Crime Stoppers vs. drugs

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

Ruidoso Crime Stoppers announced Thursday it is starting a campaign to crack down on drug trafficking by offering $500 rewards for tips leading to the arrest and indictment of drug dealers.

"I feel we could do more for the community overall by taking care of the drug problem," offered board president Richard Sandoval as he broached the subject of drug dealing at the regular meeting of the Crime Stoppers board of directors.

Board members present voted unanimously on H. Ray Bishop's motion to offer a set amount of $500 for information leading to the apprehension of pushers. Crime Stoppers' normal procedure is to offer a reward of up to a certain amount for tips that lead to the arrest and indictment of lawbreakers.

The board's policy is to determine how much to reward an individual based upon the quality of information given.

The two-month-old chapter has yet to pay out a reward. Sandoval pointed out Friday that police recently solved three burglaries with information taken on the Crime Stoppers telephone. None of the informants wanted a reward, however.

Crime Stoppers seized Sandoval's initiative Thursday and decided that stopping pushers should be a primary goal of the board, and worthy of the unconditional reward for decisive information. The maximum reward the board will pay for any crime is $1,000.

Detective Gonzalo Cordova of the Ruidoso Police Department told the group meeting at village hall that Ruidoso has a reputation for being easy on drugs. He pointed to a bumper sticker put out by Sierra Swim and Racquet Club that advertises the village as "OVER-DOSO," which he feels promotes that reputation.

Sandoval noted that the majority of board members have children, and that he feels the parents should make every effort to rid school areas of drug traffickers. He said he was upset by the attitude that drugs, especially marijuana, have become socially accepted.

Sandoval also contended the village becomes a major drug trafficking area in the summer because of the influx of transients. And, not losing sight of Crime Stoppers' goal to help police solve any crime, he prefaced the attack on drugs by saying he felt they are the underlying cause for much of Ruidoso crime, and that stopping the drug traffic could help reduce the crime rate.

After the vote on the reward, Sandoval summed up the reason for the anti-drug campaign by saying, "I'd like the attitude to change that Ruidoso is an easy place to get drugs."

Also Thursday, the board heard a report from Glen Ferguson on the upcoming motorcycle poker run benefit for Crime Stoppers. The event, sponsored by Jack Sniadecki with Ferguson's help, is scheduled for Sunday, April 17.

The run will start and finish in Gibson's parking lot. Riders will take Highway 37 north to the intersection with Highway 380, east on 380 to the Highway 70 turnoff in Hono, then west back to Ruidoso. There will be stops at Bonito Lake, the rest area between Bonito and Nogal, Capitan, Lincoln and Fox Cave on Highway 70.

Registered cyclists will receive a playing card at each stop, and the one with the best poker hand at the end of the day will be awarded the grand prize.

Ferguson said the top three hands will receive plaques. In addition, the first-place winner will get a $75 gift certificate to Champion Honda-Harley Davidson of Roswell and $25 cash. Second place will be awarded $50 cash and third will get $25. Fourth and fifth place will also receive cash prizes.

Additional awards are a largest club plaque, oldest rider plaque and a 50/50 drawing. Companies in addition to Champion that have donated awards are Sierra Blanca Motors, Security Bank, Ben Franklin, Gibson's and T. L. Wilson Sporting Goods—all of Ruidoso.

Pre-registration for the event is open until April 10 and will cost $9.50 for one rider or $14 for two. After the deadline, the registration goes up to $10 and $15. Ferguson said registration forms will be available in several locations, or from him at 257-4018 or Sniadecki at 257-2027.

Bike registration will start April 17 at 8 a.m. in Gibson's parking lot, with the last bike leaving at 11.

All proceeds from the event will be donated to the Crime Stoppers reward fund.

In other business, the board:—Accepted the March financial report, which shows $4,252 in the reward fund. The board has paid out $686 for telephone recording equipment and installation, decals, bumper stickers and letterheads.

—Heard Mark Paz report on the fundraiser at Jerry Dale's. Treasurer Bill McCutcheon said Crime Stoppers should net about $1,700 from the party once drink receipts are tabulated. Sandoval thanked Paz, Ferguson and Paul Davis for doing a good job on the party.

—Heard Sandoval note that anyone donating at least $200 to the reward fund will be given a certificate of appreciation.

—Established the terms of board members.

Here come the "CHiPs"

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

CHiPs motorcycles are now patrolling Ruidoso streets. Motorists need not do double takes, though, the cops are genuine members of the Ruidoso Police Department.

Police officers Robert Kenney and Fred Smith straddled their Honda 500 Silverwing police motorcycles for the first time on official duty Thursday morning, and almost immediately they were dubbed as the Ruidoso CHiPs by fellow officers.

The brief informal send-off that morning in the police station yard on Wingfield Street signaled in a new era at RPD, one during which the department hopes to reduce the number of accidents on village streets.

Kenney, Smith and officer Jerry Warf constitute the new RPD Traffic Section. Kenney and Smith will be full-time motorcycle cops while Warf will be a backup. As Kenney described it, the section is exclusively dedicated to improving safety on the streets.

"Our job is basically to concentrate on traffic," was his succinct assessment of the section.

What that may entail for motorists is a high amount of visibility by the motor cycles, which obviously should result in more traffic tickets.

Such already has been the case since the department initiated its policy to step up enforcement of traffic laws. In a report to the village council recently, Chief Richard Swenor noted 500 traffic tickets were issued in February alone.

The reason for the emphasis also is contained in the report, which is a detailed breakdown of 1982 traffic accidents.

As reported in January, 1982 was a record year for accidents with a total of 602. Of the amount, 147 involved injuries and two were fatalities. Fifteen percent of all accidents were alcohol related and 26 percent of the injury accidents involved alcohol.

The worst day for accidents was Saturday, with 189 reported for the year, followed by Wednesday with 85 and Friday with 79. December saw the highest number of accidents, while August had the highest number with injuries.

Since the crackdown began this year, the rate seems to have fallen. January, with 68 accidents, followed December as a bad month, but the number was cut in half in February when so many tickets were issued.

If the trend continues, the traffic section will succeed in its goal.

"The emphasis is to cut down on accidents. To do that we have to cut down on violations," Smith noted.

Kenney explained the department has not developed a quota system for citations, but that it certainly will be harsher on violations. He added the section will not be completely inflexible with motorists, because officers realize Ruidoso streets cause some of the traffic problems.

But he emphasized drivers still must follow the law. Smith and Kenney agreed most village accidents are caused by speeders who lose control on the winding mountain roads.

Because of the recognized poor street system in the village, attributed mainly to insufficient routes to carry the high traffic flow, RPD believes the motorcycles will prove to be a great benefit.

"The bikes are more maneuverable in this terrain," said Kenney.

The two cops point to the advantage they will have on the bikes when a traffic jam blocks Sudderth Drive and they are called to respond to an accident. In patrol cars and the department's four wheel drive units, it is often impossible to get through the traffic in emergencies.

But if necessary, Kenney and Smith said they will weave through traffic jams on their bikes to ensure a quick response.

The officers will be riding tandem most of the time. For the time being, Swenor said, they will be assigned to the day shift. The bikes eventually will be assigned to work the streets whenever traffic is heavy.

Kenney and Smith, along with Warf and officer Robert Achterberg, were trained on the bikes by a Roswell motorcycle cop in early March. All the RPD officers had previous riding experience on street bikes.

The two full-time riders have also received instruction in accident analysis and reconstruction. Kenney said bringing that expertise to the streets will be beneficial to the public.

As members of the traffic section, their main job is to respond to all traffic calls taken by dispatchers. The other patrol officers on duty will respond to all calls not concerning traffic.

Not only will the public be more aware of police patrols because of the motorcycles, which are not assigned to patrol districts as are the other officers, Smith said motor cycles offer the policemen more visibility than a car does, which brings them more in tune with the surroundings.

The bikes are fully equipped with hand-held radar guns, radios, lights and sirens, which were installed on the stock Honda bikes by Lincoln Communications.

The silver motorcycles also are well marked as police units, with stickers on the fairs and saddle bags. Kenney said he and Smith will always ride with their headlights on to improve their visibility further.

The traffic section also has altered the regular RPD beige uniform by slipping in to 60-inch high black motorcycle boots and topping it off with white helmets.

When road conditions are slick, the two officers will dismount and ride together in an assigned patrol car. But Kenney believes they will be able to ride the bikes most of the year.

Chief Swenor said councilman Frank Sawyer was the main force on the governing body in recognizing the advantages of having police motorcycles and getting the bikes purchased.

In a final note, Kenney and Smith said they will be available to show the bikes and explain their features to any village service club.

New Chamber directors elected

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

Seven new Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce directors were announced Thursday in an election with a turnout lighter than in recent years.

Buddy Bundick, Sandy Dacy, Richard Farris, Walt Lindborg, Joe Loving, Tommy Morel and Sue Snidow beat out seven other nominees in voting by Chamber members. Richard Farris received the most votes, 211.

They will replace current members Richard Sandoval, Dan Shaver, Helen Reeves, Karl Franzer, Bill Fugate, Bill Meyers and Paul Crown.

Chamber of Commerce executive director Ed Jungbluth said a little less than 50 percent of Chamber members voted in the election this year. In past years, he said, turnout has averaged more than 50 percent.

Jungbluth said he doesn't know whether members don't care about the elections or like what the Chamber is doing and don't worry enough to vote.

One member did care enough to vote in this election six times, said Jungbluth. He said Dan Shaver discovered six mimeographed ballots on a different style of paper while counting the votes.

Votes for board members on the counterfeit ballots were different, but all the ballots voted for the same buildings in the HN'ZHU'NE' award that was also on the ballot. Jungbluth declined to say which building had received the counterfeit votes.

The apparent fraud was discovered before winners of the board elections were announced. Winners of the HN'ZHU'NE' award will be announced at the Chamber banquet in May.

The new directors expressed enthusiasm about their new posts but had no specific goals for their terms.

"I think that the Chamber of Commerce is real important and felt like I could do some good," said Joe Loving about his interest in serving on the board of directors. He explained that he has the time and energy to put into the Chamber.

"I feel you ought to put back into the community what you get out of it," said Sue Snidow, who explained she has gotten plenty out of Ruidoso. "I love Ruidoso. I'm a Ruidoso booster," she added.

"I am very pleased with the selection," said Jungbluth Friday. He said he thought "some real good workers" who are active in the community have been elected.

None of the new Chamber directors will be coming in with pet projects or axes to grind, it appears. All seemed to feel that they will have to attend a few meetings to learn how the board functions and what issues are being discussed before making any suggestions of their own.

They will be joining incumbents Ronnie Hemphill, Jim Paxton, Joan Bailey, Tom Kelham, Danny Brown, Jim Goodwin, Bill Braudt and Morgan Clough. Clough has already served his two-year term but is staying on the board as immediate past president.

The new directors have been invited as guests to the March 23 board of directors meeting. They will officially take office May 1.

Before that, the former, incoming and incumbent Chamber directors will attend a board retreat tentatively scheduled for April 22 and 23 in Juarez, Mexico. There they will review recent actions of the Chamber and make plans for the next year.

Father Albert laid to rest

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

People came early to the funeral of Father Albert Braun at Saint Joseph's Church in Mescalero Friday. By the time the Apache choir began the services with an Apache song, people had filled the large church and were standing at the doorway.

An uncommon assembly of church, military, Indian and Anglo gathered to honor Father Albert in the church he built as a memorial to veterans of both World Wars. Father Phillip Baldonado, who traveled from Los Angeles to honor Father Albert, explained that the church will henceforth be a memorial to another veteran.

"It is now going to be a memorial to Father Albert," he told the congregation.

An appropriate memorial it will be. Looking at the massive walls rising 40 or more feet in the air, it is evident that tremendous amounts of labor, time and care were put into the church. The stones are of irregular shape, with small and large alike fitted together individually over the course of 20 years. That much of the work was done by hand, without the aid of powerful cranes, makes it an even more impressive accomplishment.

"There was never an impossible task for him," said Baldonado. "Just look around." The church is a monument to Braun's energy, but also to his great ability to understand and endear himself to the Apaches.

Author Eve Ball said every able-bodied man on the reservation donated his time and labor to the construction of the church. Without them, helping Father Albert complete his dream, the church could not have been completed.

Many at the service noted his close rapport with the Apaches of Mescalero.

"He learned about them and lived with them," said Virginia Klinekole, an Indian who knew Father Albert well.

Many Apaches attended the ceremony. But many Anglos and servicemen were also at the church. Much of the ceremony was a mixture of the ways of the Apaches, the Catholic Church and the American military.

Ecclesiastical organ music and soprano choirs followed the chanting songs of the Apache Choir. Tina Kirgan, Miss Mescalero, read scriptures from the Bible while wearing ceremonial Apache dress.

Apache and English were spoken throughout the ceremony. The garments of Father Baldonado and Bishop Ricardo Ramirez were adorned with beadwork and Indian painting.

The Catholic clergy said Mass. Indians donated shawls to Father Albert's family in the tradition of their forefathers.

Veterans of the second World War watched as soldiers from Holloman Air Force Base offered a military tribute to Father Albert. They played taps and presented the American flag that had lain on the casket to surviving family members.

There were few tears at the funeral, however. Many told humorous and inspiring stories of times they had been with Father Albert.

On the subject of Father Albert's longevity, Father Baldonado quoted Father Albert as saying, "I do not want to go to hell and apparently heaven is not ready for me."

It seemed more a ceremony of "gratitude and appreciation for a life lived to it's fullest," as Mescalero Tribal President Wendell Chino said. It was in fact a sort of celebration.

"Now he returns to his homeland so he may be buried with his people and we can honor him," said Klinekole. A memorial plaque will be placed at his grave near the altar of the church. Donations in place of flowers will help pay for it.

BOTH INDIAN AND CATHOLIC rituals were observed during the funeral of Father Albert Braun at Saint Joseph's Church in Mescalero Friday. Mescalero Tribal Council member Virginia Klinekole called up Indian families who gave shawls to Braun's family while (from left, background) Father Phillip Baldonado, Bishop Ricardo Ramirez and Father Justin Moncrief prepared to administer Holy Communion.

Water Corporation disagrees on encouraging real estate agents

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Water Development Corporation Thursday tabled a suggestion to encourage licensed real estate people to submit offers of water rights purchases to the board, after members disagreed on the wording in the corporation's operating guidelines.

The clause concerning real estate brokers and agents was included in a two-page list of guidelines submitted by corporation president Dan Swearingin. The guidelines are meant to serve as a condensed and more readable version of the corporation bylaws, Swearingin said.

The water development corporation was formed by the village council last year and given the task of acting as the council's agent to find and purchase water rights in the Rio Hondo Basin. The corporation hopes to use its status as a non-profit entity to attract potential sellers. It will seek to make the buys through lease/purchase contracts with water rights holders.

It has been noted that sellers benefit by negotiating with the corporation as opposed to individual buyers because the village group will buy water rights with debentures that carry tax-free interest. The seller also benefits because payments would be made over a long period, which results in reduced capital gains taxes.

Swearingin said the clause in the guidelines is needed because the volunteer corporation directors do not have time to actively pursue water rights deals. He noted the corporation encourages anyone to approach it with potential offers, but real estate people were singled out because they work in the field.

He pointed out water rights are similar to real estate in that they are considered as real property.

Director Mike Seelbach questioned the need for such a clause since the corporation encourages anybody to approach it, and he said he preferred not to imply the corporation would pay a certain commission. He said any commission on sales, like the purchases, should be negotiable.

Real estate agent Greg Masters advised the corporation to keep in mind the law of supply and demand. He noted there is a highly competitive market for water rights and that he would sell to a buyer who would pay the highest commission.

Masters also reminded the group that Ruidoso real estate firms have stables of clients who are ready to buy any land in the valley that has water rights.

Swearingin agreed with Masters, noting transactions of real property are "a study in human greed," and that water rights owners are not going to sell to "the kindly village" if individual buyers bid higher.

But Swearingin repeated several times that the clause only encourages real estate people to come to the corporation and it does not commit the village to pay any pre-established prices. He said the clause should spur the members to think about the water rights market.

The corporation tabled discussion on the clause until it can be reworded.

Meanwhile, the remaining items in the guidelines were unanimously approved.

The first clause points out the corporation can make no financial commitments without the approval of the governing body. Following that is a clause requiring members to negotiate the best possible price for the village and to always deal fairly.

Since the corporation is a quasi-political subdivision of the village, Swearingin said it should follow provisions of the New Mexico open meetings law. Members agreed to follow the law, as long as they can adjourn into executive session when necessary.

Swearingin said the body will always state specific reasons for executive sessions, and limit discussion in the sessions to the specific causes.

Members also agreed to submit written disclosures of any benefits they may receive individually from water rights transactions.

The final aspects of the guidelines note the Ruidoso village attorney must approve transactions and that the members will follow sound business practices.

In other business, the water corporation reviewed revised forms for model contracts, purchase options and public notices of agreement. The members will make suggestions on the forms, then resubmit them to the Santa Fe law firm of Kegel, McCabe and Montez, which is retained by the village to advise the corporation. The firm must determine if the documents comply with state laws granting tax-exemptions.

The corporation also went into executive session with Masters to discuss a potential water rights purchase.

Security Bank sale waits approval

A group that includes two brothers who grew up in Ruidoso—John Petty and Ralph Petty Jr.—has entered into a contract to purchase Security Bank of Ruidoso.

If approved, ownership of the bank will be in a proposed bank holding company owned by the Pettys and Derwood Knight of Albuquerque. The company is buying the bank from Bank Securities Incorporated of Albuquerque.

The sale is subject to approval of federal banking regulatory authorities. A contract was entered into February 25, and approval could take six months or longer.

The father of the Petty brothers, Ralph Petty, is a former chairman of the board of Security Bank in Ruidoso. He now resides here and in Abilene, Texas.

John Petty lives in Albuquerque. He is president of Petty/Youngblood, a commercial real estate firm.

Ralph Petty Jr. has divided his residence between Santa Fe and Scottsdale, Arizona, but will be moving to Ruidoso. He is a former president of the Bank of Santa Fe, and served in the state House of Representatives from the Lincoln County area from 1968 to 1972.

"Our whole family is from Lincoln County—back through our grandparents," said

John Petty. He and Ralph Jr. were born in Carrizozo. A sister, Karen Petty, lives in Ruidoso and is in the real estate business.

"Our fondness for Ruidoso" was the motivation for purchase of the local bank, according to Ralph Petty Jr. He pointed out that his banking career started at Security Bank the day it was chartered in 1970.

"All three of us will be active in the bank," said John. The third partner, Knight, is an attorney.

Ralph Jr. and John attended their first bank board meeting as advisory directors last week.

"We're very pleased with the board and management," said Ralph. John pointed out consistency and local ownership are two things the group aims for in its purchase of the bank.

The two indicated they believe Ruidoso is strong economically, with around $100 million in assets in the three local banks alone.

"We have to decide between now and final approval exactly how we want to structure (the bank)," said Ralph. "It (Ruidoso) is going to be a very highly competitive market area for sure—and that's how we prefer it."

Total assets of Security Bank are listed at $21 million.

New water meter for Eagle Creek

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

A new meter to be installed at the main diversion point out of the Eagle Creek watershed will more accurately gauge the annual supply of water taken out of the stream.

The Eagle Creek Inter-Community Water Supply Association voted to purchase and install the meter at its regular bi-monthly meeting last week.

The association controls all diversions from the watershed. Eagle Creek is the main water supply to Ruidoso, Capitan and Fort Stanton. Ruidoso possesses 4,344 acre feet of rights to the stream but, based on average supply, can use only about 1,544 acre feet annually.

The figure is based on the six cubic feet per second maximum diversion allowed by the State Engineer. The association has petitioned the state to change that "flow right" to a quantity right so more water can be diverted when the stream is high and supplies more than enough water to meet demands.

Ruidoso has only 214 acre feet of water rights to the Rio Ruidoso.

Ruidoso village clerk Leon Eggleston, recording secretary for the association, noted the cost of replacing the 12-inch main diversion meter will be $7,300. He said the present meter has not been measuring the diverted water accurately.

Eggleston said by replacing the meter, located at the diversion point off the Ski Run Road, all meters along the watershed will be brought up to date. The association recently had meters replaced that measure service to Capitan and Fort Stanton.

The board unanimously approved the purchase.

Also Wednesday, approval was given to Eagle Creek Ski and Recreation Area owner Paul Southwick to defer a scheduled payment to the association for purchase of the ski area property, and to pay the bill in full next month.

The water users association had leased about 16 acres to Southwick for the ski area, but recently entered into the purchase agreement for the land. The payments amounted to over $140,000 over a three-year period with interest included. Southwick noted the bill would drop to about $104,000 if he pays it in full. He said the contract includes no early payment penalty.

Southwick also informed the association that he has applied for transfer of 5.2 acre feet of rights he has on the watershed to surface rights. His rights are attached to a well used during the winter for snowmaking equipment, but Southwick noted the well water is not as cold as surface water, which will be better for making snow.

The association assured Southwick it would not protest the change.

In a final agreement with Southwick, the association said he could use its property at the ski area for additional parking space during planned outdoor concerts this summer.

In other business, the association: —Approved providing a three-quarter-inch meter to the New Mexico Highway Department yard on Ski Run Road. Eggleston noted the Highway Department wants the service only to maintain its trucks. The board also okayed providing a temporary hookup for road crews that will be resurfacing the Ski Run Road up to Sierra Blanca Ski Resort.

—Decided to travel to Santa Fe within the next month to meet with the State Engineer on the quantity right application. Board member C. Newton Page, representing Ruidoso, indicated the association should apply pressure for action on the application, which has been filed since September 1981.

Neighborhood Watch to meet

Anyone interested in the Neighborhood Watch program is encouraged to attend a meeting at village hall Monday, March 21, at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting will be an initiation session conducted by the Ruidoso Police Department for coordinators and block captains. Informational booklets will be handed out.

Microfiche machine "complatible"

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

With the recent acquisition of a microfiche reading-printing machine in the village Planning and Zoning Department, department staff are now able to spend less time fishing for plats and more time running the department.

"This microfiche is the best thing we've ever bought," proclaimed department secretary Debi Russell without the least trace of exaggeration in her voice.

The village council in January authorized purchase of the $5,200 system from Comgraphix of El Paso, Texas. In addition to the reading-printing machine and the cost of transferring all village plats from paper to film, the village also paid the company an extra $850 to purchase microfiche copies of 2,500 county plats.

The system was installed in the planning and zoning office at village hall in early February.

Russell pointed out the main advantages of the machine over the previous system are the ability to print copies from any plat, and to reduce the storage needed for plats.

A plat is a detailed drawing of a piece of property, showing its dimensions and other distinctive features.

The old method of filing paper plats was about to crowd the staff out of the office. Russell said each plat—some the size of wall posters—had to be mounted on cardboard and filed in a standing cabinet. The cabinet holds 500 plats. Russell pointed out it was near capacity and the department was considering ordering a second one.

Instead of going that route and taking up more space for filing, the department staff decided to pursue the microfiche system.

Now, the 2,500 county plats fit into space no larger than a shoe box. Combined with the some 500 village plats now on file, the total filing space needed is a small metal box to store the microfiche.

The machine itself comes with interchangeable lenses that can project images onto the screen from either 35mm or 16mm film. The standard lens enlarges the image 11 times, while specific areas of a plat can be blown up by using the 14-power lens.

The public has always had the privilege to view any plat on file at village hall, but until now, copies of the drawings were never available.

That has all changed with the microfiche system. In fact, Russell thinks the machine's ability to produce photocopies is the main advantage to the public.

"I think it's just wonderful; until now we couldn't make copies," noted Russell. Whenever someone wants a copy now, Russell explained all she has to do is dial into the machine how many copies are needed, and press a button. Within seconds a paper copy is rolling out the side of the microfiche.

Russell said each copy will cost $1. In addition to the change in the plat filing system, the planning and zoning department has plans to change the system of mapping used by the village. Cupp told the village council Tuesday night he is pursuing a mapping system now used in Albuquerque that shows the zoning designation of all incorporated lots.

