A bad brake

A cement truck overturned Wednesday afternoon in Camelot Subdivision when the brakes reportedly failed on a steep downgrade on Crown Drive. The driver, David Williamson, 29, was listed in satisfactory condition Thursday morning at Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital.

under observation. Emergency Medical Service (EMS) personnel, Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs Fire Departments and the Ruidoso Police Department responded to the call and worked for over an hour extricating the driver from the truck.

Council postpones R-2 zoning action

by TIM PALMER

Acting on the advice of village attorney Dee Huckstep, the Ruidoso village council scheduled a public hearing on a proposed rezoning at its next regular meeting, rather than considering the issue Tuesday.

Several persons went to Tuesday's council meeting prepared to discuss a request from LaVenia Gardner to rezone a tract of land in Palmer Gateway subdivision from R-1 (single family residential) to R-2 (multi-family residential). The rezoning, required for Gardner's proposed nine-unit apartment project, was approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) August 1.

Two letters requesting postponement of council action were acknowledged. Huckstep said these constituted an appeal, and that by ordinance the council must set a public hearing on the appeal. It was decided the hearing will take place at the August 30 council meeting.

Also Tuesday, the council voted to place on the P&Z agenda Roy Proppner's request that land on White Mountain Drive be utilized for a bicycle motocross track. Proppner presented a film on the sport at the pre-meeting study session.

He said the property, located across the street from the end of the airport runway, is currently an "eyesore" and is used by motorcycles. Developing the land as a park for bicycle motocross would provide "a commendable form of recreation" for kids, he said.

Councilmen Benny Coulston said he was impressed by the film, but voiced concern about traffic near the runway. Planning and zoning enforcement officer Paul Davis said a conditional use permit would be required, and that neighboring property owners would have to be advised of the proposed use.

Coulston commented that "the rules and regulations that we put on the people also strangle us along with them." Proppner was advised to confer with parks and recreation director Pam Graves on the proposal.

The council also voted to place the entire balance of a lodgers' tax revenue certificate of deposit (CD) into the parks and recreation budget. At their last meeting, the council voted to use $15,000 of the nearly $55,000 in the CD toward funding of the U.S. Open pro ski race.

Members voted Tuesday to rescind that action. The $25,000 committed by the village to promotion of the ski race will come from two sources, Coulston announced: $15,000 from the $30,000 in general fund monies transferred to lodgers' tax, and $10,000 from budgeted lodgers' tax revenues.

Councilman Frank Sayner said the action will enable the village to go to the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation and ask for a two-to-one matching grant for development of recreational facilities. Thus the village could end up with over $150,000, he explained.

Four softball fields are included in the proposed recreation complex near the White Mountain schools. Borrowing from the terminology of the sport, Coulston said the village can "knock a home run" by utilizing the money in that way.

In other business, the council: —Agreed to waive the permit fee for the Altreras dog flea market. —Reiterated its support for the Lincoln County Home Builders plan to build shelters at school bus stops.

—Accepted the low bid of $49,992 from High Country Agency on workmen's compensation insurance, with Sayner and Coulston abstaining.

—Was informed by purchasing agent John Cupp that corrugated steel culvert will be rebid due to an error in specifications.

—Accepted the low bid of Moore Business Forms on utility bill forms and computer forms, $3,274 and $2,363.20; and the low bid of Ink Impressions on urgent water notices and village checks, $242 and $849.

—Heard Mayor George White propose Jack Spall for the position of alternate municipal judge, but took no action.

—Heard assistant village manager Frank Potter and Bill Karn report on water production and usage.

—Read into the minutes a letter from the state Finance and Administration Division approving the village budget.

—Authorized Huckstep to draft ordinances concerning parking for handicapped persons and restraining devices for children riding in vehicles.

—Adopted Resolution 83-16, approving transfer of cable television franchise to new owner of Cablevision.

—Heard village manager Jim Hine report that the cemetery board did not like the lone bid on grave openings and closings, but that he recommends continuing with the contractor. Councilman Don Dale suggested Hine find out how other municipalities handle the job, noting the collection rate might be better if the funeral home were responsible for the digging fee. Hine agreed to check.

—Heard Hine recommend that a Lincoln County Humane Society proposal that the village build an animal shelter not be considered until the next fiscal year budget.

—Approved a call for bids on a tractor grass-cutting machine for Parks and Recreation.

—Suggested to Hine that he check with the Board of Education on the status of the school system's contribution to the cost of extending sewer service to the new high school site.

—Heard Councilman Al Junge apologize to Texans and Mississippians for remarks attributed to him. Junge, noting phone calls about his remarks, said next time he criticizes a state it will be Puerto Rico or Alaska. "Those Mississippians—they can get mad," he said. Junge said he is a Louisiana native who lived 60 years in Texas, and documented the fact that he and his wife supported restoration of the Jefferson Davis home in Richmond, Virginia.

Watt says 'no'

Reaction to Interior Secretary James Watt's rejection of Governor Toney Anaya's request for land for the Sierra Blanca regional airport ranged from disappointment at Santa Fe to relief at Las Cruces to anger at Ruidoso.

"They have sounded the death knell for any new airport in the Ruidoso area," said state aviation director Bob White of the decision.

Anaya said he was "terribly disappointed" by Watt's stand, which was expressed in a letter dated Monday. The governor had applied to Watt June 6 for transfer of 1,700 acres from the Bureau of Land Management to the Federal Aviation Administration. The land includes Site B, the preferred site for the airport on Fort Stanton Mesa.

Watt sounded a familiar tune in his letter rejecting the request—that an airport on Site B would endanger New Mexico State University grazing research on the mesa. He expressed willingness to cooperate on utilizing Site A—4 miles west on the mesa—or a "suitable alternative site."

White dismissed Site A, saying, "They're building houses on Site A. It's been subdivided. It's gone." He noted that developers of Rancho Ruidoso notified Watt June 28 that their property on Site A has been withdrawn from consideration as part of an airport site.

Anaya said he instructed his staff to verify the private land has been removed from the market. If it has, the governor noted, there would be grounds for a request to Watt to reconsider his decision on Site B.

Watt cited a National Academy of Sciences study last year that determined the grazing experiments and an airport cannot successfully coexist on Fort Stanton Mesa. The secretary claimed that "all agreed to abide by a third party objective evaluation of the longterm value of grazing experiments..."—a contention the Airport Commission has disputed.

He also expressed concern with the amount of acreage that would be involved.

"While it appears that the acreage required for the airport at site B is trivial (1,700 acres total, 600 acres fenced) compared to the total acres in Fort Stanton (26,000 acres) this is not the case," Watt wrote. "Location and configuration of the proposed airport are the controlling factors, and eventually thousands of acres would actually be affected."

"Secretary Watt has reconfirmed the decisions made over the years," said Gerald Thomas, president of NMSU.

Thomas said NMSU has always supported a new Ruidoso airport and still believes it could be built on Site A.

"I still think it is a viable option," said Thomas, who recommended officials move quickly toward obtaining the land. He said the problem would have been much easier if Ruidoso had moved earlier to acquire that land.

State Senator Charlie Lee said he was not surprised at the decision and that he doubted Anaya's real commitment to the airport. He said he believes Anaya's strong opposition to the Reagan administration's coal leasing program and Waste Isolation Pilot Program have alienated the governor with Watt and the administration.

"I think this is a real personality conflict," said Lee.

He did say, however, that he will be in Washington in September and hopes to discuss the airport with Watt. He said he will try to downplay Anaya's role in the issue and indicate that agricultural interests might not be firm in their opposition to Site B.

In Ruidoso, the recurring sentiment was safety—or the lack of it with the present airport.

Councilman Al Junge said he cannot understand why the grazing experiments are so important next to the "death and destruction" Ruidoso has seen with fatal air crashes.

"I can't understand their rationale on it—I really don't," Junge said. "They just say it's so important—they don't say why."

Fred Heckman, chairman of the Sierra Blanca Airport Commission, called Watt's telegram a "sad decision, sad for our community."

He said he does not know what the commission will do next, and even questioned the need for the commission in light of Watt's decision and lack of any other viable airport site. He did, however, state that the airport will eventually be built.

Ruidoso councilman Frank Sayner said he was sad about the decision and called Watt's reference to Site A an example of "the lack of knowledge that reeks in his office."

Sayner expressed the hope that NMSU regents may be convinced to change their minds.

"The best thing now is for NMSU to come out in favor of Site B," said Sayner. "We've got to see what David King and Governor Anaya can do with the NMSU board of regents. It's back in their lap."

Wilton Howell, who was in the Governor's office when he received Watt's telegram, said the Governor remains committed to a new airport for Ruidoso at Site B. Howell said he asked the Governor what to tell the people in Ruidoso.

"You tell them they are going to get an airport in my administration, and hopefully early in my administration," Howell quoted Anaya.

"Sooner or later we will build an airport on Site B. It's just a matter of how many people will have to die," said Heckman.

Brown opening family practice

by CATHERINE PALMER
Staff Writer

Ruidoso has a new family physician. Dr. Arlene Brown, a native New Mexican, will begin her practice August 15. She will share an office with Dr. Paul Whitman until her new facility is opened at Sierra Professional Center.

Brown specializes in family health—prenatal care, obstetrics, pediatrics, and the general care of adults. She also performs and assists in surgery.

Two areas of family medicine interest the new doctor greatly. She enjoys working with families as they grow and develop, from the young married couple through the parenting process and into old age.

Brown also likes to deal with stress and its effect on health. She feels that stress directly plays a role in many illnesses. Meditation, self-hypnosis and relaxation are some of the techniques Brown teaches her patients. Each individual requires a different technique, she noted.

"The key is to find the right technique for that person," she said.

Born and reared in Los Alamos, Brown attended Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri. Following her college experience, she began a year of research in virology in 1975-76.

In the lab where she worked, a chemical was discovered that "killed viruses with an incredible killing power," she said. She and her colleagues were all immediately put to the task of testing this new substance.

It was tested at the cell level and on animals. When Brown left the lab, the chemical was being prepared for use on humans. It was later modified to become the major treatment for the herpes virus.

In 1976 Brown entered the University of New Mexico medical school in Albuquerque. She graduated in 1980. Following medical school, she began her residency at Good Samaritan Medical Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Her three years of training there enabled her to pass an exam to become a specialist in family medicine.

The specialty places "a lot more emphasis on families as a unit," Brown explained. She learned to work with family interaction and how that affects the individual within the family.

From Milwaukee she came to Ruidoso with her husband of two years, Paul Vordermann. "I wanted to come back to New Mexico—to the mountains," Brown said of her choice of location.

Brown was interviewed by Southwest Community Health Services, the company that runs Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital. The company knew Ruidoso needed another family physician, Brown explained.

The health service brought Brown to Ruidoso to meet the other physicians and get to know the community. Of the other doctors, Brown commented, "I think they're all very good... I've been especially impressed with the quality of medical care that a town this size is capable of having."

She does not believe local doctors are in competition with one another to any great degree. "The most important thing is patient care, and that's what we're all working for," she said.

In Ruidoso, the new physician hopes to become well established and "to practice the best level of medicine I can." She would like to stay here "forever—I hope."

Brown believes that in many ways being a woman will help her as a family practitioner. Many women prefer female doctors, and now that there are two in town, they will have a choice, Brown explained.

"I'm really glad to be here," she said. "I hope it will be a long-term relationship."

Practice makes perfect

workshop participants and instructors will give six free performances for the public during the two-week program. Concerts will be at 8 tonight, Friday and Saturday and on the same days next week, all at First Christian Church.

Capitan to lift tap moratorium if water system progress shown

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

The Capitan village council voted Monday night to lift the moratorium on new water taps by September 1 if specific steps have been taken to improve the water system in time for an August 24 special meeting of the council.

The council also approved Mayor David Cummins' appointment of Norman Renfro to the council. Renfro filled the spot vacated by Cummins when he became mayor after Don Stark's resignation. Benny Coker and Sharon Horton voted for Renfro, while Maggie Trujillo voted against his appointment. Renfro is the owner of the Smokey Bear Motel and Restaurant.

The council will lift the moratorium on new water tap connections if specifications have been drawn up and bids called for on two in-line booster pumps. The pumps' installation is designed to increase pressure for hillside residents who suffer periodic interruptions of water service.

Bids will also have to be called for on a 3,000- to 10,000-gallon storage tank to be placed at a high elevation. The tank will also supply better water pressure to those living on hills.

Village attorney Gary Mitchell must publish a notice of the council's intent to consider raising tap fees from current prices of $350 to $750 in order for the council to lift the moratorium. For the special meeting, he must prepare and recommend a structure for the institution of a planning and zoning commission, with estimated costs.

He must also look into the possibility of selling land belonging to the Eagle Creek Inter-Community Water Supply Association and obtaining half the proceeds for Capitan water system improvements.

The council stated that an unused 100,000-gallon storage tank in town should be put to use immediately.

In order for the moratorium to be lifted, water system information must be assembled in order to apply for grants and loans for water system improvements.

The council passed a resolution lifting the moratorium—provided the steps are taken—after hearing recommendations from two advisory boards, water superintendent David Bernardone and engineer Barry Burke. After hearing the recommendations, the council went into closed session for 40 minutes before passing the resolution.

The Emergency Water Board (EWB), consisting of Jack Pogue, Pat Sullivan, Dorothy Smith and Kelly Beavers, reported to the council about their efforts to find sources of revenue for funding water system improvements.

Smith said Capitan would probably be eligible for a state block grant through the Water Supply Construction Act. She also reported Capitan would very likely be eligible for a loan from the Federal Farmers Home Administration as well as the state Environmental Improvement Division.

Smith said the EWB recommended the council consider raising water connection fees to $1,500 as another method of funding water system improvements.

