

ONE-LEGGED SKIER Ray Heid turns at a cone in the Businessmen's Handicapped Race at Sierra Blanca Ski Resort Wednesday. Heid and 24 other businessmen and women teamed up with handicapped skiers in the race benefitting the handicapped skiing program. All the business people skied on one ski with their free foot tied to the skiing leg.

Emphasis on fun at ski race

"Can you handle that type of pressure?" Gary Hall asked Bill Walizer, waiting in the starting gates Wednesday afternoon. "Don't cross your tips." Ray Heid shouted as Walizer started his second run of the Businessmen's Handicapped Ski Race. Walizer was skiing on one ski. So were all the other 25 local businessmen and women who teamed up with handicapped skiers for the race down East Easy Street at Sierra Blanca Ski Resort.

Every one at the top of the run laughed at Heid's joke. But they all cheered Walizer on, oohing and aahing at every turn as Walizer wound his way through the gates.

After finishing with an excellent time of under 25 seconds, he returned to the top of the course, asking around, "Now who's the pressure on?"

Throughout the afternoon the participants good-heartedly needed each other, cheered on the handicapped skiers, and saw the benefits of the handicapped ski program up close.

When it was all over, the team of Ron Harris and Larry Winkler took away the first-place trophy in the sixth annual Businessmen's Handicapped Race with a combined time of 44.2 seconds. Ronnie Hemphill and Raymond Gambel placed second, Paul Whitwam and Roy Kimbrell were third, and Gary Lynch and Robbie Stroschine took fourth.

The joking began well before the race. There was plenty of good humor at the banquet the night before at Cree Meadows Restaurant, Sonny's Bar B Q & Steak Pit, Nottingham's Catering, Cousins' and Cree Meadows Restaurant all donated food which was eventually cleaned out because of the extraordinary turnout at the benefit banquet.

The next day at the races, the handicapped skiers ran the first two runs down the course. Blind people, mentally retarded, amputees and those with cerebral palsy all made their way through the gates.

People at the top and bottom of the course urged the skiers on and cheered enthusiastically as they crossed the line. The best time of the two runs was the one that counted for the team.

"Everybody improves on the second run," noted Peter Strobel. "Isn't it amazing?" he said excitedly.

The kids were excited themselves, smiling broadly as they crossed the finish line and waving their arms in victory with a good time.

Handicapped skier Jerry Bigham explained what it means to him and other handicapped people to have the chance to ski.

"It's so exhilarating for them. Never in their lives have they been able to go fast," he said. Bigham said it was so nice for him to be able to move so fast and smoothly, to experience "freedom of motion you don't have any other time."

After the handicapped skiers had all run the course twice, it was time for the businessmen and women to ski. They handicapped themselves, skiing on one ski with the free foot tied to their skiing leg.

In spite of the joking and laughing, the tension noticeably increased as more racers finished their runs. The crowd around the scoring table grew, everyone looking to see where they placed. The times were close, with only 5.5 seconds separating the first eight teams.

As each skier crossed the finish line, the crowd waited for Rick Vincent to call out the time, and cheered or moaned at the results.

"Is that my partner who made the run?" one blind boy asked anxiously when he heard the cheers.

After all racers had finished, everyone moved inside to the Broken Ski Bar for the award ceremonies. Cheers filled the room every time Sierra Blanca manager Roy Parker announced an award winner. The first four teams received trophies and fourth through eighth place teams received medals. All other participants received participation medals.

"The kids had a good time. That's what counts," said Parker as people began to file out and head home. The ski program also earned money to teach the handicapped "the freedom of motion" for another year.

Mule Skinners still hoping to race

Ruidoso Downs Mule Skinners are holding out hope that the Ruidoso-Sunland Incorporated board of directors will reverse themselves and allow mule racing at Ruidoso Downs this fall.

"We've offered to do everything that we know to do," said Mule Skinners president Melvin Means Wednesday.

Means said a proposal the Mule Skinners board worked out at its board meeting Monday will be mailed to the Ruidoso-Sunland board today.

He explained that the proposal calls for the Mule Skinners to pay $1,000 for each of the three racing days of the mule meet for use of the racetrack. In addition, said Means, the Mule Skinners will provide all labor for the meet.

The proposal also suggests that Ruidoso-Sunland appoint a liaison person to check over the racetrack grounds before and after the mule meet to make sure the plant is well taken care of by the Mule Skinners.

Another provision of the proposal is an offer by the Mule Skinners to change the date of their race meet if Ruidoso-Sunland so desires. This year's events were scheduled October 3-9, with racing October 7, 8 and 9.

Means indicated he feels a delay in winterizing of the racetrack because of the mule meet may have been a factor in Ruidoso-Sunland's decision to exclude outside events from the facility. But he reiterated that a reason for the new policy has never been given.

Chamber of Commerce executive director Ed Jungbluth was to meet with Ruidoso-Sunland general manager Don Smith today at Sunland Park. That meeting was postponed from Tuesday of this week.

Jungbluth said he will take a letter formally requesting a meeting between the executive board of the Chamber and the Ruidoso-Sunland board. He indicated it is unclear whether all events not sponsored by the corporation are excluded under the rule, and that he will try to find out.

Means said people have been contacting Ruidoso-Sunland board members in support of the mule events, though he has urged everyone not to pressure the corporation. He stressed that the events are something that benefits the whole community, and that the Mule Skinners is a non-profit organization.

"All we can do is hope they'll contact us if this isn't what they want—that they'll let us know what it is," said Means. He pointed out that uncertainty over the site has already hurt the mule meet—a lot—discussions with potential sponsors like Coors and Skoal have had to be dropped.

If the latest proposal to the Ruidoso-Sunland board is turned down, Means said, the Mule Skinners will have to abandon the idea of racing at Ruidoso Downs this fall.

Senate passes Downs bill

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Ruidoso Downs is one giant step closer to filling its coffers with $50,000, following unanimous approval by the State Senate Wednesday morning of Senate Bill 232, introduced by Senator Charlie Lee. The bill provides for the village to receive $50,000 in revenue derived from taxes levied on wagers at the racetrack.

The proposed legislation was heard by the Senate Finance Committee Monday and unanimously approved for passage to the full Senate—a surprise move, according to Lee. The senator had reported earlier that the usual practice of the committee is to table all money bills until a total tabulation can be made of amounts requested.

There were two postponements last week of the hearing on Lee's bill, when Ruidoso Downs Mayor J. C. Day and village clerk Wilma Webb were in Santa Fe to testify. Finance Committee members felt the village officials and Lee had been treated unfairly, so they "quickly gave support" to the bill, Lee said Wednesday.

The full Senate then heard the bill, and "it got across the floor this morning without a dissenting vote," Lee reported. "I'm really tickled about that," the senator commented.

The bill now passes to the House Appropriations and Finance Committee, on which Lincoln County Representative Mickey McGuire sits.

Although the bill has proceeded thus far without a hitch, one problem which may be encountered, Lee pointed out. This is an attempt by four New Mexico counties to lack on an amendment which would provide them, also, with $50,000 each from racetrack tax revenues. Santa Fe, Dona Ana, Bernalillo and Colfax Counties, in which racetracks are located outside municipal limits (or on the state fairgrounds, in Albuquerque's case), may try to benefit from the bill as well.

As it is now worded, the legislation would directly benefit only municipalities with a track inside municipal limits, which affects only Ruidoso Downs.

If these counties succeed in amending the bill, an additional $200,000 would be taken from the state tax revenues, which may hurt the bill's chances of passage, Lee indicated. He said the key to its easy passage through the Senate was the inexcusable amount of revenue being requested. Lee also said the senators recognize the need in Ruidoso Downs for the additional revenue.

The senator said "I feel pretty optimistic about it now," though, after its smooth sailing through the Senate.

Lee noted that Senate Finance Committee approval should lend more credibility to the legislation with the House Appropriations and Finance Committee. The fact that it passed without a dissenting vote also looks good on the record as it goes through successive channels, the senator added.

He declined to predict when it will be heard by the House committee, but he plans to invite Day and Webb back to the capital to testify when it is scheduled.

If treatment thus far is any indication of the bill's chances for getting on the books, the future of Ruidoso Downs should be looking a lot rosier in the coming months.

Midtown wrecker license an issue

by TIM PALMER

A petition against granting a request for transfer of a wrecker license from Ruidoso Downs to midtown Ruidoso has garnered nearly 50 signatures, but the transfer applicant feels his operation has been misrepresented.

"I'm trying to run a mechanic shop out of the place," said Dean Dorman, who operates Lincoln County Wrecker from a former service station building at 2200 Sudderth Drive. The business has a Class A wrecker license from the state.

Dorman's company, Dean Services Incorporated, owns a Class D wrecker license as well. The company has applied to have the "domicile point" for that license transferred to the midtown location, and is being opposed by neighboring property owners and businesses.

The State Corporation Commission has granted Dorman a temporary permit to base his Class D wrecker license in midtown, and will rule on whether to grant a permanent domicile point there after a public hearing. The hearing is scheduled for March 24 in Santa Fe.

Classes of wrecker permits determine the size of vehicles the permit holder can tow. A Class A permit is for vehicles up to 6,000 pounds. A Class D permit is unlimited, meaning the holder can tow the largest trucks on the road.

Concern over Dorman's request surfaced in a letter to the editor in The News February 24. Gene Garms wrote that the permit "would enable (Dorman) to tow two large trucks and trailers to this location."

Garms also wrote that "wrecked and junked cars usually stay around that area most of the time."

Dorman feels that Garms' letter was misleading, and that it caused people to sign a petition against the license transfer without understanding the situation.

"We do not store wrecked cars down here," said Dorman. He pointed out that he has an impound yard off Highway 70 to which wrecked vehicles are taken.

"The cars that we have here are cars that we work on for the people around here," he said. He noted that the reason the wrecking service operates out of midtown with the automotive repair business is convenience—wrecker calls come from both ends of town.

"We just want to even it out," he said. Dorman said if the state grants his request for the transfer, he won't be actually "bringing another license in" because he has been operating with both licenses—the permanent Class A and the temporary Class D—for three months.

The difference between having and not having the Class D license is the presence or absence of two tow trucks at the site, he indicated. He reemphasized that vehicles at the midtown location are there for repair and are not wrecked vehicles.

Dorman and associate Wilton Howell pointed out that wrecker services are closely regulated. For example, an impound yard must be fenced. Violating regulations—by hauling wrecked vehicles to a place other than an impound yard, for example—would not be smart, Howell said.

He compared it to the owner of a liquor license selling liquor out the back door on Sunday.

"We remodeled the building to make it look better," Dorman said.

Dorman was asked if he is bothered by the fact that people are opposing his transfer request.

"Sure I'm bothered," he said. He added that he feels he could explain his position better if people were to come to him rather than writing a letter to the editor.

Asked whether anyone had talked to him about the matter, he answered no. "Never had a complaint."

Regarding the petition, he said if someone came in with a petition against hauling wrecked cars and storing them there in midtown, "I'd sign it."

"The people that read that letter to the editor were misled," he said.

Nosy is good when neighbors team up to fight crime

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Police Department is asking everyone in the community to start being nosy. To know when neighbors come and go, know what cars they drive, know when friends are expected.

To some, it may seem like a violation of privacy. But to others, who understand that it's all part of the fledgling Neighborhood Watch program being organized village-wide, it is a means to get involved in the fight against crime.

"The whole idea is to become aware. Community awareness increases our resources. We'll have more eyes, more ears," explained RPD Chief Richard Swenor Tuesday.

The program has been in the offing for over a month. Officer Chuck Mahenski got it off the ground by signing up several area coordinators and designing a map breaking down the village into a system of squares that encompass all residential neighborhoods.

When Mahenski left the department a few weeks ago, Swenor took over organization of the program.

The chief is now in the process of soliciting support from residents who want to volunteer as one of the 32 area coordinators. He needs only a few more to round out the list.

The department also is awaiting delivery of Neighborhood Watch window stickers and informational booklets that will explain the duties of coordinators.

