Jungbluth leaving

by MATT BOSISIO News Staff Writer

Ed Jungbluth resigned Thursday as executive director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce. He has accepted an appointment with the New Mexico Economic Development and Tourism Department in Santa Fe. His resignation becomes effective August 10.

Jungbluth will become the department's program director for marketing and promotion. His duties will involve working with communities to aid them in the areas of tourism and promotion.

He said that while he was "honored and excited" by the appointment from Governor Toney Anaya, he had mixed emotions about leaving the Ruidoso area.

"It's been a tough decision to make," he said. "We love Ruidoso, we love the home where we live. I've been able to work with just a super staff at the chamber."

Jungbluth indicated that part of his decision to leave may have been prompted by a number of what he called "unwarranted shots" directed at himself and the chamber.

"There's been some heat lately," he conceded. "And I'm probably not as thick-skinned as I used to be." He said he might have turned down the state job if it had been offered to him a year or two ago.

But Jungbluth emphasized that he doesn't want to stir up the past.

"After six years, I want to leave with good feelings," he said. "I don't want to burn any bridges."

He said he would be available by telephone at any point in the interim to facilitate the transition to a new executive director.

King speaks to Farm Bureau

by LOIS JEAN GRUSHKA News Staff Writer

Former Governor Bruce King reflected on the past, present and future of the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau as he addressed leaders of that organization Thurs-

During the annual leadership conference at the Inn of the Mountain Gods, King used political charm, wit and wisdom as he urged the caucus to be involved in New Mexico politics.

"Involvement is the name of the game in New Mexico politics ... it's mee to be acquainted with and have influence with the people in the top positions. But if you don't have that, work with who you have at all levels," King said.

The former governor declined to acknowledge whether he was planning to run for governor. When questioned, he said, "but I might could be drafted.

King's speech was sprinkled with story-telling, with emphasis on the smaller communities of New Mexico. He recounted how when he was running for governor, he stopped in the town of Pep, population then of about 120 After making conversation with a storekeeper, King said, he left some of his pamphlets, thanked the man for his time and consideration, and headed on down the road. Later, during the election, he learned that 119 votes had come from Pep.

He also told the Farm Bureau leaders that working relationships with the press are a necessary element in government.

"When we have to make decisions, the best way to disperse those ideas are through the media," he said. He also announced that, "I could write a book about the things I've seen in New Mexico politics ... and in fact, I have written a book " He noted that he is now preparing the material for publication.

Citing that the agriculture industry is still the largest industry in the nation, King said he was particularly honored to be directly involved with the industry. After congratulating the leaders for their dedication, he suggested that marketing is an area in which agriculture needs to focus in

'We've been like a Rhodes scholar in production, but in dispersement and marketing, we're like a grade school dropout," King said.

He reminded those present of the many government agencies and branches which affect them, such as the Highway Commission, Racing Commission, Game and Fish, State Police and the College Board. He also noted the State Fair Commission, calling it "one of the top five in the nation,"

King also discussed the state's severance tax permanent fund, noting that he was instrumental in its establishment. He said the fund, which now stands at about $2 billion is producing revenues of about $250 million. Referring to recent action from the capitol regarding the use of the funds, King said it is risky business to dip into the permanent fund for any allocations other than those already established "Once the minerals, oil and gas are gone (products which are taxed by the fund), the tax is gone every dollar that fund earns now, is one dollar less we pay in taxes," he said

During a question and answer session. King used the severance tax permanent fund once again to make a point. Asked if he still believed his "Big Mac" tax cut was a good bill. King said the growth of revenues from the permanent fund had more than offset the 25 percent tax cut water law to get the water away from agriculture by purchase and litigation," said University of New Mexico law professor Charles DuMars at the Friday conference of the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau.

DuMars addressed the group at the Inn of the Mountain Gods convention center on the topic of water laws in New Mexico. Through much of his oration, DuMars emphasized the need for agricultural water users to protect their rights.

"Somehow the farming community has to get together and determine the quantity of water they have, assess that value somehow and start to defend it," he said.

"The less you know about the asset you have, the more you're exposed to litigation. There are lots of outside forces to worry about."

DuMars said pressure from in-

He pointed out that it has been previously believed. "It's kind of the trend in Western estimated there will be a 700,000-acrefoot water shortage in New Mexico by the year 2010.

Compounding that problem, however, will be a 7,000,000-acre-foot shortage in Texas by the year 2000, DuMars said. A current indication of this demand on New Mexico water by her neighbors is evident in the El Paso water suit, according to DuMars. That case pits the city of El Paso against the state of New Mexico, with El Paso attempting to transport water across the state line from wells in New Mexico. DuMars said a ruling in the case, soon expected, will greatly affect Western water law.

Recent legislation by the U.S. Supreme Court has determined that such unclaimed water rights are the property of those who first put the water to a beneficial use. They are not DuMars pointed out another example as a possible solution for protection against similar trouble for New Mexico water. In that instance, the state of Montana has reserved from its undeclared water sources quantities of water to be used in the future. DuMars indicated this will probably hamper any other claims on the water since Montana has established that it has plans for the water.

The professor reported that funds were appropriated during the last New Mexico Legislature session to study the possibilities of establishing such a plan for this state.

After DuMars' presentation, Lincoln County Commissioner Kenneth Nosker questioned DuMars on litigation against local water claims by the Carlsbad Irrigation District, and the threat of the Mescalero Apache In-predicted the amount of water taken from area water sources is so insignificant by the time the water reaches the irrigation district that litigation probably will not be successful.

Of the Indian situation, DuMars said if area claims precede the establishment of the Mescalero Indian Reservation, those claims will prevail over the Indian claims. Otherwise, he predicted that if the Indians do win rights to the water, they probably won't be able to finance methods to make use of the water, and so won't affect downstream users.