Cupp said the maps will include four overlays. One will be the zoning designations of lots, another will show addresses, and two overlays will detail water and sewer connections.

The present maps of the village show only general districts with zoning outlined in color codes. The new maps will actually pinpoint features of all lots in the corporate limits.

Cupp told the council his department has enough funds budgeted to finance the system. He indicated it could be up to a year before the maps are ready.

WORKING THE MACHINE is Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Department secretary Debi Russell. The new Minolta microfiche reader-printer enables the public to view village plats and have copies made.

Willard named Veterinarian of the year Woman robbed of cash, checks

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Local veterinarian Dr. Lynn Willard was recently honored as Veterinarian of the Year by the New Mexico Veterinary Medical Association at its annual meeting in Manhattan, Kansas, in 1982.

Dr. Michael Riegger, president of the association, nominated Willard for the award and presented it to him at the meeting. Riegger said the award is presented only if a member is deserving of it by having rendered outstanding service to the profession during recent years.

The Ruidoso vet "exemplifies the type of professional person all of us can be proud of," Riegger remarked.

Willard owns the Ruidoso Animal Clinic and has been practicing veterinary medicine locally since he moved to Ruidoso 10 years ago. He earned his D.V.M. degree from Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kansas, in 1969. Willard served as editor of the New Mexico Veterinary Medical Association's official publication, The Roadrunner, for four years. He was president of the Association in 1979-80.

He has also served as president of the New Mexico Academy of Veterinary Practice, in 1978 and 1982. Willard's clinic has the distinction of being one of 1,700 animal hospitals in the country to have been approved for membership in the American Animal Hospital Association. These hospitals voluntarily submit to inspections by the association.

In addition to his professional accomplishments, Willard has been actively involved in the local community, having served as president of the Chamber of Commerce in 1978-79, as deacon of First Christian Church 1979-81, as president of the Evening Lions Club in 1981-82. He was recently elected to serve on the Board of Education. Willard has also been a coach for Little League football and basketball for several years.

Riegger noted that Willard was honored not because he has held such offices but because he "always made a substantial positive contribution" when serving.

"No one individual made a greater contribution not only to the profession but to the community as well," Riegger pointed out.

Willard also presented a paper at the annual state meeting where he received the award.

She was last seen wearing a long sleeve terry cloth dress, high heels and a necklace from an El Paso high school.

RLT play rehearsals progressing well

Ruidoso Little Theatre (RLT) is currently rehearsing its upcoming production of Summer Arthur Long's "Never Too Late." Director Dan Barrow expressed pleasure with the progress of the play.

"All the actors are working very well together and have quickly formed their characters," said Barrow.

Many members of the cast are making their acting debut. Sandy Marshall, who has never formally acted before, will be portraying the lead female role of Edith Lambert. Marshall was encouraged by friends to try out for the part. She said she was surprised, but excited, to have been cast for a major role.

Richard and Barbara Barnes are also new arrivals to RLT, although not to Ruidoso. The Barnes, Barbara as Grace Kambrough and Richard as Mayor Crane, both said they look forward to rehearsal and are enjoying the experience of involvement with the play.

Terri Webb, also new to RLT, will be making her acting debut as Kate Clinton, the daughter. When asked how she decided it was time to try some acting, she smiled and responded, "I just heard the announcement for auditions on the radio and thought I'd give it a try."

Veteran RLT actors will also appear. Dick Reeves, a longtime supporter of RLT, will be heading up the cast as Harry Lambert. Chris Schneider, last seen with RLT as Inspector Lestrade in "The Penultimate Problem of Sherlock Holmes," will be bringing his acting skills to the role of Charlie Clinton.

Other members of the cast include Carl Mori, Melissa Craig, and John Raulerson. "Never Too Late" will be performed at the Inn of The Mountain Gods the evenings March 25, 26, 27, 31 and April 1, 2, 3. Matinees will be performed March 26 and April 2. All evening performances will be dinner shows except for Thursday, March 31, and Easter Sunday. Tickets for the show only will also be available.

Two benefit performances are scheduled. The March 27 matinee will be a benefit for Crime Stoppers. March 31 will be a benefit for Judge Sam Nunnally. Tickets go on sale Tuesday, March 15, at Sears, Don's Pharmacy and Inn of The Mountain Gods.

WATCHING HIS PUTT roll toward the cup on the 18th green is Ruidoso High golfer Kenny Espinosa, as playing partner Bob Dunn tends the flag. Sixty-one local golfers and 16 high school golfers participated in Sunday's scramble benefit tourney at Cree Meadows Country Club. The event raised about $1,000 for the school golf program.

The New Mexico State University (NMSU) basketball team must be wondering what it can do to take the step from competitive also-ran to league champion. NMSU lost a chance for the Missouri Valley Conference (MVC) championship Thursday night when it was edged by visiting Tulsa University, 49-48, in the semi-finals of the MVC tournament. Tulsa thus advanced to the championship game against Illinois State University, a 79-61 victory over Bradley University Thursday.

What made the NMSU defeat so hard to take was the fact the Aggies probably would have won the game if they had hung onto the ball in the last 25 seconds of the game.

With a one-point lead at 48-47, NMSU worked the ball around the court looking for a "gift" shot or a foul.

The Aggies got neither. Junior Steve Colter took an inside shot despite being heavily guarded and the ball bounced off the rim. Tulsa grabbed the rebound and Ricky Ross made the winning basket with two seconds remaining in the game.

A lot of other players besides Colter have taken unnecessary shots when their teams were leading in important games. However, that doesn't make the Aggies' defeat any easier to take.

When I was in high school, our team lost the league championship one season because we lost to the eventual champion twice by one point. In both games, we had a one-point lead with less than a minute left, but took unnecessary shots that gave our opponent a chance to win the game.

But second-guessing why a player would take an unnecessary shot doesn't explain the fact that the Aggies fell just short of a league championship again.

NMSU finished the regular season with an 18-11 mark, nothing to sneeze at but still not of championship caliber.

The Aggies have built a winning basketball tradition under coach Weldon Drew. This season they split with the University of New Mexico (UNM), their main state rival. NMSU won easily in Las Cruces but the Lobos took an overtime victory in Albuquerque.

NMSU has lost several close games this season, including the Thursday night loss to Tulsa and the overtime defeat at the hands of the Lobos.

The Aggies don't have much height but they try to make up for it with hustle and good overall team speed.

Still, those two assets aren't enough to bridge the gap between a contender and a champion.

Look for Drew to seek out a dominating big man during the off-season.

If there was any doubt that spring is upon us, the Ruidoso High School boys track team will open the season Thursday when it travels to Carlsbad High School for a dual meet.

The Warriors are fairly young and will have to find someone who can replace Lon Nunley in the sprints and weight events. Still, look for Ruidoso to be competitive.

There's plenty more information about track, tennis and golf in today's edition of The News.

Inside the Outdoors

Hunters in the state of New Mexico should be interested in a meeting that took place in Roswell on February 18, 1983. At this meeting about 300 members of the New Mexico Livestock Growers, the New Mexico Wool Growers, and the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau expressed their concerns to the State Game Commission on problems they have encountered with hunting, mainly during deer seasons. The meeting was also attended by State Senators Joe Grant, Tim Jennings, and Charlie Lee.

Some of the major concerns and recommendations expressed by the farmers, ranchers, and land-owners include:

1. Reducing hunting pressure by restricting the number of hunters.
2. Decreasing habitat and road damage by restricting the use of off-road vehicles and having road closures during deer seasons.
3. Confining the problems of littering and habitat damage caused by hunter camps by restricting hunters to designated campgrounds only.
4. Increasing the number of law enforcement officers in the field during deer season by commissioning landowners or other people as Deputy Conservation Officers.

Most of these problems have no simple solutions and cannot be handled by the State Game Commission alone. Help and cooperation is required from the State Legislature and land-owning agencies such as the U.S. Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

One method that the Game Commission could adopt to reduce the number of deer hunters is a unitized hunt. This method is already employed for the elk hunts. It would mean that only a specified number of licenses would be issued for each of the 58 deer management units in the State. This would present some serious problems.

First, the Department of Game and Fish does not receive general fund money. Most of its funding is derived from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses, especially deer licenses. A reduced number of deer hunters would mean a smaller operating budget at a time when the Department, like most State agencies is having financial problems.

Second, the unitized hunt would mean that approximately 140,000 application for deer licenses would have to be processed each year. A person would no longer be able to go to a vendor and purchase a license, but would have to send an application to Santa Fe. These applications would have to be entered into a computer, and a drawing would have to be made. Finally, the licenses and refunds would have to be returned prior to the deer seasons. This process will involve a lot of paperwork and handling.

So why not just double the cost of a license and solve these problems? The Game Commission cannot raise the price of a license, this must be done by the legislature. A bill was introduced this year to increase the license fee, and the amount of the increase has already been reduced by the House. The bill has not yet received final approval. As you can see, it will not be an easy task to reduce the number of deer hunters.

The solution to the problems of off-road vehicles, road closures, and designated campgrounds cannot be accomplished by the Game Commission alone, it requires help from the land-owning agencies such as the U.S. Forest Service, and Bureau of Land Management. There are no laws or regulations prohibiting the use of ORV's on B.L.M. or Forest Service lands. Even if regulations were adopted, State Conservation Officers would have no jurisdiction to enforce these laws without an agreement with the land-owning agencies. There is a regulation already in effect on State-owned lands and is enforced by members of the Game and Fish Department. The Game Commission could pass a regulation to stop deer hunters from driving off established roads during the season; but do hunters do all the damage? There are many people: wood gatherers, Christmas tree seekers, campers, motorcycle riders, four-wheel drive enthusiasts, and even ranchers that also damage the habitat. Restricted off-road vehicle travel will have to apply to everyone.

As for road closures and designated campgrounds, the Game Commission has absolutely no control in these matters except on State or Game Department owned lands. This would have to be accomplished by the land-owning agencies, including setting up and maintaining the campgrounds. The designated campgrounds only laws

lands. This would have to be accomplished by the land-owning agencies, including setting up and maintaining the campgrounds. The designated campgrounds only laws

Spring means fire season approaching

Spring winds have arrived, and a general drying trend will increase forest and rangeland fire danger over the next few months.

New Mexico State forestry, Capitan District, is urging all New Mexicans and visitors to New Mexico to be extremely careful with all types of fire in the coming season. At this time, there are no fire restrictions, but depending on weather conditions this may be necessary as conditions worsen. People residing within city limits should check with local government before doing any open burning, as in some areas it is prohibited at all times.

The primary causes of fire historically have been debris or trash burning, land clearing (with fire), smoking (especially along highways), discarded fireplace ashes, and equipment use (such as welding, chainsaws, and road building or construction).

If a wildland fire does occur, call your local fire department, then call the Capitan District at 354-2231. If no answer is received, then call the Santa Fe 24-hour number at 827-8080. Both numbers can be called collect for the reporting of wildfires only.

Local men fined for game violations

Fines and civil assessments totalling $3,820 have been levied against two Ruidoso men charged by conservation officers with illegal possession of deer and spotlighting.

Jail sentences were suspended on the condition that the fines are paid within 90 days and that the two commit no further game violations, said Joel Pafford,

Department of Game and Fish.

Verlin L. Trapp, 38, and Ronald Dale Harris, 32, both of Ruidoso, pleaded guilty Thursday, February 17 before Lincoln County Magistrate Bill Payne to four counts each of illegal possession of deer and one charge each of spotlighting. Judge Payne fined each $1,510, including $10 court costs, and sentenced each to 180 days in jail, conditionally suspended.

Pafford has assessed the men $800 for the state's loss of four deer and is requesting that revocation of their hunting and fishing privileges in New Mexico be considered.

The two were stopped by Capitan police officer Randy Spears shortly after midnight February 17 when he observed them spotlighting north of Capitan. He found deer blood and hair in the trunk of the vehicle and notified Pafford, district conservation officer in Carrizozo. They were booked in the Capitan jail, where they remained until their court appearance.

Officers served a search warrant at 6:30 that morning at a house both men occupied in Ruidoso, where they found parts of four deer.

Pafford was assisted in the investigation by Game and Fish Department officers Ernie Sandoval and Bill Essary, State Police officer Randy Rhue and Spears.

Chamber music concert Sunday afternoon

Plans for the afternoon chamber music concert set for this Sunday at 3 p.m. at First Christian Church were finalized at a Chamber of Commerce cultural committee meeting Thursday. Committee members also contributed to the Summer String Workshop scholarship fund to bring the total amount pledged to approximately $5,300, over half the amount set as a goal.

The chamber music concert Sunday is the third in a series of free concerts co-sponsored by the cultural committee and the New Mexico State University (NMSU) Department of Music. Chamber music series subcommittee chairman Jackie Rawlins pointed out that the concert has been changed from an evening to an afternoon performance to accommodate the musicians traveling from NMSU in Las Cruces.

Committee members were encouraged to invite local residents who may be interested in attending the concert but do not have transportation to attend with them. It was announced that school students have been encouraged to attend and that the Ruidoso Schools Chapter II fine arts advisory council has emphasized the program as part of its efforts to expose Ruidoso students to the fine arts.

The concert is free of charge to all attending. Ruidoso Altrusa Club members will serve as hostesses for the program. A request for contributions to the Ruidoso Summer String Workshop scholarship fund prompted donations from committee members which brought the total amount pledged to $5,300. A goal of $10,000 had been set for the fund, which will help defray costs of tuition for students admitted to the two-week workshop to be conducted locally each summer. The first such workshop will be at the La Junta Guest Ranch in Alto August 7-21. These workshops are also co-sponsored by the cultural committee and NMSU, and by the Las Cruces Symphony Association.

In other business, the cultural committee: —Was informed an NMSU chamber music group will conduct an educational session at Ruidoso High School Tuesday, March 16, as part of the education subcommittee's program and the Chapter II school fine arts program. Cultural committee members were invited to attend. —Decided the Board of Education should be invited to the chamber concert Sunday. Committee member Danny Flores lamented that the local schools do not offer a regular music program until the fifth grade.

—Were invited to a performance of "My Fair Lady" to be put on by the Alamogordo Little Theater at the Inn of the Mountain Gods this Sunday evening, March 20. The performance is being sponsored by the Ruidoso Little Theater. The cultural committee vowed to support the local little theater group as part of its activities in the community.

—Heard that Ruidoso High School Band Boosters will be soliciting contributions soon for a band trip to Hawaii next spring. The committee also indicated it will be instrumental in helping this cause.

Alto man killed in accident

An Alto man was killed Friday night in a one-car accident on Highway 37. Alcohol apparently was involved in the death of 27-year-old James Rawhouser, according to State Police officer Joe Tiano. Officer Tiano said open beer containers were found in the Rawhouser vehicle following the fatal accident three miles north of Ruidoso on Highway 37. Rawhouser was heading north in a small

Toyota on the highway at about 9 p.m. when he went off the road on a curve and rolled about 30 feet down an embankment. Tiano said the car landed on its roof in a small creek.

Tiano reported that Rawhouser was alone in the car. Tiano said an autopsy will be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

Resource group meets Tuesday

South Central Mountain Resource Conservation and Development will meet Tuesday, March 15, in Alamogordo at the Desert Aire Motor Inn on South White Sands Boulevard.

State forester Dave Bervin of Capitan will present a program on the American Tree Farm System following the steering committee meeting, which begins at 1 p.m.

During the steering committee meeting, Doug Ditto, project engineer with the State Highway Department in Roswell, will discuss progress on highway project measures accepted at the previous meeting.

The executive committee will meet before lunch, at 10 a.m. Anyone interested is encouraged to attend the meeting.

The Dreamer

BY DANNIE STORM

In a tribute by a grateful people to a great friend, the mortal remains of Father Albert Braun were laid to rest last Friday in the south altar of St. Joseph's Church, which he had built as a gift for "My Apaches."

The church, of native stone from close around the neighborhood, and located in an inspiring location, was filled to overflowing with Mescalero Indians, and devoted friends of all races and creeds.

Several fellow Catholic clergymen, including many of his own order, the Franciscan Friars, took part in the ceremonies. The flag-draped casket in front of the altar was flanked on either side by a color guard of the Mescalero American Legion. The funeral detail from Holloman Air Force Base added a colorful and dramatic touch in a service complete with firing squad and bugles.

Songs by the Apache Choir, some in the Apache language, added special reverence to the services.

Wendell Chino, President of the Mescalero Apaches, expressed, on behalf of his people, "Gratitude for a life well lived."

Virginia Klinkole, prominent Apache leader, announced gifts presented in memory of Father Braun from certain Apache families.

Father Philip Baldonado, whose brothers were fellow prisoners-of-war of the Japanese during World War II, traced the life of Father Albert from his childhood to his days on the reservation.

When Father Albert received his holy orders in 1915, he asked to be sent to a foreign country.

"I'll send you to a foreign country, all right," responded Father Provincial, "I am going to send you to the Mescalero Apache Reservation."

First ministering from Tularosa, Father Albert told his superiors that he "needed to live on the Reservation." This request was granted, and here he spent most of his life among "my beloved Apaches," expect for time in World Wars One and Two as a military Chaplain.

In France he had seen many beautiful churches, and there was here born in him the desire to build a solid and beautiful church for "My People." As well as being a lasting gift to the Apaches, the church was built as a memorial to the heroes of World War I.

Then after World War II it became a memorial to the heroes of both wars; and now it is also a monument to Father Albert.

I have watched the church grow from the ground up through the years, and several times went over to talk to Father Albert. I was struck by the tremendous size of the stones, and wondered how the church could be made to the height that Father Albert estimated.

Finally some years ago here stood the church of native stone with a pinkish cast, which glows in the afternoon sun like something from another world, as it looks down from the high point, seeming to dwarf even the hills themselves, to the historic little village of Mescalero.

Father Baldonado reminded his listeners that Father Albert suffered along with his fellow prisoners on the Death March and in the imprisonment which followed, and that he saved many lives, by his personal example of courage, his steadfast faith, and his sharing of his meager rations with fellow prisoners.

After World War II, General Jonathan Wainwright, Father Albert's fellow-prisoner, came and took part in the final dedication of the church.

I remember after Father Albert returned from Japan, that he told me about the church of His People, how the Apache Indians were tireless and faithful in their work and how he also received help from many sources, including an elderly Catholic clergyman who was also an expert in stone building, Father Junipero Serna.

Shortly after he got back, Father Albert, was down in an orchard below Mescalero pruning the trees. He climbed high among the branches with his pruning saw, clad in his priestly robes; and talked about how he loved apple trees, and how much he enjoyed being back with the trees after a long absence.

So now as we look across from the highway at this sacred landmark, we can rejoice at the sight of this fitting grave stone for its builder, steadfast in his divine and eternal purpose, who has now gone to his "Great Reward with Our Lord."

OPINION PAGE

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Remember Walter Martinez? He was Speaker of the House of Representatives here in New Mexico before the Cowboy Coalition took over that body four years ago.

Is he still around? You'd better believe it. Not only is he in his eighth term in the House, but he has also turned out to be, in this session, in which Ray Sanchez from Bernalillo county is the Speaker, a man who matters.

In legislative affairs, the man who counts is he who can put deals together. Martinez is doing that.

In fact, from the day you read this till the day the legislators go home (we hope that will be on March 19), Martinez becomes of increasing importance.

It's the last-minute deals which really count.

Do personalities matter in legislation? Ask Doc Wiler, who is a lobbyist of some reknown — partly because he contributes to his own legend by telling stories about his own relationship to others.

His latest says that at least one committee in the current Legislature has given a "do pass" to a bill solely so that they would not have to hear Doc appearing for it.

The way he tells the story, one of the members said, "Oh, come on, folks, let's give this a clean bill of health. If we don't, Wiler's going to come in here and talk us all to death."

If like many New Mexicans, you have been confused about why Senator Ron Olguin, thought to be a strong supporter of Toney Anaya, could not somehow get the name of Alex Mercure through the Rules

Committee of the Senate, of which Olguin is the chairman, think about this. By the time you read these words, Mercure will probably have been confirmed or denied his post.

Mercure, as this reporter reads it, never did care very much whether or not he was named Secretary for Commerce and Industry. If he was, he could handle that. If he wasn't, he could go willingly back to his private business.

That business is supplying cable television services to people around the country — some outside Washington, D.C., and some outside Albuquerque, N.M.

Our spies inside the four-story building we call the Capitol say Olguin's dislike of Mercure came from the fact that he — Olguin — hoped to be the contractor of cable television in the South Valley of Albuquerque, an area which he either dominates or would like all the rest of the state to believe he dominates.

A friend of this columnist tells a story which may only be amusing — but then it may also be a parable.

"I was working on a bill," he says, "with one of those big intellectuals from Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque."

As the story goes on, the person from Sandia who was assigned to appear here in Santa Fe in favor of the measure was giving evidence on the matter at hand.

Our friend continues: "He was taking a mile a minute. The chairman of this committee, without interrupting him, called for a vote. The matter was passed, even as he kept on explaining it. He was still talking in favor of the bill when the chairman gavelled him into silence by telling him his support was no longer needed."

Editorial

Proposed legislation to legalize casino gambling in El Paso certainly started people talking in that Texas city.

It was interesting to read comments on the issue by civic leaders there. Most seemed to be falling over themselves trying to emphasize that they do not favor the idea, while indicating they would not necessarily be opposed to it either.

When the fact El Paso's economy suffered the worst setback in January of any Texas city is considered, it is understandable these gentlemen might be aghast at the idea, and at the same time tempted by it. Some, no doubt, were waiting to see which way the wind blows.

But the day after the story broke, three El Paso delegates to the Texas Legislature denounced the proposal in no uncertain terms. This probably guaranteed its demise.

Of interest to us was a comment by the state senator who unveiled the plan. He said Las Vegas casino owners have been pushing for the Mesquero Apache Reservation as a casino site.

The usual arguments against casino gambling were quickly advanced by concerned individuals and groups—influx of organized crime, questionable benefit to the economic base of the host community, increased law enforcement costs, victimization of those who gamble, etc.

The Mesquero-Ruidoso area may indeed one day be faced with the question of whether that particular industry would be viable here. We hope the question receives thoughtful, thorough consideration if and when we are—not a two-day "spring on/react to" blitz, a la El Paso.—TP

On the Village beat with Tim Palmer

Although the calendar says spring doesn't arrive until March 21, I have always considered March the first day of spring. Guess that comes from growing up in Albuquerque. It may snow there in March occasionally, but there just isn't enough winter by then to classify any of the month in that season.

Ruidoso — "81-'82—I had a story I told people to illustrate what winter here is like. The story went that in January, several inches of snow could fall on the town one weekend, but I could be out playing tennis with no shirt on the next weekend.

Well, this winter proved the story is not valid for describing Ruidoso winters in general. I remember one day a couple months back when it was nice enough to play tennis outdoors, but we were fouled in our efforts because all the courts in town had snow on them.

I'm glad there were those periods of nice weather between the snowstorms, though. Cathy and I agreed a couple of weeks ago that if this is as severe a winter as Ruidoso ever has, it is still not too bad. Then it snowed again.

But we're not ready to pack our bags and head south, like we did after one winter in Wyoming. Besides, how far south can you be? And of course, we have the luxury of looking forward to summer in the cool pines.

I've come around to thinking of hot weather in the same way I do about snow. If I want some, I'd like to be able to go where it is, not have it beat down on or dump on me.

Yep, the mid-sixties were feeling just about right last week as I hit some tennis balls with Randy Herzberg and tried to revive my fading Mexico suntan.

Along with the tennis racket, sporting equipment that comes out of the closet this time of year includes the fishing tackle.

Time for what Weems Westfeldt once called "the aesthetics of salmon egg fishing." Weems referred to the pastime that way because the person he was talking to was a fervent fly fisherman—one who looked down his nose at egg-baiters.

But I figure if you enjoy fishing with salmon eggs and are successful, why not? When I was a kid, I used to be art avid reader of Outdoor Life magazine. I would get really absorbed in stories about muskie fishing in Minnesota, Kodiak bear hunts in Alaska—stuff like that.

