Officials seek flood aid

Lieutenant Governor Mike Runnels, in Ruidoso Tuesday to review damage caused by recent floods, told of plans to coordinate requests for federal disaster aid.

In spite of those floods, said to be the worst since 1978, village councillors told Runnels that clean-up and recovery are well under way, and Ruidoso is ready for the many tourists expected for the Fourth of July weekend.

Mayor Pro Tem Jerry Shaw said she wants to be sure people know there is nothing to deter tourists from visiting the area for the Fourth.

Supreme Court rules

McKnight grand jury must be convened

Family members of slain ranchers Thomas A. Cotton and Judy McKnight were jubilant Wednesday over news that a grand jury will be convened to review evidence in the unsolved murder.

The Supreme Court of the State of New Mexico has found that it is in the public interest that District Judge Terrell A. Parsons convene a grand jury, said attorney Gary Mitchell just moments after the ruling was announced Wednesday morning in Santa Fe.

Terry Basse and Frank Pacheco, McKnight relatives, presented a petition, signed by the requisite number of voters asking Judge Parsons to call a grand jury and appoint a special prosecutor to gather and review evidence in the case. They cited sections of the New Mexico Constitution, a prior authority for the request.

But Judge Parsons refused to call a grand jury, and said he has no authority to appoint a special prosecutor, prompting them to ask Mitchell to file a writ of mandamus in the state court in an attempt to force Parsons to honor the petition.

Mitchell said the question of a writ of mandamus was before the court in Wednesday's case, but the ruling allows Judge Parsons 60 days to convene a grand jury in the McKnight case.

The State Supreme Court Clerk confirmed the decision in a telephone interview.

"I'm going to enter an order stating that the alternative writ be issued unless a grand jury is convened within 60 days," said the clerk.

Judge Parsons was not available for comment Wednesday.

People need to understand that Judge Parsons' concern was not to prevent a grand jury, but to make sure money spent wisely, said Mitchell. "I applaud him for that. He was doing what he thought was in the best interests of the people," he added.

"I'm thrilled," said Pacheco after the decision was announced. "It's a big step in the right direction," he added.

"This court is not going to let the McKnight case go. Let's have it. I wonder how much more unbiased impartial justice we will see over the next 60 days," he added.

"I can hope that the state attorney will convene a grand jury," Pacheco said.

Lack of cooperation in the complaint that McKnight made to law enforcement officials involved have made during the life of the investigation.

That investigation has been, but God, among the Lincoln County Sheriff's Office, the New Mexico State Police and the two other agencies. The District Attorney's Office, the McKnights were concerned that to death on the kitchen floor of their isolated ranch home.

Although the sheriff has said he has gathered evidence and is ready to arrest a suspect, or suspects, the DA has said that evidence is gathered and not released to an indictment.

In the meantime, the attorney general has taken control of the case.

Both families of McKnight have said they are not satisfied with the evidence surrounding the case. The case has never been shared. The attorney involved.

They hope the grand jury review will afford the opportunity to gather all the evidence in one place and come up with some kind of resolution.

Maybe something will happen now, McKnight Pacheco.

Bridge improvements scheduled for September

The Village of Ruidoso received a signed agreement from the State Highway Department Tuesday setting in motion a project to redesign and rebuild five inadequate village bridges, announced village manager Jim Hine.

Hine said the signed document authorizes the village to spend a direct appropriation of $585,000 authorized last year by the State Legislature.

Village engineer Mike Davalos said construction is expected to begin in September.

Even before getting Tuesday's official go-ahead, village administrators contracted with H.W. Lochner of Santa Fe to design and engineer the five river crossings.

Village engineer Mike Davalos said Wednesday engineering and designs are 50 percent complete. He said the engineers completed ground surveys and other site studies before designing the bridges.

The State Highway Department will review and approve the designs before bids are solicited for the construction phase, said Davalos.

River crossings on Reese Drive, Paradise Canyon Drive, Hart Avenue, off Paradise Canyon Drive and the two Upper Canyon bridges are included in the project, said Hine.

It costs for the five bridges, by each state fund. Hine said the second Upper Canyon bridge will not be included.

But Davalos said estimates indicate that a few bridges are to be improved with the $585,000. He said the design and engineering contract is for $150,000.

Village officials expect the rebuilding project to alleviate recurring wash-outs that have plagued the Paradise Canyon crossing.

Davalos said engineers are designing the replacement bridges to withstand a 50-year storm. He explained the term, 50-year storm, is defined as the size of a storm that is expected to happen no more than once in a 50-year period.

Assistant village manager Frank Potter said the United States Geological Survey state a flood of 300 cubic feet per second of flow, with a 50-year storm, is expected as a two cubic feet per second of flow.

The 1978 flood, he noted, a 50-year flood, said Potter. "If we want that one yesterday, we've had it," he added.

A public meeting scheduled at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 22, at Village Hall to discuss detours and alternate routes during the bridge construction.

Hall is unimpressed with special session results

by FRANKIE JARRELL
News Staff Writer

State Representative Ben Hall, back from the third special legislative session this year, predicts more hard times ahead for the State of New Mexico.

Hall said Tuesday he fears emergency measures enacted in the recent special session are inadequate to solve the state's mounting fiscal problems.

"We already know that come January we'll be another $150 million in the hole," remarked Hall, who voted against the entire package.

Governor Toney Anaya proposed the budget-cutting plan endorsed by the special session. It includes discontinuing food and medical rebates for families earning $10,000 or more and cutting state spending by two percent.

By cancelling the rebates the state is expected to save $55 million this year, and the spending cuts in schools and state agencies are

"We already know that come January we'll be another $150 million in the hole," Ben Hall estimated to net $25 million.

Other funds will be gathered from various sources including $19.4 million from the State Highway revolving fund, $3.1 million from federal mineral leases, $2.5 million from a recent favorable court decision and $15.4 million from additional savings in some state departments, according to Hall.

Representative Hall said the Legislature previously authorized the governor to tap into operating reserves for up to $10 million.

Language in the bill authorizes the next governor to spend up to $30 million from the (approximately) $61 million operating reserves fund, said Hall.

"The governor had the votes to pass everything he wanted," noted Hall. He said the fact that some legislators were reluctant to get into drawn-out debates so close to a general election may have helped the governor's plan.

But with oil and gas prices on a continued decline, Hall is not optimistic that the budget cuts will keep the state afloat.

"I'm not going to predict there's not going to be another (special) session," remarked Hall.

But Hall is concerned because the legislation just passed dries up most of New Mexico's financial cushion. He said when the lawmakers meet again they'll have no place to go for a "quick-fix" to any financial crisis.

He said the next session will have to make some tough decisions that will include tax increases or spending cuts.

"People can't stand any more tax increases," said Hall, remarking on the number of New Mexicans who are not working or have moved elsewhere to find jobs.

Hall predicts he'll be part of a session faced with making some very "unpopular" choices. He warned that no "drastic" cuts have been made as yet.

"We raised taxes $150 million and then we gave it right back to the teachers," recalled Hall of the second special session. The governor insisted on standing by his promise to raise teacher salaries by $2,200 each in spite of the mandated two percent cuts in school spending.

Hall said everybody, including teachers, will be affected by future cuts.

On the tail end of his first term in the state Legislature, Hall (unopposed for re-election) is looking forward to another two years, in spite of tough problems that will face the next session.

"I want to be a part of getting this state back in shape," said Hall seriously.

Pedestrian hit

Arden Hosetosavit, 31, was treated and released at Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital Wednesday after a car-pedestrian accident on Sudderth Drive, according to official reports.

Ruidoso Police reported that the Ruidoso resident was crossing Sudderth from north to south in a pedestrian crosswalk when he was struck by a 1978 Mercury driven by Dennis G. Sidebottom, 38, of Carrizozo.

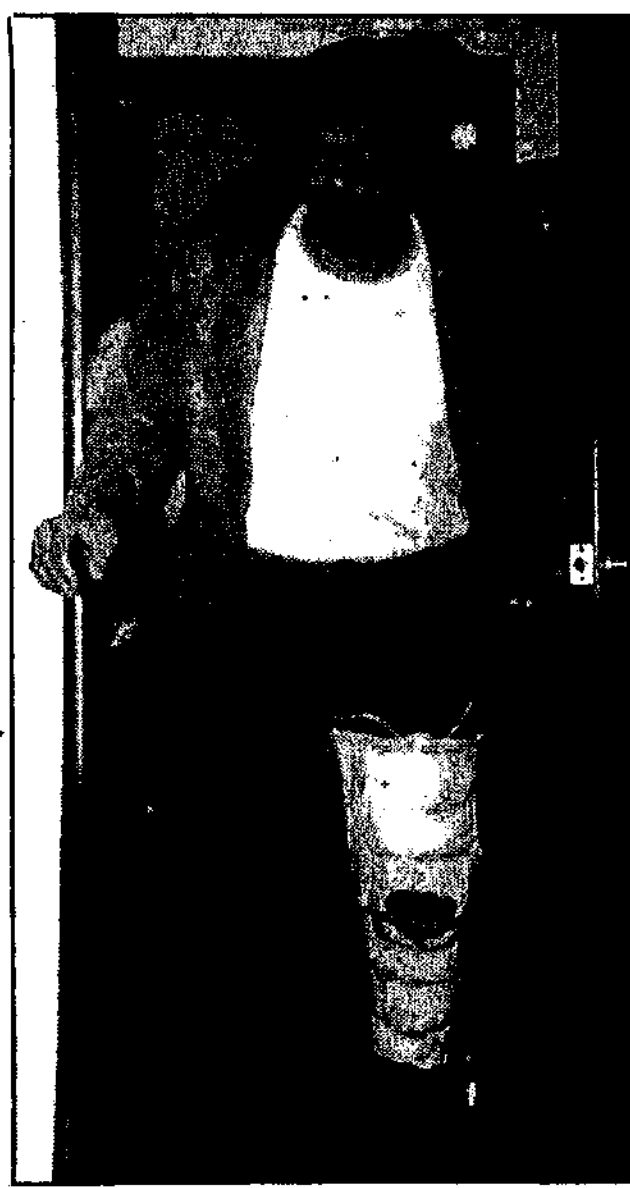

Sidebottom was eastbound in the curb lane when he failed to come to a complete stop for Hosetosavit, who was hurrying across the intersection during a rain shower, said Ruidoso Police Chief Richard A. Swenor.

"According to witnesses all other vehicles stopped," said Swenor.

Sidebottom was issued a citation for failure to yield right of way in a pedestrian crosswalk, said police.

AUDREY LACEY MCCULLAR

JOHN NATALE

Suspects appear in court

Accused armed robbers John Natale, 42, and Audree Lacey McCullar, 30, appeared in Magistrate Judge J.R. Wheeler's courtroom Monday.

Judge Wheeler set bond at $250,000 each with no 10 percent for the two men accused in last week's armed robbery of Bennett's Shur-Sav grocery store. The two also are charged with false imprisonment in that incident where two men were reportedly bound and gagged.

Natale, wearing a brown leather jacket in spite of 85 degree weather, questioned Judge Wheeler as to why his bond was so high.

"Because I don't like armed robbers," said Wheeler. He said later he felt both Natale and McCullar are "threats," and he is duty-bound to set bond at a high enough rate to ensure their appearance at a preliminary hearing scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, July 10, in Magistrate Court.

Natale also is charged with trafficking in a controlled substance (heroin) with the intent to distribute.

Wheeler explained that both the drug charge and the armed robbery charge are second degree felonies and carry penalties of up to nine years in the state penitentiary and/or a $10,000 fine.

The false imprisonment charge is a fourth degree felony which carries a penalty of up to 18 months in jail and/or a $5,000 fine.

Natale, his left leg in an ambulatory brace, made careful notes during the short proceedings. As he filled out forms to procure the services of the public defender, Natale asked whether his wife's bank salary should be included.

The tall bespectacled McCullar, wearing a Hawaiian print shirt, quietly filled out his financial disclosure form, then conducted a whispered conference with Judge Wheeler regarding his charge on a Texas parole violation.

Wheeler told the two they would be transferred to the Lincoln County Jail to await their July 10 hearing.

Ruidoso Police Detective Mike Lovelace said Natale was arrested in Ruidoso Downs last Thursday, and McCullar was apprehended in Tularosa on Friday.

Also arrested Thursday was a 23-year-old Ruidoso Downs man, David Lambert, said Lovelace.

Ruidoso Downs Police Chief Skip Hazel said Natale and Lambert were arrested at a trailer Lambert rented on Hilltop Circle.

Lambert, charged with possession of a controlled substance (heroin) with the intent to distribute, made his first appearance Monday in Magistrate Court. Wheeler set his bond at $20,000 with no 10 percent.

After explaining the charges and assigning a public defender, Wheeler set Lambert's first appearance hearing for July 10.

Downs recall petitioners back down

The backers of a petition to increase the number of trustees and recall the mayor in the Village of Ruidoso Downs, said they probably will not ask their attorney, Gary Mitchell, to try to force a new election in the Downs through the state court system.

Sandy Perry, one of the leaders in the movement to try to remove Mayor Jake "J.C." Harris from office, said because the Downs trustees decided not to treat the petition as a legal document, the group may be wasting their time if they pursue forcing a mayoral election.

Mitchell, attorney for the group that organized the petition drive in the Downs, said the petitioners could now seek an action from the District Court if they were still interested in seeing a new election in the Downs.

He also said he was interested in making sure the needs of his clients were met in the most satisfactory manner to them.

Acting attorney for the village, Richard Hawthorne, advised the trustees to treat the petition as an invalid document at a regular meeting of the Downs trustees on June 23.

Perry said, "We may have to let it (the petition) go."

However, she said many of the residents in the Downs were pursuing every possible method that was in accordance with the laws of the state to have Harris removed from office.

Perry said she hoped the state Legislature could be persuaded to pass a law that allowed for the recall of a mayor before Harris' four year term ended.

"We are not going to forgive or forget how he (Harris) acted at that meeting on June 9 when he wouldn't let Wilma (former village clerk Wilma Webb) speak," Perry said.

Perry said Harris' actions that night offended her personally because she usually had a great deal of respect for elected officials.

"If it looks like he (Harris) is going to serve his entire term I am not going to live in the Downs. I may have to put my house up for sale and move rather than continue to live somewhere where he is the mayor," Perry said.

Five are injured in 10 accidents

A rash of accidents plagued area law enforcement agencies last weekend.

According to Ruidoso Police reports four accidents with injuries and 10 accidents without injuries were recorded from Friday morning through Sunday evening.

Friday's two accidents, neither involving bodily injuries, occurred at 10 a.m. at the 90 degree curve on Cree Meadows Drive and at 5:30 p.m. at the traffic "Y" at Highway 70 and Sudderth Drive.

Saturday police reported accidents without injuries on Highway 37, at the main post office, near Apache Summit on Highway 70 and near Ruidoso High School.

The New Mexico State Police responded at 6 p.m. Saturday, June 28, to an accident with injuries west of Ruidoso on Highway 70.

State Police Officer Bart Skelton reported that Franklin Wheeler Jr., 24, and Peggy Maigs, 18, both of Holloman Air Force Base, were injured when their motorcycle slipped on wet pavement.

The two were treated and released at Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital, according to a hospital spokesman.

State Police reported that Barney Rue was the driver of a 1981 Chevrolet pickup that went out of control on his property east of Ruidoso and collided with a tree on Sunday, June 29.

Rue, a Ruidoso resident, was admitted to RHVH and was reported in stable condition Tuesday.

Police said Rue was cited for driving while intoxicated.

A Ruidoso woman, Ann Marie Walters, was treated and released at RHVH after a one-vehicle crash Saturday, June 29.

According to Ruidoso Police reports Walters was southbound on Gavilan Canyon Road about a fourth of a mile south of Meander Drive when she tried to avoid a gravelled section of road and apparently overcorrected and hit a tree.

Walters, who was driving a 1985 Honda station wagon, was cited for careless driving, police said.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor said a one-vehicle rollover on Carrizo Creek Road at about 7 p.m. Saturday sent one victim to the hospital. Swenor said the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department responded to that incident.

Spirit applauds Texas Appreciation Day

Texas Appreciation Weekend was termed a big success by Spirit of Ruidoso members.

Friday's wine and cheese party at the Quality Inn on Highway 70 was co-sponsored by the Quality Inn and Tierra Del Sol Condominiums, and attracted about 40 people.

Saturday, Ruidoso Police Sgt. Robert Kinney and Spirit of Ruidoso members "arrested" 12 Texan couples who were proclaimed ambassadors for the weekend. The couples were given champagne, yellow roses and tickets for prizes which were awarded at Saturday night's party and dance at the Sierra Mall.

The ambassadors included: grand prize winners Rolan and Lois Gamble and daughter Mona of Austin; Harris and Thelma Cantrell of El Paso; Ken and Shelley Wright of San Antonio; Norman and Betty Wright of Big Spring; Darrell and Nikkie Lewis of Midland; Dr. and Mrs. Paul Carroll of Lubbock; Douglas and Carol Mitchell of McCarney; Terry and Clara Grimes of Lamesa; Roger and Sharon Buck of Canyon; Fred and Sharon Watkins of Odessa; Jerry and Mary Miller of Bowie; and Robert and Donna Hedicke of El Paso.

The Gamble's grand prize included two nights lodging at Shadow Mountain Lodge, 30 gallons of gasoline at Ruidoso Chevron, Sunday brunch for two at Cree Meadows, breakfast for two at Kelley's, a meal for two at Whispering Pines, a family meal at Taste Freeze, dinner for two at the Bull Ring Restaurant, and they were guests at the Turf Club at Ruidoso Downs.

If you were planning on celebrating the Fourth of July by setting off fireworks in the Ruidoso area, you might want to change your plans.

Fireworks of any type are completely banned in Ruidoso, Ruidoso Downs and all areas of the Lincoln National Forest. Most fireworks are banned throughout Lincoln County.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor said police officers will investigate any complaints regarding fireworks.

"The fire department will have people out, too, so if (the fireworks ban) will be enforced," Swenor said. The story is the same in Ruidoso Downs.

"There are absolutely no fireworks allowed because of the obvious fire dangers. We're already chasing people down who are setting off fireworks," Ruidoso Downs Police Chief Skip Hazel said.

Steve Makowski, fire management officer of Smokey Bear Ranger District, said fireworks are forbidden in all national forests in Arizona and New Mexico, and most national forests in the country.

"People caught setting off fireworks in the forest will receive a violation notice; a mail-in type fine," Makowski said.

The Forest Service said the recent precipitation will help deter any fires that might result from fireworks being set off in the forest or surrounding areas.

Fireworks regulations are similar throughout Lincoln County. The county does not have a specific fireworks ordinance, but follows state law, Lincoln County Under-sheriff Charlie Cox said.

"The New Mexico statute says that only fireworks up to a certain size and charge can be used," Cox said. This includes sparklers and small firecrackers, he said.

Cox said that individual municipalities have defined their own regulations regarding fireworks and people planning on using them should contact their local fire departments first.

Humane Society starts fund drive

The Humane Society of Lincoln County has announced the start of its campaign to raise funds for the animal shelter building. The society's goal is $50,000.

The shelter is needed to house lost and abandoned animals the village animal control officer picks up off the street. Currently, the animals are taken to Fort Stanton.

Campaign fund co-chairwomen Hazel Haynsworth and Earlene Phillips started the Humane Society eight years ago. They would appreciate any pledges mailed to P.O. Box 1189, Ruidoso Downs, New Mexico 88346. For more information call 257-4547.

Twin culverts upstream from Fun Trackers Go Kart Track were unable to handle increased water levels from heavy rainfall Tuesday, causing water to run over and around the drainage area. The flood waters caused extensive damage to Ray Eidson's go kart track and building.

River or roadway? Neighbors watch as a trash bin is washed down Fifth Street near Gray Fox Gallery in rushing flood waters. The sudden storm Tuesday was brief but intense, and many areas were pelted with hail as well.

"That's not to minimize the damage we sustained," added Shaw.

That damage was discussed during most of Tuesday's special meeting, and Runnels heard concerns from village and county officials.

Since the state has limited funds to help Chaves, Eddy and Lincoln counties recover from flooding problems, Runnels said the three governments can maximize the benefits available by banding together in seeking Federal Emergency Management Administration (FEMA) funds.

Runnels, who'll be on hand for a joint meeting at 10 a.m. today (Thursday), July 3, in Roswell, said he'll also survey the damage from a helicopter.

"But I'm here to listen today," said Runnels. He asked village and county administrators to give a rundown on damages sustained.

Frank Potter, assistant village manager, said he didn't have a complete listing of Ruidoso's damage, but told Runnels of past problems with FEMA. He said he and his staff strive to present clear and accurate dollar estimates to FEMA, only to have funding requests slashed in half.

Lincoln County Manager Suzanne Cox agreed with Potter. She complained of too much paperwork and too many requirements that accompany disaster relief.

"It's hard to get our money, and they're hard to deal with," remarked Cox.

Both Potter and Cox said they are still in the process of surveying damage.

Runnels asked village officials to bring lists and estimates to Thursday's meeting.

"We've got to come up with some long-term solutions," said Runnels. "We don't want to come in and put a Band-Aid on something that needs a cast," he added.

Family gathers for their reunion

Descendants of Ann Harris Reese and Samuel George Reddy recently gathered in Ruidoso.

About 90 Reddy relatives from New Mexico, Texas, Indiana, Florida, California and Washington celebrated their Irish heritage with an old-fashioned sing-along of songs from Ireland.

The five generations represented are all descended from Samuel and Ann's 10 children.

Dorothy and Jack Parnell of Ruidoso Downs coordinated the family reunion with the help of Lorna and Jane Parnell.

Dorothy Parnell is the only living child of Lincoln County old-timer Herbert Reddy. Reddy, now deceased, was the oldest son of Samuel and Ann Reddy. He first came to Lincoln County in 1911.

Samuel Reddy was the first of his clan to be born in the United States.

Dorothy Parnell told of her great-grandfather's discontent as a caretaker on a big estate in Ireland in the early 1800s.

"You couldn't even hunt rabbits," said Parnell. Because of the many oppressions he suffered as a devout Catholic, Reddy came to the United States, and later sent for his family.

Parnell said her grandfather, Samuel, was born two weeks after the family settled in New York.

She said the family has lots of good stories of the adventures of their Irish ancestors in their new home.

She laughingly recalled one family tale of Samuel shooting a turkey, only to find that not all American turkeys are wild. She said his Irish experiences led him to hide that dead turkey in the family Christmas tree after learning that most turkeys are raised on farms.

That fear of reprisal probably followed him to America because of experiences with Irish game wardens. Parnell said he apparently had a close call in Ireland after shooting a rabbit.

MAKE SUMMER BLOOM! (Part I)

When planning your menus for summertime entertaining, give a little thought to table arrangements, too. You'll want attractive centerpieces that are as bright and colorful as the season. To give you some ideas, I've put together some fruit and vegetable centerpieces that are quick-to-assemble and really make summer bloom! Some even double as part of the meal!

Dip and Vegetable Fancies in a Basket

Zucchini, carrots and turnips
 Celery, broccoli and cherry tomatoes
 Cauliflower, green peppers and green beans
 Dip of your choice

Fancy vegetables and dip can be attractive enough for a centerpiece if you take time to create decorative vegetable sticks and slices. Try using a fluted knife on carrots and zucchini. Radish flowers also add a special touch and are easy to make as well as attractive.

To begin, line a round, shallow basket with lettuce leaves. Fill a hollowed-out green pepper with a dip of your choice and center in the middle of your basket. Surround pepper with a nice variety of fancy vegetables of varying shapes and color. Scallop the edges of the green pepper if desired.

For a very special touch ... make vegetable daisies from turnips and carrots. Slice turnips one-eighth inch thick and cut into flower shapes with a canape cutter. Slice carrots one-eighth inch thick and use these circles for the flower centers. Assemble flowers by centering carrots on turnip flower and insert wooden toothpick up through flowers and just into carrot circles. Arrange daisies around green pepper.

The land lease at Parker Chevron was terminated June 30 leaving station owner Troy Parker out of business and out of a job.

Parker must say good-bye After 25 years in business

by SHARI LEWIS
News Staff Writer

Last Tuesday, Chevron Oil Company dug up the tanks, tore out the pumps and air compressor, and Parker Chevron closed its doors.

After almost 25 years, Troy Parker, 54, is reluctantly giving up his post as owner and operator of Parker Chevron service station in Ruidoso Downs.

Chevron has decided not to renew its lease with land owner Albert Henry, of Logan, New Mexico, which leaves Parker's service station inoperative. The company originally acquired a 20-year lease with a five-year option. A little more than three years ago, Parker learned Chevron was considering terminating the lease, although he was not certain of why.

"Some Chevron representatives and I talked about two factors. They had heard this road out here (Highway 70) was going to be changed and that the land owner wanted too much money for the property. I don't know," Parker said.

As of June 30, 1986, Parker, a Chevron employee for 27 years, will have to look elsewhere for employment. He says he does not feel bitter toward Chevron.

"In all fairness, Chevron has treated me pretty good. I look at it two ways. In a way, I'm glad to get out. I'm tired after 25 years of this. Then, in a few days, it will hit me that I don't have a job. I'll probably feel real bad," Parker said.

Parker plans on taking a vacation and then looking for a personal business investment.

"Right now, I think I need some time off; I need some time to rest. Then, I'm going to try to find something I can buy; some kind of business of my own," he said.

Parker made it clear he was not leaving the Ruidoso area.

"I'll always live in Ruidoso, I love it here. I built a new home 23 years ago, and I've raised four kids here," he said.

Parker opened the station on February 7, 1962, at age 29. He has seen his business go through many changes.

"When I opened in 1962, I made about $5 a day. I make a lot more now, but money doesn't mean much," Parker said.

Parker has seen the price of gasoline go from 35 cents a gallon to $1.49. Although prices have continued to change, he likes to run his station the "old fashioned way."

"I still get out there and pump the gas, wash the windows and everything. Some stations don't do that anymore," he said.

Without support from the local community, Parker said he would not have been able to stay open for 25 years.

"I have some of the same customers I had when I opened. The only reason I could have stayed so long is because the local people have patronized me.

"I hate to leave, but that's the way it goes. I just want to say good-bye to all of my customers," Parker said.

Warrior volleyball team will be busy

by GARY BROWN
Sports Writer

Ruidoso High School's volleyball team plans to stay busy the rest of the summer in Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) tournaments.

Some Warrior players will compete in a Portales tournament Saturday and Sunday, July 26-27. They also will compete in a tournament at West Mesa High School in Albuquerque in early August.

Following that tournament, Ruidoso will have an AAU tournament in the Warrior gymnasium the next weekend.

"We've had enough players for about two complete teams," said Warrior head coach Pixie Arthur. "We had 14 kids in the tournament in Roswell. I was hoping for more than that."

However, varsity player Mikki

Roller did not compete in the Roswell tournament. Arthur is hopeful of having Roller's services for the Portales tournament.

"We'll probably limit our tournament to five or six teams," Arthur remarked. "Maybe just a round-robin tournament."

Official Warrior practice will begin Monday, August 11. However, some of the Warrior players have been practicing on their own.

Around Sports

with Gary Brown

Drugs are becoming as big a part of professional and college sports as network-televized games and multi-year contracts.

The recent deaths of former University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias and National Football League defensive back Don Rogers bear this out.

Both athletes had taken cocaine before their deaths—and the drug was the cause of death for both athletes.

Why are drugs so popular with big-time athletes?

For one, some drugs are expensive and professional athletes are more able to afford it than most people.

But the main reason probably is because many professional and collegiate athletes feel above the law, as do a lot of other "successful" yuppie-aged professionals.

They see drugs (particularly cocaine) as a way to have fun while not actually participating in sports (although a few athletes probably take drugs during the course of a game).

A lot of people see drug use as something exciting or romantic to do, and they think it can't hurt them.

But it can of course, and that leads to all the sympathetic talk from people around sports about drug-using athletes.

When an athlete (or anybody) dies of drug use, people call it a tragedy and show sympathy for the victim.

But the person didn't have to start taking drugs.

He or she did it because they wanted to do it. And they did it by spending money that most of the rest of us would love to have to pay bills, put in the bank or buy extra clothes and food with.

Yes, drugs are an epidemic in big-time sports. And when a professional athlete dies of drugs, it's a tragedy.

But to show sympathy toward the athlete is another thing. It's something they don't really deserve.

They have it all—and then they blow it.

On a more lighthearted note, I will not be running in either the Mesclero 10-K Fun Run or the Smokey Bear Run this weekend.

A lot of local people probably will be running in the two races, but most of my workouts recently have been on my bicycle.

Riding on a bicycle can be just as strenuous as running, particularly if you're going uphill.

So I figure I'll just be a spectator this weekend. Taking pictures of other people running can be fun, and you avoid the strain on you legs.

Youths continue progress in Moffat Soccer Camp

The Bobby Moffat Soccer Camp ends today (Thursday), July 3, at White Mountain School.

Local youths have been taught basic fundamentals and watched soccer films for four days. Moffat had to go back to Dallas, Texas, Monday, but assistant coaches Randall Addington and John Chisom have worked with the players.

About 25 youths have come out for the camp. Addington and Chisom are pleased with the way the players have responded.

"We hoped for a few more kids, but they've given 110 percent," Addington said. "They're learning. You can see their eyes light up when they learn something and do it right."

Addington and Chisom also spoke and showed films at a banquet for the Ruidoso Soccer Association Tuesday night at the Ruidoso Public Library. Both players and parents attended the banquet.

Chamber revises new budget

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce Executive Committee in a special meeting Tuesday approved a revised edition of the chamber's 1986-87 budget.

The special meeting was called last Thursday when the chamber's Board of Directors met to elect new officers and approve a new budget. Some board members with questions concerning the proposed budget asked that the executive committee look over the budget and make necessary revisions.

The revised report gives the chamber a $164,750 budget for 1986-87, down $4,378 from last year's expenditures of $169,128.

At the meeting, the directors went into a closed session to discuss the $50,850 salary figure. They decreased the figure by $300 leaving $50,550 available for chamber staff salaries. This figure is up $2,747 from the 1985-86 figure of $47,802.

The budget worksheet includes revenues and costs of revenue. A few of the larger revenue producing entities include the Art Festival which the chamber hopes will produce $45,600 in revenue; $66,000 in revenues from membership dues and $14,500 from Lodgers' Tax funds.

The major cost is the Art Festival which will cost the chamber an estimated $19,669.

Gourmet to serve at track

by SHARI LEWIS
News Staff Writer

If hamburgers and burritos cannot satisfy your appetite, Catering by Don Strange has a treat in store for you this Thursday through Sunday.

Don Strange, of San Antonio, Texas, is in Ruidoso and has set up a "Fourth of July Cafe" in the Sales Pavilion at Ruidoso Downs in conjunction with the Stars-N-Stripes Mixed Horse Sales. The cafe will be open from 6:30 a.m. to midnight each day.

Strange has been in the catering business all of his life and has catered many events including cattle sales, private parties, Republican Convention parties in Dallas, Texas, the Newport Roundup in Newport, Rhode Island, the Cattle Baron's Ball in Dallas and various benefit parties in Houston, Dallas and San Antonio, to name a few.

But, the real news is the tantalizing menu of gourmet food that will be available concession style to participants of the horse races, the Stars-N-Stripes horse auction and to the general public.

Strange will be serving fajita tacos, shish kebabs, sausage, sirloin steaks and blackened red fish cooked Cajun style outside, and fajita and chicken tacos, fruit and salad bar, hamburgers and hot dogs inside. Also indoors will be a cart with three different entrees each day. In the morning, the cart will feature french omelettes, at noon seafood crepes and at 5 p.m. sauteed oysters. A variety of pastries will be available as well.

Strange said the food will be prepared at the pavilion.

"We cook everything right in front of the people. It makes it more appealing," he said.

This is the first event Strange has catered in Ruidoso, and he plans to return in the future. He hopes the cafe will be a convenience for people at the track and attending the auction.

"There is a lot of excitement surrounding this sale. Hopefully we can do our part to make it equally fun and exciting for the people," Strange said.

The Silver Lining

by Daniel Agnew Storm

Like Old Times

After sparring and shadowboxing in the sky a few days, the clouds, the lightning and the thunder really got down to work. Five inches of rain fell here at the place in less days. Then on the twenty third the river came up, causing me to go around by the old road, all bringing back memories of the early days of heavy rains.

The Flowers Bloom Forth Brighter Still
One of the rainiest Junes I can remember has brought certain plants, that do not get a second glance in most year, into majestic loveliness of blooms.