Dumars closed his talk by advising the Farm Bureau to get organized on the water issue.

"There needs to be some thought and some direction into where the group stands," he advised.

Changes in race horse medication rules welcomed by horsemen

by TIM PALMER News Editor

Although recent changes in the rules governing race horse medication spurred a lawsuit against the state Racing Commission, the changes have been welcomed on "the backside"—the barn area at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

Proponents of the new rules feel there has been a great deal of misunderstanding of the issue on the part of the public and the news media, however.

"You're trying to do what's best for the horse and preserve the integrity of the sport, and you can only do that with a controlled medication program," said race horse veterinarian Dr. Richard Galley.

Galley was instrumental in having the New Mexico Racing Commission look into the matter of medication of horses. After more than a year's study, a commission subcommittee headed by Sharon Janecka made recommendations regarding the use of two drugs, "bute" and Lasix, which were adopted by the commission as a whole.

The allowable level of bute, the common name for phenyibutazone and oxyphenylbutazone, in a postrace test of a horse was raised from two micrograms to five micrograms per milliliter of plasma.

According to Galley, that change made no difference in the use of the drug. He explained that the recommended dosage, 10 cubic centimeters per day up to 24 hours before a race, was causing some horses to have a "high test" after racing.

"They just raised the permissible level to what the research has shown (will be the maximum post-race level for any horse treated with a standard dosage)," said Galley. Nothing is gained in therapeutic effect by increasing the dosage, he noted.

The veterinarian pointed out that opponents of the new rules have said bute is a pain-killer.

"Those are statements made in ignorance of the drug," he said. According to Galley, bute is an antiinflammatory agent used to heal tissue, especially soft tissue.

It is classified by the pharmacological industry as a "nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory," which puts it in the same class as aspirin. The drug inhibits the release of prostoglandin in the horse's body, speeding up the healing process.

Galley pointed out that bute, usually under the trade name Alka-Bute, is used widely by human athletes. Quarter horse trainer Don Farris, who served on the subcommittee studying medication, mentioned the public perception of medication of race horses.

"They don't consider themselves drugged when they take an aspirin," said Farris of the public. Yet in the news media, he said, the words "drugged" and "doped" are always used when the subject is race horses.
Galley countered the argument that bute could cause a horse to injure itself because it did not know it was hurt. What a nagging joint injury of the type treated by bute can do, he said, is cause a horse to favor one leg and put extra weight on the other, causing the risk of a break.

"In actuality you prevent breakdown problems (with bute) as opposed to contributing to it," he said. Farris claims he can tell when any horse in his barn is sick or injured.

"If I've got a horse that's got pain here, I can find it," said Farris. "If a trainer is paying attention to his horses, they can tell him anything he wants to know.'

Giving bute will make no difference to a horse that is so bad off it cannot go to the track to run, Farris said, because the drug does not numb in-

Galley denied another claim made by opponents of the new rule—that bute could mask the presence of other drugs. "None at all," he said of a masking effect. Racing chemists and veterinarians have documented the absence of any such effect, he noted. Lasix is a diuretic designed to remove fluid from the cells of tissues.

Noted quarter horse trainer Don Farris, shown here with Doll Victory, thinks new rules for race horse medication are beneficial to the horses and to the horse racing industry.

Galley explained. It is used to treat horses that suffer "exercise-induced pulmonary hemorrhage"-horses commonly known as "bleeders."

Galley said the drug's beneficial effect on bleeders was discovered by accident, and that it is still not known exactly how Lasix works on horses that are prone to bleed.

"All they know is that it works and works well," he said.

Bleeding starts with the bursting of very small capillaries in the lungs. The blood can go up through the trachea (windpipe) and out through the nostrils. A horse can choke on its Galley pointed out that several factors which commonly contribute to bleeding are present at Ruidoso Downs-high altitude, changes in weather conditions, track surface extremes.

Bleeding also tends to be prevalent among the very best equine athletes, Galley noted, and they are well represented at Ruidoso Downs.

"This is the Olympics right here—for the equine industry," he said. He noted that the great horses "exert maximum effort every time." Lasix is the only medication permitted on race day. It is given in a 5 cubic centimeter dose; at least three hours before race time.

All pharmacological effect is gone within one to two hours, said Galley: Extremely tight controls are placed on the drug, he noted.

Before it can receive Lasix, a horse must be placed on the "bleeders" list." It has to be diagnosed a bleeder by two veterinarians who are not in partnership.

A Racing Commission representative must accompany the veterinarian who will administer the drug to the horse's stall, to verify time and dosage.

Galley is relieved to be able to administer Lasix to bleeders. He feels that untreated they are a danger to riders, to other horses and to themselves. Like bute, Lasix has no masking effect on detection of other drugs, said Galley. Some racing chemists feel it may enhance narcotic detection, he added.

Galley disputed the claim of Lasix opponents that 70 percent of race horses would be given the drug if allowed. Only 34 of about 2,300 horses on the grounds at Ruidoso Downs had been put on the bleeders' list when he was interviewed.

Farris pointed out that Lasix has an undesirable aspect from a trainer's point of view. The drug has a dehydrating, effect, he said, which means a longer time to recover from a race so that fluids can be replaced.

"I'm glad to have the option (to use Lasix)," he said. "But I'm not going to use it unless it's an absolute necessity."

Galley and Farris each addressed something else they see as a misconception on the part of the public and the news media: that the people who work with horses are not looking out for the animals' best interests.

"It appears to me that there's no group of individuals in the world that are more concerned about the welfare and the humane treatment of the horse than the equine practitioners," said Galley.

He claims that more work has been done on controlled medication and testing procedures for horses in the last three to five years than in all the time before that. Farris was emphatic in denying the notion that horsemen do not care for their horses. "That is the biggest farce of all time," he said. "We think more of these animals than anyone else alive, "They're the best cared for animals in the world."

