Skiers turn to biking on trails

by FRANKIE JARRELL

Ruidoso News Editor
Today's story, introducing the extensive biking and jogging trail system in Summit County, Colorado, is the first in a series.)

When the snow melts in Colorado, lots of people exchange their ski racks for bicycle racks and take to the hills.

Biking the hills of Colorado is big business, at least it is in Summit County.

A visit to Breckenridge, Copper Mountain, Keystone, Frisco, Dillon and Silverthorne, the towns that comprise Summit County, is a journey into an outdoor world of biking, jogging, walking and roller blading on about 60 miles of paved, marked trails.

And all that outdoor activity means more to the county than the fun it provides for locals and visitors. It's money in the bank through sales tax, lodgers tax and added business for restaurants, shops and other businesses.

Ski shops extend their seasons by changing from ski rentals, sales and repairs to bicycle sales, rentals, repairs, accessories and supplies. In some cases, this huge interest in biking is keeping people employed for nearly the entire year who used to work only seasonally.

The roads and highways around Summit County are traveled by cars, vans and pickups with bike racks on the front and on the back. One van seen leaving on a recent Sunday was loaded with kids and packed with more than a dozen bicycles on the top, front and back.

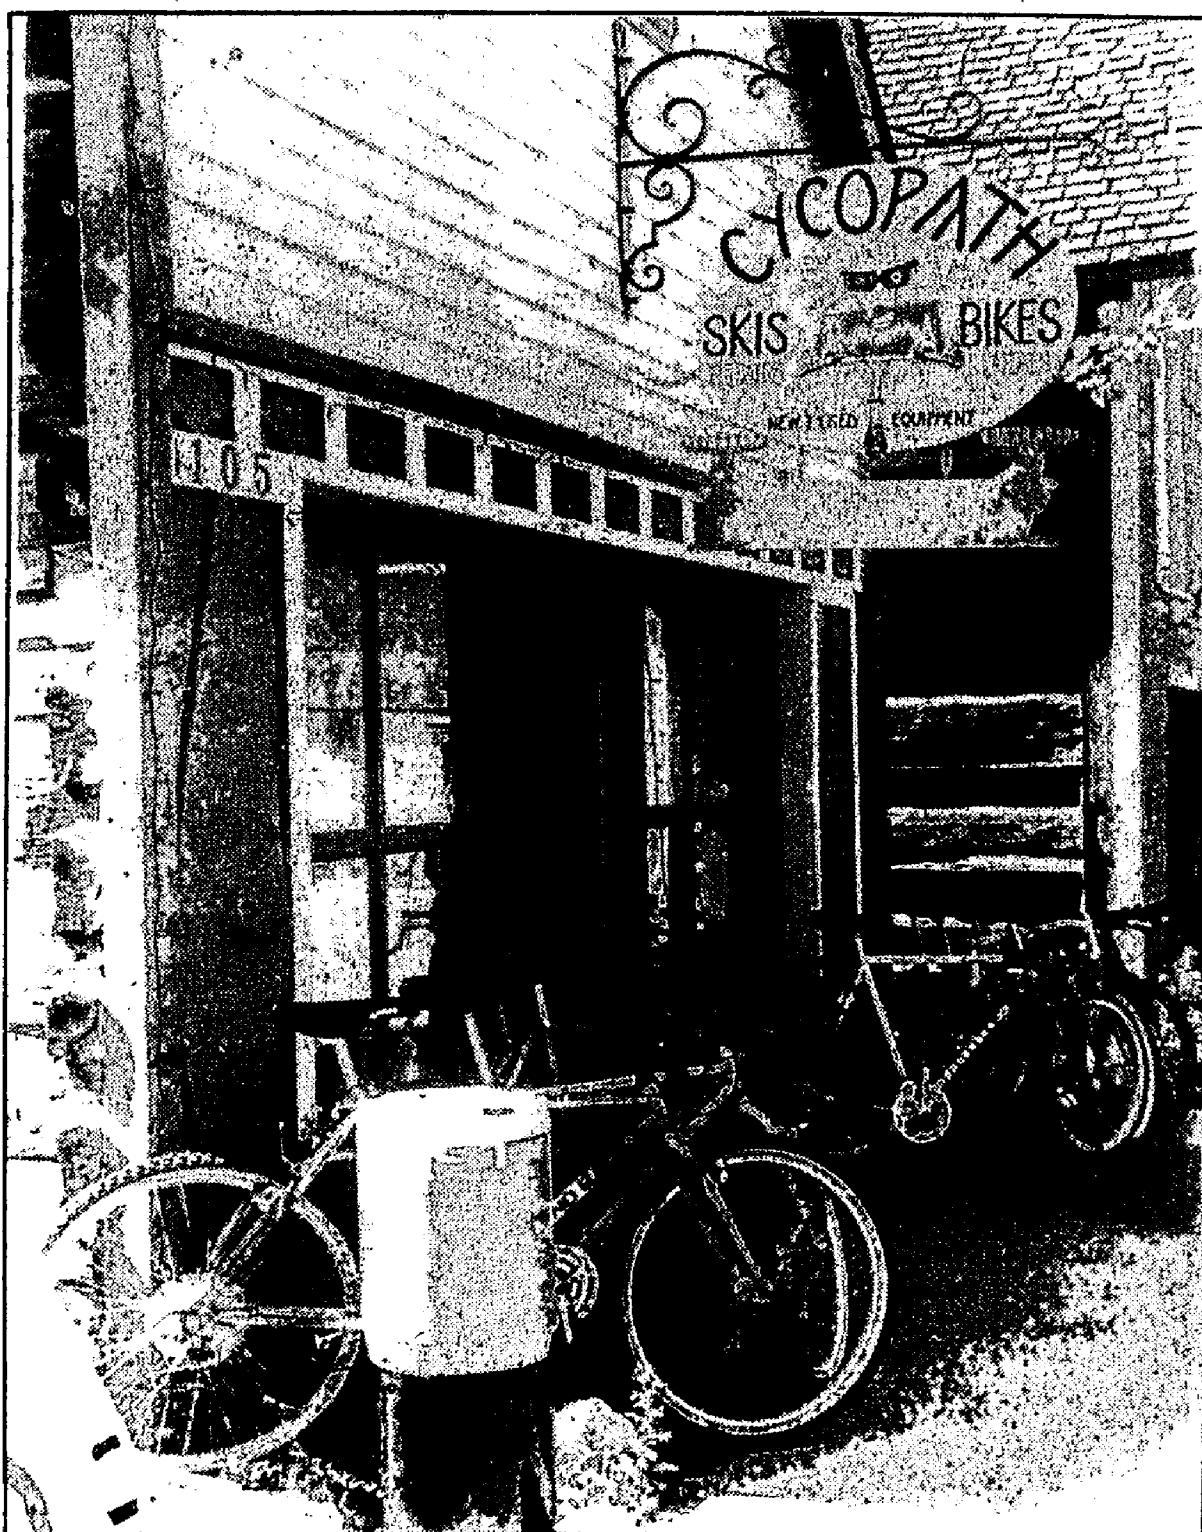

The News has checked out those trails, researching how Summit County planned and implemented the ongoing project, as well as what the trails are doing for the area economy.

It was learned that in 1987, more than 70,000 people used the trails, with estimates of double that amount of use for this season.

Talks with planners and users, as well as the business people who are affected by the increased numbers of visitors, revealed that the economy is greatly enhanced by the trail systems.

Summit County business operators are unanimous in their belief that the publicly funded trail system is a major economic factor in the area.

Details of the trail systems will be explained in upcoming issues.

Ski shops in Summit County, Colorado, extend their seasons by operating in the warmer months as bicycle shops.

Sheriff nabs suspect in rash of auto burglaries

The Lincoln County Sheriff's Department arrested a man believed to be responsible for a series of car burglaries in the Bonito Lake area, according to Sheriff James McSwane.

Kevin Lee Tenny, 26, of Ruidoso, was arrested Sunday on charges of auto burglary and criminal damage to property, said McSwane.