One of these is the humble Salt Cedar, not considered any great shakes as an ornamental plant. In most years during its blooming time in June, the Salt Cedar will bring forth tiny flowers on its long feathery branches of such a dull pink that your eyesight passes it by on the roadside.

This year, after the good rains on Memorial Day, in only three or four days, what was this giant bouquet of bright rose color all of a sudden decorating the wayside? The Salt Cedar adorned in purest pink, fit to be an ornamental plant in the proudest parks, botanical gardens, or yards.

This reminds me of something

Albert Richardson said the other day:

"Todo el valle anda vestido de Domingo"
"All the valley is dressed in its Sunday clothes."

Don Edwards

Our hearts go out to the loved ones and friends of Buford D. (Don) Edwards, who was called Home by Our Lord on Friday, June twenty seven.

Don, as he was affectionately known, will be remembered as one of Ruidoso's favorite people, a man of great accomplishments, devoted to the welfare of his community and the service of his fellow man.

In his profession as engineer, he worked in several places in the two Americas. He spent several years working on the Alaskan pipe line, which extends all the way across Alaska from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez—one of history's great construction projects. He was in South America for years working for oil companies.

Though in ill health for the last several years, he kept on, ever cheerful ever helpful, an inspiration to all of us. I remember one time down at the Ruidoso News Picnic at the Storm Ranch. Don took great interest in the trees, birds and squirrels.

His devoted wife, Carmen, says of Don:

"When you had Don for a friend, he was really your friend. And he was always very considerate. He was never cross, never complained, although often in pain.

"And he was very tender hearted. We had a squirrel at our home that Don tamed until the creature would almost come right up to him. Then we had a Blue Jay we called B.J. Don made friends with him so that he was really tame, would come right up close—very friendly, a real pet."

Don will always hold a special spot in our hearts, and we rejoice that he is in the loving care of Our Lord in Heaven.

Happy Birthday
To David Bonnell

We all wish a happy birthday to that All American Boy, David Bonnell of the Bonnell Ranch in Glenco, born July Fourth, 1937, in Roswell to Ralph Bonnell and the former Jewell Coe Allison.

He graduated from Ruidoso High School in 1959. Later he served overseas in the Air Corps.

He is a direct descendant of Lincoln County Pioneers on both sides of his family; and in his daily life carries on the traditions of the early days. He is a true friend in need, a hard worker and has a happy, light hearted outlook—grateful for the simple blessings of life, always ready with a bright smile for friend or stranger alike.

On December fourteen, 1957, he was married to the former Della Bonnell. They have raised three wonderful children: Joel, Ruthie and Paul. We are all very proud of this fine family; and we wish David many happy returns of the day and all God's blessings.

We call to mind the great movie of a few years back starring the late James Cagney who played George M. Cohan, the writer of patriotic songs. A few lines of one of Cohan's songs, featured in the show, also are remembered:

"I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy,
Yankee doodle do or die,
A real live nephew of my Uncle Sam
Born on the Fourth of July."

Mark's Fourth of July
Western Art Show
At the Artisan Gallery

Our Mother used to say that when our brother Mark was born, he had his hands held close to his chest as if anxious to protect them.

These hands have been busy painting and drawing pictures, and carving and modeling sculptures, mostly of horses, horsemen and the horseback world, for about seventy five years—beginning from his early days before he could talk.

There in Valdez, Alaska, at the age of about one and a half years, he was making marks with pencil and crayon on paper and cardboard, fascinated by what he had done but not completely satisfied with the result.

He needs must try over and over again, prompted by that God given call within his nature. He is the same way today, always reaching out trying to improve, making each picture or sculpture more true to the mark than the last.

Speaking of Valdez again, the groceries were brought to the house by Mr. Perkins in his one horse wagon. Mark would be watching out the window and would laugh with delight at the sight of the horse, and nothing would do but Mark being brought out to pet the gentle bay with light mane and tail.

Since that day, horses and Western Ranch life have been at the center of Mark's life. Therefore, it was a fortunate day for him that we arrived here in 1925 when ranch life was still much as it was in the old days.

Although the great Charles M. Russell is the next thing to Mark's Patron Saint, his work is immediately recognized as his very own. He has something of himself in every picture or sculpture.

I noticed this trend when he was about seven years old in Juneau, Alaska. It was a long rainy day, and he was at work with his crayons.

He had completed a picture of a boy running past some mud puddles. The foot that was back and in the air had the toe turned up where the heel ought to be. I pointed this out to Mark and he said,

"Never mind. I know what I'm doing."

He "knows what he is doing" all right, being one of those fortunate ones who is doing exactly what he was cut out to do. He will turn seventy six this September; yet he says,

"I feel that my best days are ahead of me."

And why not, with President Reagan past seventy five, and Willie Shoemaker winning the Kentucky Derby at the age of about fifty?

He tells me not to go overboard in talking about him, that I should let his work "speak for itself".

He is right on the mark on that thinking. His work does indeed speak for itself, and for him, and for the American West.

Any interested person may also ascertain in the office of the County Clerk a description of the property to be assessed and the maximum amount of benefit estimated to be derived from those tracts or parcels of land by the Improvements. Reference is hereby made to such documents on file in the office of the County Clerk for further detail.

On July 18, 1986, at 1:00 p.m., at the Ruidoso Village Hall, Ruidoso, New Mexico, in the County of Lincoln, the owners of the property to be assessed or any other person interested therein may file a written protest or objection and may appear before the Commission and may be heard as to the propriety and advisability of constructing the Improvements, as to the estimated cost thereof, as to the manner of payment thereof and as to the manner of levying assessments against individual tracts or parcels of land. Any person desiring to appear before the Commission and be heard shall be asked to register with the Clerk of the Commission prior to consideration of matters pertaining to such hearing.

Any person filing a written protest or objection, as aforesaid, shall have the right within thirty days after the County Commission has concluded its hearing, to determine the advisability of constructing the Improvements, has determined the type and character of the Improvements, and has created the District, to commence an action or suit in any court of competent jurisdiction to correct or set aside such determination, but thereafter, all action or suits attacking the validity of the proceedings and the amount of the benefit shall be perpetually barred.

Juniper Scale
The needles turn yellow as a result of sucking by tiny circular scales which are at first snow white, then turn gray or black, the pest winters in the female adult stage.

Twig growth may be checked and the entire tree weakened by heavy infestation of Rocky Mountain Aphid, a reddish brown insect 1/8 inch long.

Spraying in June and August helps get rid of these pests and makes for a healthy tree!

"Somewhere over the rainbow... is that all it says, Dorothy?!"

Wright PROVIDENCE JOURNAL-BULLETIN

Inside the Capitol

by Fred McCaffrey

SANTA FE—If it's not one thing, it's another.

Behind closed doors in the Governor's office, considerable study is being given to discover whether that ruling by federal judge Juan Burciaga about what our Corrections Department may and may not do will make (ugh!) still another special legislative session imperative.

If Corrections, one of state government's big spenders, is not allowed to cut its payroll even by the amounts originally mandated by the regular 1986 session of the Legislature, that whole plan developed by Toney Anaya and the Legislative Finance Committee to keep us from going belly up may have to be revised broadly. It's doubtful if that can be accomplished without legislative action.

Meanwhile, word seeps out from behind those same closed gubernatorial doors that the Duran consent decree to which Judge Burciaga's opinion is directed is about the only thing that has saved the job of Corrections Secretary Michael Francke for many months now.

Francke is not highly regarded by those closest to Toney Anaya, who also hears frequent beefs about the man from legislative leaders. Their complaint is a simple one—that Francke just does not tell them the truth.

As long as lawsuits over the Duran matter are pending, however, it's hard to arrange one of those announcements that Francke has resigned "for personal reasons" and "to pursue other interests" that have become routine when still another Anaya Cabinet Secretary bites the dust.

State Senator John Budagher, one of those dissident Republicans who joined in that recent coup to overturn Senate leader Les Houston, doesn't mince words when talking about why that action was taken.

In a lengthy interview with an Albuquerque newspaper, Budagher says Houston "ruled the Senate for 18 turmoil-filled months of inflexibility, ruthless maneuvering and intimidation, pledging and plotting to crush opposition simply for the sake of conquest."

He goes on to add that "it was Les Houston's position that we had to show the minority party who was boss. We had to kill bills, regardless of their merit, to show the other party we were in control." As an example, Budagher speaks of 1985, when the Senate killed a string of 34 successive bills simply because they were sponsored by Democrats.

Budagher told the Albuquerque Tribune Houston made a "winner-take-all" philosophy part of the Senate Republican's agenda.

The deal that delivered to Houston the job of president pro tem in 1984 has always been kept secret from the rest of us. Budagher now says it called for Les to be named leader in exchange for deserting his Democratic confederates and joining with Republicans to form a coalition of conservatives to take over control of the Senate. According to the agreement, Budagher now tells us, Houston was given the pro tem's job for two years and "was supposed to take a secondary role." He would manage the Senate, appoint committees and then take a back seat. That didn't happen. As Budagher puts it, "His (Houston's) part of the bargain lasted about 10 minutes."

Some among the Republican members were disturbed when Houston appointed himself to the Senate Finance Committee, a job the pro tem traditionally did not take. He also gave offense by taking what Budagher calls "a dictatorial approach" to other committee assignments, including stacking committees with his supporters and even giving important posts to what Budagher describes as "under-qualified lawmakers."

The final offense came in the eyes of some when the Houston-led 1985 regular session turned our Legislature into what Budagher calls "the least respected one in the history of the state." He goes on to say, "Our reputation was worse than Toney Anaya's because of Les Houston's confrontational attitude."

All that, according to this knowledgeable insider, made the decision to rise up and undo what had been done virtually inevitable.

Letters to the editor

DEAR EDITOR:

ABSOLUTELY UNBELIEVABLE. You! The Ruidoso taxpayer have been "kicking in" for the construction of a Baseball Field in Alto at an altitude of over 8,000 feet. How about a great idea like a tennis court at the North Pole? We already have (3) available fields to play baseball on but we do not have (1) ALL WEATHER YEARAROUND COMMUNITY CENTER. If you are under 21, you can always drive out to Alto this winter and watch the snow falling on the new baseball field, because there is no place in Ruidoso to go.

The common complaint of teenagers in this town is there is no place they can meet, play ping-pong, dance or just sit around and interrelate with their peers YEAR ROUND. I don't think it takes a genius to realize that vandalism, crime and drug abuse would be greatly curtailed if this village would do something for all the residents, instead of just catering to the (money bearing) visitors. WE NEED A COMMUNITY CENTER, not just for the minors, but for all locals, some of them cannot afford RUIDOSO'S HIGH PRICED GASOLINE to drive to Alto to watch a baseball game, or pay for swimming, when it isn't raining, snowing, lightning, or too cold. All age levels could benefit from a local COMMUNITY CENTER. Checkers, chess, jukebox, ping-pong, etc., etc.

As you angrily make a U turn at the various washed out bridges here in town, do you really feel kindly towards the idiots that spend your TAX MONEY on frivolous projects? Maybe there aren't any idiots involved; maybe some greedy smart guys are making big money on these frivolous projects. Who knows?

I'm curious. Did the local taxpayers vote on this project? Was this expensive project advertised prior to approval?

How will the senior citizens, women, children and teen-agers benefit from this expensive project?

How much is this baseball field costing us? Possibly the "Geniuses" responsible for this project are the same "Ding bats" that came up with the brilliant idea to tax the locals for an OUTDOOR swimming pool at an altitude of over 6,000 feet which cannot be used if there is a lightning threat, rain, snow, freezing cold or if some underprivileged child hasn't the money for a ticket.

I expect a hysterical rebuttal from parties that will try to rationalize the wisdom of these expensive projects. I also expect a lot of Bull and "tap dancing."

I do not hate baseball. Also, by the way, S.M.A.R.T. could stand for "Smart Marketers Avoid Ripoff Town." Most Ruidoso Merchants are decent retailers that offer fair merchandise for fair profit. It is the few greedy merchants that spoil it for the rest of them. It must be hard to stay in business when your greedy competitors are causing potential buyers to call this village "Ripoff" instead of Ruidoso.

We all know about being ripped off every time we go to a gas pump here in town. I saw watermelons at the Farmer's Market Store in Tularosa at 19 cents per pound, here on the same day, 23 cents and up on the same day.

I rest my case.

WALLY HESSE

DEAR EDITOR:

I have never been confined in a hospital prior to the June 7th accident opposite Cree Meadows Country Club. No adequate words are available to properly describe the overwhelming response of concern and kindness offered to me and Rosaly Sheppard. I sincerely hope the same personal prayers and concern have been extended to the devastated Annala family.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wess of Ashville, N.C., parents of Rosaly, and her three children, Glenn, Eric and Linda, have been so touched by the outstanding treatment we received at the emergency room at Ruidoso-Hondo Valley Hospital, the EMT unit who transported Rosaly to St. Mary's Hospital in Roswell, Drs. Turner and Kumar of St. Mary's, who were awaiting her arrival with the emergency room and ICU set up for immediate action. We have been in constant touch with St. Mary's, who have provided all the necessary elements for her benefit. As of this writing, Mrs. Sheppard has not regained consciousness. However, we know the nine prayer groups between Ruidoso and Roswell will continue to support God's efforts and sustain our hopes for her recovery.

To Drs. Annala and Echols, the Ruidoso Police Dept., Tommy Hall and Charlie Kemp, who accompanied us to the hospital, and to the multitude of friends who have been unwavering in proving what true caring for their fellow man really means; for the flowers (Gardens of Eden), cards, visits, calls, errands and most important, for the sincere expressions of love, our grateful thanks.

Love to you all
BARBARA DUFF

DEAR EDITOR:

On behalf of the citizens of the Ruidoso-Ruidoso Downs, Lincoln County area, I want to publicly thank the entire membership of the White Mountain Search and Rescue organization for all the time, effort and concern they provide each and every time help is needed. Without naming them individually, they are, without exception, the embodiment of the true American spirit—neighbors helping neighbors, without regard for payment. As a matter of fact, they have to individually pay dues to be able to volunteer their help. We have all been at least indirect recipients of their services during our weather problems, aircraft accidents and lost person searches, so next time you see a person wearing a WMSAR jacket or cap, shake his or her hand and say "thanks". Let's support them, they deserve it.

Cruisin Prince may be king of Governor's Cup Friday

A strong field of distance specialists headed by Cruisin Prince meet in Friday's $15,000-added Governor's Handicap at Ruidoso Downs.

The 7 1/2-furlong stake race highlights an expanded 13-race Fourth of July program that opens with a special noon first post to accommodate the second session of the Stars-N-Stripes Sale that begins at 7 p.m. in the All American Sales Pavilion.

Cruisin Prince has been assigned high weight of 121 pounds by Ruidoso Racing Secretary Harold Payne for the Governor's Handicap, which also will carry $5,000 in Breeders' Cup Premium Awards.

Cruisin Prince comes to Ruidoso from Ak-Sar-Ben Race Track where he ran fifth in the Ak-Sar-Ben Handicap. In his last out on a New Mexico track, the gelding trained by Barry Germany led from gate-to-wire to upset stake champion Curribot in the Albuquerque Handicap in April.

That's Incredible, who will carry 120 pounds for trainer L.Z. Roberts, enters the race in top form coming off his fourth straight win with a 5 1/2-length margin in a 7 1/2-furlong allowance race on June 21 at Ruidoso. The colt, who will be ridden by Juan Arteaga, has finished in-the-money in his last 11 starts, including eight wins.

A proven stakes winner, That's Incredible won the Winsham Lad Handicap and Texas Derby at Sunland Park; the Sophomore Handicap at Albuquerque Downs and Countess Blade and Jockey Club Handicaps last year at Ruidoso.

Copper Case enters the race coming off a 2-length win in the Mesalero Apache Handicap on June 15 at Ruidoso Downs. Trained by Clifford Lambert Sr. and ridden by Casey Lambert, the 9-year-old gelding is the defending champion in last year's Governor's Handicap. He also won the Isayoboy Handicap last season at Ruidoso and the Charles Tyler Handicap at Santa Fe.

Noon post time won't bother undefeated Barbarys Pokey

With seven-straight victories under his belt, Barbarys Pokey has been assigned a 127-pound load as he seeks his third consecutive stakes win at Ruidoso Downs in Saturday's Jet Deck Handicap.

A full field of 10 veteran quarter horses will face off in the 440-yard Jet Deck, racing for the winner's share of $10,000 in added prize money. The dash headlines an expanded 13-race card with the $17,250 Pocket Coin Handicap sharing the marquee. That 5 1/2-furlong sprint brings out Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity winner Sid's Ego matching strides with eight 2-year-old thoroughbreds.

Soft landing

There's no challenger in sight as jockey Casey Lambert takes Leading Jet to an easy victory in the $10,050 Zia Handicap on June 26 at Ruidoso Downs. The four-year-old son of Easy Jet stepped off the mountain track's 400-yard course in 20.24 seconds over a track listed as sloppy. Cliff Lambert Sr. conditions the colt for LeRoy Splres of Snyder, Texas, who collected a winner's purse of $6,030. It was Casey Lambert's first quarter-horse stakes victory this season, although he accounted for the Kansas Derby consolation earlier in the meet.

Track Talk

When Jack Munari claimed Corporate Bug for $12,500 he had no idea the investment would pay off so big. The gelding won the $542,000 Rainbow Derby on Sunday (June 29) at Ruidoso Downs and the owner from Paso Robles, California, was all smiles in the winner's circle following the race.

"This is the biggest race I have ever won and the best horse I have ever owned," said Munari. "It's not the money that's important. It's the pride of winning."

Munari claimed Corporate Bug at Los Alamitos for $12,500 "because we wanted an allowance horse to add to our stable." The gelding performed so well in winning his first two allowance races, the owner decided to pay the $15,000 supplemental fee to run him in the Rainbow Derby trials. The win was worth $222,140 to Munari.

"I don't necessarily feel that he was the best horse running in the race today," he said. "But I think he went in running at his peak. I'm not really a horseman. I'm just an owner. All the credit has to go to my trainer and jockey."

Trainer Bruce Jackson said that bringing Corporate Bug to Ruidoso was a "spur of the moment thing. We were bringing Streaking Dash for the trials and decided at the last minute to supplement this one. Streaking Dash didn't qualify for the finals. I'm sure glad we decided to bring this one."

Winning jockey Kip Diderickson was actually sitting in for Munari's regular Robbie Bard, who was injured in a riding accident at Los Alamitos shortly before he was to leave for Ruidoso. Diderickson is giving half of his winner's purse to Bard, whose injuries left him in a body cast.

Trainer Dwayne Gilbreath gave veterinarian Dr. Robert Lewis all the credit for Six Popper's win in the Rainbow Derby Consolation on Saturday (June 28). Lewis, of Elgin, Texas, who has performed successful surgery on several of today's best running quarter horses removed bone chips from two of the colt's knees last fall.

"Chips in two knees will usually end a horse's career," said Gilbreath in the winner's circle following the race. "If it wasn't for Dr. Lewis, I doubt if Six Popper would be running today."

It took the colt a few strides out of the gate to find his footing on the track rated as heavy following rains the three previous days. "This was his first time out on an off track and we had some concern about it because you don't know what is going to happen in the mud," said Gilbreath. "He was beaten out of the gate, but he finally got hold of the track and began to run. He's a gutsy colt that just can't accept being outrun."

Trainer Randy Howell said he wasn't surprised that Flamed won Saturday's (June 28) Aspen Handicap by eight lengths, despite going off as a 35-1 longshot. "The filly has been ready and we thought we had a good shot today. She's just had a lot of tough luck up until now," said Howell in the winner's circle. "I think if there was any real luck involved, it was for us to be fortunate enough to be weighted into the race in the first place."

Trainer Clifford Lambert Sr. and his jockey son Casey continued their hot hand in Ruidoso Downs stake competition by combining to win Thursday's (June 28) Zia Handicap. It was the fourth time this season they have paired up for a trip to the winner's circle in a stake race. The other wins include the Mesalero Handicap and both the Norgor Derby and Futurity. Lambert Sr. also won the Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity, while Casey rode the winner of the Kansas Derby Consolation.

Martinez and Lambert rest in winner's circle

Joe Martinez and Casey Lambert rode five winners each over the weekend to share Jockey of the Week honors at Ruidoso Downs. Cecil Crabtree, who had been to the winner's circle only once this season, won three times to earn training honors.

Jacky Martin held his lead in the jockey standings despite not winning a race over the weekend. Martinez is in second place, three wins behind following his performance.

Lambert moved into third. Apprentice Mike Clark rode three winners to take over sixth place, while Darrel Blevins moved into ninth with two wins.

Dwayne Gilbreath moved to within one win of Jack Brooks, who holds the lead in the trainer standings. Gilbreath had two winners, as did Clifford Lambert Sr., who is in third place two wins behind Brooks.

Stars N Stripes Sale promises quality horses for holiday buyers

The All American Sales Co. will host an expanded format for the second annual Stars N Stripes Sale scheduled over the July Fourth weekend at Ruidoso Downs. Highlighting the four-day auction will be two separate sessions devoted to the Walter Merrick Near Dispersal Sale and the Viking Ranches Production Sale.

The Viking Ranches Production Sale kicks off the series, which runs Thursday, July 3, through Sunday, July 6. The opening session follows Thursday's time trials for the Rainbow Futurity.

A special production sale of the California-based operation, the Viking Ranches sale will feature 82 head of well-bred broodmares in foal and with foals at their sides by such standout sires as Casady Casanova, Band Of Azure, Sizzle Te, Voom Voom and Indian Instinct.

Viking Ranches also will be offering several yearlings and horses in training in the two sessions of the Stars N Stripes Sale slated Friday, July 4, and Sunday July 6.

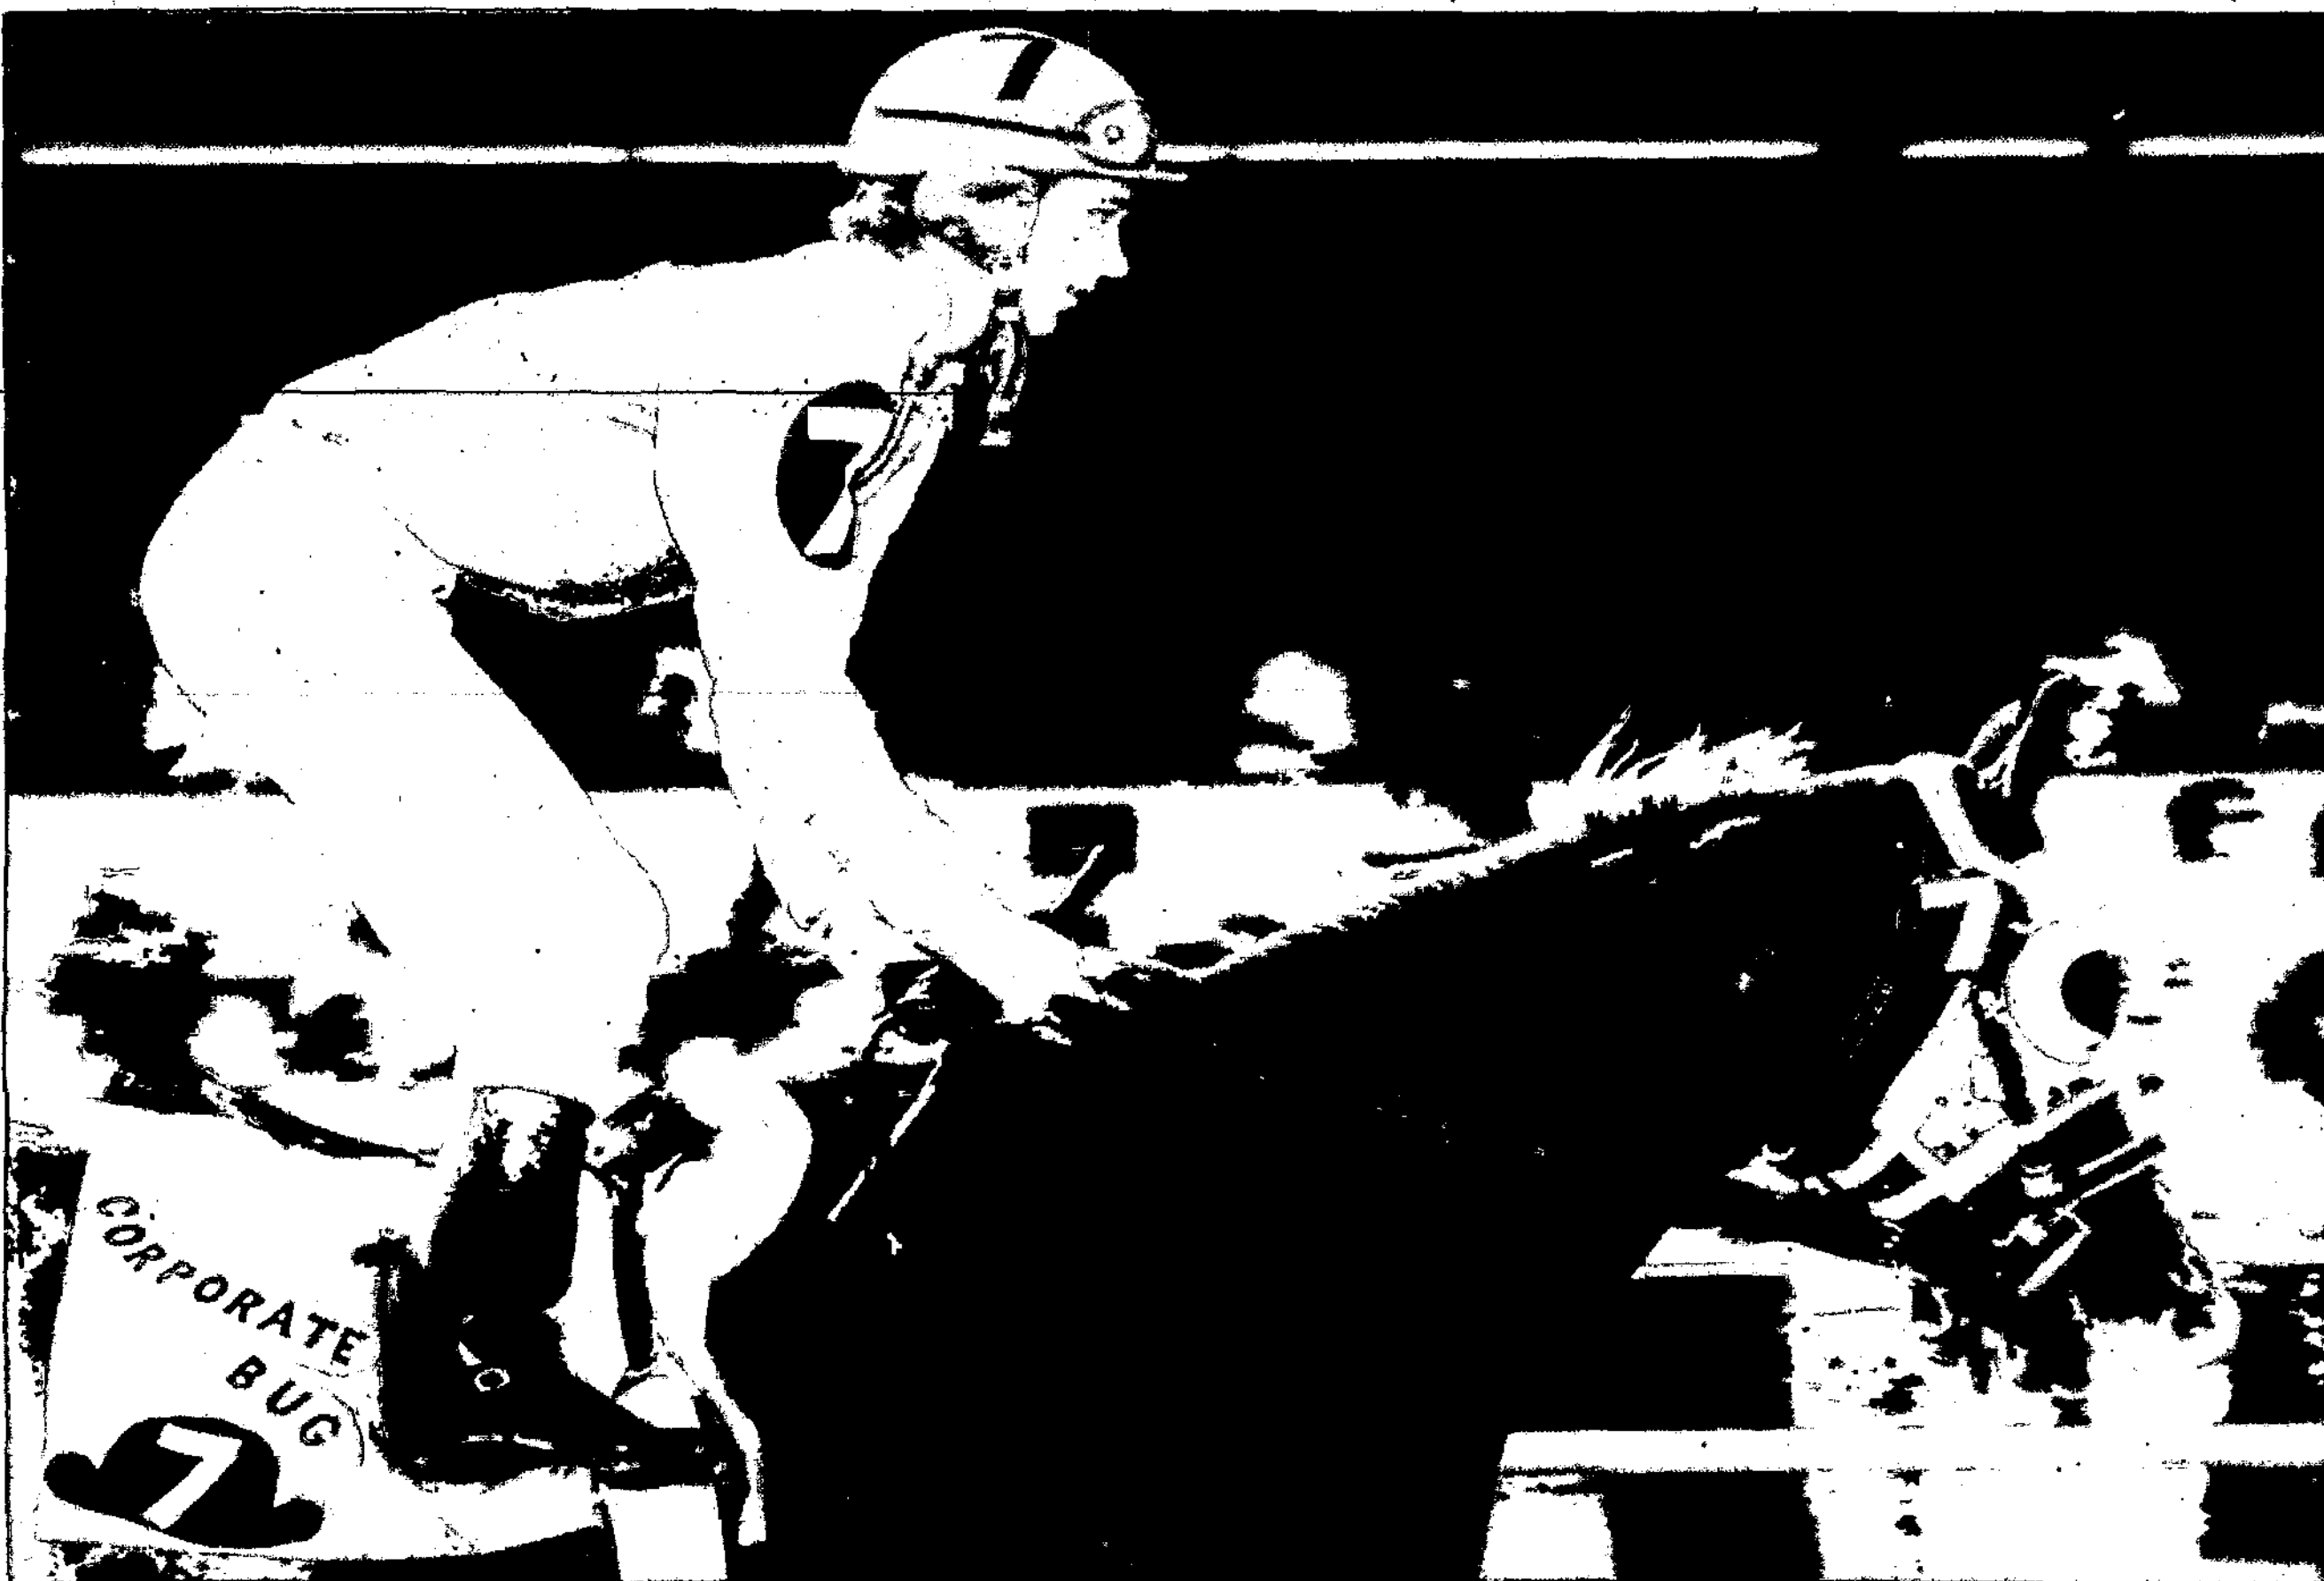

The Walter Merrick Near Dispersal Sale splits the two Stars N Stripes sessions on Saturday, July 5. In cutting down his operation, Walter Merrick will be offering some of the top quality foundation bloodstock that has made him one of the most distinguished and successful breeders of outstanding race horses in the industry.