Attorney Les Houston is representing the New Mexico Horsemen's Association as a defendant intervener in the lawsuit against the new rules. He said he had run into the problem of trying to change the minds of people who had not studied the latest literature.

··· Houston, who called racing "probably the most regulated industry in a free society;" argues that it would be inhumane to deny horses the medication that medical research costing millions of dollars has made available.

The men on the backside make one point in particular—that horse racing will go on, and that the sport is better off in New Mexico with the new rules on medication.

What bute and Lasix do, they feel, is allow horses to run to their innate potential. "It's an athletic event," said Farris, "And you're going to have injuries in an athletic event." Galley pointed out that a trend toward running younger and younger horses makes the need for medication

The veterinarian feels that realistic rules prevent trainers from resorting to illicit medications, though he said 99 percent would not do so anyway.

Galley acknowledged the point of view of those who feel an injured or injury-prone horse should not run at all. But he said the reality, with up to one million dollars at stake, is that the horses are going to run.

"The unacceptable alternative is to load the horse in a trailer and take him home."

Too Tidy Sis led all the way for an upset neck victory in Sunday's 24th running of the World's Championship Quarter Horse Classic at Ruidoso

The runnerup slot in the 440-yard duel went to the 42-1 outsider, Easy Patricia.

Mr Master Bug, the third-richest quarter horse of all time, raced as a 3-5 favorite, but had to settle for third—a nose behind Easy Patricia. Too Tidy Sis, ridden by Danny Cardoza for Gina's Stables Incorporated of Edmond, Oklahoma, collected $52,381 out of the gross purse of $104,762. The mutuel payoffs: $16, $7.40 and $5.

Easy Patricia, owned by Aubrey D. Stokes of San Angelo, Texas, banked $17,809. Nickey Wilson was in the saddle. Fans who backed the mare got back $44.80 to place, $10 to show. Mr Master Bug, who went into the Classic with career earnings of $1,571,261, earned $10,476. Jacky Martin was up for Marvin Barnes of Ada, Oklahoma. The show price was $2.80.

Too Tidy Sis, by Too Tidy out of I'm Late, covered the distance in 21.70 seconds against a slight headwind. It was her second win of the year. The mare's 1984 bankroll now stands at $77,331. Last year, she earned $92,442 with a 6-4-1 record from 15 starts.

The Classic fell neatly into place for Too Tidy Sis, once she got off to a high-flying start out of the number five post. Mr Master Bug, coming out of the number two post, was about a half-length off the pace in the early going. Another early attack was delivered by Rare Jet (25-1) from the rail post.

In the early stages, Easy Patricia (who had come out of the number 10 post) was in fifth place.

Too Tidy Sis maintained enough speed to keep Mr Master Bug at bay, then generated enough late reserves to hold off Easy Patricia when that one came on with considerable authority at the end. The mare simply ran out of ground. She was moving the swiftest of all at the end.

Mr Master Bug ran evenly throughout the second half of the duel. Too Tidy Sis is trained by Monty Brooks.

Here's the way the rest of the field got in, with purse-money earned: 4th-Dynago Victory, $7,333; 5th - Rare Jet, $5,238; 6th - Truckle Wings, $4,190; 7th - Sher Bar Ki, $3,143; 8th -War Star Wrangler, $2,095; 9th - Coda Mundi, $1,048; 10th - Amy Jo Mito, Easy Patricia, the surprise secondplace finisher, is trained by Ted Stokes. Jack Brooks (brother of Monty Brooks) trains Mr Master Bug.

Final Drive made his second start of the year in Saturday's 5 1/2-furlong headliner at Ruidoso Downs and led all the way as an 8-1 outsider.

The nine-year-old gelding, piloted by Carlos Rivas, managed to keep up his swift pace through the stretch and finished on top by two lengths.

Final Drive clocked the distance in 1:06 2/5 seconds and returned mutuel payoffs of $18.20, $9.40 and $6.40. The gelding is owned by Shirley Wood of Lady Platoon, a 3-1 shot owned by Ronald Patterson of El Paso, Texas, accelerated late in the stretch and scored a 3/4-length win in Friday's headliner at Ruidoso Downs.

The sprint for three-year-old fillies covered six furlongs and offered a $4,500 allowance purse.

The chief victim of Lady Platoon's late surge was Devilishly Smashed, an odds-on favorite piloted by Joe Martinez at 120 pounds.

Lady Platoon, a New Mexico-bred, is by the well-known Southwest sire, Platoon Leader, out of Sue Ree Nesee. The filly was bred by the partnership of Smith and Hendrix (also of El Paso). Fans who backed Lady Platoon in the Friday's six-furlong headliner collected mutuel payoffs of $8.20, $3, $2.40.

Latin Star, the filly who won the $32,240 Kindergarten Futurity at Ruidoso Downs earlier this summer, now looms as the one to beat in the Rio Grande Futurity.

Two six-furlong elimination trials for the Rio Grande were staged on Thursday's program at the mountain track, and Latin Star won her division.

The total purse for the Rio Grande (for New Mexico-breds) is $45,024. with $22,565 going to the winner. The Rio Grande finale comes up on Sunday, August 5.

Besides Latin Star and Generalissimo, the following qualified from the 10th race: Polly Smoke (who ran 3rd), Nachtlieder (4th) and Draconic's Cap (5th). The first Rio Grande trial (9th race) went to Mels' Christian ($6.60), who scored by 1 1/2 lengths in 1:16 1/5 under Joe Martinez. Previews Four of the leading three-year-old thoroughbreds in the Southwest-Annies Dancer, Golden Ribet, Makum Trimble and Machisma-will be fighting it out in Wednesday's excellent racing slate at Ruidoso Downs.