Despite that early influence, I didn't grow up to be a dyed-in-the-wool outdoorsman. Too much suburbia ingrained, I guess.

But even spending a few minutes fishing the Rio Ruidoso at the start or the end of a day is an escape, a chance to be close to nature, a little adventure.

It's an addictive sensation to feel that tug on your line when a trout is nosing the bait. And it's great to have three or four pan-sized rainbows or browns sizzling in the skillet, and then to sit down and savor them.

So I think I'll continue to enjoy "the aesthetics of salmon egg fishing." As I was telling Dave Sheppard one time, there are certain things a fellow can count on out here in the Rocky Mountain West. Among them are Coors, Cutter's, and Pautzke's Balls o' Fire.

Of course, not everyone's thoughts turn to tennis and fishing in the spring. It is also the season for starting things growing.

You may or may not know that Friday was Arbor Day in New Mexico. We got a news release from the governor's office telling us March 11 was so proclaimed, but it arrived after the paper came out on March 10.

I have some information from the National Arbor Day Foundation that some may be interested in, however. That group is offering 10 trees to people who join the foundation during March.

The trees are a Colorado Blue Spruce, American Redbud, Black Walnut, Norway Spruce, Red Oak, White Flowering Dogwood, European Mountain Ash, Flowering Crab Apple and Butternut. They are six to 12 inches long.

We joined up last fall and got our trees in October, I think. They come in a manila envelope, postpaid, and you have to put them in water shortly after receiving them.

We had our doubts about planting them that late, but we called Conley's Nursery and they said to go ahead. Cathy unearthed one the other day, and, lo and behold, it's growing a new shoot! Pretty neat.

To get the trees, you send your $10 membership contribution to TENDREES, National Arbor Day Foundation, Arbor Lodge 100, Nebraska City, NE 68410. It should be sent by March 31.

In conclusion, I will borrow a device from Dannie Storm and include a snitch of verse. These lines were not penned by Robert Burns or Rudyard Kipling. The author is unknown, at least to me.

Ah Spring,
When all da holds in on da wing,
Isn't dat absurd?
I tot da wings was on da bold.

See you next week.

Alternate energy resources include unconventional fossil fuels

As conventional energy supplies dwindle, increasing emphasis is placed on the production of realistic alternate energy resources that are compatible with present-day technology without requiring major scientific breakthroughs.

Tapping unconventional fossil fuels with in situ (in place) recovery technology will satisfy this need, said Dr. Eric Nuttall, a professor of chemical and nuclear engineering at the University of New Mexico (UNM). Nuttall and other chemical and nuclear engineering professors at UNM are involved in research to develop in situ recovery technology.

"In situ recovery is the technology for extracting coal, oil shale, tar sands, methane, uranium and geothermal pockets from geological formations without significantly altering the environment," Nuttall said. "More than 90 percent of the recoverable unconventional energy resources in New Mexico are below the strip mining level. Using in situ recovery instead of conventional mining allows us to extract these resources with minimal environmental impact."

UNM's in situ technology research focuses on chemical methods to bypass conventional mining, studying the processing steps necessary to convert solid material to a usable liquid or gaseous energy resource. Funding for the University's in situ research comes from the New Mexico Department of Energy and Minerals, the U.S. Department of Energy and private industry.

"In the future, fusion and solar energy will contribute to electricity production, but not to the transportation energy picture as we now know it," Nuttall said. "Also, fusion energy requires tremendous technological progress before it is a viable energy source, and we haven't yet discovered an economic method for using solar power. Although their development should be continued, I see fusion and solar power as having energy potential in the long-term. We need near-term energy resources compatible with present-day technology, such as automobiles and airplanes, that will be available in the next 30 years."

In situ technology often involves using different starting materials to get the same end product: fossil fuel. Oil shale is a significant alternate energy source because it yields petroleum, a substance in great demand in today's energy infrastructure which is highly compatible with current transportation methods.

Nuttall sees oil shale as the major unconventional energy source for transportation fuel. Oil shale doesn't flow like liquid oil; it's sandstone containing oil. Of all the fossil fuels remaining in the world, oil shale constitutes the majority. More oil shale exists than any other hydrocarbon, such as coal, petroleum and tar sands, Nuttall said.

"The Green River formation in the western United States has oil shale deposits containing twice as much oil as the Middle East. The technology for removing this oil is still evolving, but 1.8 trillion barrels of oil are locked in rock in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming," Nuttall said. "If we're interested in new energy resources, oil shale is a natural target."

"The largest oil shale deposit in the world is in Colorado. Because of its proximity to New Mexico, this abundant deposit will definitely have an impact on the state, providing energy, creating jobs and possibly resulting in environmental changes," Nuttall said. "This impact is reason enough for New Mexico to have a strong interest in the development of in situ oil shale retorting."

To utilize the oil trapped in sandstone, the oil content must be removed from the rock and chemically converted. "If you heat oil shale in the ground, you get oil," Nuttall said. "We're trying to do what nature does, but accelerate the process. We can either mine the rock and heat it on the surface, or create a reactor underground where the chemical conversion from rock to liquid or vapor will take place."

The extraction of oil from tar sands is another in situ process being studied by UNM chemical and nuclear engineering professors. Large deposits of sandstone in the Santa Rosa region contain heavy crude oil. Heat is used to liquify the oil and force it from the stone. However, tar sands are a more diluted energy source than oil shale, Nuttall said, containing more rock than hydrocarbons.

Coal is New Mexico's largest energy resource. Although it isn't suitable for transportation fuel, coal is ideal for electrical power generation.

"The sun will put out more energy over the long run than coal, but it has to be collected and concentrated," Nuttall said. "Coal is the state's greatest energy potential."

Removing coal from the earth, however, presents problems. Strip mining is not good environmentally, and conventional mining has safety and health problems, such as black lung. Coal gasification is an in situ approach now under study at UNM, and involves extracting the chemical content of the coal without removing it from the ground.

Holes are drilled into the coal deposit to create an underground reactor where the coal is ignited and gasified, chemically converting it to gas. Instead of mining the coal and gasifying it in a reactor on the surface, the same procedure takes place underground, eliminating the need for mining. The primary product gases of coal — carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, hydrogen, methane, and other hydrocarbons — are extracted and used directly as fuel for power plants generating electricity.

"Coal gasification is still in the research and development phase," Nuttall said, "and no commercial coal gasification plants now exist in this country. This technology is a good direction for New Mexico to pursue, however, because it addresses the majority of the state's coal in a non-mining approach."

Other in situ technology tapping the energy in coal involves the removal of methane, a natural gas, from coal seams. UNM chemical and nuclear engineering Professor Frank Williams has developed a technique for determining whether enough methane exists in a coal bed to justify the expense of removing it.

This technique involves drilling through coal seams and analyzing the chips for methane content, instead of the conventional coring of coal with a hollow tube. Before the chip desorption technique was developed, the cost of measuring methane, a natural by-product of coal, was prohibitively expensive, so it was usually exhausted rather than recovered.

Williams has sampled coal at 15 different sites in the San Juan Basin in northwestern New Mexico, and estimates enough methane is trapped in the state's coal beds to provide New Mexico's natural gas needs for more than 100 years.

"Removing methane from coal beds is a much less radical form of in situ recovery than coal gasification," Nuttall said, "because we're simply removing a secondary energy resource related to coal, not chemically altering or using the coal itself — which has far greater energy potential than methane. The methane represents less than one percent of the energy value of coal, but the technology is available now. Coal gasification is still 30 years down the road."

To make this state's coal competitive to industry, UNM is working with the New Mexico Bureau of Mines to characterize New Mexico's coal, providing a data base needed to attract industry. "Coal characterization is planning ahead to fairly evaluate our coal," Nuttall said.

Characterization goes all the way from geology, which includes the technical characteristics of coal, to synfuels, or potential energy applications. With its ongoing in situ technology research, UNM is looking at the synfuels aspect of coal.

"Economics is the driving force in the development of coal," Nuttall said. "Economics determine that the first coal to be mined is strip minable coal. We can control the rate of development, and we can save the Bisti badlands, but economics will always be the underlying driving force in the development of energy resources like coal."

"In studying energy development, we're concerned with unchangeable factors, not changeable issues like world politics and fluctuations in energy price and supply. The unchangeable fact is the fossil fuel. It exists — and that's the reality of the matter."

JUDGING TOUR PACKAGES

Many people find all-inclusive tour packages to be the most carefree way to vacation. Of course, the kind of package offered will vary by destination, but there are important things to keep in mind.

If the package tour covers a lot of territory, check to see just how much time you get in any one place. Spending six hours in transit to get only an hour or two at a spot you've always wanted to see is both tiring and disappointing.

How large is the group you're traveling with, relative to the places you'll be visiting? Remote national parks, for example, don't really have the facilities to accommodate two busloads of tourists at once; you may spend all your time on line for the restaurant instead of seeing the sights.

Read your itinerary carefully. On an Orient whirlwind tour, for example, "Day Two in Hong Kong" won't mean much if the day starts out at the airport in Tokyo.

Packages can be as fast-or slow-paced, as busy or as leisurely, as you want. We can help you sort through what's available to find the perfect vacation. Contact your travel specialists at Ruidoso Travel.

All your favorites — Jack Haley as the Tin Woodman, Ray Bolger as the Scarecrow and Judy Garland as Dorothy — take the yellow brick road to Emerald City, when CBS rebroadcasts the classic film on Friday, March 18.

Since 1945, hundreds of ships and planes, and thousands of people have vanished without a trace in an area of the Atlantic Ocean off Florida known as the Bermuda Triangle. On Tuesday, March 15, Nova investigates the mystery surrounding these strange disappearances in "The Case of the Bermuda Triangle".
 It's reported that an average of four boats and two airplanes set off into the Triangle every month — and never return. Some pilots are said to avoid the area because their instruments unaccountably stop functioning there.
 These events have led some people to think something powerful, sinister, or perhaps supernatural is lying in — or perhaps under — that part of the Atlantic.
 Is there a reasonable explanation for these strange reports and events? Nova traces some of the most famous reports, searching for clues, testing theories and finally penetrating the mystery of the Triangle.
 Nova is produced for PBS by WGBH Boston and is funded by public television stations. The Arthur Vining Davis Foundation and the Johnson & Johnson family of companies. "The Case of the Bermuda Triangle" is a production of the BBC, produced by Graham Mackay.

Ruidoso thinclads have potential, Bob, Williamson key performers

Potential is the key word for the Ruidoso High School boys track team this season.

The Warriors lost several quality athletes to graduation last spring, including star weightman-sprinter Lon Nunley. However, the Warriors have one of their biggest groups of underclassmen ever, to go along with at least two blue-chip athletes.

"I think we'll be competitive and surprise a lot of people," Warrior head coach Ronny Maskew said. "Towards the end of the season before the district meet we should be very competitive."

Ruidoso finished fourth in the district 3-AAA meet last season, and two of the five athletes who competed in the state meet will return to the fold this year.

The two state meet returnees are sophomore 1,500-meter ace Cisco Bob and senior relay standout Grady Williamson.

Bob finished fourth in the state 1,500-meter run with a 4:17.55 clocking and should improve considerably on that this season. He suffered an injury during the football season last fall but has recovered.

Williamson ran on the 400-meter, 800-meter and 1,600-meter relay teams and is also a standout sprinter. The Warrior 800-meter relay squad finished fifth at the state meet with a 1:33.3 clocking.

"I'm not sure what Grady will run this season," Maskew said. "He could run anything from the 100 meters to the 400 meters. Our best relay event this season will probably be the medley relay, so he'll probably run the 400-meter leg in that event."

Bob also figures to be a key part of the Warrior medley relay team.

"We'll probably run Cisco in the 1,500 meters and medley relay most of the season," Maskew remarked. "That should be enough for him."

The Warriors have a host of distance runners and sprinters to go with Bob and Williamson. Indeed, the running events appear to be Ruidoso's strength this season.

Junior Eric Strobel and junior Steve Snidow should do well in the 100 meters and 200 meters. Senior Mike Douglas should be a fine 200-meter and 400-meter sprinter.

George Gresham, who transferred to Ruidoso from Arizona last summer, could compete in both the weight events and the sprints, although Maskew has the 185-pound sophomore working mostly in the weights now.

In the longer distance races, freshman David Ordorica and junior David Landrum could do well. Landrum will probably run the 3,000 meters while Ordorica will concentrate on the 1,500 meters.

"I think we've got some younger kids who could also help us out in the distance races," Maskew said.

Curt McClellan is a returning veteran in the 800 meters while Mark Johnston and Wade Proctor should give the Warriors depth in that event.

Ruidoso doesn't have any returning veterans in the hurdles, but Maskew is hopeful some newcomers can take up the slack.

Besides the medley relay, Ruidoso will also compete in the 400-meter, 800-meter and 1,600-meter relay events. The Warriors lost Lon and Don Nunley and Scott Neal to graduation, so some of the younger athletes will have to take their places.

In the field events, Ruidoso has fewer returning veterans than in the running events.

Still, Maskew is hopeful the Warriors can be competitive in the field events.

Senior Chris Sanchez is a returning veteran in the shot put and discus. Sophomore Chip Ramsey, freshman James Herrera and sophomore Manuel Montano could also help out in the weight events.

"We don't really have anybody who can take Lon's place right now in the weight events," Maskew said. "However, by the end of the season we could have some pretty good athletes there."

Lon Nunley finished third in both the shot put and discus at last season's state meet, so replacing him will be a tall order.

Ruidoso has several athletes who could do well in the long jump. Maskew feels junior Tracy Gann has a lot of potential in that event. Williamson and Justin Smith could also compete in the long jump. Freshman Russell Easter is also a possibility in the long jump.

Gann and Easter could also compete in the high jump, but the Warriors don't have any returning veterans in that event.

Ruidoso will open the season Friday, March 18, with a dual meet against Carlsbad High School on the latter's track. The Warriors will get a taste of what district 3-AAA competition will be like early as they'll travel to arch-rival Tularosa High School Tuesday, March 22, for a dual meet with the Wildcats.

"I see Deming and Silver City as the district favorites because of their depth," Maskew said. "However, we'll be right up there, particularly by the time the district meet rolls around."

Warrior girl tracksters have talent, hope to better last year's record

If the early practices are any indication, the 1983 Ruidoso High School girls track team should have plenty of depth and talent.

"We had a real good first day of practice," Warrior head coach Sergio Castanon said. "We've got about 22 high school girls and eight middle school girls out for the team so far."

Besides depth, big-meet experience should also be a plus for Ruidoso. The Warriors finished second in the district 3-AAA meet last season, earning Castanon coach of the year honors.

Six of the nine girls who competed in the state AAA division meet last season are returning.

They are Gia Rose, Judy McCoy, Valerie Garcia, Deanna Peso, Sonja Jefferson and Jackie Jefferson.

The Jefferson sisters could be the most talented sister duo in the entire AAA division. Jackie, a senior, was an outstanding distance runner last season, but might try the sprints this season. Sonja, a junior, was a state meet participant in the 400 meters last season, finishing seventh in the finals.

"Jackie is flexible and could do well in both the sprints and distance races," Castanon said. "She had a real good first day of practice."

Peso finished sixth in the state 3,000-meter run with a 12:07.0 clocking. She has a strong finish and is a consistent runner.

Garcia, McCoy and Rose are all versatile runners who should score a lot of points for the Warriors this season.

Garcia is a strong runner in the 400 meters and 800 meters. She should also be a big part of the Ruidoso medley relay team.

Rose and McCoy are both sophomores and could do well in both the sprints and the hurdles. Rose, who is also a fine basketball player, competed in both the 400-meter relay and the 1,600-meter relay at the state meet last season. McCoy ran on the 400-meter relay squad.

Castanon is also hopeful some of the younger girls can help out, particularly in the distance events.

Turning to the field events, the Warriors should be strong in the shot put and discus. Lillian Lopez was a consistent performer in those events last year. Claudia Brannum, another basketball standout, should help out in the weight events.

"I think Claudia can be good in the shot put and discus," Castanon said. "She didn't compete last season but I think she has potential."

Castanon is also pleased to have the help of head volleyball and boys junior varsity basketball coach Elmer Chavez this season.

"Chavez was the head coach at Grants High School last season," Castanon remarked. "He's qualified and knows the job well."

Ruidoso lost the district championship to Silver City High School last season and Castanon feels the Colts will again be the favored team.

"I think they only lost four girls off their squad," he said. "T or C (Truth or Consequences) could also be tough."

If Ruidoso can find a replacement or replacements for graduated state meet sprinter Sheri Dennis, the Warriors should be very competitive again.

Ruidoso's only early season meet against district competition will be at Tularosa High School, Tuesday, March 22.

WARRIOR GIRL THINCLADS. This is the Ruidoso High School girls track team for 1983. Some of the girls in this picture aren't with the team anymore but coach Sergio Castanon still has about 30 athletes out for the team. The Warriors finished second in the district 3-AAA meet last season and have six returnees who competed in the 1982 state meet.

Here's a look at the Ruidoso track coaches

Ronny Maskew is Ruidoso High School's head boys track coach, and Jim Ramsey is his assistant.

Maskew, 35, has been at Ruidoso since 1979. He is a graduate of Artesia High School and New Mexico State University.

Maskew is also defensive coordinator for the Warrior football team. His wife, Joette, teaches and coaches at White Mountain Middle School.

Ramsey, also 35, is a graduate of Carlsbad High School and has a bachelor's degree from Western New Mexico University. He also has a master's degree from New Mexico Tech and a doctorate from East Texas State University.

He has been at Ruidoso since 1980 and is also the head junior varsity football coach and offensive line coach.

Ramsey's wife is Phyllis. They have two children. Chip, 14, plays football, basketball and track for the Warriors. Daughter Robin is 11.

Sergio Castanon is the head girls track coach and Elmer Chavez is his assistant.

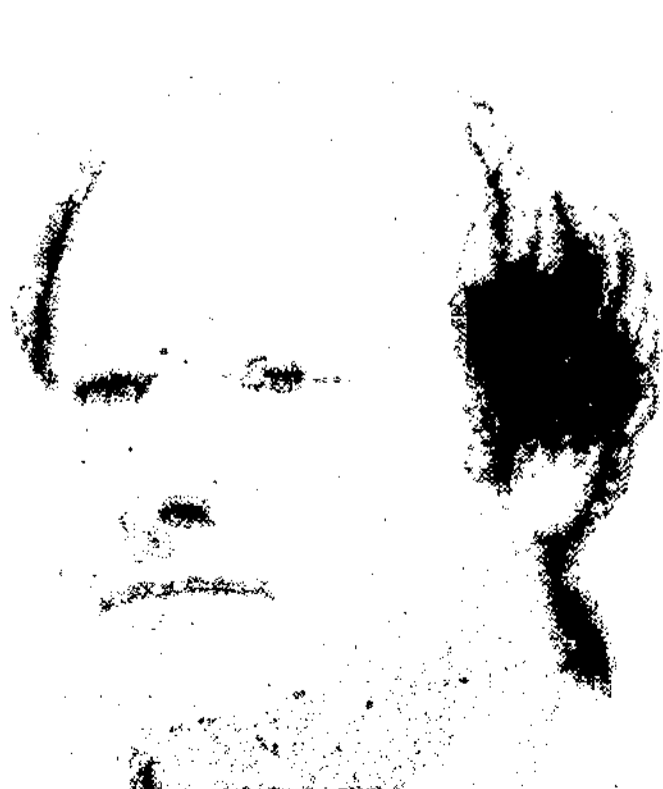

Castanon, 30, is in his sixth year at the Warrior campus. He is a graduate of Eastern New Mexico University and has coached girls basketball and volleyball besides track. He was named district 3-AAA track coach of the year last season as a result of his team's second-place finish.

Castanon and his wife Jeanne have two daughters. Kara is five and Brynn is two.

Chavez is in his first year at Ruidoso. The 25-year-old bachelor taught at Grants High School in northwestern New Mexico for two years before coming to Ruidoso. He also coaches girls volleyball and boys junior varsity basketball for the Warriors.

He was also a graduate assistant at Western New Mexico University and is an accomplished race-walker. He plans to compete in several races this summer.

coach optimistic about netters

Ruidoso High School may be fielding a boys tennis team for the first time in many years, but coach Mike Crocker is optimistic his players can hold their own.

"I'm really optimistic about our boys team," he said. "We've got quite a few players with competitive experience and we should do well this season."

Crocker is currently working with 12

boys at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club courts. Ruidoso will take just seven players to each match. However, Crocker won't cut anybody.

"What we plan on doing is holding a play day every Friday," the coach remarked. "That way someone who is below another player on our tennis ladder can play a guy above him for the right to play in the next match."

Ryan Brown is currently the top player on the Warrior boys ladder. Brown has competed in several age-group tournaments in the Southwest and should be one of the top players in the district.

Senior Billy Woodul, who was the starting quarterback on the football team, is ranked second. Woodul has also competed in tournaments before.

Twins Mike and Jim Smith are ranked third and fourth on the ladder. They competed in tournaments in California several years ago.

Other current members of the boys team include Zack Swalander, Cache Mundy, Scott Thornton, Mitch Rhodes, Dallas Draper, John Day and Richard Anklam.

Crocker is hopeful several other players will come out before the season begins.

Ruidoso will compete in a district with other southeastern New Mexico schools. Other teams in the district include Lovington High School, Portales High School, Artesia High School and New Mexico Military Institute.

Crocker sees Portales as the Warriors' toughest competition.

"Portales should be awfully strong," he said. "They've got a really good program with about twice as many players as I've got. They've also got a strong junior high school program."

Ruidoso will open the season with a home match against Lovington, Tuesday, March 22. All the home matches will be at the Racquet Club. The district tournament will be Saturday, May 7 at Portales.

Trapp expected to lead Warrior girls

Ruidoso High School tennis coach Mike Crocker got most of his tennis experience in this area.

Crocker, 35, played tennis at his high school in Texas, but didn't play in college at Texas Tech University.

When Crocker moved to Ruidoso over 10 years ago to teach at White Mountain Middle School, he got a job at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club. He later became tennis director at the club and held that position for about a year.

Crocker is also the assistant football coach at White Mountain. He played football in high school.

Crocker's wife is named Melinda and they have an eight-year-old daughter, Chrissy.

The Ruidoso High School girls tennis team won't have much experience, but the Warriors do have several excellent players.

Coach Mike Crocker's top-seeded player is junior Laura Trapp. Trapp, who has also competed in volleyball and track at Ruidoso, was the top-seeded player at her prep school in Dallas, Texas, before moving to Ruidoso. She also won honors in the John Newcombe Tennis Camp in Texas several times.

"Laura is an excellent player," Crocker said. "I expect big things from her."

Another player expected to do well for the Warriors is sophomore Mary Gaddy. She has also participated in some competitive tournaments.

Other members of the squad include Tina Sanchez, Robin Rhodes, Laura Tyson, Rachael McCoy, Donna Mobley, Kathy Harrison, Michelle Morrow, McKenzie Green, Dahn Stirman, Julie Jones, Brandi Adcock and Sandra Chavez.

Several of the girls besides Trapp and Gaddy have also had tournament experience. However, the majority of them have not played competitively.

"We're relatively inexperienced," Crocker admitted. "However, I think the girls will improve."

Crocker will take the top seven girls to each tennis match, the same as in the boys' division.

Depth, experience should be key as golfers see improvement

After being one of the youngest and most inexperienced teams in the state last season, the Ruidoso High School golf team should be stronger this year.

Ruidoso only had four golfers on its squad last season. Three were freshmen and one was a sophomore.

This season, however, coach Leroy

Gooch has long career as coach

Leroy Gooch has been the coach of the Ruidoso High School golf team for so long he can't remember what year he started.

"It's been at least 20 years," he said. "I've lived in Ruidoso for 32 years."

Gooch is a music teacher at White Mountain Middle School. Before the middle school opened, he taught at the high school.

He and his wife Mary Lou have three grown children. Kim is 28, Matt is 25 and Julie is 23.