Once the coordinators are signed up and they receive their instructions, they will be asked to canvass their areas to enlist residents as block captains, who will be the actual eyes and ears for the police.

Initially, coordinators will be asked to sign up four captains. But in congested developments like White Mountain and Ponderosa Heights, the coordinators may have to get the support of several more residents so the neighborhoods will be effectively covered.

The names, locations and telephone numbers of all volunteer participants will be registered with police, noted Swenor.

When enough volunteers are signed up, the chief plans to have a meeting with the citizens to explain the concept of Neighborhood Watch and give them instructions.

Basically, each coordinator will be identified by a quadrant number and compass location within the quadrant. Mahenski, who is arranging the final details of the system for Swenor, explained that all patrol officers will have street maps in their vehicles that can be referred to immediately when a volunteer calls in a suspicious activity.

When a call comes over the radio, the location number will get the officer en route to the general area, and he can then find the source of the call with the map in hand.

Mahenski said the quick response enabled by the identification codes is vital to the Neighborhood Watch program—which is designed to catch wrongdoers in the act.

Swenor hopes Neighborhood Watch will be effective in helping knock down the escalating rate of residential burglaries.

In his annual report to the village council in January, he noted that burglary jumped 21 percent in 1982—about the average increase for all felonies—and that police achieved only an 11 percent resolution rate on burglaries.

The crime is difficult to solve because of the nature of the town. Many of the homes burglarized in Ruidoso are unoccupied at the time, and the incidents are not reported until owners return for a vacation.

"Most of the time they just aren't fresh burglaries," said Swenor.

The police chief said the block captains will be a real asset to police if they can contact the owners of vacation homes in their blocks and write down their names and addresses. The captains should also get an idea when the homes will be occupied, so they know when to keep an eye out for any unauthorized activity.

If police notice a trend of burglaries developing in one neighborhood, they will contact the area coordinator to relay the information to the captains.

By becoming familiar with neighbors, what cars they own and their normal daily comings and goings, the block captains will develop a knowledge of expected activities and will know when to report anything suspicious.

While being nosy is not always accepted as being neighborly, it is necessary to the program, the chief points out. And, as a side benefit, neighborhoods will be drawn closer together through the contacts made by the citizen volunteers.

Indeed, the number of captains will not be limited, said Swenor. The more neighbors who get to know and watch out for each other, the easier it will be to spot suspicious activity.

Basically, the whole program depends on better communication among residents and with police, noted Swenor.

"That's what I like so much about it, that it's so informal," he said. "It doesn't require formal committees, no meetings, and they don't have to become vigilantes. They just have to spend a little time getting to know their neighbors."

In addition to the informational booklets for volunteers, the department is also awaiting delivery of thousands of window stickers that will be made available to residents. The stickers, along with Neighborhood Watch signs the chief hopes to order, have proven as effective deterrents in other communities with the program.

In a brochure published by an insurance company on neighborhood watch programs, it is pointed out that communities that have adopted the programs and erected the signs have witnessed tremendous decreases in burglaries. In Seattle, Washington, residential theft dropped by more than 50 percent in one year.

Once Neighborhood Watch is underway, the chief also hopes to organize a "Helping Hands" network. Through the program, residents who are home during the day will be asked to volunteer to place the helping hands symbol in a window, which notifies children they can go to the home if they are lost or in trouble.

Swenor said that program now is only in the planning stages.

Chief Swenor, who is a strong and vocal advocate of citizen participation programs, sees Neighborhood Watch, along with the new Crime Stoppers program, as a blossoming effort by volunteers in the community to help in the fight against crime. And he hopes police will witness some favorable results from the participation.

As he told Rotary Club members at their luncheon Tuesday, "We still have a severe problem in Ruidoso. Crime hasn't dropped off."

"Police can no longer proportionately staff in relation to the increase in crime. Community involvement is now the main stress."

Policeman Larry Simon hangs up his badge

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

Police captain Larry Simon, second in command of the Ruidoso Police Department for seven years, resigned from his post this week to enter private business. Simon, who has lived in Ruidoso for most of his 36 years, said Monday he has contemplated leaving the department for nearly a year, and just recently "got up the guts" to do it.

"I started out when it was a small department, and I helped build it into one of the best, man-for-man, in the state," said Simon. "It's been one of the most enjoyable times in my life. I've learned and grown with the department."

Simon was a veteran of 11 years on RPD. When he started as a patrolman, there were only four officers, a chief, a sergeant and three dispatchers. RPD now has about 30 employees.

Simon said his departure, effective Monday, was not the result of stress or police "burnout." Rather, he said, he decided to switch careers while he feels he is young enough to do so. Simon mentioned the lure of better pay in the business field was one of the main reasons he decided to leave police work.

Chief Richard Swenor, who will temporarily take over some of Simon's duties and assign others to police lieutenants Jim Alston and Dave Pfeiffer, attributes Simon's leaving partially to pressures of police work, but he said he respects the captain's decision to quit.

"It happens. It's part of having personnel problems," Swenor said. The chief said he does not blame officers like Simon for leaving police work when they feel they can find something better.

"I respect them more for taking care of their personal obligations," Swenor added, noting that officers sometimes feel they cannot remain dedicated to the department and concurrently take care of personal matters.

Simon is the second top officer to resign from the force in the last few weeks. Officer Chuck Mahenski, the top graduate last year from the New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy, left two weeks ago because of personal reasons.

Mahenski, with the force for only a year, was the RPD public relations officer and security specialist. He was instrumental in establishing the Neighborhood Watch program that is still being organized, and he was co-host of a weekly show on local television addressing police work.

Swenor said it hurts the department to lose top men, but he respects the decisions in both cases. The officers were the first to resign in more than six months, which was something of a record of stability at RPD, noted Swenor.

Simon said he has several business opportunities, but he would not specify what they are. He did note, however, that he will remain in Ruidoso and work for a time at Plaza Dee Jewelry, owned by his mother. Simon had nothing but praise for RPD and its growth in the last decade.

"I'm leaving behind a lot of personal satisfaction. A lot of memories, and good times," he said.

Simon, who was RPD training director and head of the patrol division, said among his achievements on the force were setting up one of the best in-house training programs in the state, helping get a higher pay scale for officers, and improving working conditions.

He said he will regret being away from the people he has worked with over the years, and that he will probably miss some of the excitement of police work.

But one thing he will not miss is the dark side of law enforcement—dealing with violence, injuries and death.

"I've seen enough of the bad side of life to last me two-three lifetimes," he said, giving some indication the accumulation of occupational stress has affected him. But Simon maintains stress never entered into his decision.

"I've become accustomed to it. Right now, I feel like I'm under more stress because I'm fixing to start a new life; wondering if I'm right or wrong.

"But I feel if I don't take the opportunities now, I never will," he continued.

"In a way I'm very, very happy," he explained. "I'm happy for the department and I'm happy for what I'm going to be doing."

Swenor said the position of deputy chief will remain open for some time. He indicated he may decide to reorganize the RPD administrative staff after giving it a period of review.

LAST DAY ON THE JOB: Ruidoso Police Department captain Larry Simon relinquished his position as second in command of the force this week. Simon, who will remain on the payroll for a few weeks, was an 11-year veteran with RPD. He left the department to enter private business.

County okays animal control contract

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Lincoln County commissioners Tuesday agreed upon a short-term contract for animal control services with Jack Sniadecki, after the current contract was terminated by Sniadecki last month.

Under the new four-month contract, the county will be responsible for paying Sniadecki $1,300 a month to subsidize his fuel and salary costs, plus provide him with a vehicle, maintenance on the vehicle and insurance. The previous contract stipulated only that the county would furnish him a vehicle, maintenance and insurance.

Sniadecki submitted a letter of termination of that contract at the January 18 meeting, contending that the service had become too costly for him to continue.

Commissioners asked Sniadecki to discuss the situation with the sheriff and county manager to work out an agreement for continuation of the service. The animal control officer submitted a proposal to commissioners Tuesday for a 28-month contract, the first four months to be arranged as it was agreed upon. The proposal provided for payment of $2,897.67 a month by the county for the following 24 months, with the contractor to furnish all his own equipment, fuel, maintenance and insurance.

The sheriff's office has been responsible for animal control in the county since Sniadecki's contract terminated last month. Sheriff Tom Sullivan testified Tuesday that the county would have to purchase kennels, a tranquilizer gun and other necessary equipment, plus pay to send an officer to animal control school if the department is to continue to be responsible for the service. He advised that commissioners "consider the things Sniadecki will furnish and the things the county will have to buy if we take over animal control."

Board of commissioners chairman John Hightower moved that Sniadecki's proposal for the next four months be accepted, with a long-term contract to be negotiated for next fiscal year. This motion passed, with commissioner Kenneth Nosker voting against, stating he would like additional information about the situation before accepting the contract.

In other business, commissioners expressed frustration about a community service block grant of $20,000 available to Lincoln County but to be administered through Alamogordo or Albuquerque. Service organizations in these two cities submitted proposals for spending the money on behalf of Lincoln County, and the board was asked to endorse one of these proposals but refused to do so.

Commissioners were upset that Lincoln County was given no control of funds allocated to the county and that they were not even notified the grant was available. They tabled the matter until a representative of the state Human Services Division, the department administering the grant, attends a meeting to explain more about the matter.

In other business, commissioners:

—Approved a budget transfer for overtime salaries in the road department, approved at the previous meeting.

—Awarded the bid on banking services to First City National Bank, the sole bidder. The county's checking account services were put to bid upon the recommendation of Ruidoso State Bank, which did not submit a bid.

—Awarded the bid on base course to Bonnell Sand and Gravel of Glencoe for the low bid of $3.50 a yard.

—Awarded the bid on chips to Bonnell Sand and Gravel for the low bid of $7 a yard for one-half-inch chips and $6 a yard for three-quarter-inch chips.

—Approved the final pay estimate for the Carrizozo Administration Office.

—Heard a report and update on services offered through the Lincoln County Counseling Center by director J. L. Wilson. The county provides six percent of the financial support for the clinic, Wilson reported. He said the center is actively pursuing additional sources of revenue to compensate for lack of state and federal funding, and is currently offering more services than ever before in the county.

—Approved changes in subdivision regulations as proposed by the Planning and Zoning Commission, and set a public hearing for the next meeting, March 22. The changes were made in an effort to prevent landowners from avoiding the regulations by dividing and selling parcels of land, and from repeatedly replating subdivisions.

—Appointed commissioner Bill Elliott to the Regional Wastewater Joint Use Board. —Decided to hire Linda Konu as carpenter to remodel the courthouse space abandoned by the administration staff.

—Signed the road inventory to be sent to the State Highway Department. County manager Suzanne Cox reported there are 1,419.77 miles of county road, an increase of 82.62 miles from the previous inventory of 1979.

—Heard from road department superintendent Guy Henley that he will present figures on the purchase of a crusher and larger trucks for hauling base course, for commissioners to consider.

—Agreed to send copies of the agendas and minutes of meetings to the Ruidoso Board of Realtors as per its request.

Accident reported Wednesday

A Ruidoso man who was injured on a construction site Wednesday afternoon was taken to the hospital for possible head injuries after he flipped over his vehicle while driving down Coconino Lane.

Roger Russi II, 17, was taken to the hospital by a witness to the single-car accident about 2:30 p.m.

According to the police report, Russi was hurt on a construction site about 30 minutes before the accident. The report said Russi apparently passed out at the wheel.

Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital spokeswoman Mary Lou Brown said Russi was treated and released.

Ruidoso Downs approves merchant ordinance

by TIM PALMER

Ruidoso Downs trustees voted Monday to adopt an ordinance regulating itinerant merchants, despite concerns that the law would be vulnerable if challenged in court.

Village attorney Tim Quigley explained that the ordinance was modeled after one recently adopted by Ruidoso. He said he added a severability clause, stipulating that any part of the ordinance found unconstitutional can be taken out without damaging the whole ordinance.

Quigley expressed concern about the definition of itinerant merchant, pointing out that proving a vendor did not intend to stay more than five days was questionable. He said he did not want to see Ruidoso Downs get into a protracted lawsuit costing thousands of dollars.