The four stars are included in the seven-head field in the 10th race—which is the second of two onemile elimination trials for the season's key sophomore fixture, the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby. The purse is estimated at $30,000. For the next four weeks, it'll be Wednesday-through-Sunday racing at the mountain course.

Kauai Kannon, who comes off a 7 1/4-length blitz over allowance foes less than two weeks ago, faces $10,000 claimers in Thursday's feature race at Ruidoso Downs.

The seven-furlong sprint carries a $4,000 purse and brings out four-yearolds and up. First post is 1 p.m. Kauai Kannon surprised almost everyone in his last out, winning a one-mile route in $3,400 allowance company as a 24-1 shot. The gelding trained by Lewis L. Germany headed into the gates 1-0-1 from six starts for his 1964 campaign and earnings of $2,294. Allowance competitor Sexy Socialite was pegged as the favorite (2-1) having run in the money five of his six outs.

M. A. "Button" Silvers and Leroy Gooch played consistently throughout the tournament, and that proved to be the decisive factor as the talented pair won the Alto Lakes Men's Snowcapper Match-Play Golf Tournament first flight Thursday.

Gooch and Silver shot a 58 best-ball in the final round to finish with a 173.5. five strokes ahead of the father and son team of Ed and Ernie Mayer, who had a 178.5.

'The winners entered Thursday's final round with a one-stroke lead over the Mayers, and held that until the 13th hole. The Mayers had a double bogey on that hole, giving Gooch and Silvers a two-stroke advantage.

From there Silvers and Gooch gradually increased their margin to the final five-stroke edge.

Both teams played well on the back nine, with all four players birdieing the 18th hole.

Gooch and Silvers had praise for each other's play. "He played super again," said a jubilant Gooch of Silvers. "He played lets you relax out there." The victors shot a 58 in Wednesday's round and had a 57.5 in Tuesday's two-man scramble first round. The first-round score was determined by dividing in two each team's combined handicap and subracting it from their gross score. Gooch plans to go right back to the golf links in a week, as he will participate in the 36th annual Cree Meadows Men's Match-Play Golf Tournament next Monday through Thursday. Silvers does not plan to compete in that tournament.

The Warrior coaches will attend the 40th annual New Mexico High School Coaches Association school at the Clarion Four Seasons Hotel in Albuquerque today through Friday.

Going to the school will be Warrior head football coach and athletic: director Cooper Henderson, head track coach and assistant football coach Ronny Maskew, head basket; ball coach and assistant football coach Gene Segura, and assistant, football coach Mike Speck.

They will exchange ideas with about 600 other high school coaches from New Mexico.

"It's a good thing," said Segura.

The field for the 36th annual Cree Meadows Men's Match Play Tournament Monday through Thursday, August 6-9, has been filled.

There are about 160 golfers in the field, which will include competition in several flights.

The match-play tournament is the oldest golf tourney in Lincoln County, and usually draws some of the top amateur golfers in the Southwest.

Jake Broyles won the championship flight crown last year, beating Carlton Blewett of Roswell. Tommy Hornbuckle of Ruidoso won the championship flight consolation crown.

Physicals set August 9

There will be free physical examinations at 7 p.m. Thursday, August 9, in the White Mountain School gymnasium for all Lincoln County high school or middle school athletes who want to play sports in the 1984-85 school year.

The physicals are for boys and girls sports. Local doctors will be giving the examinations. It will be the only time for the free physicals. The doctors ask athletes to wear short pants for the physicals.

Blue Demons defeat Orangemen, 45-41

The Blue Demons took an exciting 45-41 decision over the Orangemen in a Ruidoso Summer Basketball League game at the White Mountain School gymnasium Thursday night.

Both teams are now 2-3 on the league season, and the game was as close as the score indicated. The Blue Demons are made up of Ruldoso High School varsity players and the Orangemen consist of Capitan High School players.

The Blue Demons led most of the game, but the Orangemen rallied to pull within four points and two points a late in the second half.

Russell Easter gave the Blue Demons their winning points, hitting, a layup off a fast break with about two minutes left in the game. That made the score 43-37. But the Orangemen came back to close within two at 43-41. Matt Porter then put the icing on the cake for the Blue Demons, hitting a pair of last-second free throws.

The Olympic Games I wonder if the inventors of television realize what a treat they made possible for the world as the Olympic Games have opened in Los Angeles. Surely everyone has wished that he could be present at the Olympic Games at least once in his life. And now people in the distant corners of the world can enjoy the next best thing to being right there. And this is of incalculable benefit to the people all over this earth. For the breath and spirit of the Olympic Games will reach out in all directions. For, after all, the purpose—the life—of the games is international good will.

The great pride that each athlete feels in his heart in being privileged to represent his country, and the honor of taking part in this world-wide event—this in itself creates a brotherhood among the contestants.

And then the sprinter, with his stomach full of butterflies, ready to step into the starting block; the box-er, stunned, with his legs turning to rubber, who yet redoubles his efforts; the distance runner suddenly seized with a stitch in his side or a cramp in his leg, who reaches into his innermost being for something to carry him through—these athletes and all the rest who ask nothing more than to be able to give their best-all understand a mystic, unspoken language of the heart, mind and spirit.

And those multitudes who watch understand this universal language, too—and so the goodwill of the Olympic Games spreads world-wide.

Billy The Kid As An Athlete
World-wide it is Olympic Games time; and here in Lincoln County it is sort of what you might call "Billy The Kid Season."

Had the opportunity presented itself, there can be little doubt but that Billy The Kid could have become an athlete of Olympic Games class. His lightning co-ordination, his unusual strength for his size, his love of contests and games of all kinds—all are well documented and have become legendary.

Speaking of legends, one brings out his ability as a jumper and how this ability figured in his escape from cap-tivity in Lincoln. It is true that the Kid was a very agile jumper. On coming up to a yard gate armed to the teeth and with heavy spurs on his feet, instead of opening the gate he would would simply jump over.