EWB member Sullivan also mentioned the possibility of selling land belonging to the Eagle Creek Inter-Community Water Users Association. She said the association has some land it is not using and Capitan may be able to use some of the money from the sales to fund water system improvements.

The EWB recommended maintaining the water tap moratorium. The Water Advisory Board (WAB), consisting of Benny Coker, Vernon Goodwin and Kenneth Reamy, recommended lifting the water tap moratorium.

The WAB also recommended the use of the 100,000-gallon tank in town and installation of booster pumps to supply water pressure to Capitan residents living on hills.

The Water Advisory Board emphasized the need to pursue every avenue of financial aid possible, and suggested tax increases may be necessary. WAB chairman Goodwin noted that Benny Coker will be attending the Rural Water Users Association conference in Colorado and may learn more about potential funding.

The WAB also suggested the council carefully observe and protect Capitan's rights with the Eagle Creek Inter-Community Water Supply Association.

After hiring David Bernardone as water superintendent, the council heard his suggestions for water system improvements.

Bernardone, 25, graduated in the spring of 1983 from New Mexico State University's two-year Water Utilities Operation Program with an associate degree. He moved to Capitan last week to take over the position of water superintendent.

Bernardone read numerous engineer's reports from previous years pointing out problems in the village's filter, storage and transmission systems. He especially noted the problems in the filter system, which he said is overworked.

"We're putting too much demand on our filter system," said Bernardone. "The filter is literally ready to come apart in one to two years, in my opinion."

Bernardone suggested renovating the backwash system for the filter plant so that it would use clean water and run only at night during low usage hours. The backwash system cleans the filter plant. While the backwash system is working, no water is being filtered through the system.

He also recommended hooking up the unused 100,000-gallon tank to use for fire fighting and sprinklers at the school. Bernardone said it is the sprinklers at the school which caused problems with water supply inside the school building.

He suggested installing a 10,000-gallon storage tank above the one now in use to help with pressure on the hills.

Bernardone also suggested changing from chlorine treatment to iodine treatment of water. He said the reduced price of iodine treatment would be worth the less desirable taste. Capitan resident Mike Points asked if some people can be allergic to iodine. Bernardone said it might be a problem, and a survey of Capitan residents may be necessary.

Engineer Barry Burke said he needs to know about water rights; where water mains and valves are; meter records; daily filter plant records; village income; and other information before making any recommendations. He said this information must be presented in a coherent preliminary engineering report for grant and loan applications.

Burke and Bernardone said they would like to talk to as many former village employees as possible who know where water lines have been laid. There is currently no complete map of Capitan's water system.

"We need a mapping system," said Bernardone.

The council passed its resolution after considering the recommendations in closed session.

In other business, the council:

- Adopted rules for cemetery plots. The plots will sell for $100 each plus a $3 filling fee. No curbs or fences will be permitted around plots. The cemetery board and Village of Capitan will not be liable for resale of plots or refunds. No individual water lines will be allowed.

—Declined to support the Village of Roy's proposed resolutions to be presented at the annual New Mexico Municipal League Conference September 7, 8, and 9.

One resolution calls for the authorization of a recall vote for municipal judges and council members in a mayor/council form of government. The other resolution would make a municipal judge optional in municipalities of less than 3,000 people.

The resolutions are already on the agenda for the conference and councilman Coker said the council will direct its delegates how to vote on the resolutions.

Mayor Cummins plans to attend the conference as Capitan's delegate. Village clerk Virginia Spall will also attend the conference, as an alternate delegate.

—Approved a budget agreement for $2,000 worth of labor to be provided to the Senior Citizen Center free of charge.

—Passed ordinances 83-3 and 83-4 establishing $5 penalty assessment fees to be added to traffic fines and used for jail maintenance.

—Tabled a request to close an easement at the Senior Citizens Center until the village attorney does further research.

—Passed a joinder resolution with the state of New Mexico accepting the conditions and bylaws of the New Mexico Municipal Self-Insurer Fund. The fund supplies workman's compensation insurance for the village.

Ruidoso Downs Municipal Judge Paula Smith takes her position behind the judge's bench after being appointed to the job Monday evening to replace Judge Fred Bernard, who resigned.

Legality of liquor license move question

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Ruidoso Downs trustees were accused of taking illegal action Monday when they approved the transfer of a liquor license subject to approval of the village attorney and state Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC).

Mack Rice of Prime Time Restaurant and Lounge requested the governing body to take such action, after acknowledging there is a difference of opinion between his attorney and village attorney Tim Quigley about the legality of the board's voting on the transfer. Rice said he wants to expedite the proceedings, as the license will bring in revenue, as well as tax dollars to the village.

He asked trustees to grant the mayor authority to approve the license if Quigley and the ABC okay it.

"It is not my intent to jeopardize anything in this village ..." Rice said. "It is my intent to be an asset to this village."

Norman Wheeler said he understood the village attorney wanted the issue removed from the agenda Monday. Mayor J. C. Day acknowledged Quigley had suggested the board not take action on the matter, but Day kept it on the agenda.

A motion was then passed unanimously to approve the transfer subject to Quigley's and ABC's approval. Trustee Jake Harris indicated the action was legitimate because "the ABC is not going to approve anything that is not legal."

Wheeler then called his attorney, Dan Bryant, who later arrived at the meeting to plead with trustees to rescind that approval. Bryant said Quigley had assured him the liquor license hearing would not be on the agenda that evening, and therefore his clients were denied due process.

Bryant also argued the action was "void and illegal" because state statutes provide for governing bodies to consider liquor license transfers only after receiving preliminary approval from ABC. Bryant said he verified with ABC that Ruidoso Downs has not received that preliminary approval.

"You have a strict violation of the liquor control laws and denial of due process to my clients," the attorney claimed. He said the trustees' action approving the transfer subject to other approval is "a circumvention of the clear letter of the law."

Bryant suggested the governing body reconsider its action in order "to avoid needless litigation." The attorney then read aloud the statute regulating the transfer of liquor licenses within a municipality.

"Nothing in there specifically states that what we did was wrong," trustee Harris stated. The trustees refused to reconsider their action upon Bryant's urging.

Quigley confirmed Tuesday that he did voice reservations to Mayor Day about acting on the transfer because of not having received preliminary approval from ABC and because of questions about proper public notice of the hearing. He indicated, however, that he and the village will do everything possible to stand behind the board's action.

Also Monday, trustees accepted the resignation of municipal judge Fred Bernard, effective August 1, and appointed Paula Smith to replace him. Smith had recently been appointed alternate municipal judge.

Bernard explained in his letter of resignation that he objected to being required to pay a court clerk out of his salary. According to village ordinances, Mayor Day explained, the municipal judge is responsible for keeping his books because the ordinance does not provide for the position of court clerk. The judge may elect, however, to pay someone else to keep the books.

Bernard stated in his letter that "any branch of government should be funded by the Village. If the Village council cannot manage the annual budget in a manner to cover all operations of the Village, then I don't feel the Village needs a judicial branch."

Police chief Charles Robinson presented trustees with a police department report for the 1982-83 fiscal year. The report noted a 32 percent increase in arrests over the previous year. Also reported was a 50 percent increase in animal control calls, a 58 percent increase in traffic citations and an increase of 52 percent in traffic and court fines.

Robinson pointed out that the village's incidence of burglaries has dropped from eight to 10 a month to only 10 in the first six months of 1983. He attributed this drop to implementation of 24-hour dispatching service and having a night officer on duty.

Mayor Day commended the department, stating, "I think we've got a topnotch four-man police department down here."

Trustees also approved the list of schools to be attended by dispatchers and officers and authorized Robinson to draft an amended ordinance to include the child-restraint law passed by the state this year.

In other business, trustees:

- Tabled a request for purchase of a porta-pump for the water department.

—Heard from village clerk Wilma Webb that the state auditor will award the bid on an audit for the village.

—Adopted a resolution on hiring a bond attorney for proposed water improvements. That action is required by the Farmers Home Administration for loan approval.

—Heard the mayor suggest trustees begin meeting for a one-hour study session prior to regular meetings. No action was taken on the suggestion.

- Were reminded of the New Mexico Municipal League conference September 7-9.

—Took no action on a request from the Forest Lawn Cemetery Board for funds for fencing.

Hyman, Cape resign Lodgers' Tax Committee

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

Two Lodgers' Tax Committee (LTC) members announced their resignations during Tuesday's meeting at village hall.

LTC chairman Ed Hyman and member Slover Cape said they would resign from the committee as soon as they have approved the advertising budget for fiscal 1983-84.

"I've been there long enough," said Hyman Wednesday. "It's time they had some new blood."

Hyman has been on the committee for five and a half years. He said he turned in his resignation approximately three years ago but it was not accepted.

In addition to his long term on LTC, Hyman cited difficulty of managing a larger committee as a reason for his resignation. LTC will expand from five to nine members as soon as the mayor and council appoint four new members.

Cape said the bigger committee had nothing to do with his decision to resign.

"I feel I've served on it long enough," said Cape Wednesday. "It's somebody else's turn."

The two men announced their resignations in response to a question from village clerk Leon Eggleston. Eggleston said rumors had been floating around about planned resignations of some members. He said he was requested by village councilmen to ask if any LTC members plan to resign, so the village council may make plans to replace them.

Cape and Hyman announced their resignations, while LTC member Archer Wilson made no announcement. Members JoAnn Farris and Clark Carpenter were not at the meeting.

Tommy Morel, Chamber of Commerce vice-president in charge of advertising, said he should be able to present an advertising plan within a week or 10 days. He reported progress the combined Chamber and LTC advertising committee has made in formulating an advertising plan.

He said the committee has decided to concentrate on advertising two seasons. They will allocate 60 percent of the approximately $60,000 available on winter advertising, and 40 percent on summer advertising.

Morel said the committee designated primary and secondary markets using a lodging market analysis available through American Express. The lodging market analysis listed 22 towns whose residents made American Express charges in Ruidoso. Morel said he believes those numbers are indicative of all money spent in Ruidoso.

At a meeting of the advertising committee Monday, members selected Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth, El Paso and Albuquerque as primary markets for winter advertising. They chose Texas cities Odessa-Midland, Lubbock and San Antonio as secondary markets.

The analysis showed El Pasoans were the most frequent chargers during the first quarter of 1982, although they spent the least amount of money per charge.

Residents of Houston were the second most frequent chargers, accounting for 8.14 percent of the American Express charges. Morel said other analyses over the years show Houston consistently in the top five for visitors to Ruidoso.

Dallas-Fort Worth charges were third on the American Express list.

Albuquerque surprised members of the advertising committee and LTC the most, ranking fourth among American Express charges.

"We assume the people in Albuquerque don't come south," said Chamber of Commerce executive director Ed Jungbluth.

Los Angeles, California, was another surprise, accounting for the sixth greatest number of charges. Residents of Los Angeles made more American Express charges than San Antonio, Lubbock or Austin.

Morel suggested possibly advertising in Los Angeles and Phoenix as an experiment. Jungbluth said he would like to try advertising in Tucson again this year after trying for the first time last year.

Morel told LTC that the advertising committee had considered using billboards. At one point committee members had planned to spend the majority of the advertising funds on billboards. Morel said he talked to a number of advertising executives who indicated billboards are generally a secondary advertising medium behind printed material and television.

He said the committee is still waiting for more research information before planning a final advertising strategy.

LTC did approve a "reasonable" expenditure by the Chamber for obtaining preliminary information and services from advertising agencies. Morel and Jungbluth said they will use the local Ad Works Limited agency for some of their work. They will also use larger, more established agencies for information and marketing advice they need.

LTC members also watched a 10-minute film about Bicycle Motocross (BMX) presented by Roy Propner. Propner said he plans to build a local BMX track and hold races. He said Ruidoso could become a part of a racing circuit that now includes Carlsbad, El Paso and Las Cruces.

Propner wanted funds from LTC for help with the construction of the track. Chairman Hyman indicated LTC could not help with the construction costs, but would very possibly fund some advertising for races here.

No more dip

People driving along Gavilan Canyon Road will no longer have to drive through the Rio Ruidoso, thanks to a new bridge built by the street department. Thanks in part to $74,000 contributed by the State Highway Department, Ruidoso has been able to build the new bridge and pave approximately 1.2 miles of Gavilan Canyon Road. Street superintendent Jack LaMay said he hopes the road will be paved all the way to Highway 70 within a month.

P&Z member Hemphill resigns

Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) chairman Greg Masters read the resignation letter of P&Z member Ronnie Hemphill during a special meeting of the commission Wednesday afternoon at village hall.

Hemphill later said he resigned because of time conflicts arising from increased business interests and additional P&Z meetings.

P&Z approved the replat of a tract of land on Highway 37 immediately north of the Munt mart. Greg Carey requested the replat from one lot to two so he can finance the two-phase construction of an office complex.

Masters also announced that he and assistant village manager Frank Potter had talked to representatives of BRW—a planning, engineering and architectural firm.

BRW will do a traffic survey this fall if the village council approves a contract. From the survey, the firm expects to develop a traffic plan that will be the first phase in a new comprehensive plan, said Masters.

Masters and Potter discussed the company's plans for the survey, said Masters.

P&Z enforcement officer Paul Davis told commission members that village attorney Lee Huckstep considers all of their proposed sign ordinance amendments legal. The amendments will be presented to the village council after sufficient public notice of the hearing, said Davis.

'Gifted and talented' program outlined

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Board of Education gave its vote of support Tuesday to a new program for gifted and talented students, after hearing about the plan from program advisor Katherine Finley. The board also received good news about progress on utilities for the new high school.

A four-star model program for the gifted and talented has been designed for the Ruidoso schools, to begin this year, Finley explained. She will act as advisor to instructor Karen Seitz and to a chapter of the Association of the Gifted and Talented, to be organized at a meeting today.