The attorney acknowledged that the aims of the ordinance—protecting businessmen from unfair competition and consumers from shoddy goods—were worthy. But he said he was advised by the Municipal League attorney, "Don't do it." Quigley told the trustees they would have to weigh the risk. The ordinance was then unanimously adopted.

Also Monday, the trustees voted to approve an amended engineering report from Boyle Engineering. Frank Lovelady of Boyle said his firm recommends that Ruidoso Downs continue to pursue a federal grant to apply toward a proposed $400,000 water improvements project.

Lovelady said he had been told by a Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) representative that the agency needs the engineering document in order to determine how it can help. Ruidoso Downs is considered a high priority by the agency, he added. He noted that FmHA deadline for allocating funds is March 31.

"If we don't get something done this year, we're going to be in drastic trouble," said Mayor J. C. Day.

It was pointed out that Boyle had used the wrong figure for the minimum water charge. Trustees voted to approve the report, with revisions based on the correct minimum charge. Trustee Bob Power cast the lone vote against the motion.

In other business, trustees:

—Approved a contract for police officers.

—Discussed paving of village streets. The question of whether road funds could be used to buy base course only—rather than to pave—was raised, and Day said he would look into it.

—Tabled action on out-of-town garbage pickup and dumping. Trustee Harold Mansell said state environmentalists had approved out-of-town refuse dumping in the village landfill at Glencoe, as long as it is done by village employees.

—Approved a mobile home ordinance presented by the Planning and Zoning Commission, with a provision for signs in front of mobiles which house businesses.

—Approved a zoning map for the village, with a commercial zone extending 300 feet off Highway 70 instead of 1.5 blocks as previously defined.

Training program on

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

Qualified personnel of the Ruidoso water and sewer departments have started an in-house training program for department employees.

John Ramos, superintendent of the Biscuit Hill wastewater treatment plant, said the bi-weekly sessions will alternate between wastewater and water systems training.

The primary reason for starting the program is to save the village money. Ramos explained that all municipal wastewater and water systems employees must be certified, and they must update their certifications annually.

In the past, the employees were sent to Alamogordo or Las Cruces for the training. "It's expensive to attend, so we decided to start doing it here," said Ramos.

Ramos and wastewater lab technician Art Torrez, who both are certified at the highest level by the Water Quality Control Division of the state Environmental Improvement Division, will be conducting the sessions along with water superintendent Richard Sanchez.

The sessions will be held every other Wednesday from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m.

The first course, conducted at the Biscuit Hill facility February 23, was an introduction to wastewater systems. The instructors also will conduct a beginning course on water systems, then advance into particular problem areas in subsequent courses.

Torrez said information on the courses has to be submitted to the state for approval. He added he is not sure if the water division will okay the training, but he sees no reason for disapproval. The employees still will have to be tested by the state for certification.

Torrez said the instructors would like to establish a library on the municipal systems, and they have asked state assistance in providing the training materials.

The two wastewater employees said they welcome participation by employees from surrounding municipalities. For further information, contact Ramos or Torrez at 378-8417.

Fire damages house in Ruidoso Downs

A two-story wood frame house in Turkey Canyon in Ruidoso Downs received heavy damage in an early morning fire Tuesday. Ruidoso Downs police dispatcher JoAnn Jenkins said the Downs volunteer fire department was called to the fire about 7:50 a.m. She said the house, owned by John Lewis, received heavy damage to the upstairs and to one room on the lower floor.

She said the cause of the fire is under investigation. Jenkins said the house was unoccupied at the time.

Village attorney interprets building inspection policy

by DAVID SHEPPARD
Staff Writer

Ruidoso fire and building officials will continue to inspect commercial buildings at the time the structures are sold or change use, according to building inspector Don Hendricks.

The inspection policy was initiated recently by Hendricks, fire superintendent Virgil Reynolds and fire prevention officer Oille Cuddy to facilitate the municipal departments and new business owners.

But the policy came under question at the February 22 council meeting, at which councilman Don Dale asked the village attorney to research the legality of the policy.

In a letter sent to the governing body two days later, village attorney Lee Huckstep said the inspections can be carried out, but he noted conditions are placed on what can be required when businesses change hands.

Huckstep addressed three questions applying to the issue. The first was whether existing buildings can be forced to comply with the Uniform Building Code.

Quoting a section of the code, Huckstep wrote that buildings are required to be brought up to code when the "character of occupancies or use of any building" changes. But a sale alone does not require structures be brought into compliance as long as the building use and character of occupancy remains the same.

Huckstep also researched the life safety requirements in the building code. According to those provisions, buildings can be forced to comply at time of sale if a reasonable degree of safety does not exist.

Huckstep said the building department could force changes concerning exits, stairs, corridors, fire escapes, exit and fire escape signs, vertical shafts and basement access, according to the code. The section also applies to sprinkler protection, standpipes, smoke detectors and separation of occupancies.

"The sale of a building has nothing to do with the life safety requirements," wrote Huckstep. "These requirements apply to buildings whether or not they are resold."

The life safety code also gives the building inspector the flexibility to modify its provisions at his discretion, Huckstep indicated.

The final question addressed was whether existing buildings could be made to comply with the Uniform Fire Code.

Again, Huckstep said the sale of a building has nothing to do with the code requirements, and he said changes can only be required if conditions exist that "constitute a distinct hazard to life or property."

Huckstep said Cuddy would be the one to determine whether such conditions exist. Both the Uniform Building Code and the Uniform Fire Code have been adopted by the village council.

Hendricks said the village attorney's interpretation has not caused the departments to change the policy.

"We will be carrying out inspections," he said. "The way I interpret it, everything we were doing was perfectly legal."

He added that he and fire officials will require changes if they find "anything that is a threat to life safety."

Hendricks explained the main concern in inspections of existing buildings is locating hazards that are a genuine threat to safety. He noted owners of existing structures have never been required to correct minor violations of the codes.

The building inspector said the only reason the policy was initiated was to make the inspections more convenient for new owners and for inspectors.

"We don't intend to harass anybody," he said. He also noted inspectors have the authority to go into buildings at any time.

Hendricks added that inspections will be carried out after commercial property is sold, or when the owner applies for a business license.

"We're just trying to protect the public; to do the job we were hired to do," he said.

P & Z to meet Monday

The Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing on a commercial rezoning request at its regular meeting Monday, March 7, at village hall. The meeting starts at 9:30 a.m.

The request is from R. A. Bennett for 16.5 acres on lower Mechem Drive in the Young Heights subdivision.

Bennett is asking for a rezoning from single-family residential (R-1) to light commercial (C-1) for most of the tract. Two lots in the tract, Block 4, are already zoned commercial.

Ted Bennett refused to comment on plans for the property.

Also on the agenda are: —Request for rear lot line variance for Lots 38 and 39, Block 34, Ponderosa Heights Unit 5, for Lineal and Judy White. —Request for front lot line variance for Tract 2, Block G, White Fir subdivision, for Grady and Florene Snow. —Request for front lot line variance for Lot 12, Block 7, Town and Country North, for Erik Peterson Jr.

—Final plat of The Village Inn, a townhome-apartment project; Lots 13 and 14, Block 6, Airport West 2nd Addition, for William and Priscilla Thompson.

—Replat of Lot 9, Block 1, Cree Meadows Heights 1st Addition, for Denise Grimes.

—Replat of Lots 3 and 4, Block 11, Cree Meadows Country Club, for H. W. McClurg.

—Replat of the Brown Airport Tract for Robert Welch.

Correction

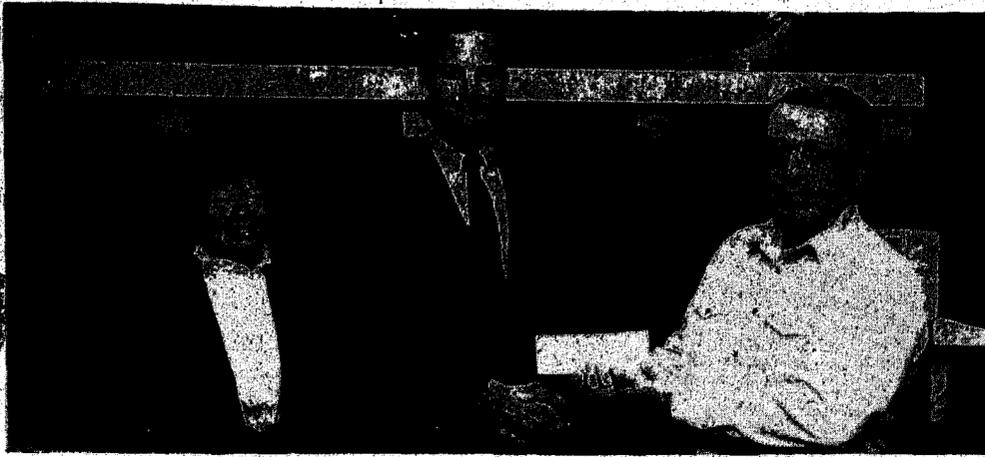

The News would like to correct a mistake in the February 24 issue. In Billy Allstetter's account of the Capitan village council meeting, he incorrectly reported that the rock crusher supplying gravel to the village belongs to Sharon Horton. It actually belongs to H. N. LaRue and Sons. The News regrets the error.

Her message will center around John 13:34-35, "I give you a new commandment, that you should love one another, just as I have loved you, so you too should love one another. By this shall all men know that you are My disciples, if you love one another."

Warriors lose season finale 79-38

by Gary Brown
Sports Writer

A slow start proved to be fatal for the Ruidoso High School boys varsity basketball team as it ended the 1983 season by losing to host Tularosa High School 79-38 in the district 3-AAA tournament, opener Tuesday night.

Ruidoso ended the season with an 0-20 record. Tularosa will tangle with Truth or Consequences High School (T or C) tonight in a second-round game on the Wildcats' court.

The Wildcats jumped off to a 20-4 first-quarter lead and breezed the rest of the way against Ruidoso.

Tularosa led 8-0 before 5-6 guard Gilbert Rivera scored a bucket to give the Warriors their first points of the game.

However, the Wildcats built their lead up to 35-8 midway through the second quarter and pretty much decided the game before halftime.

Tularosa led 41-18 at halftime and 55-25 at the third-quarter break. Both teams played their reserves a lot in the final quarter. The Warriors were hurt inside as Tularosa's 6-5 center Chris Cerry scored 28 points and dominated the boards when he was in the game.

"I feel we were capable of playing a lot better than we did," Warrior head coach Ron Geyer said bluntly. "They (Tularosa) came out really fired up and our guys were intimidated at the start."

Kerry Hardison added 15 points for the winners. Senior Grady Williamson made his final game for the Warriors a good one by scoring 12 points on six field goals. Junior Curtis Palmer added seven points and grabbed 13 rebounds for Ruidoso. H. R. Lueras added six points while freshman Dan Ullmann added five points.

Despite the loss, Geyer found something good about his team's effort against the Wildcats.

"They never gave up," he said. "They haven't given up all season and that should help us for next season."

The Warriors will lose three players to graduation while another player is moving. Williamson, Lueras and Chris Wynn are the departing seniors while Rivera is moving to Lubbock, Texas.

"The loss of Gilbert will hurt," Geyer said. "However, we've got a lot of young guards to choose from to take his place next season. We'll still be young next season. Our freshmen will be sophomores and that's still young."

Williamson, 6-0-12; Palmer, 3-1-7; Lueras, 2-2-6; Ullmann, 2-1-5; Reynolds, 1-0-2; Rivera, 2-0-4; Wynn, 0-2-2; TOTALS, 16-6-38.

TULAROSA (79): Cerry, 10-6-28; Hardison, 6-3-15; Blanco, 5-1-11; Smith, 2-0-4; Provancio, 5-0-10; Poinfexter, 2-1-5; S. Gomez, 1-0-2; C. Gomez, 1-0-2; Torrez, 2-0-4; TOTALS, 34-11-79.

Around Sports

with Gary Brown

When the new Ruidoso High School plant is opened in September of 1984, the gymnasium will be a vast improvement over the present one.