Ruidoso High School 1983 golf schedule

April 8	Portales
April 21-22	Ruidoso
April 29-30	Socorro
May 3	Las Cruces
May 4	Deming
May 12-13	State AAA tournament at Socorro

Gooch has a much larger turnout to the earlier practices, despite the fact several of the golfers competed for the boys junior varsity basketball team.

Gooch had seven golfers out for the squad in the first three weeks of practice, and several more came out after the basketball season ended. He also has at least 10 golfers out for the White Mountain Middle School team.

"I expect us to be improved over last season," Gooch said. "Our four golfers who competed last season are back and I'm hopeful some of the younger golfers going out for the first time should also help us."

The four returnees from last season are

Crow has been ill but should be an excellent golfer when he gets into shape. He usually shot in the low 90's for 18 holes of golf last season. He had a brilliant 36 for the first nine holes of a one-day competition at Cree Meadows Country Club during the Ruidoso Golf Invitational last year.

Reynolds was generally the Warriors' most consistent golfer last season. He shot a fine 83 in the Socorro Invitational, the final tournament of last season. With improvement, he should score in the 70's several times this season.

Taylor came on strong at the end of last season and scored a 90 in the season opener at Alamogordo this season. He should also improve considerably this year.

Lopez played on the basketball team but should still help the Warriors this season. He generally scored in the low 100's or high 90's last year and should improve this season.

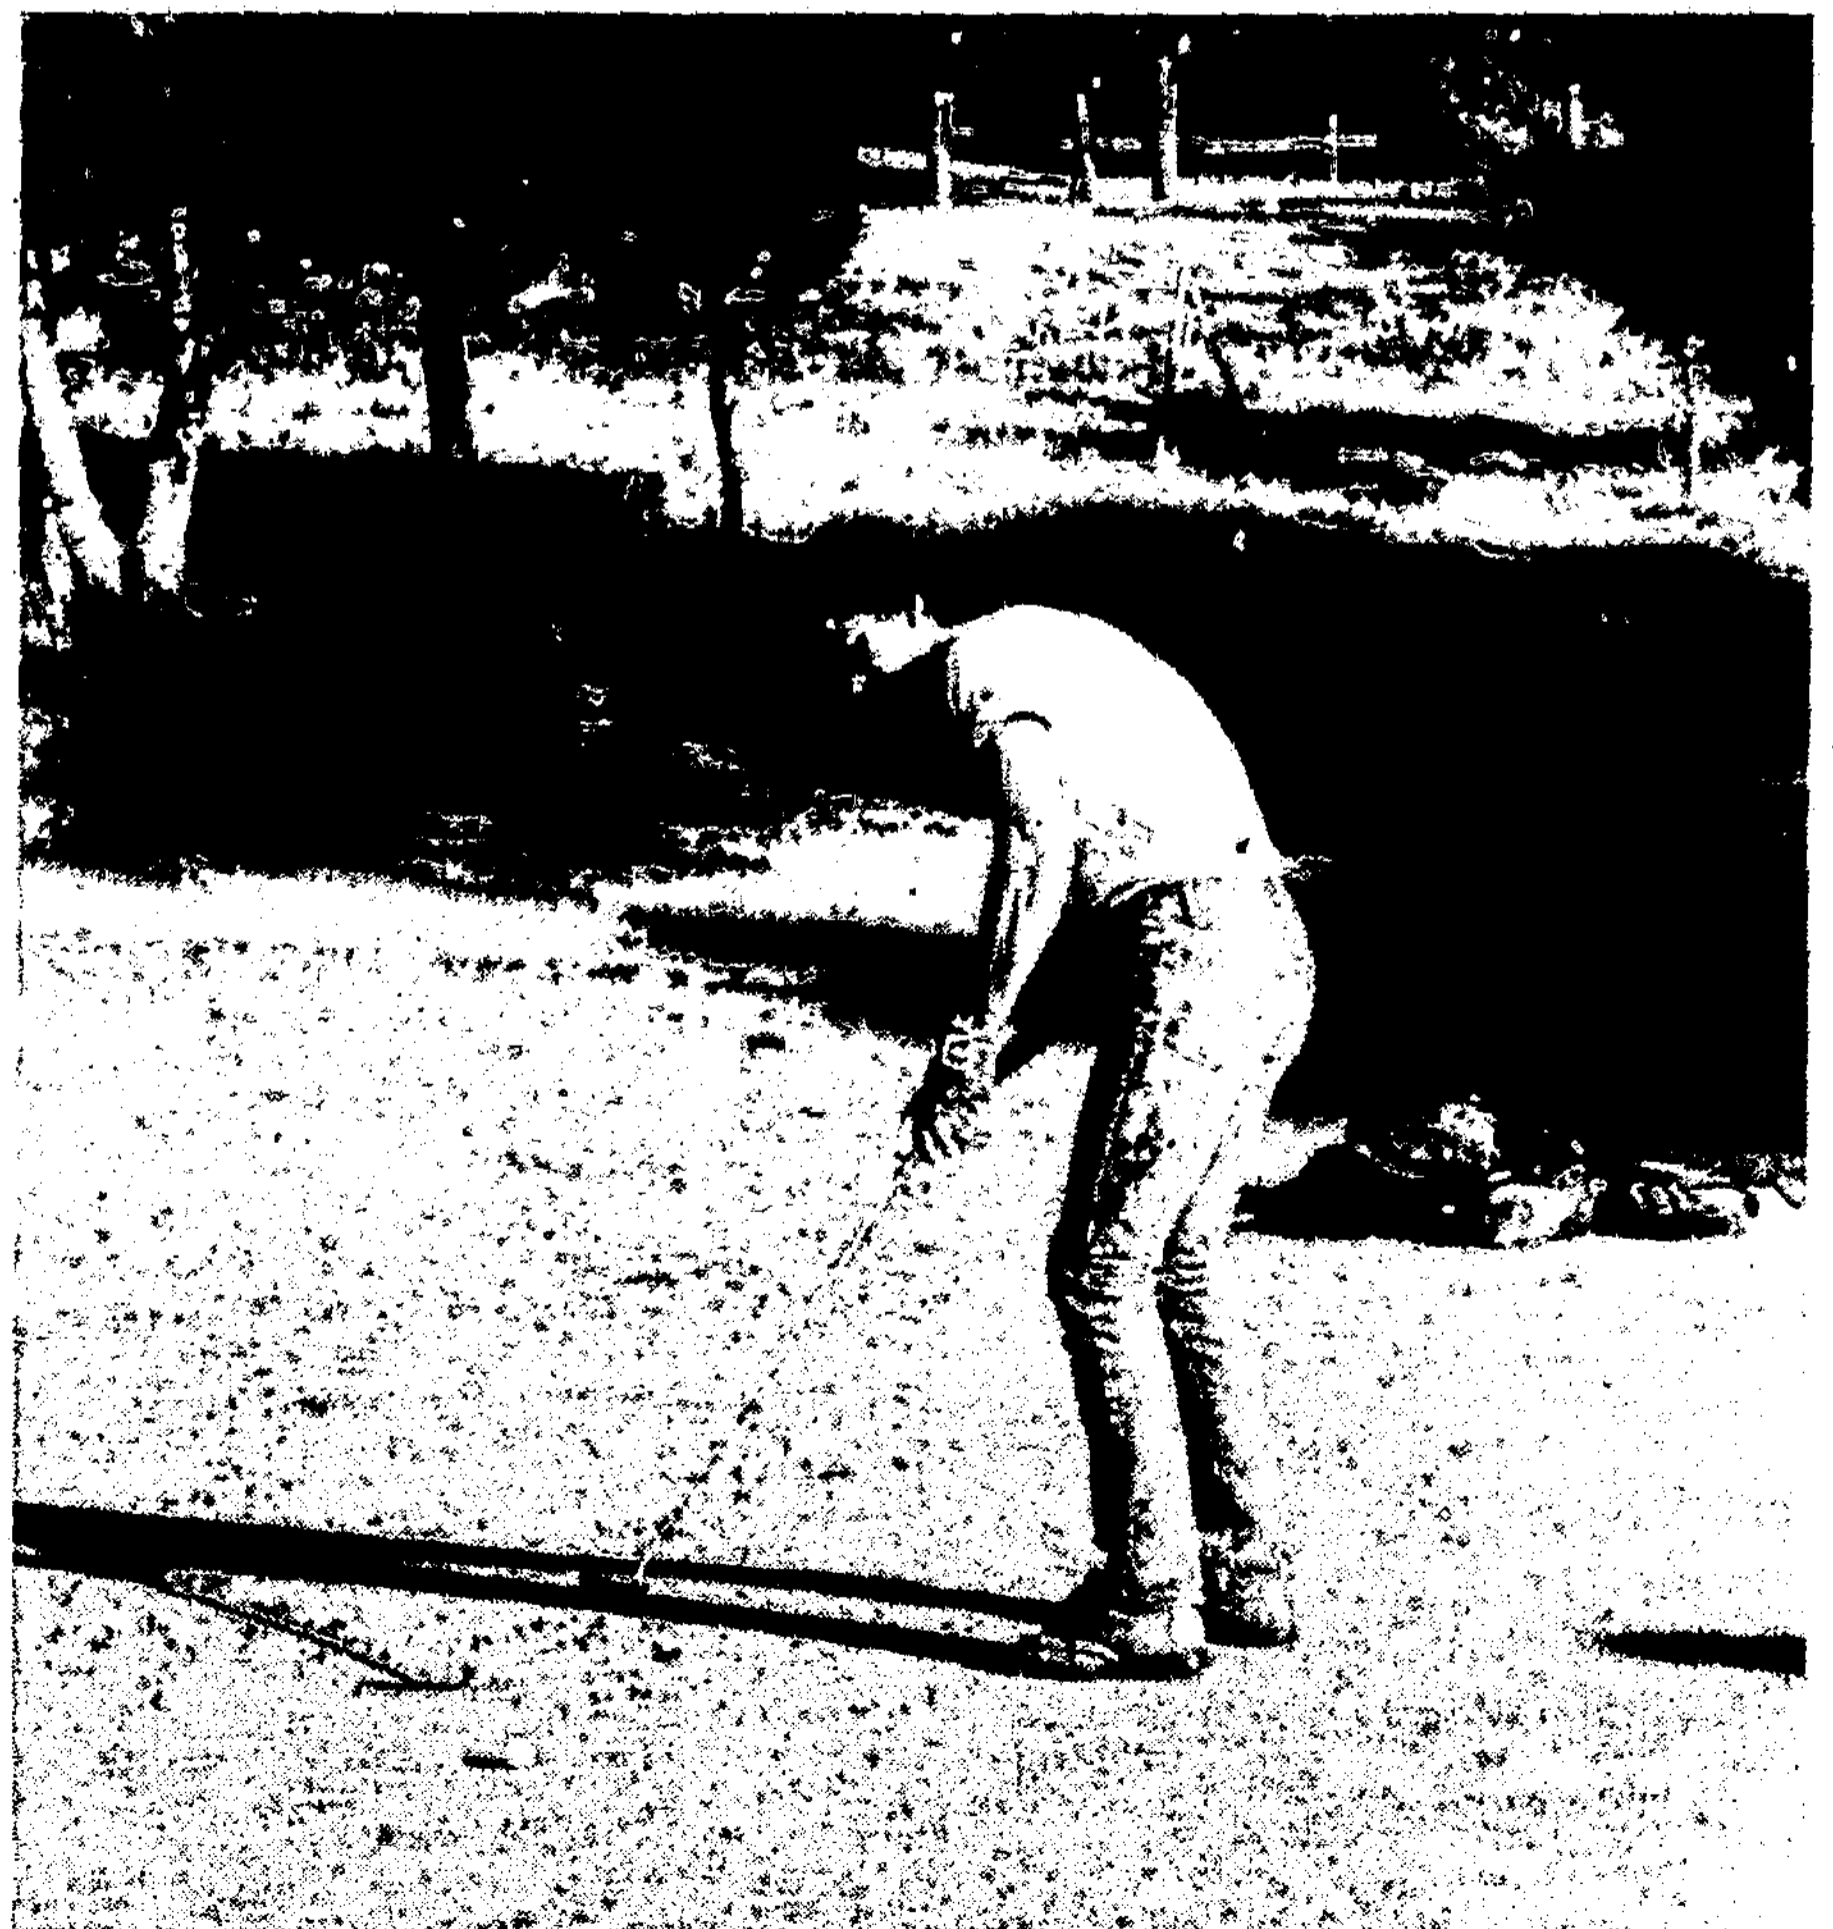

Other golfers who could figure in Ruidoso's plans this season include Gary Gregson, Randy Reynolds, Chris Garner and Bill Bomar. Some other golfers could also help the Warriors.

The annual Ruidoso Invitational will be held April 21-22, while the state tournament will be May 12-13 at Socorro.

they are Gary Gregson, Billy Taylor and Virgil Reynolds. Taylor and Reynolds are returnees from last year's team.

to improve his team. The Warriors have more depth than last year, and that should help over the course of the season.

PRIMER DEFENDING CHAMPION

Tiger thinclads boast top talent

While the Capitan High School boys track team may not have a great deal of depth, the Tigers do have several quality athletes and hope to defend their district championship.

Leading the way is Robert Parker, who has won the state A division high jump the past two seasons. Parker is also an outstanding basketball player.

Capitan should also be tough in the sprints. The Tigers have three quality sprinters returning from last year's team: Paul Sullivan, Danny Cummins and David Beavers. Sullivan could also compete in the shot put and discus.

"We should be pretty tough in the sprints and relays if the kids work hard," Tiger boys coach Mel Holland said. "Right now, most of the boys haven't gone out for track yet because they're on the basketball team in the state tournament. We're working with the rest of the kids now."

Sammy Castillo and Todd Proctor are other top athletes. Proctor qualified for the state meet last season in the discus and has a best of 126 feet. Castillo is a fine all-around athlete.

Darrel Ray is the Tigers' girls coach, but Holland has been coaching the girls team until the basketball season is over. Ray is the assistant boys basketball coach.

The Capitan girls lost an outstanding athlete when Tony Brooks moved to Tatum. Brooks won the state title in the 100-meter and 200-meter dashes last spring.

"It hurt when we lost Brooks," Holland said. "She was one of the best around."

Anita Armstrong is probably the Tigers' best returning sprinter. Freshmen Tracy Herd and Becky Huey should also help out.

Both the Tiger boys and girls teams should be more than competitive in district competition again. Capitan finished fourth in the state meet last year as Reserve High School won the championship.

Capitan's first meet of the season is the Fox Relays at Fort Sumner, Saturday, March 26.

SEASONED VETERAN. Virgil Reynolds displays the form that has made him one of the top golfers on the Ruidoso High School team. Reynolds is a junior and was probably the Warriors' top golfer last season.

JUMPING ROPE. Brian Davis jumps rope during a Ruidoso High School track practice recently. Davis is one of several White Mountain Middle School athletes on the Warrior boys track team this season. Although Ruidoso doesn't have a track, the Warriors still jog and do limbering-up exercises during practice.

STRETCHING IT. Members of the Ruidoso High School girls track team do some stretching exercises during a recent practice. The girls started practice March 7 and should be one of the better teams in district

3-AAA this season. The Warriors have one of their largest turnouts in history this season.

GETTING READY FOR THE SEASON. Jeremy Lane (left) and Clint Bob of the Ruidoso High School track team do some limbering up before a workout near the Warrior football field. Ruidoso does not have a track to practice on and the athletes must do their workouts around the school. There are about 30 athletes out for the boys team this season.

Ruidoso High School tennis coach Mike Crocker gives some pointers to his players during a recent workout. Crocker's boys and girls teams will open the season with home matches against Lovington High School Tuesday, March 22, at Sierra Swim and Racquet Club.

ONE OF THE TOP GIRL NETTERS. Robin Rhodes is expected to be one of the better players on the Ruidoso High School girls tennis team this season. Rhodes, a senior, has participated in several competitive tournaments before this season.

Jeff Smith (left) and Billy Woodul are expected to be two of the best players on the Ruidoso High School boys tennis team this season. Both players are ranked high on the Warrior tennis ladder.

Ruidoso opens the season with a home match against Lovington High School Tuesday, March 22.

Yours and Ours

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — As of the moment this is written, Jan Hartke, head of New Mexico's Washington office, has yet to pay so much as a courtesy call on the state's senior Senator there.

Hartke, of course, is a Democrat, as is the man who named him to that post, Toney Anaya.

The senior Senator is a Republican. He (the Senator) doesn't need Hartke and Anaya.

They need him.

More on the above:

New Mexico's very wet-behind-the-ears Congressman, Bill Richardson, said he couldn't afford to contribute to the state projects office which has operated in Washington for almost ten years.

"I need the money for other purposes," Richardson told us.

Do you really, Bill?

Then how come we way out here in the West hear that a guy named Eric Hill has been added to the staff of the state's office back there in Washington?

Is it true that Hartke, boss of that operation, did not want Hill there at all?

Is it also true that you are using the funds which might otherwise have gone to the projects office to pay some or all of Hill's annual salary?

And is it further true that Hill, a long-meeting of governors in Washington. Toney would have us believe that he is important enough to have "angered" (his word) the President.

He would like us to think the White House had to go on television to answer his (Toney's) proposals on cuts in the defense budget.

There are certain things concerning this issue you might like to know:

The governors voted 22-11 against the Anaya proposals. That means his ideas were rejected two to one by his own peers.

Anaya was also on the wrong side of a 30-10 vote to support the recommendations of the National Governor's Association on budget matters, and on the short side of a 26-16 vote on a substitute proposal from Gov. Anthony Earl of Wisconsin.

Our Governor says the President was "more than angry" when, after watching television, he denounced the governors who do not support the Reagan views. Our people on the scene in Washington tell this reporter the president simply did one of his run-of-the-mill denunciations of those who disagree with him. He has been reportedly angrier when speaking about his own Republican colleagues in government than he was this time.

RECTION GUIDE

document has been re-assured legibility and its immediately hereafter.

In the meantime, heavier conservation efforts like the U. S. launched extensive conservation efforts. Automobiles became lighter and more fuel efficient. Factories switched to coal and other fuel-efficient sources. Homes were insulated and in many cases, consumers replaced older appliances with new fuel-efficient devices. All of us began thinking about the high cost of energy and how we could save.

All of these forces have come to bear on a world oil market that is feeling stronger and stronger pressures to lower prices still further, and this effect will be felt, not just at the gas pump, but in all sectors of our economy.

For New Mexico's farmers, the drop in oil prices means a drop in the price of fuel for farm equipment, petroleum-based fertilizers, and transportation costs for commodities.

For New Mexico's tourist industry, the news is good on several fronts. Travel is expected to increase as gas prices continue to fall, helping the hotel and restaurant industries. Airlines are expected to save hundreds of millions of feeling that there will always be an ample supply of oil and gasoline to go around.

Obviously, that isn't so. With the unstable political situation in the Middle East, America could be thrust back into a serious oil shortage with high gas prices at any moment.

My concern is that we will not continue to develop alternative forms of energy such as solar, shale, geothermal, wind energy and other sources. We must do so if our country expects to achieve long-term energy independence.

In short, OPEC's current misadventure may be the boost we need to get us out of the recession, back to work and on the road to economic recovery. There are some problems that may occur if oil prices drop too quickly, but a steady decline in the price of oil should bring nothing but good news for consumers and businesses, who are waiting for the capital to expand their operations and get America back to work.

We're not out of the woods yet, but at least we have gotten a glimpse of where it ends.

Letters to the Editor

DEAR EDITOR:

Concerning the state of our only indoor theatre, the Ruidoso Twin Star, let it be known that Billy Alstetter has expressed my sentiments quite well in his Reporter's Round of March 3rd.

I should like to add that in no theatre that I have been to have I been so consistently treated so poorly, being made to feel that we, the customers, were there to serve the interests of the employees. Around to me that it should be the other way around and the hazards one subjects one's ear and one's self to in trying to park is indeed frightening if not downright dangerous and expensive.

Let me go on record that I will be happy to attend, support and help organize any program that will endeavor to bring quality movies (regardless of age) to the viewing public. How about it you business owners out there? Anyone have a night that your bar or restaurant could use a new constituency? It's been done before (the of the Mountain Gods circa 1976) and I know it can be done again. Let's do it.

Again let me thank Billy for having the nerve and initiative to bring this to our attention. And to again compliment his style in writing. Keep it up, Billy.

Sincerely,
DAN BARROW

DEAR EDITOR:

I find it hard to believe that you feel the development of a large hotel and more condos would be good for Ruidoso.

A little research would show the occupancy rate to be down substantially in Ruidoso. Also a look at the number of un-sold condos would show an overbuilt market which no developer should consider.

Yes, we do need commercial growth in the amount of stores, but let's not try to hurt the "mom and pop" establishments that have been here for years and helped Ruidoso become what it is today.

"People should think on developing new events and functions to draw more tourists into town, not more lodging to spread the same number of people over a larger number of units."

Thank you,
MICHAEL RADZIEWICZ

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone on The Ruidoso News staff for their involvement with my freshman English classes this last month. Their time taken from work to provide classroom demonstrations and office tours were as appreciated as Mr. Green's authorization of the paper donations made available to the students. Following is a list of comments extracted from the over one hundred "thank you" letters the students wrote:

ANIMAL VIEWPOINTS

Today's report of blood and mayhem in a sheep pen is a typical seasonal story in New Mexico's farm and ranch country. Sheep are such gentle, edible targets that they are almost caricatures of the innocent.

Dogs are loveable, wagging, happy creatures that enjoy having their ears scratched and are quite wonderful helpers and friends to man — singly.

But put a pack of poodles, beagles, or hounds together in the winter night, and those animals quickly take on the ways of their wild cousins, the coyotes and wolves — and woe betide the woolly lambs of Spring.

We trust nobody's pet gets killed by an outraged sheepman seeking to protect his flock. Because those dogs do what their instincts demand; they are hunters.

Since man has adopted them and sought to make of them something other than hunters, it is man's responsibility to control them.

EAGLES SOARING

The bald eagle, our national bird, appeared to be in serious if not imminent danger of extinction in much of the United States little more than a decade ago.

In 1970 this splendid creature was listed as endangered in 43 states, and in five as a threatened species.

Happily, conservation methods, including tougher enforcement of law against killing eagles, have reversed the long downward trend that began 40 years ago. By 1979 the National Wildlife Federation census had counted 9,815 bald eagles; by last year 13,804 were seen.

This year's midwinter survey has just been completed. Let us hope that when the results are analyzed the count will have soared still higher. — Alamogordo Daily News

"Silver tables trade action with Soviets."

Huh?

Upon further investigation, readers of Tuesday's regional edition of the El Paso Times discovered the Silver City Council tabled a resolution calling for a halt to trade between the United States and Communist countries.

But doesn't Silver City, with its well-publicized economic woes, have enough to worry about closer to home?

The thought occurred that the proposed resolution might have something to do with domestic copper production, the lack of which gets the blame for hard times in Grant County. But no, it is only aimed at curbing trade that would contribute to the military threat posed by Communist nations.

Though it seems ironic that Silver City Council members have concerned themselves with this issue, they have done so for a very good reason: two citizens submitted it for consideration.

The resolution on the local level, like the memorial on the state level, can be used to send a message to higher bodies or officials that the lower body has taken a position on an issue. The nuclear freeze is an example.

The gentlemen who submitted the trade ban proposal to the Silver City Council may have had no effect whatsoever on American foreign policy. But by their action, they used the American democratic process to make their feelings known.

We are again reminded of our good fortune to live in a country governed by that process.—TP

Reporter's Round

by Barby Grant

Emotionally charged issues are always the most difficult about which to present logical arguments, especially if one expects those holding tightly to an opposing point-of-view to understand them as such. Abortion is certainly one of the most emotionally charged and controversial issues being debated today.

It's a definite strain to avoid becoming upset when one's "opposition" in the fight over abortion wins a small—but significant—victory. My emotions were strained recently after reading accounts of what I considered two minor victories for "Pro-Lifers" (as they are euphemistically called).

The first victory came with approval by the New Mexico House Consumer and Public Affairs Committee of a bill mandating that parents be notified of a teen daughter's intention to have an abortion. The second victory came when the same committee also approved a bill that would make it a crime to kill a human fetus during the commission of another crime.