Finley is certified by the National Institute of Leadership of the Gifted and Talented and wrote the original State Plan for Louisiana's Gifted and Talented in 1974. That state now has one of the top three gifted programs in the nation, she noted.

A steering committee, composed of both superintendents, the four school principals, director of special education Karen Tillman, high school diagnostician Sandy Gladden, Seitz and Finley, will oversee the direction of the program.

The four stars making up the program represent (1) the gifted child, identified by state guidelines for testing of intelligence, creativity, critical thinking and academic achievement plus leadership; (2) the support system made up of administration, teachers, parents, government officials and the community, through the Association for the Gifted and Talented; (3) all children, because every student will be exposed to and encouraged to participate in and benefit from the program; (4) the result of a better world in which to live because of the contributions of the highly educated.

The first year of the program will involve gifted children in grades three through eight meeting for one hour a day in a special class with Seitz. Emphasis on identification of the gifted will be in kindergarten through second grade. Gifted students at the high school level will have the option of being involved in honors classes, university courses, independent study, mentor programs and satellite programs.

In the second year of the program, gifted students will no longer be pulled out of regular classes, but an itinerant teacher for the gifted and talented will work directly with classroom teachers. The third year will see the gifted teacher replaced with a coordinator for grades one through 12.

In the program's fourth year, emphasis will be placed on the establishment of a New Mexico State Residential High School for the Gifted and Talented, Finley explained.

In addition to the school-day program, a number of satellite offerings have been scheduled, to focus each month on a different subject area. Some of the planned satellites include a speech clinic or "Olympics of the Mind," a writers conference, Great Books seminar, fine arts workshop and a statewide leadership camp.

Finley said the program will be reviewed and rewritten at the end of this school year and then submitted to the state as a potential model for New Mexico.

The school board also received good news Tuesday in a progress report on utilities at the new high school site. The board called for bids during the meeting on a water pressure reducing station, and reported it has paid the village to tap onto the main water line.

A small, temporary septic tank will be installed soon so buildings can be tested and approved when completed.

The electricity is in, it was reported, and work on gas lines is to begin this weekend. Also, high school principal Tom Hansen reported the special use permit from the U.S. Forest Service has been approved, to permit the school land to be built over a tract of forest land.

Board members noted they are very pleased about the progress.

The board also heard a report on site plans for the high school, from landscape architect Matthew Borowski, and gave their approval to proceed with the plans. Immediate site plans include grading and completion of a loop road, bus turnaround and parking lots.

Progress was also reported on an agreement for use of White Mountain School grounds for a village recreation complex. Recreation committee and school board member Lynn Willard presented other board members a copy of the proposed lease, which the school attorney is drawing up.

The board authorized the recreation committee to continue work on the cooperative agreement with the village.

In other business, the school board: —Approved a budget transfer of $5,400 to hire a speech and drama teacher for two class periods a day at the high school.

—Appointed Donnie Weems to meet with Jim Wooldridge about erecting school bus stops.

—Opened bids on an activity van and authorized superintendent Sid Miller to review bids and make a recommendation.

—Approved school bus contracts for the coming school year.

—Signed the annual school lunch program agreement and were informed by Miller that lunch prices will remain the same as last year, unless the budget reflects a need to raise prices later. Also, Miller reported that lunchroom policies were changed to give the administration more control over cafeteria personnel and services.

—Accepted with regret the resignation of Barbara Wynn as high school attendance secretary.

—Approved the hiring of Patricia Owen to replace Wynn and of Gentry Knowlton and Mary Tkacsik as lunchroom cooks at White Mountain.

—Heard that the schools donated to the Sarah Emily Finley Fund in memory of Eunice Pulley.

—Were informed that the new policy on use of school buildings and equipment will be presented in September.

Lodgers grumble over tax use

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

Ruidoso Lodgers Association (RLA) members, led by newly elected president Robert Ivy, expressed dissatisfaction Tuesday with the handling of lodgers' tax monies and vowed to fight to change the situation.

Ivy reminded the group that lodgers' tax revenue in a certificate of deposit has been allocated to village parks and recreation, a move he opposes. According to state statutes, a percentage of lodgers' tax money can be used for recreation. But RLA member Buddy Carter said the village council in power at the time the tax was imposed promised that 100 percent of funds collected would go to advertising.

"But they have gotten away from that," Carter remarked.

Ivy said he favors an increase in the gross receipts tax, and elimination of the lodgers' tax "if they are going to use it that way." He referred to parks and recreation director Pam Graves' estimate that a weekend softball tournament would bring in over $16,000 in revenue as "a drop in the bucket." Other members noted that communities without a lodgers' tax still have ball parks, indicating recreational facilities could be funded with revenue other than the lodgers' tax. The RLA president also asserted that lodgers should have some input into spending of the money they collect.

"If the village council has control over that I don't think we should have the brunt of collecting the tax," he stated. The group decided to suggest to the mayor that the president of RLA be appointed to the Lodgers' Tax Committee.

Ivy was elected to head a committee to look into a new plan for imposition of a one-quarter percent gross receipts tax increase, to be earmarked for tourism advertising.

Bill Rawlins added that Ruidoso is in a unique situation because many tourists own property here or stay in condominiums and do not pay a "bed tax." He said that point should be made when lobbying for the gross receipts tax hike.

Ivy encouraged the group to urge other lodging establishment owners to join RLA.

"We need to make this a voice that can be heard," Ivy asserted.

Also Tuesday, RLA heard about the upcoming fall Mule Races from Ruidoso Downs Mule Skippers president Melvin Means, and voted to sponsor one of the races.

Means reported that the association is facing "money problems" because it was cut out of the lodgers' tax budget this year. He noted over 12,000 people from 35 states attended the Mule Races last year, and estimated $5 million was brought into the area from the visitors.

Means explained that organizations or individuals sponsoring a race receive advertising in the daily race program as well as on a blanket presented to the winning mule. He also said visitors are encouraged to do business with sponsoring merchants.

RLA also heard from Roy Propsner about the newly organized local BMX Racing Association. He reported the bicycle motocross racing group needs contributions for dirt for the track, and also needs volunteers to help out with races.

Propsner informed RLA about the growing popularity of BMX racing, and said kids visiting here from as far away as North Carolina and Juarez, Mexico, have indicated interest in a local program.

In other business, RLA:

—Heard that American Linen in Roswell is moving into a new plant and will be offering improved service in this area.

—Were informed that the board of directors appointed Phil Hamilton of Vantage Point and Charles Johnson of Village Lodge to replace Weezie Ferguson and Lois O'Brien on the board. Both Ferguson and O'Brien resigned because they are no longer in the lodging business.

—Approved an amendment to RLA bylaws stipulating that any member of the board of directors absent from six board meetings in a 12-month period will be removed from the board.

LCMHA to be in flea market

by CAATHERINE PALMER
Staff Writer

The Lincoln County Mental Health Association (LCMHA) board of directors voted Monday to rent a booth at the Altrusa Club flea market in order to raise funds for their organization. The board also heard a yearly statistical report on the Counseling Center.

The board hopes to recruit members of the association to man a booth at the September 10 flea market, to be open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the parking lot of Jerry Dale's.

"We're not desperate for funds," LCMHA president Carla Beasley told the board. "We're just looking for a backup."

Treasurer Gwyneth Jones expressed concern that the event would require a great deal of work. She urged that the board solicit the community for helping in collecting items and in manning the booth.

The board hopes to gather small appliances, books, equipment and baby clothes for the market. All donations will be tax exempt, the board stressed.

J. L. Wilson, director of the Counseling Center, read from the July 1982-June 1983 statistical report on Lincoln and Otero county centers. The report stated that the local counseling center has over 50 percent direct contact service with clients.

Of referrals to the center, 41 percent were self-referrals; 19 percent were private physician referrals; 14 percent were state institution referrals; and 3 percent were employer referrals.

Wilson expressed pleasure at the figures. He was especially happy that local doctors are referring so many clients. "We do about everything we can for the hospital," he commented.

In addition, the percentage of males and females treated was nearly equal. The main age of clients is between 28 and 38 years. Burdette Stampley, secretary, pointed out that the school system employs private therapists. It was also noted that the schools have their own counselors.

In other business, the board: —Acknowledged that executive director Ray Hugger was attending a meeting in Albuquerque to learn about upcoming changes in paperwork.

—Read a letter of thanks from Wilson's wife, Irma, for the balloons sent to her during a recent hospital stay.

—Stated their intention to add an eight board member. Wilson is speaking to possible candidates.

—Discussed possible uses for the money given in memory of the late Jim Rawhouser. The board plans to use the funds to buy permanent art for the center. Possible purchases were mentioned.

—Heard from Wilson about his use of board money to purchase books for the center. The books are available to the community, Wilson stressed.

—Learned that the proposed rent increase for the center will be entirely alleviated. It was reported that Dr. Gene Owens, a private psychiatrist, will rent an office in the center and this money will cover the increase.

—Learned that LCMHA will be included in the next issue of the Lincoln County Inter-Agency directory. Anyone interested in the resource booklet should contact Verna Adams, director of Home Health Services of Lincoln County.

—Agreed to approach Gregson's Restaurant on the possibility of hosting a winter annual meeting and reception for association members. The meeting will be in November.

—Planned to host a welcoming reception and barbecue for Owens at Beasley's home sometime this fall. They also plan to honor him at the November reception.

Reading group forming here

by BARBY GRANT
Staff Writer

A local chapter of the International Reading Association (IRA) was organized Tuesday, with 15 initial members. IRA state president Mary Roney of Roswell addressed a group of interested residents about how to organize a local chapter and what IRA is about.

The main thrust of IRA, she noted, is "it creates excitement about reading." Programs can run the gamut from volunteers reading aloud to grade school children, to sponsoring the Great Books Series for adults. The Roswell council plans to put together packets of reading materials to give to new mothers, encouraging them to read to their infants, Roney said.

IRA council is to have 10 members join the international association. The group must meet at least four times a year to maintain its charter.

Minimum dues are $18 for international membership, $5 for state membership and a small fee for local membership, which was set at $2. A number of journals are also available for an additional subscription fee.

Kindergarten registration now open

Nob Hill Elementary School is now registering children for kindergarten, principal Roger Sowder announced.

Parents are urged to register their children as soon as possible, although registration will continue until school begins Monday, August 28.

To be eligible, children must be five years old on or before September 1.

Sandy Gladden was elected temporary chairman to head the local council until elections are held. A meeting will be called sometime in September to further organize and to adopt by-laws. Other interested persons will be encouraged to attend, and are permitted to join the state and local councils if interested in membership.

Parents should bring completed immunization records and a valid birth certificate to registration.

Parents may register children for kindergarten from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays until August 29 at Nob Hill.

For additional information or assistance, call 257-9041 or 257-9042.

Warriors big and enthusiastic

by Gary Brown
Sports Writer

Arthur praises Warrior spikers

New coach Pixie Arthur likes the way the Ruidoso High School girls volleyball team looks in its first week of practice. "My girls are looking good," she said. "I'm impressed with them." About 20 girls are out for the team, with just three seniors leading the way. Laura Trapp, Lillian Lopez and Bridget Jones are the seniors. Trapp made the all-district team last season, and is an excellent all-around player.

Lopez is also a strong all-around player, while Jones has looked good in practice. The rest of the team members are juniors and sophomores, with the exception of three freshmen. Gia Rose, Sheila Espinosa, Kristy Douglass and Cappie King are some other top prospects. Rose is a three-sport star and an excellent athlete. Arthur is just stressing the basics this week. "We're going over the fundamental," she remarked. "We're practicing set-ups and spiking. "We probably won't get into our offense really until late next week." Ruidoso had a 9-3 overall record last year. The Warriors will open the season Tuesday, September 6, with a home match against Tularosa High School in non-district competition. Tularosa defeated the Warriors last season in the first round of the district 3-AAA tournament. However, the Wildcats have dropped down to the AA division this year.

quicker and stronger, according to Ramsey. Other Warrior players who have gained weight during the off-season include center Mark Flack (180 pounds), center James Herrera (175 pounds), tackle-guard Chris Woodul (175 pounds), end Kevin Jameson (165 pounds), end Patric Pearson (165 pounds) tackle Kip McClellan (160 pounds) and tackle-end Chip Ramsey (160 pounds). Ruidoso doesn't have a lot of returnees at linebacker. Middle linebacker Kyle Flack graduated last spring, and Gresham has been moved to tackle on defense. Eric Strobel played a lot at linebacker last year and could do so again this season. Bobby Dickinson and McClellan are also expected to play there. The Warrior defensive backfield has two returning starters from last season, Russell Easter and Michael Williamson. Both players are sophomores. Easter is expected to play a lot at strong safety, while Williamson will probably go, at cornerback. Mark Johnston will probably join Williamson at cornerback, and Kenny Espinosa is set as the starting tough safety now. Senior Cyrus Simmons could also see a lot of action at tough safety. Competition is wide open in the offensive backfield and at the receiver positions. Easter, Simmons and Espinosa are expected to battle for the starting quarterback position. Easter is a 6-0, 165-pounder, while Simmons is smaller but quick. Espinosa is another six-footer with an improved arm. Strobel has the inside track to the starting two-back (halfback) position. The speedy senior led the Warriors in scoring with nine touchdowns last fall. Williamson could also see some action at halfback. Pearson is being tried at fullback, along with Wade Proctor and freshman Billy Harrison. Proctor is also being tried at wingback, as is Mitch Mullican.

