another 20,000 swarm the streets during vacation time. There is absolutely no place to park, and you make better time on foot than in the car up and down the main drag. Gatlinburg is jammed with small shops and big motels, and has everything you might want to buy — and don't need. Mama bought a hand-made wooden breadbox after shopping all day. She nearly wore her eyes out looking.

Gatlinburg is in the mountains but only about 2,000 feet in elevation, so there's no real relief from the heat. It was 82 degrees when we were there, which was okay if you sat in the shade, but the humidity would kill you if you got out and made some tracks.

The Smokies rise to over 6,000 feet, which in the East is a pretty good-sized mountain. The rainfall is very high and everything is constantly wet. The face of every exposed big rock is oozing water. The ground is covered with ferns and the ivy climbs high into the trees. The forest is so dense it can't be walked through without great difficulty. Pine trees appear only at the very tops of the mountains; we would guess above 5,000 feet elevation. Clouds and mist hang low in the valleys and onto the flanks of the hills, and from some of the high ridges and passes, you can get some beautiful views and a real appreciation for the name the mountains have been given. They are truly the Great Smokies. Water pours down from a million springs and soon makes large, roaring rivers. The water is cool and highly oxygenated and is a good habitat for trout. But fishing takes a back seat to water sports. The large rivers attract many canoers, and there are long runs of white water where rubber rafting and even kayaking is popular. We had no idea there were such things in the Southeast. We thought all this mountain white water sports stuff took place in the Rockies and Northwest. — Hop Graham — Lovington Daily Leader

On the Village beat with Tim Palmer

I dropped by the racetrack the other day to chat with general manager R. Wood "Woody" Erwin. We had just sat down when Woody excused himself to speak with some gentlemen in the hallway.

Seems one fellow needed to have a check approved so he could claim a horse.

"Ah'm the owner of Highsteerjet (quarter horse racing's first millionaire)," the man drawled by way of identification.

Woody attended to the matter and returned to his office. Out of curiosity, I asked him the amount of the check.

"That one was for $2,000," he said. "It makes you a little uncomfortable sometimes but I've never lost a dollar on one of those. You have to try to accommodate the horse people."

My purpose in going to see Erwin was to learn about the operation of a racetrack. I was basically ignorant on the subject, and wanted to learn a little about our area's economic mainstay—Ruidoso Downs.

One way in which the track accommodates the horse people is to provide stalls. The stalls are rent-free, and the track also pays for water and electricity.

The track also provides the racing surface and keeps it in good shape.

With all these amenities provided by the track, I asked, weren't there more horsemen wanting stalls than there are stalls?

"That's always true in the Southwest," said Erwin. He added that such is not the case all over the country.

The racing secretary allots the stalls, he explained, based on the horses' racing records, breeding, et cetera. Some horsemen may get only half the number of stalls they want.

Another job of the racing secretary is to figure out the races to be offered. He writes a "condition book," which lists the races to be run over a period of time.

The conditions of the race determine whether a horse can enter. For example, a horse might have to be a certain age, or it might have to be a horse that has never won a race or not won since a certain date.

In "claiming races," the owners of the horses are, in effect, offering their horses for sale. Anyone willing to pay the claiming price can buy the horse.

"It's an equalizer," said Woody. Owners who want to hold on to their top horses don't enter them in the claimers, he explained, which gives other horses a better chance.

There is no guarantee that a horse will be claimed, however. Occasionally a horseman will gamble that his horse won't be claimed, then regret having entered the race when it is.

tries are chosen by shaking numbers out of a bottle. Sometimes there are 25 to 50 prospective entries, Erwin said.

There is no entry fee except for special races, such as futurities. The day I visited, trials were being run for an upcoming thoroughbred futurity.

Interestingly, thoroughbreds qualify for big races on the basis of their order of finish in the trials, while quarter horses qualify on the basis of time.

"It's always been that way," said Woody.