The story goes that while he was in captivity in Lincoln a group of soldiers from Fort Stanton happened to come by just as the Kid was taking his exercise, walking in mincing steps with his leg irons clanking, under the not-too-watchful eye of his guard,

"Hey, Billy," shouted one of the soldiers, "Let's see how high you can lump now."

The Kid, with his never-failing good humor, answered: "Boys, I'll bet I can beat any one or all of you in broad jumping, leg irons and all."

The guard, Bell, never dreaming what he was getting into, let them go ahead with the ridiculous contest. The Kid fell all over himself, to the guffawing of the other contestants; but each time he jumped, he managed to get closer to striking distance to Bell. When he caught Bell looking away for a moment, and just not too far away, he made the jump of his life, grabbing Bell's pistol from the holster and taking it with him, with a great clanking of leg irons, to the ground.

Bell, pale and petrified, looked down into the barrel of his own gun; and, ignoring the Kid's urging to keep calm, made a break for it and at the same time made the mistake of his

Of course, this is just a legend, but you know how legends are: many of them are just a little way off the real facts, and most of them have a small grain of truth.

This weekend at Lincoln you will have a chance to see how the Kid really did make his escape.

Gavilan getting help

by MATT BOSISIO News Staff Writer

The ills of Gavilan Canyon Road may soon be history, after the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners and the New Mexico Highway Department agreed to new work specifica-tions for the troublesome road. The result of the agreement, according to county manager Suzanne Cox, is that "a fairly decent driving surface" will be done this year, followed by improvements next year and final resurfacing work the year after next.

Cox said the three-year project is expected to give the road a workable life of 20 years.

The agreement concerns the scope of work to be done on Gavilan Canyon. Originally, the agreement called for four-inch base material with a twoinch overlay.

It will now specify subgrade preparation and base material, followed by a chip seal on top.

The agreement change must be approved by the New Mexico Highway Commission. But the county is confident of approval, and will begin working the road with a Bomag roller Wednesday.

More than half the cost of the repairs will be shouldered by the state.

During the discussion about the road, engineer Joe Shain of Pajo Technical Services said lab tests of soils found "a series of poor situations out there."

He said that to simply overlay the existing material beneath the road would do nothing to strengthen the structure and would be a waste of

Because the route acts as a bypass to Ruidoso, particularly for heavy trucks, the structure of the road continues to weaken. Shain said the road has to be given a good foundation to absorb the pressures of heavy traffic.

He suggested inserting eight to 10 inches of clean basecourse, among other materials, which would help resist frost heave and shore up the foundation.

Worth Smelser of the Highway Department agreed that the road needed to be repaired for the longterm. But he questioned the expensive route of basecourse, proposing instead a mixture of basecourse and lime, which acts as a stabilizer.

Shain conceded that lime was a cost-saving measure, but noted that the substance offered only temporary relief.

"The problem with lime," Shain said, "is that the problems come back, but they just come back slowly.

Smelser said he would have state laboratories make a determination as to the cost effectiveness and dependability of lime mixed with a lower quantity of basecourse.

Also briefly discussed was the roadwork on Highway 70 between Ruidoso and Highway 24 to Clouderoft.

The commissioners were concerned that a detour would be created from Highway 70 that would route heavy traffic onto Carrizo Creek Road, and subsequently onto Sudderth Drive.

But engineer Ralph Runyan of the Mescalero project explained Friday that there are no plans to detour traffic onto Carrizo Creek Road.

"Mescalero police will not allow 18-wheelers going past the Inn of the Mountain Gods," Runyan said. "And considering the road, I don't think anyone will be interested in going that

He said the detour, which is still four to five weeks away, will go from Highway 70 along Mescalero 6 and 8, and then return to Highway 70.

Runyan said he expected the road to remain closed for about a year, although part of it will be open to local

Plane wreck removed

by LOIS JEAN GRUSHKA News Staff Writer

Wreckage from a fatal plane crash last Monday in rugged terrain of the Lincoln National Forest has been removed and sent to Forest Service labs for analysis, said agency officials.

Smokey Bear District Ranger Steve Sams said Forest Service investigators, Smokey Bear Hot Shot Crew men bers and a helicopter were used to remove the wreckage from the crash site, nine miles northwest of Ruidoso.

The cause of the crash, which killed Forest Service entomologist William Telfer, 30, and commercial pilot, Tom Wilson, 25, is still under investigation, Sams said.

According to Wayne Nicolls, information director at the regional Forest Service office in Albuquerque, a written statement from the investigation team is required to be prepared within 45 days of the crash. Nicolls said analysis of engines, weather and sight conditions are probable factors studied to determine the cause of the accident.

Telfer had been employed by the Forest Service since 1981, and is survived by a wife and two children. Nicolls said a memorial service was held in the Cibola National Forest for

"I didn't personally know him, but I felt we've lost a member of our family. The Forest Service is run like a family," Nicolls said.

The crash occurred when Telfer and Wilson were conducting an annual insect survey in the Lincoln National Forest and the Mescalero Apache Reservation.

Nicolls said insect surveys would continue on schedule, and no change in policy has been made.

The removal of the wreckage was difficult, said Sams, because of the steep grade of the crash site. The 9,000-foot elevation and wooded terrain left many Forest Service and recovery personnel stranded for a night during recovery operations, said Sams.

"Yes, we had rations (to eat), but it was a cold night around the campfire. When it's 40 degrees, and you don't have a warm bag, you stand around the fire," he added.

Inside the Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE—In 1971, New Mexico took in $100.6 million from taxes on production and other direct revenues from oil and gas. By 1981, that same source of revenue was yielding $1.01 billion.

That is an increase of about $900 million, or roughly 900 percent, over a 10-year span.

You can see how we got hooked on this source of revenue, to a point at which we can almost be said to be addicted to it.