At tight end, Burgess and Bobby Dickinson are working out. Mark Johnston, Justin Smith and sophomore transfer Jeff Maxwell are slated to see action at either tight end or wide receiver. Maxwell is also working out at linebacker. The Warriors haven't worked on the kicking game much this early in the practice season. Simmons, Espinosa and Strobel are working on the punting game. Strobel is the top choice right now, according to assistant coach Ron Geyer. The Warriors will continue two-day practices until Tuesday, August 23. Ruidoso will host a varsity scrimmage against Las Cruces High School at 7 p.m. Saturday, August 20. The Warrior junior varsity will scrimmage Artesia High School Saturday, August 27, also on the Ruidoso field. The team opens the season with a home game against Lovington High School Friday, September 2.

Fast-pitch tournament should be competitive

by Gary Brown
Sports Writer

The competition figures to be tough when the Ruidoso Men's Fast-Pitch Softball League has its annual tournament Saturday and Sunday at All-American Park Field in Ruidoso Downs. Action will begin at 8:30 a.m. It will be a double-elimination tournament. Competing teams will include the Cardinales, Blues, NADS, Chips, Magnums, Gibson's Jewelers and the Rookies. The Chips and Magnums will play the first game. The Rookies will meet Gibson's Jewelers at 10 a.m., with the NADS playing the Blues at 11:30 a.m. The Cardinales will draw a first-round bye by virtue of having the league's best regular-season record, 17-7. The Cardinales won the National Division, followed by the Blues at 12-12 and the Rookies at 3-21.

Magnums captured the American League championship with a 16-8 mark. The Chips were close behind at 15-9. Gibson's Jewelers were 11-13 and the NADS finished at 10-14. The Blues finished 10th in the state C division tournament in Farmington last weekend, winning one game and losing two. They qualified for the state tournament by finishing third in the district tournament in Carlsbad. The Cardinales took fifth in the district tournament, just missing a berth in the state competition. They have a strong pitching staff and a balanced hitting attack. Magnums and the Chips also rate as top contenders. They battled all season for the American Division crown. Gibson's Jewelers, the NADS and the Rookies have shown considerable improvement over the course of the season and should also be factors in the tournament.

Cage tourney set for Ruidoso gym

The first Pana-rama Summer Basketball Classic will be at the Ruidoso High School gymnasium Friday and Saturday. Male adults and high school players from Ruidoso and several other towns will compete in the tournament. The first game Friday will begin at 6 p.m., and the first contest Saturday will begin at 5 p.m. Ruidoso will have four teams in the tournament, one of them an all-high school team. Teams from Tularosa, Cloudcroft and Alamogordo are also scheduled to compete in the tournament.

Ordorica ranked third in nation

David Ordorica of the Las Piedras Boxing Team (LPBT) is ranked third in the nation in the 80-pound senior division by Mouthpiece, the official publication of the United States Amateur Boxing Federation. Ordorica won a bronze medal in the National Junior Olympics in June. The LPBT gym is open for any youth who wants to box. The local boxers will compete in a smoker in Las Cruces August 27, and will also compete in the National Police Athletic League Tournament in Albuquerque September 2-4. For further information, call LPBT coach Lucky Mulqueen at 257-2798.

High school basketball season may be about four months off, but Ruidoso High School head boys coach Ron Geyer is pleased with the progress of his young team.

The Warriors competed in a basketball camp at the University of Texas at El Paso two weeks ago and finished second in their division. That could signal a bright future for a team that went winless last season.

Ruidoso defeated Hot Springs High School twice during the camp, important victories since the latter school is in the Warriors' district.

The Warriors also beat Tularosa High School and Cloudcroft High School. Their only loss was a narrow one to Pecos High School, the New Mexico 1983 runner-up in the AA division. Pecos only lost one game last season, that coming in the AA finals.

"I think the kids are making real progress," Geyer said about his team. "They've worked hard in the gymnasium all summer and have made a great deal of progress."

Dan Ullmann, Patric Pearson and Russell Easter made the all-star team in their division. Ullmann, who will be a sophomore at Ruidoso this fall, was also named the most improved player. Pearson will be a junior and Easter a sophomore in the fall.

"The people who did the selecting for most improved took everything into account," Geyer commented. "The players' attitudes and how hard they worked was important."

Geyer also praised the play of senior Kenny Espinosa.

"He's really improved a lot," Geyer said. "He's worked hard all summer, and it's shown in his improved play."

Geyer also took a team of freshmen and eighth graders to the camp.

It showed steady progress during the camp, and won its final game against the Alamogordo sophomores and freshmen.

Kirk Ryan and Brian Davis made the junior varsity all-star squad. Davis will be a freshman at Ruidoso, while Ryan will be an eighth grader at White Mountain Middle School.

"All the teams there had a mixture of veteran and young players," Geyer said. "However, I think we had more young players there than most of the teams did."

Geyer had nothing but praise for the camp and its organizers.

"It was a well-run camp," he said. "We had a good time and the kids did well."

Staying on the subject of basketball, the Warrior girls basketball team has also worked out a lot during the summertime.

Head coach Sergio Castanon has opened the gym for the players several times, and they've taken advantage of it.

Ruidoso has a good nucleus of players returning from last season's team including Lillian Lopez, Stacy Ivy, Jackie Jefferson and Gia Rose. A transfer or two may also help the Warriors' cause.

The Warriors finished with a 9-13 record last season, but most of their losses were by five points or less.

With a good nucleus of players returning and a little bit more luck, Ruidoso High School could have a couple of solid basketball teams this coming winter.

Capitan has 19 players out for football

by Gary Brown Sports Writer

New Capitan High School head football coach E. C. Jenkins has 19 players to work with in the opening week of practice.

Jenkins, who was an assistant at Eunice High School the past three years, replaces Mel Holland, who left to take the head coaching job at Fort Sumner High School.

The Tigers have several starters returning from last year's state A division championship team, and Jenkins is relying on them to lead the team.

"The carryover from a successful season can be a big factor in how a team does the next year," he said.

Some of the top players returning for the Tigers are tailback Danny Cummins, tackle Todd Proctor, wingback Tim McElhannon, lineman Leroy Page, quarterback Dewey Keller, guard Sammy Castillo and running back Eddie Davis.

Cummins, a 190-pound athlete, should be one of the top players in the A division this season. Proctor made the all-state team last season, and has good size at 205 pounds. Page also weighs over 200 pounds, giving Capitan excellent size in the line.

Castillo and Davis were injured part of last season, but played well when they were in the game. Keller, a junior, took over for injured Grady Lee Eldridge in midseason and directed the team to the title.

McElhannon is a versatile athlete who can run and catch the ball.

Jenkins is looking for a fullback. "Whoever can run the furthest and the quickest with the ball will get the starting nod," he said.

Capitan will run out of the I on offense and have a multiple defense with a four or five-man front.

Jenkins and assistants Kendal Lawlis and Lewis Mowery are working the players twice a day, once in the morning and once in the afternoon.

The Tigers will open the season with a home game against Tatum High School Friday, September 2. The coaches are also trying to get a scrimmage scheduled, but nothing has been set yet.

New Capitan High School head football coach E. C. Jenkins makes a point with center Rodney Dean during a practice Wednesday afternoon. The Tigers started practice Tuesday and are working out twice a day.

Attic and Friends cinch title

Attic and Friends cinched the regular-season championship of the Lincoln County Women's Softball Association Monday night, taking a 13-9 victory over the Rebels at All-American Park Field in Ruidoso Downs.

Attic and Friends is now 13-0 on the season, with one game left. The Rebels have cinched second place with an 11-2 mark.

J. D. Yoakum was the winning pitcher. Both teams hit the ball well, with Attic and Friends trailing just once in the game.

In other contests Monday night, the Fire defeated the Shady Ladies 24-15, the Apache Tears rolled over the Cobras 26-11, and the Angels took a forfeit victory over the Dusters.

The Fire's victory gave it third place with a 9-4 record.

The regular season will end next Monday at All-American Park Field and Fort Stanton. The league tournament will be later this month.

Thirteen rides high

Juan Baca and his dog Thirteen and his shetland pony Cinnamon were participants in the Old Lincoln Days parade.

The Silver Lining

by Daniel Agnew Storm

That Great Little Newspaper
The Wosley Street Journal.

About fifteen years ago, in the City of Fort Worth, Texas, lived a seven-year-old girl who published her own newspaper, The Wosley Street Journal, later named The Wosley Street Flash.

The paper was full of "Kid Stuff" — neighborhood news, lost and found, dog and cat news, and cartoon comic strips, original with the publisher.

There were ads such as "John and Mary's Lemonade Stand, Stop for cool refreshment;" and "Smith's Roller-skate Repair."

She typed the paper on carbon copy sheets and sold it through the neighborhood for ten cents.

"I Always Wanted To Be A Journalist."

This young publisher was none other than Beth Haller, one of the most brilliant young journalists to be found anywhere, who after a summer as an "Intern" on The Ruidoso News, is leaving Friday, tomorrow, to go back to Baylor University to finish her degree, Bachelor of Arts in Journalism, graduating in December of this year.

Beth was born in Fort Worth to Richard Haller and the former Gay Grumbles, June 21, 1961.

Her father is a structural engineer for General Dynamics; and her mother is a registered nurse, a graduate of Baylor University Nursing School.

Beth has already made a splendid beginning in her worthy ambition to be a journalist.

Editor Tim Palmer has said that she has been outstanding in news reporting, features, columns and editorials — that she has made a first-class all-around member of The Ruidoso News team — that she has "carried her weight."

The Ruidoso News is to be congratulated for this program of giving college students a chance to sandwich some real experience between semesters of school work. The community served by The News is highly diversified, rapidly growing, and rich in history — so that the young journalist gains experience that is wide and deep.

Beth has all the attributes necessary to success in this field which is growing in importance day by day, among which are: sharpness of mind, a keen sense of values, a love of humanity, compassion, an awareness of the needs of the world — and most of all, honesty and courage, those two elements without which all our other virtues are helpless. — And so we are proud to have had this gifted young lady among us for the summer; and we rejoice that a first-class human being is soon to serve our country and the world in that field which has been called "The Fourth Estate", "The Unseen Power", "The Pillar of Free People".

We wish Beth Haller all good fortune in her career and in all things, and all God's blessings.

Juan Baca Wins
Cheers From the Crowd.

My friend of many years, Juan Baca of Ruidoso Downs, is a man of many gifts, a hard worker, and helpful neighbor, and also a true artist at heart.

Year after year, his entries in the Lincoln parade, the Aspenade, and other celebrations, have won great cheers from the crowd.

This year he was in the driver's seat of the old-time two-wheeled cart, along with his wife, Josephine, and their friend Sabina Torres.

Pulling the cart was the Shetland pony, Cinnamon, proudly wearing a spotted western bandanna.

And proudly riding the pony, without any help, was the main guy in the bunch, little "Thirteen", the small tan-colored dog, also wearing a western bandanna.

Thirteen and Cinnamon brought great cheers from the crowd and also won Juan a first prize.

We thank Juan Baca for his good work every year in bringing us these good entries in our parades, and all his other good work also.

Quarter horses headline trial races

Justanold Love and Dashingly, two of quarter horse racing's finest mares, headline Saturday's trial races for the All-American Gold Cup at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The mares will join 47 other four-year-olds in five trial races for the nation's richest event for four-year-old quarter horses. The races, to be run as the sixth through 10th races, will each be at 440 yards and will offer a purse of $4,300.

The 10 fastest runners from the trials will advance to the second running of the Gold Cup, set for Sunday, August 22. The 440-yard dash will offer an estimated purse of $1 million.

Dashingly, a Dash For Cash mare, has captured 16 races in her brilliant three-year racing career.

In 1981 as a two-year-old, she won seven races. Her major accomplishments included earning $397,100 for taking the prestigious Skoal Dash For Cash Futurity, one of the Triple Crown races for two-year-olds at Los Alamitos near Los Angeles. She concluded her initial racing season by gaining a $193,900 paycheck for taking the Golden State Futurity at Los Alamitos.

She won six races in 1982 and has taken three events this year at Los Alamitos. The California-bred dasher earned $80,200 for winning the Go Man Handicap on June 4 and collected $68,805 for taking the Vessels Maturity on June 25.

Overall, in her brilliant career, Dashingly has won 16 races with four seconds in 21 tries. She's earned $970,576, which puts her fourth on the all-time list of quarter horse moneymakers.

Justanold Love, also a Dash For Cash mare, has been equally sensational in three years of competition.

She captured five races as a two-year-old in 1981, including the Las Ninas and the Juvenile Handicaps at Los Alamitos.

As a three-year-old in 1982, she won five races. Her biggest effort was capturing a $333,000 paycheck for winning the All-American Derby, the final leg of the Triple Crown events for three-year-olds at Ruidoso Downs.

This year, Justanold Love has won two races. She took the Lafayette Inaugural over 440 yards on January 6 at Evangeline Downs in Lafayette, Louisiana, and then won $21,700 for taking the Miss Princess Handicap over 350 yards on May 2 at Los Alamitos.

Both mares are trained by Charles C. Cascio for owner J.E. Jumonville Jr. of Ventress, Louisiana.

Dashingly will break from the ninth post position in the eighth race. Justanold Love will leave the sixth post position in the 10th race.

Another key entrant is Hempens Jet, who is coming off a third-place showing in the Jet Deck Handicap on July 9 at Ruidoso Downs.

The Hempens gelding tallied the biggest victory of his career on June 19 at Ruidoso Downs when he posted a nose win over Lightfooted in the Rainbow Silver Cup over 440 yards.

He led practically throughout in winning one of the country's finest events for four-year-olds.

Overall, this season, Hempens Jet has posted four victories with one third in six tries for trainer C. Dwayne Gilbreath. He's earned more than $90,000 for owner James E. Helzer of Mansfield, Texas.