After receiving a report of an auto burglary, deputies had Tenny under surveillance for several hours before they made the arrest.

A search of Tenny's residence later turned up items reported stolen in other auto burglaries in the Bonito Lake area, said McSwane.

About 28 car burglaries were reported in that area, said McSwane.

No other charges have been filed against Tenny in the other auto burglaries. The suspect is being held on $50,000 bond with no ten percent.

A vehicle stolen on August 17 in the Alto area was recovered Tuesday in the Pine Lodge area northeast of Capitan. The incident is still under investigation.

Jerry Green, of Alto, requested assistance from the Sheriff's Department after he shot a bear that tried to get into his home. The bear was injured and disappeared. McSwane said the incident was turned over to the Game & Fish Department.

A breakin was reported Friday at the school in Carrizozo. The case is under investigation by the sheriff and Carrizozo Police. Three tape recorders were taken and later recovered, said McSwane.

A three-wheeler motorcycle stolen in 1987 was recovered in Roswell. The motorcycle was stolen from a Mr. Eamello in the Circle B Camp Ground area, said McSwane.

Council votes to annex airport, park properties

by FRANKIE JARRELL

Ruidoso News Editor

The Ruidoso Village Council set the stage Tuesday to annex the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport and Wingfield Park.

During a regular meeting, councillors authorized the Planning and Zoning Commission to begin the process to bring those two areas of municipal property into the village limits.

Planning administrator Cleatus Richards said state law has provisions for a municipality to annex property not contiguous to village limits.

The Sierra Blanca Regional Airport is located on Fort Stanton mesa, with private, state and federal lands separating it from Ruidoso. Wingfield Park, also known as the Hall property, is the section of land and house on Grindstone Road near the base of the Grindstone Canyon dam. The village acquired the Hall property in the settlement of a court case, and designated the area as a future village park.

Richards said the village will gain taxing and zoning authority over the properties to be annexed. He said the village will have the authority to manage future development, particularly in the area around the regional airfield, through a one-mile extra-territorial zoning authority.

Councillor Al Junge noted that when commercial property is developed at the airport, the tax will then benefit the village.

Also Tuesday, councillors awarded the bid for joint sealant installation on the Grindstone Canyon dam to Sealco, the sole bidder, for $46,459.

Attorney John Underwood said he and village engineer John Shaw met with Sealco representatives to negotiate the final contract. He said all bonds and insurance are now in place, and the company will begin the 30- to 45-day job within seven days.

Underwood reminded councillors that all repair work on the dam is being made by the village with the reservation of rights as far as the engineers and contractors are concerned. He said this is the last project before the village can begin to resolve things with the engineers and contractors.

"All this has been approved by the State Engineer," said Underwood.

Junge noted that the rain might extend the time needed for the joint sealant project.

Mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr. said the village couldn't be filling the dam right now, anyway. He said with the river up, the village may be able to begin diverting water after the repairs are completed.

In other regular business Tuesday, the council:

—Heard a detailed report from Convention and Visitors Bureau director Tracey Moran, and complimented her on her work in promoting Ruidoso.

—Approved a 60-day temporary contract for professional services with village attorney Underwood whose contract expired June 30. Although the council approved a new contract with Underwood, it was cancelled because of technical problems. Requests for proposal are being sought for the second time.

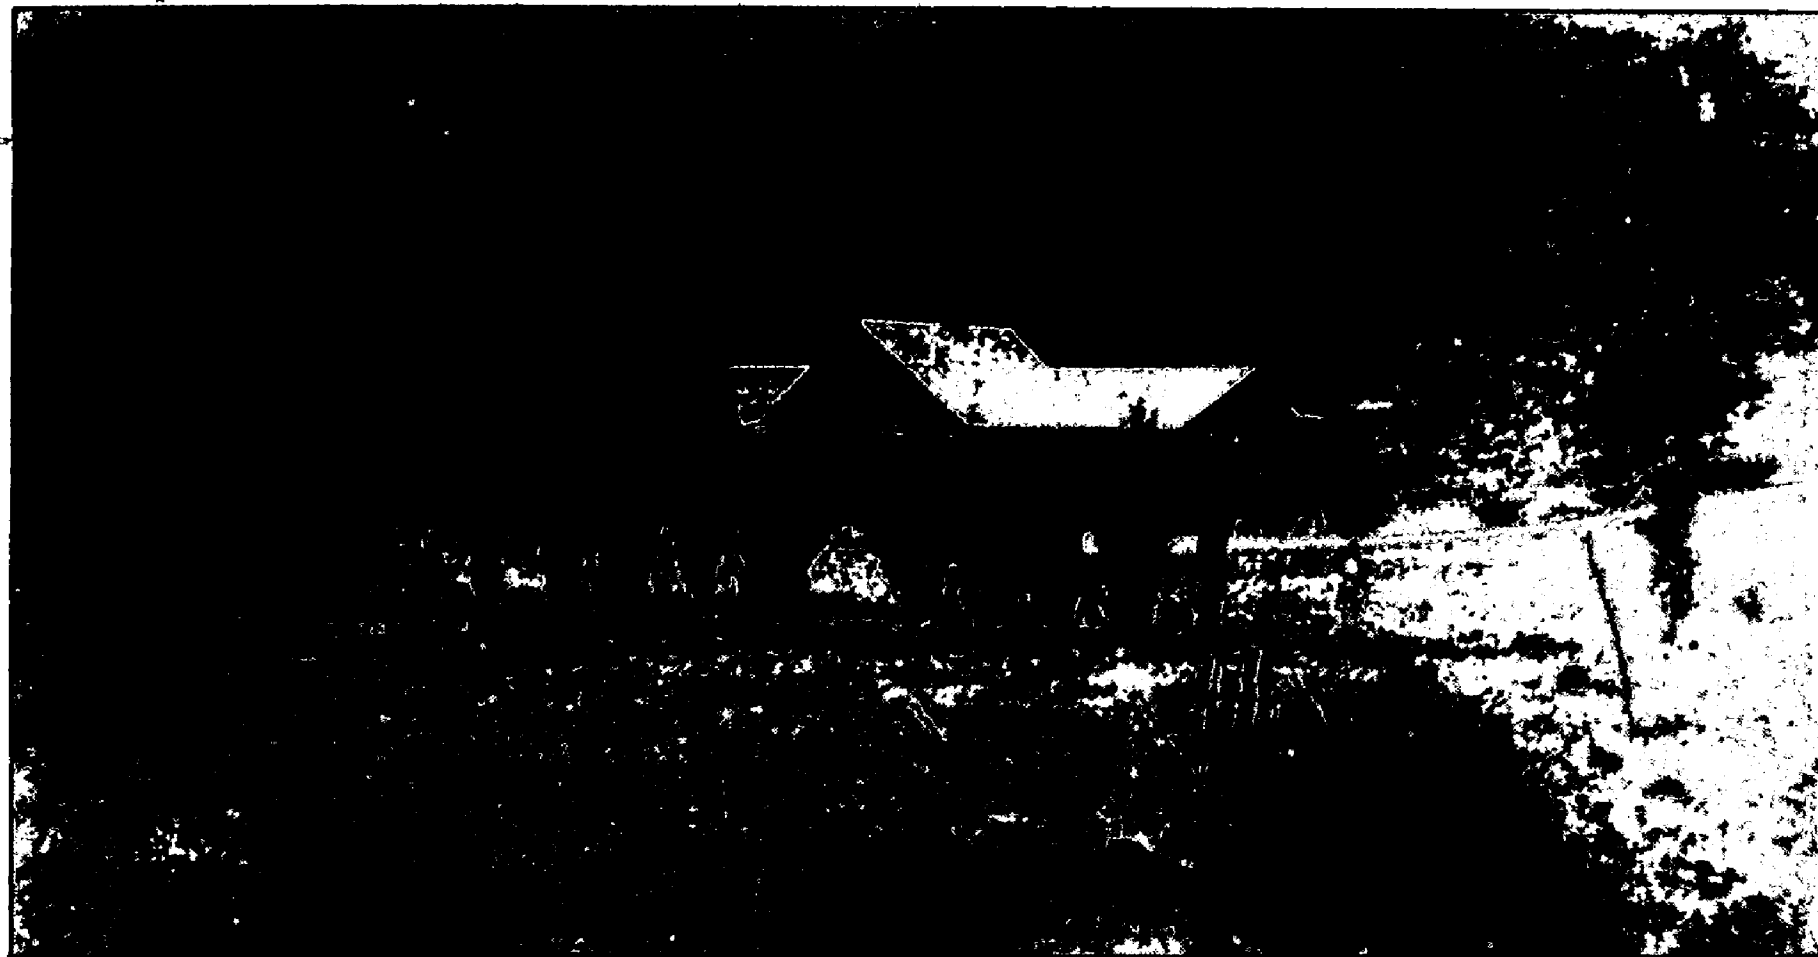

—Approved unanimously the appointment of Councillor Tom McNeil to the Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development board; and the appointment of Councillor Larry Simon as an ex officio member of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce board of directors.