The new gymnasium will probably seat around 1,500 people, compared to the present gym's 750. In addition, the gymnasium will be one of the most modern in the state, designed in a similar fashion to the University of New Mexico's "Pit."

The new Warrior gymnasium will be sunk into the ground like the UNM gym. When people walk into the gymnasium, they will walk down to the bleachers and the basketball court.

There will be several other features to the new gymnasium.

There will be four locker rooms in the new gymnasium. The boys will have separate rooms for physical education and competitive athletic teams, as will the girls. The present gym has just one locker room piece for boys and girls.

An indoor track that can be used for jogging will be built around the stands and basketball court. There will also be a huge wrestling room—large enough for two regulation-size mats, a room for viewing films, and separate storage rooms for the different competitive sports.

Though the new gymnasium will be finished when the school is opened, bids haven't gone out for it yet.

"We'll probably get bids on it by the end of June," Ruidoso principal Tom Hanson said. "We don't have an exact idea how much it will cost. A rough estimate would be around two to two-and-a-half million dollars."

The high school will probably use the present football field for a while after the new plant is complete.

"We'll have to see how much money we have," Hanson said. "A new football field and an outdoor track are possible in the future. However, when the new plant is opened, all we'll have is a practice field."

While the high school may have to wait awhile for a new football stadium and an outdoor track, it will have one of the finest gymnasiums in this part of the state when the new plant opens.

Some of the youths who will probably play in the new Warrior gymnasium will begin play in the Ruidoso-Sertoma Little League basketball program Friday at the White Mountain Middle School gym.

There are four major league teams and six minor league teams in the league.

A total of four games will be played in the Braves' gymnasium Friday.

Nosker's will take on Gibson's at 6 p.m. and Ruidoso State Bank will tangle with First City National Bank at 7 p.m. in minor league games.

In major league competition, the Spurs will play Clark's Refrigeration at 8 p.m. and Pioneer Savings and Loan will meet Ranchhouse Restaurant at 9 p.m.

The regular season will last until Tuesday, April 5. All the games will be played in the White Mountain gymnasium.

Anyone interested in watching future Warrior basketball players in action should take in the Little League games Friday night.

Men's bowling tourney scheduled for weekend

The annual Ruidoso Men's Bowling Association Championship Tournament will take place Saturday and Sunday at Holiday Bowl.

Any member of the American Bowling Congress can sign up for the tournament. There is an entry fee of $3.75. If a bowler wants to compete in all events, it will cost him an extra $2.

There will be competition in team, doubles and singles divisions. Saturday the team competition will be at noon and 2 p.m., while the doubles-singles competition will be at 6 p.m. Sunday the doubles and singles competition will be at noon and 2 p.m., while the team action will be at 6 p.m.

The Mescalero Apache Tribe (herein called "Owner") will receive bids for Housing Rehabilitation in the H.U.D. of the Mescalero Apache Reservation until 4:30 p.m. on the 20th day of March, 1983, at Mescalero, New Mexico, telephone (505) 671-4494, Ext. 238 or 249.

DOING THE TWO-STEP. Jessie Reynolds of the Ruidoso High School boys varsity basketball team and a player from Tularosa High School make like ballet dancers as they jump for the ball during Tuesday night's game in the Wildcat gym. Tularosa won the game 79-38 to end the Warriors' season.

Basketball tourney set for Mescalero

The Mescalero Community Center will be the site of a basketball tournament Saturday and Sunday.

The tournament will have open competition and competition for men under six feet tall. The Mescalero Little League football program will sponsor the tournament.

Both the championship and consolation brackets will have trophies for the top four teams. There will also be a sportsmanship trophy awarded, an all-tournament team picked, and a Most Valuable Player honored.

For further information, call Harrison Carrillo at 671-4494, extension 243, or Albert Platta at P.O. Box 262, Mescalero, NM.

Capitan star may not play against Vaughn

The Capitan High School boys varsity basketball team may go into its regional semi-final playoff game against Vaughn High School Friday night without its best player.

Senior Robert Parker, the Tigers' leading scorer and rebounder, jammed his back in the district playoffs last Saturday and hasn't practiced all week. Capitan coach Kendall Lawlis isn't sure if his 6-3 star will be ready for the 6 p.m. tipoff against Vaughn in the Hagerman High School gymnasium.

"I don't know if he'll be ready or not," Lawlis said. "We'll miss Robert if he can't play, but we have a really strong bench and our other players can make up for his absence."

Capitan lost the district title to Weed School by a 57-50 score last Saturday, but still qualified for the regionals because it won the regular season district championship. If the Tigers defeat Vaughn, they automatically qualify for next week's state A division tournament at the University of New Mexico arena in Albuquerque.

A victory over Vaughn will give Capitan the right to meet the winner of the Weed-Corona High School game for the regional championship. The first-place regional team gets a better seeding in the state tournament than the second-place team.

Lawlis will probably start Grady Lee Eldridge in Parker's place. The 6-2 senior is a good scorer and excellent rebounder.

Other probable Tiger starters are Todd Proctor, Eddie Davis, Jon Todd Agullar and Danny Cummins. Sammy Castillo and Gid Allen are top reserve players.

Vaughn doesn't have the Tigers' height or depth but is still a fine squad. "They've got one excellent outside shooter about 5-10," Lawlis said. "They've also got a good inside player about 6-0 who is excellent on defense. He's also a good shooter but he's stronger on defense."

The Corona-Weed contest will be played at 7:45 p.m. following the Capitan-Vaughn game. The championship game Saturday night will also be played at Hagerman.

Ski sale set next week

The Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy (RGA) will sponsor the first Ruidoso ski exchange Saturday and Sunday, March 12-13, at the RGA gymnasium. Ski clothing and equipment will be available, both new and used.

Equipment for sale will be checked in the day before the sale.

The RGA will take 15 percent of all sales. This is a money-making project of the RGA to help purchase new equipment. For more information, call 336-8222.

Women spikers seek competition

by Gary Brown
Sports Writer

It may be only a relaxing recreational activity now, but Pam Graves hopes the Ruidoso Women's Volleyball League will turn into something more competitive in the near future.

"Right now it's a recreational activity," said Graves, the new Ruidoso Parks and Recreation director. "There's no competition now. However, we hope to eventually get a competitive league started someday here in town. We tried to get something going with Roswell and Alamogordo but I didn't get any response from them. We're also trying to get men involved in a recreational volleyball program."

The women play in the White Mountain

Middle School gymnasium at 1 p.m. every Saturday. The program has been in existence for about a month and will probably last into the spring.

"I imagine the program will last until around April," Graves said. "After that, everybody will probably be interested in doing something outside."

Last Saturday about eight women showed up for the action, and most of them admitted they were involved in the program for fun.

"I like the recreational aspect of it and also because it's relaxing," said Joy Fowler. "I played high school volleyball in Bovina, Texas."

Most of the women are in their 20's and some are involved in other recreational sports. Graves, 28, has a park and recreation degree from a community college in Minnesota. She has also lived in Oklahoma and Texas.

She played softball two years ago for the champion Altic team of the Lincoln County Women's Softball Association, and established a gymnastics program while living in a small Texas town.

Although Saturday's turnout was small, there have been as many as 15 women participating in the program, according to Graves.

"The turnout has been pretty good," she said. "I think it will get better as more people hear about it."

And maybe someday Ruidoso will have a high-level competitive volleyball program.

Close action in Cree Meadows tourney

The foursome of Mike Massey, Bill Happel, Bobbie Abel and Pete Kazhe scored a 65 to win the "Eskimo Scramble" 18-hole tournament at Cree Meadows Country Club Sunday afternoon.

A total of 10 teams (40 golfers) competed in the tournament, the first of the year at Cree Meadows.

Happel eagled the 18th hole in the shotgun-start tournament to spark his team's victory. The winning team finished up on the fourth hole.

There was a three-way tie for second place between the team of Jack Hicks, Buster Hill, Skeet Cates and Gary Gregson; the team of Howard Hassell, Kyle Kannady, Louis Herrera and Shirley Cliff; and the foursome of Tommy Hornbuckle, Billy Taylor, Bob Gregson and Gary Gardner. All three teams scored 66.

The next tournament scheduled for the Cree Meadows course is a benefit scramble Sunday, March 13, for the Ruidoso High School and White Mountain Middle School golf teams.

Police Athletic League selects officials

by Gary Brown
Sports Writer

All systems are go for the new Ruidoso-Lincoln County Police Athletic League (PAL).

The new organization has selected its officials and plans to start several sports almost immediately.

"Right now, we've got wrestling, softball, boxing and basketball," said Mark Paz, treasurer of the local PAL. "We're hopeful of adding more sports in the future."

The Ruidoso Police Department (RPD) will oversee the program. RPD chief Richard Swenor is the president of the PAL program, while Lincoln County sheriff Tom Sullivan is the vice-president. Pam Graves, the new Ruidoso Parks and Recreation director, is the PAL secretary.

The PAL plans to finance its program by holding fund-raisers and receiving donations. It plans to name its board of directors within the next few weeks.

Paz, the assistant wrestling coach at Ruidoso High School, is optimistic the PAL program can succeed.

"This will help local sports a great deal," he said. "The coaches at Ruidoso High School are very interested in it and we hope to have a good community following. We hope to get all the towns in Lincoln County involved in the program."

"I understand Hondo has an excellent youth sports program and it can only improve with the PAL. This will also help youth sports in Carrizozo and Capitan."

Besides the sports the PAL has already organized, it also hopes to get an adult basketball league started and more involvement from local softball teams.

"A couple of the local fast-pitch softball teams have joined the PAL," Paz remarked. "They may start going to more tournaments around the state and belonging to the PAL may help our chances of staging some tournaments here."

According to Paz and Swenor, the main purpose of the PAL is to initiate and sponsor a sound amateur athletic program and other activities and to promote a constructive, community youth-oriented relationship between the Ruidoso-Lincoln County law enforcement agencies and the youth of the county communities.

"The PAL programs won't be restricted to just team sports," Swenor said. "Almost any kind of activity can be involved. For example, a man called me up yesterday and asked if he could conduct a class on making files for fishing."

There are several PAL programs in New Mexico, the largest being Albuquerque's. Several other smaller communities have programs with one or two activities.

"Most communities start out in PAL with just one sport," Paz said. "For example, Roswell has a good PAL boxing program. As far I know, we're the only PAL program that is starting out with several sports activities."

Paz and Swenor stressed the fact that anyone who wants to volunteer their services as a coach or member should contact them.

"We need all the coaches we can get," Paz said. "The more coaches we get, the better, particularly in different activities."

The local PAL program will hold its next meeting, Tuesday, April 5, at village hall.

SPIKING THE BALL. Joy Fowler (in dark shirt) hits the ball during a Ruidoso Women's Volleyball League session Saturday in the White Mountain Middle School gymnasium. Several local women have been playing volleyball in the White Mountain gymnasium for the past month. The women are hopeful of getting a competitive league soon.

Learning the basics of gymnastics at an early age

HERE'S HOW WE DO IT. Margi Porch shows her two-year-old daughter, Bonney, how to tumble on a mat during the mother and tot gymnastics class at the Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy (RGA) Tuesday. RGA director Tom Hart teaches the class. Most of the children are three years old or younger. They learn the basics of gymnastics.

Mother and tot gymnastics is one of the newest and most creative classes to be offered at the Ruidoso Gymnastics Academy (RGA).

The class, which is taught by RGA director Tom Hart from 11 a.m. to noon every Tuesday, is for mothers and pre-school children. Most of the children are three years old or younger.

"We just try and teach the kids the basic skills of gymnastics," Hart said. "It's also a good way for the children to socialize, get to know the other kids and get to know me."

Usually about six or seven parents show up for the class with their children. The children learn the basics of tumbling, the trampoline and other simple forms of gymnastics.

The mothers of the youngsters try to encourage their children by assisting them on the mats.

Hart has established one of the better youth gymnastics programs in New Mexico. Who knows? Maybe some of the tots in the Tuesday class will rank among the best teenage gymnasts in the state 10 years from now.