Hempens Jet will compete in the eighth race. He will break from post position 10 under regular rider Alex Baldillez Jr.

Other key trial entrants include Johnny Vitorro and Cute Investment in the sixth, and Summer Encounter and Rebelier in the ninth.

The Isayolboy Handicap will be run as the 11th race over a mile and one-sixteenth with a purse of $16,775. Six three-year-olds and older runners will compete under handicap weights assigned by racing secretary Dean McKinney.

Here's the field in post position order with assigned jockeys and weights: 1—Sena Road (O.A. Martinez Jr., 118); 2—Double B Express (Casey Lambert, 117); 3—Something Daring (Joe Martinez, 110); 4—Round Table Top (Salustio Burgos, 112); 5—Court Compliance (Pedro Benitez, 114); 6—Glover D. (F.O. Martinez, 122).

Racing continues on Sunday with the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby at one mile and the Three Bars Handicap at 870 yards.

Post time for each day's 12-race program will be 1 p.m.

Jockey / Trainer Of The Week

by MARK GORDON

Winning races is nothing new to either Joe Martinez or Fred I. Danley.

Martinez tallied nine victories over the 14th weekend of horse racing at Ruidoso Downs Race Track to establish himself as a solid contender for the leading rider title. Danley saddled four winners from just seven mounts for yet another fine weekend.

Martinez thus earned the jockey-of-the-week honors for the third time this season while Danley took the trainer-of-the-week citation for the second time this meeting.

Martinez had a sensational weekend, scoring three wins on Thursday, Friday and Sunday. He has ridden three winners on a single program five times this season as he tries to better last season's second-place finish in the Ruidoso Downs Jockey standings.

Martinez advanced to third among the jockeys with 41 victories, 41 seconds and 32 thirds from 257 mounts for a winning percentage of .159.

Salustio Burgos continues to lead with 46 triumphs, 37 seconds and 27 thirds from 322 mounts. His winning percentage is .142.

Other top ten riders include O.A.

Martinez, Jacky Martin, Mike Lidberg, Casey Lambert, Larry Byers, Pedro Benitez, Alex Baldillez Jr. and Leroy Coombs.

Danley, meanwhile, tallied two wins each on Friday and Sunday. He saddled two thirds from seven starts for a fine weekend.

Danley moved to fourth among the trainers with 25 wins, 24 seconds and 17 thirds from 121 starts.

William F. Leach continues to lead the trainers' standings with 45 wins as he aims for his second straight local trainers' championship. He also has 32 seconds and 25 thirds from 186 starts for an excellent winning percentage of .241.

Jack W. Brooks continues to be second with 27 wins, 33 seconds and 24 thirds from 150 starts. His winning percentage is .180.

Other top ten trainers include Clifford C. Lambert Sr., Bob E. Arnett, C. Dwayne Gilbreath, Jimmie D. Claridge, H. Don Farris, Gerald E. Marr and J. Doyal Roberts.

Trial races dominate this weekend's horse racing action at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The busy five-day weekend began Wednesday with 11 trial races for the All-American Futurity, quarter horse racing's most important event. There will also be 11 trial races on Thursday and Friday for the All-American Futurity.

A total of 296 two-year-olds will compete in the three-day set of trials. Each race will be at 440 yards and will offer a $2,900 purse.

Saturday's highlights include trial races for four-year-olds seeking berths in the second running of the All-American Gold Cup and the Isayolboy Handicap.

Each Gold Cup trial will be at 440 yards with a purse of $4,300.

The Isayolboy Handicap is set for one mile and one-sixteenth. Three-year-old and older horses will travel under handicap weights set by racing secretary Dean McKinney for a purse of $15,000-added.

Sunday's key races include the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby and Three Bars Handicap.

Post time for each day's 12-race program will be 1 p.m.

Two headline Futurity heats

Mr Crimson Bug, third in the recent Rainbow Futurity, and Burnell, the wagering favorite in the Rainbow Futurity, headline Friday's All-American Futurity elimination heats at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The 11 elimination races will feature 99 two-year-olds seeking to advance to time trials. Each race will cover 440 yards and will offer a $4,300 purse.

The first three finishers from each of the 11 trials held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will advance to the time trials on Thursday, August 25. The 10 swiftest runners from the time trials will gain spots in the All-American Futurity, quarter horse racing's most important event on Labor Day at Ruidoso Downs.

The winner of the 25th edition of the Futurity over 440 yards will collect $1 million from the gross purse of $2,530,000.

Although Mr Crimson Bug suffered his first career defeat in the Rainbow Futurity, the second leg of the Triple Crown series for two-year-olds, he still gave a fine showing.

The Mr Crimson Ruler dasher colt broke fourth in that 400-yard dash on July 24 at Ruidoso Downs and finished third, less than two lengths behind winning Meganette in the classic event.

The Texas-bred dasher had opened his career with five consecutive victories, including three trial races at Ruidoso Downs, a maiden win and a trial victory at Trinity Meadows in Weatherford, Texas.

In six appearances for trainer C. Dwayne Gilbreath, Mr Crimson Bug has posted five wins with one third. He's collected $65,125 for owners Jerry A. Rheudasil and Wilbur Smith of Lewisville, Texas.

Mr Crimson Bug will break from the eighth post position in the fourth race with regular rider Alex Baldillez Jr. aboard.

Burnell, who was supplemented into the trials at a cost of $30,000, is a prime threat.

The Real Ease colt won six straight races before running fourth in the Rainbow Futurity. He was launched as the $1.70-1 wagering choice.

Major wins for Burnell included the $115,188 Coors Distributorship Futurity at Val Verde Downs in Del Rio, Texas, on March 13 and the Texas Futurity on April 3 at La Bahia Downs in Goliad, Texas.

In 19 lifetime appearances for trainer Jack W. Brooks, Burnell has seven wins with one second and one third. He's earned $114,870 for owners Thomas E. Rack and Ace B. Walker of Corpus Christi, Texas.

Burnell will break from the first post position in the 10th race. Jacky Martin will be aboard.

On A High, ninth in the Rainbow Futurity, must also be considered. The Dash For Cash colt has only been beaten twice for trainer C. Dwayne Gilbreath. His major win was earning $52,234 for winning the $165,823 Texas Quarter Horse Association Futurity this March at Trinity Meadows.

Other key entrants include Raise A Dandy in the first, Bar Forth in the second, Barbary Coast in the fourth and On A Stormy Day and Racy Roman in the fifth.

On Saturday, trial races will be held for four-year-olds seeking berths in the All-American Gold Cup, quarter horse racing's top event for four-year-olds. The $15,000-added Isayolboy Handicap is set for one mile and one-sixteenth.

Sunday's key races include the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby at one mile and the Three Bars Handicap at 870 yards. The Derby pays the winner $14,047 from the total purse of $28,094.

Wagering favorites have some of best days of season

by MARK GORDON

Wagering favorites had one of their best weekends this season over the 14th weekend of horse racing at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The public choices tallied 20 wins from 48 attempts for a fine winning percentage of 41.6 percent. In addition, 11 favorites ran second and five were third.

The favorites enjoyed their best days last weekend on Friday and Sunday when six of the 12 choices triumphed. Five won on Saturday while only three won on Thursday.

That brought the season's totals to 245 winning favorites from 679 tries for a fine 36 percent for wagering favorites.

A total of 150 favorites have run second and 97 have been third.

Odds-on favorites (those horses who left the starting gate with odds of less than even money) also had a fine weekend. Six of the 12 won with four seconds.

This season, 87 odds-on choices have won with 34 seconds and 18 thirds from 186 tries. That's 52.4 winning percentage.

The weekend's biggest wagering favorite performed as expected. Machisma led throughout and won by four and one fourth lengths in Sunday's featured Rio Grande Futurity. The filly paid $2.60 as a 3-10 wagering favorite.

The weekend's biggest-priced winning favorite was Mr Shawnee Moon, who scored a half-length triumph in Friday's seventh race. Mr Shawnee Moon paid $6.80 to win as a $2.40-1 wagering selection.

Ruidoso Downs Hoofbeats

by MARK GORDON

SOME OTHER BROTHER turned in a remarkable performance in winning his trial heat on Thursday for the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby. Under a tight hold by regular rider Casey Lambert, the three-year-old Restore colt led every jump in the mile chase en route to a seven and one fourth length victory. His time of 1:41 was the best this season at Ruidoso Downs for the mile. The win was the third straight at Ruidoso Downs for Some Other Brother, who started his streak with the Jockey Club Prep over six and one half furlongs on July 4 and then captured the Jockey Club Handicap over seven furlongs on July 24. Trained by Clifford C. Lambert Sr., the Texas-bred colt is owned by Robert A. McCasland and Barney E. Green of Eunice. He returned $3.60 to win as the 4-5 wagering favorite. In the second division, run as the 10th race, Sailing Blade rallied from off the pace to register a driving win by two and one fourth lengths in a fine stretch rally. The Blade gelding had finished second in two straight allowance races at Ruidoso Downs and the win was the first since the Michigan-bred runner defeated $17,500 claiming horses on July 3 at six and one half furlongs. Ridden by Joe Martinez, Sailing Blade is trained by William F. Leach for owner Mack Yates of Cherokee, Texas. Sailing Blade returned $21.60 as a $9.80-1 wagering risk. Other Derby qualifiers from the first race included runnerup Promised Kingdom, third-place Celsa, fourth-place Bourbon And Blues and fifth-place Tough Envoy. Other second trial heat Derby qualifiers included runnerup Cherokee Blade, third-place Walkin Boss, fourth-place Running Bucket, who was launched as the 7-10 wagering selection, and fifth-place Falacy, who set much of the early pace.

GERALD E. MARR AND LEROY COOMBS combined to win two consecutive races on Thursday's program. They took the eighth on Fame At Last ($3.80) for owners L.Z. Brown, C.E. Carruth and H.D. Oden of Andrews, Texas, and then grabbed the ninth with Rebeille ($4.00) for owner R.E. "Sonny" Wright of Roswell.

TRAINER KENNETH M. GRISHAM won two races on Thursday. He started in the second with Crazy Town ($7.40) a horse he owns with John W. Renner of Friona, Texas, and then won the sixth with Seeker Step ($83.80) for owner Pat G. Sorrells of Odessa, Texas. Larry Urioste rode both winners. It was the first time this season Grisham has saddled two winners on one program.

THE FIRST THREE WINNERS on Friday's program were all claimed. In the first race, Jimmylin, a 12-year-old Nimette gelding who was voted last season's Ruidoso Downs' best claimer, was taken by trainer Robert L. Dolman for owner Mary E. Kent. In the second race, Special Mojo, a winner of two straight front-running performances at Ruidoso Downs, was taken by trainer William Peden for the Triple H Syndication. The third-race winner, Mane Spring, was taken by trainer Bobby Willis for owner Charles Ray Hendrix. All three horses were wagering favorites. Jimmylin returned $4.60 as a $1.30-1 choice, Special Mojo and Mane Spring each paid $3.40 as a 7-10 favorite.

THE ANNUAL HORSEMEN'S BALL, sponsored by the New Mexico Horsemen's Association, is set for Monday, August 15, starting at 7:30 p.m. in the All-American Turf Club at Ruidoso Downs Race Track. The dinner-dance will have music provided by the popular group, Timberline. Tickets, costing $10, are available at the door or by contacting Ray Reed at the Horsemen's Association trailer in the Ruidoso Downs barn area.

TRAINER FRED I. DANLEY won two races on Friday's program. He started with Requested Be Sweet ($10.40) in the fifth for owners Rita J. Danley and Jack Gum of Anthony, New Mexico, and then captured the seventh with Mr. Shawnee Moon for the same owners. Salustio Burgos rode Requested Be Sweet while Richard Bickel was on Mr. Shawnee Moon.

WITH THE THREE DAYS of elimination trials set for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday for the All-American Futurity, horsemen and patrons are reminded that the 22nd Annual All-American Select Quarter Horse Yearling Sale is set for August 24-27 in the All-American Sales Arena on the Ruidoso Downs track grounds. A total of 640 yearlings have been catalogued for the nation's most prestigious sale of quarter horse yearlings. Catalogues are available at Ruidoso Downs. A total of 250 yearlings will be sold in the opening session beginning at 11 a.m. on Wednesday, August 24, with 130 set for sale on August 25, 26 and 27th, with night sessions beginning at 7.

JOCKEY BETTY HARLESS and trainer LaVar T. Mower combined to win three races on Saturday's program. They started with Bold Yardstick ($13.80) in the second, won with Platoon Star ($5.00) in the sixth and captured the ninth with Bug Bopper ($7.20). It was the first time Harless and Mower had won three races on a single program this season.

TOO TIDY SIS set a seasonal fastest time while recording a three-fourths length victory over California invader Make Mine Cash in Saturday's featured Mid Summer Invitational Handicap. The four-year-old Too Tidy mare blazed to a superb 17:38 clocking over the 350-yard dash for three-year-old and older fillies and mares. The previous best 350-yard clocking this season was a 17:47 set by Almost Identical on July 7. The time was one of the fastest in the past several years and was just a shade off the 17:24 track record set by Van Too Too in September of 1973. Trained by Jack W. Brooks, Too Tidy Sis is owned by Gina's Stables Incorporated of Edmond, Oklahoma, and was ridden by Jacky Martin.