And the truth is that this industry was paying more taxes than that. When we say production-related taxes, we are talking about severance, emergency school, conservation, ad valorem production and equipment and natural gas processing taxes. When we mention other direct revenues, we mean rentals, bonuses and royalties from leases of state-owned lands, as well as the state's share of federal royalties and earnings from the permanent fund and severance tax permanent fund.

But the oil and gas industry also pays gross receipts and compensating taxes on service and materials, in addition to corporate and individual income and franchise taxes, plus ad valorem taxes on plants, pipelines and other properties.

Nobody is saying that only the oil and gas industry pays such taxes, of course. But the fact is that in the case of severance tax, just to choose one example, this group of companies and individuals pays 88.6 percent of all the money from that source in any given year. Coal, for example, accounts for only 9 percent of the total; uranium, in these times, for only 2.1 percent; and other sources (such as copper, potash, timber, pumice, gypsum, sand, gravel, clay, fluorspar, gold, silver, lead, zinc, thorium, molybdenum, manganese and other metals) for a paltry 0.6 percent.

When it comes to royalties collected by the State Land Office, oil and gas land generates 98.3 percent of those, with coal at a low 1.1 percent and all the others again in at 0.6 percent.

You can understand better why the current Land Commissioner is so intent on upping the rental on state lands used for oil and gas production

when you understand that this is the source of 80.5 percent of the annual return from rentals and bonuses. Grazing, thought by many to be a lucrative source of state income, actually yields only 10.9 percent of what is taken in.

But there are other factors which must be considered when we talk about the state's dependence on these sources for so much of its revenue.

Back in 1971, when the yield to the state was low in comparison to 1981, our state produced 118.4 millions of barrels of oil and 1,147.4 millions of thousands of cubic feet (MCF) of gas.

In 1981, on the other hand, when that astronomically high figure in revenue generated for the state was reached, production had fallen sharply. That year it was only 72.2 million barrels of oil and 1,118.6 millions of MCF's of gas.

That accounts for the fact that the $1.01 billion yield to the state in 1981 fell in 1982 to $941.4 million, and in 1983 to $902 million.

That's a steep fall. Oil production, down in 1981 and 1982, took a slight upturn in 1983, but gas production goes down steadily.

The moral of the story is simple: New Mexico had best cure itself of its addictive dependence on this industry to provide the money to run state government.

We are at a point in time when our lawmakers have told us to spend more money than we expect to take in from normal recurring revenue sources of the kind listed here. In addition, the oil and gas industry's share of these recurring sources of revenue bids fair to continue to decline slightly, or at best merely to level off.

We need to find other sources for funding our state for two reasons: We cannot afford to support the government we now have on what we expect to take in; and one of the major sources of that expected revenue will no longer throw off as much as it has yielded us in the past.

Those are harsh positions to enunciate, and nobody in the state likes to think of what the logical consequence of them is.

But we had better think about it

On the Village Beat

with Tim Palmer

"It ain't over till the fat lady sings."
That sports cliche was the extent of my knowledge of opera before attending my first one recently. (Boy, did Cathy get sick of hearing wisecracks on that theme!)

We attended the Santa Fe Opera production of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." Though I naturally spent the entire evening waiting for the fat lady to sing, we were well entertained along the way.

The time before the performance started was very enjoyable in itself. We were greeted by a beautiful sunset when we pulled into the theater parking lot.

Noticing our two dogs in the car, the parking attendant directed us to the remotest end of the lot. He courteously explained that a performance once was ruined by the continuous barking of a patron's dog.

The walk from our car to the theater gave us time to appreciate the sunset. Once inside, we were greeted with an assortment of beautiful people

Everyone dresses "to the nines" for the opera, and you feel a part of a very special occasion as you admire everyone in their finery. The peoplewatching was great fun.

The 1,765-seat theater is impressive. The roof is partially open, which allows for the feeling of opera under the stars while providing weather protection for 73 percent of the audience.

We were among the 27 percent unprotected, but fortunately the evening was lovely. (After you've been to the opera, you can use words like "lovely" unselfconsciously.)

The people were seated, the lights were dimmed, and the overture began. "The Magic Flute" is a fantasy tale, and it starts with a prince being pursued by a huge reptile.

You would think that in a live performance, it would be hard to create effective special effects. After all, the audience has seen "Star Wars."

But when the fairy ladies zap the snake into three pieces, the effect comes off quite well.

And when the fat lady, the Queen, makes her appearance, it's a knockout. She rises on a platform at the open back of the stage, and levitates forward with large bat-like ribbed wings outspread.

The Queen has one of those voices that its owner can play like a musical instrument. I was reminded of a steam whistle as she hit the high notes. It was pretty neat.

Then she sings.

All of the singing was good (at least to my untrained ear), although Cathy and I both noticed what I suppose is an operatic device of taking a phrase and singing it over and over within a song.

"The birds have taken wing, the birds have taken wing, the birds have taken, birds have taken, birds have taken wing, wing, wing ... " sort of thing."

Of course, rock music does the same, only it's "Ma-mama, we're all crazy now."

Which brings us to my own cultural reference point. I analogized that the opera was like a big video. It was like a long video, too, starting at nine and ending after midnight.

Perhaps it was video conditioning (they last about four minutes each) that caused me to feel the opera ran on a bit.

But the fat lady sang, and the story had a happy ending, and we left feeling very well pleased with our first visit to the Santa Fe Opera.

By the way, the season runs through August 25.

Editorial

Last week was "the week that was" for the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce.

When it seemed that everything that could happen to or be said about the chamber had happened or been said, something else happened. The executive director resigned.

That last thing means the chamber will be taking a new direction—more than its members, its critics, its board, the Lodgers Tax Committee or the village council knew.