CLUB SPIRIT that has developed over the first two years of the Ruidoso Pilot Club's existence helps the women enjoy meetings more and serve the community better, said president Sharon Mitchell. Here, Ed

Hyman prepares to give his program on radio broadcasting as the women finish their dinners at K-Bob's, their regular meeting place.

Direct service Pilot Club goal

"It's not the money, it's the time that members put in," said Pilot Club co-founder Deanna Wright. Although the club has donated money to a number of local organizations, Wright and current president Sharon Mitchell believe direct service is more valuable to the community and Pilot Club members.

"With direct service, rather than fund raisers followed by cash assistance, our members will be stimulated by a deeper understanding of people and self," said Mitchell. This, Mitchell believes, makes members "fuller, more knowledgeable people who are more capable of giving and service."

Soliciting and collecting contingency prizes and trophies for the Ruidoso Motorcycle Festival is an example of the direct service the club provides. Club members contacted businesses throughout Ruidoso and collected over 150 prizes that were distributed to participants in the festival. Club members also operated a food booth all hours that the festival tent was open.

The Pilot International Foundation encourages individual Pilot Clubs to work with the handicapped and help remove handicapping conditions and attitudinal barriers in the community.

The Ruidoso club served a breakfast for the recent Winter Special Olympics and donated clothes and art supplies to Fort Stanton Hospital and Training School. Members also took residents of the Ruidoso Care Center to the Ruidoso Summer Festival in 1981.

Rosemary Gann, president-elect, said she belongs to the club because it accomplishes the goals it sets for itself.

"It is an unwritten rule that no club endorses a project, however meritorious, unless the club is prepared to assume its full share of responsibility for the successful accomplishment of that project," states the Pilot Club handbook. "It is from this united effort that Pilot has earned its reputation for success."

Charlotte Hill said she enjoys being a member of the Pilot Club because, although it is a small club, it gets a lot done.

A number of members also mentioned the fact that when money is donated, it goes to local causes that keep dollars in the community.

The club has donated money to Lincoln County Home Health Services, Zia Girl Scouts, Ruidoso Public Library, Ruidoso Care Center Auxiliary Van Fund and the Ruidoso High Close-Up program.

The club raised much of its operating funds with a Lot Give-a-way last summer, raffling off a vacant lot valued at approximately $15,000. The club also raised money by sponsoring a Fashion Show last summer.

The Pilot Club of Ruidoso was chartered November 22, 1980, by the Pilot Club of El Paso.

"Our first two years involved achieving a club spirit and recognition, both from the community and ourselves," said Mitchell. She defines club spirit as a feeling of friendship and leadership among the club members. As club members get to know each other, the club becomes a more enjoyable part of their lives and they are more willing to work together on club projects, said Mitchell.

In the same manner that a new club must be sponsored by an existing club, new members must be recommended by two members of good standing.

"Members are self-supporting women of high moral and business standing, actively identified with the business or professional interests of the community," states the handbook.

A group of 40 business women founded the Pilot Club International in Macon, Georgia, in 1921. It was soon after World War I and the granting of voting rights to women. According to the handbook, the founders decided that the time had come to assume responsibility in their communities.

The name Pilot refers to harbor and river boat pilots who conducted ships through waterways, guiding them safely to anchorage. The emblem of the pilot's wheel is a symbol of the pilot, a leader and guide.

The colors of the club are green and gold. Green stands for life and vigor while gold represents sincerity of purpose.

The Ruidoso Pilot Club meets the first and third Tuesday of every month at 7 p.m. at K-Bob's restaurant. The first Tuesday is a business meeting only, and the third Tuesday a program is presented.

Ceramic Types of The Tularosa Basin

POTTERY USED BY ANCIENT INDIANS came in many styles at different times and places. Archaeologists can tell when a tribe inhabited an area by the types of pottery they find at old habitations.

PIECES OF THE PUZZLE. Once the archaeological dig is finished, months can be spent examining and analyzing the pottery and stoneware found. Using the information the artifacts provide, archaeologists try to fit the specific site into the greater puzzle of prehistoric Indian cultures.

Understanding archaeological puzzle slow and meticulous work

"The dirt doesn't lie," said archaeologist Terry Del Bene as he stood in the middle of an Indian house close to 1,000 years old. The key, however, is understanding what it's saying.

"The secrets of the past aren't real obvious and you sort of have to wring it out," Del Bene continued.

Del Bene and Allen Rorex have been trying to wring the secrets of prehistoric Indians out of a section of dirt next to Highway 70, east of Mescalero, for four months.

It was, in fact, the expansion to four lanes of Highway 70 that brought Del Bene, Rorex and their crew to the archaeological site. Any time people plan construction that will disturb federally administered lands, a cultural survey of the land is required by law, said Bill Streeter, environmentalist for the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

An archaeologist spotted a "ceramic scatter," a field with many ancient pottery shards, on a bench of land in the proposed path of the highway. Upon further investigation, it appeared there was enough archaeological information to justify a full-scale search. Del Bene and Rorex were called in.

The two archaeologists consider the site important because there have been only a few other ancient habitations found in the area, and knowledge of Indians who lived here before the Apaches is limited.

Del Bene explained that archaeology is an inexact science. Knowledge of former civilizations is gained by combining findings from many sites.

Indians are not particularly fond of archaeology, according to Streeter.

"Most Indians on the reservation look at archaeologists as glorified grave robbers," he said. If the highway expansion were an Indian project, the BIA would probably reroute the road to miss any ruins, Streeter explained.

Since the road is being built by the State Highway Department, it will be carried out as planned. However, due to the Indians' objection to archaeology, Del Bene and Rorex were allowed to dig only in the direct path of the highway. They will also rebury all the artifacts near the site once they have finished examining them.

Using the ceramic scatter and path of the highway as guidelines, the archaeologists had a good idea where to dig first. They don't dig in the same manner as a road crew, however.

The process of uncovering ancient habitations is "slow and meticulous," said Rorex. Del Bene estimated an archaeologist can dig up half a cubic meter of dirt a day when he is moving very fast. Depending upon terrain and features or artifacts in the dirt, the archaeologists use shovels, trowels, dental picks or camel's hair brushes. Digging with a camel's hair brush is not a speedy process.

It is necessary, though, to be very careful when uncovering pieces of pottery. Using knowledge gained over years of digging, Del Bene and Rorex say they can sense when changes in the dirt indicate artifacts near the surface. Changes in the texture of the dirt, its hardness, smell or even sound when tapped tell the archaeologists to use their delicate tools in order not to break surfacing artifacts.

The first step in the process is to dig test pits. Del Bene and Rorex started with three test pits, three feet by three feet, working down 10 centimeters at a time. All the dirt in the test pits and the whole project is sifted through screens with quarter-inch mesh.

Luckily, they came across features in the first pits, said Del Bene. Digging down through the grayish dirt, they discovered a distinct layer of pink dirt that formed a vertical wall in the ground. They continued to remove the grayish dirt while leaving the pink dirt.

"It was like pulling a cast out of a mold," said Del Bene.

Eventually, the archaeological crew uncovered a pit house, six storage bins and two outdoor ovens used by Mogollon Indians. They also found thousands of pieces of pottery and stoneware. There were no intact pieces of pottery, but they did find a couple of grinding stones and numerous arrowheads.

The Mogollon Indians lived in the mountains and valleys of New Mexico from approximately 300 to 1400 A.D. Initially they were a hunting gathering culture, but later developed agricultural techniques. They were the first to produce ceramics and built formalized and elaborate shelters known as pit houses, said Streeter.

Pit houses looked like mud and wood igloos, he explained. The Indians first dug a circular pit one-and-a-half to two feet deep. They then placed wood limbs in holes in the sides of the pit and constructed walls and a roof of smaller branches and mud. There was a hole in the top to let out smoke and a door dug out of the pit at one side.

The pit house dug out by Rorex and Del Bene does not look much like an igloo, though. It is a shallow pit 18 feet wide with a number of five-inch holes around the side. The storage bins around the periphery of the house are deeper and narrower than the pit house.

Rorex and Del Bene can tell about the Indian inhabitants and their lifestyle from the features they have uncovered. The circular structure and pit identify the culture as Mogollon.

Since the pit is circular, Rorex said, the inhabitants probably lived there before the Pueblo influence was very strong. The Pueblos, with their square, surface structures, appeared in the area around 1100, and by 1400, the Mogollon had disappeared.

The two outside ovens indicate the inhabitants did much of their cooking outside and very possibly lived there only during the summers.

The six storage bins were used for the storage of food crops, believes Del Bene. Soil samples have been sent to laboratories for closer examination. Del Bene said he hopes fossilized pollen of summer plants or other botanical evidence will be found to confirm that the inhabitants grew much of their food and lived there only during the summer.

After 100 days of digging and 25 days of delay due to bad weather, the crew finished digging Friday, February 18. The next Monday road crews bulldozed the site into oblivion to make way for the four-lane highway.

"It's kind of a shame it has to go," said Rorex before the road crews approached from both sides.

Lacking the site, the archaeologists still have thousands of pieces of pottery and stone tools stored away for examination over the next month. They have much less than they did, however, due to the theft of one trash can full of pottery and stoneware.

Theft at archaeological sites is a problem. The valuable pottery is often stolen by pot hunters who then sell them illegally to museums. The pottery stolen from the Mescalero site is only shards and not of any value to museums, said Del Bene.

It is valuable to Del Bene and Rorex as a part of the body of work they are doing on the site. They are offering a $100 reward for its return.

What they do have, they will examine closely over the next month at the Mescalero Tribal Museum.

There are more than 10 different types of pottery that Indians used in the Tularosa basin from 900 to 1450 A.D. By identifying which type of pottery was found at the site, Rorex can estimate approximately when the Indians lived in the pit house.

Almost all the pottery found is an unpainted brown pottery. It was an everyday pottery archaeologists believe was used from 900-1350 A.D.

It is the pieces of painted, ceremonial pottery that give a better clue to the time period of the settlement. However, even that is a difficult task.

Dabney Ford, who was acting as a consultant for Rorex and Del Bene, explained that many of the dates for the painted pottery are approximate and unsure. It is trying to figure out the puzzle of this particular site and how it fits into the larger puzzle that is not completely understood, said Ford.

This site is particularly puzzling to the archaeologists. Types of pottery found at other nearby sites have not appeared, and they think this site may have existed earlier than first expected.

Carbon dating of some of the artifacts will help date the site to within 200 years.

There is also a science called dendrochronology that the men hope will date the habitation very precisely. When they first uncovered the pit, the archaeologists found pieces of wood from the original pit houses still in place.

Looking at the tree rings on the pieces, one can tell something about the weather when the tree was living, especially the sequence of wet and dry years. Using what they know about the weather of the period and the sequence of rings on the tree, scientists can sometimes match a tree exactly to a specific time period.

Del Bene and Rorex have sent their wood samples to laboratories for examination. They are hopeful, but not very optimistic, about the chances of a successful dendrochronology test.