The problem I have with these proposed bills only partially has to do with the direct effects of the laws to be created by their enactment. I suppose it could be argued that my worry is premature until the bills actually pass through all the channels required for their adoption.

Both bills are currently on the table in the House Judiciary Committee and then must go to the full House for passage. The abortion notification bill, HB201, has not been heard in the Senate or by any of its committees yet. The fetalicide bill, SB108, was passed by the full Senate in early February and will go the governor if passed through the House.

My main concern stems not from the fear that these particular laws are imminent but from the precedent being set here. If I were forced to play devil's advocate, I could probably form seemingly convincing arguments in favor of these proposed pieces of legislation.

House bill 201 provides that "no physician shall perform an abortion upon an unemancipated pregnant woman under the age of 18 ... without first having given at least 24 hours actual notice to one of the parents or the legal guardian of the minor." The bill does permit a teenager to file a petition in juvenile court for a waiver of the requirement, according to an AP news story.

This provision at least makes the bill swallowable, but the fact remains that it represents one more step towards removing the rights of females over their own lives and bodies. And certainly those teenagers whom the bill is designed to "protect" will only seek out an alternative solution—self-induced or "illegal" abortion.

The same is true for President Reagan's "squeal law," which would require that parents be notified of their children's intentions to obtain contraceptives. That kind of law will only force teens to get around it or discourage them from using contraceptives at all, a much more dangerous situation than their using them without the knowledge of their parents.

Senate bill 108, on the other hand, could be touted as a gain for the rights of expectant mothers. This bill would establish fetalicide—death of a fetus as the result of a crime or attempted commission of a crime—as a fourth-degree felony, punishable by a maximum of 18 months in prison, according to an AP news story.

Passage of this legislation could clearly be viewed as a positive step for expectant parents who have lost their unborn children as a direct result of criminal actions. But looking deeper into the implications of such a law, one might conclude that it would represent progress toward the establishment of fetal rights as being equal to the rights possessed by born human beings.

The establishment of such rights is what "Pro-Lifers" are fighting for in their battle to outlaw abortion.

But in giving full human rights to the unborn, the female half of the present population would automatically be robbed of a portion of its rights. The life-changing decision about whether to carry a fetus to full term and give birth to a baby would be snatched from these individuals.

This argument doesn't even take into account the inequity that would result from forcing unwanted babies to be thrust into a world often incapable and/or unwilling to care for them.

Being such an emotionally charged issue, however, abortion is a topic about which one finds it rather difficult to argue logically, and even more difficult to rationally consider arguments posed from the "opposition." The name Phyllis Schlafly need only be mentioned for me to lose all hint of rationale. I suppose one of my greatest fears is for her to be granted her one life's wish for all women to be condemned to lives as pregnant and barefoot housewives. A fate worse than death!

But at least I'm able to admit that my emotional constraints are severely tested when faced with the possibility of being robbed of my rights through the efforts of someone like Phyllis Schlafly. I just hope it never reaches the point that the possibility becomes reality, although I fear that the bills now pending before the Legislature would ease the way for that to happen.

OPINION PAGE

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — As of the moment this is written, Jan Hartke, head of New Mexico's Washington office, has yet to pay so much as a courtesy call on the state's senior Senator there.

Hartke, of course, is a Democrat, as is the man who named him to that post, Toney Anaya.

The senior Senator is a Republican. He (the Senator) doesn't need Hartke and Anaya.

They need him.

More on the above: New Mexico's very wet-behind-the-ears Congressman, Bill Richardson, said he couldn't afford to contribute to the state projects office which has operated in Washington for almost ten years.

"I need the money for other purposes," Richardson told us.

Do you really, Bill?

Then how come we way out here in the West hear that a guy named Eric Hill has been added to the staff of the state's office back there in Washington?

Is it true that Hartke, boss of that operation, did not want Hill there at all?

Is it also true that you are using the funds which might otherwise have gone to the projects office to pay some or all of Hill's annual salary?

And is it further true that Hill, a long-time Democratic activist, will be charged almost solely with making you look better to New Mexico media, already being inundated with releases from your office on every subject imaginable?

If you want the word on how to make press when there really is no news, just go back and study that "debate" Toney Anaya says he had with the President of the United States during the recent meeting of governors in Washington. Toney would have us believe that he is important enough to have "angered" (his word) the President.

He would like us to think the White House had to go on television to answer his (Toney's) proposals on cuts in the defense budget.

Here are certain things concerning this issue you might like to know:

— The governors voted 22-11 against the Anaya proposals. That means his ideas were rejected two to one by his own peers.

— Anaya was also on the wrong side of a 30-10 vote to support the recommendations of the National Governor's Association on budget matters, and on the short side of a 28-16 vote on a substitute proposal from Gov. Anthony Earl of Wisconsin.

— Our Governor says the President was "more than angry" when, after watching television, he denounced the governors who do not support the Reagan views. Our people on the scene in Washington tell this reporter the president simply did one of his run-of-the-mill denunciations of those who disagree with him. He has been reportedly angrier when speaking about his own Republican colleagues in government than he was this time.

— When Budget Director David Stockman was asked about the effect of the Anaya attack on the President, he said in more or less these words, "Governor Who?"

Anaya, back home, wants us to believe he is a big man. Maybe he is, but this columnist will bet if you stop in at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue and ask the President to name the governor of New Mexico, what you will get is a blank stare.

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

"You know, I can remember when gasoline was $1.50 a gallon..." It sounds pretty strange to say that nowadays with gas prices coming down. But the evidence is unmistakable:

World oil prices are falling, collapsing, or just plain plummeting, depending on which forecaster you listen to. While it will probably never return to the days when gasoline prices remained solidly under the 30 cents-a-gallon mark, the future appears to be brighter than the immediate past.

I must say it's nice to see OPEC, and not the U. S., squirming for a change.

This sudden turn of fortune was not an accident, but shows that oil, just like any other commodity, is subject to the basic law of supply and demand. OPEC set prices, but could not agree on production levels. While OPEC nations overproduced, non-OPEC nations stepped up their production, including the U. S. which deregulated domestic oil prices.

In the meantime, heavier consuming nations like the U. S. launched extensive conservation efforts. Automobiles became lighter and more fuel efficient. Factories switched to coal and other fuel-efficient sources. Homes were insulated and in many cases, consumers replaced older appliances with new fuel-efficient devices. All of us began thinking about the high cost of energy and how we could save.

All of these forces have come to bear on a world oil market that is feeling stronger and stronger pressures to lower prices still further, and this effect will be felt, not just at the gas pump, but in all sectors of our economy.

For New Mexico's farmers, the drop in oil prices means a drop in the price of fuel for farm equipment, petroleum-based fertilizers, and transportation costs for commodities.

For New Mexico's tourist industry, the news is good on several fronts. Travel is expected to increase as gas prices continue to fall, helping the hotel and restaurant industries. Airlines are expected to save hundreds of millions of dollars on aviation fuel, which many believe could enable airlines to keep competing for passengers and continue to offer low-priced fares.

The automobile industry should benefit as the larger, less fuel-efficient vehicles will get a second look as the fear of escalating gas prices disappears. These could show up in greater sales of boats and recreational vehicles, which many did not purchase because of their lower fuel efficiency. An increase in auto sales could also help New Mexico's copper industry, devastated by low copper prices due to low manufacturing demand.

We should see a lower trade deficit, too. Not only would we see our payments for foreign oil decline, but other energy-consuming nations will have more money available to buy U. S. products.

The one problem with gasoline prices coming down is that our people could be lulled into a sense of false security — a feeling that there will always be an ample supply of oil and gasoline to go around.

Obviously, that isn't so. With the unstable political situation in the Middle East, America could be thrust back into a serious oil shortage with high gas prices at any moment.

My concern is that we will not continue to develop alternative forms of energy such as solar, shale, geothermal, wind energy and other sources. We must do so if our country expects to achieve long-term energy independence.

In short, OPEC's current misfortune may be the boost we need to get us out of the recession, back to work and on the road to economic recovery. There are some problems that may occur if oil prices drop too quickly, but a steady decline in the price of oil should bring nothing but good news for consumers and businesses, who are waiting for the capital to expand their operations and get America back to work.

We're not out of the woods yet, but at least we have gotten a glimpse of where it ends.

That kind of law will only force teens to get around it or discourage them from using contraceptives at all, a much more dangerous situation than their parents without the knowledge of their parents.

Senate bill 108, on the other hand, could be touted as a gain for the rights of expectant mothers. This bill would establish feticide—death of a fetus as the result of a crime or attempted commission of a crime—as a fourth-degree felony, punishable by a maximum of 18 months in prison, according to an AP news story.

Passage of this legislation could clearly be viewed as a positive step for expectant parents who have lost their unborn children as a direct result of criminal actions. But looking deeper into the implications of such a law, one might conclude that it would represent progress toward the establishment of fetal rights as being equal to the rights possessed by born human beings.

The establishment of such rights is what "Pro-Lifers" are fighting for in their battle to outlaw abortion.

But in giving full human rights to the unborn, the female half of the present population would automatically be robbed of a portion of its rights. The life-changing decision about whether to carry a fetus to full term and give birth to a baby would be snatched from these individuals.

This argument doesn't even take into account the inequity that would result from forcing unwanted babies to be thrust into a world often incapable and/or unwilling to care for them.

Being such an emotionally charged issue, however, abortion is a topic about which one finds it rather difficult to argue logically, and even more difficult to rationally consider arguments posed from the "opposition." The name Phyllis Schlafly need only be mentioned for me to lose all hint of reason. I suppose one of my greatest fears is for her to be granted her one life's wish for all women to be condemned to lives as pregnant and barefoot housewives. A fate worse than death!

But at least I'm able to admit that my emotional constraints are severely tested when faced with the possibility of being robbed of my rights through the efforts of someone like Phyllis Schlafly. I just hope it never reaches the point that the possibility becomes reality, although I fear that the bills now pending before the Legislature would ease the way for that to happen.

ANIMAL VIEWPOINTS

Today's report of blood and mayhem in a sheep pen is a typical seasonal story in New Mexico's farm and ranch country. Sheep are such gentle, edible targets that they are almost caricatures of the innocent.

Dogs are loveable, wagging, happy creatures that enjoy having their ears scratched and are quite wonderful helpers and friends to man — singly.

But put a pack of poodles, beagles, or hounds together in the winter night, and those animals quickly take on the ways of their wild cousins, the coyotes and wolves — and will beside the coyote lambs of Spring.

We trust nobody's pet gets killed by an outraged sheepman seeking to protect his flock. Because those dogs do what their instinct demands; they are hunters.

Since man has adopted them and sought to make of them something other than hunters, it is man's responsibility to control them.

We sympathize with the sheep, and with the dogs.

The dog-owners who let their animals run loose deserve no sympathy, and even less respect. — Socorro Defensor Chieftan

EAGLES SOARING

The bald eagle, our national bird, appeared to be in serious if not imminent danger of extinction in much of the United States little more than a decade ago.

In 1970 this splendid creature was listed as endangered in 43 states, and in five as a threatened species.

Happily, conservation methods, including tougher enforcement of law against killing eagles, have reversed the long downward trend that began 40 years ago. By 1979 the National Wildlife Federation census had counted 9,815 bald eagles; by last year 13,804 were seen.

This year's midwinter survey has just been completed. Let us hope that when the results are analyzed the count will have soared still higher. — Alamogordo Daily News

by MARK GORDON
TWO GRADUATES OF THE 1982 ALL-AMERICAN Select Sale For Quarter Horse Yearlings at Ruidoso Downs have captured victories at Sunland Park. Sunland Park has presented 13 races for two-year-olds in preparation for this Friday's trial races for the West Texas Futurity, the first major quarter horse futurity in the Southwest. Just Real Easy, a Real Easy Jet filly, swept to a one and one-fourth length victory on February 12 and ran a 17.16 timing for the 330 yards. She was purchased in last summer's sale for $8,300. Trained by H. Don Farris for owner Connie H. Danley of Alamogordo, she was ridden by Mike Hidingier. The highly regarded Victory Margin, a Victory Stride colt, took a nose decision in his career debut on February 26 by schooling to a 17.05 clocking in a 330-yard dash. He was purchased for $26,000 at the All-American Sale. Trained by veteran quarter horse conditioner Jake Cascio for owners Jake J. Box and William E. Gahlberg of Oak Brook, Illinois, Victory Margin was ridden by Gary Sumpter. He was well-supported by the Sunland Park patrons, returning $3.40 to win as a 7-10 selection.

LOUIE FIGUEROA RECORDED his first three-win day of the season by entering the winner's circle three times on Saturday. He started with Really And Truly ($3.80) in the third race for trainer Charles D. Dolerjack, took the fifth with Bright Eyes Pippen ($11.00) for trainer Kelly J. James and then scored an upset triumph in the featured 11th race with Mora Man ($40.60) for trainer Gerald E. Hobby.

TRAINERS GRADY BRISCO AND GERALD E. HOBBY each registered their first two-win days this meeting on Saturday's program. Briscoe tallied with Tee Back ($8.80) for owner Don Luciano of El Paso, Texas, in the fourth and then captured the seventh with lavished Able Blue ($6.20) for owner W. J. Whigham of El Paso. Joe Martinez rode Tee Back while Joe Ober was aboard Able Blue. Hobby won the Joy Elect ($14.60) for owner Harold W. White of Scott City, Kansas, in the eighth and then won the featured 11th race with Mora Man ($40.60) for owner Roy B. Thompson of Buena Vista. Tony Cordova rode Joy Elect and Louie Figueroa was on Mora Man.

AN ODDITY OCCURRED in Saturday's fourth race. Each of the three horses in the money returned the identical price in the show payoff — $5.60. Excepting fields where each of the three horses returns the minimum $2.10 to show, very rarely do the horses each pay the same to show, especially with a better-than-average show return of $5.60. Tee Back, Deep Vile and Bim's Image were the three finishers in the five and one-half furlong chase for $5,000 claiming runners.

IN STEWARDS' RULINGS:
Jockey Tomey Swan was suspended

three racing days (March 4-6) for careless riding resulting in her mount, El Turco, who finished fourth being disqualified and placed sixth in the eighth race on February 25.

SUNLAND PARK HAS ASKED permission from the New Mexico State Racing Commission to have a makeup day of horse racing, according to Sunland Park general manager Donald F. Smith.

The west El Paso track has asked to have horse racing on Thursday, April 14, as a replacement day for the entire card originally scheduled for Friday, December 31, which was cancelled due to a seven-inch snowstorm.

"We hope the Racing Commission will give us that day so we can offer a program for our patrons and give our horsemen a day that they had originally planned on for races," Smith said.

HAND DEE KINNI, a Master Hand filly, posted a win in the season's first race for two-year-old thoroughbreds. The four-furlong jaunt, run as Friday's fourth race, saw the first four finishers in a blanket finish. Hand Dee Kinni was ridden by Victor Escobar for trainer J. Michael Welch and is owned by Robert F. Haynsworth and Edwin S. Mayer Jr. of El Paso. She ran the half mile in :47 1/5 and returned $12.40 to win as a $5.20-1 wagering risk.

TRAINER J. MICHAEL WELCH captured two races on Friday's program. He started with Hand Dee Kinni ($12.40) in the fourth race for owners Robert F. Haynsworth and Edwin S. Mayer Jr. of El Paso and then took the ninth with Willy P. Can ($6.80) for owners Kenneth Braden and Tully Pratt of El Paso. Victory Escobar rode Hand Dee Kinni while Joe Martinez guided Willy P. Can.

VETERAN RIDER DANNY SUMMEROW returned to riding duties after being sidelined for almost nine months after suffering serious leg and arm injuries in a four-horse spill last summer at Ruidoso Downs. Summerow was hurt on June 13 while riding favored Flashy Dresser in the final race of the day. He rode Go Hog Wild in Sunday's fourth race and finished fifth in the 330-yard dash for two-year-old quarter horses running under allowance conditions.

MIKE LIDBERG PILOTED three winners on Sunday's program. It was the third time this season he has accomplished that feat. He started with Truckle Wings ($3.00) in the sixth for trainer Simon J. Buechler, captured the seventh on Cowboy Wars ($10.40) for owner-trainer J. Doyal Roberts and then won the 12th race on Surat ($7.20) for trainer Bob E. Arnett.

Tough Tillie toughs out

Tough Tillie, operating as a 7-5 favorite, delivered a big surge in the final strides and swept to a three-fourths length win in Friday's six-furlong headliner at Sunland Park.
The sophomore filly, ridden by Ruben Miranda, returned mutual payoffs of $4.80, $3.60 and $2.60. The victory was her second straight.

Tough Tillie is owned by Guy Bowers of Pampa, Texas. She covered the windy six furlongs in 1:12 3/5 seconds.

El Jesters Pride, a 3-1 shot handled by Vickie Smallwood, scooted into a six-length lead down the backstretch. But El Jesters Pride couldn't keep his speed going when he hit the midway point of the stretch.

Tough Tillie took command with authority as el Jesters Pride conceded the place slot to the oncoming Lead Me Careless by three and three-fourths lengths.

Lead Me Careless returned $4 and $2.60 under Pedro Benitez. The show price on El Jesters Pride was $3.20.

Born To Lead takes Times 'Cap

Born To Lead missed the seasonal track record for the mile by only one-fifth second while cruising to a two-length win in Sunday's renewal of the El Paso Times Handicap at Sunland Park.

It was an easy journey all the way as a snappy pace played into Born To Lead's hands.

When the pacemaking Callmechance finally had all he could stand, jockey Richard Bickel called on Born To Lead for a final burst of energy and the five-year-old eagerly took command. He was under no pressure at the wire while stopping the clock in 1:38 3/5 seconds.

The seasonal mark is shared by Draconic's Lady and Fabulous Too at 1:38 2/5.

Born To Lead, owned and trained by Al J. McClain of Boone, Colorado, collected $3,435 out of the $5,725 purse and refunded mutuel payoffs of $5.20, $3.60 and $2.40. Born To Lead, in gaining his third win out of his last four starts, operated as an 8-5 public favorite in the five-head field.

Zoom Corporation, a 9-5 shot handled by Mike Lidberg, rallied out of last place to finish second. The gelding packed 112 pounds as compared to 121 for Born To Lead. Backers of Zoom Corporation earned $5.40 and $2.80 in the mutuels. The sturdy gelding got a paycheck of $1,259. He carried 117.

Callmechance, with Ruben Miranda at the helm, ended up third after setting most of the pace. The chestnut colt hit the wire four lengths behind Zoom Corporation. The show price was $2.60. Callmechance is owned by Bob Brown of El Paso.

The Times Handicap developed pretty much as expected as Callmechance, Court Compliance and Born To Lead locked in the early struggle. Born To Lead was third in the early furlongs, but stuck close to the lead.

In the upper stretch, Callmechance continued to fight for all he was worth. He maintained a head lead over Born To Lead, and for a while, it seemed the 3-1 shot would be able to pull it off. But with a half-furlong to go, Born To Lead sewed up the victory with that sudden powerburst.

Dolfinair, a 3-1 shot who'd been no worse than second in his last three starts, settled in fourth place at the break. The gelding made up ground during the backstretch run, was well-placed on the rail at the turn for home, but flattened out. He ended up fourth.

The combination of Born To Lead and Zoom Corporation was worth a quinnella return of $16.60.

Sunland Park action resumes Friday at 1 p.m.

A BORN WINNER. Born To Lead rushes across the Sunland Park finish line Sunday with an easy two-length lead in the mile-long El Paso Times Handicap.

Richard Bickel is up. Born To Lead raced as an 8-5 favorite.

Mora Man horsehandles foes in Saturday feature

Mora Man, a nine-year-old gelding carrying odds of better than 19-1, slipped through between horses and racked up a head victory in Saturday's wind-swept headliner at Sunland Park.

Ridden by Louie Figueroa under a light, 113 pounds, Mora Man waited until late in the stretch before launching a bid against the plucky front runner, John Brown. The latter was 9-2 in the wagering.

Mora Man responded to intense urging from jockey Figueroa to surge past John Brown. But just as that maneuver was taking place, the 4-5 favorite, Scots Sissy, loomed up strongly on the outside.

The three leaders were separated by less than a length at the wire. Mora Man, owned by Roy Thompson of Buena Vista, New Mexico, handed out betting returns of $40.60, $11.80, $8.20. The win was his second of the '82-83 season. Gerald Hobby does the training.

Backers of Scots Sissy collected $3.60 and $2.60. John Brown, who hit the wire three-fourths lengths behind Scots Sissy, was good for a show price of $3.40.

Mora Man and Scots Sissy returned $38.40 in the quinella.

The winning time for the six furlongs was 1:13 1/5 seconds.

MONDAY, MARCH 14, 1983

RUIDOSO CHIPS officers Fred Smith (left) and Robert Kenney out on patrol on Sudderth Drive. The officers will concentrate on traffic calls with their Honda police motorcycles.

Here come the "CHiPs"

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

CHiPs motorcycles are now patrolling Ruidoso streets. Motorists need not do double takes, though, the cops are genuine members of the Ruidoso Police Department.

Police officers Robert Kenney and Fred Smith straddled their Honda 500 Silverwing police motorcycles for the first time on official duty Thursday morning, and almost immediately they were dubbed as the Ruidoso CHiPs by fellow officers.

The brief informal send-off that morning in the police station yard on Wingfield Street signaled in a new era at RPD, one during which the department hopes to reduce the number of accidents on village streets.

Kenney, Smith and officer Jerry Warf constitute the new RPD Traffic Section. Kenney and Smith will be full-time motorcycle cops while Warf will be a backup. As Kenney described it, the section is exclusively dedicated to improving safety on the streets.

"Our job is basically to concentrate on traffic," was his succinct assessment of the section.

What that may entail for motorists is a high amount of visibility by the motorcycles, which obviously should result in more traffic tickets.

Such already has been the case since the department initiated its policy to step up enforcement of traffic laws. In a report to the village council recently, Chief Richard Swenor noted 500 traffic tickets were issued in February alone.

The reason for the emphasis also is contained in the report, which is a detailed breakdown of 1982 traffic accidents.

As reported in January, 1982 was a record year for accidents with a total of 602. Of the amount, 147 involved injuries and two were fatalities. Fifteen percent of all accidents were alcohol related and 26 percent of the injury accidents involved alcohol.

The worst day for accidents was Saturday, with 189 reported for the year, followed by Wednesday with 85 and Friday with 79. December saw the highest number of accidents, while August had the highest number with injuries.

Since the crackdown began this year, the rate seems to have fallen. January, with 68 accidents, followed December as a bad month, but the number was cut in half in February when so many tickets were issued.

If the trend continues, the traffic section will succeed in its goal.

"The emphasis is to cut down on accidents. To do that we have to cut down on violations," Smith noted.

Kenney explained the department has not developed a quota system for citations, but that it certainly will be harsher on violations. He added the section will not be completely inflexible with motorists, because officers realize Ruidoso streets cause some of the traffic problems.

But he emphasized drivers still must follow the law. Smith and Kenney agreed most village accidents are caused by speeders who lose control on the winding mountain roads.

Because of the recognized poor street system in the village, attributed mainly to insufficient routes to carry the high traffic flow, RPD believes the motorcycles will prove to be a great benefit.

"The bikes are more maneuverable in this terrain," said Kenney.

The two cops point to the advantage they will have on the bikes when a traffic jam blocks Sudderth Drive and they are called to respond to an accident. In patrol cars and the department's four wheel drive units, it is often impossible to get through the traffic in emergencies.

But if necessary, Kenney and Smith said they will weave through traffic jams on their bikes to ensure a quick response.

The officers will be riding tandem most of the time. For the time being, Swenor said, they will be assigned to the day shift. The bikes eventually will be assigned to work the streets whenever traffic is heavy.

Kenney and Smith, along with Warf and officer Robert Achterberg, were trained on the bikes by a Roswell motorcycle cop in early March. All the RPD officers had previous riding experience on street bikes.