Among the horses catalogued in the Merrick Sale are: the great champion and All American Futurity winner Easy Date in foal to World Champion Special Effort, the only horse to ever capture the Triple Crown at Ruidoso Downs; Easy Baby Jet, the dam of Sumner Encounter, in foal to Special Effort; and Talking Picture in foal to L'Natural, which will produce a full brother or sister to Loguendi.

Included with these outstanding mares are 120 head of yearlings, horses in training, broodmares in foal to Easy Jet, and several outstanding thoroughbred mares in foal to thoroughbred stallions such as Our Hero, Orchestrate, Hempen and Raise Caine.

"Only in a sale of this type are horses of this caliber ever offered at public auction," Sales Director Bob Standish commented. "These special sales, along with our regular schedule, make the All American Sales Co.'s program of sales a must to attend for serious breeders of quarter horses."

Undercover win for Corporate Bug

Corporate Bug, the young quarter horse claimed for $12,500 last summer and supplemented at a cost of $15,000 to the Rainbow Derby, won the Grade I stake with a neck margin under popular California rider Kip Diderickson Sunday at Ruidoso Downs. The victory was worth $222,140 to owner Jack Munari of Paso Robles, California. Bruce Jackson trains the son of Shawne Bug. The final time for the 440-yard event was 21.94 seconds.

Skiing in

Rider Danny Sorenson breezes to an eight-length margin aboard Flamed in the $17,100 Aspen Handicap Saturday at Ruidoso Downs. The Draconic filly was posting her first win in four appearances at the mountain track this season. Sorenson was making his second trip to the winner's circle of a stakes race, having accounted for the Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity on May 31. Flamed finished the 5 1/2-furlong course in 1:06 three-fifths over a track listed as heavy. Randy Howell trains the filly for Sam Henderson of Odessa, Texas.

Did Billy the Kid and Jesse James live to old age?

by STEVE STEIN
News Staff Writer

Was "Brushy" Bill Roberts Billy the Kid?

If "the Kid" died that July night in 1881 at the hands of Sheriff Pat Garrett, a young outlaw died, but a legend did not.

If Billy the Kid escaped to Mexico and lived out the rest of his life as "Brushy" Bill Roberts, he led an exciting, but somehow tragic life after 1881.

What historians know about Roberts actually comes from stories Roberts told about himself and a third cousin of none other than Jesse James.

A former Austin, Texas, woman, who now lives in New Mexico, took care of a man who claimed to be Jesse James for most of his latter years.

James and Roberts were very good friends and often got together during their long lives.

James' cousin, Ola Everhard, swears she tended to the real Jesse James, who used the alias Frank Dalton, until his death in 1951.

Many of the pictures, documents and artifacts that have fueled the controversy about the true identity of Roberts and James-or-Dalton came from Everhard.

Everhard is still alive and convinced the world will one day believe Jesse James died at 103, and was a best friend of Billy the Kid, who did not die until he was 91.

Both men died in the early 1950s in Texas.

Roberts and James saw each other often during their long lifetimes, but Roberts may have led a much more interesting life.

A Roswell researcher, William Tunstall, has documented many significant events in the life of "Brushy" Bill Roberts which took place after 1881.

Affidavits from people who knew Roberts his entire life state Roberts came back into the United States in 1884 after working on ranches in Mexico, and recovering from wounds suffered in an 1881 shootout with a Fort Sumner posse.

A Texas man who knew and supported both James and Roberts financially most of their lives, Dewitt Travis, swore in a 1951 affidavit before an official notary of the state of Texas, "He (Roberts) came back to Texas about 1884 and took the name of Texas Kid. Then he was called Hugo Kid while on the Anti-Horse Thief Trail at Hugo, Oklahoma. He rode in the 'Wild West' shows of Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill, later starting a 'Wild West' show of his own."

Records show Travis knew Billy the Kid. A Travis family cousin owns a gun the Kid supposedly used, which Tunstall is trying to authenticate.

U.S. military records show one O.L. "Brushy" Roberts served in the Spanish-American War.

The man who claimed to be James and Roberts signed up to fight in 1898 at Saldia, Missouri.

The military records show Roberts went AWOL 23 times and was charged with petty thievery two times while serving with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders in Cuba.

Supposedly Roberts was asked to leave the army because he contracted malaria.

After the Spanish-American War, James and Roberts fought for the Mexican Nationals against Pancho Villa in the Mexican Revolution and accumulated a large ranch near Torreon, Mexico.

But when Roberts and James switched to Villa's camp to have a better chance to rustle cattle, they were thrown off their ranch, the story goes.

When they joined Villa's forces he was not too popular, and both Roberts and James left Mexico before Villa became famous.

Roberts crossed back over the American border, penniless, in about 1906.

Somehow he got involved with chasing renegade Indians in Dakota, Idaho and Montana.

While in a small camp in Idaho, Roberts stopped at a Baptist Missionary post and asked for a meal and a chance to warm up.

He was told he had lived an evil life by the missionaries. They told him to confess his sins to the world.

Roberts vowed to confess his crimes to the world, but he was still afraid of being caught by federal or New Mexico authorities at that time.

Roberts came back to Texas, married and did several odd jobs from about 1910 until his death in 1950.

He broke horses near Fort Worth, Texas, and worked for a long time as a turkey skinner in Commanche, Texas.

After he moved to a town near Fort Worth—Hico, Texas—he began to tell people he was Billy the Kid.

Few believed him, but some did. He could often tell tales about people that fought in the Lincoln County War that proved to be true.

William Morrison, a respected St. Louis, Missouri, lawyer, who met Roberts in the early 1940s, was so convinced Roberts was Billy the Kid, he moved to El Paso, Texas, to be in a spot located between Hico and Lincoln.

Morrison spent over 30 years trying to prove Roberts was the Kid. Sadly, near the end of Roberts' life, he began to show signs of senility.

After Roberts died in Hico on December 27, 1950, Morrison wrote a letter to Everhard which was typed and dated February 14, 1951.

Morrison said in the letter, "I was sorry to hear of Uncle Jesse's condition ... I am glad to know that Uncle Jesse told you Brushy Bill was the real 'Billy the Kid.'"

Entertainment

No traces of "Brushy" Bill

The following is a list of odd quirks in the life of "Brushy" Bill Roberts, the man who claimed to be Billy the Kid. The list was compiled by Roswell historian William Tunstall.

- Tunstall says Roberts:
 - Never had a bank account.
 - Always paid bills in cash.
 - Never made an application for a Social Security card after the Social Security system began in 1934.
 - Refused to sign any marriage license.
 - Never owned a home and always rented.
 - Never owned an automobile.
 - Never applied for a driver's license.
 - Never owned a telephone.
 - Never voted in any election.
 - Never seemed to use services offered by any utility company such as electricity, gas or water.
 - Never let his wives join social clubs.
 - Rarely wrote anything. He always had one of his wives handle correspondence.

He said he was the Kid, but few believed

by STEVE STEIN
News Staff Writer

A State of Texas death certificate indicates "Brushy" Bill Roberts, the man who claimed to be "Billy the Kid," died of a "coronary occlusion" on the streets of Hico, Texas, in December 1950.

But did the actions of a New Mexico Governor one month earlier bring on this fatal heart-attack?

After Roberts' funeral, the January 6, 1951, version of The Hico News Reunion stated, "Brushy Bill, as he called himself, had recounted his last tale about Indian battles and wild horse riding. His robust health had broken suddenly. His heart failed, and he dropped dead at noon Wednesday on the streets he had tread so often..."

But early in 1950, William Morrison, an El Paso, Texas, lawyer who was convinced Roberts was Billy the Kid, advised Roberts to ask New Mexico Governor Thomas Mabry to pardon him for the crimes he had committed as Billy the Kid.

Mabry scheduled a private audience with Morrison and Roberts on November 28, 1950.

But, the New Mexico newspapers had put pressure on Mabry not to pardon Roberts.

As Morrison and Roberts entered the office at the Capitol where they were supposed to meet Mabry, several state police turned their guns on Roberts.

Roberts was shaken and asked Morrison to get him to a couch.

Roberts tried to talk to Mabry, but he feared he would be arrested, and the 91-year-old became incoherent.

Mabry had a cold but decided to "look" at "Brushy" Bill.

Mabry declared Roberts a fake before all the press and the police in the room.

Morrison put the ill Roberts in a car and drove him back to El Paso.

After they reached El Paso, Morrison immediately put Roberts on a train so he could see his doctor back in Hico. But Roberts had probably suffered a mild stroke. Mabry and the state police had shaken him.

A few weeks later in Hico, Roberts died.

Robert's fifth wife, Walinda Roberts, notified Everhard, Jesse James' cousin, Roberts was dead.

Everhard said James cried like a baby when he heard Roberts had died.

James died about a year later in an Austin, Texas, hospital.

Researchers have found James and Roberts often kept in touch.

Why?

They made no money off their claims.

Robert's father and James rode together in the Civil War.

Oilman Dewitt Travis, of Longview, Texas, said he often helped both Roberts and James financially because Roberts was a lifelong friend and because James had saved his mother from Confederate soldiers during the Civil War.

The Roberts-James connection was mysterious.

James and Roberts had reunions a couple of times near Stanton, Missouri, the place where the Confederacy hid their gun powder so Union troops could not find it.

Roberts was buried in Hico, Texas.

The man who claimed to be Jesse James, who went by Frank Dalton, was buried in 1951 in Granbury, Texas.

Right after Roberts died in 1950 the grave marker of Billy the Kid was stolen from near Fort Sumner.

It was not returned to Fort Sumner authorities until 1976.

The famous grave marker of Billy the Kid was found in 1976 ... in Granbury, Texas.

An interesting letter from a friend or relative of Jesse James was written to Everhard in 1983.

The letter read, "When I seen Jesse he had on a big cowboy hat so I did not see his hair. I also met Pat Garrett's daughter in Roswell, N.M. She was blind and a piano teacher ... she told me all about her dad and Billie ... Oh yes, I forgot to tell you. Pat Garrett's daughter told me that her dad did not kill Billie as they were good friends."

(Partially corrected for grammar).

This 1949 Christmas card, postmarked Hico, Texas, indicates Roberts had a lifelong relationship with a man who claimed to be Jesse James. If this was a hoax to fool the public, what was to be gained from this simple Christmas card? The writing is that of Roberts' fifth wife, Malinda. The writing on the card itself says "...to unckil (uncle) Jesse James from... (in print) Mr. and Mrs. Burshey (Brushy) Bill Roberts." (Reproduction used with permission of Everhard and Tunstall).

HERB ELLIS

Jazz

Ellis will play at Tinnie Silver Dollar

Over the fourth of July weekend, Tinnie Silver Dollar will present Herb Ellis at the Tinnie Silver Dollar complex in the first of a world class jazz artist series.

Ellis is considered one of the greatest jazz guitarists in the world by jazz critics.

A popular paper in New York called his work, "The sweetest most mellow sounds you're likely to hear in the way of live jazz ..."

He has played with blues and jazz greats like Oscar Peterson, Billie Holiday, Stan Getz, Dizzy Gillespie and Lester Young.

The Chicago Tribune night life critic said the Texas born jazz superstar is "a joyfully inventive melodist."

Occasionally he plays "twang blues," or blues tunes with a

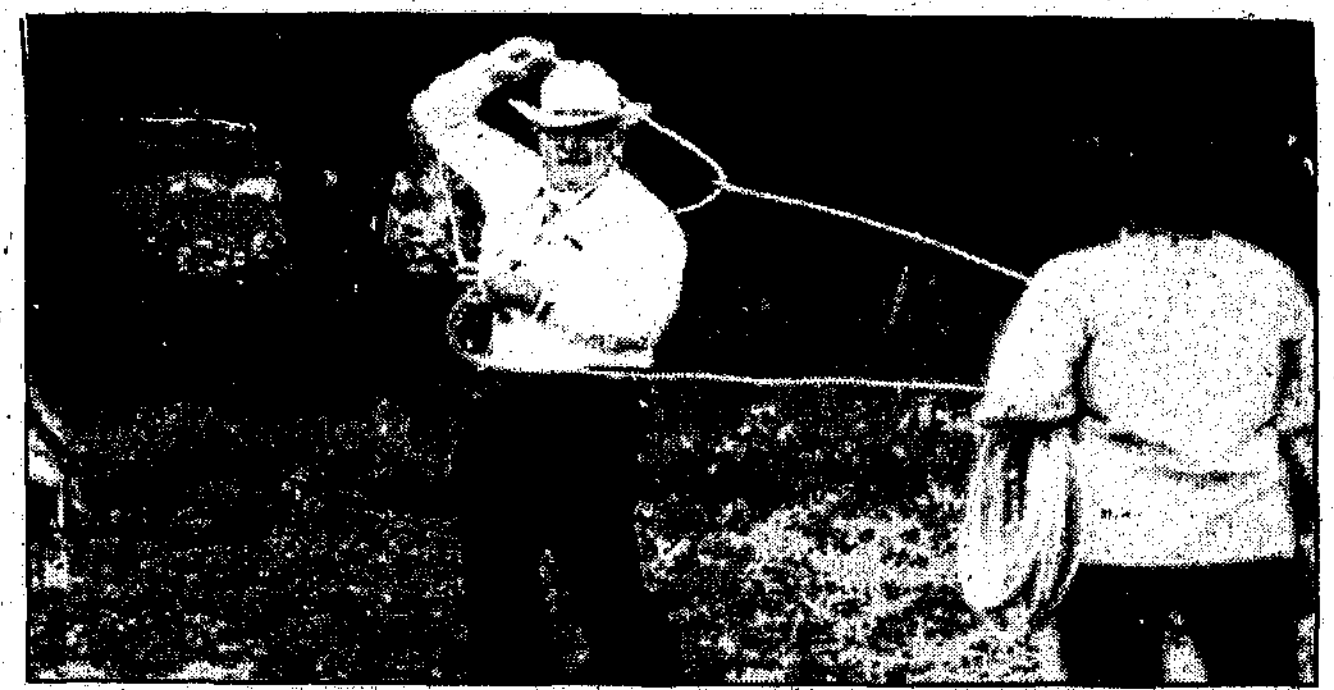

"Texas swing" sound, according to the Chicago critic.

People interested in hearing a living jazz legend at Tinnie Silver Dollar can expect to hear melodies like "The Shadow of Your Smile," "I Love You," "Seven Comes Eleven," "Things Ain't The Way They Used To Be," "The Days of Wine and Roses," "Here's That Rainy Day" and Ellis' own "I Told Ya' I Love Ya' Now Get Out."

Ellis will play July 3, 4 and 5 at Tinnie Silver Dollar. Admission will be $5.

The restaurant begins to serve at 5 p.m. daily.

Call 653-4425 for reservations and information on the time of the day Ellis will play, as well as other information on the special holiday/jazz weekend.

Art

Mark Storm to exhibit at Artisan's Gallery

Mark Storm, an artist from Houston, Texas, will display his works this weekend at the Artisan's Shop and Gallery, 2342 Sudderth Drive.

Storm's background is diverse, but maintains a common thread as he spent many years around horses, ranching and rodeos.

That background is reflected in his western art. The drama of ranch life is often his subject.

Storm enjoyed a career as an advertising illustrator, but his true love remained his painting.

He was schooled in art at the University of Texas. He painted his first covers of Quarter Horse Journal and Cattleman in 1973, and began phasing out his commercial accounts in favor of western art. His work, and stories about himself, have been featured in several magazines and newspapers.

Storm became a charter member of the Texas Cowboy Artists Association in 1973 and served as its president in 1976. His studio is in Houston.

Storm will exhibit his works from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and Saturday, July 4-5. He will be the guest of honor at a reception Saturday from 7 to 9 p.m. The exhibit will continue from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, July 6.

Pottery

She turns clay into artwork

by SHARI LEWIS
News Staff Writer

"Something got in my blood and I just knew it was something I wanted to do," said potter Jeanette Ita.

She and daughter Molly are visiting Ruidoso through Monday, July 7. Ita has set up shop behind the Village Bookie, 2336 Sudderth Drive, and is demonstrating her craft to interested visitors.

"You start with wedging. It is kind of like kneading dough," Ita said as she rolled and worked a mound of red clay. "This gets the air pockets out of the clay."

Ita brought 500 pounds of clay to Ruidoso from Enid, Oklahoma, where she and her husband, Bob, live.

There are three main colors of clay, Ita said.

"There is porcelain white, gray and red. I like to work with red clay. It's a softer clay," she said.

After wedging the clay, Ita began shaping the mound into a round ball. She then placed a bat, a round plate-like device made of plaster, onto the wheel. The bat makes it easier to move the pot around after it has been shaped on the wheel. She then "threw" the clay onto the bat.

"Throwing on the wheel comes from the initial placement of the clay on the wheel," Ita said.

The wheel began spinning, controlled by a foot pedal at Ita's right side. She lubricated the clay with water while centering the mound on the bat.

"You need to use a high speed at first for centering the clay. Once you have it centered, you make a hole in the center and open it up," she said.

Ita made a small hole in the center of the clay. The hole grew as she placed one hand on the inside and one on the outside bringing up the walls from the bottom to form a pot.

"From here, it can be shaped into anything you want," she said.

The excess clay is then scraped from the bottom of the pot to be reused. Once this is done, the pot can be set aside to partially dry.

After a day to a day-and-a-half of drying, the pot is scraped off the bat with a wire and is now ready for tooling.

The tooling process involves again removing excess clay, with special tools, from the bottom of the pot. Then a foot, or edge, is carved into the bottom where the artist may place her signature, month and year the piece was made. Designs can also be carved into the piece.

The pot is fired in a kiln twice: the first time to bisque, or harden, the clay, and a second time to glaze the piece if the artist wishes.

Ita makes a variety of pottery. She creates everything from plates, mugs and bowls, to teapots and decorative pieces. The pottery she has for sale at the Village Bookie ranges in price from $6.50 to $150.

Throwing pottery is an expensive craft, Ita said. She cleaned houses and worked in a pharmacy filling orders to help pay for her wheel, kiln and other items in her studio.

All of the work was worthwhile, she said.

"I am really excited about it. I love throwing pottery," Ita said.

Potter Jeanette Ita, of Enid, Oklahoma, "throws" a pot on a portable wheel behind The Village Bookie. Ita has been demonstrating her craft to interested visitors and will be in Ruidoso through the weekend.

The pot is removed from the wheel and allowed to partially dry on a bat before being toolled. The red clay pot will then be fired in a kiln.

Townsend is named Lioness of Year

The Rio Ruidoso Lioness Club (RRLC) named president Helen Townsend as "Lioness of the Year" at an installation-of-officers ceremony conducted recently.

Townsend's term ended the last day of June.

The RRLC also presented Townsend with a special "President's Award" plaque at the installation.

Townsend was also named as a "Top Lioness" by the state Lions' organization because of the amount of Lions eye bank tickets she sold recently.

Out of 300 Lions eye bank tickets sold by RRLC members in the past months, Townsend sold 220 of them.

The RRLC was recognized by the New Mexico Lions organization because they sold the most eye bank tickets of any member organization in the state.

The Lions' eye bank was first established to promote eye safety, preserve sight and purchase glasses for the needy.

In recent years, the Lions and their affiliates have promoted several transplant procedures related to vision as well as eye donor programs.

Not only was the RRLC first in the state in the number of eye bank tickets sold, it was also named the winner of the "District Governor's Contest" recently.

Lioness clubs are awarded points in the district contest based on their various projects, publicity, fund-raisers and other criteria.

Special membership drive pins were awarded to Townsend and Joyce McMath by district governor Ed Lafferty at the recent installation.

Townsend cited secretary Jody Wilcox for her exceptional work as RRLC secretary during Townsend's year as president.

Wilcox was awarded a special plaque from Townsend for her "superior" contributions to RRLC over the past year.

In accordance with Lioness traditions, Townsend was also awarded 15 yellow long stem roses in appreciation for her work as president from the RRLC.

GOVERNMENT

- Progress is seen in airport plan
- Grindstone dam, other water projects are under way
- Villlage manager has helped guide progress
- Village government enjoys new facilities

For 26 years, Hine has been a guiding force in village

by FRANKIE JARRELL
News Staff Writer

"Your problems never change—just their magnitude," said village manager James L. Hine recently.

Seated at his desk in a roomy corner office of Village Hall, Hine leaned back and reflected on his 26 years in village government.

"I came up for a job interview on Saturday and reported for work on Monday," said Hine with a small laugh. The "first and only" manager Ruidoso has ever had, Hine joined the village staff August 20, 1960.

Ruidoso employed 31 people in all departments when Hine took over the helm, and he has seen that number swell to today's 150 employees.

That increase closely parallels the growth in population Ruidoso has experienced, noted Hine. He said Ruidoso recorded a permanent population of 1,226 in 1960. That number doubled in 1970 and again in 1980.

His first day on the job Hine was given a desk in a big room shared by other village employees in the old Village Hall—quite different from the comfortable quarters he occupies in the new Village Hall built in the early 1980s.

"They were kind enough to let me open the mail that first day," recalled Hine with a smile.

Hine, a former Littlefield, Texas, school administrator, set about leading Ruidoso forward on a course that has been dominated by finances, changing political forces and three (nearly four) comprehensive plans.

Coincidentally, Hine said Ruidoso's first village planner began working on the 1961 comprehensive plan the same day he became village manager.

"That's when I believe that the image of Ruidoso began changing," said Hine. He said he worked closely during that planning process with then Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman Dan Swearingin. Hine said Village Councillor Elmer Pirelli was also a member of that commission.

In July 1960 Ruidoso passed its first municipal sales tax—one percent—and Hine was on hand to deposit the first payment of $2,058. He said sales tax receipts have been going up just about every year since.

The first budget Hine submitted for 1961-62 was for $369,800, a big contrast to the nearly $17 million village budget projected for 1986-87. Hine explained that much of next year's budget is dedicated to water project construction, not village operations.

"We were concerned about water when I first came here, and we're still concerned about water," said Hine. Alto Lake was just completed in the early 1960s and Grindstone Canyon dam will be the big water project of the 80s.

Problems that have recurred through times of growth and more static times have been dealt with differently by the elected officials who have served during Hine's tenure.

"We've had elected officials that fit the time," remarked Hine, speaking of the pendulums dictated by economic growth and decline.

Issues identified in the 1961 comprehensive plan have also been repeated over the years—airport improvement, open space, a civic center, a junior college, sports facilities and the like were all in that comprehensive plan.

"That was the best plan we ever had," noted Hine.

The 1961 plan, designed to last for 20 years, was soon outdated and replaced by a 1971 plan and then a 1976 master plan, with a fourth village plan coming up soon.

Hine predicts the new plan will hold since the village is no longer in a boom growth period.

The philosophy of all Ruidoso's plans has remained the same—to develop the finest recreation and tourist center in the Southwest while maintaining the best possible living environment for the residents, said Hine.

That philosophy has been shared by the village councils that have served over the past quarter century, said Hine. He said all the people with whom he has worked have been more concerned with the basic needs of the people than building monuments to themselves.

Hine looks back proudly on major improvements over the past 25 years in sanitary sewer, water, roads and other village services. He said flood control problems will be alleviated with bridge replacements scheduled in August. He said the village must continue to address those kinds of needs, and predicted that past history's cyclical economic picture will continue. Hine compared Ruidoso's seasonal business activities to farming.

"If you have the ideal weather business is good," noted Hine.

Newly arrived from West Texas in 1960, Hine recalls a native telling him "if you stay in Ruidoso for more than three years, you'll never leave."

"There's so much truth in that," said Hine, apparently here to stay. "I'm really pleased that I've had the opportunity to be of service to the Village of Ruidoso," he added.

As Hine reflects on the past 26 years of growth, he has his eyes clearly focused on the future.

Putting aside the 1961 comprehensive plan, Hine turns his attention to the newest master plan, designed to lead the village into the next century.

A bright corner office in Ruidoso Village Hall has been village manager Jim Hine's center of operations since he and other village administrators moved into the new municipal building in 1981. Hine calmly presides over the ins and outs of village government from his roomy office as the mountains and trees reflect the changing seasons just beyond his windows.

Village manager Jim Hine, a quiet presence at village meetings, is there with the answers to questions on village finances and operations. Hine, the first and only manager Ruidoso has had, has always been a dependable source of information for members of the various councils with whom he has served.

Ruidoso officials keep pace with growing demand for water

Village officials bravely have faced the challenge of providing adequate water for a growing population as Ruidoso has undergone an extraordinary period of growth.

As permanent residents' numbers have doubled and redoubled, Ruidoso has sought ways to ensure a plentiful and safe water supply.

The Grindstone Canyon dam and the Eagle Creek well fields are two major projects that have grown out of those concerns.

"We've talked about a raw-water reservoir for years," said village manager Jim Hine. He said Alto Lake was completed in the early 1960s to contain Eagle Creek waters, but the village still had no way to impound all the waters to which it is entitled.

And so plans were made for a reservoir, and by 1982, Grindstone Canyon was established as the best place for a dam.

A record number of citizens voted overwhelmingly in favor of the capital project, approving a one percent gross receipts tax, $6 million in revenue bonds and $2 million in general obligation bonds in June 1982.

In spite of problems that have included delays, cost overruns and a change in design from earthen to roller-compacted concrete construction, the dam project has steadily progressed and the contractor is scheduled to complete the structure in October.

Village engineer Mike Davalos estimated it will take three years to fill the reservoir with water.

In the meantime, the village successfully drilled four wells in the Eagle Creek area, and is in the process of equipping them as a supplemental water source.

In December 1984 the Village Council announced the four wells and proclaimed the discovery of a water find "to take the village into the next century."

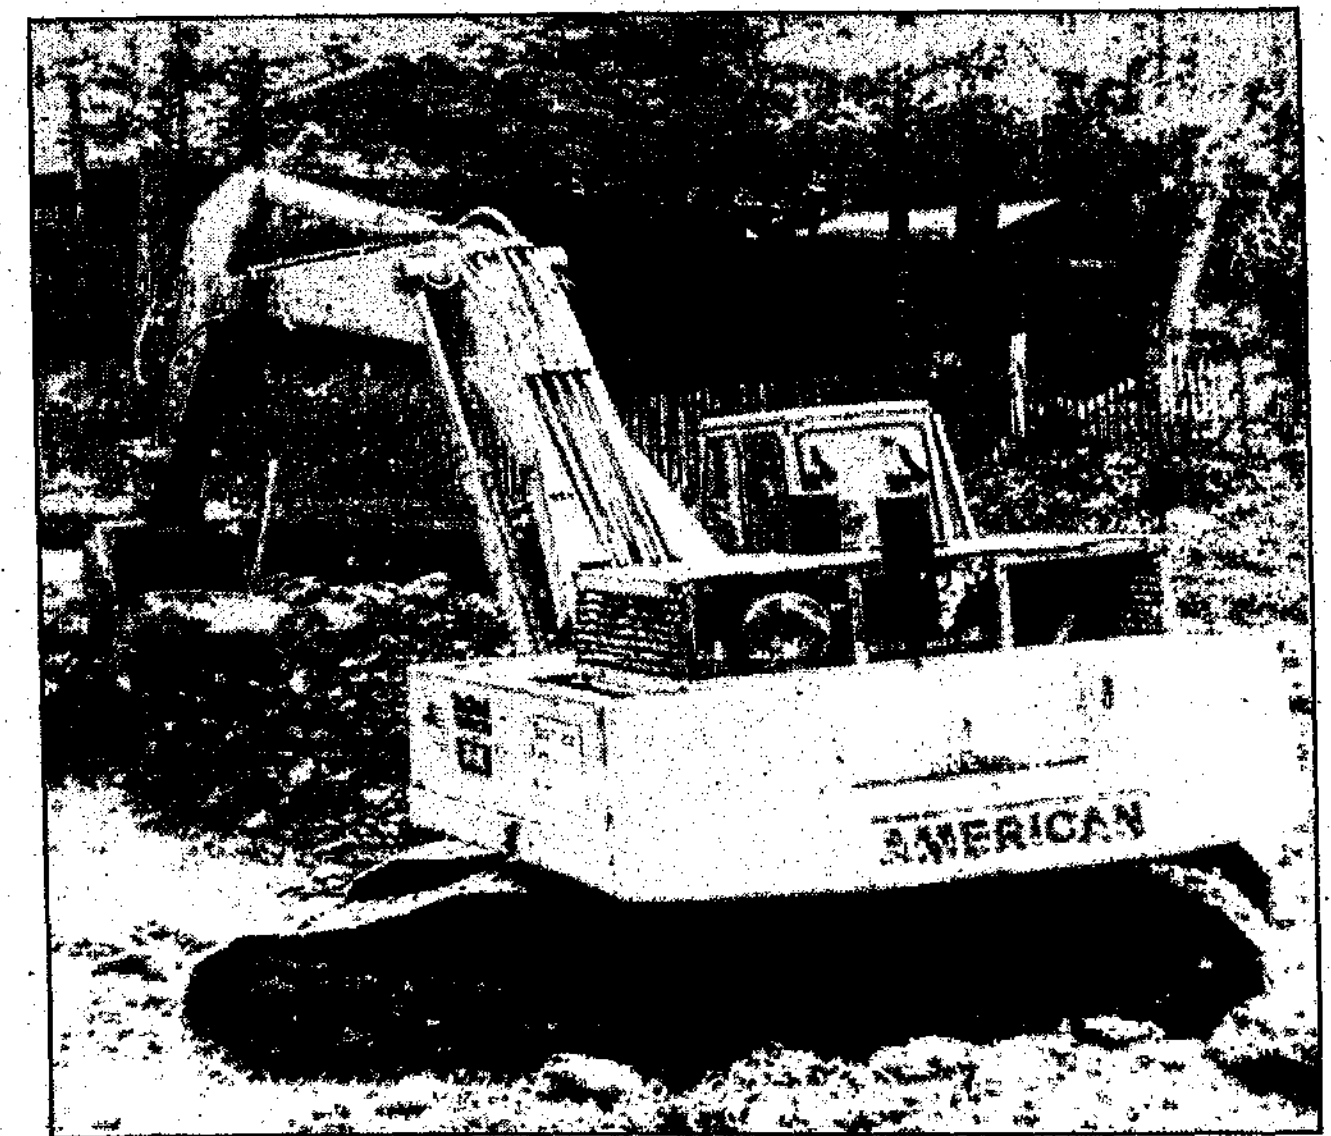

Engineering tests have indicated the wells could provide 9,400 acre-feet per year, but the State Engineer has offered Ruidoso rights to 60 percent of the find, or 5,648 acre-feet per annum.

As negotiations continue between the village water attorney and the State Engineer, Ruidoso has already utilized Eagle Creek waters during peak demand times last summer.

Hine said the Eagle Creek water will be pumped directly into the municipal distribution system, while Rio Ruidoso water rights will be utilized to fill the Grindstone Canyon dam.

Recalling water shortages of 1964, 1971 and the early 1980s, Hine said at one time the village was within two days of running out of water.

The Grindstone Canyon dam reservoir, designed to hold 1,500 acre-feet, and the Eagle Creek wells should provide a ready water supply adequate for potential future growth.