—Agreed with Councillor Jess Stinson's praise for the Ruidoso Police Department and its walking patrol through Midtown.

"They're doing more PR than has ever been done in this town," said Stinson.

Davis said he also hears praise from visitors needing emergency services in the village. He commended the Emergency Medical Services, police and fire departments.

Councillor McNeil was absent from Tuesday's meeting.

Wingfield Park, the former Hall property. Wingfield Park is on Grindstone Canyon could be annexed by the village soon. Drive near the base of Grindstone Dam.

County passes 1 3/4 mill

by RICHARD A. HARROLD

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County (EDCLC) will continue to receive mill levy monies from the county, but with some strings attached.

The Lincoln County Board of Commissioners (LCBC) took action during a regular meeting Monday to approve a 3/16 mill levy for the EDCLC, which amounts to approximately $52,500 in total yield.

Commissioner Rick Simpson requested the mill levy be granted only if EDCLC agrees to come to meetings of the LCBC on a quarterly basis and provide a complete financial statement of the group's activities, and that this be the last year the county funds the organization.

Simpson later dropped his request that it be stipulated this be the last year of county funding.

The EDCLC previously received one half mill, which yielded approximately $125,000.

Simpson said he did not believe when the original mill levy was passed for EDCLC the former commission intended to fund the group longer than one year.

Scott Shafer, vice president of the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the ED-

CLC, disagreed.

"I believe we have that documented," replied Simpson.

Former commissioner Ralph Dunlap, a member of the commission that funded EDCLC at the half mill level, recalled recently that the commission intended the funding to be seed money for just one year. In a conversation with a member of The News staff, Dunlap recalled that EDCLC board members assured the Lincoln County Commission on which he served that they would obtain grants and private funding after the first year.

Members of EDCLC had contended in the past that public support existed for their organization, which was designed to attract businesses to Lincoln County.

Commissioner Karen Z. Petty said she has received phone calls both supporting and complaining about EDCLC.

The biggest complaint was that the EDCLC is a private corporation operating with public funds, said Petty.

"That is a bone of contention," she said.

Petty also commented on the group's irregularity of financial disclosure.

At meetings of EDCLC she attended, Petty said there were times when sections of the group's financial statements were missing, and when they were provided later, she noted some figures were changed.

Shafer said he did not realize Petty was concerned where the money went.

Petty noted public bodies must

"We are doing this as a representative of the county," said Sims.

Commission Chairman Robert E. Hemphill said the commission was not questioning the group's purpose.

"The question is should there be a single funding source?" said Hemphill.

As long as the EDCLC operates as a private corporation, without full disclosure of monies spent, then the group needs to find private funds, said Petty.

Shafer noted the EDCLC had a good start with the first mill levy, but continued effort and funding is necessary until other, private sources can be secured. "We need to get an Exxon or somebody," said Shafer.

Petty said she would like to see the EDCLC held accountable.

She said during an EDCLC board meeting she attended, she was told Dona Ana gave their economic development board $90,000.

Please see County, page 2A

County

However, Simpson was informed at a meeting of the Association of Counties the actual amount was one third less.

Petty also said the economic development board in Taos brought in 34 jobs in four months without any public monies.

"When we're only getting three or four jobs for $130,000, we need to take a look," said Petty.

"I think you're cutting off your future," said Sims.

When the commissioners took action, they approved a total one and three quarter mill levy to cover the EDCLC, for the acquisition of road equipment, and for the creation and operation of a sanitary waste facility.

Three quarters of a mill is set aside for solid waste needs, which will yield approximately $210,000.

"It's a good start, but just a start," said Hemphill.

The county road department will receive 13/16 of a mill, which will yield approximately $227,500.

The commissioners acknowledged this amount will not meet all the present needs of the department.

Petty said she would have liked to ask for more monies, but felt this was the limit Lincoln County would accept.

The commissioners accepted the recommendation by the technical sub-committee that the county investigate establishing solid waste transfer stations for the shipping of solid waste out of the county.

Petty asked that a letter of intent be filed with the State Environmental Improvement Division (EID) office in Santa Fe, stating that Lincoln County does intend to operate its own landfill at some point in the future.

Instructions were also given to Nick Pappas, county manager, to begin negotiating with solid waste disposal firms.

Ruidoso Downs Mayor Jake Harris was present at the meeting and said the people in Lincoln County are entitled to an itemized pricing of how much it would cost for a replacement landfill.

"I would rather haul to a landfill site than a transfer station," said Harris, who contended that a landfill site would be cheaper than a series of transfer stations.

Ruidoso is not a good example of operating a landfill, said Harris.

"It can be done cheaper," he said. Ruidoso operated the landfill formerly at the Fort Stanton mesa.

Presently, Ruidoso hauls its garbage to Roswell.

Hemphill told Harris there is nothing to prevent him from opening his own landfill, except the cost.

"That's what I wanted to hear," said Harris.

The commission also took action to begin giving final notice to property owners in the Alto paying assessment district for delinquent taxes. If the landowners involved refuse to pay their delinquent taxes, the county has the legal option to begin foreclosure on those properties.

Pappas recommended that a class suit be filed, rather than individual suits, should the proceedings reach that stage. Instructions were given to Pappas to research how such a lawsuit would affect the contract with J. Robert Beauvais, the county attorney.

It was the preference of the commission that legal fees be included in the cost of the suit, which would be the attorney's fees.

In other business, the commissioners:

—Approved the minutes of the July 10 meeting and accepted the treasurer's report for June 1989.

—Approved a certificate of appreciation for Robert Finley for his service on the Lincoln County Lodger's Tax Committee.

—Approved amendments in a joint powers agreement with Chaves County and the Department of Finance and Administration.

—Approved the accounts payable and the payroll registers.

—Discussed changes in the structure of the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Extraterritorial Planning and Zoning Authority.

—Conducted a closed session on personnel.

—Heard a request from Tommy Hall, county road supervisor, for $91,000 worth of road improvement supplies.

In the county manager's report, Pappas said:

—Evelyn McKnight was hired in the bookkeeping department to replace Patsy Oaxaca, who resigned. Pappas said McKnight was hired from the pool of applicants which initially applied for the job when it was first advertised.