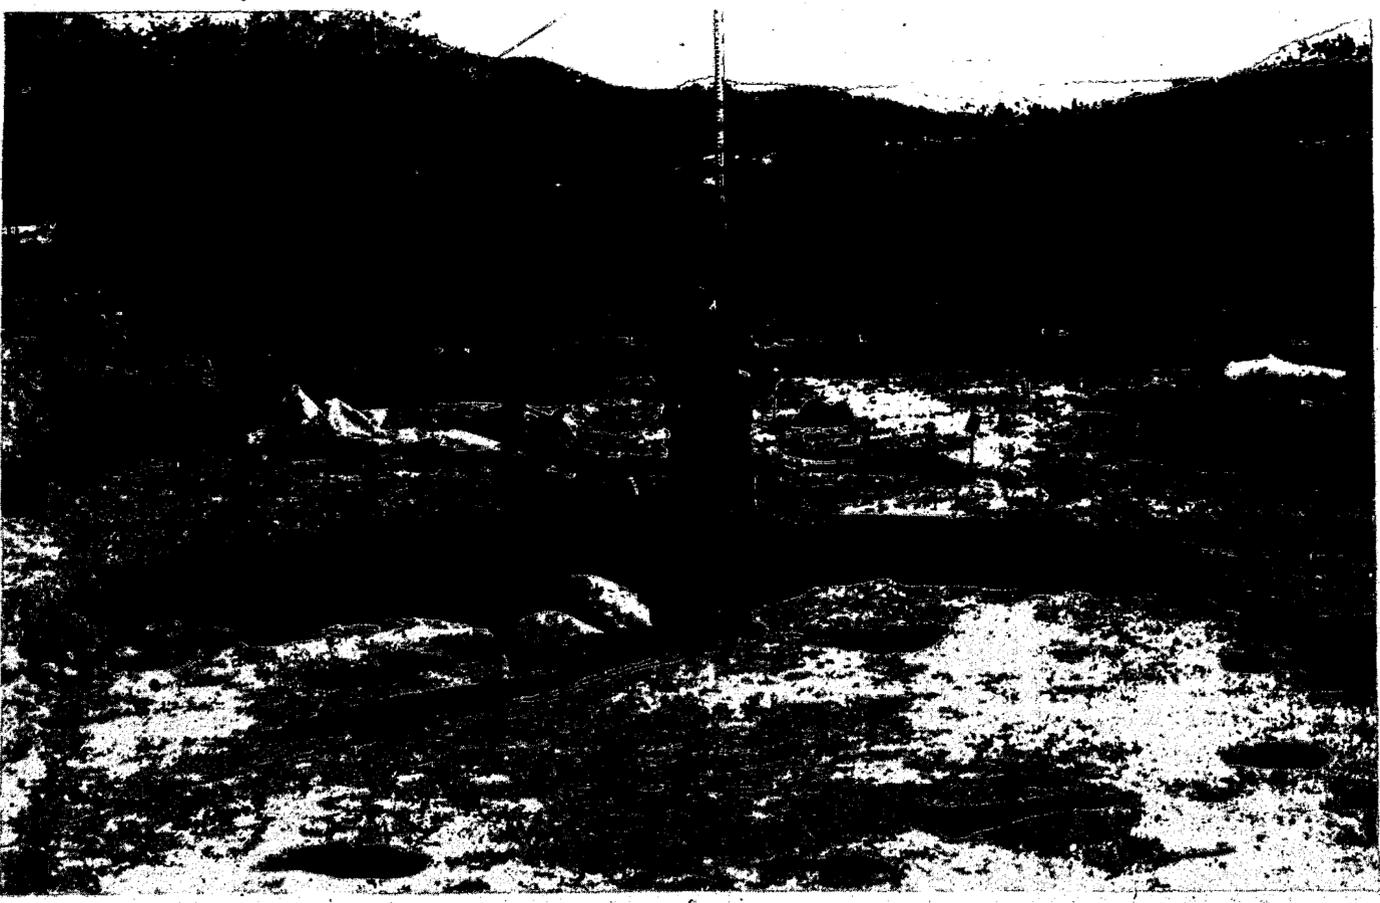

In the meantime, they will be sticking to their microscopes and incomplete puzzle of pottery and stoneware.

Del Bene is concentrating on examining the stoneware. He is examining the types of tools, and also using a process he calls microanalysis. With the help of a powerful microscope, Del Bene can see minute marks on the tools and figure out the nature of their use.

By mapping where the tools were found, Del Bene can tell something about where and how the people worked.

After a month of close examination and analysis, the pair will write a report on the subject, adding one more piece to the ancient Indian puzzle that is slowly taking shape.

MAPPING AN ARCHAEOLOGICAL SITE east of Mescalero is Allen Rorex, who was one of eight archaeologists uncovering a pit house and storage bins used by Mogollon Indians close to 1,000 years ago. Rorex is standing near the edge of the pit house. Holes in the walls indicate where the Indians placed limbs for the framework of the mud and wood house. The door to the house is on the right where the wall is dug out.

THE ACTOR (MICHAEL DAUGHERTY) by Herb Brunell

Photographers honored

Works by Ruidoso photographers Herb Brunell and Mark Bagby were honored at the recent 30th annual convention of the New Mexico Professional Photographers Association.

Six prints by the two men were chosen for showing at the convention. Of about 400 prints submitted, 100 were selected for show. One of Brunell's works, "Aspen," was selected to the top three in the black and white unclassified category. Bagby said he and Brunell were pleased with their first foray into competition. Of nine prints submitted by the pair, six were honored. The prints are currently on display at Timber Trail Photography.

The Silver Lining

BY DANIEL AGNEW STORM

The Mouth of Spring
Like a spirited steed, champing at the bit, prancing, ready to gallop forth, the "Queen of Seasons" waits, but prepares eagerly while waiting, for winter to clear the field, and make way.
This is written to you on March the second, forty years ago to the day, when I and a boat-load of other ocean-weary lads ended a twenty-one day trip from San Francisco, and landed at Brisbane Australia.
That wonderful country is often brought back to mind, most recently by having the honor of making the acquaintance of the charming young lady, the exchange student from Australia, Miss Bernice McLaughlin — a worthy representative of a great people.
The Day of Flying
Cedar Pollen
Along about this time of year you will notice a sudden change in the Cedar, Juniper and Pinon hillsides. Here and there Cedars have turned a burnt orange, and in a few days, the color grows brighter, until a cloud of amber-colored pollen, like a cloud of colored smoke, bursts from the tree and goes flying in the breeze.

Today, just at eleven o'clock on a day of a light cloudy sky, the wind came in from the west after a still morning. About fifteen minutes later I happened to look outside and all the vale was filled with drifting smoke—I thought at first—and then figured maybe it was some of the white sands arriving here on the wind. But no, the wind had not been blowing hard or long enough for this.
Then, from one of the orange colored trees, here springs the little cloud of pinkish-orange pollen. The canyon just south of the house was filled solid so that you could not see anything but the pollen. If you did not know the cause of this, you would be alarmed thinking it was smoke—a sight to make your heart jump into your mouth in this part of the world.
This is the most Cedar pollen I have ever seen all in the air at one time. What does Mother Earth mean by this? — Some kind of good signal, you may be sure.
One More Handful
Of February Birthdays
Ernest McDaniel told me the other day, the twenty-seventh that he had visited his aunt, Mrs. Lola McDaniel of Tularosa on her ninety-fifth birthday on the twenty second of February. Lola is the widow of the distinguished pioneer doctor, Solon McDaniel; and Ernest says his aunt is very youthful and happy, enjoying life greatly.
On the twenty-sixth a reception was held for Mrs. Eula McNatt at the Tularosa community center on the occasion of her ninetieth birthday. Among those present were fifty direct descendants including daughter, Mrs. Tom Babers of San Patricio.

Bert Pfingsten's Birthday
February Twenty-Seven
We come now to a few words about the youngest of this trio, Bert Pfingsten, a mere stripling of eighty-six, practically a teen-ager compared to some pioneers of our neighborhood.
I drifted up the Bonito Valley on the evening of the first of March, and found that Spring has already arrived there. The daffodils were out in full bloom at Clem Weindorf's home, and Mrs. Weindorf gave me a bouquet as a spring-time present.
Up at Bert's home he was resting after a hard day of irrigating, while the golden Currant blossoms bloomed around his doorway cheerful in the last rays of the sun.
Bert was born February twenty-seven, 1897 in the log cabin home of his grandfather Henry Pfingsten, in Bonito City. Bonito City was the center of gold mining along in the nineties, and Bert's Grandfather, a mining engineer and prospector, a native of Germany, had come from Cripple Creek, Colorado to the Bonito Country.

In the early days, Bert says, you could stand on the summit between Bonito Valley and Nogal Valley and see more than a hundred "diggings", most of which is now, "Grown up in brush and haired over."
Bonito City was made up of a hotel, blacksmith shop, Post office, and "Old Man Hoover's general store".
What was once the site of Bonito City is now under the waters of Bonito Dam.
Speaking of Apples
We fell to talking of apples and the future of apple growing. Here in the Ruidoso Valley, the apple industry has slowed down a little during the last few years; but Bert said that the apple business is going stronger than ever nation wide, and that the apples in Lincoln County are making a new beginning.
Bert said last year's national apple crop was one hundred and fifty million bushels. With forty percent of the apples of the country being raised in Washington state, other important apple states are, New York, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Michigan, North and South Carolina and New Mexico.

Around Bert's native home you can still see the apple trees growing and bearing planted "before I was here". He mentioned the old favorite varieties on trees around a hundred years old such as a Northwestern Greening, Pearmain, Black Twig, York Imperial, Wolf River, and Shenango — this last a very popular apple, an early fall variety with the taste something like a Red Delicious.
Among the old orchards mentioned by Bert are Robinson Orchards, Old Man Greir, The Stewart homestead on Eagle Creek.
The Tree of The Future
Bert and his wife, Myrtis, have planted several acres of the apple trees that mankind has been trying to develop since time immemorial — the semi-dwarf. A heavy producer which begins bearing in three years or so, and throws most all of its strength into fruit instead of branches. Mentioning the few varieties that the apple world has simmered down to from the hundreds of days past, Bert said there were some brand new varieties coming out in which he was very interested among which is the "Granny Smith" an apple developed in Australia and New Zealand.

"This apple is catching on like wild fire," Bert said. "In North Carolina one place is planting thirty five hundred acres of this variety." Asked to describe this apple he said it is "Fairly large and green as a Mexican Gourd."
When I remarked that it was nice that Bert was going right ahead with a new start in apple growing, he said, "Yes, I've got no place to go but forward; I've buried everything behind me." That is it right there — the secret of Bert's amazing youthfulness; he always looks forward.

Yours and Ours

Inside The Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE—The Governor and the Speaker of the House invited the state's Indian leaders here last week. Most of them came.

What resulted was an afternoon of talk, from which this writer for one went away with vague feelings of discontent.

Maybe that's just a sign of the White Man's vaunted desire for efficiency. Maybe the sensation of work uncompleted and hopes unfulfilled comes simply from the failure to end the day by passing a resolution which would solve "the Indian problem" once and for all.

But on this topic we do seem to talk and talk and talk without ever getting very far forward.

Nobody, it sometimes seems, has the same understanding as anyone else as to the relative roles of the federal government, of federally protected Indian groups and of state government.

Some say they should be this way, while others disagree most violently.

If anything, the courts have only muddled those relationships to a worse degree.

To some of us, if not to others, it is the concept of Indian tribes and bands as "domestic dependant nations" which is the heart of the confusion.

How can you be, at one and the same time, a sovereign nation and a dependancy?

That question arose time after time as the speech-making in the House chamber went on.

Wendell Chino, as almost always, put the emphasis on sovereignty. He is a trained orator, and he does that well. He also has the experience of having defeated the state in several instances on this precise point, and the confidence of believing that he will do it again.

Peterson Zah, new boss of the Navajos, on the other hand, seemed to swing back and forth from one notion to the other. One moment the non-Indians were being reminded of the Navajos' nationhood, and the other they were hearing a plea for help as from people who were very dependant.

It need hardly be added here that the major source of the confusion on this and other matters at the heart of this unique relationship comes from the inconsistency so long exhibited by the federal government in the matter.

They have shifted from assimilationism on the one hand to protectionism on the other almost as frequently as presidents have changed.

Where they are at the present time is almost impossible to discern.

About all that can be said on that score is that Jim Watt may have done more to unite the tribes and bands than anyone else in recent years.

To raise the questions being pondered here is not to imply that Indians are not sovereign. That point was probably settled in 1831, when Chief Justice John Marshall delivered the opinion in Worcester v. Georgia. The present writer has no view of the Indians as being somehow subjugated by white Americans and therefore subject peoples.

All that is being muddled is this question: How do you work out in practice a balancing of the rights and obligations on both sides in a relationship which appears to be literally unique?

Where there are different views, whose shall prevail?

Who is the arbiter who shall decide? So far, sometimes to the disadvantage of the Indians, it is the United States court systems which make the decisions.

Those have not always been made with the maximum of understanding and sympathy.