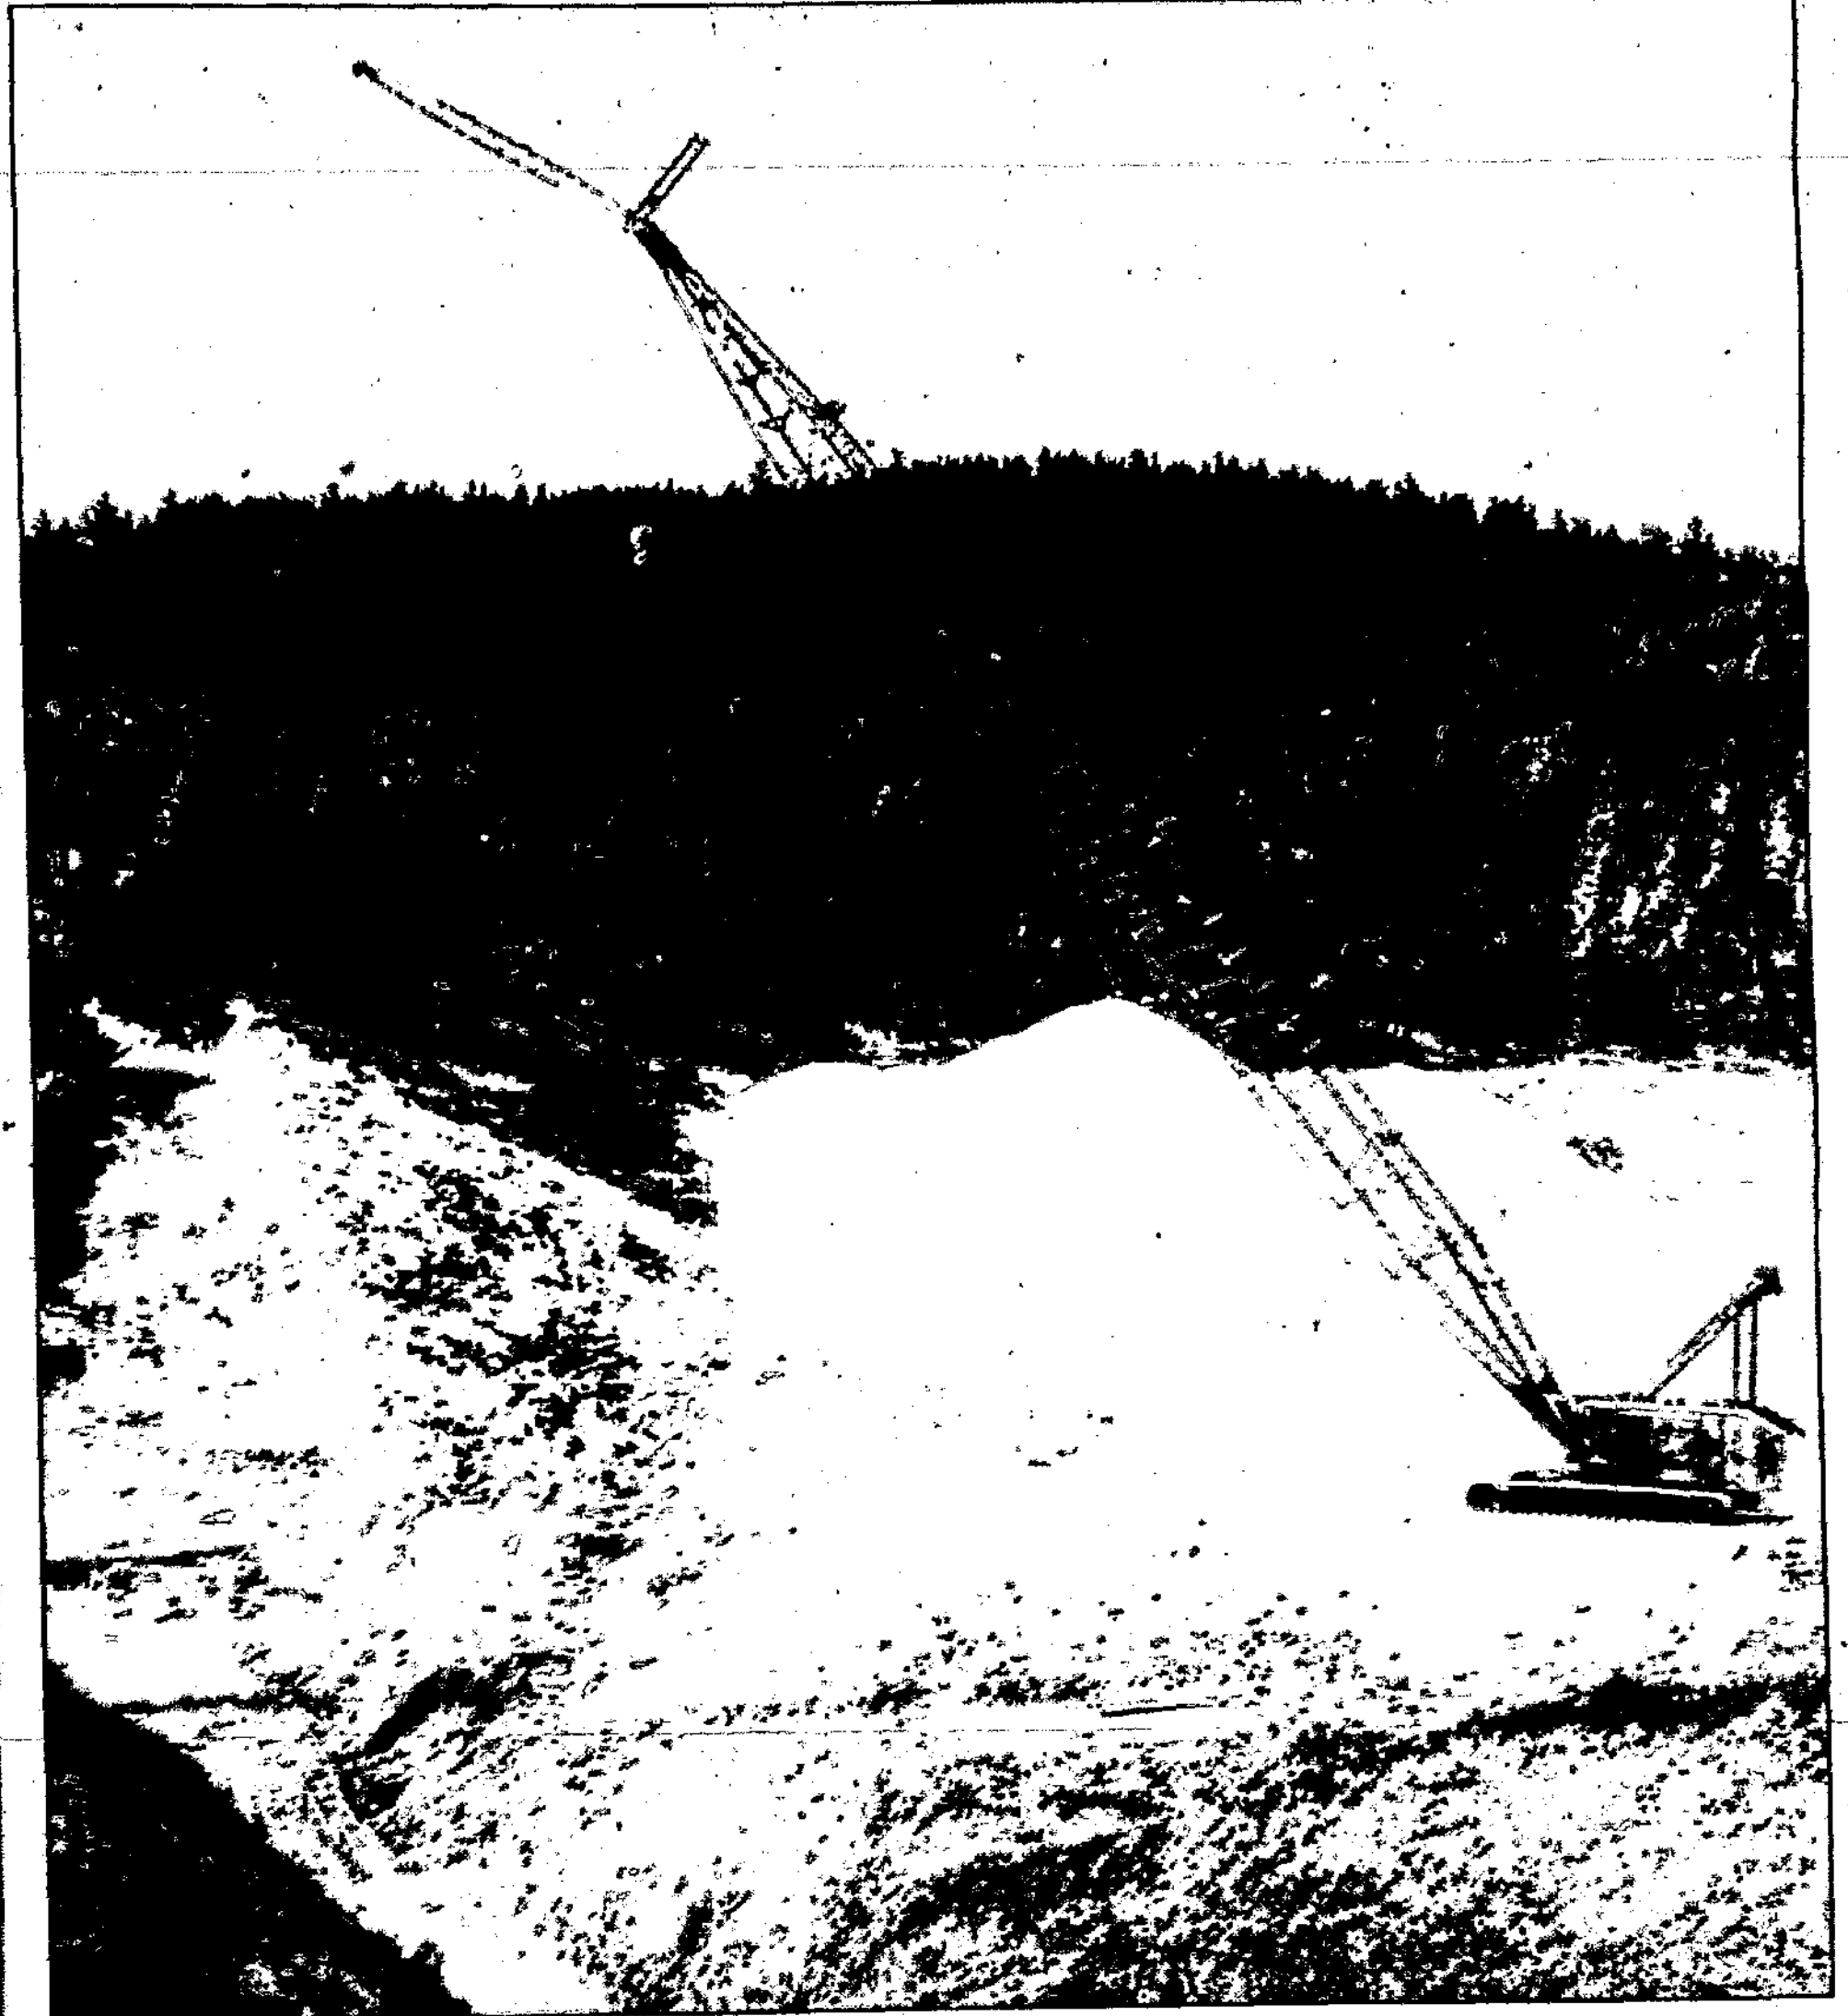

An earthmover clears boulders from the site of the intake structure on the Rio Ruidoso. The structure, now completed, will divert water from the river, along a pipeline, to the Grindstone Canyon dam when the dam is completed.

Lengths of pipe are stacked along Main Road, in the Upper Canyon, awaiting placement in the pipeline from the intake structure on the Rio Ruidoso to the Grindstone Canyon dam. The pipeline has been completed, and work to repair roads excavated when the pipeline was laid has begun.

A conveyor belt moves materials to the Grindstone Canyon dam from huge piles of aggregate. Concrete laying at the roller-compacted process dam continues 20 hours a day.

A huge crane moves equipment and materials at the Grindstone Canyon dam site this spring in site preparation work. Construction of the dam itself has begun, and proceeds at a rate of about four feet a day. Village officials estimate it will take about three years to fill the dam after it is completed.

Land secured , funding coming for Sierra Blanca Regional Airport

An idea 20 years ago is now close to reality

After more than a decade of efforts by people from Lincoln County to Washington D.C., the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport project is finally off the ground.

Feasibility studies and environmental assessments that date back as far as 1967, have been the forerunners of a list of recent accomplishments, which include:

—Acquiring, through federal legislation, the desired land on Fort Stanton mesa. That process included long, hard negotiations with New Mexico State University before a land transfer was accomplished and President Ronald Reagan signed the bill making it federal law in August 1985.

—Receiving a favorable environmental statement from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). That statement, a finding of no significant impact or "FONSI," was a necessary step in the road to receiving federal funds for an airport on Fort Stanton mesa.

—Allocation of $800,000 in State Highway Department funds to conduct a feasibility study and begin engineering and designing an access road from Highway 37 to the site of the future airport.

—The continued assurance from all levels of FAA officials that the SBRA project will be given top priority on funding in the Southwest region.

—Completed engineering designs and plans for the first two phases: —Assurances from some commercial carriers of an interest in serving the regional airport.

So, after years of hard work, members of the Sierra Blanca Airport Commission are looking forward to an operational airport on Fort Stanton mesa by the end of 1987.

The commission, vowing to push the project ahead as fast as possible, recently hired former SBAC Chairman Fred Heckman as contract administrator on the project. Commissioners charged Heckman with overseeing the construction, funding and all aspects of putting a regional airport into operation.

The commission, formed by five governmental bodies, includes Chairman Ken Nosker representing Lincoln County; vice-chairman Tim Morris representing Ruidoso; Conrad Buchanan representing Ruidoso Downs; Benny Coker representing Capitan; and Wendell Chino representing the Mescalero Apache Tribe.

Planes crowd the Ruidoso Municipal Airport parking area (left) during a busy weekend. Air traffic becomes particularly congested at the mountain airstrip during July and August. Plans call for the facility to be closed upon completion of the new Sierra Blanca Regional Airport. An improved air traffic control facility (above) at the Ruidoso Municipal Airport has helped the airport maintain an improved safety record since the last major aircraft accident in Ruidoso in May 1984.

Gross receipts tax collections reflect Ruidoso's healthy economy

The collection of regular gross receipts taxes—the sales tax paid at the cash register—has steadily increased over the years in Ruidoso. A record of the level of gross receipts tax collections provides a good measure of the economic health of a community. The Village of Ruidoso receives 1.35 percent of the gross receipts tax collected here. The tax is collected by the state, then the village's share is returned. Between 1985, the most current year for which a complete 12 months' of information is available, and 1961, the first year records were available to The Ruidoso News, the increase has been dramatic. Collections over the past 24 years have ranged from a low of $1,748.01 in February 1961, to a high of $178,180 in August 1985. Yearly collections have ranged from 1961's low of $43,256.91 to 1983's high of $1,657,797. The graph above traces the climb of gross receipts tax collections last year, five years earlier, and five years before that. Total collections in 1975 were $321,589.12; in 1980 total collections more than doubled that figure, reaching $788,883.47; and in 1985 the figure reached a whopping $1,631,262. The graph records a high point of August 1985's $178,180 and a low point of $18,203 in March 1975.

Compactor opens

The Village of Ruidoso trash compaction system opened this summer, the result of years of effort. The $350,000 system is capable of reducing bulky trash into compacted "cubes" that are transferred by truck to the Fort Stanton landfill. The compactor is open to those citizens who wish to save themselves the 26-mile trip to the landfill.

Road progress

Roads in and around the Village of Ruidoso have been vastly improved in the past few years. Most notable of the recent improvements have been complete reworkings of Gavilan Canyon Road, Carrizo Creek Road and the con-

Police-Courts Complex

An old building with a new look—the Village Police-Courts facility, remodelled and enlarged in 1983, was Ruidoso's original elementary school. The village purchased the old school house in the mid-1950s, and the structure housed municipal offices until 1981. The complete makeover was completed in 1983, and included upgrading the Detention Center to meet state standards. The cost of the 1982-83 project was about $660,000. Besides the Ruidoso Police Department, the building houses the municipal detention facility, municipal and magistrate judge's chambers and the municipal courtroom.

Ruidoso area abounds in recreational opportunities

Finding a variety of recreational fun in the land of enchantment is simple. Just walk outside and head in any direction.

Whether looking for outdoor sports, or family entertainment, the choices are only limited by a person's imagination around Ruidoso.

Smokey Bear Ranger Station, servicing the Smokey Bear District of the Lincoln National Forest, maintains a variety of outdoor facilities, said Richard Carlson, a recreation and land officer.

Cedar Creek Picnic Area, only minutes from Midtown Ruidoso, provides picnic facilities, water and restrooms. The area has a fitness trail, with two exercise loops, one a quarter mile and the other a mile and a half.

Hiking trails are available to suit any ability throughout the district. Two wilderness areas, the White Mountain Wilderness, covering 368,000 acres and the Capitan Wilderness, covering 48,500 acres, offer numerous trail heads into the areas, Carlson said.

Overnight camping is popular in the district, Carlson said, with one pay area at Bonito Lake, and three free areas along Ski Run Road.

"The free camping areas are converted from picnic areas. It's set up for tent type camping, or small trailers, but no hook-ups or water is provided," Carlson said.

The Village of Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department provides numerous recreation facilities, most with no fee to the public, said director Bobby Bailey.

Two village parks have outdoor barbecues and restroom facilities. Two Rivers Park, next to the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, is easily accessible and offers enjoyable picnic sites next to the Rio Ruidoso.

School House Park, on Sudderth Drive, provides four public tennis courts with coin-operated lights, Bailey said. School House Park also offers picnic sites.

The Parks and Recreation Department maintains a public swimming pool, open Monday through Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. and from 5 to 6:30 p.m. for adult lap swim. The 25-yard pool is heated to 81 degrees, Bailey said. After hours the pool can be rented for private parties.

Softball and Little League teams, both popular activities in Ruidoso, now play Monday through Friday at Eagle Creek Sports Complex. The complex provides two lighted softball fields and one Little League field, Bailey said. Weekends are reserved for tournament play, he added.

Ruidoso Athletic Club, opened in August 1984, offers a variety of memberships to suit individual and family needs. Non-resident memberships and daily rentals are also available.

The athletic facility, offers racquetball courts, aerobic and stretch classes, free-weight and Nautilus equipment, plus a variety of fitness activities.

Ruidoso has two bowling alleys, Holiday Bowl and Ruidoso Bowling Center, both offering league and open bowling seven days a week.

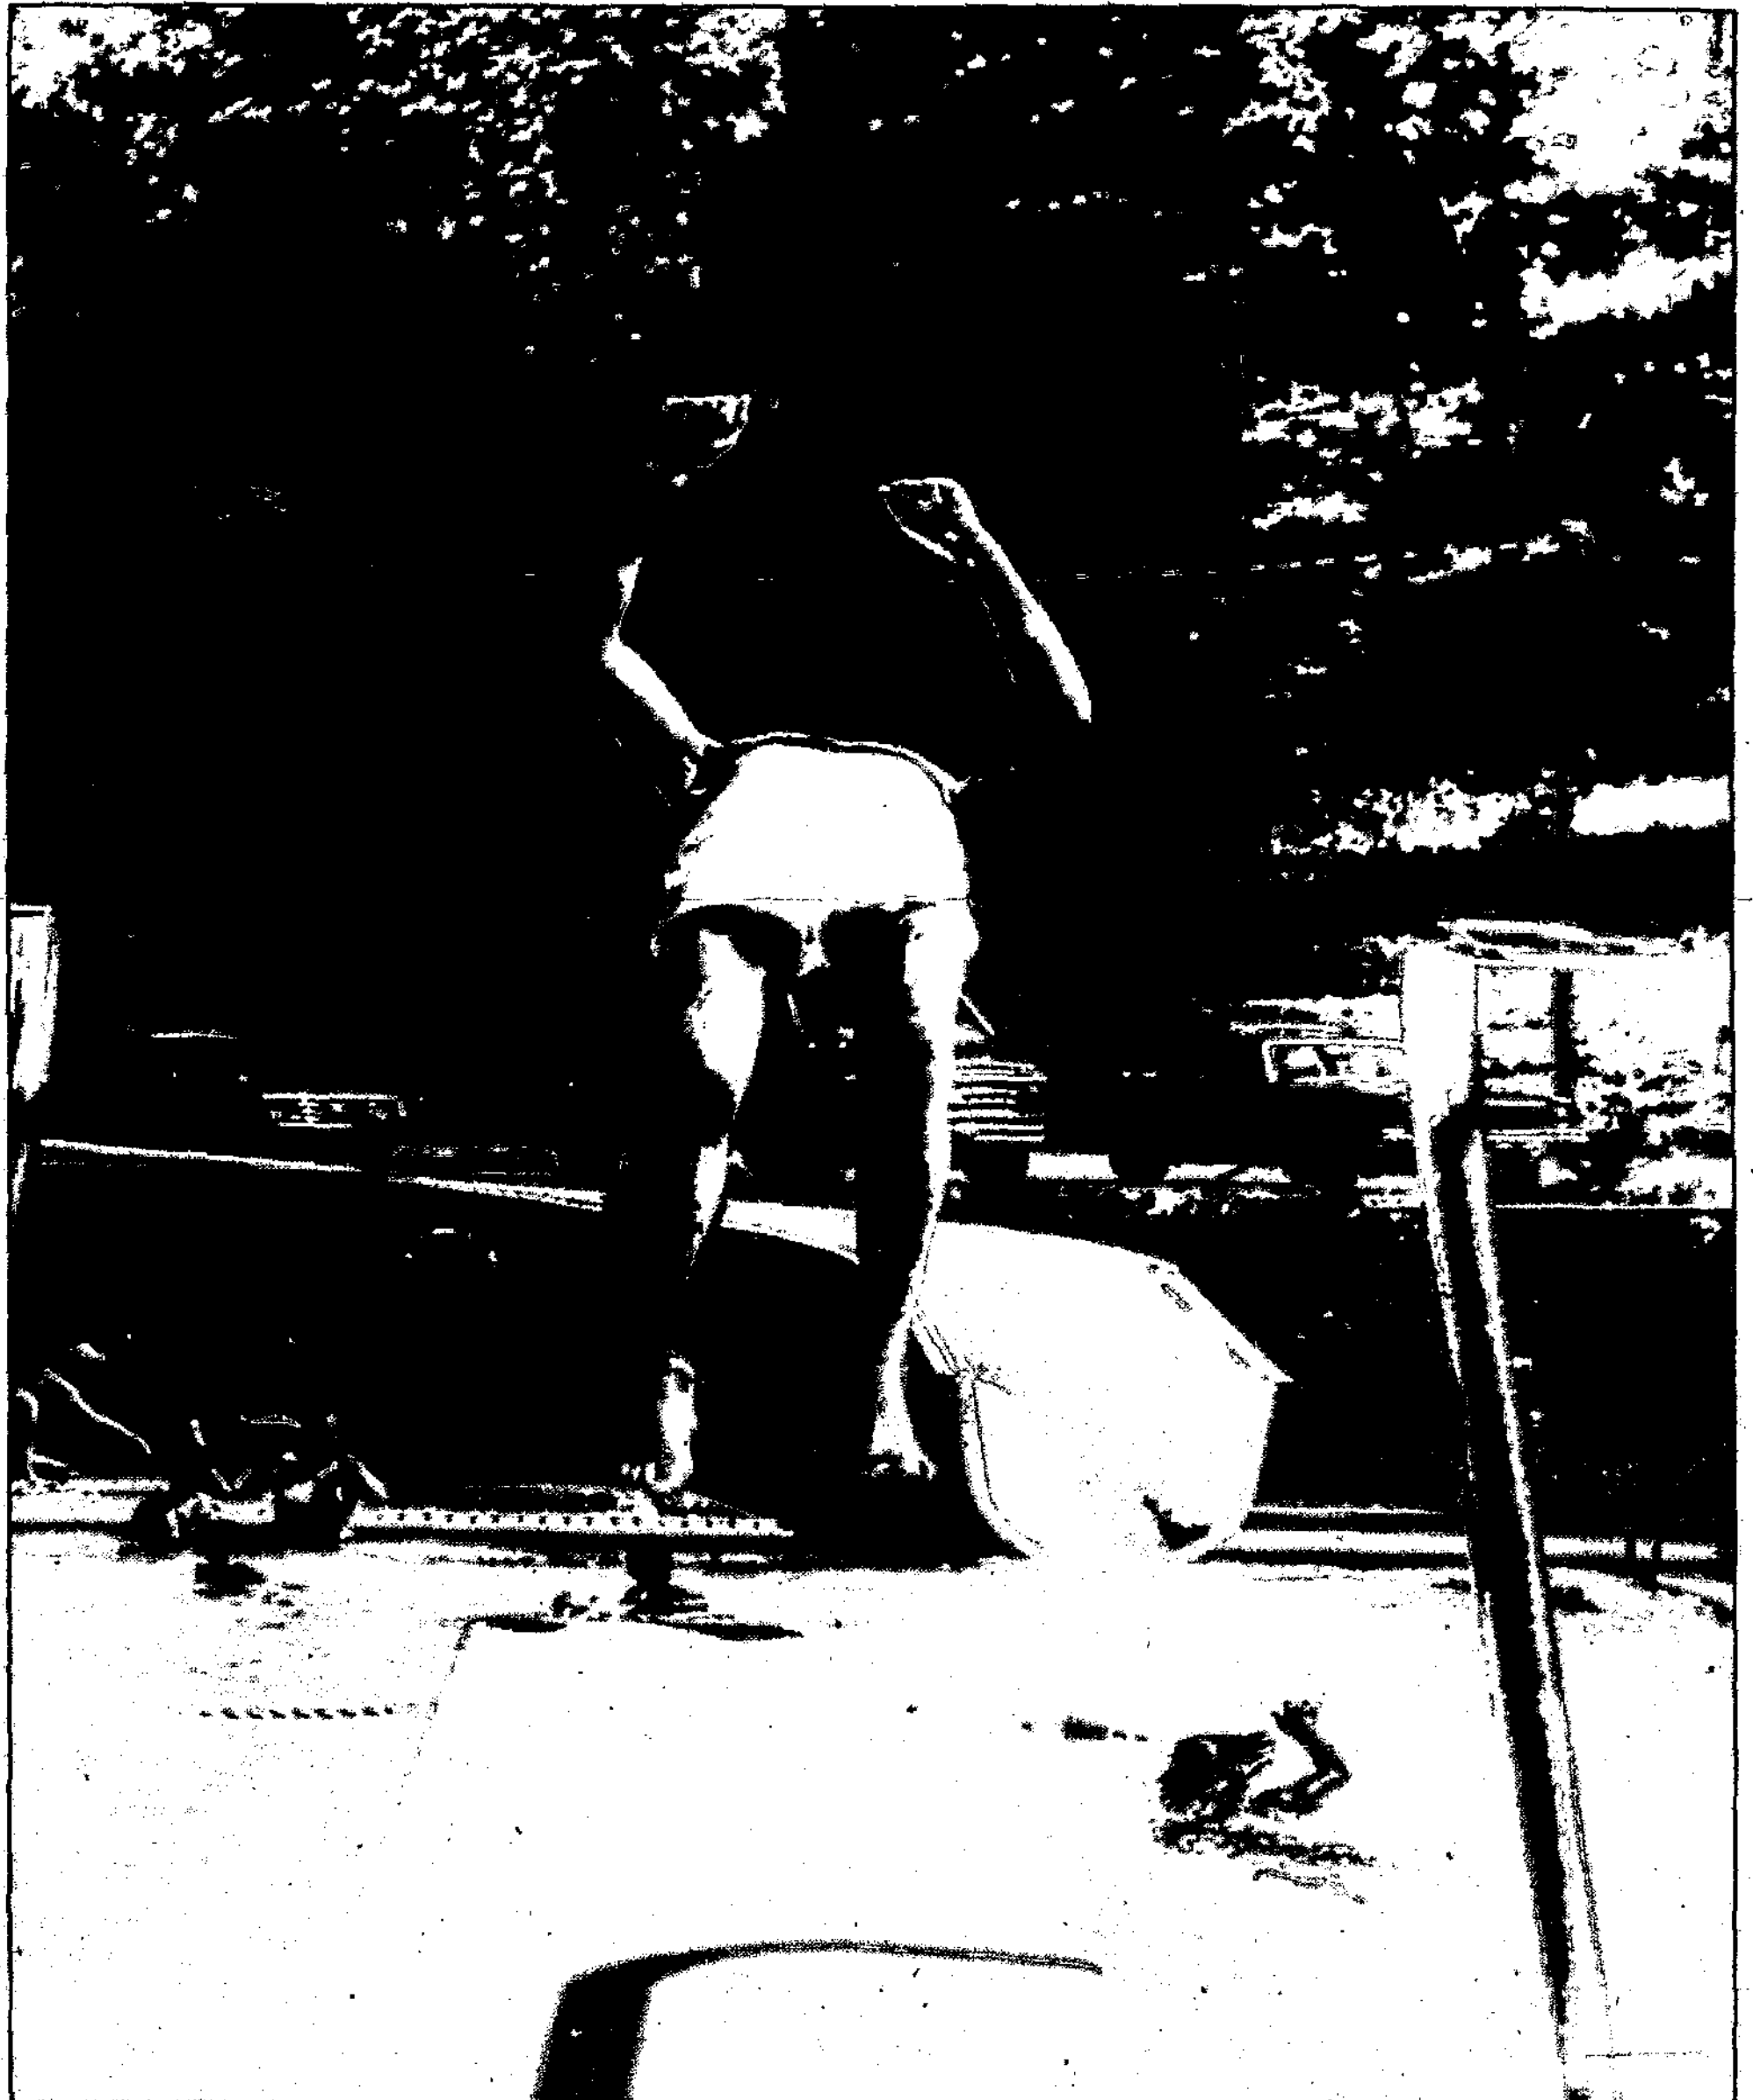

Roller Skating fans can glide around Ruidoso Skateland Monday through Sunday. Three skating sessions are available, two during the afternoon, and one evening session.

Outdoor skating came to Ruidoso this year when Fun Trackers cut the ribbon on their new rink. Fun Trackers' main attraction is go-cart racing, and provides family fun seven days a week with a gameroom and concession stand.

Pan-O-Rama Miniature Golf, and Holiday Golf offers fun for anyone who wants to swing a club, miniature that is. Both courses are open each day of the week.

And for those who love a movie, Ruidoso has that, too. Camelot Twin-Theatre offers two movies each evening, with a double showing on weekends.

Enlarged racetrack is highlight of Ruidoso Downs' improvements

Ten-thousand yards of dirt ... 8,000 feet of specially designed railing ... culverts to handle 100-year floods ... $2.5 million expended.

The construction of Ruidoso Downs' new seven-eighths-mile thoroughbred track for this season was termed a major engineering feat.

Ruidoso Downs, already known as the "Quarter Horse Capital of the World," has spent millions of dollars on track renovations to try to dominate the Southwest with top quality thoroughbred racing as well.

The major engineering feat at the track centered around converting an old fashioned five-furlong track into one of the most well-conceived full fledged seven-furlong tracks in the Southwest, according to track officials.

"The beautiful mountain track, built over the Rio Ruidoso, is the only facility in the nation with two separate racing surfaces—one for thoroughbreds and one for quarter horses.

Over $6.5 million has been spent in the last three years to usher in this "new era" at Ruidoso Downs.

Ruidoso Downs trainer Bob Arnett said when the track first opened, "The new track is going to give a tremendous boost to thoroughbred racing here. It will attract much better horses and stronger overall stables than in the past."