Last week's dialogue on the chamber brought out several points to bear in mind as the new direction unfolds.

At Monday's annual meeting, opposing philosophies—contact with members versus concentration on promotion—were voiced. The plan for board members to contact all the members personally in coming months is a good one—not-withstanding one hard-headed member's assertion that he would throw out any such visitor.

Pleasing 500-plus members is no easy task, but the board of directors has to try. The chamber's strength lies in having maximum numbers, and a maximum degree of satisfaction that the organization is working for its members.

Tuesday's village council-Lodgers' Tax Committee (LTC) meeting was basically the same old song of the governing body being reluctant to delegate responsibility—in this case to the chamber (via LTC) for spending of lodgers' tax money.

What business does a councillor have telling the chamber that only a certain number of trade shows should be attended, or that chamber employees should be excluded from attending them?

Wisely, the council as a whole shot down those suggestions. But it is no wonder that chamber leadership has developed an attitude of "if you can do it better, do it."

Wednesday, the chamber board meeting saw a board member suggest that only "complainers" among the membership be called on—"to teach them a little courtesy." This person needs to be taught a little reality—that if a member is forking over the money for chamber dues, he has a right to some attention from the organization's leadership. An elitist attitude can be only counterproductive, and will result in a loss of members and a failure to recruit new ones.

Thursday, the chamber president joked that it might be nice if candidates for the executive director's job could be kept from reading newspaper accounts of all the dissension surrounding the organization.

We contend that dissension can be healthy, that the time to worry is when an organization is beset with apathy. Our immediate suggestion to members is to make their feelings known to the board about the type of person they want in the executive director's post, and what the job description should entail.

The momentum generated last week can contribute to a better Chamber of Commerce for the future.—TP

THE DRAMA OF LIFE goes on in the make-believe world of cartooning. We think it is one of the most interesting aspects of the newspaper business, and we like to follow it.

Mort Walker, who draws Beetle Bailey, is in big trouble with a number of his newspapers—and thus with his syndicator—because of his portrayal of a central character of the strip, Miss Buxley.

Miss Buxley, whom we suppose hardly needs an introduction, is the shapely secretary of Gen. Amos Halftrack, the strip's non-hero. Mort gives Miss Buxley the complete dumb blonde treatment. All she has is her figure, and—it seems to be—it's all she needs to get what she wants out of life

This is a stereotyped, rather cynical image of the lady in question. But then every character in the Bailey strip is a stereotype. Beetle Bailey is the supreme goofoff. Killer is the ladies' man. Zero is the dumb buck private. Cookie is the macho master of the mess hall, and Sarge is, well, general issue to the core.

But back to Miss Buxley. Editors at the Oceanside Blade-Tribune and Orlando Sentinel have taken offense at Walker's depictions of the curvaceous secretary. They say it's raw sexism, and offensive to women. Women are pretty tender these days, and it may really be offensive to some of them, but reader polls don't seem to back this up.

The Sentinel singled out a recent cartoon in which Gen. Halftrack was shown stealing a look at the blonde, and asked the readers if they thought the cartoon should have been published.

Of the 5,451 callers who responded, 4,837 (89 percent) said yes, and 614 (11 percent) said no. It is true that most of the approvals came from men, but if there were more women who objected, why didn't they let the paper know?

Anyway, the cartoonist, whom even his critics admit is a nice guy, is properly repentant, and has promised to make Miss Buxley a more proper girl.

make Miss Buxley a more proper girl.
David Burgin, the Sentinel editor, is trying to help. He suggests that Mort "put a brain in Miss Buxley and make her a more feminist-type character who stands up to General Halftrack."
There's your answer: transform

Miss Buxley from a dumb blonde into a fighting feminist. We're sure Mort could do that, but whether he could ever make her funny, that's another question. Feminists spend all their time being mad, and are totally devoid of humor.

Letters to the editor

DEAR EDITOR:

In response to Hank Evaro's letter: The first two paragraphs sounded like I had written them! We too opened our business two years ago and were "rushed" by the chamber during their membership drive. They took our money and ran.

Like in any organization or service club, there are but a few to do all the work. People who join should be willing to pull their share of the work and just jump in and do it. This has always been my philosophy and I followed it. I offered to have coffee carts at our place of business and I wanted to attend their meetings (to which and of which I was never invited or informed). My friends and I volunteered for and worked the Pro Ski Race. All of the above went unnoticed and unacknowledged.

I belong to service clubs who need and appreciate my time and efforts and make me feel welcome and wanted. Needless to say I resigned from the Chamber.

Bill Leach a winner

Trainer Bill Leach loves to get smashed. Easily Smashed, Luckily Smashed, Sunnily Smashed ... the last nine years have been a smashing success for the 53-year-old Texas native.

Leach's success story traces back to a fateful day in 1975 when the trainer ran across a thoroughbred yearling out of Wimberly Blue, who had produced Half Smash, a winner of nearly $50,000. Oil producer John May and dirt contractor Olin Childs purchased the offspring for $12,000 and gave Leach a third interest to train and develop the filly. They dubbed the foal Smash It—the rest is racing history and money in the bank for Leach.

Her first year on the track the filly won the $93,100 Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity and the title of best two-year-old filly at the meet. Before retiring on the eve of her three-year-old campaign, she had collected $78,000 in winnings.

But the mare had a talent Leach had not anticipated. Within a short time she would mother three stakes champions—one by Easy Jet which went into multi-million-dollar syndication.

"The biggest break I ever got in the horse business was when we syndicated Easily Smashed for more than $3.6 million. I was one-third owner of him," Leach imparts.

The stakes champion retired in 1981—the fall of his three-year-old campaign with career earnings of $326,000. His scores included wins in such classics as the Sun Country Quarter Horse Futurity at Sunland Park and the Kansas Derby at Ruidoso Downs.