The two full-time riders have also received instruction in accident analysis and reconstruction. Kenney said bringing that expertise to the streets will be beneficial to the public.

As members of the traffic section, their main job is to respond to all traffic calls taken by dispatchers. The other patrol officers on duty will respond to all calls not concerning traffic.

Not only will the public be more aware of police patrols because of the motorcycles, which are not assigned to patrol districts as are the other officers, Smith said motorcycles offer the policemen more visibility than a car does, which brings them more in tune with the surroundings.

The bikes are fully equipped with hand-held radar guns, radios, lights and sirens—which were installed on the stock Honda bikes by Lincoln Communications.

The silver motorcycles also are well marked as police units, with stickers on the fenders and saddle bags. Kenney said he and Smith will always ride with their headlights on to improve their visibility further.

The traffic section also has altered the regular RPD beige uniform by slipping in to 60-inch high black motorcycle boots and topping it off with white helmets.

When road conditions are slick, the two officers will dismount and ride together in an assigned patrol car. But Kenney believes they will be able to ride the bikes most of the year.

Chief Swenor said councilman Frank Sayner was the main force on the governing body in recognizing the advantages of having police motorcycles and getting the bikes purchased.

In a final note, Kenney and Smith said they will be available to show the bikes and explain their features to any village service club

Crime Stoppers vs. drugs

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

Ruidoso Crime Stoppers announced Thursday it is starting a campaign to crack down on drug trafficking by offering $500 rewards for tips leading to the arrest and indictment of drug dealers.

"I feel we could do more for the community overall by taking care of the drug problem," offered board president Richard Sandoval as he broached the subject of drug dealing at the regular meeting of the Crime Stoppers board of directors.

Board members present voted unanimously on H. Ray Bishop's motion to offer a set amount of $500 for information leading to the apprehension of pushers. Crime Stoppers' normal procedure is to offer a reward of up to a certain amount for tips that lead to the arrest and indictment of lawbreakers.

The board's policy is to determine how much to reward an individual based upon the quality of information given.

The two-month-old chapter has yet to pay out a reward. Sandoval pointed out Friday that police recently solved three burglaries with information taken on the Crime Stoppers telephone. None of the informants wanted a reward, however.

Crime Stoppers seized Sandoval's initiative Thursday and decided that stopping pushers should be a primary goal of the board, and worthy of the unconditional reward for decisive information. The maximum reward the board will pay for any crime is $1,000.

Detective Gonzalo Cordova of the Ruidoso Police Department told the group meeting at village hall that Ruidoso has a reputation for being easy on drugs. He pointed to a bumper sticker put out by Sierra Swim and Racquet Club that advertises the village as "OVER-DOSO," which he feels promotes that reputation.

Sandoval noted that the majority of board members have children, and that he feels the parents should make every effort to rid school areas of drug traffickers. He said he was upset by the attitude that drugs, especially marijuana, have become socially accepted.

Sandoval also contended the village becomes a major drug trafficking area in the summer because of the influx of transients. And, not losing sight of Crime Stoppers' goal to help police solve any crime, he prefaced the attack on drugs by saying he felt they are the underlying cause for much of Ruidoso crime, and that stopping the drug traffic could help reduce the crime rate.

After the vote on the reward, Sandoval summed up the reason for the anti-drug campaign by saying, "I'd like the attitude to change that Ruidoso is an easy place to get drugs."

Also Thursday, the board heard a report from Glen Ferguson on the upcoming motorcycle poker run benefit for Crime Stoppers. The event, sponsored by Jack Sniadecki with Ferguson's help, is scheduled for Sunday, April 17.

The run will start and finish in Gibson's parking lot. Riders will take Highway 37 north to the intersection with Highway 380, east on 380 to the Highway 70 turnoff in Hono, then west back to Ruidoso. There will be stops at Bonito Lake, the rest area between Bonito and Nogal, Captain, Lincoln and Fox Cave on Highway 70.

Registered cyclists will receive a playing card at each stop, and the one with the best poker hand at the end of the day will be awarded the grand prize.

Ferguson said the top three hands will receive plaques. In addition, the first-place winner will get a $75 gift certificate to Champion Honda-Harley Davidson of Roswell and $25 cash. Second place will be awarded $50 cash and third will get $25. Fourth and fifth place will also receive cash prizes.

Additional awards are a largest club plaque, oldest rider plaque and a 50/50 drawing. Companies in addition to Champion that have donated awards are Sierra Blanca Motors, Security Bank, Ben Franklin, Gibson's and T. L. Wilson Sporting Goods—all of Ruidoso.

Pre-registration for the event is open until April 10 and will cost $9.50 for one rider or $14 for two. After the deadline, the registration goes up to $10 and $15. Ferguson said registration forms will be available in several locations, or from him at 257-4018 or Sniadecki at 257-2027.

Bike registration will start April 17 at 8 a.m. in Gibson's parking lot, with the last bike leaving at 11.

All proceeds from the event will be donated to the Crime Stoppers reward fund.

In other business, the board:

—Accepted the March financial report, which shows $4,252 in the reward fund. The board has paid out $686 for telephone recording equipment and installation, decals, bumper stickers and letterheads.

—Heard Mark Paz report on the fund-raiser at Jerry Dale's. Treasurer Bill McCutcheon said Crime Stoppers should net about $1,700 from the party once drink receipts are tabulated. Sandoval thanked Paz, Ferguson and Paul Davis for doing a good job on the party.

—Heard Sandoval note that anyone donating at least $200 to the reward fund will be given a certificate of appreciation.

—Established the terms of board members.

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

Seven new Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce directors were announced Thursday in an election with a turnout lighter than in recent years.

Buddy Bundick, Sandy Dacy, Richard Farris, Walt Lindborg, Joe Loving, Tommy Morel and Sue Snidow beat out seven other nominees in voting by Chamber members. Richard Farris received the most votes, 211.

They will replace current members Richard Sandoval, Dan Shaver, Helen Reeves, Karl Franzer, Bill Fugate, Bill Meyers and Paul Crown.

Chamber of Commerce executive director Ed Jungbluth said a little less than 50 percent of Chamber members voted in the election this year. In past years, he said, turnout has averaged more than 50 percent.

Jungbluth said he doesn't know whether members don't care about the elections or like what the Chamber is doing and don't worry enough to vote.

One member did care enough to vote in this election six times, said Jungbluth. He said Dan Shaver discovered six mimeographed ballots on a different style of paper while counting the votes.

Votes for board members on the counterfeit ballots were different, but all the ballots voted for the same buildings in the HN'ZHU'NE' award that was also on the ballot. Jungbluth declined to say which building had received the counterfeit votes.

The apparent fraud was discovered before winners of the board elections were announced. Winners of the HN'ZHU'NE' award will be announced at the Chamber banquet in May.

The new directors expressed enthusiasm about their new posts but had no specific goals for their terms.

"I think that the Chamber of Commerce is real important and felt like I could do some good," said Joe Loving about his interest in serving on the board of directors. He explained that he has the time and energy to put into the Chamber.

"I feel you ought to put back into the community what you get out of it," said Sue Snidow, who explained she has gotten plenty out of Ruidoso. "I love Ruidoso. I'm a Ruidoso booster," she added.

"I am very pleased with the selection," said Jungbluth Friday. He said he thought "some real good workers" who are active in the community have been elected.

None of the new Chamber directors will be coming in with pet projects or axes to grind, it appears. All seemed to feel that they will have to attend a few meetings to learn how the board functions and what issues are being discussed before making any suggestions of their own.

They will be joining incumbents Ronnie Hemphill, Jim Paxton, Joan Bailey, Tom Kelham, Danny Brown, Jim Goodwin, Bill Braudt and Morgan Clough. Clough has already served his two-year term but is staying on the board as immediate past president.

The new directors have been invited as guests to the March 23 board of directors meeting. They will officially take office May 1.

Before that, the former, incoming and incumbent Chamber directors will attend a board retreat tentatively scheduled for April 22 and 23 in Juarez, Mexico. There they will review recent actions of the Chamber and make plans for the next year.

Father Albert laid to rest

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

People came early to the funeral of Father Albert Braun at Saint Joseph's Church in Mescalero Friday. By the time the Apache choir began the services with an Apache song, people had filled the large church and were standing at the doorway.

An uncommon assembly of church, military, Indian and Anglo gathered to honor Father Albert in the church he built as a memorial to veterans of both World Wars. Father Phillip Baldonado, who traveled from Los Angeles to honor Father Albert, explained that the church will henceforth be a memorial to another veteran.

"It is now going to be a memorial to Father Albert," he told the congregation.

An appropriate memorial it will be. Looking at the massive walls rising 40 or more feet in the air, it is evident that tremendous amounts of labor, time and care were put into the church. The stones are of irregular shape, with small and large alike fitted together individually over the course of 20 years. That much of the work was done by hand, without the aid of powerful cranes, makes it an even more impressive accomplishment.

"There was never an impossible task for him," said Baldonado. "Just look around." The church is a monument to Braun's energy, but also to his great ability to understand and endear himself to the Apaches.

Author Eve Ball said every able-bodied man on the reservation donated his time and labor to the construction of the church. Without them, helping Father Albert complete his dream, the church could not have been completed.

Many at the service noted his close rapport with the Apaches of Mescalero.

"He learned about them and lived with them," said Virginia Klinekole, an Indian who knew Father Albert well.

Many Apaches attended the ceremony. But many Anglos and servicemen were also at the church. Much of the ceremony was a mixture of the ways of the Apaches, the Catholic Church and the American military.

Ecclesiastical organ music and soprano choirs followed the chanting songs of the Apache Choir. Tina Kirgan, Miss Mescalero, read scriptures from the Bible while wearing ceremonial Apache dress.

Apache and English were spoken throughout the ceremony. The garments of Father Baldonado and Bishop Ricardo Ramirez were adorned with beadwork and Indian painting.

The Catholic clergy said Mass. Indians donated shawls to Father Albert's family in the tradition of their forefathers.

Veterans of the second World War watched as soldiers from Holloman Air Force Base offered a military tribute to Father Albert. They played taps and presented the American flag that had lain on the casket to surviving family members.

There were few tears at the funeral, however. Many told humorous and inspiring stories of times they had been with Father Albert.

On the subject of Father Albert's longevity, Father Baldonado quoted Father Albert as saying, "I do not want to go to hell and apparently heaven is not ready for me."

It seemed more a ceremony of "gratitude and appreciation for a life lived to it's fullest," as Mescalero Tribal President Wendell Chino said. It was in fact a sort of celebration.

"Now he returns to his homeland so he may be buried with his people and we can honor him," said Klinekole. A memorial plaque will be placed at his grave near the altar of the church. Donations in place of flowers will help pay for it.

BOTH INDIAN AND CATHOLIC rituals were observed during the funeral of Father Albert Braun at Saint Joseph's Church in Mescalero Friday. Mescalero Tribal Council member Virginia Klinekole called up Indian families who gave shawls to Braun's family while (from left, background) Father Phillip Baldonado, Bishop Ricardo Ramirez and Father Justin Moncrief prepared to administer Holy Communion.

Water Corporation disagrees on encouraging real estate agents

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Water Development Corporation Thursday tabled a suggestion to encourage licensed real estate people to submit offers of water rights purchases to the board, after members disagreed on the wording in the corporation's operating guidelines.

The clause concerning real estate brokers and agents was included in a two-page list of guidelines submitted by corporation president Dan Swearingin. The guidelines are meant to serve as a condensed and more readable version of the corporation bylaws, Swearingin said.

The water development corporation was formed by the village council last year and given the task of acting as the council's agent to find and purchase water rights in the Rio Hondo Basin. The corporation hopes to use its status as a non-profit entity to attract potential sellers. It will seek to make the buys through lease/purchase contracts with water rights holders.

It has been noted that sellers benefit by negotiating with the corporation as opposed to individual buyers because the village group will buy water rights with debentures that carry tax-free interest. The seller also benefits because payments would be made over a long period, which results in reduced capital gains taxes.

Swearingin said the clause in the guidelines is needed because the volunteer corporation directors do not have time to actively pursue water rights deals. He noted the corporation encourages anyone to approach it with potential offers, but real estate people were singled out because they work in the field.

He pointed out water rights are similar to real estate in that they are considered as real property.

Director Mike Seelbach questioned the need for such a clause since the corporation encourages anybody to approach it, and he said he preferred not to imply the corporation would pay a certain commission. He said any commission on sales, like the purchases, should be negotiable.

Real estate agent Greg Masters advised the corporation to keep in mind the law of supply and demand. He noted there is a highly competitive market for water rights and that he would sell to a buyer who would pay the highest commission.

Masters also reminded the group that Ruidoso real estate firms have stables of clients who are ready to buy any land in the valley that has water rights.

Swearingin agreed with Masters, noting transactions of real property are "a study in human greed," and that water rights owners are not going to sell to "the kindly village" if individual buyers bid higher.

But Swearingin repeated several times that the clause only encourages real estate people to come to the corporation and it does not commit the village to pay any pre-established prices. He said the clause should spur the members to think about the water rights market.

The corporation tabled discussion on the clause until it can be reworded.

Meanwhile, the remaining items in the guidelines were unanimously approved.

The first clause points out the corporation can make no financial commitments without the approval of the governing body. Following that is a clause requiring members to negotiate the best possible price for the village and to always deal fairly.

Since the corporation is a quasi-political subdivision of the village, Swearingin said it should follow provisions of the New Mexico open meetings law. Members agreed to follow the law, as long as they can adjourn into executive session when necessary.

Swearingin said the body will always state specific reasons for executive sessions, and limit discussion in the sessions to the specific causes.

Members also agreed to submit written disclosures of any benefits they may receive individually from water rights transactions.

The final aspects of the guidelines note the Ruidoso village attorney must approve transactions and that the members will follow sound business practices.

In other business, the water corporation reviewed revised forms for model contracts, purchase options and public notices of agreement. The members will make suggestions on the forms, then resubmit them to the Santa Fe law firm of Kegel, McCabe and Montez, which is retained by the village to advise the corporation. The firm must determine if the documents comply with state laws granting tax exemptions.

The corporation also went into executive session with Masters to discuss a potential water rights purchase.

New water meter for Eagle Creek

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

A new meter to be installed at the main diversion point out of the Eagle Creek watershed will more accurately gauge the annual supply of water taken out of the stream.

The Eagle Creek Inter-Community Water Supply Association voted to purchase and install the meter at its regular bi-monthly meeting last week.

The association controls all diversions from the watershed. Eagle Creek is the main water supply to Ruidoso, Capitan and Fort Stanton. Ruidoso possesses 4,344 acre feet of rights to the stream but, based on average supply, can use only about 1,544 acre feet annually.

The figure is based on the six cubic feet per second maximum diversion allowed by the State Engineer. The association has petitioned the state to change that "flow right" to a quantity right so more water can be diverted when the stream is high and supplies more than enough water to meet demands.

Ruidoso has only 214 acre feet of water rights to the Rio Ruidoso.

Ruidoso village clerk Leon Eggleston, recording secretary for the association, noted the cost of replacing the 12-inch main diversion meter will be $7,500. He said the present meter has not been measuring the diverted water accurately.

Eggleston said by replacing the meter, located at the diversion point off the Ski Run Road, all meters along the watershed will be brought up to date. The association recently had meters replaced that measure service to Capitan and Fort Stanton.

The board unanimously approved the purchase.

Also Wednesday, approval was given to Eagle Creek Ski and Recreation Area owner Paul Southwick to defer a scheduled payment to the association for purchase of the ski area property, and to pay the bill in full next month.

The water users association had leased about 16 acres to Southwick for the ski area, but recently entered into the purchase agreement for the land. The payments amounted to over $140,000 over a three-year period with interest included. Southwick noted the bill would drop to about $104,000 if he pays it in full. He said the contract includes no early payment penalty.

Southwick also informed the association that he has applied for transfer of 5.2 acre feet of rights he has on the watershed to surface rights. His rights are attached to a well used during the winter for snowmaking equipment, but Southwick noted the well water is not as cold as surface water, which will be better for making snow.

The association assured Southwick it would not protest the change.

In a final agreement with Southwick, the association said he could use its property at the ski area for additional parking space during planned outdoor concerts this summer.

In other business, the association: —Approved providing a three-quarter-inch meter to the New Mexico Highway Department yard on Ski Run Road. Eggleston noted the Highway Department wants the service only to maintain its trucks. The board also okayed providing a temporary hookup for road crews that will be resurfacing the Ski Run Road up to Sierra Blanca Ski Resort.

—Decided to travel to Santa Fe within the next month to meet with the State Engineer on the quantity right application. Board member C. Newton Page, representing Ruidoso, indicated the association should apply pressure for action on the application, which has been filed since September 1981.

WHO WILL WIN? Members of Cub Scout Pack 95 watch closely as two cars move down the course in the Pinewood Derby Sunday. Lee Nanz, Kirk Scopak and Cody Willard beat out 13 other Scouts to take first place in eight-, nine- and 10-year-old age groups with their homemade cars.

Security Bank sale waits approval

A group that includes two brothers who grew up in Ruidoso—John Petty and Ralph Petty Jr.—has entered into a contract to purchase Security Bank of Ruidoso.

If approved, ownership of the bank will be in a proposed bank holding company owned by the Petties and Derwood Knight of Albuquerque. The company is buying the bank from Bank Securities Incorporated of Albuquerque.

The sale is subject to approval of federal banking regulatory authorities. A contract was entered into February 25, and approval could take six months or longer.

The father of the Petty brothers, Ralph Petty, is a former chairman of the board of Security Bank in Ruidoso. He now resides here and in Abilene, Texas.

John Petty lives in Albuquerque. He is president of Petty/Youngblood, a commercial real estate firm.

Ralph Petty Jr. has divided his residence between Santa Fe and Scottsdale, Arizona, but will be moving to Ruidoso. He is a former president of the Bank of Santa Fe, and served in the state House of Representatives from the Lincoln County area from 1968 to 1972.

"Our whole family is from Lincoln County—back through our grandparents," said

John Petty. He and Ralph Jr. were born in Carrizozo. A sister, Karon Petty, lives in Ruidoso and is in the real estate business.

"Our fondness for Ruidoso" was the motivation for purchase of the local bank, according to Ralph Petty Jr. He pointed out that his banking career started at Security Bank the day it was chartered in 1970.

"All three of us will be active in the bank," said John. The third partner, Knight, is an attorney.

Ralph Jr. and John attended their first bank board meeting as advisory directors last week.

"We're very pleased with the board and management," said Ralph. John pointed out consistency and local ownership are two things the group aims for in its purchase of the bank.

The two indicated they believe Ruidoso is strong economically, with around $100 million in assets in the three local banks alone.

"We have to decide between now and final approval exactly how we want to structure (the bank)," said Ralph. "It (Ruidoso) is going to be a very highly competitive market area for sure—and that's how we prefer it."

Total assets of Security Bank are listed at $21 million.

Microfiche machine "complatible"

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

With the recent acquisition of a microfiche reading-printing machine in the village Planning and Zoning Department, department staff are now able to spend less time fishing for plats and more time running the department.

"This microfiche is the best thing we've ever bought," proclaimed department secretary Debi Russell without the least trace of exaggeration in her voice.

The village council in January authorized purchase of the $5,200 system from Comgraphix of El Paso, Texas. In addition to the reading-printing machine and the cost of transferring all village plats from paper to film, the village also paid the company an extra $850 to purchase microfiche copies of 2,500 county plats.

The system was installed in the planning and zoning office at village hall in early February.

Russell pointed out the main advantages of the machine over the previous system are the ability to print copies from any plat, and to reduce the storage needed for plats.

A plat is a detailed drawing of a piece of property, showing its dimensions and other distinctive features.

The old method of filing paper plats was about to crowd the staff out of the office. Russell said each plat—some the size of wall posters—had to be mounted on cardboard and filed in a standing cabinet. The cabinet holds 500 plats. Russell pointed out it was near capacity and the department was considering ordering a second one.

Instead of going that route and taking up more space for filing, the department staff decided to pursue the microfiche system.

Now, the 2,500 county plats fit into space no larger than a shoe box. Combined with the some 500 village plats now on file, the total filing space needed is a small metal box to store the microfiche.

The machine itself comes with interchangeable lenses that can project images onto the screen from either 35mm or 16mm film. The standard lens enlarges the image 11 times, while specific areas of a plat can be blown up by using the 14-power lens.

The public has always had the privilege to view any plat on file at village hall, but until now, copies of the drawings were never available.

That has all changed with the microfiche system. In fact, Russell thinks the machine's ability to produce photocopies is the main advantage to the public.

"I think it's just wonderful; until now we couldn't make copies," noted Russell. Whenever someone wants a copy now, Russell explained all she has to do is dial into the machine how many copies are needed, and press a button. Within seconds a paper copy is rolling out the side of the microfiche.

Russell said each copy will cost $1. In addition to the change in the plat filing system, the planning and zoning department has plans to change the system of mapping used by the village. Cupp told the village council Tuesday night he is pursuing a mapping system now used in Albuquerque that shows the zoning designation of all incorporated lots.

Cupp said the maps will include four overlays. One will be the zoning designations of lots, another will show addresses, and two overlays will detail water and sewer connections.

The present maps of the village show only general districts with zoning outlined in color codes. The new maps will actually pinpoint features of all lots in the corporate limits.

Cupp told the council his department has enough funds budgeted to finance the system. He indicated it could be up to a year before the maps are ready.

WORKING THE MACHINE is Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Department secretary Debi Russell. The new Minolta microfiche reader-printer enables the public to view village plats and have copies made.

Willard named Veterinarian of the year Woman robbed of cash, checks

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Local veterinarian Dr. Lynn Willard was recently honored as Veterinarian of the Year by the New Mexico Veterinary Medical Association at its annual meeting in Albuquerque.

Dr. Michael Riegger, president of the association, nominated Willard for the award and presented it to him at the meeting. Riegger said the award is presented only if a member is deserving of it by having rendered outstanding service to the profession during recent years.

The Ruidoso vet "exemplifies the type of professional person all of us can be proud of," Riegger remarked.

Willard owns the Ruidoso Animal Clinic and has been practicing veterinary medicine locally since he moved to Ruidoso 10 years ago. He earned his D.V.M. degree from Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kansas, in 1969. Willard served as editor of the New Mexico Veterinary Medical Association's official publication, The Roadrunner, for four years. He was president of the Association in 1979-80.

He has also served as president of the New Mexico Academy of Veterinary Practice, in 1978 and 1982. Willard's clinic has the distinction of being one of 1,700 animal hospitals in the country to have been approved for membership in the American Animal Hospital Association. These hospitals voluntarily submit to inspections by the association.

In addition to his professional accomplishments, Willard has been actively involved in the local community, having served as president of the Chamber of Commerce in 1976-77, as deacon of First Christian Church 1979-81, as president of the Evening Lions Club in 1981-82. He was recently elected to serve on the Board of Education. Willard has also been a coach for Little League football and basketball for several years.

Riegger noted that Willard was honored not because he has held such offices but because he "always made a substantial positive contribution" when serving.

"No one individual made a greater contribution not only to the profession but to the community as well," Riegger pointed out.

Willard also presented a paper at the annual state meeting where he received the award.

RLT play rehearsals progressing well

Ruidoso Little Theatre (RLT) is currently rehearsing its upcoming production of Summer Arthur Long's "Never Too Late." Director Dan Barrow expressed pleasure with the progress of the play.

"All the actors are working very well together and have quickly formed their characters," said Barrow.

Many members of the cast are making their acting debut. Sandy Marshall, who has never formally acted before, will be portraying the lead female role of Edith Lambert. Marshall was encouraged by friends to try out for the part. She said she was surprised, but excited, to have been cast for a major role.

Richard and Barbara Barnes are also new arrivals to RLT, although not to Ruidoso. The Barnes, Barbara as Grace Kambrough and Richard as Mayor Crane, both said they look forward to rehearsal and are enjoying the experience of involvement with the play.

Terri Webb, also new to RLT, will be making her acting debut as Kate Clinton, the daughter. When asked how she decided it was time to try some acting, she smiled and responded, "I just heard the announcement for auditions on the radio and thought I'd give it a try."