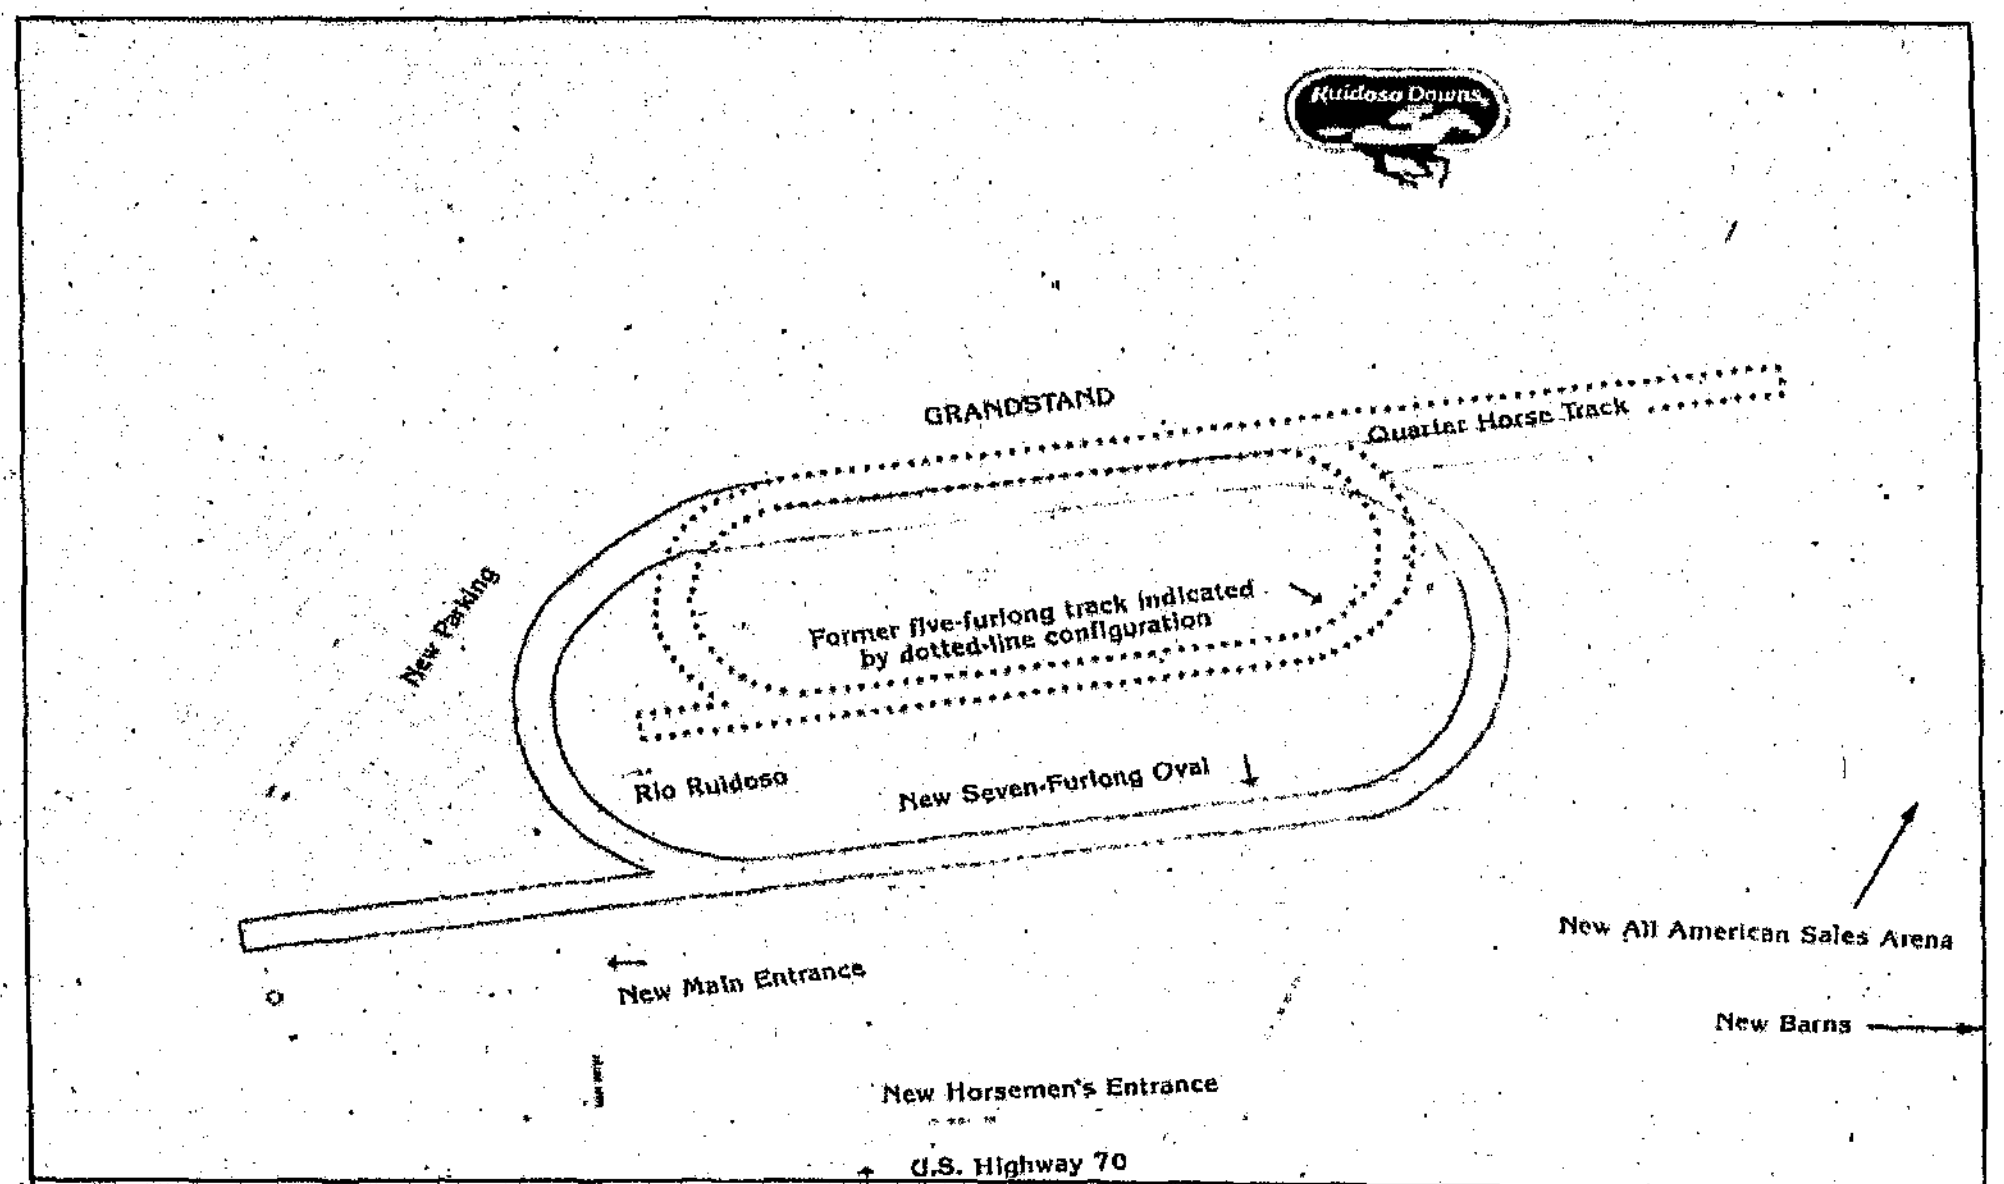

For many years, some of the greatest quarter horses and quarter horse jockeys in the history of racing have made their way through the post parade as a matter of routine every racing day at Ruidoso Downs.

And now, because of the new improved thoroughbred track, the all-star long-legged ships of speed—with their colorful captains of the reins aboard—have turned out in the beautiful twin cities of the silks, Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs.

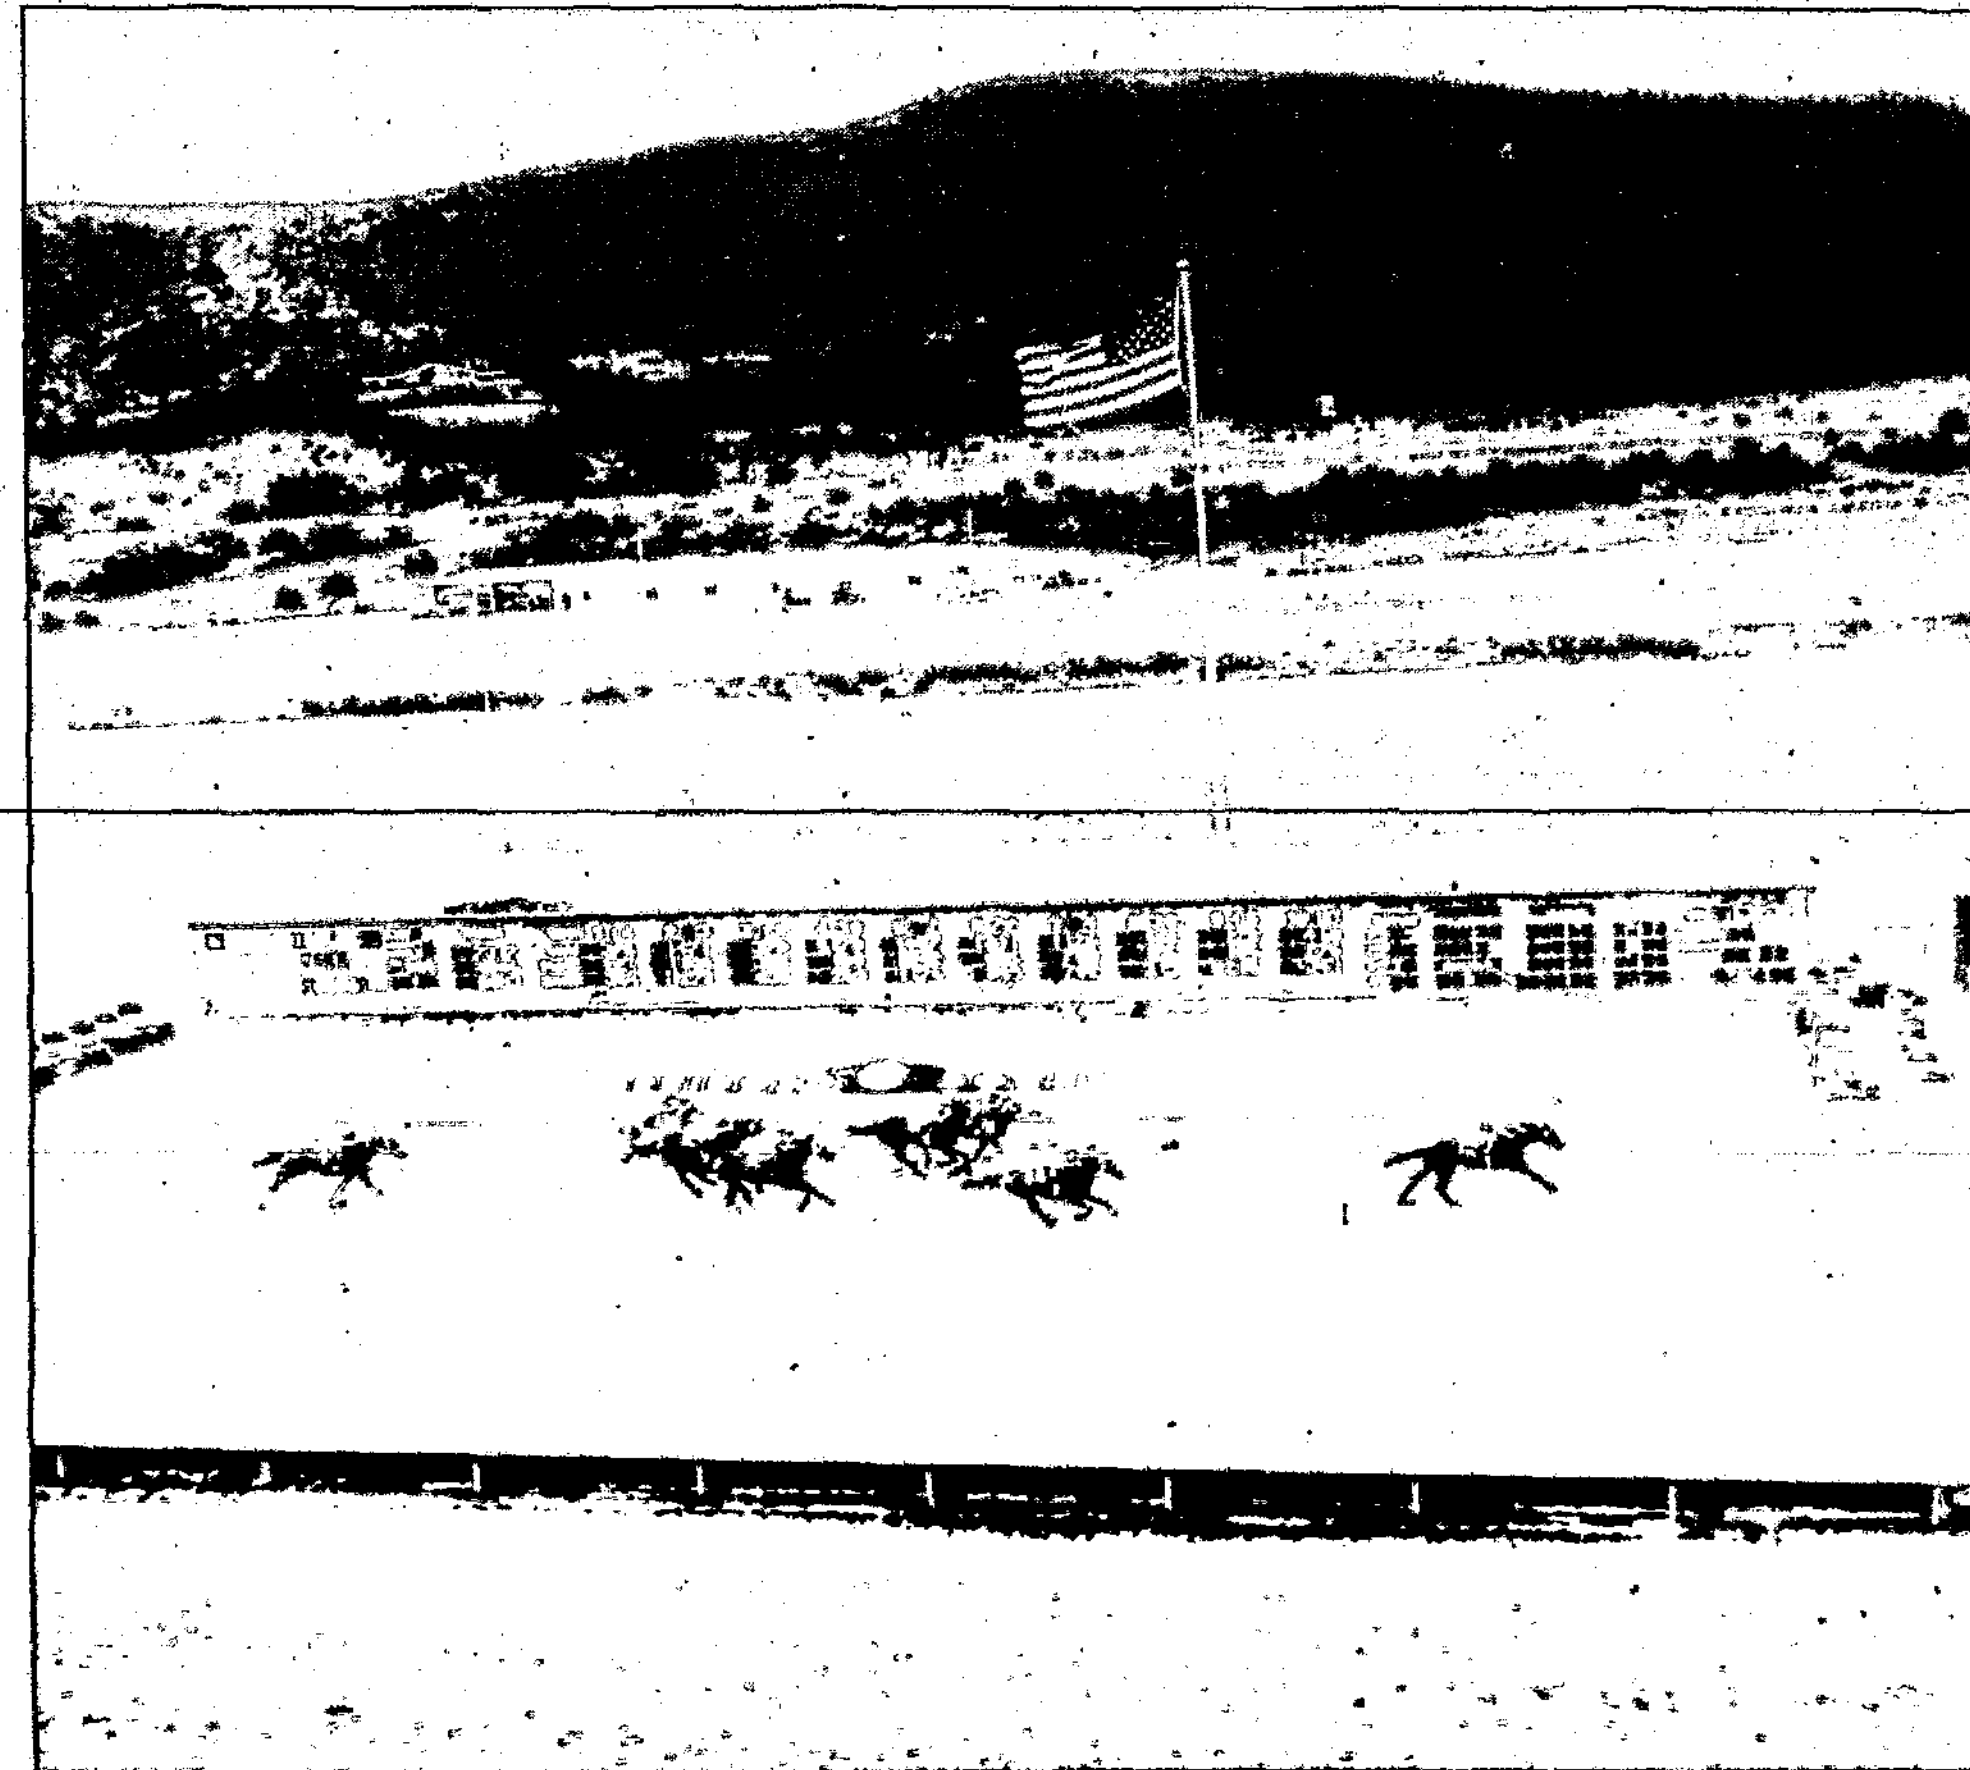

The mountain track may be set in between the quiet, steady mountain pines, but every racing weekend it comes alive with the sounds of dashing hoofbeats, appreciative fans and of course, the golden tones of longtime track announcer Bob Dudich as he says, "They're all in line!" like only he can.

Like a great thoroughbred, the Ruidoso Downs Race Track has not merely shown progress over the last five years, but it has rocketed its way into horseracing excellence for years to come, and will always remain in the glory of the winner's circle.

In this specially drafted map, it easy to see the difference between the newly constructed seven-furlong thoroughbred track and the long-standing five-furlong track.

The five-furlong track had sharp turns that seemed to put fear in the hearts of some of the thoroughbred trainers.

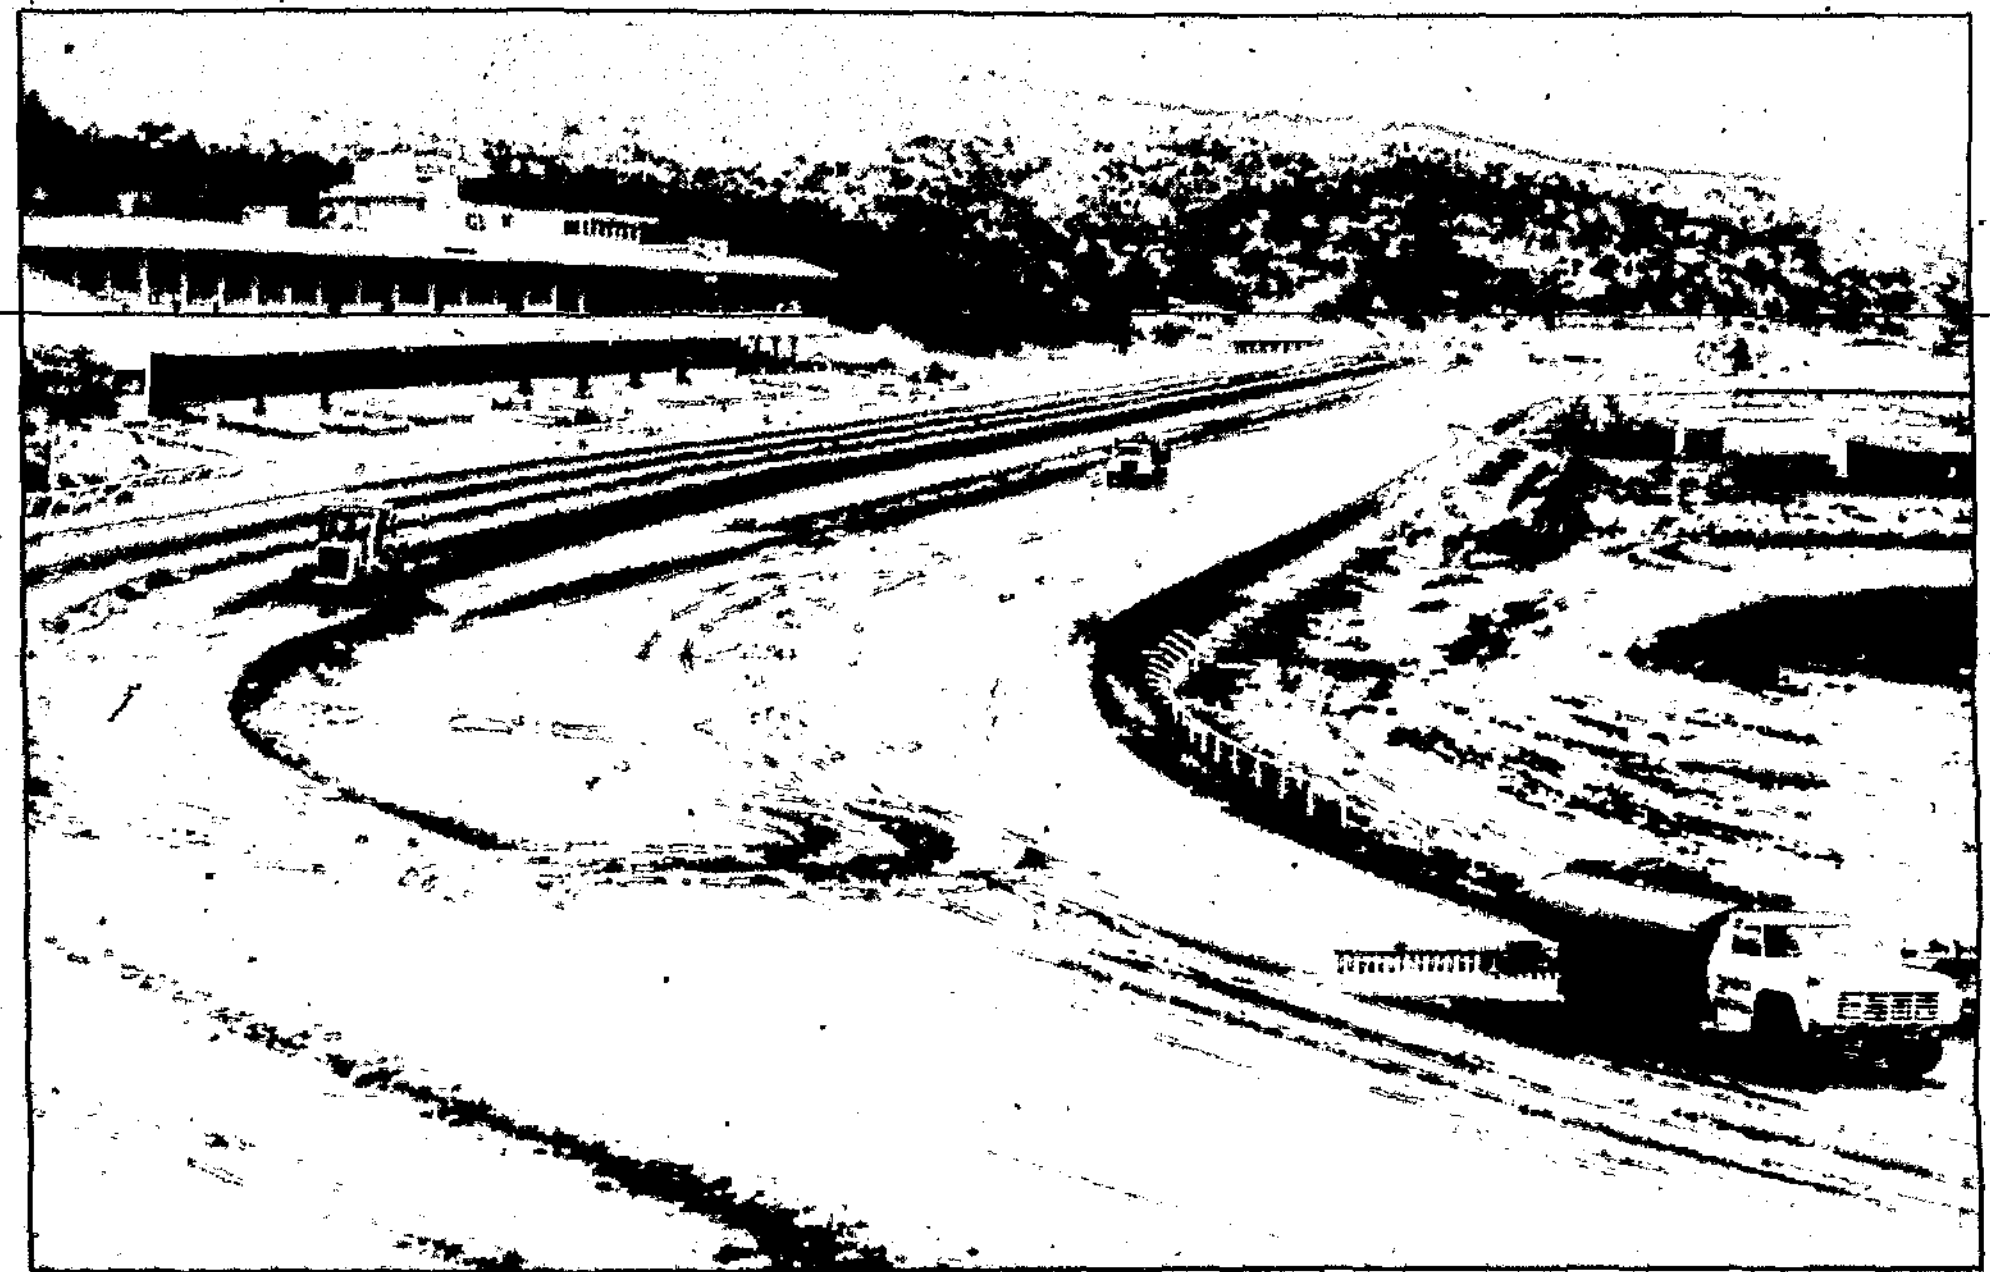

When the 1986 season began, owners, horsemen and jockeys alike gave the new track surfaces and the new seven-furlong thoroughbred track rave reviews. Some of the best horses and jockeys in the nation have already demonstrated their skills at Ruidoso Downs this year.

Work crews were diligent as they carefully prepared each surface on the expanded thoroughbred track (inside track) and the quarter horse track (outside track) in late April.

Fantasy Mountain amusement park is ready to thrill all comers

Parks set to open anyday

by SHARI LEWIS
News Staff Writer

The process of reopening Fantasy Mountain Amusement Park has been a tough one, but new park managers say they have made tremendous progress.

During the six weeks that operator Jimmy Hoggard, of Big Springs, Texas, and general manager May Porter, of Amarillo, Texas, have been in Ruidoso, the 18½ acre park has received an impressive face-lift.

The area has been completely landscaped with grass, various flowers and rose bushes, and hanging plants. Four new rides have been installed with plans for six additional rides in the near future.

"We're trying to enlarge the park considerably, making it more of a family theme park," Hoggard said.

"Within three to five years, we hope to have one of the nicest theme parks in the area. El Paso has some parks, but we have the advantage of the cool weather during the day," he said.

Filling seven of the 18½ acres of park are the already existing rides: a monorail, small Ferris wheel, Whirling Derbish, Go-Yo, wet boat ride, remote control boats, antique car ride, and the Mountain View ride. Approximately $250,000 worth of new rides include: a large Ferris wheel, large merry-go-round, an Astronaut ride, and a Spineroo. A Paratrooper ride is en route from Fort Worth, Texas, and a larger train ride is planned for the future.

Hoggard explained theme park rides are much different from carnival rides. Carnival rides can be set up overnight. The acreage at Fantasy Mountain is sloped in places, and dirt has to be brought in and the ground leveled before work can begin. All wiring must be placed underground as well, Hoggard said.

"It is a slow process. We want to make sure all of the rides are running properly and that they are safe," he said.

Hoggard has long-range plans for the amusement park. With more than 10 acres to build on, he hopes to continue bringing in new rides and attractions. A dance area and petting zoo are high on the list of additions.

Concession stands at the park will include, among others, souvenirs, ice cream, T-shirts, funnel cakes and Texas snow cones.

The park can accommodate 12,000 riders per day. It will employ from 20 to 25 people at first with 50 to 60 eventual employees. Admission will be $1 and rides will cost 75 cents per ride. Visitors may purchase an all-day pass at $7.50 for unlimited rides.

Fantasy Mountain Amusement Park, opening under new management, has four new rides with plans for more expansion as the summer continues. The 18½ acre amusement park will be capable of handling 12,000 riders per day.

Ski Apache keeps skiers happy with new trails, improved ski lifts

The notion of gliding down the snow-capped face of Sierra Blanca on waxed boards 26 years ago was just that. But as the years passed, a few determined people turned the notion into a top-notch ski resort.

Today Ski Apache Resort, owned and operated by the Mescalero Apache Tribe, is capable of hoisting 12,450 skiers per hour to lofty destinations.

Located 17 miles from Ruidoso, the ski area, called Sierra Blanca Ski Resort until 1985, began operation in 1961 with three T-bar lifts. Last year the lifts included five triple chairlifts, three double chairlifts and a four passenger gondola.

Improved snowmaking equipment came to the ski resort during the winter of 1983-84, and was expanded in 1985. The lower ski areas—including Capitan, Smokey Bear, Lower Deep Freeze, Snow Park and the lower Lincoln Lift Line—are now serviced by the snowmaking machinery.

Apache Bowl, a wide area that circles around from a southern exposure to a northern one, was expanded during the 1982-83 winter by adding a triple chairlift. The lift, which has a rise of 650 feet, deposits skiers at 11,450 feet, the very top of the ski area. The area features terrain from expert to novice.

During the 1984-85 ski season, Ski Apache set a record for attendance, selling 274,000 tickets. With all those people sweeping down the snow pack, the expansion of resting huts should be noted.