Smash It died the following year, leaving a legacy of champions. "I think one of the biggest disappointments we had was when we lost Smash It," Leach recalls. "She was only eight years old." That same year one of her offspring—Luckily Smashed—was named best three-year-old thoroughbred fility at Ruidoso Downs. Sunnily Smashed, another Smash It foal, took the best thoroughbred three-year-old crown last year. And Devilishly Smashed has been making waves in allowance company as a three-year-old this season.

Leach is a fairly wealthy man now. He has come a long way since pulling into Ruidoso in 1966 to open business with a four-horse stable. These days he oversees a dozen employees and 35 head that include such stars as Fill Mackis Cup, Short Shrift, Queen Elect and Untamed Melody.

After a quarter century in the training business, Leach can relax a little. "I was doing all the work when I first started," he recalls. "Now I have a lot of good people working for me. I think it's a little harder on me mentally, but physically I'm not working as hard as I was twenty years ago."

For the past two years Leach has held fast to the leading trainer title at Ruidoso Downs. And he stands a good chance of nabbing the number one position again this year.

What's the secret? Years of hard work and a little bit of luck, Leach

"You start out in '66 with four head ... luck has got to be considered," the trainer says. "It takes time. You have to have some success, get rolling and pick up the right kind of people that buy the right kind of yearlings for you. Then you're on your way."

Mack Yates of Cherokee, Texas, has been the right kind of person for Leach. The financier hooked up with the trainer nearly ten years ago, and the duo have been making regular trips to the winner's circle ever since.

"One of the biggest breaks I got was when I started training for Mack Yates," Leach admits. "He's been an awful good owner and bought a lot of good thoroughbreds for me."

BILL LEACH

One of their most recent purchases—Untamed Melody—collected $27,359 for her second in the $124,360 Norgor, Thoroughbred Futurity on June 24.

The duo bagged their first big win in 1979 with Easy Azuree's seventh-place finish in the $1.2 million All-American Futurity. That same year another Yates-owned thoroughbred, Cut Shot, took the $55,658 Norgor Thoroughbred Futurity. Fill Mackis Cup—also a Yates investment—captured the same race in 1981.

After nearly twenty-five years in the racing business, Leach talks about retirement. At this point, one gets the impression that's all it is—talk.

"I've made some money in the horse business. I'm looking at the next two or three years to see how things go. Then I'll think about sitting back and taking it easy."

back and taking it easy."

The sport of buying and training winners is still a thrill for Leach. It's obvious he enjoys his work.

"Every trainer or owner is always looking forward to next year for the yearling crops and the potential they're going to have," he says. "Every year is a challenge.

"You start in October breaking these yearlings and looking forward to running them against each other. You eliminate the ones that can't run. You bring the good ones up and race

"If you lose it's no fun. If you win, it's a hell of a lot of fun."

Health Care Insurance especially tailored for small businesses with 2 to 9 employees

Comprehensive health care coverage is important to your employees and affordability is important to you. NEW CUSTOM CARE was designed with small groups in mind. The program contains cost savings features and coverage options, briefly shown below, to minimize premiums. Whichever deductible option you choose, CUSTOM CARE will provide excellent coverage for an affordable premium.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

You decide how much of estimated annual medical expenses your group really needs coverage for, and how much out of pocket expense your employees can afford. Then you select the annual deductible option closest to the amount each employee will pay toward covered medical costs. The higher the selected annual deductible amount, the lower each member's premium.

CUSTOM CARE offers deductible amounts of $100, $250, $500 or $1,000. Each individual is responsible for the deductible amount toward covered medical expenses. After the deductible is met, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Mexico pays 80% of covered expenses up to $2,000 out of pocket per person per year. Blue Cross and Blue Shield pays 100% thereafter.

SPECIAL FEATURES:

CUSTOM CARE'S special features provide you and your employees with extra coverage and financial security for treatment of accidental injury and outpatient surgery.

SUPPLEMENTAL ACCIDENT

Blue Cross and Blue Shield pays 100% of the first $500 of covered charges when treatment of an accidental injury is required, whether or not you have met your annual deductible. After the $500 coverage has been exhausted, deductible and coinsurance requirements do apply to subsequent charges.

OUTPATIENT SURGERY

Blue Cross and Blue Shield pays 100% of "usual, customary and reasonable" costs after you have met your annual deductible. The surgical procedure must be performed in the physician's office, ambulatory surgical center, or the outpatient department of a hospital.

CONSIDER THESE IMPORTANT FACTS:

Blue Cross and Blue Shield is the largest health insurance carrier in the United States. We offer security and protection from high health care costs to many of the nation's largest businesses, and now with New CUSTOM CARE, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Mexico can offer every small business these same features . . . superior service at an affordable price.

CHANCES ARE ONE IN FOUR THAT YOU WILL NEED CUSTOM CARE COVERAGE THIS YEAR . . . A RISK YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO TAKE.

You can have peace of mind for yourself and your employees by applying for the group benefits and affordable rates of new CUSTOM CARE today! We Cover New Mexico.

La Junta club meets

La Junta Extension Club members enjoyed a covered dish lunch at their July meeting in the Tinnie Community Building.

Several candidates for public office sent letters thanking the club for hosting a "Meet Your Candidate" program before the recent primary. Donations received that day will go to a scholarship fund.

The club also plans a "You the County Council" meeting in the Ruidoso Public Library on Tuesday, August 7.

Club members also made plans for the county fair. In addition, they have set Achievement Day for September 26 at First Christian Church of Ruidoso.

Another future event is a progressive housewarming brunch in the new homes of Alice Blakestead, Patsy Racher and Donna Crandall. It will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday, August 11.

During the July meeting, Evelyn Ashely presented a program about her experiences in Big Bend Country.

The next meeting of the La Junta Club is scheduled in Phylis Zumwalt's home on Wednesday, August 15.