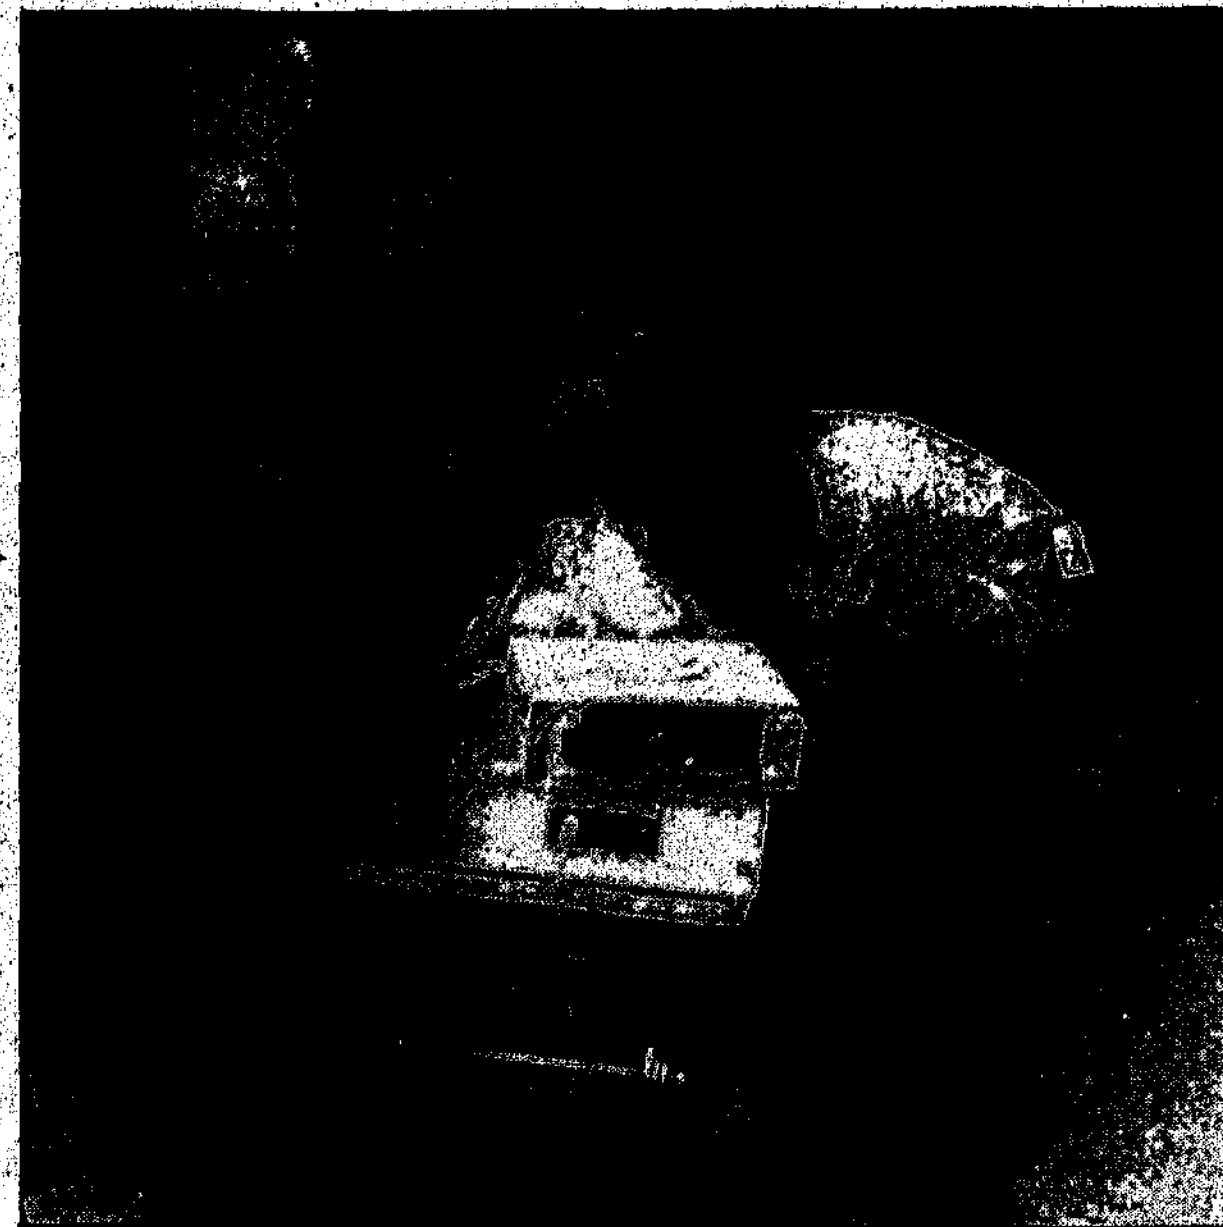

Because Oaxaca had not completed her probationary period, he believed there was no need to re-advertise the position because of the quality of the applicants remaining in the pool.

—The commissioners received lapel pins commemorating the new airport from the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

—A grant which could be useful in establishing a recycling program in the county was delayed because Housing and Urban Development was requesting more information on the economic status of Lincoln County.

The commissioners also requested the county manager use discretion with advertising expenses.

Petty brought to the board's attention the same size ad in The Ruidoso News that costs $5.95 will cost $19.15 in The Lincoln County News.

Ruidoso Police get on-the-spot training

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Police officers go through a lot of training—from the time they enter the police academy until they retire.

In the State of New Mexico, police officers are required to receive an complete 20 hours of training each year.

For larger police forces, the loss of an officer to attend training is not a problem. However, for the small police force, the loss of an officer for training can mean extra duty for other officers, travel expenses and overtime.

Now, modern technology and communications have combined to save time and money, while offering the latest and best available training.

It's called the Law Enforcement Television Network, or LETN for short.

LETN, which began operations July 3, is a 24-hour, five day a week, satellite network dedicated solely to the law enforcement community.

The network provides news, information, training and physical fitness programs to more than 500 police agencies throughout North America.

The telecasts originate from Westcott Communications in Carrollton, Texas, a suburb of Dallas. The communications company also offers programming to automobile dealers called the Automotive Satellite Television Network.

The Executive Vice President of the network is former Dallas Police Chief Billy Prince, who was also Ruidoso Police Chief William Newman's boss when he was a member of the Dallas force.

The Ruidoso Police Department began receiving the telecasts July 10, and Chief Newman says the network will provide a solution to one of the problems of his department.

"It's met our greatest need, it's eliminated the loss of an officer's time while away at school," Newman said.

Newman said there are two main reasons the network will be valuable to the Ruidoso Police Department. He said the first is the quality of training provided by nationally recognized experts that is available from LETN. The second is being able to provide training while an officer is on duty.

A typical programming day on LETN begins at 6:30 a.m. Eastern time with "Roll Call." "Roll Call" is designed for the officer who is getting ready for duty. It features 10 minute segments on topics ranging from survival tactics and national police events to safety and fitness issues. There is also a five minute newscast with news and information for law enforcement officers. The programs are repeated four times an hour for four hours, so officers from the east coast to the west coast can get the information.

"Roll Call" is presented again at 2:30 p.m. Eastern time and 10:30 p.m. Eastern time so each shift change can view the programs.

During the other 12 hours of the day, there are a series of 25-minute training sessions with different themes.

Among the themes of the 25-minute training sessions are "Command Update," "Street Beat," "Training for Survival," and "Alert, Alive and Well."

"Command Update" is aimed at administrators and trainers with topics which include new product information, personnel issues and patrol survival techniques.

"Street Beat" training prepares officers to deal safely with high-risk situations and to defuse dangerous situations.

"Training for Survival" offers practical, realistic training that focuses on skills and techniques required for effective patrol duties.

"Alert, Alive and Well" addresses physical, emotional and psychological health issues including topics such as physical fitness, nutrition and stress management.

Newman said the officers get about eight and one-half hours of new training material each month or about 100 hours a year.

He also said officers can get continuing education credits from the Southern Police Institute at the University of Louisville. The officers view the segment and then take a test over the material.

Newman said in the future LETN could offer real college credits from the University of Texas at Dallas and programs from the New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy which would give officers advanced training, allowing them to achieve higher levels of certification.

He said the programming from LETN provides the 20 hours of training required by the State of New Mexico.

"It meets and exceeds that provision without the officers having to travel," he said.

According to Newman, LETN is like subscribing to cable. The department pays $388 a month to receive the transmissions. LETN provides everything else. LETN provides the satellite dish, the descrambler, installation and maintenance. All the police department had to furnish was the monitors.

Chief Newman requested the funds for the network in the 1989-90 budget and says the $388 a month is not much when compared to the type of training the officers receive from the network.

"To provide the same kind of training would cost twice as much," he said.