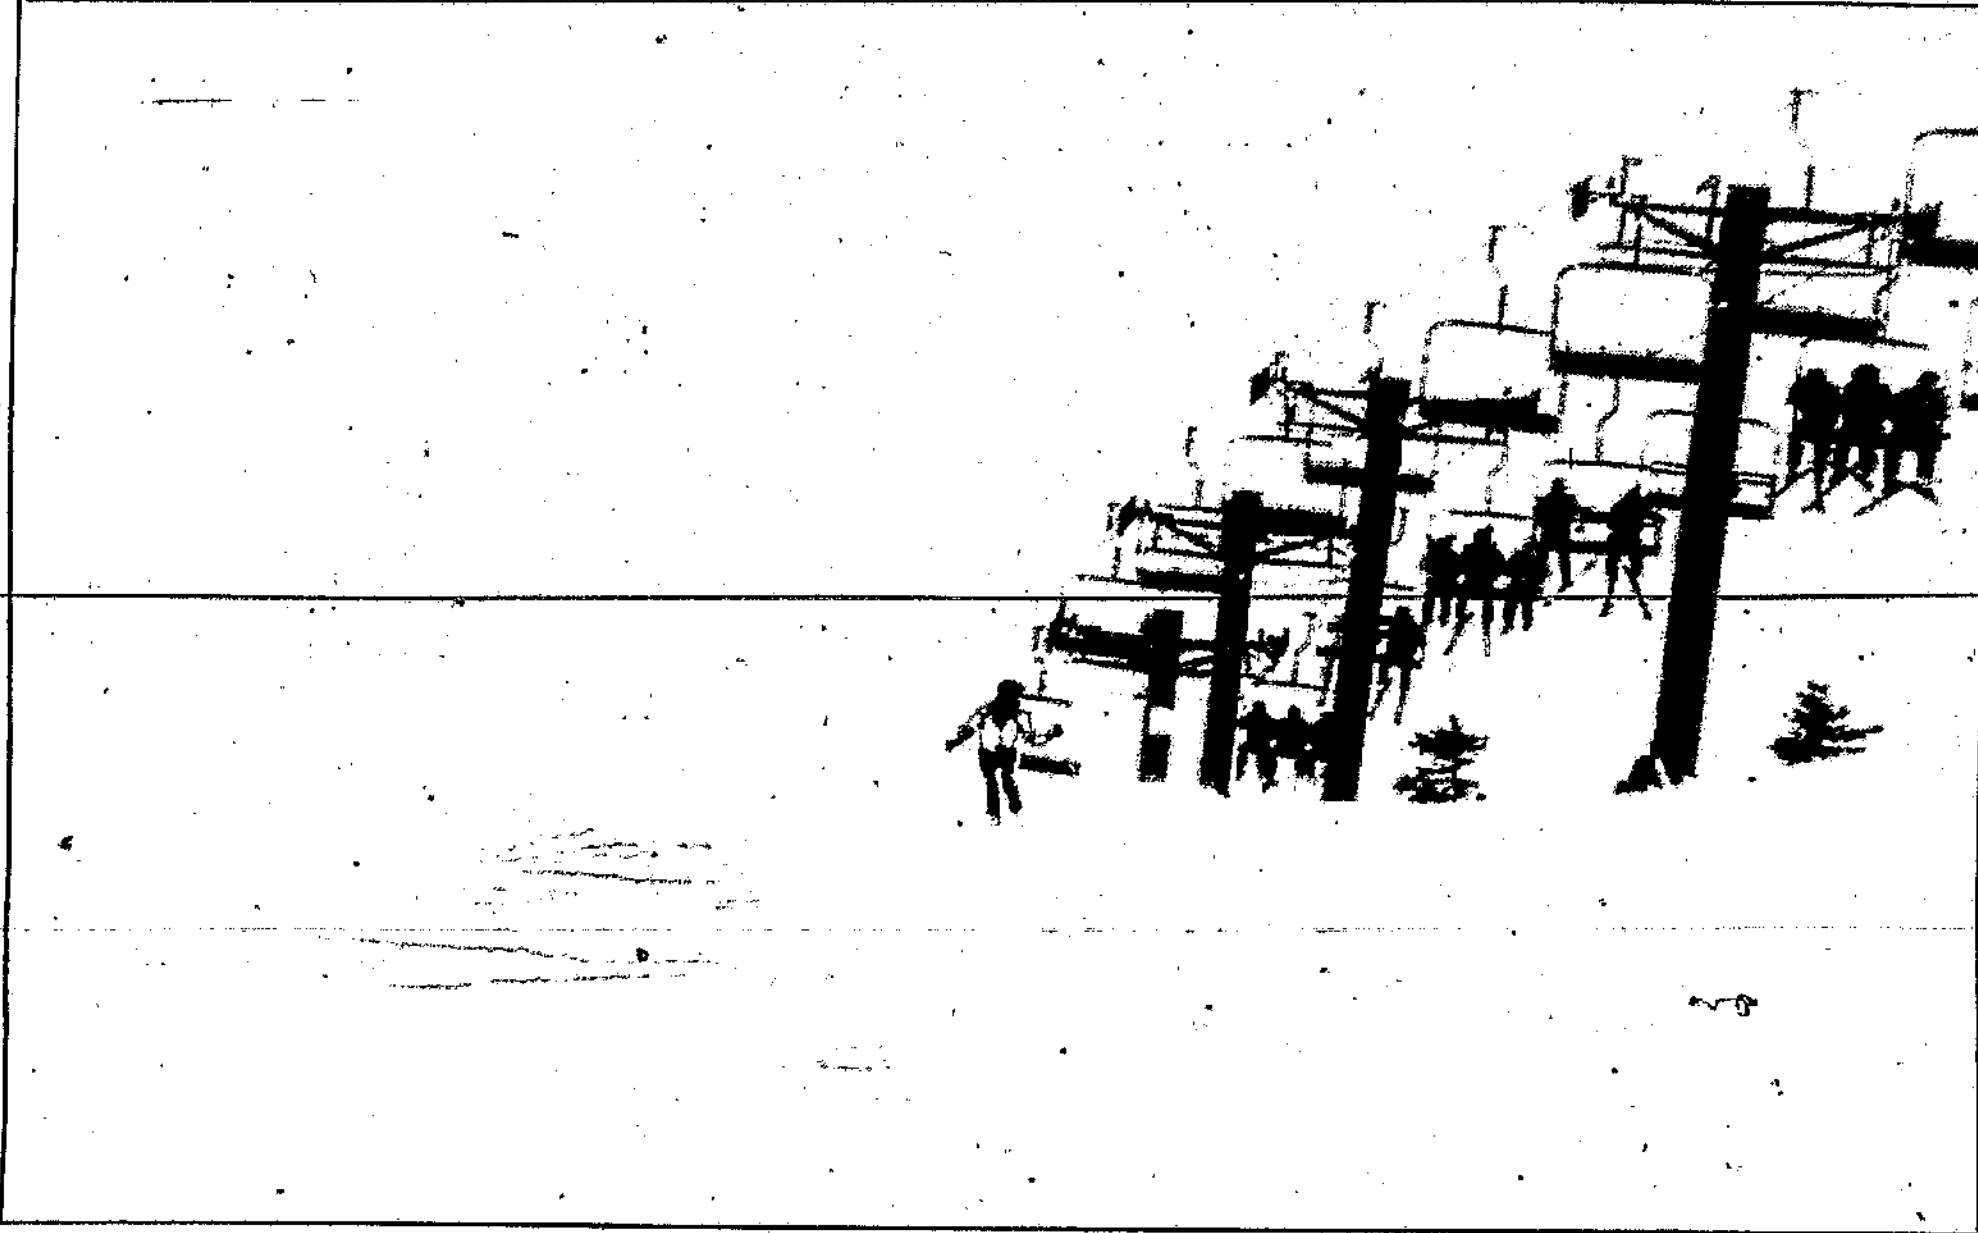

The restaurant at the main lodge remains the biggest noon-time attraction, but other options are available. A hamburger stand, located along Moonshine Gulch near the base of Number 1 chairlift, sizzled burgers and poured sodas in 1984, and expanded in 1985. Lookout Snack Bar, with expansive views of the Tularosa Basin, was opened at the top of Apache Bowl, serviced by the Apache Bowl chairlift.

Another progressive development is the area's ski school. Last year more than 100 instructors offered adult and child group classes. Private lessons are available by the hour or day. The school is a member of the Professional Ski Instructors of America, and offers NASTAR racing and coaching.

Additional trails and the expansion of existing trails increased the ski area considerably in the last five years. Trail signs with easy-to-read color guides were added in 1983.

In 1984 Ski Apache Resort hosted the All-American Pro Ski Classic. Sponsored by Peugeot, the local races were the fifth event on the 12-race Peugeot Grand Prix circuit. The $80,000 purse made it the richest race on the tour.

Ruidoso area boasts Cree, Inn, Alto golf courses

by GARY BROWN
Sports Writer

The Ruidoso area has some of the finest golf courses in New Mexico.

Cree Meadows Country Club, Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club and the Inn of the Mountain Gods all have beautiful 18-hole courses.

They vary in age from Cree Meadows' original nine-hole course built in 1946 to the Inn of the Mountain Gods course, built in 1976 (the course was built a year after the Inn was built).

All three offer challenging courses for golfers to play on.

Cree Meadows was built by Joe

Palmer and George McCarty, according to McCarty's son Bill. It has gone through a number of owners since then.

The course is open to the public. If you're a member, your green fees are covered.

What is now the back nine was the original nine-hole course. The front nine was built in 1973-74. The course has a par-71.

The course goes around trees and lakes and is host to a number of tournaments. The Cree Meadows Men's Match-Play Tournament, started in 1949, is the second-largest amateur tournament in the state. Last year was the only time it was not played in 36 years. It will be resumed this year, however.

Some of the top amateur golfers in the Southwest annually play in the Match-Play Invitational.

Another big tournament on the schedule is the Johnny Williams Memorial Partnership Golf Tournament in September. That tournament usually ends the local golf season.

Cree Meadows also was the site of the Ruidoso Invitational's girls and boys junior varsity high school competition this spring.

Johnny Palmer, who played on the Pro Golfers Association tour from 1946 to 1960, is the head pro.

Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club's front nine was built in 1967 and the back nine was built in 1972-73. Don Blaigrund was the developer.

The course has a par-72 and is one of the most challenging in the area, offering golfers a beautiful view of the trees and lakes around it.

It has excellent, competitive tournaments such as the Kachina Doll Ladies Member-Guest Golf Tournament, the Snowcapper Member-Guest Golf Tournament and the Lonesome Pine Member-Guest Golf Tournament. The latter two are men's tournaments.

Steve Fey is the head pro. Chuck Dunn is his assistant. The course is open to Alto Lakes members and their guests.

The Inn of the Mountain Gods is owned by the Mescalero Apache Tribe.

The course was built in 1976, a year after the Inn itself was built.

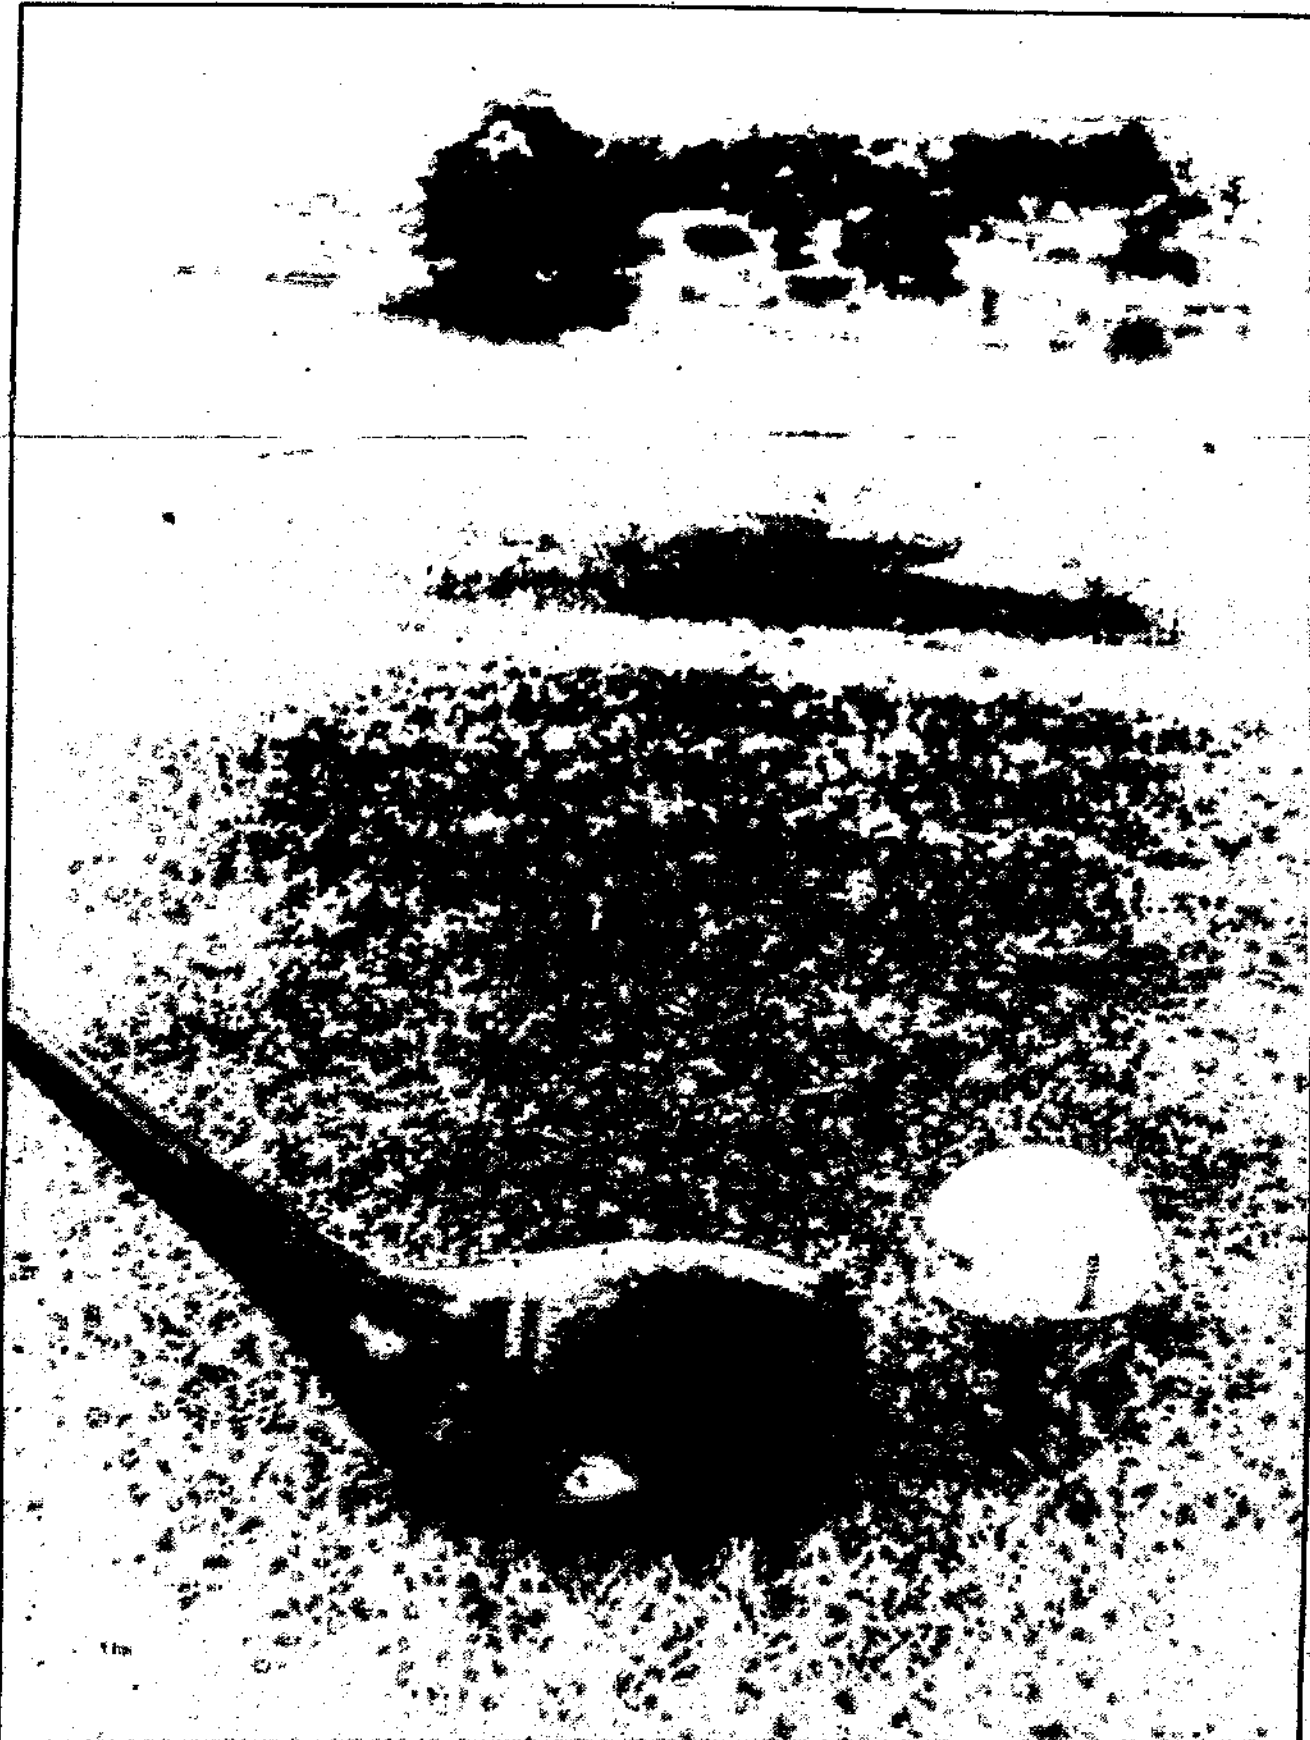

It has a 72-par course and offers a beautiful view of Sierra Blanca towering above the course.

The course has an annual pro-am tournament and the Wendell Chino All-Indian Tournament, named for the president of the Mescalero Tribe. It also has a number of convention tournaments and was the site of the Ruidoso Invitational's high school boys varsity competition this spring.

Jack Warlick is the head pro. Dodie Forrester is his assistant. The course is open to the public.

All three courses offer a variety of golf accessories in their pro shops, ranging from clubs to sportswear.

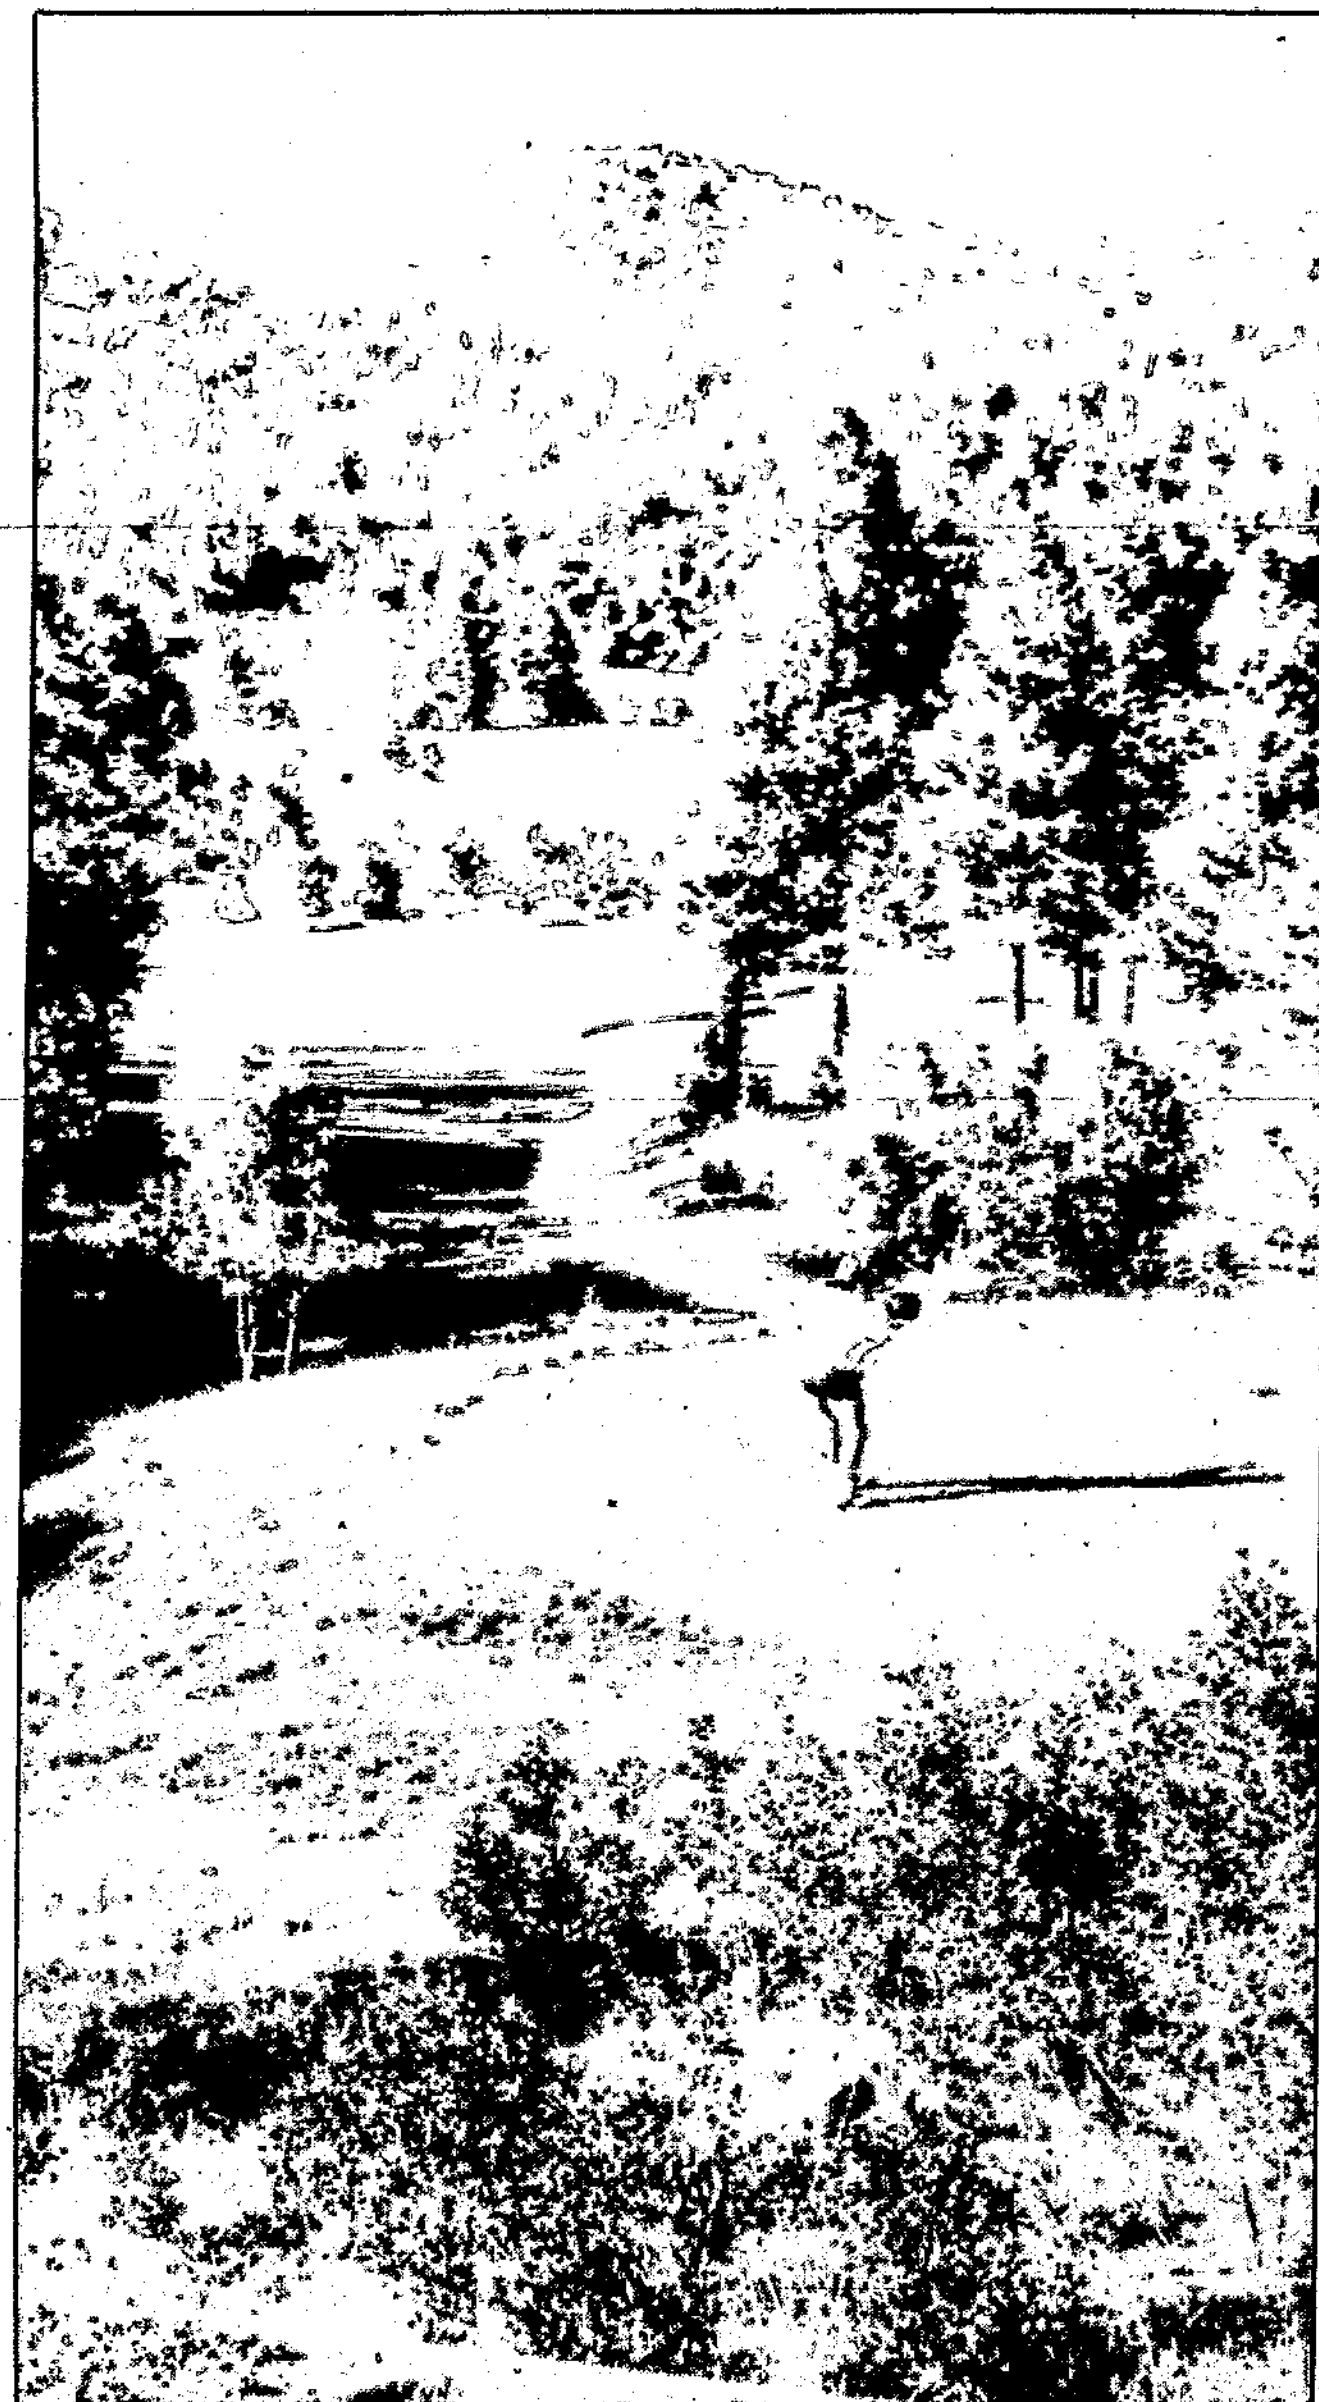

So, the Ruidoso area has some of the finest golf courses in the state. They help make Ruidoso one of the top vacation spots in New Mexico.

They've seen Ruidoso grow from its beginnings

BEN HALL:

"Ruidoso will hold its own, there's no doubt."

Ben Hall, state representative from District 56 and long-time Ruidoso resident, leaned back in his office chair and counted 130 local relatives.

"That's going no farther than Roswell," he said.

However, it is not number of kin that qualifies Hall for "long-timer" status, but his 1948 arrival date in Ruidoso.

Born in Portales, one of 10 children, the Hall's moved to Ruidoso when Ben was 11.

Now a state representative and local building contractor, Hall said visual changes he finds most striking in Ruidoso are along Sudderth Drive.

"When I was in high school it

(Sudderth Drive) was just a winding street. When they widened it, they just tore up some of the buildings. The old barber shop now is sitting down in Hondo.

"Anybody who grew up here wants the town to stay the way it was. But it's the price you've got to pay for progress. You can't build a house without knocking down a tree," Hall said.

With his wife, Gail, Hall raised a family of three daughters in Ruidoso. Although he enjoys visiting a big city, he never wanted to live with his family in one, he said.

From 1978 to 1982, Hall served as county commissioner for District 3. Elected to the House of Representatives in November 1984, he began serving his term January 1, 1985.

Today, Hall enjoys the amenities that Ruidoso offers, he said. But as a child, his activities were limited.

"I used to go to the bars with my dad at night. I'd play shuffle board with the other kids. Sometimes we would walk to the old theater. You couldn't hitch a ride, because there wasn't any cars," Hall said.

When Hall graduated from Ruidoso High School in 1954, there were 20 people in his class. Last June, 96 students graduated from his alma mater.

"There is one thing I can say, Ruidoso will hold its own, there's no doubt," he said.

MARGARET WHITELEY:

"I believed I could raise my kids just as well in Ruidoso as anywhere"

Margaret Whiteley, traveling with her minister father, her mother and eight brothers and sisters, saw a lot of the West when it was wild.

But 40 years ago, that "something about Ruidoso" invited her to put her feet under a kitchen table and stay awhile.

Sitting in the sunny kitchen of a home built by her late husband, Harry, Margaret dusts off enough memories to fill a cedar chest.

"We used to picnic up here in the 1930s before we moved here to live. I loved every single inch of it... of course there wasn't anybody up here then," Margaret said.

Soon, Margaret and Harry, who had become the first refrigeration repairman in the area, joined Ruidoso's sparse population and had three children. Their children grew, and had children of their own.

"I have had a child or grandchild in the Ruidoso school system every year for 39 years. I think I'm the only one in Ruidoso with that honor," she said with a wide grin.

And in those days, getting to school was the proverbial in-the-old-day's-getting-to-school story.

"We had to go to Capitán for school... they had a high school, we didn't. In '47 we had school at Carizo Lodge for half a term while they started building our high school," Margaret remembered.

"I believed I could raise my kids just as well in Ruidoso as anywhere," she said.

Sure, there have been many changes, she added. The cars continuously whisk by her home, set back from Sudderth Drive. Across the street is a panoramic view of a popular national fast-food chain. Quite different from 1952 when Margaret started Burger Trolley, the first drive-in restaurant in Ruidoso.

"When we opened we had room inside for four or five people. Then we had the first car-hops. At first, I thought I'd starve to death with that place," Margaret said. "But that Trolley's paid for everything I've had."

Today, 34 years later, the drive-up restaurant is still family owned. A peek at the now Jack's Trolley Burger at almost any hour dismisses any notion the venture was anything but another Ruidoso success story.

Margaret firmly stated she'll never move from this mountain.

"I know every rock on this hill, why would I go off and leave 'em?" she asked.

Although optimistic about the future of Ruidoso, she is nostalgic for quiet days when she knew everyone in town, and they knew her. When a two-lane Sudderth yielded with respect to pine trees. Now, it's the other way around, Margaret said.

One of the biggest changes was when Ruidoso no longer used local operators to place a call. Ben and Myrtle Weatherby were the town operators, linking up communications.

"Because of them, we all knew where all our kids were going," she said smiling.

Margaret however, is realistic about the sweep of civilization.

"I'm not talking sour grapes or nothin'. The people have added to the economy, of course. It helps you make a living," she said.

Making fewer out-of-town trips seems her biggest delight in witnessing the development of Ruidoso.

"Now I could get anything I could afford right here," Margaret added.

DAVE PARKS:

"You have to take advantage of growth instead of letting growth take advantage of you."

When asked if he was born here, Dave J. Parks shook his head no. "I couldn't be born here because there wasn't a hospital here then," he said. "So my mom went to Alamogordo."

So it was that Parks, 52, and Ruidoso began their long-standing association.

"Raising a town is kind of like raising a kid. You look back occasionally and say, 'Oh if only I had done ...' By and large, We haven't done too badly," Parks said.

Now vice president of Pertest Parks and Associates, a real estate and insurance company, Park's only departure from this pine-shrouded village was from 1956-60 to attend Western New Mexico University in Silver City. There he received his bachelor's degree in education with a minor in journalism and a master's degree in education administration.

"My mom raised me while she ran a camp in Upper Canyon. During the weekends I helped run the ski area at Cedar Creek. We'd go out and fire up the old rope tow ... some weekends we'd have 50 or 60 people," Parks said, remembering bygone days.

By 1961 Parks was out of a weekend job when the Mescalero Apache Tribe built Sierra Blanca Ski Resort, now called Ski Apache Resort, on the slopes of Sierra Blanca.

After graduation from college, Parks didn't have many problems finding work when he returned to Ruidoso. He taught school, coached, and sold real estate. In 1960 he and Tom Pertest began their successful partnership.

Perhaps one of Parks' favorite topics of progress regards the Ruidoso schools. Serving on the school board from 1962-82 and as president during the last 12 years of that period, Parks said he is proud of recent accomplishments.

"Obviously, with increased size can come great problems. But you have to take advantage of growth instead of letting growth take advantage of you," Parks said.

Parks has experienced the cyclical nature of Ruidoso's economy throughout his tenure. The rapid development during the late 1970s and early 1980s has contributed to Ruidoso's progress, he said. Parks cited an expanded race track, and the approval of a new airport as important community developments.

Parks and his wife, Lillah Jane, have raised four children in Ruidoso, both sons serving as firefighters for the village. Parks himself is a volunteer firefighter.

"When we (Ruidoso Schools) purchased the 11 acres for White Mountain Middle school in 1964, we thought that would last us forever," Parks said.

"The point is, the only thing predictable about Ruidoso is its unpredictability," he added.