There is more competition between sexes among quarter horses than among thoroughbreds, Woody told me. Quarter horse mares have certainly proven they can hold their own—witness Yankee Win's victory in the recent Rainbow Futurity.

The racetrack makes money from parking, admissions, concessions, and, of course, wagering. Eighteen percent of the handle (amount wagered) on each race is retained by the track for operating expenses, purses and state tax, Woody explained.

The other 82 percent is returned to the bettors—the ones who hold winning tickets, that is.

The "pari," in pari-mutuel is from the Latin word for equal. The system makes for equal sharing of the money wagered (minus that 18 percent) among the holders of winning tickets. So if a horse on which few tickets have been bought—a longshot—comes in, the payoff is greater.

That's a very simplistic explanation, I know. Imagine it this way: you lay down two dollars to win on a horse that you figure can't possibly lose, and it comes in eighth.

Some people nearby shout gleefully when the payoff is announced on the longshot winner they bet, because they just won your money, and that of other favorite players.

So the racetrack's revenue is tied to how many people come to the races and how much they bet.

Erwin quoted something he heard a track manager say 30 years ago: "Our job is to get the people out—everything else will take care of itself."

Woody has been in racetrack management a long time. "It's been a fascinating business," he said.

Horse people are generally good people, according to Erwin. "The bad eggs get weeded out," he said, noting that trainers must be licensed.

Woody, who had a previous stint as manager of Ruidoso Downs, enjoys being back on the job.

"Ruidoso in the summertime—there's just nothing like it," he said. "People just keep coming with their boots and hats and Lewis, and their pockets full of money. It's a fun business."

Americans consume too much sodium

Most Americans are eating too much sodium in the form of table salt. Studies show Americans get anywhere from five to 15 times more sodium than their bodies need.

"Some sodium is necessary for the body to function properly, of course," said Mae Johnson, food and nutrition specialist at New Mexico State University.

"It helps maintain blood volume and the osmotic pressure, which is necessary for proper cell functions. Sodium also has a part in transmitting nerve impulses," Johnson said.

"On the other hand, too much sodium can contribute to high blood pressure or hypertension in susceptible people," she said.

"Most people eat more salt than they need because they like the taste of it, or the way it modifies the taste of other foods. However, more research is needed to find out how and why salt has this effect on human taste."

"The sodium content in ordinary table salt is 40 percent sodium and 60 percent chloride. One teaspoon of salt contains about 2,000 milligrams of sodium."

Sodium is also found in many foods, beverages and processed foods such as soups, condiments, sauces, salad dressings, luncheon meats and canned soups.

"Many household staples contain sodium, too," Johnson said. "The list includes baking powder, baking soda, and flavoring agents such as catsup, olives, pickles, garlic and onion products."

Processed meats and fish that are salted or brined will, naturally, have more salt than unbrined ones, and most canned vegetables have extra salt added for flavoring.

"Most frozen vegetables don't have this extra salt content, although some of the starchy ones such as peas and corn may be salted in brine before freezing," she said.

"Most processed fruits don't have extra salt added, but some processed apples and tomatoes are treated with sodium hydroxide to make them easier to peel. Bottled and canned citrus drinks often contain sodium citrate as a buffer."