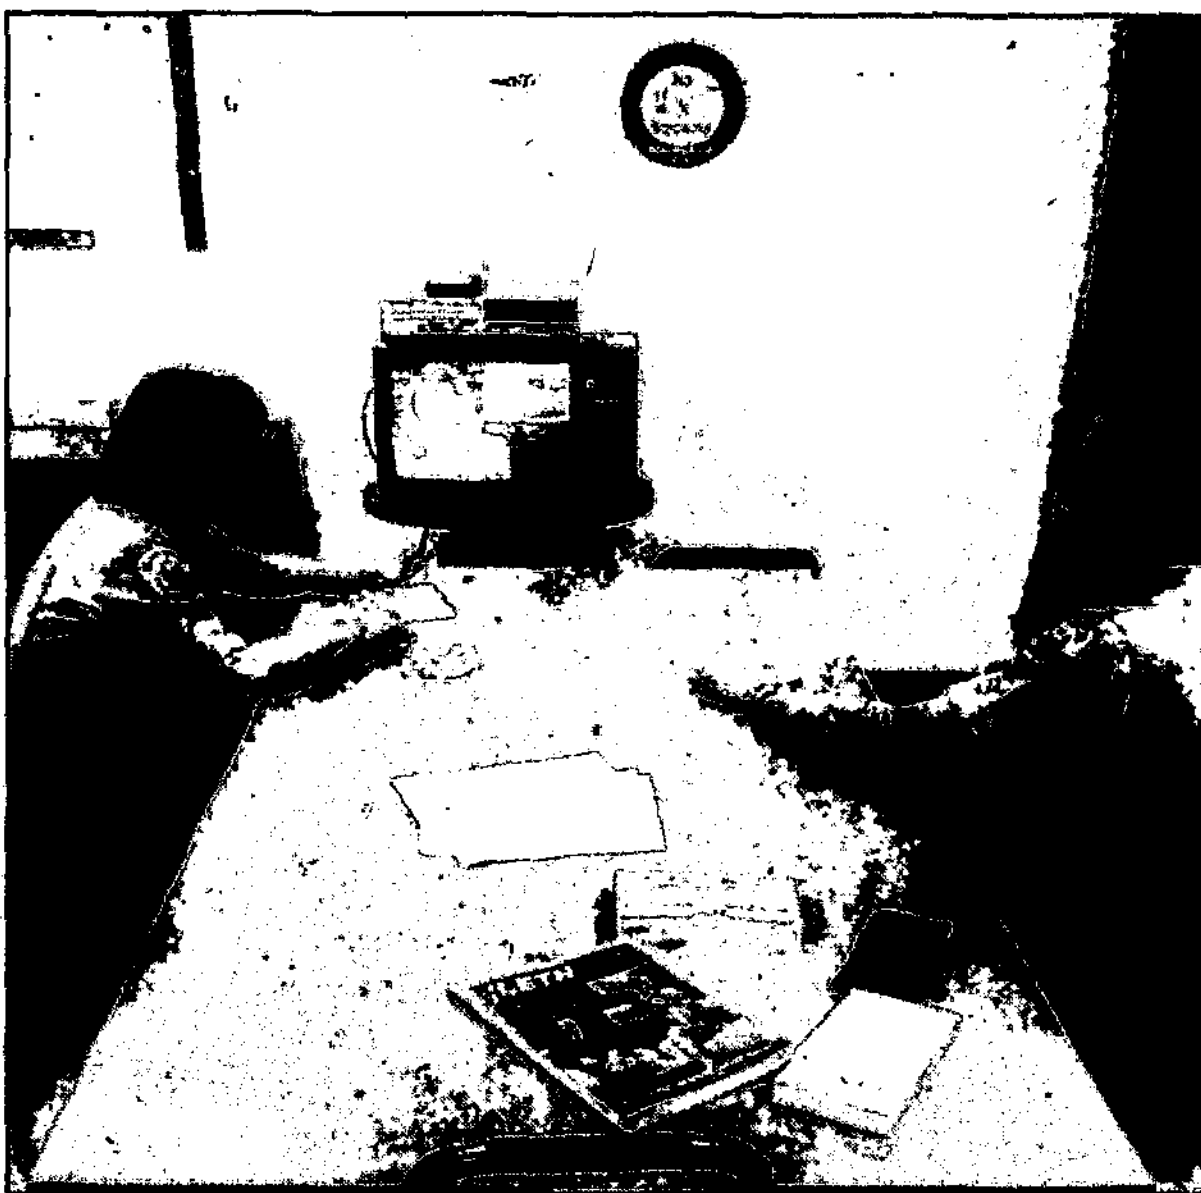

Ruidoso Police are required to view each of the training session programs, either live or on video tape. There are monitors in the briefing room, dispatch and the courtroom.

Newman said while the network can take the place of some training, it doesn't take the place of all training.

"It's not the answer to all training problems," he said. "There are still some things which require hands-on training."

Chief Newman said the reaction of Ruidoso police officers to the network has been "very favorable."

"They're please with the quality and the opportunity to receive training from recognized experts."

Ruidoso Police Chief William Newman and Officer Lou Wardwell review a program on the Law Enforcement Television Network for later viewing by the rest of the police force.

Ruidoso annexation plans are described

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A unanimous vote by the Village Council on Tuesday night cleared the way for the village Planning Department to begin the annexation procedures for the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport and Wingfield Park.

During a regular meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) on July 10, commissioners asked the council to direct them to begin the annexation and zoning procedures for the two municipal properties and recommend one-mile extraterritorial zoning authority.

According to planning administrator Cleatus Richards, annexing the airport will allow the village to control the growth and development at the airport and the surrounding land.

He also said it will improve the village tax base by having the airport within the corporate limits.

P&Z Chairman Robert Donaldson also said the annexation will allow the village to develop the industrial areas of the airport property.

Industrial sites are limited in Ruidoso, Donaldson said. "The reason for annexing the airport is to develop a commercial/industrial complex for light manufacturing."

The Village of Ruidoso is able to annex the airport property because New Mexico law allows a municipality to annex property it owns if a path can be traced from the corporate limits to the property through land owned by the federal government or the state.

Richards said the procedure for annexing the properties will probably take three to four months. He said the first thing to do is get a proper legal description of the two properties.

The next step will be to adopt air hazard regulations. Richards said these regulations will govern any construction in the approaches and transitions to the airport. He said the regulations will limit the height of any construction near the airport.

The county already has air hazard regulations in place for the airport. Richards said the village may adopt the county regulations or develop some of its own.

Finally, a determination has to be made of what the property at the airport should be zoned.

"Zoning comes along at the time of the whole package," Richards said.

Along with zoning the airport property, Richards said the village would like to discuss with the county the possibility of extending the extraterritorial zoning around the airport from one mile to three miles.

Richards said if the county wants to do the zoning, the village would like to work with commissioners on it. He said the village is concerned about development along the corridor going to the airport. He said the area needs to be zoned by either the city or the county to control development.

He said all the problems with the extraterritorial zoning don't have to be worked out before the village annexes the airport.

"Involvement" with extraterritorial zoning can follow later, Richards said.

Wingfield Park, formerly known as the Hall Property, is located just down from the Grindstone Canyon dam. Richards said this seven acres of property will not present that many problems since it is adjacent to village limits and extraterritorial zoning is already in place around the property.

He said the zoning of the airport property by the Planning and Zoning Commission has to go before a public hearing.

Donaldson said the process should be fairly simple since the village will be petitioning itself for annexation and determining zoning of village property.

Once the annexation and zoning is approved by P&Z, it goes before the council for another public hearing.

If approved there, the ordinance has to be filed with the county clerk. Following a thirty-day waiting period, the ordinance takes effect and the property becomes part of the Village of Ruidoso.

Clarification

In a business page story published Monday in The Ruidoso News on Ruidoso Natural Gas Company's development of a new headquarters site in Ruidoso Downs, a contributor was inadvertently omitted.