JOE MARTINEZ won three races on Thursday's, Friday's and Sunday's program. On Thursday, he started in the third with Plead Away Truck ($19.20) for trainer Simon J. Buehler, took the fifth on Charlie Mike ($4.40) for trainer Cecil Crabtree and then captured the tenth on Sailing Blade ($21.60). On Friday, he won the opener on Jimmylin ($4.60) for trainer Jimmie B. Claridge, took the eleventh on Tonkawa Charger ($5.20) for trainer J. Michael Welch and then won the twelfth on Big Bladder ($5.80) for trainer William F. Leach. On Sunday, he scored with Dandy Bet ($3.80) in the third for trainer James A. Bingham, dead-beated in the fifth with Maljamar ($8.00) for trainer Elmer L. Shepard and won the co-featured Ruidoso Sprint Championship with Fill Mackis Cup ($6.00) for trainer William F. Leach. It was the fifth time this season Martinez has ridden three winners on a single program.

FILL MACKIS CUP set a seasonal fastest clocking with a superior effort in Sunday's Ruidoso Sprint Championship over six furlongs. The five-year-old Raise A Cup gelding tallied a win by almost two lengths in the $17,175 event and sped to a speedy 1:12 2-5, less than one second off the track record of 1:11 3-5 set by Crazy Frills and Time To Tell. The Kentucky-bred speedster posted his fourth victory this season in eight outings with three thirds for trainer William F. Leach. Joe Martinez was aboard for the triumph. The previous best six-furlong time this season was a 1:12 3-5 reading set by Falacy on July 10 and by Captense on July 29.

TRAINER FRED I. DANLEY won two races on Sunday's program. He took the eighth with Allegiance, who won his third straight victory with a neck win over Next Flight over five and one half furlongs ($6.00) and then captured the featured Rio Grande Futurity with Machisma ($2.80). Both horses were ridden by Salustio Burgos and owned by H.T. Hornbuckle of Albuquerque.

Young jockey goes to head of class

by DICK ALWAN

Orlando Martinez Jr., 18, began his jockey career in the fall of 1981 at Sunland Park.

The El Paso youngster wasn't too optimistic about his chances, but he wasn't too worried, either. He's not the sort to do a lot of fretting.

His first ride came on a horse called One Light Year, and Orlando was never in the chase. He finished sixth. With that spin under his belt, Martinez put his career outlook in this perspective: "I thought it was going to be real tough."

Three weeks later, Orlando rode Count The Clown as the favorite, and won easily. So what did he think of his chances at that point? "I still thought it was going to be real tough," he says.

Luckily, Orlando's outlook was unnecessarily grim. It hasn't been tough at all. In fact, it's been shockingly easy. With one exception, Orlando has been near or at the head of the class at every meet he's ridden. Right now, he's dueling his former mentor, Salustio Burgos, for the jockey lead at Ruidoso Downs. "I've been pretty lucky," he says.

Orlando allows he's a bit surprised to be doing so well at Ruidoso. He explains: "It was my first time on a five-furlong track. I thought it would be hard to get used to the turns. But I got the hang of it right away. I used to gallop here at Ruidoso. But there's a big difference between galloping and riding in races."

Raised around the track, Orlando always dreamed of being a jockey. His pop is Orlando Martinez Sr., who serves as jockey agent both for Orlando and Orlando's brother, Frank, 20.

"My father lines up all my horses," Orlando goes on. "I just worry about riding them." Orlando's career uncoiled quickly during that '81-'82 season at Sunland Park, where he wound up with some 31 wins. He made his best move during the spring portion, where he picked up a number of good horses, including the allowance star, Mr. Clyde.

He spent the summer of '82 at Santa Fe, where he breezed to the jockey championship, logging about 70 wins and beating his nearest rival by a staggering 20 notches.

Next came a journey to the New Mexico State Fair in Albuquerque, where he racked up 19 wins in the three-week meet and finished second to Casey Lambert, Turf Paradise was next on his schedule, where he finished second once again.

Orlando then decided it was time to go up in class. So it was over to Oaklawn Park in Arkansas, but this was one time when things didn't fall into place with a snap of the fingers. Orlando gives you that big, almost embarrassed smile, but says directly: "I did real bad. I had some good horses, but no luck at all. Those stewards are tough. I finished second on Honey's Alibi Lad in a $100,000 race. I was 50-1. But the stewards disqualified me and put me last. I still don't know what I was disqualified for."

So Orlando frittered away six weeks at Hot Springs, chalked up no wins and "a bunch of seconds and thirds," and decided it was time to head back home. In January of '83 he was back at Sunland Park.

"From the beginning of March until the season ended in early May, I won 22 races," he says.

Orlando's current schedule — which he relishes — starts at 6:30 every morning. He gallops 10-12 head, then rides six or seven horses (mostly thoroughbreds) in a typical Ruidoso program. "I don't care much for quarter horses," he goes on. "All you do is whip and slash. Thoroughbreds are what I like. I like to be up front and control the race. But I don't mind coming from behind, either. I love to win. I love the competition. You can't hardly get me away from the track."

Not one to dwell on past successes, Orlando still doesn't mind telling you about the time he rode Paradin' Cowboy in the Governor's Handicap at Santa Fe. Copper Case, a strongman in handicap competition in the Southwest, was at the top of his game then, and the Santa Fe crowd had made him a heavy favorite. Orlando and Paradin' Cowboy were 3-1. "I put a false pace on Copper Case and won easily," he says, with only a glint of satisfaction.

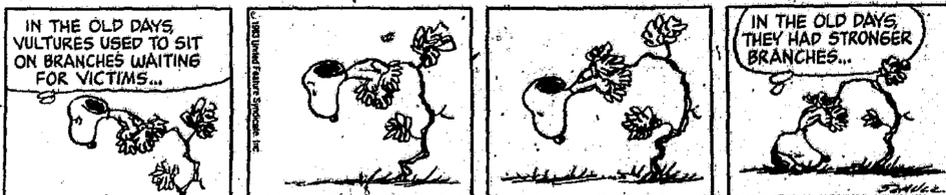

His tactic in the race was to get in front, keep the lead, and save his horse for the stretch. "We had a lot left," he says.

So far, there's been only two downturns in his career — that blank period in Hot Springs, and a short stretch in Phoenix, when his apprentice weight allowance expired.

Stewart returns as Downs jockey agent

Carlos Rivas

Jerry Burgess

by MARK GORDON

Times are changing for Ronnie Stewart.

"When I first started here, I had Joe Martinez's book and we looked upon Carlos Rivas as the best and the one we had to beat. Now I have Carlos Rivas' book and we look upon Joe Martinez as the one to beat," said the hard-working 32-year-old jockey agent.

Stewart, one of the Southwest's finest jockey agents, has returned to Ruidoso Downs after missing most of the 74-day horse racing season. He's been working for The Jockey Club in New York City identifying and registering thoroughbred foals.

Stewart had spent the previous four years working at various New Mexico tracks for Joe Martinez, Jimmie Hunt and other riders. But an opportunity arose last year in Fort Worth, Texas, for Stewart selling insurance and working for The Jockey Club, and he took advantage of it.

Stewart is one of 39 approved persons who are assigned territories to register foals. The 32-year-old horseman has been assigned the entire state of New Mexico, northern Texas and southern Oklahoma.

"It's something I'm going to base my whole career on. I'll come back every summer to work with Carlos here at Ruidoso Downs since it's the off-season for foals," he explained. "I spent last February attending school to be approved at The Jockey Club in New York City."

"We went to the horse farms and saw the entire process from the foals to the computers in New York. It's just amazing the way they do it with the computers. They have a warehouse full of computers," Stewart said.

Still, Stewart missed the jockey agent's life of meeting owners and trainers and trying to arrange the best horses available for his jockeys to ride.

Besides Rivas, known as one of the area's top thoroughbred riders, Stewart is also working to secure mounts for Jerry Burgess, one of the area's better quarter horse riders.

"My brother Donnie (Veteran jockey agent Donnie Stewart, who now has Joe Martinez and Steve Harris) called me and said Carlos was available and I could pick up Jerry Burgess. Both had talent. Since I missed the challenge, I decided to come back. Both are established riders and I thought I could help both of them."

"I've never had a rider I didn't believe in as a rider and a person. I thought it would be a fun thing to do. I wanted a rider with a lot of potential. When I had Joe, the only rider I was ever concerned about beating us was Carlos. Now that I have Carlos, I'm really only concerned about Joe beating us. It's funny, how things change, isn't it?" he said.

Rivas and Burgess have both had considerable success over the years.

Rivas, 32, from El Paso, has missed the past two Ruidoso Downs seasons while campaigning at Louisiana Downs in Bossier City, Louisiana. He's also ridden at such major plants as Santa Anita Park near Los Angeles, Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Arkansas, Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha, Bay Meadows near San Francisco, Sportsman's Park near Chicago and Hazel Park near Detroit.

He rode such well-known horses in the Southwest as Banquero, who was named Ruidoso Downs' horse-of-the-meet in 1981, and Bloody Blade, who won the 1977 Riley Allison Futurity at Sunland Park and the Phoenix Futurity the same year at Turf Paradise.

"He's a good agent and he was available," Rivas said of his decision to employ Stewart. "I needed an agent who handled business the right way. This has been one of my toughest meets. I've lost a lot of business since I've been away. But I'm sure Ronnie can help me. That's why we got together."

Burgess has also been successful in the Southwest. He's best remembered as the rider of the outstanding colt Bugs Alive in 75. Bugs took such major races as the 1975 All-American Futurity and the West Texas Futurity at Sunland Park and ran seconds in such classics as the Kansas and Rainbow Futurities at Ruidoso Downs.

Burgess also rode Mighty Deck Three, who won the 1980 Rainbow Futurity and finished second in the 1980 All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

Rivas won jockey championship at Ruidoso Downs in 1977 and 1978. In 1977 he captured 84 races from 347 attempts for an outstanding winning percentage of .242. His 84 victories was one of the highest win totals at the mountain track in recent years.

Stewart, however, is more than excited about returning to the Lincoln County track.

"I'm glad to be back with two such fine riders. They're both high class individuals and I'm sure the fans will like watching both of them. We hope we can do some good here," said Stewart.

Machisma gets another trophy

H.T. Hornbuckle (center) accepts the victory memento from Sam F. Henderson of the Ruidoso Downs board of directors following a stunning victory by his filly, Machisma, in the Rio Grande Futurity. Mr. Hornbuckle is accompanied by his granddaughter, Rochell. Also on hand are jockey Carlos Burgess and Trainer Fred I. Danley.

Some Other Brother stands out at trials, hoping for fourth consecutive victory

by MARK GORDON

Some Other Brother seeks his fourth consecutive victory when he faces nine foes in Sunday's featured Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The mile chase drew the top 10 qualifiers from two trial races held on August 4. The winner of the meet's major race for three-year-old thoroughbreds will collect $14,047.28 from the total purse of $28,094.56.

Some Other Brother was clearly the outstanding horse in the trials.

Facing six foes in the first trial heat, the Restore colt led every jump and increased his margin to a romping seven and one fourth lengths at the end under a tight hold by regular rider Casey Lambert. His time of 1:41 was the fastest mile reading this season at Ruidoso Downs and was two seconds off the track record of 1:39 set by Cutarusty in 1973.

The Texas-bred horse started his three-race win streak on July 4 by drawing out for a two and one fourth length win over Yallah Zip in the Jockey Prep Handicap over six and one half furlongs. He then captured the Jockey Club Handicap by three and one fourth lengths over seven furlongs on July 24.

Some Other Brother has rapidly zoomed into the forefront among the area's three-year-olds. He didn't gain his maiden win until May 1 at Sunland Park.

In 10 appearances this season for trainer Clifford C. Lambert Sr., Some Other Brother has six wins with three thirds. He's collected $29,859 for owners Robert A. McCasland and Barney E. Green of Eunice.

Lambert also has two other entrants in the Derby — Cherokee Blade, who finished second in the second trial, and Running Bucket, who finished a disappointing fourth as a 3-5 wagering favorite in the second race.

Cherokee Blade has won three of eight trials this year with one second and two thirds. He's earned $9,396 for owner H. Ray Niedecken of Odessa, Texas.

Running Bucket was one of the nation's outstanding two-year-olds in 1982. He won six races with two seconds and has collected $68,666 for owner Harold Stone of San Antonio, Texas.

This season, the Insubordination colt has three wins with one third in 11 trials and has collected $68,666 for owner Harold Stone of San Antonio, Texas.

Sailing Blade, who tallied a widening two and one fourth length win over Cherokee Blade in the second trial heat, is also a candidate.

The Blade gelding came from off the pace to win going away under Joe Martinez. His trial race time was a swift 1:42 1-5.

Sailing Blade ran second in two allowance sprints at five and one half furlongs before his trial victory. On July 3, he tallied an easy win by almost four lengths against $17,500 claiming horses at six and one half furlongs. Trained by William F. Leach, Sailing Blade has gained two triumphs with two seconds in six outings this season. He's collected $6,352 for owner Mack Yates of Cherokee, Texas.

Here's the field and their time trial positions: (From first trial): Some Other Brother (first); Promised Kingdom (second); Celsa (third); Bourbon And Blues (fourth); and Tough Envoy (fifth) — (from second division): Sailing-Blade (first); Cherokee Blade (second); Walkin Boss (third); Running Bucket (fourth); and Falacy (fifth).

The Three Bars Handicap at 870 yards is also scheduled for Sunday. Three-year-old and older horses will compete under handicap weights set by racing secretary Dean McKinney for a purse of $12,000-odd.

Post time for Sunday's 12-race program will be 1 p.m.

The Ruidoso Public Library should be commended for its fine work.

In a subtle and non-threatening way, it has educated the children of Ruidoso this summer.

Through the Zoo to You program, children were able to see and touch real wild animals, and to learn in the process.

Children had the chance to show off their pets and win a special prize—just for their pet—at the library-sponsored pet show.

In summer classes, the children had choices in learning from Jazzercise to German and woodcarving to creative writing. And perhaps some of the children left the library with a book or two in hand.