SALLIE BUCKLEY:

"How lovely to live up here, such a wonderful place"

It was just going to be a quick vacation, she explained. Sallie Buckley and her husband, N.B. "Buck" Buckley, left Lubbock one afternoon more than 30 years ago and drove up a windy two-lane mountain road, looking at pine trees, sniffing fresh, crisp air.

"My very first thought was how lovely to live up here, such a wonderful place, never dreaming that I might," Sallie said about her 24-year dream-come-true.

After her husband changed jobs and began selling advertising for RedBook Stamps, the Buckleys were free to move to Ruidoso and did so, Sallie said.

"My husband had to travel a lot and he could just as well travel from Ruidoso as Roswell or Texas. The airport at Alamogordo had frequent flights because of all the moon stuff that was going on then," Sallie explained. Holloman Air Force Base and White Sands Missile Range were both active in the development of equipment that eventually landed on the moon.

Sallie, 78, sits gracefully in a floral lounge chair and blends into the tranquility of her back yard. After her husband died in 1975, Sallie continued maintaining their ranch-style home. She claims to have mowed the freshly cut grass herself just the day before.

"By the time we moved here there was a main street. But when the races were over, and the tourists had gone home, you couldn't find a restaurant to have a meal in, or a motel to sleep. Most of the gift shops were closed until the start of the season," she recalled.

"We were the only people living behind the post office one winter. Except for the bears, deers and coons, that is. We were real fond of the bears," she adds.

A black bird swoops down from Sallie's apricot tree and begins a robust session in the bird bath. Sallie also supplies abundant seed and sugared water to attract birds.

"I think the changes that have taken place over the years here in Ruidoso are wonderful," she said.

"It used to be that the cemetery was way out of town. Now it's so built up out there. And the schools are wonderful with excellent teachers.

"One way you can notice a difference in Ruidoso is in the churches. They have a real congregation now. Before it was more like a chapel," Sallie said.

Her two sons live in Ruidoso and her daughter visits often from Texas. Nine grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren keep many of her days busy.

Finally Sallie decides what is the biggest change she has witnessed in Ruidoso.

"We don't have bears come visit anymore," she said.

DAN STORM:

"The future of this place is very bright"

When he first rode into town in 1925, the tracks he left behind were dirt. There wasn't but a grocery store called Bennett's, and one big house, the Wingfield residence.

Today, Daniel A. Storm, 76, observes village changes with a nod of approval.

"This place has finally become a home town with a high school and good stores. People have settled here permanently.

"People say, 'I hope it doesn't get too big.' I think there is plenty of space here," Storm said gesturing with wide, calloused hands.

Born in Valdez, Alaska, Storm, with his mother and four brothers, traveled extensively with his father, a mining engineer.

"We were living in El Paso and mother was hot and heard about the cool climate up here. When we moved to Austin in 1927 we still spent our summers in Ruidoso," he said.

Storm received a bachelor's degree in 1932 from the University of Texas in Austin, majoring in journalism.

After serving in the 32nd Infantry during World War II, Storm moved permanently to the Ruidoso area and started freelancing for The Ruidoso News in 1946.

"My folks always wanted me to start a cheer-em-up column so I started writing The Silver Lining," Storm said.

The Silver Lining remains a regular column each Monday in The Ruidoso News along with his Thursday's column, The Dreamer. The columns contain anecdotes and remembrances from around Lincoln County.

"When I first came here, San Patricio was a bustling place. Carriazo was going strong ... but in those days Ruidoso was a lot of slab cabins," Storm recalls.

A resident of Glencoe, a tiny spot on the map between Ruidoso and Hondo, Storm lives by himself in the same home he summered in as a boy.

"When they widened the main street in 1960 all at once the place really took hold," he said.

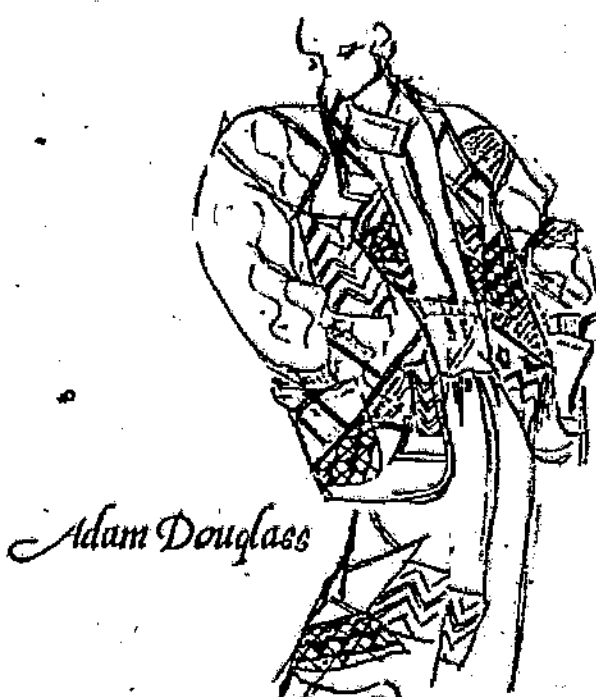

The recent developments, the additional shopping, the better roads, and the improved race track are definitely signs of progress, Storm said.

"The Texans, God bless 'em, have made this town," Storm said.

Before leaving The Ruidoso News office where he still hand delivers his columns, Storm paused and tipped his hat.

"The future of this place is very bright. There is something about these pine trees," he said.

$12 million high school is built

Facilities, academics progress

Program against substance abuse awarded

Sports program is a winner

$2.6 million in improvements planned

Progress is made in facilities, academics; college classes offered

The Ruidoso Municipal School District focused on various improvements during the last five years, moving from an operating budget of $3.2 million in 1980 to more than $5.6 million in 1985, reported superintendent Sid F. Miller.

Many significant changes that took place in the school district during the last few years are building changes, Miller said. In May 1984 most of Ruidoso's 1,771 registered students moved to new, or new-to-them buildings.

The shuffling symbolized the success of years of concentrated effort, with the opening of a new high school on Bog Springs Road. Students from Ruidoso Middle School moved into the vacated high school, and White Mountain Middle School became White Mountain Intermediate and White Mountain Elementary School.

Plans for the new high school started in 1981, prompted by overcrowded classrooms and lack of space, Miller said. A committee of school administrators, board members and teachers worked together to formulate the project. Eventually more than $11 million was invested in the multi-level building, $5 million of that raised by selling local bonds and the remainder funded by the State of New Mexico, Miller said.

"The new high school is a positive change and it shows we've progressed. It was done by committee, and we have little dissatisfaction because of it," Miller said.

Continuing to improve Ruidoso schools, voters passed a special bond issue last April, allowing $2.6 million in bonds to be sold in two installments. Both new construction at Ruidoso Middle School and various remodeling projects can now be accomplished, Miller said.

While school administrators focused on money matters during the past few years, academic standards were not overlooked, Miller said.

Over the last three years, Ruidoso school officials have closely followed results of the California Test of Basic Skills (CTBS), said associate superintendent Mike L. Gladden. As required by state regulations, the test is administered each year to third-, fifth- and eighth-graders.

Scores in all three grades showed much improvement during the last few years.

"We've made curriculum adjustments according to what we learned from the test results. I think the improvement in the test scores shows we have been successful," Gladden said.

Gladden points out that when fifth-grade students took the CTBS in 1982-83, only two percent of those students rated higher than the national average in spelling and language mechanics. When those same students took the CTBS during the 1985-86 school year, 18 percent of the students ranked higher than the national average in spelling, and 35 percent ranked higher than the national average in language mechanics.

"I think our attendance policy helped boost the scores. We are very careful now about monitoring attendance in the classroom," Gladden said.

Ruidoso Municipal School District added 20 new teaching positions during the last five years, bringing the total number of teachers in 1985 to 93. With last year's student enrollment reaching 1,800, the teacher-student ratio remained well within the maximum class size set by state regulations, the superintendent said.

Although Ruidoso Municipal School District students are the primary concern of education officials, adults were not overlooked. New Mexico State University's Alamogordo branch has offered two to three college level courses since January 1985.

"We started out with freshman level classes such as basic algebra and history. Our intention was to offer classes that would transfer easily to other colleges. Now we are finding that people wanted more specific types of classes like advanced art and computer programming," Gladden said.

Gladden added that during the past summers, NMSU Alamogordo branch has also offered graduate level courses for teachers who are working on master degrees.

For some residents of Ruidoso, the present offering of college courses does not meet the booming need for adult education.

Rick Evans, a local real estate agent and past member of the Ruidoso Village Council said Ruidoso could use a "soft industry" such as a private college. Evans suggested the Village of Ruidoso purchase the ground which will be vacated when the Ruidoso Airport becomes the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport and moves to Fort Stanton mesa, a move that could occur by sometime next year.

"I feel that, absolutely, the best thing that could happen in Ruidoso today would be to locate a privately funded college or university on our existing airport land," Evans said. "Higher education is a $95.5 billion dollar a year industry in the United States. It is a clean industry that would serve us best when we need it most—that is the months of September through May," Evans said in a recent speech.

Local officials are still looking into the possibilities of locating such an educational facility here.

Last day of school

Ruidoso Middle School students end another year of school and begin a summer of fun. The middle school is scheduled to benefit from about $460,000 of the $2.6 million bond issue. Improvements at the middle school will include floor work, five new classrooms and renovation of the gymnasium.

Schools to benefit by $2.6 million bond issue

In a special election last April, Ruidoso voters passed a $2.6 million bond issue for Ruidoso Municipal Schools. Although the issue passed by just 18 votes, making the margin the narrowest in the history of school bond elections here, school officials said the money will be well spent.

"We needed the bonds to do both remodeling and additions. We are being very careful with the funds. We are paying close attention to our priorities. The middle school, the old Ruidoso High School, needs remodeling. And there hasn't been any major work done for 10 years at the elementary school," said Sid F. Miller, RMS superintendent.

Ruidoso Board of Education voted to award the building contracts to the architectural and planning firm of Alley-Connell-Strain and Associates.

The bonds will be sold in two phases, Miller said. The first phase, beginning June 1, allocated $1.5 million, with all Ruidoso schools receiving renovation. Included in this phase is a $184,000 allocation for renovation of the Ruidoso Middle School athletic facilities.

This phase will also allow for construction of four classrooms, two restrooms and a library-media center at Nob Hill Elementary School. Ruidoso High School will be funded for a sprinkler and drainage system.

During the first phase, Ruidoso Middle School will have major renovation projects, including a new cafeteria, teacher's lounge and addition of supply rooms. Exteriors will be upgraded and entrances will also be renovated, Miller said.

Phase two will allocate a total of $1.1 million, beginning June 1987. Ruidoso Middle School is then scheduled for $460,000 in renovations, including floor work, addition of five classrooms and renovation of the gymnasium.

White Mountain Elementary School and White Mountain Intermediate School will both get additional classrooms during this phase, Miller said.

The cost to the taxpayer is expected to be 70 cents per $1000 of assessed property value, Miller said. On property valued at $60,000 with a current assessed value on the tax rolls at $20,000, the impact of the school bonds on property tax bills will be just $14 a year, Miller said.

High school is a $12 million plus for students

Campus a "show place"

The Ruidoso High School principal walks into the room and appears surprised by the luxurious decor of his office.

Along one wall an atrium, growing exotic foliage from the floor halfway to the ceiling, bathes in filtered sunlight. A couch, a coffee table and a few cushioned chairs take more room. The principal's oak desk stretches six feet long, with conference chairs clustered nearby. Still there is room.

"I've had visitors ask, 'What is this, the Ruidoso Hilton?' We are a high school. We just have a very special feeling here," Tom F. Hansen, Ruidoso High School principal said in a recent interview.

"And now we now know where all the light switches are," Hansen said, smiling through his silver handlebar mustache.

Finding all the switches and keyholes was no easy task when the new Ruidoso High School opened for classes in the fall of 1984. The school building covers 160,000 square feet.

"The overall move into the new building was accomplished with the students in one day. The teachers asked the students who had pick-up trucks to help out ... any student who didn't want to help move could stay home, but we had every kid helping," Hansen said.

The building, designed by the Roswell architectural firm of Alley-Connell-Strain and Associates, is a $12 million project. Funding for the school came from a $5 million local bond issue, and the remainder funded by the state, said Ruidoso Municipal Schools superintendent Sid F. Miller.

Increased space was not the only benefit to the students, Hansen said. At the old high school, high school classes were taught in seven different buildings, and often the students wouldn't have a chance to see each other, Hansen said. Having a main entrance adds to the community feeling, he added.

Ruidoso High School students are showing pride in their new school, Hansen said. Students from various classes have been shoveling, hoeing and planting on the high school grounds during the past year, he added.

Outside the building, sophomore Lewis Orosco, 16, shoveled dirt with a group of other students.

"We're trying to get this stump out. Then we are going to plant something," Orosco explained.

The students agreed with the principal their new school was a source of pride.

"We get a good education here, and an open campus, too," one student said.

"I just hope they stripe the parking lot pretty soon," another student said.

With the passing of an additional bond issue last April, Hansen said other improvements to the new building are scheduled. Sprinkler and drainage systems will be added this year, and in 1987 a band practice area and fine arts parking lot.

Student population at the high school reached a high of 543 students in 1985. Long-range planners estimated the student population could reach 750 by 1990, and over 1,000 by the year 2000, Hansen said.

"The school can accommodate classroom space for 850 students. The core of the school, the office space, library and cafeteria, can accommodate 1,000 students. We would just build on the classrooms," Hansen said.

Building on classrooms isn't top priority at the high school right now, Hansen said. Building a top-notch academic program is, he said.

"We are changing our curriculum based on the needs of the students, based on test scores. We added two honors classes this year, in Spanish and French. We're small, but we try to do extra things," Hansen said.

Teachers at the high school also see a change in the atmosphere of the school.

"Relations between faculty and students has always been good ... but it's getting even better. We are really pushing for quality now ... offering choices we didn't used to," Carol Hubbard, a French and English teacher, said.

Math teacher Gerald Tully said academics have always been stressed in the Ruidoso school system.

"We have a nice facility, a pleasant environment that makes it nice to go to work. But the teachers still have to teach, and the kids still have to learn," Tully said.

"We've grown in numbers so we can offer more subjects—anthropology, languages, a great computer system, wonderful home economics labs—but it comes down to teaching, and I teach in my room," Tully said.

Ruidoso High School students helped out during the school year to landscape the new facility's grounds. The high school was built at a cost of about $12 million.

Schools' sports programs have led to a state title

by GARY BROWN
Sports Writer

As the final seconds ticked off the clock at New Mexico State University's Aggie Memorial Stadium December 7, 1985, Ruidoso High School sports hit a new high in the Warriors' history.

The Warrior varsity football team had beaten Silver City, 21-19, for the state AAA-division title.

It was Ruidoso's first-ever state title in the AAA-division and it proved the school had arrived on a competitive level.

In the past five years, most of the Warrior sports teams have shown gradual improvement, and some of them—like the football team—have been greatly improved. Ruidoso Middle School's teams also have been competitive.

In addition, more sports have been added to the program—tennis and cross-country on the high school level and volleyball at the middle school level.

What's been the reason for the overall improvements?

Some of the coaches give credit to the sixth-period athletic program and the seventh-grade intramural program at the middle school.

"I think we've had gradual improvement in all the sports," said Warrior athletic director-head football coach Cooper Henderson. "The intramural program at the middle school has also helped a lot, particularly in the girls programs."

The sixth-period athletic program was started in the 1983-84 school year, the year before Henderson and most of his assistant coaches came to the Warrior campus.

It provides students who participate in sports a chance to stay in shape and learn before the after-school practice starts.

The middle school's intramural program has been in action for two years. It gives seventh-graders a chance to participate against each other on a competitive level. The middle school's eighth-graders make up the teams that compete against other schools.

But the biggest improvement has been in varsity football.

In 1981, the Warriors had an 8-2 record and just missed the state AAA-division playoffs. Ruidoso won one "official" game the next two seasons as the team underwent a rebuilding program. The only win of the 1983 season was forfeited because of an ineligible player.

But Henderson became head coach in 1984. The team went 8-3-1 in 1985, making the state playoffs and losing to eventual champion Artesia in the semi-finals.

And this past season the comeback was complete. Ruidoso dominated most of its opponents all season with the only loss coming to Silver City in the regular-season game (17-13).

The gridiron success has culminated in more youths working out in the high school gymnasium during the summertime.

"We've about 25 boys working out the first couple of nights here," Henderson said. "When we started the summer workouts, we only had about nine or 10 at first."

But the other sports also have seen improvements, if not as rapid as football.

The Warrior boys wrestling and track teams both finished second in District 3-AAA this past season. It was the second straight year Ruidoso took second in boys track.

The Warrior wrestling team had more depth and talent this past season than any year in the past.

Ruidoso's boys and girls basketball teams have had losing campaigns, but have shown signs of improving in the past two years.

Ruidoso was fourth in the state in boys basketball in 1981. Since then, the Warriors won seven games in 1982, none in 1983, four in 1984, four in 1985 and 10 in 1986.

The Warrior girls had a 5-19 overall record in 1985-86, but were a young, rebuilding team. The 1984-85 team could have made the state tournament with a little luck.

"Oh yeah, we're improving," said Warrior boys coach Gene Segura. "We won four games the first year I was here and we won 10 this past year."

Most of the players on both the Warrior boys and girls basketball teams are returning next season.

"We're looking for positive things," Segura said. "We probably have 12 to 15 more kids out in the four grades than we did in my first year."

Ruidoso's girls programs are starting to improve as the middle school intramural program brings more athletes in.

"We are definitely building on our program," said Warrior volleyball coach Pixie Arthur. "We're improving our numbers and skills and we're keeping kids in our program. They're not leaving it."

Arthur also praised the middle school's intramural program.

"It's helped a lot and we're seeing some results," Ruidoso did not win a district volleyball match for two seasons, but won one last year and was competitive in a number of other matches.

Ruidoso competed in an Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) tournament in Roswell recently and did well.

"We beat Farmington and split with Clovis," Arthur said. "We're definitely improving."

The middle school teams also have improved in the past few years.

The Braves' football team finished last season with a 3-3 record and the volleyball team had a 4-4 mark. The middle school has only had a volleyball team for two years.

"We've had improvement," said Brave head football coach Terry Wharton. "Our IFE (intramural physical education) program has given kids basic fundamentals. We had about 55 kids involved in the seventh-grade program last year."

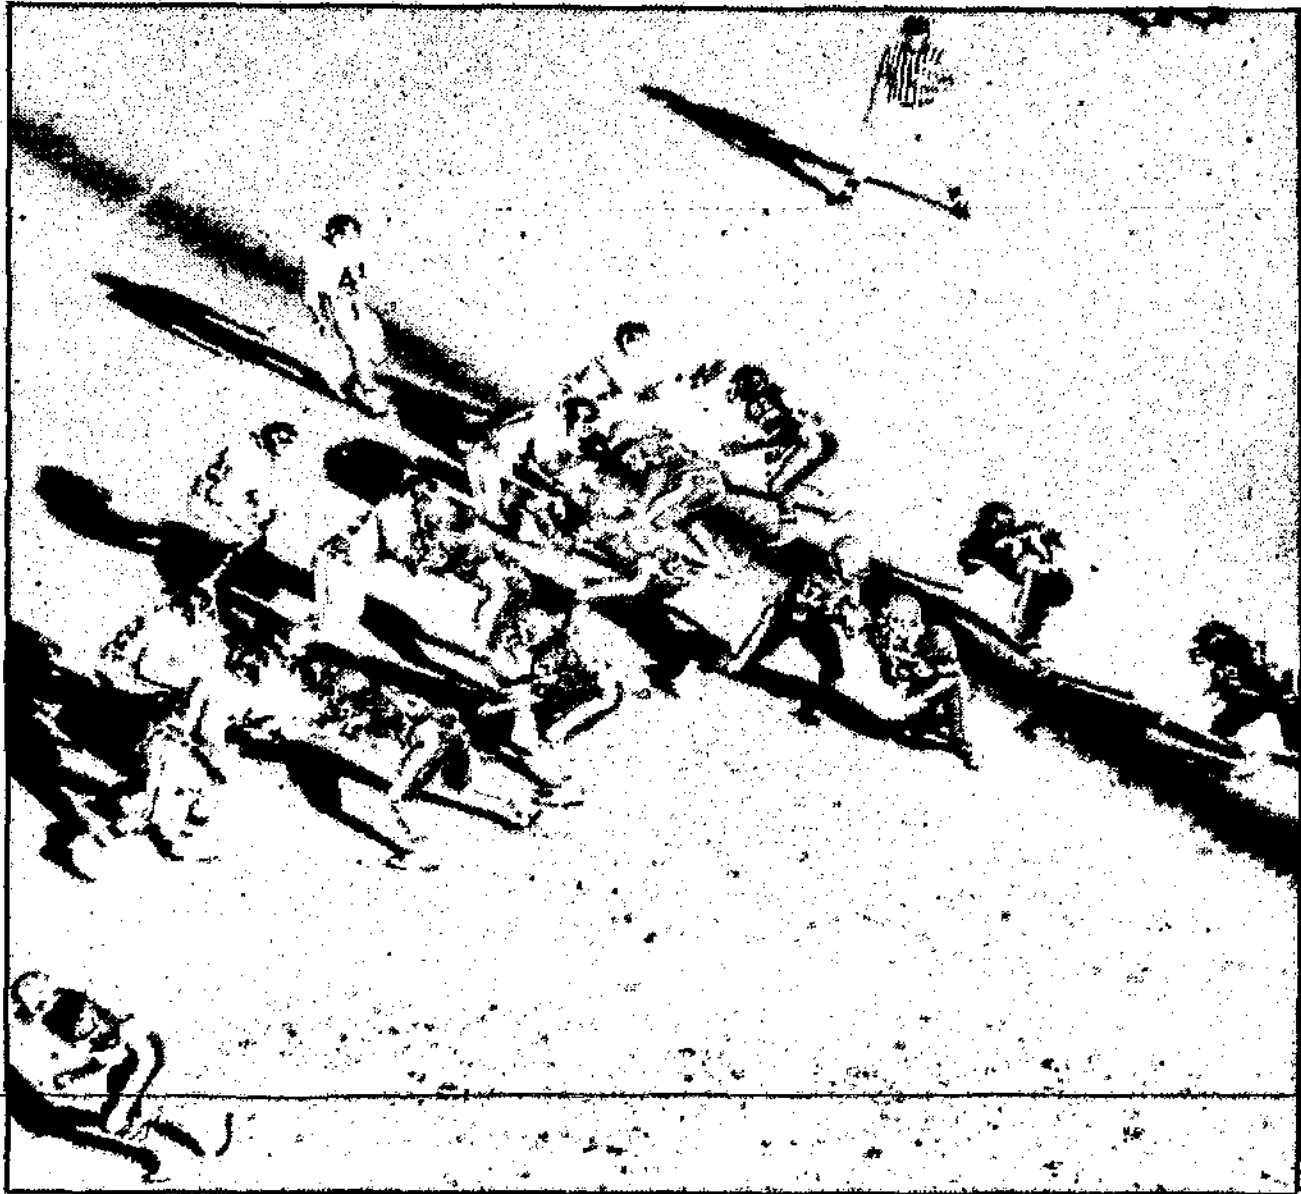

And the more successes in athletics have come along with some improvements in facilities.

When the Warriors moved into their new campus in the fall of 1984, they gained a modern, large gymnasium and an all-weather track, the latter the only of its kind in the district. And improvements at W.D. Horton Stadium are planned this summer.

The seating capacity will be increased on both the home and visitors' side, a new press box will be added, better lights will be put in, along with other improvements.

Yes, the school sports programs have improved a lot in the past five years. What happened at New Mexico State University last December could be repeated a lot more in the future.

The Warrior football team excelled all season on the way to the 1985 state title.

Schools are awarded for battle against substance abuse

When Ruidoso Middle School began a substance abuse prevention program in 1985, they were part of a district-wide comprehensive effort combating drug use and abuse.

The New Mexico State Governor's Office recognized prevention programs with exemplary awards in February 1986, and Ruidoso Middle School was among those honored.

Daily 25-minute periods known as the Advisor-Advisee Partnership are the focal point of the school's prevention program. In a supportive, non-judgmental atmosphere, students explore their feelings and attitudes about drugs.

Another aspect of the prevention program is the Adopt-a-Class program, where more advanced classes regularly visit the first-grade classes and present information about drug use and abuse.

Drug use, abuse and prevention is also a concern dealt with at the high school level, said Ruidoso High School Principal, Tom F. Hansen.

"We've learned better techniques in talking to parents with kids who have drug problems. We have less drug abuse and more awareness of the pitfalls of drinking and drugs. I also think the kids are taking better care of each other than they were 10 years ago," Hansen said.

Other intervention programs have been started in the Ruidoso school system, which officials said have been successful.

In 1985 the Impact program began working in the local schools, said associate superintendent Mike L. Gladden.

"I think the Impact program has been successful. We established guidelines. A professionally trained team of faculty provides information to staff and students regarding substance abuse," Gladden said.

The goals of the Impact program include increased student and community knowledge about the symptoms of drug abuse, Gladden said. The Impact information specialists, or Core Team, established an intervention program, and offer support to students. The Core Team also offers alternatives to chemical use, Gladden said.

"The programs we have in place are positive. It's all one drive to have continued progress in our schools. It's important that the students know we care," Gladden said.

Ruidoso Board of Education President W.R. "Stormy" Edwards also said progress has been made to enlighten students about drug abuse.

"Once a year the school board meets with the student council. The kids are unanimous in saying any drug use was on a down slide. These are kids who traditionally speak up. It's very positive," Edwards said.

Recently other community members have joined in to increase awareness about drug abuse. Dr.

Roger A. Beechie, a family practice physician, said self-education is the main goal of Ruidoso Families in Action.

"We are a group of families that want to help kids make educated choices about drug use," Beechie said.

BUSINESS

Ruidoso business community has seen great growth

The complexion of Ruidoso has changed. Brand new banks, shopping centers to satisfy even the heartiest browser, three new car dealerships, restaurants of many cuisines, the growth and expansion of locally owned and chain grocery stores and a thriving real estate market have changed Ruidoso from a quiet mountain hamlet to a bustling village where progress is not a dream, but reality.

In addition to the visual indicators backing claims of growth and expansion comes statistical information. Sometimes thought of as a stagnant mish-mash of mathematical figures, statistics have become hot local reading.

Take, for instance, the real estate market. According to Alton Lane, executive officer of Ruidoso Board of Realtors, local Realtors from 1979 through 1980 sold $45.6 million in real estate. During the same amount of time from 1984 through 1985, $79.4 million in real estate was sold by Ruidoso Realtors.

"Ten years ago we had 78 Realtors. Today we have 170," Lane said. Selling activity is not equally divided among all the agents, however, the large increase in membership indicates the nature of the real estate market, Lane said.

Condominium and townhouse projects grabbed a majority of the building attention in Ruidoso during the last five years. Major building projects include Crown Point, Carrizo, Triple Crown, The Springs, Whispering Bluff, Pinon Park and Tierra Del Sol.

Fortunately, everyone who visits Ruidoso need not plop down tons of hard cash to assure themselves a cozy place to sleep in this Southwest year-round playground.

In recent years, local lodging owners have established themselves as active members in the hunt for tourists, according to the president of the Ruidoso Lodgers Association (RLA).

"We're getting new ideas, new blood in town. Not that old ideas were bad ... it's just we are updating those goals," said Clabe Webb, 29, who along with his wife, Judy, owns The Blue Spruce Cabins.

"A lot of people in my age bracket are finding out they have to get out in the public eye and be noticed. We're changing from just running mom and pop courts. Now we are small business owners that strive just like any other service to make a living," Webb said.

Indeed lodging establishments have played a significant role in the expansion mode that Ruidoso has experienced in the past five years.

Lodgers' tax collections, started in 1974 in part to provide the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce with advertising dollars, was raised by one percent in July 1985. The tax, paid by those staying in lodging establishments, is now three percent of the room rate charge.

During the 1979-80 fiscal year (July though June), lodgers' tax pooled just a drop under $70,000. But for the same amount of time, and at the same tax rate in the 1984-85 year, the kitty collected almost $116,000, according to records supplied by the Village of Ruidoso.

One of the early organizers of the Lodgers Association, Clark Carpenter, owner of Dan Dee Cabins in the Upper Canyon, said Ruidoso should, "get on its knees and thank the lodgers" for collecting the advertising tax.

"We're getting good mileage out of each penny," Carpenter said.

The presidents of Ruidoso banking institutions generally voiced optimistic attitudes regarding the rapid developments in Ruidoso.

President of First Federal Savings, Richard A. "Dick" Parsons Jr., 30, a Ruidoso resident for 26 years, said the building industry here has leveled off after a period of "outrageous" building speculation.

"I see this period we are in now as a positive change. Now we're getting down to realistic cost and service," Parsons said.

"If we are to continue to progress, we have to offer reasonable housing, reasonable entertainment and have a good attitude," he added.

President of First National Bank of Ruidoso, Robert Hayes said all financial institutions play a role in the progress of Ruidoso. First National Bank, headquartered in Alamogordo, opened the Ruidoso branch December 1985, and now has assets of $17 million, Hayes said.

"We don't have any reservations at all about Ruidoso. We are optimistic that we'll have substantial growth in Ruidoso," Hayes added.

The first bank to serve Ruidoso 34 years ago, Ruidoso State Bank, now has total assets of $81 million, said President Jack R. Foster.

"I think we have a lot ahead of us for Ruidoso. We've just scratched the surface," Foster said when asked if he was optimistic regarding Ruidoso's future economy.

"The new airport will play a big part in our future development. Once we get commercial flights, we should just blossom," Foster said.

One real estate agent who went to high school in Ruidoso, Mary Underwood, now vice president of Century 21 Aspen Real Estate, Inc., observed that nationwide chains have invested in Ruidoso in the last five years, adding credibility to the local economy.

Food chains such as Safeway, McDonald's, Baskin Robbins, Taco Villa, and Arby's are only a sampling of local offerings.

"Furr's Cafeteria bought a large piece of land that they are just holding on to for future development. I think that is optimistic," Underwood said.

One Arkansas-based company, Wal-Mart, Inc. opened a 51,000 square foot discount variety store on Highway 70 last March.

"Wal-Mart has a team of people who look for sites. The company decided Ruidoso would be a good place. We're doing very well here," David K. Luebber, Ruidoso store manager said.

Meanwhile statistics continue to support claims of surprised visitors who declare, "this town grows overnight!"

During the calendar year of 1981, 27 new commercial building permits were issued by the Village of Ruidoso, according to city records. Through December 1985, 157 new commercial building permits were issued.

During the same five year span, the Village of Ruidoso issued 1,346 new single family dwelling permits, and 127 apartment complex or condominium project permits.

In terms of dollar investments, the figures are impressive.

According to a generalized average cost of building in New Mexico, or valuation assessment, during the five year period of 1980 through 1985, $70 million was invested in new single family dwellings in Ruidoso. Both new commercial buildings and apartment and condominiums each totaled almost $30 million during the same five year period.

That's about $130 million invested in five years for new buildings in a village that city officials say covers only 12 square miles.

John Jeffers, director of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, said the annual net growth of Ruidoso from 1979-84 was 7 percent annually. In recent months the growth rate has stabilized, Jeffers said.

"In the last 14 months we have been working harder and smarter to promote Ruidoso. I've never seen a town that has more talent and energy," Jeffers said, who came to his position at the chamber 18 months ago from Bentonville, Arkansas.

The chamber has been targeting new promotion markets, including the major Texas metropolitan areas of Dallas-Fort Worth, Austin, Houston and San Antonio, Jeffers said.