D.T. Collins & Associates PC, located in the Mystic Pines office complex on Mechem Drive, provided the engineering, including establishing the boundaries of the project, typography work and site layouts.

DMV to close next Monday

The local office of the State Department of Motor Vehicles will be closed Monday, August 1, while members of the staff attend a seminar in Roswell.

Director Linda Brewington said the office will re-open Tuesday at its regular hours: 8:30 a.m. until noon and 1-4:30 p.m.

The DMV is in the Ruidoso Financial Center on the airport level.

Spotted owls are worth cash

The roosting preference of the reclusive Mexican spotted owl has thrown the small creature into the spotlight as it competes with logging interests in New Mexico's national forests.

Timber plans in the Lincoln and Gila national forests are prompting forestry officials to study and attempt to count the uncommon bird.

"A conflict between logging and managing for spotted owls exists," said John Peterson, wildlife biologist for the Lincoln National Forest of south-central New Mexico.

Officials say the U.S. Forest Service has to balance timber harvests with maintaining a diversity of wildlife on the public land it manages.

"The Forest Service wants to find out what the owl needs and how we can manage timber operations and still accommodate their needs. That's our goal," Peterson said.

The Mexican spotted owl, which stands about 16 inches high and has a 42-inch wing span, is brown with white flecks. It has dark eyes and no ear tufts.

Peterson said the coloring and tuftless head help distinguish it from other owls in the forest.

"It's brownish in color with white, it's a spotted owl," he said. In the Lincoln, such owls are worth money.

Lincoln forest officials and White Sands Forest Products, a timber operation based in Alamogordo, have established a $10,000 award program to pay anyone who can lead them to an owl.

The program, now in its second summer, pays up to $600 for each sighting.

A family of spotted owls was discovered in a logging area in the Lincoln in the spring of 1987, halting the timber harvest until September 1988, and prompting the award program and a two-year study of the owls.

Peterson said there are 100 occupied sites of spotted owls known in Lincoln.

Unlike fellow birds of a feather, the Mexican spotted owls don't flock together. They're known to nest and roost alone or with a mate mostly in forests of Ponderosa pine and Douglas fir.

The Lincoln will pay for confirmed sightings of the owls anywhere on the Smokey Bear ranger district and portions of the Cloudcroft and Mayhill ranger districts below 7,200 feet.

Britons discover Ruidoso

by CAROLYN SHORT
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

With the help of a good time-share swap, a lot of curiosity and a glint of adventure, four Britons searched through an atlas of the United States and found New Mexico.

And somehow, they ended up with their finger pointing on the map to a tiny little resort town tucked away in the quiet cool recesses of the Sacramento Mountains.

A good 24 hours of air travel, three airplanes and a continent of distance later, they arrived on Ruidoso soil.

But why Ruidoso? Or for that matter, why New Mexico?

The word in England is that Ruidoso is a "boom resort," British tourist Mike Callaghan said.

Callaghan came to Ruidoso from England with his wife, Maureen, and her sister, Doris Treacher, and her husband, Ernie.

They said they weren't sure what to expect, but so far, they haven't been disappointed by Ruidoso or New Mexico.

Doris added that the major adjustment that they had to make was that of the long distances between civilizations.

"There are no traffic jams," Doris said.

"England is completely different," Mike said. "America is a big empty country."

Maureen admitted that they chose Ruidoso partly out of curiosity and partly out of a need to be unique in their travel plans.

"We wanted to go somewhere different," Maureen said. "Everybody goes to the East coast and the West coast."

Since their arrival here last Saturday, the Callaghans and the Treachers have visited White Sands National Monument ("Very unique," Ernie said), Las Cruces and historic Mesilla ("Mesilla has a sort of... character about it," Mike said), Bonito Lake and the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

They also plan to discover Carlsbad and Lincoln before they venture back to "merry ole" next week.

"We'll finally get to meet Billy the Kid," Mike said.

Maureen added that they are seeing New Mexico without the benefit of a tour guide and are "playing it by ear, as we say in England."

In addition to falling in love with the greenery and lush forests surrounding Ruidoso, the group agreed that they have enjoyed the people in the area as well.

"You don't get this type of friendliness in England," Mike said.

"English people are more reserved. People here are nice and relaxed," Maureen added. "What we hear the most is, 'Say, we love your accent.'"

Mike, Maureen, Ernie and Doris agreed that they would like to come back to America next summer, but their biggest complaint is the size of the United States.

"America is too big," Mike said.

But Ernie pointed out probably the biggest and most serious difference between the United States and England.

"We don't have drive-throughs in England."

The Plant Corner

by Sally Black

DEAR SALLY:

I have planted 20 blue Italian cypress trees this year. I was wondering if you could tell me what care I should give them. I went to the library, but could find very little, only that they will grow in the southwest. I will appreciate any information you will help me with and I really enjoy your column.

Thank you,
C. R. Ray,
Capitan.

DEAR MR. RAY:

This column is devoted to growing healthy, indoor plants. Space, quite simply, does not allow for indoor and outdoor plant care. However, I will bend a little just this once for you. Only because I know how frustrating it can be not to find proper growing instructions for a particular plant.

The blue Italian cypress (is really blue-green) is also known as Cypripedium sempervirens 'Glauc'. You might try looking at the library under that name.

These trees are classic Mediterranean cypresses. I have seen them growing on each side of the road all the way from Florence, Italy, to the shore. What a beautiful sight they are. You made a splendid choice. They grow in Italy eventually into dense, narrow columnar trees to 60 feet tall. Their natural growth pattern is lovely; however, they may need shearing and tying to keep within limited areas.

Soil-Prepare a large well around each tree to contain water and fertilizer. A good loose soil with fast drainage is absolutely essential. The soil should not become soggy and heavy.

Water-Keep the soil moist with daily waterings the first couple of years and from that time they will have a good, growing start and you can cut the water to only a couple times a week. Water 'deep' when you do water that the roots will reach way down deep. Never allow to become completely dry. They love damp, cool roots with air space.