Reading is a fundamental part of an education, and too many times it is neglected. Once a child acquires good reading skills, he will have an easier time at the many tasks he must perform in life.

The library's effort to encourage reading was in the form of a book reading contest. Children were given points for the books they read and were rewarded for their work.

The children of Ruidoso who participated in the library's programs should be congratulated for showing the thirst for learning does not stop in the summer.

Just because school is out, there is no reason the children of Ruidoso cannot continue learning. The Ruidoso Public Library has seen that they had the opportunity.—BH

Inside the Capitol by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE — The Attorney General was steamed. When he held a press conference to explain why he was taking over the legal department at the Corporation Commission, he was still visibly disturbed.

To tell the truth, he was a little bit angry.

There appears to have been two sources of that wrath.

In the first place, he was disturbed at all the allegations and counter-allegations which have emanated from that particular branch of government over the last few months. That's the place, you know, where the three men in charge group and regroup so that there's always one of them against the other two.

In addition, Paul Bardacke was irate still from his meeting of the night before. That was the one, rumor says, where he told the three top fellows to get their act together and put their minds on their job, instead of going on fighting one another.

That, one is told, was quite a meeting, with much of the spirit of an old-fashioned hellfire and brimstone sermon from the pulpit.

The childishness running rampant at the top is really the cause of all other problems on the Commission. No matter what any news medium tells you, that's the essence of the story.

All the other running to the press to tell on one another, all the allegations from one attorney to another and the rest of the discrediting conduct has its roots right there.

Some people criticized the way Bardacke acted, coming in to take over, with some selected news reporters in on the story before the chairman of the Commission had a chance to read the letter telling him that was going to happen. "Fellow Democrats ought to work together better than that," one observer said — but not even he denied that drastic action was in order.

Some of us here feel if there is a legitimate gripe about Bardacke's action it was that it took so long. It has been obvious for more months than the AG has been in office that somebody with some sense had to step in, and the Attorney General's office seems to be the only one empowered to take that step.

Moving in his own lawyer reverses the action of his predecessor. If memory serves, it was Jeff Bingaman who allowed the Commission to hire its own attorneys. Now we know that, at least with the present Commission in charge, that's not a good idea.

There is still one source of bafflement, at least to the occupant of this corner.

That is how it is possible for the Attorney General's office to provide the person who represents the Corporation Commission at things like that telephone rate hearing yesterday, while at the same time the same Attorney General is an intervenor asking that the interim rate jump be refused.

Bardacke assures us the Supreme Court has ruled it seems no problem there, but this simple-minded citizen can't understand how they reached that decision.

But if Bardacke's projection of his department into the act at the Corporation Commission allows some time for the combatants there to cool down, we're all for it. It's time for common sense to prevail.

In fact, if Bardacke has to keep somebody from his office around the Commission for at least the next couple of years, at our expense, even that is preferable to what has been going on there.

Most of us, therefore, wish the AG well in his attempts to get things back under control at the Corporation Commission. We won't hold our breath, though, waiting for that to happen.

Reporter's Round by Gary Brown

When I visited the Old Lincoln Days celebration in Lincoln last weekend, it was like a trip into the past.

The town itself has less than 100 people, much less than the 400 it had in 1880, when Billy the Kid roamed the area and the Lincoln County War was winding down.

But most of the buildings on the main street date back to the turn of the century and before. People dressed in 19th century clothing walked along the road, adding even more to the historical flavor of the town.

A cavalry camp was set up next to the old county courthouse building. Further down the street, an axe-throwing contest was held in back of one building.

I took a tour of an old home that was owned by a doctor in the 1880s. His medical room was still there, and the home was furnished in the style of the late 19th century.

One of the most popular activities during the three days was the fiddlers' contest in midtown.

Fiddlers from all over the state competed in the contest to the appreciative cheers of a large audience of over 100 people. Some people even danced while the fiddlers played.

But by far the most popular and interesting activity of the three days was The Last Escape of Billy the Kid Pageant Friday night, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

It was a look back at the Lincoln of 1880, with its gunfights, saloon parties, and the highlight, Billy the Kid's escape from the courthouse.

A lot of people worked long hours to make the pageant a success, including director Betty Bennett, Dan Storm, Betty Schrecengost, Bert Schrecengost, Beverly Hammond and countless others.

Several people worked as "voices" for the actors, who did their parts in pantomime.

Storm has participated in the Old Lincoln Days celebration since 1949.

The celebration was started in 1939-40, stopped during World War II and resumed in 1949.

Storm played the part of Buckshot Roberts—an old gunfighter—in the pageant, and also sang the introductory song.

"Buckshot Roberts was shot at Blazer's Mill while he was trying to leave the area," Storm said. "He had fought in the Civil War and had been a Texas Ranger. He was called 'Buckshot' because he had been shot a lot of times."

Dannie has many memories of the pageant and Old Lincoln Days.

"I think it was originally called A Day in Old Lincoln," Storm said. "It was started as part of New Mexico's 400-year celebration."

"It was a good place for old-timers to come and swap yarns, drink coffee and have barbecues."

Storm has also been director of the pageant several times. He thinks this year's pageant was one of the best in the history of the affair.

"I thought this year's pageant was real good," he remarked. "I was especially pleased with the way a lot of young boys and girls stepped in and performed like real good actors. It was the first time for a lot of those kids."

"I also liked the audience. The people were appreciative and very kindly."

The stands were packed for each of the performances, and the people who came got more than their money's worth.

Sunday's pageant ended the Lincoln celebration for another year, but it left a vivid impression on my mind. Lincoln is one of the most historical towns in New Mexico and the Southwest. It has gotten smaller, while newer towns around it have grown considerably in population.

It was nice to go there and take a trip into the past, even if it was just for a weekend.

Ruidoso Care Center residents celebrated Old Lincoln Days this year with a "Shootout at RCC."
Natalie Downing, activity director, organized the event that drew 13 participants. "It's liable to turn into a big Waterloo," she laughed as she lit a row of candles.
Residents were provided with filled water pistols of every shape and size. Then the shootout began. The event was such a success the candles had to be relit many times so everyone could have a turn.

Afterward, Natalie handed gifts of shaving lotion, cologne, combs and other items to those who participated. The shootout was an enjoyable diversion for all concerned, but Natalie commented that it could have been even better if local people had volunteered to help out. "We really need volunteers," she stressed.

How can volunteers be of service? "Just be new faces," Natalie explained. "Just listening to someone is valuable."

Care Center poets evoke memories, feelings

"Old poets outlast and outlove us," wrote Swinburne.

Several poets living at the Ruidoso Care Center have collected their works into two booklets—they clearly prove Swinburne knew of what he wrote.

Joan Hightower is a devotee of Paramahansa Yogananda, a Hindu yogi. Inspired by his life and teachings, she has written many religious poems.

Though she was born and reared in Shreveport, Louisiana, of "a very wealthy family with a gorgeous home," Joan feels this made little difference in her life. She was married four times and spent some time in Santa Fe.

Joan knew writer Frank Waters well. "He was a wonderful friend of mine," she says with a smile. In Santa Fe, she was invited twice by a Hindu dancer to visit India. Though she never was able to make the journey, Joan wrote of her love for that distant land in the poem, "Mother India:"

Take me in thine arms
Oh, Mother Divine.
Thy ancient words of wisdom
Ring down—thru timeless time.
The ever young—yet ancient One
Reveal thy face.
Thy songs of love divine
Sing out—thru spaceless space.
Cleanse me with a mighty wind
From Himalayan snows.
Wash me on the sacred soil
Where River Ganges flows.
Impart thy holy knowledge
Of Rishis, Saints, and Seers
Birthless, Deathless, Incarnated
Down thru timeless years.

Ory Ennes, whose poor eyesight has prevented his writing much lately, began writing poetry many years ago. Although his subjects include love, Ory's main theme recently has been dominos.

Poet Joan Hightower describes her devotion to Indian yogi Paramahansa Yogananda.

"Got nobody to play with now," he laments. "Just two and they haven't been here in quite a while." Of his great passion for playing dominos, he declares: "I'd rather do that than eat when I'm hungry."

Many of the poets at the Care Center express a desire for companionship. Their poems indicate a need for the company of visitors to read to them, or to converse.

The following excerpt from a poem Ory wrote expresses his feelings:

So it is—
I have the letter answered,
Can't get a domino game
for love or money.
all I find to do is write poems.

My two friends I played with have all gotten out of the Care Center, went Home,
yes there was three I miss,
the other died, there's only 4

Boy oh Boy, Do we have a time ...

Ory Ennes recalls happy times filled with his favorite game and poem topic—dominos!

Roy Tuggle does not consider himself a poet. He was born in Louisiana—"no town ... swamp"—and began writing seriously about 15 years ago. Roy has written four complete novelettes of 15,000 to 20,000 words each.

Recently he has organized all of his works, which were written in pen, and he is trying to obtain the use of an electric typewriter. "I can hunt and peck with an electric," he said, "but I can't use my hands too well now." Roy enjoys writing science fiction and has been greatly inspired by the works of Anne McCaffrey. He wrote one story on the suggestion "what if you had 100 percent total and complete control" of your brain.

Other stories concern an imagined present day war with China. Roy feels that World War II is "my subject." Recently, he has been formulating a tale, set in the 1880s, of a female bounty hunter. "I don't know where the heck they come from," he says of his story ideas, "but they just come out of my head."

For the Care Center poetry collection, Roy wrote a short vignette, "Randi," inspired by a radio ski program:

A cold biting wind brought a flush to Randi's cheeks as she stood on the steep slope at the top of Sierra Blanca. She laughed gaily and waved, then pushed off at her boyfriend's call. She easily matched his pace, her skis singing against the snow. Randi could feel the pressure against her ankles and knees as they absorbed the shock, the wind in her face bringing tears to her eyes as she raced down the slope. When they reached the bottom, and snowplow to a stop in a plume of fine snow, her boyfriend embraced her and kissed her lightly. When she was released, Randi took his hand as she stood looking up at the slope they had just conquered.

"Randi, Randi honey, wake up," a quiet voice called pleasantly.

The silver haired woman seated in the wheelchair by the large picture window raised her head, smiled gently, and said in a thin, ready voice, "Why, hello Laurie. I just had the most wonderful dream."

"You tell me all about it," the nurse's aide said as she turned the wheelchair and pushed it from the room.

The two booklets, available at the Care Center, also include poems by residents Valeria Hilliard, Martin Johnson and Emily Petty, and by staffers Rick Glenn, Judy Lukens and Lily M. Montes.

Each of the poets at the Care Center has a special story to tell. Each has his own outlook on life.

Joan Hightower expresses her blessing upon her visitors in the simple Indian words evocative of her poetic soul.

"Om shanti," she tells them as they go.

Plants create hanging garden

A garden in mid-air? Why not! You can use hanging plants inside and outside your home to disguise, enhance, decorate, and define living areas.

"Houseplants are very popular," said Rosanna Wright of The Daily Plant-It. "They trail down and can fill up a corner." V. L. Penisten, who runs the Gibson's Discount Center greenhouse, agrees. "People are more attracted to a plant that hangs up," he explained.

Nancy Porter, of Porter's Tomahawk Nursery, added, "A lot of people like them because they give their home color, but they're not in their way."

"Hanging plants have seen a phenomenal rise in popularity in recent years," said James Sals, Extension horticulture specialist with New Mexico State University. "The use of hanging plants isn't just a novelty. To people who live ... where space is a problem, the hanging plant can free valuable floor or balcony space."

Several types of hanging plants are popular in Ruidoso. Wright listed Begonia, Oak Leaf Ivy, Potho Ivy, Swedish Ivy, and the so-called "Airplane Plant" as some of the most popular.

"Everyone loves and has real good success with Wandering Jew," adds Penisten. Other popular plants on the list include Bavianian Ivy, Ivy Geranium, and Begonia Rex.

Jerry Petty, of Plants Ruidoso, said that sellers are petunias, although he also sells Charm Begonia and Ground Ivy.

Most hanging plants require special care. "It takes a great deal of time to keep them in shape," Wright admits, however, that "petunias are easy to care for but you have to work to keep them in shape."

Although the plant owner does not have to spend many hours a day with his plants, Petty urged people to "work with your plants as often as you can. They like attention. They like to be handled like any other living thing."

Basic hanging plant care involves watering, feeding, transplanting and exterminating.

Most of the plants listed tolerate or thrive on weekly waterings. Some, however, such as the Swedish Ivy, Ground Ivy, Wandering Jew, Charm Begonia and Petunia, prefer moisture at all times.

Few hanging plants can survive direct sunlight, although most need some diffused light each day. Nursery owners in Ruidoso caution people to hang plants only in shady areas outdoors, and to bring them inside before temperatures fall below 40°.

Hanging plants need to be fed regularly. Penisten recommends a general plant fertilizer, a 15-30-15 mixture of nutrients. He noted that all good manufacturers are required to print the directions on the label.

If your plant comes in an artificial container, you must feed it more often than if you grow it yourself in regular pots.

Most plants should be repotted every year. Penisten said that plants in plastic containers should be repotted every six to eight weeks. Plants in terra cotta containers should be repotted every year.

Some plants, however, should not be repotted. "If you repot a plant, you may produce runners," Penisten said.

When in the house, hanging plants are subject to a variety of pests. Nursery owners list spider mites, white flies and mealybugs as the most common.

Spider mites need not despair! By following a few simple rules, they can keep plants free of the pests.

- 1. Give the plants good circulation. Crowded conditions and heat and humidity provide the perfect environment for pests.
  - 2. Spray plants (once a week or every two weeks) with a multi-purpose insecticide spray or with a solution of warm soapy water.
- "A lot of people think it's crazy," said Porter, "but you can mist your plants with mild soap suds ... It brightens them up and gives them a bath." Not only will this keep the pests down, but it also beautifies the plants—especially if they are sprayed the next day with clear water.