Nor has clarity always prevailed. Maybe those people who went home from here last week satisfied that at least we were talking are wiser than the writer. Maybe they appreciate the fact that as long as we converse there is hope.

As Wendell Chino would undoubtedly say, "It beats squing one another."

Letters to the Editor

DEAR EDITOR:

In appreciation of Home Health Services We would like to take advantage of the opportunity your newspaper offers, to thank Verna Adams and her staff at Home Health Services, for the wonderful and compassionate care they have given our mother.

The people of Ruidoso and this County are so very fortunate to have them.

If one has not needed their services, they can not know how very competent and caring they are. We wish to bring to the attention of those assets they have in these people at Home Health Services.

During the recent heavy snow storm, it was so comforting to see Verna tramping through the snow to administer needed care to our mother.

We can return to our home in California now, knowing mother is in excellent hands.
 GRATEFULLY,
 MR & MRS GENE BISHOP

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to respond to a recent letter to you from Gene Garms. I am proud that he wrote that letter because I feel everything he said is true.

I am sure Mr. Garms was not trying to hurt anyone's business but only trying to bring to the attention of the people of Ruidoso that they do not have to put up with a new Wrecker License in that area.

The State Corporation Commission will hold a hearing March 24, at the Corporation Building in Santa Fe, to see if it is justifiable to transfer Mr. Dorman's license from Ruidoso Downs to the Mid-town area. I feel Mr. Dorman should have known when he purchased the Wrecker License from Owens that he was to be based in Ruidoso Downs only. I do not wish to stop Mr. Dorman from receiving his D class License, I just think it should stay in Ruidoso Downs.

If anyone wishes to help on this matter, he may contact:
 Frank Smith
 State Corporation Commission
 Drawer 1269
 Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501
 or they may call 378-8324

SINCERELY,
 LEANNA DERHAM

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to send my thanks to Mr. Gene Garms for expressing my feelings completely as I should have done in the first place.

And for giving me the incentive to get out and try to avert further blight to the downtown area.

SINCERELY,
 GENE BRICKEL

DEAR EDITOR:

To the Board of Education, Faculty, Coaches, and Warrior Basketball Teams.

We wish to express our thanks to the Board of Education for the rules set down at Ruidoso High School that a student cannot participate in sports unless they have a passing grade, for an education is first and foremost for all.

We wish to express our thanks to the Faculty at Ruidoso for the fortitude and patience of giving those kids an education.

We wish to express our thanks to the coaches at Ruidoso for bringing out their ability to the fullest, and teaching them sportsmanship in a world that truly needs it.

We wish to express our thanks to the Ruidoso Warrior Basketball Teams, and especially the Girls who were never out of a game, and gave of their fullest at all times, and gave us fans thrills that we will not soon forget. You kids are what it is all about—you never stopped trying and gave all that you had. We congratulate you on your season, even though it was not a winning one in the won and lost column. The season to us as fans and parents was an exciting one of close games and overtime, you have nothing to be ashamed of, in fact you can be very proud of the way you played and of the sportsmanship you displayed.

SINCERELY,
 BEANIE AND DARLY IVY

DEAR EDITOR:

A good thing happened to us the other day. I wonder how many people in this God Given area take for granted the continual effort put forth by the paid and volunteer peoples of the Village of Ruidoso to keep our daily lives going smoothly, even in our smallest needs. Our family cat got stuck 30 feet up a tree. Which wouldn't be much of a concern—cats always climb trees—our cat is on daily medication to control an urinary infection activated by stress, cold and lack of bathroom facilities, and after being quite sure the cat could not get down on his own. I called the Ruidoso Police Dept. Betty there put me in touch with the Animal Control people. Don (Grandpa Grump) Perkins the dispatcher for the truck, went out of their way to find a ladder tall enough to let Steve get close to the cat. The Ruidoso fire dept. came to their aid with their 40 foot extension ladder. So with the help of Barry Cole and Eddie Espinosa of the fire dept. Our family cat was returned to the ground after a little over 24 hours. I wish to thank these five people who went the extra distance for us and to say that a community is something really special when it has people who care.

THANK YOU
 LAURA CHRISTENSEN

Editorial

"A small step for Pam Graves, a giant step for the Village of Ruidoso."

Maybe Pam, Ruidoso's first parks and recreation director, should utter those words for posterity when she reports to work at village hall March 15.

The creation of a parks and recreation department is a giant step for Ruidoso. It is an indication of a municipality's maturity when its officials recognize that recreation is a vital service—just like water, sewer, roads and police and fire protection.

A factor in Graves' selection for the director's position was her compiling of a list of immediate and long-range goals for the new department. She has indicated she will seek public input as the department is organized; and plans call for circulation of a questionnaire on parks and recreation needs.

Public input, in the form of large numbers of people attending the village council for creation of the department, was responsible for creation of the department. We hope that tradition of public involvement continues.

It is exciting to think that Ruidoso is on the threshold of a time that could see changes which would alter the physical character—with more parks—and the personality—with more recreational opportunities—of our community.

We congratulate Pam Graves, and we commend the village council for creating this important department.—TP

Sense & Nonsense

U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici

Folks in the upper Midwest speak with pride of the Great Lakes, considered together to be the largest body of fresh water in the world. But we in New Mexico can brag about something even bigger than that—the Ogallala Aquifer.

If we consider the size of this underground water formation, largest in North America, it is enormous. In New Mexico it covers six counties—Union, Harding, Quay, Curry, Roosevelt and Lea—and covers parts of five other states; Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

I have been concerned about this vital aquifer since I took office more than 10 years ago. In 1976, I joined with several other Senators in authorizing a study of this aquifer, coordinated by the Commerce Department, on the serious problem of its depletion.

Recently, we received this report and the news is not good. The report warns and emphasizes that we must act now to save the productive agriculture area around the Ogallala.

Several recommendations were made in the report to save the Ogallala. These included water conservation practices encouraged through research and development of new technologies to get the most in agricultural production from the least amount of water. There would also have to be a concerted effort, through funding, for market development of water-efficient irrigation techniques, soil conservation management systems and use of other water supplies than the Ogallala.

The report recommends increasing the quantity and quality of the water supply in the area covered by the Ogallala Aquifer. Increased research and development funding would be used to continue studying the feasibility of regional water transfer and monitoring groundwater quality and quantity.

Finally, there must be a maintenance and protection of the environment of the Ogallala Aquifer. The report recommends that we must develop new cropping systems, and the planting of vegetation through the area to conserve soil and water resources.

In short, the report recommended that we take action now to solve this very serious problem of the depletion of our groundwater supply in the Ogallala Aquifer. This is not a problem that will be solved in that time frame. We need concrete, long-range plans that will help us to utilize the benefits this vast aquifer has given us while at the same time preserving and replenishing its supply so that our children and our children's children can make use of this abundant groundwater resource.

I will be working through my position on the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, which oversees water projects, to address this problem. It will be very difficult.

This report outlines the crisis we face if we do nothing about the Ogallala Aquifer. It is not often that we get warning of a crisis before it happens and we must not waste this opportunity.

FINGERPRINTING CHILDREN

Something seems awry when hundreds of New Jersey youngsters of grade-school age are lining up to be fingerprinted by sheriff's deputies. We associate fingerprinting with, at best, an intrusion into our privacy or, at worst, being a suspect in a crime.

But there are good reasons why parents have decided to take the fingerprints of their children in a voluntary program sponsored by the Union County, N.M., sheriff's office. An undersheriff developed the program after reading a magazine article about the difficulty of locating and identifying missing children.

The fingerprint card will remain in the possession of parents, so there is no invasion of privacy or amassing of a government file. But if anything happens to the children—a kidnapping, runaway, or other disappearance—the fingerprint record could be of significant value.

It is appalling that 100,000 minor children simply disappear from their homes in America every year. Fingerprints supplied by parents to law enforcement agencies could help locate or identify the missing.

The program in New Jersey deserves study by parents, school officials and police authorities in other communities as well.—News Bulletin, Valencia County

THIS MAN IS A HIGH-STEPPER

Al Waquie of Remez must really mystify the famous runners of the world. Waquie rarely ventures out of his native New Mexico, but when he does he usually doesn't lose.

Waquie, a forest ranger, won the sixth annual Empire State Building Run in New York City. He ran up 88 flights of stairs in 11 minutes, 36 seconds. His other best-known out-of-state victories have come in the Pikes Peak Marathon, which he has won the last two years.

But running steps is nothing new to Waquie, who practically owns the title of the annual La Luz Trail Race up the west face of the Sandia Mountains. The final phase of La Luz is up a particularly grueling incline known as "The Steps." The final phase of Pikes Peak is called "The 16 Golden Stairs."

Fitting, then, that this New Mexican-gaining-fame should win the biggest step-race in the world.—Albuquerque Journal

by Billy Allstetter

Last weekend Lois and I ventured down to Alamogordo for a taste of the big city and flatland life.

The first thing we noticed as we climbed out of the car was the warm silky air and wide open spaces. The late afternoon light and shirt sleeve weather made me think of the long summer days approaching.

Of course before we get to those, we have to make it through this next storm that just battered California. After the fine sunny weather recently, the thought of another seige of soggy snow and muddy streets is hardly appealing.

I figure Ruidoso will be a great archaeological find some day. It will all be well preserved because within weeks of the time civilization stops, the mud that runs down the hills and across our streets will cover the town and preserve it as a classic example of burgeoning tourism in America.

When you're feeling bad about all the snow and mud here, think about the fate of my mother living in the rain-soaked San Francisco area; it has been raining so much there she has recently contracted swimmer's ear, in spite of not swimming since last summer.

But back to the dry desert around Alamogordo, stretching out for miles in all directions; sort of a relief from creeping canyon fever I occasionally experience up here.

Standing in the wide open spaces of that shopping mall parking lot, our attention was soon drawn to the large sign above us advertising the five movies showing that night.

We were delighted and overwhelmed at the attractive choice. Four of the five movies had six or more academy award nominations. We hardly knew which movie to watch, and which we had arrived early enough to watch two of them.

I only wish I could say the same thing for our local offerings. I may just be a spoiled movie viewer from a teeming metropolis, but it sure seems this town could support a few more high quality movies.

Not to say that we don't get good movies once in a while. But during the months between Officer and a Gentleman and E.T., we have to wade through so much stuff like Tex, Sylvester Stallone's latest bloodthirsty movie, and cartoon fantasies. True, there is a crowd who likes these movies, but I also think there is a large moviegoing crowd who would like to see slightly more sophisticated movies.

I spent some time talking to the manager one night, and it seems she has little choice in the movies that come to our theatre. They are selected by a man in El Paso. She also pointed out that a movie like Tootsie costs a bundle to get here and would take ages to pay off.

A few more people might come to the theatre and pay for the movie if they knew what was showing, and weren't terrified their car was going to disappear in one of the ravines in that parking lot.

I can understand that a town the size of Ruidoso might not be able to support high-priced movies all the time, but what about the tourists? They support the rest of the town.

I would guess not one in 20 tourists even knows the movie theatre exists. The News advertising manager, Carmen, said she has talked repeatedly to the management about running an ad. She said the local managers have been enthusiastic but the upper echelons in El Paso always nix the deal.

Have you ever heard of a movie theatre not advertising? The Alamogordo Cinema 5 runs a seven-column-inch ad showing the five movies available there. If the theatre here ran a three-column-inch ad once a week, three more people coming to the movies would pay for the ad.

How about some of the older classics? An old black and white Alfred Hitchcock or Humphrey Bogart movie must be cheaper than Tootsie or Gandhi.

Some friends were recently talking about a movie festival. It would be really neat to have a week of Bogart or Hitchcock or science fiction movies, wouldn't it? Would that even have to be done through the theatre? Last meeting I was at, the Ruidoso Little Theatre was looking for new projects.

Rumor has it that our theatre is a tax write-off for someone from El Paso. With the amount of effort put into getting popular movies and attracting the visiting tourists—i.e., little or none—it wouldn't be hard to believe. It's a shame.