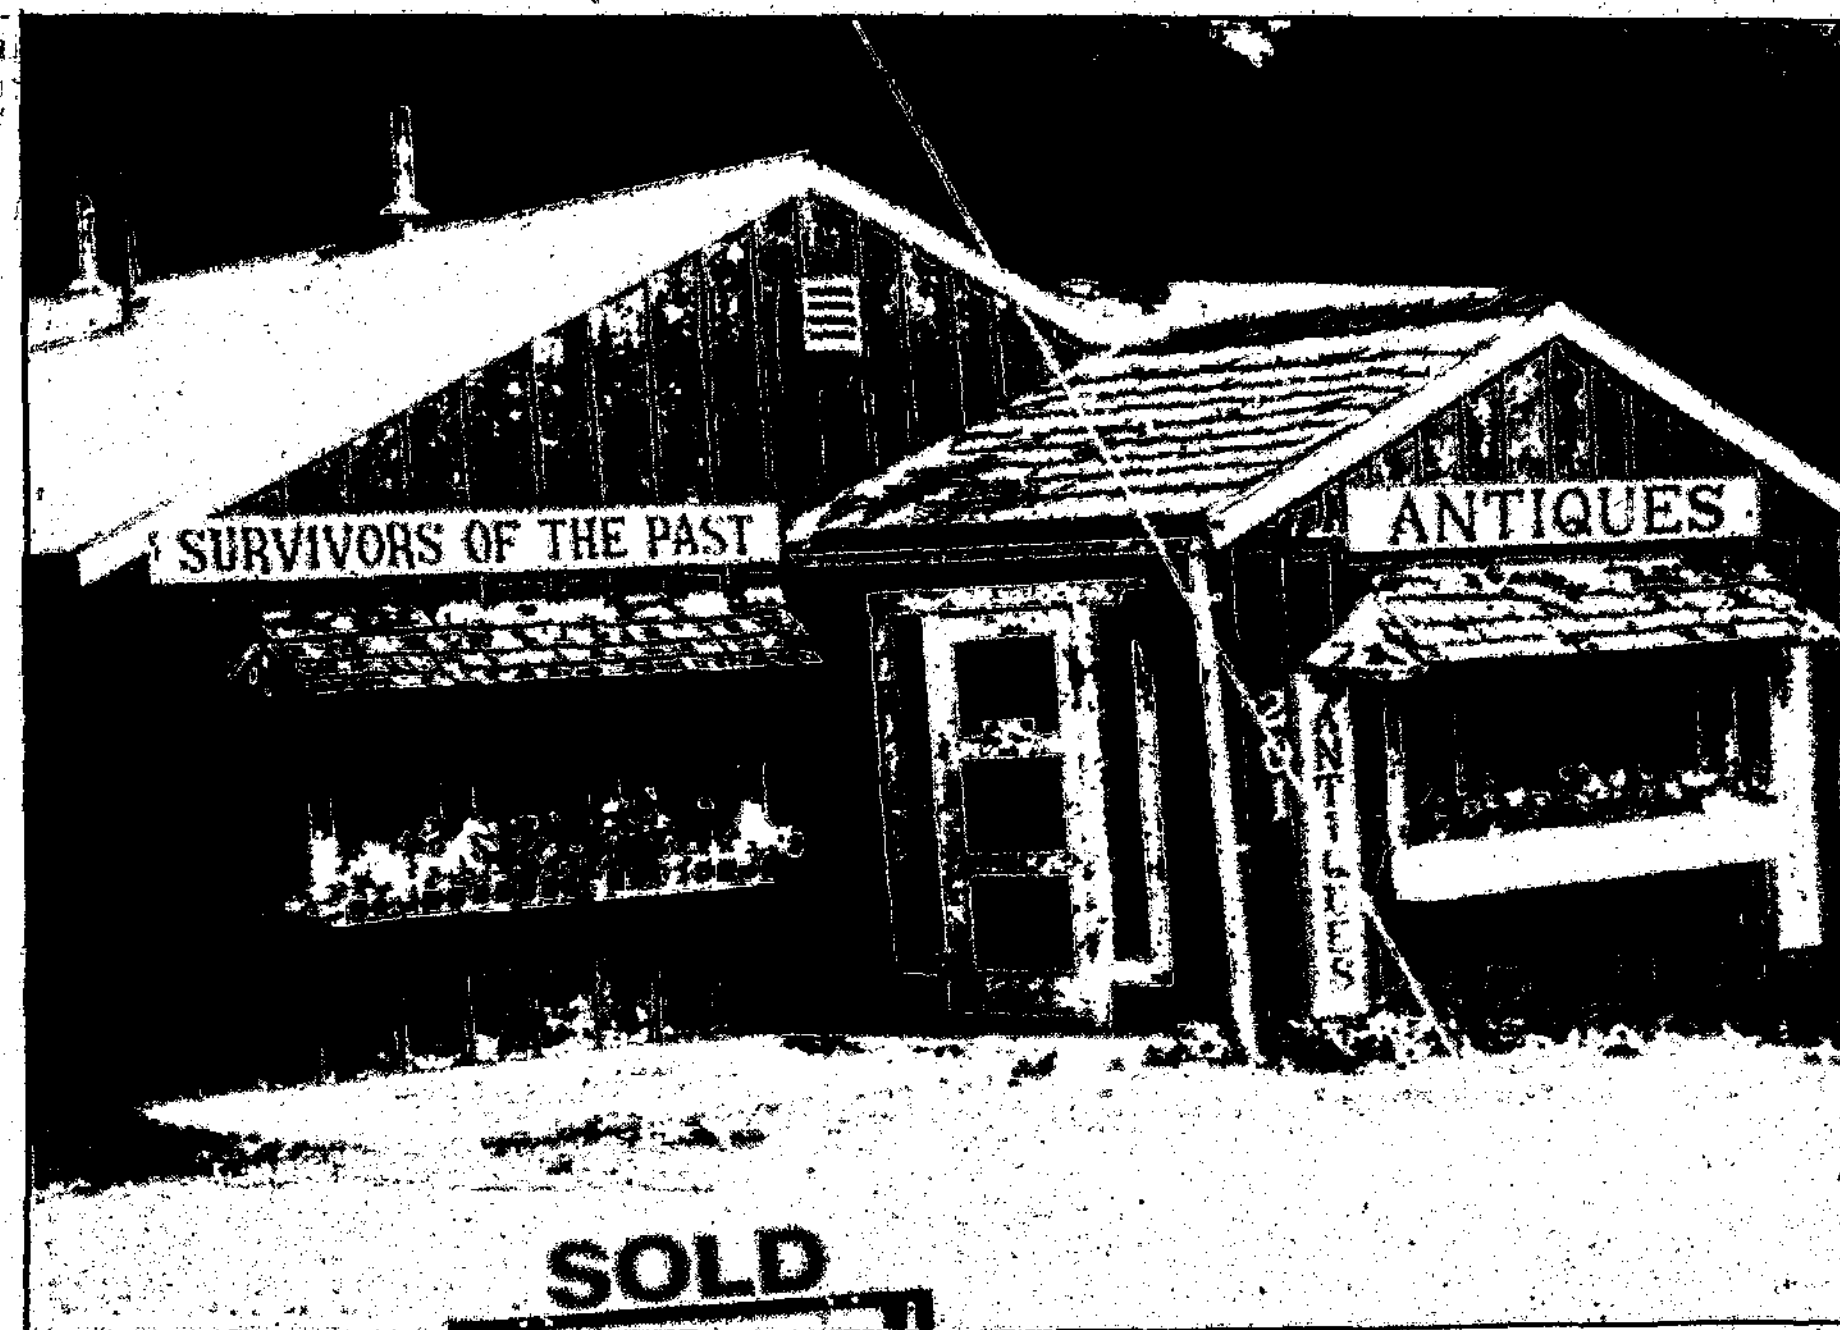

Light and Temperature-They love full sun and can take a wide temperature span. They can do well with a drop to 20 degrees below zero and up to 100 degrees above. Fertilizer-It is best to use a good organic fertilizer. In Capitan you could make frequent trips to the nearby, bull barn. Stockpile the manure for a year before using. Make two piles so one will always be ready to use.

Pests-Spider mites are the enemy of this tree. Check often and at the first sign, spray with malathion as the package directs. Spider mites usually live under leaves, spinning fine white webs and in time, the trees become stunted and die if left unchecked.

Good luck and thanks for your letter.

Send questions to Sally Black, c/o The Ruidoso News, PO Box 128, Ruidoso 88345.

Sales are up

Real estate sales in Ruidoso, as reported by the Multiple Listing Services, are up $1,935,031 for December 1, 1988 through June 30, 1989, over the same seven months of last year. MLS and the Ruidoso Board of Realtors declined to provide total sales figures for the period, but 1988 sales totaled $37,948,345; sales in 1987 were $38,830,070. Real estate transactions in 1988 totaled 659; the 1987 figures was 607. MLS announced last December. "Sold" signs, like the one above, are showing up all over town.

How to chill your chops efficiently

Your refrigerator can work more efficiently at chilling chops, chicken and chill — and all of the other foods you put in it — if you follow these simple steps:

- Keep your refrigerator clean and organized
- Clean the condenser coils at least twice a year
- Don't crowd foods in your refrigerator
- Let foods cool some before putting them in.

Downs trustees 'clean up' budget

In a short, routine meeting Monday, Village of Ruidoso Downs trustees approved financial statements and passed a "clean up" resolution.

Trustees approved a resolution to clean up the 1988-89 budget which will be sent to the Department of Financial Affairs in Santa Fe for final approval.

A motion to purchase a computer disk containing the village code book from Leon Eggleston for $3,716 was tabled until trustees could determine what the total price included.

Trustee Wilma Webb raised questions over the feasibility of spending more than $3,000 for a computer disk, but she later discovered that the price included an IBM computer.

Village clerk Janice Polk said the village has always paid for Leon Eggleston to make any additions or corrections to the village code book, and buying the computer and program from him would eliminate any further expenses from Eggleston.