How can you tell if you have pests? Take a close look at the plants now and then. Aphids usually cluster at the top of the plant around new growth. "Pea" aphids, the most common type, are tiny, round green bugs that look like peas.

Mealy bugs look like small wads of cotton about the size of a match head. They can be found under the leaf near the stem. Small tan specks are new eggs. Penisten says that you can effectively deal with mealy bugs by dipping a cotton swab in alcohol and touching it to the pests. They will turn black immediately and die, leaving your plant unharmed.

Spider mites cannot be seen with the naked eye. When they come from, nobody knows," said Penisten. A twisted leaf is usually the sign that they are "trouble." Sometimes miniscule webs appear in the joints of the plant.

Whiteflies, hanging plants can add to the beauty of your home and your life. Although they are small, they are a nuisance. Although hanging plants come in white plastic pots, they can be placed inside baskets or other containers and hung with macrame cord.

Outside the house, roof overhangs, porches, patios, walls, fences, and even trees can be utilized for a hanging garden. And inside, windows, exposed beams and ceilings offer opportunities to decorate with hanging greenery.

"I think people are using plants now to decorate more," said Petty. A person can take $25 and decorate an area that would need $3,000 worth of paintings, he pointed out.

In Ruidoso, hanging plants are more popular than ever. So it appears to be worth the small amount of effort involved.

As Petty explained, "They beautify the home. They add enjoyment—pleasure."

PETUNIAS prefer lots of light and can tolerate direct sun. Let dry between waterings.

AIRPLANE PLANT needs bright to medium light. Let it dry between waterings.

POTHO IVY requires medium to low light. Let it dry between waterings.

Hanging plants have become very popular in Ruidoso, as seen in the wide variety available at Plants Ruidoso and other local nurseries. Ease of care and decorative value are reasons cited by enthusiasts.

BOSTON FERN requires indirect, filtered light and at least one cup of water daily. Mist often.

BOLIVIAN JEW or 'Baby Jew' needs low light and weekly watering. Feed once a month.

CREeping CHARLIE needs medium to high light. Water when dry.

Hill Country makes comeback

by BILLY ALLSTETTER
Staff Writer

"What makes you sick is being down and seeing all that traffic going by," said Buster Hill, owner of Hill Country Restaurant.

Wednesday, June 15, had been a pretty good day. Buster and Charolette Hill had recently reopened after being closed for three weeks to add the doughnut business to the back of their restaurant.

Summer was starting to pick up and business at the restaurant had been good. Buster and Charolette left before the dinner rush for a birthday party in honor of Buster and Bill Morrison.

As they were driving home from the party, Buster heard the fire alarm go off. Fifteen minutes later, when the police department called him and asked him if he was the owner of Hill Country Restaurant, he knew what had happened.

By the time he and Charolette reached their restaurant, the fire was out and firemen were finishing up.

Luckily, due to the alert eyes of an off-duty policeman and quick response by the Ruidoso Volunteer Fire Department, the fire burned only the kitchen area and 15 feet of the dining area. Had the firemen arrived a few minutes later, three buildings could easily have been destroyed, said Hill.

As it was, damage was extensive in Hill Country Restaurant. What fire hadn't gotten, smoke had.

"That soot gets in every crack and corner," said Charolette Hill.

All the equipment in the kitchen was covered with it. The soft drink machine had melted and spilled syrup all over. The cash register had melted. Buster's golf trophies had even melted.

The dining room was coated with soot. Construction crews would later have to strip the whole room to cinder block and rafters.

"It was a pretty sick feeling that night," said Buster.

One minute business was doing fine and the summer was looking great. The next minute Buster and Charolette were out of business during peak summer season.

As Buster and his family worked inside the sooty restaurant, hordes of hungry tourists passed by outside.

Buster believes the fire started when plastic floor mats placed on the stove caught fire. He isn't sure exactly how the mats caught on fire, but he said the fire extinguisher system should have doused the flames.

Unfortunately, the fire extinguisher system didn't work properly. The smoke detector triggered the extinguisher. The gas shut off and the fire extinguisher nozzles sprayed the fire.

But the powder that was supposed to be mixed with the compressed air remained at the bottom of its canister, too compacted to spray. The fire extinguisher only fanned the flames with compressed air.

What could have been a fire that might have caused a few days of cleanup became one that took six weeks of repair.

Buster called the fire a learning experience. One of the major lessons he learned is to make sure his fire extinguisher is working properly.

He thought he had no problem. The system was only 18 months old and had been checked for insurance purposes in January. But apparently the inspector had not shaken the canister to make sure the powder was still loose.

Buster recommended other business owners in town check all their equipment and make sure it is working. He said it costs up to $75 to have all his fire extinguishers checked. It is easy for business owners to make excuses to avoid spending that money, but they should do it anyway, said Buster.

"It's to your own advantage," he said.

It is also to your advantage to be sure your insurance is appropriate, said Buster. Luckily, his building and inventory were covered. Without the insurance, Buster said, he would have been in terrible straits.

He did not, however, have business interruption insurance. All that lost business traveling by on Sudderth was gone forever. Buster is still not sure whether he will buy business interruption insurance, but he is carefully reviewing all of his insurance.

Lacking money provided by the business interruption insurance, Buster, Charolette, sons Jason and Larry, and employee Dorothy Weingartner worked all six weeks cleaning up the mess. The insurance company paid them for their efforts.

Eagle Creek Construction Company rebuilt the dining room and painted the kitchen, but Buster and his helpers threw out tons of smoke-damaged inventory and scrubbed sooty equipment.

"It was a mess. The first week it nearly nauseated you," said Buster.

While they were cleaning up, hungry tourists were going to other restaurants. Buster figured he does 60 percent of his business during the four months Ruidoso Downs Race Track is open. Being closed six weeks has cost him at least 15 percent of his annual income from the restaurant.

Things might be a little slim this next year for the Hills, figures Buster. Money he had intended to spend on a new car has been eaten up by the fire, and other purchases may have to wait for the future.

But the remodeled restaurant is much more to their liking than when they first bought the business.

"We're tickled to death with it," said Buster.

He and Charolette are also tickled to be back in business in time to serve some of that summer traffic going by on Sudderth.

Buster Hill, co-owner of Hill Country Restaurant, describes the effects and lessons of a fire that closed his restaurant for six weeks during peak tourist season. Hill is thankful his insurance paid for the ruined inventory and damaged building, but wishes he had checked his fire extinguisher system more closely. The remodeled Hill Country Restaurant recently reopened for business.

Maggie Doyle weaves on her loom. The final product will be handwoven clothes.

Doyle creates business in weaving

by BETH HALLER
Staff Writer

Maggie Doyle of Capitan has spent most of her life weaving and loving it. Her weaving is now a business in which she sells her handwoven clothes.

Doyle picked up weaving as a child because many of her relatives were weavers and spinners, she said. She became serious about weaving when she got her first floor loom.

"It had to pay for itself," she said, "especially when I started using expensive yarn."

Her business started with friends wanting her clothes. She got into custom items, then evolved into selling at small shows, she said.

Originally an elementary school teacher, she "had more orders than time allowed to teach school, and the weaving won out."

So she started applying to shows all over New Mexico, Arizona, Texas and Colorado.

"They accepted me, and I started to sell stuff; it was great," she explained.

"At first I loved going to shows, but after a year it got tiring," Doyle said. She now tries to stay within 400 to 500 miles of home.

Shawls are the mainstay of her line, she said. People will buy shawls before they will buy anything else, she noted, and not many manufacturers make shawls.

Her poncho tops and cocoon are very popular in New Mexico, and her ski jackets are popular in Colorado, Doyle explained.

She thinks the appeal of her clothes is that she only works in natural fibers such as cotton, silk, wool and dog hair.

"A lot of people don't like to wear synthetic clothes," she noted.

Her mother-in-law has sheltie dogs she raises, and she gets most of the dog hair there, she said.

Dog hair is soft and water-repellent and good for jackets, Doyle noted. "I wish I had more of it." She washes it four times to get the dog smell out of it and sometime puts violet water on it.

Once the smell is killed, it never comes back, she said.

She has a spinning wheel on which she spins her own wool, which she gets from a woman who raises sheep in Carrizozo.

She also has four looms and a drum carder for the wool.

A friend of hers who lives in Thailand sends her silk, which she spins herself.

Doyle said she sells a lot of mohair to people who are allergic to wool.

She has a special method for washing her wool to make it soft.

"Wool reacts with the chemicals in the water, so you have to use very soft water," she explained.

She brings up spring water from Hondo to wash her clothes because the water in Capitan is hard. She said washing wool takes the oils out of it and that makes it scratchy. To put the oils back in the wool, she puts the cheapest hair creme rinse she can find into the rinse cycle of the wash.

Doyle also explained that different kinds of wool come from different parts of the sheep. The wool from the front and back of the sheep is usually used to make rugs; whereas the softer wool from the top locks of the sheep is used for clothes.

Many people have misconceptions about weaving, she pointed out. They seem to think looms come already threaded and that weaving is a very quick process.

Actually, there is much mathematics involved in weaving—measuring out equal lengths of thread, figuring out a pattern and figuring out how much yarn is needed.

She said she likes working with kids in weaving because it helps teach them math. Doyle keeps records of each piece she makes—including the colors of yarn she used, the geometric pattern, and a drawing of the finished product. However, she never duplicates a pattern.

"I'd die if I had to do 10 of the same thing," she noted. "That would be the most boring thing."

She gets some of her patterns by buying old clothes from flea markets. "I'll like the lines of the piece, rip it apart and make a pattern."

Other patterns she just gets from her imagination, she said. "It is a constant process of modifying and changing."

She got the idea for the cocoon—a poncho-type jacket and a popular selling item—from looking at an old photograph of her grandmother's. At that time the garment was called a shrug.

Doyle sees a rebirth of weaving in the younger generation, as a craft and as an art.

Besides her own weaving, she would like to find space in town and teach classes in weaving and spinning. She has a few private students now.

The hardest way to learn weaving is from a book, according to Maggie. An apprenticeship is the best way to learn, but it is hard to get one, she said. Many of the older weavers would rather teach classes than have an apprentice.

She hopes to take on an apprentice when she discontinues working in her house and gets a studio.

"There are little tricks of the trade, and if you have someone to sit down and watch you work and say to you, 'you could do this more effectively this way,' it helps," she said.

"Weaving does not take a lot of equipment or man-made energy, but it takes a lot of room," she explained. Although originally from the Midwest, she and her husband moved to Capitan from Albuquerque.

She has been well received there.

"People here are accepting of artists and craftsmen. The people in the community are supportive."

In a large city, she indicated, people do not perceive art as a business, but she considers herself a business.

"You're not just going to work, but you're working for yourself," she said.

She likes working in isolation. "You can develop your own style working in isolation," she noted.

On a personal level, she said she likes weaving "because if you work eight hours, you can have something to wear out that night, and you know no one else will have it."

Konis works in vibrant pastels to produce his art

by BETH HALLER
Staff Writer

Ben Konis has made a name for himself in the area of pastel art. The Amarillo, Texas, artist said he used to work about fifty-fifty in pastels and oils, but lately works mostly in pastels.

"Pastels are a very rich medium," Konis noted. "They are very permanent and very fast because you have to wait for nothing to dry."

They are easier to blend, he said. "And there are some colors in pastels you can't get in oils."

A member of the Pastel Society of America, Konis works in very bright colors. He said many of his subjects are Indians and Mexicans whose costumes lean toward bright colors.

All of his subjects are real people and real places, he noted. He has favorite places around the country he goes to for his variety of subjects.

He goes to Wyoming for mountains. He also goes to various pow-wows, roundups and ranches.

He sometimes sketches his subjects first or photographs them, but he prefers to paint on the spot.

Although his subjects are indentifiable—that is, people would know them—he said he adds imagination.

"If you're painting people, you try to make it look like them," Konis explained. "You use your color senses to change color to make it more vibrant, rather than totally recreating the person. If something is not pleasing, change it."

He prefers painting people—figures, Indians, cowboys, Mexicans, older people and characters. "I know where to go for the people," he said.

He sometimes does the same people over in a different pose or situation.

Konis has been working in pastels for 35 years. Pastel art is coming into its own, more so than in the last 50 years, he noted.

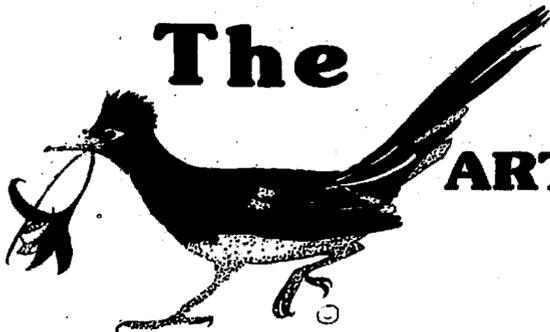

"A lot of people didn't know much about them (pastels); but better artists have rediscovered them and exhibited them," he said.

Konis also spends 15 weeks a year teaching all over the Southwest. He has taught at Carrizo Lodge for 12 years, and just finished teaching a class there. He will be teaching there again October 3-8.

He said he gets satisfaction out of helping a person improve from year to year or month to month.

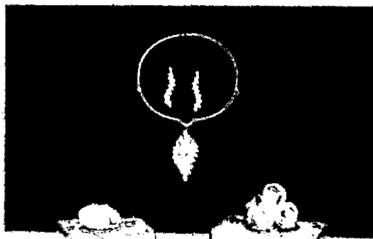

Pastel artist Ben Konis explains the finer points of painting a portrait to a student at Carrizo Lodge.