Veteran RLT actors will also appear. Dick Reeves, a longtime supporter of RLT, will be heading up the cast as Harry Lambert. Chris Schneider, last seen with RLT as Inspector Lestrade in "The Penultimate Problem of Sherlock Holmes," will be bringing his acting skills to the role of Mr. Watson.

Other members of the cast include Carl Mori, Melissa Craig, and John Raulerson. "Never Too Late" will be performed at the Inn of The Mountain Gods the evenings March 25, 26, 27, 31 and April 1, 2, 3. Matinees will be performed March 26 and

The Ruidoso News SPORTS

Around Sports with Gary Brown

The New Mexico State University (NMSU) basketball team must be wondering what it can do to take the step from competitive also-ran to league champion. NMSU lost a chance for the Missouri Valley Conference (MVC) championship Thursday night when it was edged by visiting Tulsa University, 49-48, in the semi-finals of the MVC tournament. Tulsa thus advanced to the championship game against Illinois State University, a 79-61 victory over Bradley University Thursday.

What made the NMSU defeat so hard to take was the fact the Aggies probably would have won the game if they had hung onto the ball in the last 25 seconds of the game. With a one-point lead at 48-47, NMSU worked the ball around the court looking for a "gift" shot or a foul.

The Aggies got neither. Junior Steve Colter took an inside shot despite being heavily guarded and the ball bounced off the rim. Tulsa grabbed the rebound and Ricky Ross made the winning basket with two seconds remaining in the game.

A lot of other players besides Colter have taken unnecessary shots when their teams were leading in important games. However, that doesn't make the Aggies' defeat any easier to take.

When I was in high school, our team lost the league championship one season because we lost to the eventual champion twice by one point. In both games, we had a one-point lead with less than a minute left, but took unnecessary shots that gave our opponent a chance to win the game.

But second-guessing why a player would take an unnecessary shot doesn't explain the fact that the Aggies fell just short of a league championship again.

NMSU finished the regular season with an 18-11 mark, nothing to sneeze at but still not of championship caliber.

The Aggies have built a winning basketball tradition under coach Weldon Drew. This season they split with the University of New Mexico (UNM), their main state rival. NMSU won easily in Las Cruces but the Lobos took an overtime victory in Albuquerque.

NMSU has lost several close games this season, including the Thursday night loss to Tulsa and the overtime defeat at the hands of the Lobos.

The Aggies don't have much height but they try to make up for it with hustle and good overall team speed.

Still, those two assets aren't enough to bridge the gap between a contender and a champion.

Look for Drew to seek out a dominating big man during the off-season.

If there was any doubt that spring is upon us, the Ruidoso High School boys track team will open the season Thursday when it travels to Carlsbad High School for a dual meet.

The Warriors are fairly young and will have to find someone who can replace Lon Nunley in the sprints and weight events. Still, look for Ruidoso to be competitive.

There's plenty more information about track, tennis and golf in today's edition of The News.

WATCHING HIS PUTT roll toward the cup on the 18th green is Ruidoso High golfer Kenny Espinosa, as playing partner Bob Dunn tends the flag. Sixty-one local golfers and 16 high school golfers participated in Sunday's scramble benefit tourney at Cree Meadows Country Club. The event raised about $1,000 for the school golf program.

Inside the Outdoors

Hunters in the state of New Mexico should be interested in a meeting that took place in Roswell on February 18, 1983. At this meeting about 300 members of the New Mexico Livestock Growers, the New Mexico Wool Growers, and the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau expressed their concerns to the State Game Commission on problems they have encountered with hunting, mainly during deer seasons. The meeting was also attended by State Senators Joe Grant, Tim Jennings, and Charlie Lee.

Some of the major concerns and recommendations expressed by the farmers, ranchers, and land-owners include:

1. Reducing hunting pressure by restricting the number of hunters.
2. Decreasing habitat and road damage by restricting the use of off-road vehicles and having road closures during deer seasons.
3. Confining the problems of littering and habitat damage caused by hunter camps by restricting hunters to designated campgrounds only.
4. Increasing the number of law enforcement officers in the field during deer season by commissioning landowners or other people as Deputy Conservation Officers.

Most of these problems have no simple solutions and cannot be handled by the State Game Commission alone. Help and cooperation is required from the State Legislature and land-owning agencies such as the U.S. Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

One method that the Game Commission could adopt to reduce the number of deer hunters is a unitized hunt. This method is already employed for the elk hunts. It would mean that only a specified number of licenses would be issued for each of the 58 deer management units in the State. This would present some serious problems.

First, the Department of Game and Fish does not receive general fund money. Most of its funding is derived from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses, especially deer licenses. A reduced number of deer hunters would mean a smaller operating budget at a time when the Department, like most State agencies is having financial problems.

Second, the unitized hunt would mean that approximately 140,000 application for deer licenses would have to be processed each year. A person would no longer be able to go to a vendor and purchase a license, but would have to send an application to Santa Fe. These applications would have to be entered into a computer, and a drawing would have to be made. Finally, the licenses and refunds would have to be returned prior to the deer seasons. This process will involve a lot of paperwork and handling.

So why not just double the cost of a license and solve these problems? The Game Commission cannot raise the price of a license, this must be done by the legislature. A bill was introduced this year to increase the license fee, and the amount of the increase has already been reduced by the House. The bill has not yet received final approval. As you can see, it will not be an easy task to reduce the number of deer hunters.

The solution to the problems of off-road vehicles, road closures, and designated campgrounds cannot be accomplished by the Game Commission alone, it requires help from the land-owning agencies such as the U.S. Forest Service, and Bureau of Land Management. There are no laws or regulations prohibiting the use of ORV's on B.L.M. or Forest Service lands. Even if regulations were adopted, State Conservation Officers would have no jurisdiction to enforce these laws without an agreement with the land-owning agencies. There is a regulation already in effect on State-owned lands and is enforced by members of the Game and Fish Department. The Game Commission could pass a regulation to stop deer hunters from driving off established roads during the season; but do hunters do all the damage? There are many people: wood gatherers, Christmas tree seekers, campers, motorcycle riders, four-wheel drive enthusiasts, and even ranchers that also damage the habitat. Restricted off-road vehicle travel will have to apply to everyone.

As for road closures and designated campgrounds, the Game Commission has absolutely no control in these matters except on State or Game Department owned lands. This would have to be accomplished by the land-owning agencies, including setting up and maintaining the campgrounds. The designated campgrounds only laws and road closures would also have to apply not only to deer hunters, but to picnickers, backpackers, weekend campers, and ranchers.

Spring means fire season approaching

Spring winds have arrived, and a general drying trend will increase forest and rangeland fire danger over the next few months.

New Mexico State forestry, Capitan District, is urging all New Mexicans and visitors to New Mexico to be extremely careful with all types of fire in the coming season. At this time, there are no fire restrictions, but depending on weather conditions this may be necessary as conditions worsen. People residing within city limits should check with local government before doing any open burning, as in some areas it is prohibited at all times.

The primary causes of fire historically have been debris or trash burning, land clearing (with fire), smoking (especially along highways), discarded fireplace ashes, and equipment use (such as welding, chainsaws, and road building or construction).

If a wildland fire does occur, call your local fire department, then call the Capitan District at 354-2231. If no answer is received, then call the Santa Fe 24-hour number at 827-8080. Both numbers can be called collect for the reporting of wildfires only.

Local men fined for game violations

Fines and civil assessments totalling $3,820 have been levied against two Ruidoso men charged by conservation officers with illegal possession of deer and spotlighting.

Jail sentences were suspended on the condition that the fines are paid within 90 days and that the two commit no further game violations, said Joel Pafford,

Department of Game and Fish.

Verlin L. Trapp, 38, and Ronald Dale Harris, 32, both of Ruidoso, pleaded guilty Thursday, February 17 before Lincoln County Magistrate Bill Payne, to four counts each of illegal possession of deer and one charge each of spotlighting. Judge Payne fined each $1,510, including $10 court costs, and sentenced each to 180 days in jail, conditionally suspended.

Pafford has assessed the men $800 for the state's loss of four deer and is requesting that revocation of their hunting and fishing privileges in New Mexico be considered.

The two were stopped by Capitan police officer Randy Spears shortly after midnight February 17 when he observed them spotlighting north of Capitan. He found deer blood and hair in the trunk of the vehicle and notified Pafford, district conservation officer in Carrizozo. They were booked in the Capitan jail, where they remained until their court appearance.

Officers served a search warrant at 6:30 that morning at a house both men occupied in Ruidoso, where they found parts of four deer.

Pafford was assisted in the investigation by Game and Fish Department officers Ernie Sandoval and Bill Essary, State Police officer Randy Rhue and Spears.

Chamber music concert Sunday afternoon

Plans for the afternoon chamber music concert set for this Sunday at 3 p.m. at First Christian Church were finalized at a Chamber of Commerce cultural committee meeting Thursday. Committee members also contributed to the Summer String Workshop scholarship fund to bring the total amount pledged to approximately $5,300, over half the amount set as a goal.

The chamber music concert Sunday is the third in a series of free concerts co-sponsored by the cultural committee and the New Mexico State University (NMSU) Department of Music. Chamber music series subcommittee chairman Jackie Rawlins pointed out that the concert has been changed from an evening to an afternoon performance to accommodate the musicians traveling from NMSU in Las Cruces.

Committee members were encouraged to invite local residents who may be interested in attending the concert but do not have transportation to attend with them. It was announced that school students have been encouraged to attend and that the Ruidoso Schools Chapter II fine arts advisory council has emphasized the program as part of its efforts to expose Ruidoso students to the fine arts.

The concert is free of charge to all attending. Ruidoso Altrusa Club members will serve as hostesses for the program.

A request for contributions to the Ruidoso Summer String Workshop scholarship fund prompted donations from committee members which brought the total amount pledged to $5,300. A goal of $10,000 had been set for the fund, which will help defray costs of tuition for students admitted to the two-week workshop to be conducted locally each summer. The first such workshop will be at the La Junta Guest Ranch in Alto August 7-21. These workshops are also co-sponsored by the cultural committee and NMSU, and by the Las Cruces Symphony Association.

Several local service clubs and other organizations have also donated or pledged contributions to the fund. Donations are still very much encouraged and can be made to the Chamber of Commerce or to Karen Loving, co-chairman of the scholarship fund committee.

Applications for the workshop, to be sent out nationally early next month, were briefly reviewed by the committee. The application form points out that the workshop is sponsored by the community of Ruidoso, the Las Cruces Symphony Association and NMSU "as an ongoing, annual celebration of chamber music performance in the Southwest."

In other business, the cultural committee:

—Was informed an NMSU chamber music group will conduct an educational session at Ruidoso High School Tuesday, March 16, as part of the education subcommittee's program and the Chapter II school fine arts program. Cultural committee members were invited to attend.

—Decided the Board of Education should be invited to the chamber concert Sunday. Committee member Danny Flores lamented that the local schools do not offer a regular music program until the fifth grade.

—Were invited to a performance of "My Fair Lady" to be put on by the Alamogordo Little Theater at the Inn of the Mountain Gods this Sunday evening, March 20. The performance is being sponsored by the Ruidoso Little Theater. The cultural committee vowed to support the local little theater group as part of its activities in the community.

—Heard that Ruidoso High School Band Boosters will be soliciting contributions soon for a band trip to Hawaii next spring. The committee also indicated it will be instrumental in helping this cause.

Alto man killed in accident

An Alto man was killed Friday night in a one-car accident on Highway 37. Alcohol apparently was involved in the death of 27-year-old James Rawhouser, according to State Police officer Joe Tiano. Officer Tiano said open beer containers were found in the Rawhouser vehicle following the fatal accident three miles north of Ruidoso on Highway 37. Rawhouser was heading north in a small

Toyota on the highway at about 9 p.m. when he went off the road on a curve and rolled about 30 feet down an embankment. Tiano said the car landed on its roof in a small creek.

Tiano reported that Rawhouser was alone in the car. Tiano said an autopsy will be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

Resource group meets Tuesday

South Central Mountain Resource Conservation and Development will meet Tuesday, March 15, in Alamogordo at the Desert Aire Motor Inn on South White Sands Boulevard.

State forester Dave Bervin of Capitán will present a program on the American Tree Farm System following the steering committee meeting, which begins at 1 p.m.

During the steering committee meeting, Doug Dillo, project engineer with the State Highway Department in Roswell, will discuss progress on highway project measures accepted at the previous meeting.

The executive committee will meet before lunch, at 10 a.m. Anyone interested is encouraged to attend the meeting.

The Dreamer

BY DANNIE STORM

In a tribute by a grateful people to a great friend, the mortal remains of Father Albert Braun were laid to rest last Friday in the south altar of St. Joseph's Church, which he had built as a gift for "My Apaches."

The church, of native stone from close around the neighborhood, and located in an inspiring location, was filled to overflowing with Mesquero Indians, and devoted friends of all races and creeds.

Several fellow Catholic clergymen, including many of his own order, the Franciscan Friars, took part in the ceremonies. The flag-draped casket in front of the altar was flanked on either side by a color guard of the Mesquero American Legion. The funeral detail from Holloman Air Force Base added a colorful and dramatic touch in a service complete with firing squad and bugles.

Songs by the Apache Choir, some in the Apache language, added special reverence to the services.

Wendell Chino, President of the Mesquero Apaches, expressed, on behalf of his people, "Gratitude for a life well lived."

Virginia Klinkole, prominent Apache leader, announced gifts presented in memory of Father Braun from certain Apache families.

Father Phillip Baldonado, whose brothers were fellow prisoners-of-war of the Japanese during World War II, traced the life of Father Albert from his childhood to his days on the reservation.

When Father Albert received his holy orders in 1915, he asked to be sent to a foreign country.

"I'll send you to a foreign country, all right," responded Father Provincial, "I am going to send you to the Mesquero Apache Reservation."

First ministering from Tularosa, Father Albert told his superiors that he "needed to live on the Reservation." This request was granted, and here he spent most of his life among "my beloved Apaches," expect for time in World Wars One and Two as a military Chaplain.

In France he had seen many beautiful churches, and there was here born in him the desire to build a solid and beautiful church for "My People." As well as being a lasting gift to the Apaches, the church was built as a memorial to the heroes of World War I.

Then after World War II it became a memorial to the heroes of both wars; and now it is also a monument to Father Albert.

I have watched the church grow from the ground up through the years, and several times went over to talk to Father Albert. I was struck by the tremendous size of the stones, and wondered how the church could be made to the height that Father Albert estimated.

Finally some years ago here stood the church of native stone with a pinkish cast, which glows in the afternoon sun like something from another world, as it looks down from the high point, seeming to dwarf even the hills themselves, to the historic little village of Mesquero.

Father Baldonado reminded his listeners that Father Albert suffered along with his fellow prisoners on the Death March and in the imprisonment which followed, and that he saved many lives, by his personal example of courage, his steadfast faith, and his sharing of his meager rations with fellow prisoners.

After World War II, General Jonathan Wainwright, Father Albert's fellow-prisoner, came and took part in the final dedication of the church.

I remember after Father Albert returned from Japan, that he told me about the church of His People, how the Apache Indians were tireless and faithful in their work and how he also received help from many sources, including an elderly Catholic clergyman who was also an expert in stone building, Father Junipero Serna.

Shortly after he got back, Father Albert, was down in an orchard below Mesquero pruning the trees. He climbed high among the branches with his pruning saw, clad in his priestly robes; and talked about how he loved apple trees, and how much he enjoyed being back with the trees after a long absence.

So now as we look across from the highway at this sacred landmark, we can rejoice at the sight of this fitting grave stone for its builder, steadfast in his divine and eternal purpose, who has now gone to his "Great Reward with Our Lord."

Yours and Ours

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — Remember Walter Martinez? He was Speaker of the House of Representatives here in New Mexico before the Cowboy Coalition took over that body four years ago.

Is he still around? You'd better believe it. Not only is he in his eighth term in the House, but he has also turned out to be, in this session, in which Ray Sanchez from Bernalillo county is the Speaker, a man who matters.

In legislative affairs, the man who counts is he who can put deals together. Martinez is doing that.

In fact, from the day you read this till the day the legislators go home (we hope that will be on March 19), Martinez becomes of increasing importance.

It's the last-minute deals which really count.

Do personalities matter in legislation? Ask Doc Weller, who is a lobbyist of some renown — partly because he contributes to his own legend by telling stories about his own relationship to others.

His latest says that at least one committee in the current Legislature has given a "do pass" to a bill solely so that they would not have to hear Doc appearing for it.

The way he tells the story, one of the members said, "Oh, come on, folks, let's give this a clean bill of health. If we don't, Weller's going to come in here and talk us all to death."

If like many New Mexicans, you have been confused about why Senator Ron Olguin, thought to be a strong supporter of Toney Anaya, could not somehow get the name of Alex Mercure through the Rules Committee of the Senate, of which Olguin is the chairman, think about this.

By the time you read these words, Mercure will probably have been confirmed or denied his post.

Mercure, as this reporter reads it, never did care very much whether or not he was named Secretary for Commerce and Industry. If he was, he could handle that. If he wasn't, he could go willingly back to his private business.

That business is supplying cable television services to people around the country — some outside Washington, D.C., and some outside Albuquerque, N.M.

Our spies inside the four-story building we call the Capitol say Olguin's dislike of Mercure came from the fact that he — Olguin — hoped to be the contractor of cable television in the South Valley of Albuquerque, an area which he either dominates or would like all the rest of the state to believe he dominates.

A friend of this columnist tells a story which may only be amusing — but then it may also be a parable.

"I was working on a bill," he says, "with one of those big intellectuals from Sandia National Laboratories in Albuquerque."

As the story goes on, the person from Sandia who was assigned to appear here in Santa Fe in favor of the measure was giving evidence on the matter at hand.

Our friend continues: "He was talking a mile a minute. The chairman of this committee, without interrupting him, called for a vote. The matter was passed, even as he kept on explaining it. He was still talking in favor of the bill when the chairman gavelled him into silence by telling him his support was no longer needed."

Editorial

Proposed legislation to legalize casino gambling in El Paso certainly started people talking in that Texas city.

It was interesting to read comments on the issue by civic leaders there. Most seemed to be falling over themselves trying to emphasize that they do not favor the idea, while indicating they would not necessarily be opposed to it either.

When the fact El Paso's economy suffered the worst setback in January of any Texas city is considered, it is understandable these gentlemen might be aghast at the idea, and at the same time tempted by it. Some, no doubt, were waiting to see which way the wind blows.

But the day after the story broke, three El Paso delegates to the Texas Legislature denounced the proposal in no uncertain terms. This probably guaranteed its demise.

Of interest to us was a comment by the state senator who unveiled the plan. He said Las Vegas casino owners have been pushing for the Mescalero Apache Reservation as a casino site.

The usual arguments against casino gambling were quickly advanced by concerned individuals and groups—influx of organized crime, questionable benefit to the economic base of the host community, increased law enforcement costs, victimization of those who gamble, etc.

The Mescalero-Ruidoso area may indeed one day be faced with the question of whether that particular industry would be viable here. We hope the question receives thoughtful, thorough consideration if and when we are—not a two-day "spring on/react to" blitz, a la El Paso.—TP

Although the calendar says spring doesn't arrive until March 21, I have always considered March 1 the first day of spring. Guess that comes from growing up in Albuquerque. It may snow there in March occasionally, but there just isn't enough winter by then to classify any of the month in that season.

After our first winter in Ruidoso—'81-'82—I had a story I told people to illustrate what winter here is like. The story went that in January, several inches of snow could fall on the town one weekend, but I could be out playing tennis with no shirt on the next weekend.

Well, this winter proved the story is not valid for describing Ruidoso winters in general. I remember one day a couple months back when it was nice enough to play tennis outdoors, but we were fooled in our efforts because all the courts in town had snow on them.

I'm glad there were those periods of nice weather between the snowstorms, though. Cathy and I agreed a couple of weeks ago that if this is as severe a winter as Ruidoso ever has, it is still not too bad. Then it snowed again.

But we're not ready to pack our bags and head south, like we did after one winter in Wyoming. Besides, how far south can you be? And of course, we have the luxury of looking forward to summer in the cool pines.

I've come around to thinking of hot weather in the same way I do about snow. If I want some, I'd like to be able to go where it is, not have it beat down on or dump on me.

Yep, the mid-sixties were feeling just about right last week as I hit some tennis balls with Randy Herzberg and tried to revive my fading Mexico suntan.

Along with the tennis racket, sporting equipment that comes out of the closet this time of year includes the fishing tackle.

Time for what Weems Westfield once called "the aesthetics of salmon egg fishing." Weems referred to the pastime that way because the person he was talking to was a fervent fly fisherman—one who looked down his nose at egg-baiters.

But I figure if you enjoy fishing with salmon eggs and are successful, why not?

When I was a kid, I used to be an avid reader of Outdoor Life magazine. I would get really absorbed in stories about muskie fishing in Minnesota, Kodiak bear hunts in Alaska—stuff like that.

Despite that early influence, I didn't grow up to be a dyed-in-the-wool outdoorsman. Too much suburbia ingrained, I guess.

But even spending a few minutes fishing the Rio Ruidoso at the start or the end of a day is an escape, a chance to be close to nature, a little adventure.

It's an addictive sensation to feel that tug on your line when a trout is nosing the bait. And it's great to have three or four pan-sized rainbows or browns sizzling in the skillet, and then to sit down and savor them.

So I think I'll continue to enjoy "the aesthetics of salmon egg fishing." As I was telling Dave Sheppard one time, there are certain things a fellow can count on out here in the Rocky Mountain West. Among them are Coors, Cutter's, and Pautzke's Balls o' Fire.

Of course, not everyone's thoughts turn to tennis and fishing in the spring. It is also the season for starting things growing.

You may or may not know that Friday was Arbor Day in New Mexico. We got a news release from the governor's office telling us March 11 was so proclaimed, but it arrived after the paper came out on March 10.

I have some information from the National Arbor Day Foundation that some may be interested in, however. That group is offering 10 trees to people who join the foundation during March.

The trees are a Colorado Blue Spruce, American Redbud, Black Walnut, Norway Spruce, Red Oak, White Flowering Dogwood, European Mountain Ash, Flowering Crab Apple and Butternut. They are six to 12 inches long.

We joined up last fall and got our trees in October, I think. They come in a manila envelope, postpaid, and you have to put them in water shortly after receiving them.

We had our doubts about planting them that late, but we called Conley's Nursery and they said to go ahead. Cathy unearthed one the other day, and, lo and behold, it's growing a new shoot! Pretty neat.

To get the trees, you send your $10 membership contribution to TEN TREES, National Arbor Day Foundation, Arbor Lodge 100, Nebraska City, NE 68410. It should be sent by March 31.

In conclusion, I will borrow a device from Dannie Storm and include a snitch of verse. These lines were not penned by Robert Burns or Rudyard Kipling. The author is unknown, at least to me.

Ah Spring,
When all da boids is on da wing.
Isn't dat absoid?
I tot da wings was on da boid.

See you next week.

Alternate energy resources include unconventional fossil fuels

As conventional energy supplies dwindle, increasing emphasis is placed on the production of realistic alternate energy resources that are compatible with present-day technology without requiring major scientific breakthroughs.

Tapping unconventional fossil fuels with in situ (in place) recovery technology will satisfy this need, said Dr. Eric Nuttall, a professor of chemical and nuclear engineering at the University of New Mexico (UNM). Nuttall and other chemical and nuclear engineering professors at UNM are involved in research to develop in situ recovery technology.

"In situ recovery is the technology for extracting coal, oil shale, tar sands, methane, uranium and geothermal pockets from geological formations without significantly altering the environment," Nuttall said. "More than 90 percent of the recoverable unconventional energy resources in New Mexico are below the strip mining level. Using in situ recovery instead of conventional mining allows us to extract these resources with minimal environmental impact."

UNM's in situ technology research focuses on chemical methods to bypass conventional mining, studying the processing steps necessary to convert solid material to a usable liquid or gaseous energy resource. Funding for the University's in situ research comes from the New Mexico Department of Energy and Minerals, the U.S. Department of Energy and private industry.