ART, DINING AND ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

ENMU giving Ruidoso students exposure to fine arts programs

In recent weeks Ruidoso students have had the opportunity to experience art in many forms from Eastern New Mexico University (ENMU). This series is made possible by a federally funded project, Chapter II, which is being piloted this spring in the Ruidoso Public Schools.

The first phase of the project involved a group of nearly 40 students who traveled to Portales to see the ENMU Theatre, Music Theatre and Dance production of "Fiddler on the Roof", February 20. The three-hour production involved nearly 100 performers, designers, musicians and technicians. The performance provided the Ruidoso students with the opportunity to see, in its finished form, how the mounting of such a large show takes place.

Accompanied by instructor, Danny Flores, the group visited the backstage area and talked with performers following the production. Ruidoso students involved in the Portales trip are making preliminary plans to mount the musical, "Pinan's Rainbow", in Ruidoso next fall.

The second phase of the Chapter II-ENMU Arts project was the visit of ENMU School of Music faculty members, Merrily Cage and William Wood, Cage, who is an instructor of voice, spent a day working with high school students on vocal solos in preparation for the district solo and ensemble contest in Alamogordo in March. Each of the 25 students sang individually for Cage. They had the opportunity to observe each other and gain knowledge of how to approach many vocal problems.

Wood, coordinator of the ENMU music education program, spent the day at Nob Hill and White Mountain Elementary Schools. Students worked with various instruments, body movement and music, singing and rhythmic speech ensembles. Wood also provided an in-service clinic for teachers on techniques for developing students' rhythmic skills, particularly as it relates to language arts.

The third phase of this arts project is the presentation of the ENMU Children's Theatre production of "Mostly Mushrooms" at Nob Hill School and White Mountain Elementary Schools. "Mostly Mushrooms" was written by an Eastern New Mexico University graduate student in English, Martha Ryan, and is directed by ENMU special instructor in theatre Kathy Cioffi. Ryan pits the good guys, the Woodsies, against the bad guys, the Buggles, to teach lessons in self-confidence and over-confidence. Six actors perform the 10 roles in "Mostly Mushrooms" while the children sit on the floor around the playing area.

These diverse kinds of individual and group art experiences broaden students' awareness and understanding of the fine art. It increases their appreciation of artistic endeavor.

THE 31 CONTESTANTS in the Miss Mexico-USA Pageant were guests at Sunland Park's administrative assistant, served as one of the eight judges in the Pageant, February 26, in Las Cruces. February 20. Bill Thomas, Sunland Park's ad-

Ruidoso Downs schedule announced

Ruidoso Downs has been given permission by the New Mexico State Racing Commission to conduct a 74-day horse race season this year.

"We're grateful for the Commission's approval of our dates," said Donald F. Smith, Ruidoso Downs general manager. "We hope we have an attractive racing schedule which will accommodate our patrons, horsemen and owners."

LEWIS GERMANY HAS BEEN ON a sensational winning streak this past week at Sunland Park. The El Paso trainer saddled six consecutive winners from Monday through Friday. Following saddling Atum Sam to a third-place finish in the eighth race on February 20, Germany started his streak with three winners from three tries on Monday's special holiday program at the west El Paso track. He won the tenth with Bayou TD Request ($4.00), took the 11th with Tough Tillie ($3.60) and then won the 12th with Fabulous Too ($4.00). On Friday, he was also three for three, scoring victories with Barney K. ($6.80) in the fourth, King Mathias ($4.40) in the sixth and Atum Sam ($4.80) in the ninth. He didn't enter a horse on Saturday and the streak ended in Sunday's sixth race when Chosen Moon ran second. Jockey Rubin Miranda rode all the winners. Germany has saddled 109 mounts this season, tallying 22 triumphs with 16 seconds and 16 thirds for an excellent winning percentage of 201.

VETERAN JOCKEY LARRY BYERS has also been on a tremendous winning streak. From February 18 through Sunday, he won on nine of 10 mounts and was a close second and third on his two losing mounts. Winners included Truckles Rocket ($7.80) on February 18, Shes Glory Bound ($4.60) and Homing Jet ($8.20) on February 19 and Fanciful Sinn ($8.40) and Shruvine Sinn ($5.00) on February 21. Over the past weekend, he tallied wins on Friday on Feature Going ($6.40) and Bent Blast ($51.40) and on Sunday won with Homing Jet ($7.00) and Feature First ($18.20). He is steadily moving up the jockey ladder at the west El Paso track.

PEDRO BENITEZ WON two consecutive races on Sunday's program. He took the eighth on Rushing Silver ($11.20) for trainer Harold E. Nolen and then captured the ninth on Dandy Socks ($8.80) for trainer Clifford C. Lambert. Benitez later took the 12th on Agua Grande ($22.20) to post his first riding triple this season at Sunland Park.

WINNING POST POSITIONS: No. 1 — 64 wins, No. 2 — 68, No. 3 — 88, No. 4 — 77, No. 5 — 78, No. 6 — 68, No. 7 — 70, No. 8 — 46, No. 9 — 38, No. 10 — 43, No. 11 — 6, No. 12 — 6.

THROUGH 57 RACE DAYS this season, the average daily mutuel handle continues to show a modest gain over last year's corresponding figure. The current daily average mutuel handle of $333,201 is 2.59 percent higher than the corresponding figure in 1982 of $324,764. The total mutuel handle of $18,992,509 is $480,971 higher than last year's corresponding figure of $18,511,538.

IN STEWARDS' RULINGS:
 Jockey Mike Lidberg was suspended three racing days (February 25-27) for careless riding on Kellys Patch, who was disqualified from first and placed tenth, for interference in the first race on February 21.

FRIDAY'S DAILY DOUBLE was the lowest this season. Little Will ($5.00) won the first race under Vickie Smallwood while Dark River ($5.00) won the second under Dale Cordova. The 10-1 combination returned $17.40. The previous lowest daily double was $17.80 on Sunday, November 14 with Jacodema Bars and Songman Flight.

THE WELL-BRED KING MATHIAS broke his maiden in only his second outing while winning Friday's sixth race by four lengths. The Virginia-bred two-year-old is by Annihilate 'Em, who won the 1973 Travers Stakes at Saratoga, out of a Decidedly mare, Decided Effort. He ran second in his career debut on February 19 in a five and one-half furlong sprint and then easily captured Friday's mile chase. Jockey Rubin Miranda rode King Mathias in both starts for trainer Lewis L. Germany and owner Milton M. Bronson of Los Angeles, California.

TRAINER CLIFTON DEAN and jockey Larry Byers combined to win two races on Friday's program. They began with Feature Going ($6.40) in the third for owner Sam F. Henderson of Odessa, Texas, and captured the fifth with Bent Blast ($51.40) for owners Barbara F. Bingham of Seminole, Texas.

APPRENTICE JOCKEY DALE CORDOVA won two straight races on Saturday's program. He began with Time For J. D. ($9.20) in the eighth race for trainer Ike Danley and then took the ninth aboard He Is A Dancer ($6.00) as a substitute rider for F. O. Martinez.

FEBRUARY'S RECIPIENT of the Barn-Of-The-Month award is Walter Miller. The award is given each month at Sunland Park by the Horsewomen United to the best barn. The blankets are sponsored by the Ho-Jo Farms.

Damberod in neck win over Depth Rule

Damberod survived a furious stretch battle to defeat Depth Ruler in Friday's featured race at Sunland Park.

The three-year-old Amber Herod gelding received a nifty ride by apprentice David Lidberg en route to the neck win in 1:41.3-5 for the mile course. The allowance chase lured seven three-year-olds running for a purse of $3,200.

Rhyme Rullah, the 3-5 wagering favorite under Joe Martinez, broke sharply at the start and opened a clear lead around the clubhouse turn. Damberod was right behind in second place. Down the backstretch, Rhyme Rullah was still in front, although the margin was dwindling.

As the field turned into the stretch, Rhyme Rullah was tiring rapidly while it was strictly a two-horse between Depth Ruler and Damberod. Through the final strides, Damberod gradually pulled away to record his first triumph in four outings this year.

As a $6.50-1 wagering risk, Damberod returned $15.00, $4.60 and $4.20. Depth Ruler, ridden by F. O. Martinez and coupled with Gainstap as part of a John Danley-trained entry, paid $3.80 and $3.20 for running. The entry was the 5-2 second wagering favorite.

Mighty Elrey passed the tiring Rhyme Rullah and finished third, almost five lengths behind Depth Ruler. Mighty Elrey, ridden by Brent Overton, showed for $3.60.

Rhyme Rullah was fourth. Trained by J. Doyal Roberts, Damberod is owned by R. Elvanna Davis of Spearman, Texas. It was the gelding's third lifetime win with six seconds and three thirds in 21 career appearances.

Micky Mouse Dancer stakes winner

Micky Mouse Dancer stormed through the stretch to capture Sunday's featured El Paso County Claiming Stakes at Sunland Park.

Under a masterful ride by veteran rider Joe Martinez, the nine-year-old Happy Gondolier horse toured the six furlongs in 1:12.3-5. The race drew nine three-year-old and older horses running under handicap weights for a purse of $4,750.

Martinez held Micky Mouse Dancer back at the break and grabbed the inside position as the field started down the backside. It was a three-horse battle for the lead with Baffle You, La Ville and the wagering favorite Tylers Deal in contention.

Martinez soon started moving Micky Mouse Dancer up on the inside. As Micky Mouse Dancer started his rapid late move, he gradually overtook Baffle You, who had taken a clear lead inside the furlong pole.

But through the final strides, Micky Mouse Dancer pulled away and scored a widening one and one-fourth length victory.

As the $2,901 second wagering selection, Micky Mouse Dancer returned $7.80, $4.20 and $2.80. Baffle You, ridden by Larry Urioste, ran second and paid $5.20 and $2.60. Tylers Deal, the $2,701 favorite, ridden by Pedro Benitez, and a neck behind Baffle You, showed for $2.60.

Paso Lester, one length behind Tylers Deal and ridden by David Lidberg, was fourth.

The victory was the 14th career win for Micky Mouse Dancer, who also has 12 seconds and eight thirds in 108 outings. With the $2,850 he collected for Sunday's win, Micky Mouse Dancer's lifetime bankroll moved to $36,918.

Trained by Barry H. Germany, Micky Mouse Dancer is owned by Carlos Cabello Jr. of Sunland Park.

DANCING HOME. Micky Mouse Dancer roars across the finish line with a one and one-fourth lead in Sunday's featured El Paso County Claiming Stakes at Sunland Park. Joe Martinez is the winning rider.

HAPPY WINNERS. Antonio Martinez, a member of the Sunland Park concessions department, is between the happy connections on Micky Mouse Dancer in the winner's circle at Sunland Park after Sunday's featured El Paso County Claiming Stakes. Texab edges Dr. Gaddis under Webb Texab rallied from far back to post a narrow win over favored Dr. Gaddis in Saturday's featured race at Sunland Park. The five-year-old Fisa gelding was in the middle of the pack under a well-judged ride by Harla Webb during most of the five and one-half furlong chase. Through the stretch, Texab started roaring on the outside and caught Dr. Gaddis by a nose at the end.

Ho Chi's Star took the early lead in the chase which attracted nine four-year-old and older horses running for a claiming price of $8,000. Dr. Gaddis, under apprentice Rebecca Thompson, was a close second.

As the field turned for home, Ho Chi's Star was still slightly ahead. But Dr. Gaddis soon assumed command and opened a clear lead with a furlong remaining.

Texab's late move however, in 1:06.25 was the decider. As a $11,001 outsider, Texab returned $23.00, $4.80 and $4.80. Dr. Gaddis, the 3-5 wagering choice, paid $2.60 and $2.60. Jackie Splash, ridden by Angel Jacobo and a head behind Dr. Gaddis, showed for $3.80.

Trained by Johnnie L. Jamison, Texab is owned by the estate of Vera H. Lewis of Clarendon, Texas.

The triumph was Texab's fifth with six seconds and three thirds in 29 lifetime appearances. The $1,680 winner's share boosted his lifetime bankroll to $14,473.