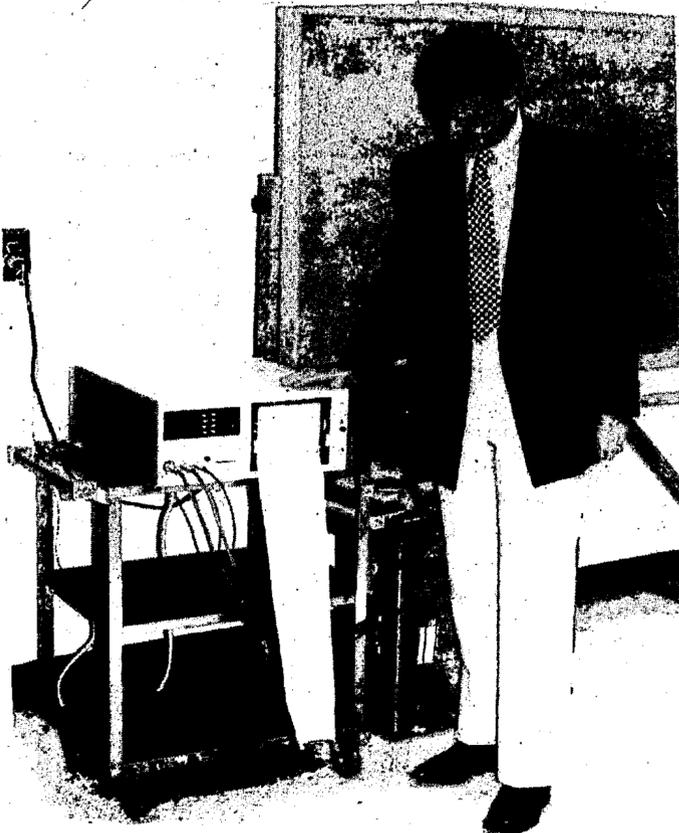

Food additives contain sodium in some cases. Sodium saccharine is used as a sweetener in some diet soft drinks, and monosodium glutamate (MSG) is used as a flavor enhancer.

"Finally, we find sodium in our drinking water. Generally, the harder the water, the more sodium is needed to soften it," Johnson said.

It may be necessary to modify a diet slightly so that smaller amounts of food containing sodium are eaten. Grocery shopping habits can be changed so more fresh and frozen foods are bought, instead of processed versions of the same foods.

The next step, according to Johnson, is to read the nutritional information on food container labels.

"The nutritional information will list sodium content in milligrams. Also check the ingredient list to see if sodium is listed near the top of the list. Items are listed on the ingredients list in relation to the amount contained in that package," she said.

DOCTOR ROBERT CUMMINGS was in town recently to lecture Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital employees on the new intrapartum fetal heart rate monitor. Cummings is the director of the Obstetrics and Gynecology Department at Texas A&M University and its teaching hospital, Scott and White Memorial Hospital in Temple, Texas. The machine records the baby's heart rate and the mother's contractions during labor. Hospital administrator Ken Moore said the fetal monitor was purchased with mill levy funds, but private donations for the monitor will be accepted.

Wilderness Wisdom

with Wayne Calloway

Dear Wayne: I am a once-in-a-while goose hunter and I just thought of a question that pops into my mind once in a while. Ringtime is the wrong season to ask it, I suppose, but I would probably forget it by now.

A year or so ago I saw a basket of artificial (plastic) corn in a sporting goods store. It was fashioned as a whole ear with the kernels neatly imprinted. It was an exceptionally good likeness of the real thing, even at close range, and only when I picked up an ear was I sure that it was a copy. A passerby in the store told me it was used for baiting geese into a field. My question is: isn't that illegal? I know baiting with real corn isn't legal and I can't figure why a copy of the real thing would be considered any different.

Just in case it is legal; do you know if it is very effective for baiting the birds? I'd appreciate being able to satisfy my curiosity on this matter. Harlan T. Maryland

Dear Harlan: First of all, artificial corn is legal. At least it is in your state, and I know about all states. Anyone considering it should first make a call to their wildlife department to be sure. I'm not at all sure why it is legal since it looks so much like the real McCoy, but I'm sure it is something to do with the fact that it isn't edible.

I've never used it as bait, so I haven't actually seen the results, but I have talked to hunters who did. Like most things, a fully black or white conclusion is hard to come by. Some hunters declare that it abutably does work. A bushel or so of the corn scattered in the vicinity of the blind, by report, proves irresistible to flocks of hungry geese. Others say it is marginal at best, and in their experience does little to coax the birds in. I don't know why it works in some cases and not in others. I'm sure the amount of natural food available at the time has a significant bearing on their willingness to decoy. Then, too, maybe there is more to it than just scattering the corn in the open. Possibly it should be partially hidden in the downed stubs, as it is naturally. And I'm quite certain that scattering the corn in a picked soybean field wouldn't fool the geese for a second.