"In the future, fusion and solar energy will contribute to electricity production, but not to the transportation energy picture as we now know it," Nuttall said. "Also, fusion energy requires tremendous technological progress before it is a viable energy source, and we haven't yet discovered an economic method for using solar power. Although their development should be continued, I see fusion and solar power as having energy potential in the long-term. We need near-term energy resources compatible with present-day technology, such as automobiles and airplanes, that will be available in the next 30 years."

In situ technology often involves using different starting materials to get the same end product: fossil fuel. Oil shale is a significant alternate energy source because it yields petroleum, a substance in great demand in today's energy infrastructure which is highly compatible with current transportation methods.

Nuttall sees oil shale as the major unconventional energy source for transportation fuel. Oil shale doesn't flow like liquid oil; it's sandstone containing oil. Of all the fossil fuels remaining in the world, oil shale constitutes the majority. More oil shale exists than any other hydrocarbon, such as coal, petroleum and tar sands, Nuttall said.

"The Green River formation in the western United States has oil shale deposits containing twice as much oil as the Middle East. The technology for removing this oil is still evolving, but 1.8 trillion barrels of oil are locked in rock in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming," Nuttall said. "If we're interested in new energy resources, oil shale is a natural target."

"The largest oil shale deposit in the world is in Colorado. Because of its proximity to New Mexico, this abundant deposit will definitely have an impact on the state; providing energy, creating jobs and possibly resulting in environmental changes," Nuttall said. "This impact is reason enough for New Mexico to have a strong interest in the development of in

To utilize the oil trapped in sandstone, the oil content must be removed from the rock and chemically converted. "If you heat oil shale in the ground, you get oil," Nuttall said. "We're trying to do what nature does, but accelerate the process. We can either mine the rock and heat it on the surface, or create a reactor underground where the chemical conversion from rock to liquid or vapor will take place."

The extraction of oil from tar sands is another in situ process being studied by UNM chemical and nuclear engineering professors. Large deposits of sandstone in the Santa Rosa region contain heavy crude oil. Heat is used to liquify the oil and force it from the stone. However, tar sands are a more diluted energy source than oil shale, Nuttall said, containing more rock than hydrocarbons.

Coal is New Mexico's largest energy resource. Although it isn't suitable for transportation fuel, coal is ideal for electrical power generation.

"The sun will put out more energy over the long run than coal, but it has to be collected and concentrated," Nuttall said. "Coal is the state's greatest energy potential."

Removing coal from the earth, however, presents problems. Strip mining is not good environmentally, and conventional mining has safety and health problems, such as black lung. Coal gasification is an in situ approach now under study at UNM, and involves extracting the chemical content of the coal without removing it from the ground.

Holes are drilled into the coal deposit to create an underground reactor where the coal is ignited and gasified, chemically converting it to gas. Instead of mining the coal and gasifying it in a reactor on the surface, the same procedure takes place underground, eliminating the need for mining. The primary product gases of coal — carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide, hydrogen, methane, and other hydrocarbons — are extracted and used directly as fuel for power plants generating electricity.

"Coal gasification is still in the research and development phase," Nuttall said, "and no commercial coal gasification plants now exist in this country. This technology is a good direction for New Mexico to pursue, however, because it addresses the majority of the state's coal in a non-mining approach."

Other in situ technology tapping the energy in coal involves the removal of methane, a natural gas, from coal seams. UNM chemical and nuclear engineering Professor Frank Williams has developed a technique for determining whether enough methane exists in a coal bed to justify the expense of removing it.

This technique involves drilling through coal seams and analyzing the chips for methane content, instead of the conventional coring of coal with a hollow tube. Before the chip desorption technique was developed, the cost of measuring methane, a natural by-product of coal, was exorbitantly expensive, so it was usually exhausted rather than recovered.

Williams has sampled coal at 15 different sites in the San Juan Basin in northwestern New Mexico, and estimates enough methane is trapped in the state's coal beds to provide New Mexico's natural gas needs for more than 100 years.

"Removing methane from coal beds is a much less radical form of in situ recovery than coal gasification," Nuttall said, "because we're simply removing a secondary energy resource related to coal, not chemically altering or using the coal itself — which has far greater energy potential than methane. The methane represents less than one percent of the energy value of coal, but the technology is available now. Coal gasification is still 30 years down the road."

To make this state's coal competitive to industry, UNM is working with the New Mexico Bureau of Mines to characterize New Mexico's coal, providing a data base needed to attract industry. "Coal characterization is planning ahead to fairly evaluate our coal," Nuttall said.

Characterization goes all the way from geology, which includes the technical characteristics of coal, to synfuels, or potential energy applications. With its ongoing in situ technology research, UNM is looking at the synfuels aspect of coal.

"Economics is the driving force in the development of coal," Nuttall said. "Economics determine that the first coal to be mined is strip minable coal. We can control the rate of development, and we can save the Bisti badlands, but economics will always be the underlying driving force in the development of energy resources like coal."

"In studying energy development, we're concerned with unchangeable factors, not changeable issues like world politics and fluctuations in energy price and supply. The unchangeable fact is the fossil fuel. It exists — and that's the reality of the matter."

JUDGING TOUR PACKAGES

Many people find all-inclusive tour packages to be the most carefree way to vacation. Of course, the kind of package offered will vary by destination, but there are important things to keep in mind.

If the package tour covers a lot of territory, check to see just how much time you get in any one place. Spending six hours in transit to get only an hour or two at a spot you've always wanted to see is both tiring and disappointing.

...
How large is the group you're traveling with, relative to the places you'll be visiting? Remote national parks, for example, don't really have the facilities to accommodate two busloads of tourists at once; you may spend all your time on line for the restaurant instead of seeing the sights.

...
Read your itinerary carefully. On an Orient whirlwind tour, for example, "Day Two in Hong Kong" won't mean much if the day starts out at the airport in Tokyo.

Packages can be as fast-or slow-paced, as busy or as leisurely, as you want. We can help you sort through what's available to find the perfect vacation. Contact your travel specialists at Ruidoso Travel.

Since 1945, hundreds of ships and planes, and thousands of people have vanished without a trace in an area of the Atlantic Ocean off Florida known as the Bermuda Triangle. On Tuesday, March 15, Nova investigates the mystery surrounding these strange disappearances in "The Case of the Bermuda Triangle."

It's reported that an average of four boats and two airplanes set off into the Triangle every month — and never return. Some pilots are said to avoid the area because their instruments unaccountably stop functioning there.

These events have led some people to think something powerful, sinister, or perhaps supernatural is lying in — or perhaps under — that part of the Atlantic.

Is there a reasonable explanation for these strange reports and events? Nova traces some of the most famous reports, searching for clues, testing theories and finally penetrating the mystery of the Triangle.

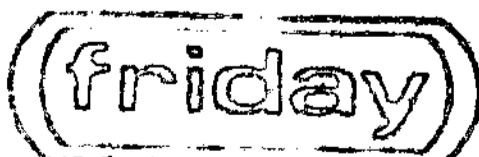

Nova is produced for PBS by WGBH Boston and is funded by public television stations, the Arthur Vining Davis Foundation and the Johnson & Johnson family of companies. "The Case of the Bermuda Triangle" is a production of the BBC, produced by Graham Massey.

Ruidoso thinclads have potential, Bob, Williamson key performers

Potential is the key word for the Ruidoso High School boys track team this season.

The Warriors lost several quality athletes to graduation last spring, including star weightman-sprinter Lon Nunley. However, the Warriors have one of their biggest groups of underclassmen ever, to go along with at least two blue-chip athletes.

"I think we'll be competitive and surprise a lot of people," Warrior head coach Ronny Maskew said. "Towards the end of the season before the district meet we should be very competitive."

Ruidoso finished fourth in the district 3-AAA meet last season, and two of the five athletes who competed in the state meet will return to the fold this year.

The two state meet returnees are sophomore 1,500-meter ace Cisco Bob and senior relay standout Grady Williamson.

Bob finished fourth in the state 1,500-meter run with a 4:17.55 clocking and should improve considerably on that this season. He suffered an injury during the football season last fall but has recovered.

Williamson ran on the 400-meter, 800-meter and 1,600-meter relay teams and is also a standout sprinter. The Warrior 800-meter relay squad finished fifth at the state meet with a 1:33.3 clocking.

"I'm not sure what Grady will run this season," Maskew said. "He could run anything from the 100 meters to the 400 meters. Our best relay event this season will probably be the medley relay, so he'll probably run the 400-meter leg in that event."

Bob also figures to be a key part of the Warrior medley relay team.

"We'll probably run Cisco in the 1,500 meters and medley relay most of the season," Maskew remarked. "That should be enough for him."

The Warriors have a host of distance runners and sprinters to go with Bob and Williamson. Indeed, the running events appear to be Ruidoso's strength this season.

Junior Eric Strobel and junior Steve Snidow should do well in the 100 meters and 200 meters. Senior Mike Douglas should be a fine 200-meter and 400-meter sprinter.

George Gresham, who transferred to Ruidoso from Arizona last summer, could compete in both the weight events and the sprints, although Maskew has the 185-pound sophomore working mostly in the weights now.

In the longer distance races, freshman David Ordorica and junior David Landrum could do well. Landrum will probably run the 3,000 meters while Ordorica will concentrate on the 1,500 meters.

"I think we've got some younger kids who could also help us out in the distance races," Maskew said.

Curt McClellan is a returning veteran in the 800 meters while Mark Johnston and Wade Proctor should give the Warriors depth in that event.

Ruidoso doesn't have any returning veterans in the hurdles, but Maskew is hopeful some newcomers can take up the slack.

Besides the medley relay, Ruidoso will also compete in the 400-meter, 800-meter and 1,600-meter relay events. The Warriors lost Lon and Don Nunley and Scott Neal to graduation, so some of the younger athletes will have to take their places.

In the field events, Ruidoso has fewer returning veterans than in the running events.

Still, Maskew is hopeful the Warriors can be competitive in the field events.

Senior Chris Sanchez is a returning veteran in the shot put and discus. Sophomore Chip Ramsey, freshman James Herrera and sophomore Manuel Montano could also help out in the weight events.

"We don't really have anybody who can take Lon's place right now in the weight events," Maskew said. "However, by the end of the season we could have some pretty good athletes there."

Lon Nunley finished third in both the shot put and discus at last season's state meet, so replacing him will be a tall order.

Ruidoso has several athletes who could do well in the long jump. Maskew feels junior Tracy Gann has a lot of potential in that event. Williamson and Justin Smith could also compete in the long jump. Freshman Russell Easter is also a possibility in the long jump.

Gann and Easter could also compete in the high jump, but the Warriors don't have any returning veterans in that event.

Ruidoso will open the season Friday, March 18, with a dual meet against Carlsbad High School on the latter's track. The Warriors will get a taste of what district 3-AAA competition will be like early as they'll travel to arch-rival Tularosa High School Tuesday, March 22, for a dual meet with the Wildcats.

"I see Deming and Silver City as the district favorites because of their depth," Maskew said. "However, we'll be right up there, particularly by the time the district meet rolls around."

1983 Ruidoso High School boys and girls track schedule

Date	Location
Friday, March 18	Carlsbad High School dual meet
Tuesday, March 22	Tularosa, High School dual meet

Friday, April 15	Roswell Invitational

Saturday, May 7	District 3-AAA meet at Silver City
Friday and Saturday May 13-14	State AAA meet in Albuquerque

Warrior girl tracksters have talent, hope to better last year's record

If the early practices are any indication, the 1983 Ruidoso High School girls track team should have plenty of depth and talent.

"We had a real good first day of practice," Warrior head coach Sergio Castanon said. "We've got about 22 high school girls and eight middle school girls out for the team so far."

Besides depth, big-meet experience should also be a plus for Ruidoso. The Warriors finished second in the district 3-AAA meet last season, earning Castanon coach of the year honors.

Six of the nine girls who competed in the state AAA division meet last season are returning.

They are Gia Rose, Judy McCoy, Valerie Garcia, Deanna Peso, Sonja Jefferson and Jackie Jefferson.

The Jefferson sisters could be the most talented sister duo in the entire AAA division.

Jackie, a senior, was an outstanding distance runner last season, but might try the sprints this season. Sonja, a junior, was a state meet participant in the 400 meters last season, finishing seventh in the finals.

"Jackie is flexible and could do well in both the sprints and distance races," Castanon said. "She had a real good first day of practice."

Peso finished sixth in the state 3,000-meter run with a 12:07.0 clocking. She has a strong finish and is a consistent runner.

Garcia, McCoy and Rose are all versatile runners who should score a lot of points for the Warriors this season.

Garcia is a strong runner in the 400 meters and 800 meters. She should also be a big part of the Ruidoso medley relay team.

Rose and McCoy are both sophomores and could do well in both the sprints and the hurdles. Rose, who is also a fine basketball player, competed in both the 400-meter relay and the 1,600-meter relay at the state meet last season. McCoy ran on the 400-meter relay squad.

Castanon is also hopeful some of the younger girls can help out, particularly in the distance events.

Turning to the field events, the Warriors should be strong in the shot put and discus. Lillian Lopez was a consistent performer in those events last year. Claudia Branum, another basketball standout, should help out in the weight events.

"I think Claudia can be good in the shot put and discus," Castanon said. "She didn't compete last season but I think she has potential."

Castanon is also pleased to have the help of head volleyball and boys junior varsity basketball coach Elmer Chavez this season.

"Chavez was the head coach at Grants High School last season," Castanon remarked. "He's qualified and knows the job well."

Ruidoso lost the district championship to Silver City High School last season and Castanon feels the Colts will again be the favored team.

"I think they only lost four girls off their squad," he said. "T or C (Truth or Consequences) could also be tough."

If Ruidoso can find a replacement or replacements for graduated state meet sprinter Sheri Dennis, the Warriors should be very competitive again.

Ruidoso's only early season meet against district competition will be at Tularosa High School, Tuesday, March 22.

WARRIOR GIRL THINCLADS. This is the Ruidoso High School girls track team for 1983. Some of the girls in this picture aren't with the team anymore but coach Sergio Castanon still has about 30 athletes out for

Here's a look at the Ruidoso track coaches

Ronny Maskew is Ruidoso High School's head boys track coach, and Jim Ramsey is his assistant.

Maskew, 35, has been at Ruidoso since 1979. He is a graduate of Artesia High School and New Mexico State University.

Maskew is also defensive coordinator for the Warrior football team. His wife, Joette, teaches and coaches at White Mountain Middle School.

Ramsey, also 35, is a graduate of Carlsbad High School and has a bachelor's degree from Western New Mexico University. He also has a master's degree from New Mexico Tech and a doctorate from East Texas State University.

He has been at Ruidoso since 1980 and is also the head junior varsity football coach and offensive line coach.

Ramsey's wife is Phyllis. They have two children. Chip, 14, plays football, basketball and track for the Warriors. Daughter Robin is 11.

Sergio Castanon is the head girls track coach and Elmer Chavez is his assistant.

Castanon, 30, is in his sixth year at the Warrior campus. He is a graduate of Eastern New Mexico University and has coached girls basketball and volleyball besides track. He was named district 3-AAA track coach of the year last season as a result of his team's second-place finish.

Castanon and his wife Jeanne have two daughters. Kara is five and Brynn is two. Chavez is in his first year at Ruidoso.

The 25-year-old bachelor taught at Grants High School in northwestern New Mexico for two years before coming to Ruidoso. He also coaches girls volleyball and boys junior varsity basketball for the Warriors.

He was also a graduate assistant at Western New Mexico University and is an accomplished race-walker. He plans to compete in several races this summer.

Ruidoso High School may be fielding a boys tennis team for the first time in many years, but coach Mike Crocker is optimistic his players can hold their own.

"I'm really optimistic about our boys team," he said. "We've got quite a few players with competitive experience and we should do well this season."

Crocker is currently working with 12

boys at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club courts. Ruidoso will take just seven players to each match. However, Crocker won't cut anybody.

"What we plan on doing is holding a play day every Friday," the coach remarked. "That way someone who is below another player on our tennis ladder can play a guy above him for the right to play in the next match."

Ryan Brown is currently the top player on the Warrior boys ladder. Brown has competed in several age-group tournaments in the Southwest and should be one of the top players in the district.

Senior Billy Woodul, who was the starting quarterback on the football team, is ranked second. Woodul has also competed in tournaments before.

Twins Mike and Jim Smith are ranked third and fourth on the ladder. They competed in tournaments in California several years ago.

Other current members of the boys team include Zack Swalander, Cache Mundy, Ruidoso High School tennis coach Mike Crocker got most of his tennis experience in this area.

Crocker, 35, played tennis at his high school in Texas, but didn't play in college at Texas Tech University.

When Crocker moved to Ruidoso over 10 years ago to teach at White Mountain Middle School, he got a job at the Sierra Swim and Racquet Club. He later became tennis director at the club and held that position for about a year.

Crocker is also the assistant football coach at White Mountain. He played football in high school.

Crocker's wife is named Melinda and they have an eight-year-old daughter, Chrissy.

Scott Thornton, Mitch Rhodes, Dallas Draper, John Day and Richard Ankham.

Crocker is hopeful several other players will come out before the season begins.

Ruidoso will compete in a district with other southeastern New Mexico schools. Other teams in the district include Lovington High School, Portales High School, Artesia High School and New Mexico Military Institute.

Crocker sees Portales as the Warriors' toughest competition.

"Portales should be awfully strong," he said. "They've got a really good program with about twice as many players as I've got. They've also got a strong junior high school program."

Ruidoso will open the season with a home match against Lovington, Tuesday, March 22. All the home matches will be at the Racquet Club. The district tournament will be Saturday, May 7 at Portales.

Trapp expected to lead Warrior girls

The Ruidoso High School girls tennis team won't have much experience, but the Warriors do have several excellent players.

Coach Mike Crocker's top-seeded player is junior Laura Trapp. Trapp, who has also competed in volleyball and track at Ruidoso, was the top-seeded player at her prep school in Dallas, Texas, before moving to Ruidoso. She also won honors in the John Newcombe Tennis Camp in Texas several times.

"Laura is an excellent player," Crocker said. "I expect big things from her."

Another player expected to do well for the Warriors is sophomore Mary Gaddy. She has also participated in some competitive tournaments.

Other members of the squad include Tina Sanchez, Robin Rhodes, Laura Tyson, Rachael McCoy, Donna Mobley, Kathy Harrison, Michelle Morrow, McKenzie Green, Dahn Stirman, Julie Jones, Brandi Adcock and Sandra Chavez.

Several of the girls besides Trapp and Gaddy have also had tournament experience. However, the majority of them have not played competitively.

"We're relatively inexperienced," Crocker admitted. "However, I think the girls will improve."

Crocker will take the top seven girls to each tennis match, the same as in the boys' division.

Ruidoso will play all its home matches at the racquet club.

Depth, experience should be key as golfers see improvement

After being one of the youngest and most inexperienced teams in the state last season, the Ruidoso High School golf team should be stronger this year.

Ruidoso only had four golfers on its squad last season. Three were freshmen and one was a sophomore.

This season, however, coach Leroy

Gooch has long career as coach

Leroy Gooch has been the coach of the Ruidoso High School golf team for so long he can't remember what year he started.

"It's been at least 20 years," he said. "I've lived in Ruidoso for 32 years."

Gooch is a music teacher at White Mountain Middle School. Before the middle school opened, he taught at the high school.

He and his wife Mary Lou have three grown children. Kim is 28, Matt is 25 and Julie is 23.

Ruidoso High School 1983 golf schedule

Date	Tournament
March 4-5	Alamogordo
March 12	Artesia
March 13	Ruidoso Benefit Tournament at Cree Meadows
March 25-26	Deming
April 8	Portales
April 21-22	Ruidoso
April 29-30	Socorro
May 3	Las Cruces
May 4	Deming
May 12-13	State AAA tournament at Socorro

Gooch has a much larger turnout to the earlier practices, despite the fact several of the golfers competed for the boys junior varsity basketball team.

Gooch had seven golfers out for the squad in the first three weeks of practice, and several more came out after the basketball season ended. He also has at least 10 golfers out for the White Mountain Middle School team.

"I expect us to be improved over last season," Gooch said. "Our four golfers who competed last season are back and I'm hopeful some of the younger golfers going out for the first time should also help us."

Crow has been ill but should be an excellent golfer when he gets into shape. He usually shot in the low 90's for 18 holes of golf last season. He had a brilliant 36 for the first nine holes of a one-day competition at Cree Meadows Country Club during the Ruidoso Golf Invitational last year.

Reynolds was generally the Warriors' most consistent golfer last season. He shot a fine 83 in the Socorro Invitational, the final tournament of last season. With improvement, he should score in the 70's several times this season.

Taylor came on strong at the end of last season and scored a 90 in the season opener at Alamogordo this season. He should also improve considerably this year.

Lopez played on the basketball team but should still help the Warriors this season. He generally scored in the low 100's or high 90's last year and should improve this season.

Other golfers who could figure in Ruidoso's plans this season include Gary Gregson, Randy Reynolds, Chris Garner and Bill Bomar. Some other golfers could also help the Warriors.

The annual Ruidoso Invitational will be held April 21-22, while the state tournament will be May 12-13 at Socorro.

they are Gary Gregson, Billy Taylor and Virgil Reynolds. Taylor and Reynolds are returnees from last year's team.

DEFENDING CHAMPION

Tiger thinclads boast top talent

While the Capitan High School boys track team may not have a great deal of depth, the Tigers do have several quality athletes and hope to defend their district championship.

Leading the way is Robert Parker, who has won the state A division high jump the past two seasons. Parker is also an outstanding basketball player.

Capitan should also be tough in the sprints. The Tigers have three quality sprinters returning from last year's team: Paul Sullivan, Danny Cummins and David Beavers. Sullivan could also compete in the shot put and discus.

"We should be pretty tough in the sprints and relays if the kids work hard," Tiger boys coach Mel Holland said. "Right now, most of the boys haven't gone out for track yet because they're on the basketball team in the state tournament. We're working with the rest of the kids now."

Sammy Castillo and Todd Proctor are

other top athletes. Proctor qualified for the state meet last season in the discus and has a best of 126 feet. Castillo is a fine all-around athlete.

Darrel Ray is the Tigers' girls coach, but Holland has been coaching the girls team until the basketball season is over. Ray is the assistant boys basketball coach.

The Capitan girls lost an outstanding athlete when Tony Brooks moved to Tatum. Brooks won the state title in the 100-meter and 200-meter dashes last spring.

"It hurt when we lost Brooks," Holland said. "She was one of the best around."

Anita Armstrong is probably the Tigers' best returning sprinter. Freshmen Tracy Herd and Becky Huey should also help out.

Both the Tiger boys and girls teams should be more than competitive in district competition again. Capitan finished fourth in the state meet last year as Reserve High School won the championship.

Capitan's first meet of the season is the Fox Relays at Fort Sumner, Saturday, March 26.

SEASONED VETERAN. Virgil Reynolds displays the form that has made him one of the top golfers on the Ruidoso High School team. Reynolds is a junior and was probably the Warriors' top golfer last season.

STRETCHING IT. Members of the Ruidoso High School girls track team do some stretching exercises during a recent practice. The girls started practice March 7 and should be one of the better teams in district to practice on and the athletes must do their workouts around the school. There are about 30 athletes out for the boys team this season.

3-AAA this season. The Warriors have one of their largest turnouts in history this season.

Ruidoso High School tennis coach Mike Crocker gives some pointers to his players during a recent workout. Crocker's boys and girls teams will open the season with home matches against Lovington High School Tuesday, March 22, at Sierra Swim and Racquet Club.

ONE OF THE TOP GIRL NETTERS. Robin Rhodes is expected to be one of the better players on the Ruidoso High School girls tennis team this season. Rhodes, a senior, has participated in several competitive tournaments before this season.

Jeff Smith (left) and Billy Woodul are expected to be two of the best players on the Ruidoso High School boys tennis team this season. Both players are ranked high on the Warrior tennis ladder.