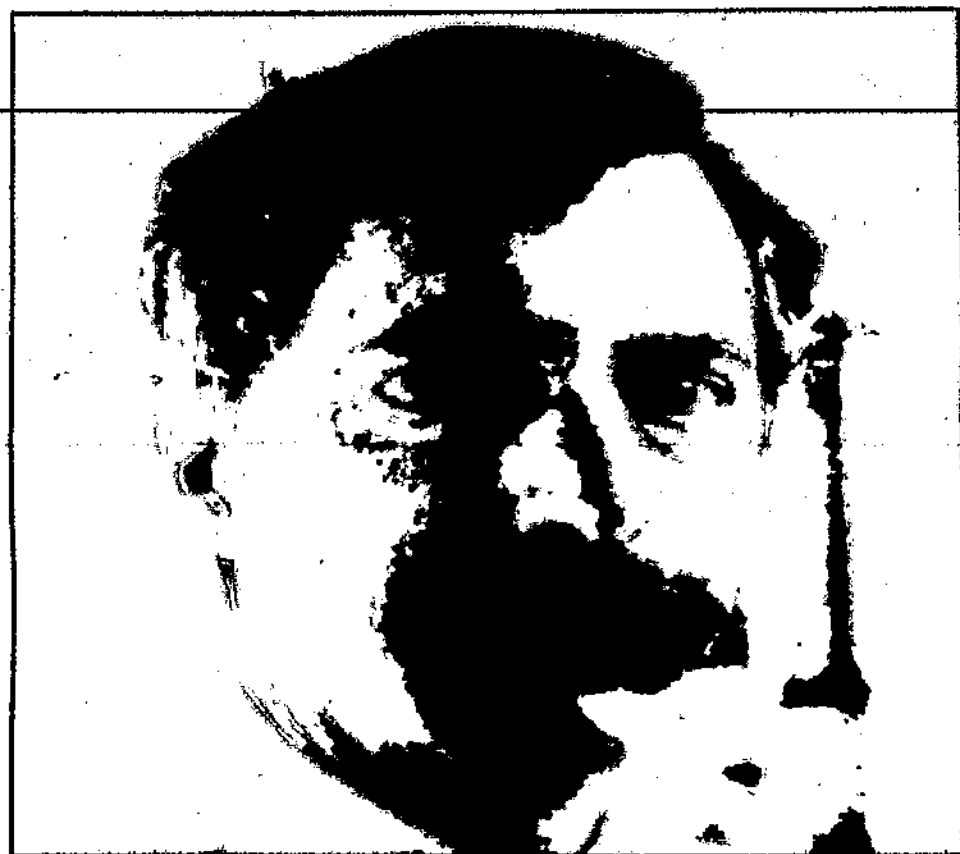

One Realtor who has witnessed the growth of Ruidoso said not only has the town grown physically, but mentally.

"The town has become modernized. We don't have to drive out of town quite as much as we used to," said Harvey Foster of Foster and Foster Real Estate.

Foster pointed out the community has tackled immense projects such as improving and insuring an adequate water supply, a new airport and an improved horse racing track.

Others agree with Foster's optimistic outlook. John V. Hall, president of SDC Coldwell Banker, summed it up.

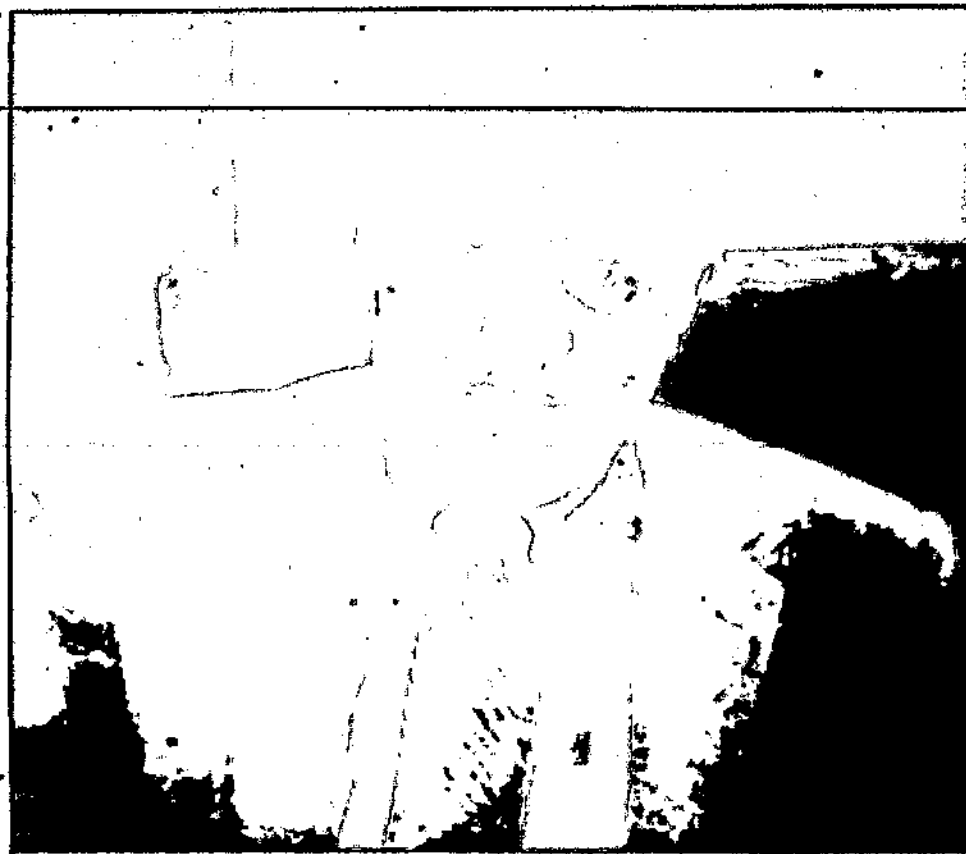

"The prudent buyer is going to make money on Ruidoso real estate," he said.

Business leaders believe in Ruidoso

As the streets of Ruidoso stretch with new places and faces, new-felt growing pains are healthy byproducts of rapid progress, many local business people agreed.

Eleven years ago, Rod Adamson, 33, moved to Ruidoso after graduating from Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas, and began a banking career with Pioneer Savings & Trust. Today Adamson is president of his own company, Adamson Appraisal Co.

"We experienced some inflationary times at the turn of the 80s. Now we are going through a normal cycle," Adamson said when asked how he viewed the present economy in Ruidoso.

"I'm very optimistic. I think we will move towards a stabilized economy," Adamson said during an interview from his Northcreek office. Northcreek is a condominium office complex developed by Adamson and his partner, Bob Dolgener.

It is a positive move to work toward a more diversified economy in Ruidoso, Adamson said.

"I see our new airport as progress. It's something that will motivate people to come to town, to enjoy our scenery... to shop. But we have all been tied up in such a busy manner... we didn't have time to look into soft industry," Adamson said.

"Soft industry," Adamson said, is industry that requires a skilled labor force without polluting the surrounding areas. Adamson said a private college is a soft industry that would enhance the economy in Ruidoso.

Businesswoman Mary Underwood, vice president of Century 21 Aspen Real Estate, Inc., agreed with Adamson that Ruidoso is experiencing a positive transition.

"One of the exciting things Ruidoso is doing is developing a new master plan for the village. We want to direct positive growth," said Underwood, who is a member of the village Planning and Zoning Commission.

The addition of large corporations supporting the rapid development of Ruidoso is encouraging, said Underwood.

"When a Safeway guy from the East Coast comes to Ruidoso to check on the stores here, he goes back and tells people about our community. We get messages to places we don't usually reach," she added.

John V. Hall, president of Colwell Banker SDC Realtors, said the village has shown strong leadership while handling complicated issues during the past five years.

"Look at what we've done in a short period of time. We've solved community problems. We are getting an airport, we improved the track and we are taking care of water problems. I think that shows stability," Hall said.

In the real estate business for 14 years, Hall said Ruidoso traditionally has a fluctuating real estate market, but it is one that has steadily grown.

"Basically, Ruidoso has always been a good investment. If I didn't believe in this community, I wouldn't be here," Hall said.

Ralph Petty Jr., 44, president of The Bank of Ruidoso, listed several symbols of progress that have occurred during the last five years.

"A positive change is the improvement in the race track. Now we can attract the better horses. Then comes the better purses and then the crowds," Petty said.

The Inn of The Mountain Gods also adds to the health of the future economy in Ruidoso, Petty said.

The luxury resort, three miles south of Ruidoso, is owned and operated by the Mescalero Apache Tribe. A second 18-hole championship golf course is on the drawing board, Petty said. The resort has also upgraded their ski area, Petty added.

"Ski Apache is one of the finest ski facilities... and the improved highway is also a positive addition to our economy," Petty said.

John W. Howden, 61, a Ruidoso building contractor, gives kudos to village leaders for strict enforcement of building codes.

"The city stopped unlicensed builders who were doing shabby work. The quality of the construction in Ruidoso has steadily improved," Howden said.

Although Ruidoso has experienced a slow period in construction during 1986, Howden said new homes are still being built and sold.

"Ruidoso is going to continue to grow. It's the closest place for people to come from Texas and Oklahoma and get into a pleasant climate with pleasant people," Howden said.

SERVICE IS OUR BUSINESS

Sprawling shopping centers are a sign of progress

A ride into town for supplies used to be simple. A stop at the hardware store. A look around the general mercantile. Finally, a sarsaparilla from the soda fountain.

Today, however, a recent survey by The News found over 250,000 square feet of additional retail and office space built in the Village of Ruidoso in the last five years.

On July 4, 1985, the Sierra Mall, 721 Mechem Drive, opened 23 stores for a total of 130,000 square feet of enclosed retail space.

Odell Spurlin, owner and general partner of Sierra Mall, Ltd., said he and general partner Wayne Dacy have plans for 15 more shops, opening both in December 1986 and spring 1987.

General merchandising, food service, grocery, and drug stores now occupy space in the complex, Spurlin said. Stanley J. French was the architect for the project, with contracting by Service Contractors, Spurlin said.

Ruidoso continues its progress as the first commercial elevator begins operating this summer.

Ruidoso Financial Center, a

48,000 square-foot office building, is scheduled for an August 1, 1986, grand opening, said limited partner John V. Hall.

Designed by Lew Knight, with architectural plans by Nims Calvani & Associates, the $2.9 million building has room for 25 tenants, said Greg Masters, also a limited partner.

Already the building is 65 percent to 70 percent leased, Masters said.

The center, located at 1096 Mechem Drive, is owned by "a group of 18 local owners and a group of investors from around the country," Masters said.

New condominium office projects gave business owners more options in Ruidoso.

Ground was broken during January 1985 for Jira Plaza, 700 Mechem Drive, offering condominium retail and office spaces, said owner Robert E. Alexander.

Presently 35 percent completed, Jira Plaza now has 10,000 square feet of completed construction, Alexander said. An additional 25,000 square feet of construction will complete the first phase of the project, Alexander said. Jira Plaza, however, can be further developed as there is a demand, he added.

Also offering new retail and office spaces is Rainbow Center, 1204 Mechem Drive.

Opened in 1983, Rainbow Center has 20 units, each with 800 square feet.

Owner and builder Donald Hubbard said Rainbow Center is completed, with both retail and commercial tenants.

In Midtown Ruidoso, Jean Rhoten opened the Gazebo, a shopping complex with 10 stores. Rhoten said the Gazebo celebrated its second anniversary last May.

Located at 2103 Sudderth, the center was converted to retail stores from the former El Rancho Motel by builder John Howden, Rhoten said. A variety of stores, including art galleries, jewelry, clothing and food businesses occupy the total 6,000 square-foot complex.

Serenity Plaza, 2306 Sudderth, like the Gazebo, was formerly a motel before its conversion to retail stores in June 1983, said owner Anita Smith. Serenity Plaza now supports nine retail shops, Smith said.

The Paddock, 1009 Mechem Drive, also opened in 1983. The Paddock added 7,745 square feet in 10 units of retail space in Ruidoso, built and owned by contractor J.J. DiPaolo.

Northcreek Professional Park, 1221 Mechem, now has completed six individual condominium offices, said owner Rod Adamson.

The 7,000 square-foot complex was built and designed by Adamson and Eagle Creek construction to enhance the natural pine forested surroundings. Adamson said the professional park can be expanded by several acres for long-range planning. The Attic and Friends, 1031 Mechem, opened 6,000 square feet of new retail space in 1983, said Susan Ruch, who with her husband, Michael, are the owners.

With five retail stores that range from women's apparel to health food, the Attic and Friends was designed by the Ruchs' and built by Ed Pipken.

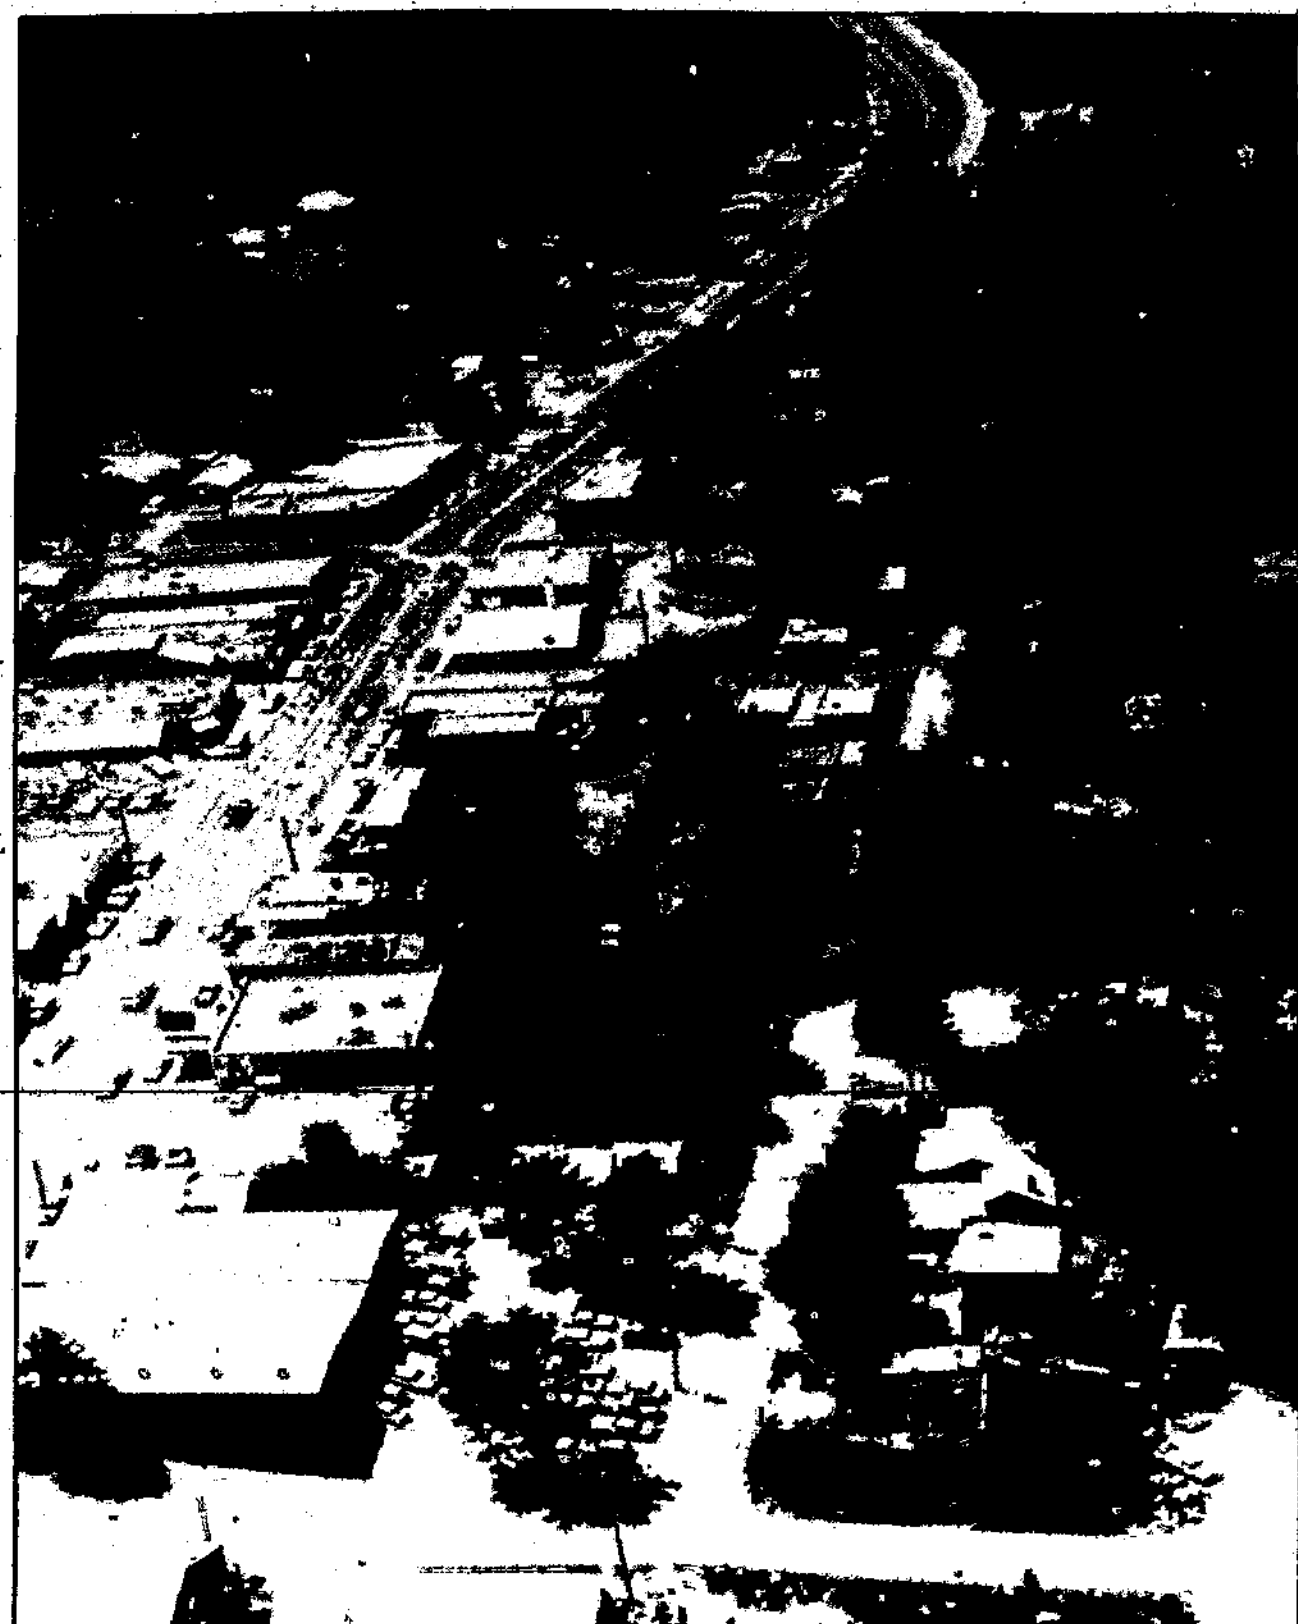

Shopping at the new Plaza D'Oros, 301 Highway 70, "compares to Neiman-Marcus," said owner Hazel Haynesworth.

The plaza, completed June 1986, has eight individual shops under one roof, with 9,000 square feet.

In addition to clothing, Plaza D'Oros has specialty food and wine stores and a tearoom serving lunches.

Jira Plaza, at 700 Mechem Drive, was developed by builder Robert Alexander. The shopping center employs a unique concept—all units are individually owned. The center is 35 percent complete, and is planned to eventually cover 35,000 square feet.

An aerial view of Ruidoso shows the growth that has occurred in the past several years. One especially significant aspect of the village's growth has been the construction of several shopping centers, some of which were converted from old motels.

Power Company has served 40 years

Starting with one diesel-fueled generator in 1945, an ambitious Texas-based power company came to Ruidoso and supplied electricity for about 800 customers.

Texas-New Mexico Power Company (TNP) today serves 9,000 customers throughout the Ruidoso area, said district manager Carroll N. "Buddy" Bundick.

During its 40 plus years of service, the company made advancements in equipment, changed its name and moved to larger buildings to keep pace with customer demands, Bundick said.

After outgrowing the efficiency of a diesel-powered generator by 1950, TNP drew power from the Elephant Butte Dam, Bundick said.

Presently Ruidoso's power supply comes from the Western electrical grid, Bundick said. However, Ruidoso has access to Eastern grid power supplies, too, he added. Grids are divided nationally into Eastern and Western divisions, using a combination of power lines. Utility companies can distribute power where needed, and thus discourage large-scale blackouts, he added.

TNP's holding company, employing 1,100 and located in Fort Worth, Texas, changed its name from Community Public Services in 1982, because people have better name recognition with TNP, Bundick said.

"I think our new name spells it out. We are located in Texas and New Mexico and we supply power," Bundick said.

In 1985, TNP offices moved from Sudderth Drive to a larger location at 1100 Mechem Drive. The Ruidoso office now employs 34.

One long-time TNP employee, John J. Sigler, who retired in 1982, said when he began working for TNP in 1948, he pulled $175 a month in wages. His wife, Dixie, said the family rented a company house at $15 a month.

"The salaries came up of course," Dixie added.

Sigler, who was a lineman until he became an office manager in 1974, said the power company grew with Ruidoso.

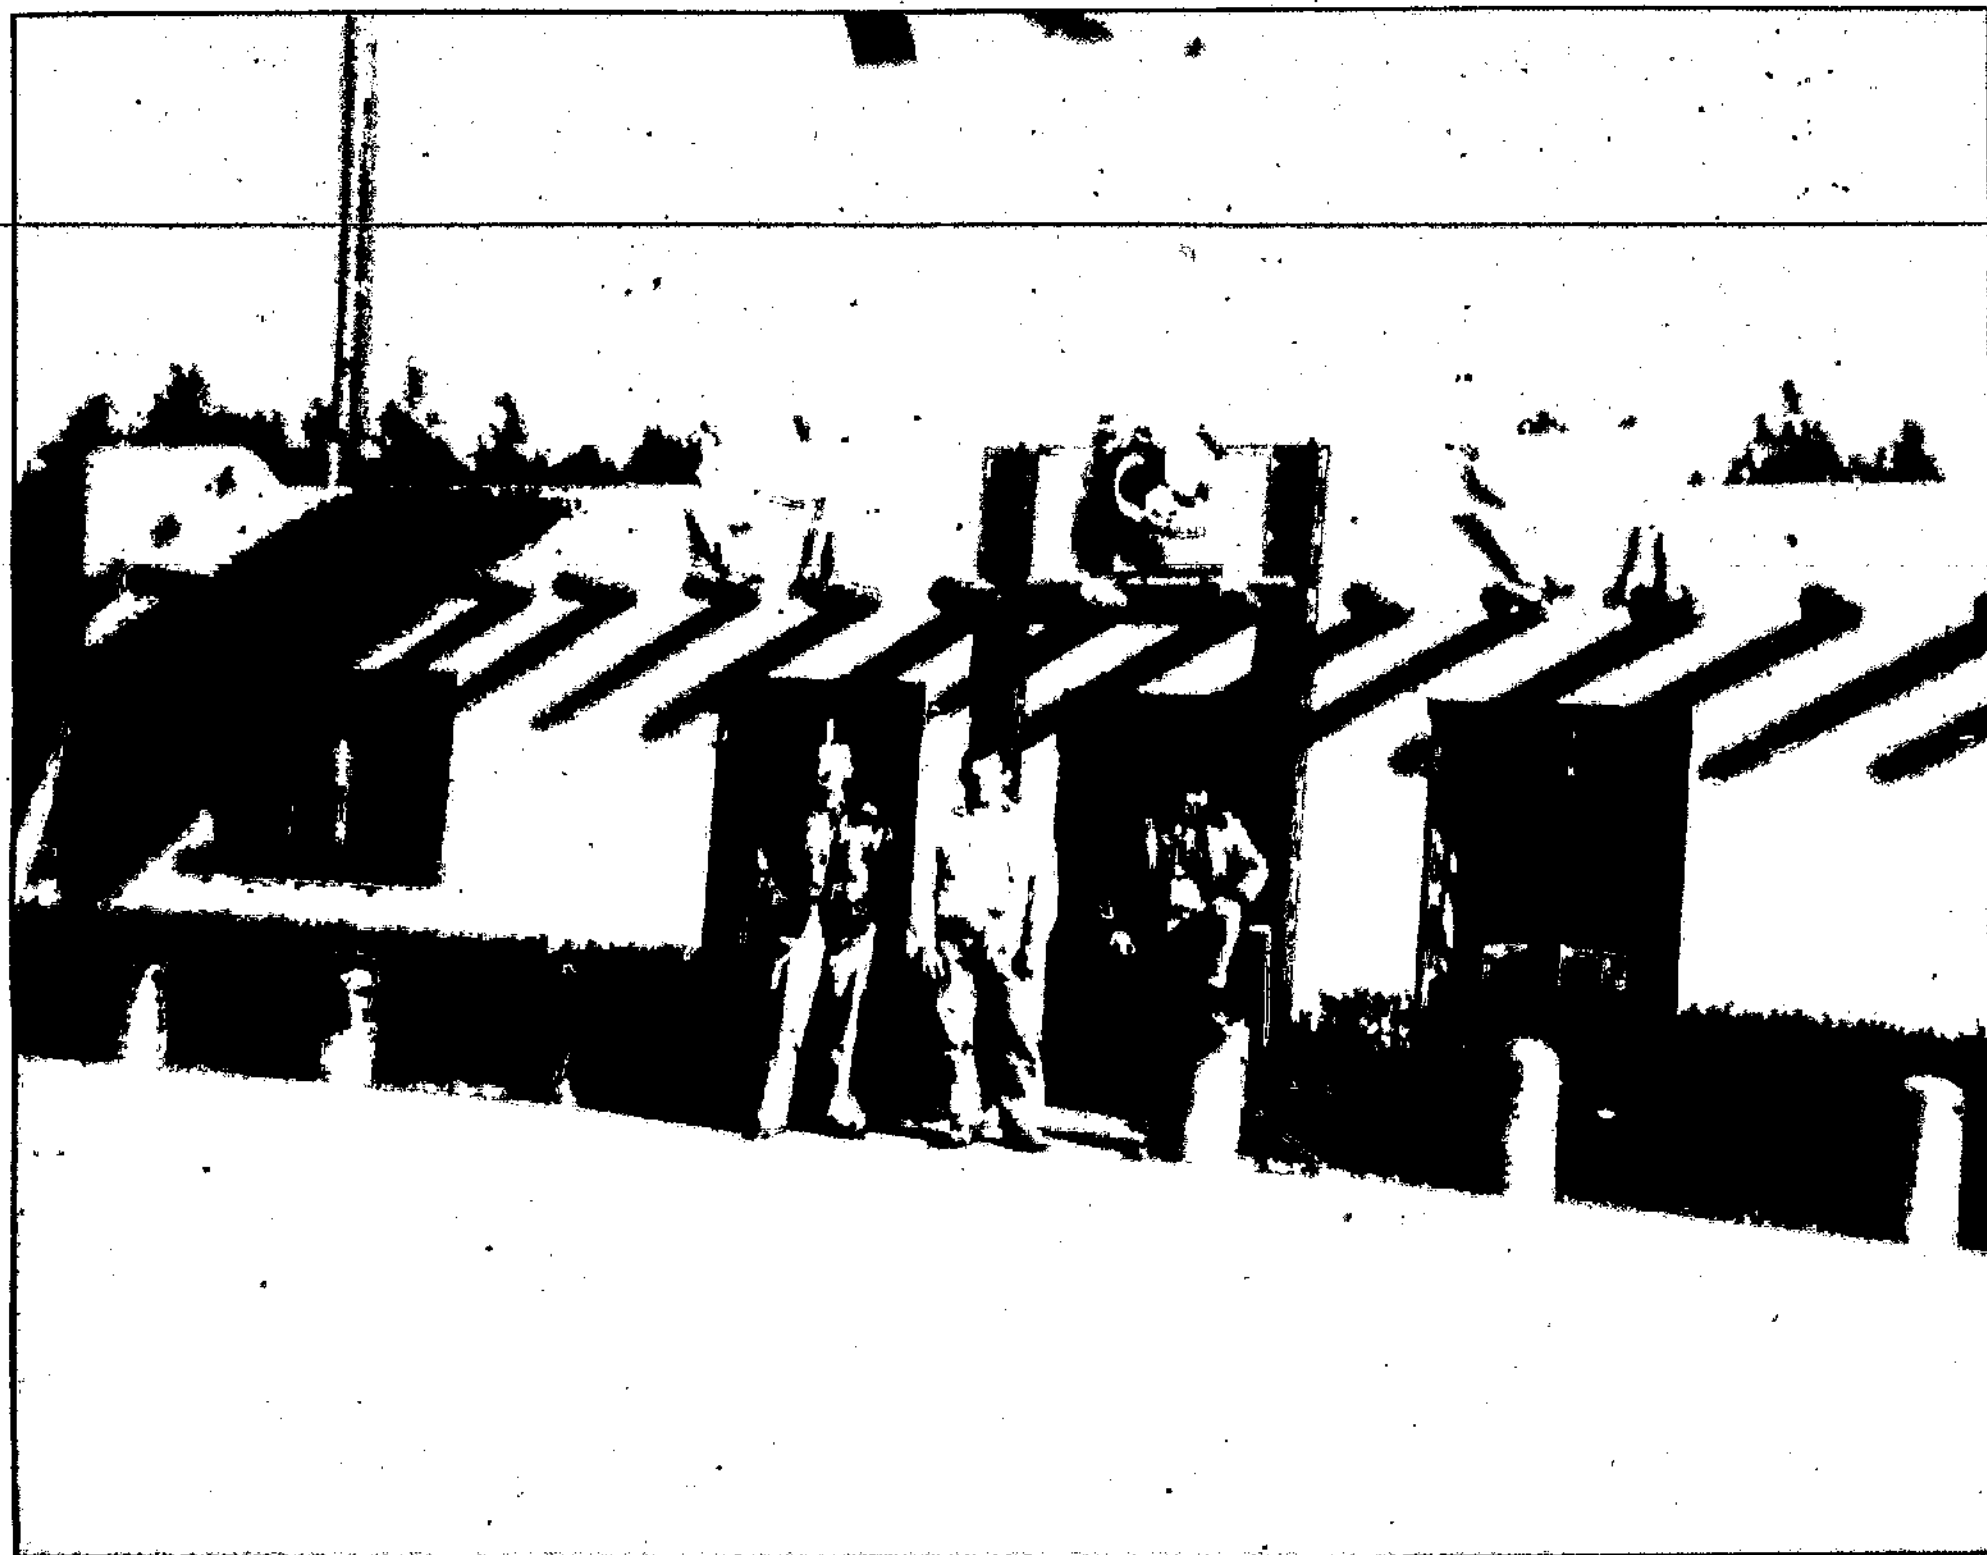

"We'd get some kind of new equipment and I'd just appreciate it," said Sigler, who, when he began with the company, dug trenches by hand and strung power lines on live pine trees.

"Of course they still do a lot of climbing, but now they have bucket trucks," he added.

Texas New Mexico Power Company moved to this new building on Mechem Drive in 1985. The company has grown from servicing a few hundred customers to today's 9,000 utility users.

In 1950, Texas New Mexico Power Company (then Community Public Service Company) served 952 customers from this office at 2808 Sudderth Drive. The company has grown nearly tenfold, now serving 9,000 customers. Melvin Knox, John Sigler and Lloyd Coe are pictured.

John Sigler reminisces on his days at Texas New Mexico Power Company.

"What's past is prologue"

SO SPAKE WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

Where we have been and where we are today is largely a matter of internal pride. In the real world, it's only history.

But the years served us well. Since our beginnings 25 years ago with the acquisition of a rural telephone exchange serving an Illinois community of 2,100 customers, Contel has grown to become the nation's third largest non-Bell operating telephone company. It was a start.

Our place in the telephone environment has led to diversification within the telecommunications industry and the evolution of a broad-based corporation providing information services to growing businesses, major conglomerates and domestic and offshore governments. Contel is comfortably positioned among the 'Forbes 500,' financially stable with $4.2 billion in assets and remains the youngest company ever admitted to the NYSE.

What's past is prologue. Yesterday, "the telephone company" to two million customers in 31 states. Today, "the information services corporation" with presence on three continents.

It isn't so much where we have been. It's where we are going. Confidently.

New grocery store

Construction of a new Safeway store on Highway 70 is on schedule, according to developers. The 30,000 square foot store is scheduled for opening October 16. That construction follows a flurry of activity by area grocers. Bennett's Shur-Sav recently was remodeled and representatives of Furr's have said they plan a new supermarket on Mechem Drive.

"ONE OF THE FINEST DINING EXPERIENCES IN THE SOUTHWEST" IS LESS THAN AN HOUR AWAY... BUT A WORLD APART!

While we're thrilled with recent reviews by national and regional media such as Sunset, Westways and Great Inns of America, YOU are our most important critic.

So it is with you that we want to share the special warmth of this cozy and charming mountaintop home...the fabulous Continental cuisine, fine wines and "to die for" deserts at Rebecca's (imagine a restaurant named for a ghost)...the breath-taking sunset views...the great fun we have with our guests...the generous smiles and infectious laughter of our wonderful employees.

Won't you visit us this summer and see for yourself why The Lodge is such a special "discovery" to so many thousands of people throughout the Southwest?

Warmly