Send questions to: Wilderness Wisdom, P.O. Box 237, Pittsville, Maryland 21850.

SKUNK PROBLEMS:
Twice a year are times when skunks seem to be the most trouble. These are October, November and the first two weeks of December. All the skunks are moving and each one covers a lot of territory, making their exposure and presence more noticeable than usual.

The other time when skunks are really a problem, is in the spring, when the female skunk is about to have her young. She will very often attempt to make her nest under your home. Mobile homes are usually the easiest place, because of no foundation or skirting or poor and loose skirting.

Moth balls work very well in most cases. The moth balls release a chemical that irritates the skunk's eyes, and they find it much more comfortable somewhere else. When the female is looking for a place to nest, they are not afraid of you or your pets, either a dog or a cat, this is why the moth balls work so well. It lets the skunk make up her own mind. The skunk can also be trapped and taken away, but this almost always leaves an odor behind, and it also opens up a territory for the next skunk that comes looking.

Skunks will not usually spray unless they feel threatened. The closer the time gets to her having her young, the less it takes to threaten her and since it takes a lot of threatening to change her mind, the skunk usually wins in the end. Skunks have a certain air about them, that usually makes it well worth the trouble to place the moth balls under your house.

BUILDING LOT DELUXE — In White Mountain Estates, Unit 4, this lot has much to offer. Good assumable loan, paving and city utilities available, with natural gas nearby.

SEEING IS BELIEVING — Extremely well-built 3 bedroom, 2 bath home is a doll house! Located on a corner lot in Country Club Estates, it enjoys a cedar fenced back yard and covered back deck that beckons you out to enjoy our Ruidoso weather. Lots of nice touches including stained glass windows and door fronts in the kitchen make this so inviting and comfortable. I could go on and on, but you should see it yourself. Please call for an appointment.

SPACIOUS HOME ON 2 1/2 ACRES — Cathedral ceiling in the living area, open floor plan is so very comfortable. Bigger than you'd first think, there are two bedrooms, and two baths, plus attached double carport and back deck. Acreage is fenced and ready for those horses of yours.

MOBILE HOME LOTS — We have several, some with trees, some without, some with assumable loans, some without. Let us help you find what you're looking for.

NEARLY AN ACRE — In town, zoned for mobile homes if that's what you need. Located on a cul-de-sac so it is ever so quiet, National Forest boundary common with your north lot line. Good owner financing available to the right purchaser.

HOUSE ON THREE LOTS — This place just makes you want to kick off those darn shoes and prop up your feet. Quiet area off the Upper Canyon is perfect for getting away from it all. You can play pool on the regulation sized billiard table in the game room. Furnished down to the coffee pot, you can enjoy a fine home, quality furnishings, and tranquility all in one grand place. Appointments only please.

WATCH YOUR STEP — or you may cool your feet in the creek behind this log house. It has 3 bedrooms, 1 1/2 baths, and is close to shopping. Completely furnished down to the linens.

ONE OF THE BENEFITS — of writing the ad is that I can put my listings in twice if I want to. You really should allow yourself to view that Country Club place — my description doesn't really do it justice. I forgot to mention that assumable loan only carries interest at 7 1/2%, like the icing on the cake. You'll love it.

TV Nostalgia

By Marie Iandlorio

After many hit records such as "Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Old Oak Tree," the singing group Tony Orlando and Dawn was given a summer variety hour on CBS in 1974. The emphasis was on music, with guest stars such as Kate Smith and Ted Knight (pictured) joining the trio in song and comedy skits.

The series was a summer hit and returned in December for a successful first year. However, ratings began to falter in the second year and by 1976, the show was finally canceled.

Question: Can you name the two singers in Dawn? One of them is now a featured actress on the ABC series "Bosom Buddies."

Answer: Joyce Vincent Wilson and Telma Hopkins (now on "Bosom Buddies")