Trustees decided to contact Eggleston for further details before putting it to a vote.

Trustees also voted to have the security door entering the police department replaced at the expense of the law protection fund.

Ruidoso Downs resident Luis Chavez was also on the agenda for discussion of his overdue water bill, but because he failed to attend Monday's meeting, trustees went on to other business.

Mayor Jake Harris requested also that a motion be made and seconded to pursue the effort to obtain a landfill site for Ruidoso Downs.

The motion was made and seconded.

In other business, trustees approved a request to send six Ruidoso Downs fire fighters to fire school in Socorro from Aug. 7 to 11.

Fire fighters that will be attending the school are: Humberto Maldonado (assistant chief), Ben Jeffery, Nick Herrera, Cole Van Winkle, Dave Weibrecht and David Morales.

Former trustee Bill Smith addressed the trustees at the end of the meeting with a request to have the village remove the weeds near his property.

"What happened to the village equipment purchased for the purpose of taking care of weeds?" Smith said. "Some of those weeds are seven- to ten-foot tall."

Harris responded by citing a lack of personnel, but added that he would try to send someone out as soon as possible.

"It's in my plan to get someone on it," Harris said.

Fire Chief Mark Hazel added that some of the fire hydrants are covered by weeds and dirt and are in desperate need of attention.

Harris said he would take care of the problem.

Trustees Alice Allison, LeVerne Cole, Joe Smith, Wilma Webb and Tony Parker attended the meeting.

The village is still short two members since the resignations in April of Bill Smith and C.L. "Bones" Wright.

P&Z approves all requests

The Village of Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission met in a regular meeting on Monday, July 24, and approved all items on the agenda.

The Commission approved the following items of business:

—A replat of Lots 3 and 4, Block 9, Alpine Village II for Ron W. Richter. The replat combines the two lots into one.

—A replat of Lots 13 and 14, Block 2, White Mountain Estates #4 for Charles P. Wood. The replat was to resolve encroachment problems and vacation of easement.

—A replat of the south half of Lot 28 and Lot 27, Block 7, White Mountain Heights, Subdivision, for Helen Harshey. The replat was to resolve encroachments.

—The commission approved, by a five to one vote, a side yard variance on Lot 29, Block 6, White Mountain Estates #5 for C.E. Dolle. The variance was to allow construction of a 28- by 30-foot garage over an existing concrete pad. Commissioner Tim Hoyt cast the one "no" vote.

—A commercial site development was granted to Valley Transit, Inc. for the northerly 2.2 acres of the Havens Tract at 112 Gaylan Canyon. Valley Transit, Inc. will relocate their concrete batching plant from Carrizo Creek Road to the Havens Tract.

In other business, Chairman Robert Donaldson presented the first draft of a proposed zoning ordinance dealing with the exterior appearance of businesses. The draft was given to the planning staff for them to research case law.

The commission also discussed moving the Nuisance Ordinance to the Zoning Code. Even though parts of the ordinance go beyond the code, Donaldson said there is a need for a focal point for the public to suggest Nuisance Ordinance changes without having to go to Village Council.

P&Z instructed the staff to find out if planning and zoning could be the instigating party in all changes in the Nuisance Ordinance and recommend any changes to the Village Council.

Commissioners discussed changing Country Club Drive from a collector to a residential street. The group decided to wait until after the final highway plan for the widening of Mechem Drive is announced to make a decision on Country Club Drive.

The commission announced the public hearing on Main Road rezoning for 6:30 p.m. August 7, in the Ruidoso Municipal Administrative Building.

Joan Bailey heads up Aspenfest

by AL STUBBS

Ruidoso News Business Editor

Joan Bailey of Storybook Cabins will chair the Aspenfest events this year, after volunteering at a board of directors meeting of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

President Ronnie Paulger, presiding at his first meeting since taking the reins from former president Becky Bell-Durham on July 1, reported that six prospects for chamber executive director have or will be interviewed. Two prospects will be interviewed this weekend. Another was in town last week.

"We are a little bit behind, but we want the right person," Paulger said.

A question of whether or not to charge workers admission at the annual Art Festival was deferred until next year. Members agreed an admission policy is needed, but also said the problem is immensely complex. The Art Festival is an annual chamber fundraiser.

The 18th Annual Arts and Crafts Festival is scheduled from noon Friday noon through 5 p.m. Sunday at the old airport.

Paulger asked that a special gate for workers be provided next year.

In other action, the directors approved an executive committee recommendation that the annual New Mexico Chili Cookoff, part of Aspenfest events in October, be put under the chamber umbrella. It will be a sanctioned chamber event.

Paul Crown, who is in charge of the cookoff, asked for the stamp of approval at the June meeting.

Crown will be required to hold the chamber harmless, provide budget information and otherwise comply with all provisions affecting other chamber sanctioned or sponsored events such as the Art Festival or Bavarian Bash.

Another requirement is that the chamber benefit financially from the cookoff, and approval was provided subject to negotiations.

Tracey Moran, director of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, asked for help for Aspenfest, asking for a chairperson. Bailey agreed to be 1989 chairperson.

Sunny Hirschfeld of the Chamber staff, said the board needs to study the annual Bavarian Bash to ensure profitability.

Last year the state kicked in more than $4,000 toward the event.

"All we have is $1,500 from the lodgers tax this year," she said.

Proposals for major changes will be discussed next week at an executive committee meeting. Hirschfeld said the event is tremendously expensive to stage with lodging for performers and musicians costly.

Sid Gordon, county 4-H leader, and members Troy Stone and Lori Gibson appealed to the chamber for more support for the Lincoln County Fair.

Gibson raises pigs as a 4-H project; Stone has breeding heifers and market lambs. He won at the state level last year and also at the Eastern New Mexico State Fair in Roswell.

He pointed out that when individuals or institutions buy prize animals at the fair, the money goes for good causes—college educations, grooming equipment, feed and such.

Gibson says she still has debts from last year because her swine didn't make it into the junior livestock sales ring.

Dates of the fair this year are August 15-19.

Catch Billy's 42nd escape

The 43rd Old Lincoln Days Pageant is gearing up for a weekend full of activities, including a parade, the Texas 4th Calvary, and the main attraction, the performance of "The Last Escape of Billy the Kid."

Cast members in the headline act include Bill Shrecengost as Billy the Kid, Bill Wise as Alexander McSween, Katherine Sanchez as Susan McSween, Thomas Shrecengost as John Tunstall, Kent McInnes as the Peddler, Dan Storm as Buckshot Roberts, and Lanny Maddox as Sheriff Brady.

Performances of "The Last Escape..." will be at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday, and Sunday August 4, 5, and 6, at the Pageant Grounds in Lincoln. Admission will be $2.

A fiddler's contest is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Saturday, August 5, in the town park next to the Dr. Wood's Annex. The park was recently landscaped through a joint effort with the Lincoln Heritage Trust and the Lincoln State Monument.

A Catholic mass is also scheduled for 4:15 p.m. Saturday, at the Iglesia de San Juan Bautista in Lincoln. The church was constructed in 1887 by Lincoln residents who donated materials and labor, said Jack Rigney of the Lincoln State Monument.

The church was restored in 1984 by the Museum of New Mexico State Monument and is open to the public free of admission.

The building has been used on a regular basis for masses on Saturdays, conducted by the Reverend David Berg of St. Eleanors in Ruidoso.

The parade is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Sunday, and the entries include antique cars, equestrian groups, the sheriff's posse, various floats and Smokey the Bear.

The Texas 4th Calvary group, from Lubbock, Texas, is scheduled to be present during the weekend, as well as the Mountain Men, a trolley, arts and crafts booths and food vendors.

The Mountain Men are part of a state-wide organization which reenact the lifestyle of the mountain men who pioneered the west prior to 1850.

Demonstrations of spinning and weaving, blacksmithing, whittling and other craft skills from the pioneers days will be going on throughout the weekend.

Living History demonstrations will be ongoing in town, and a slide show will be presented daily at the Lincoln Historical Center.

For further information on specific activities, please call these people:

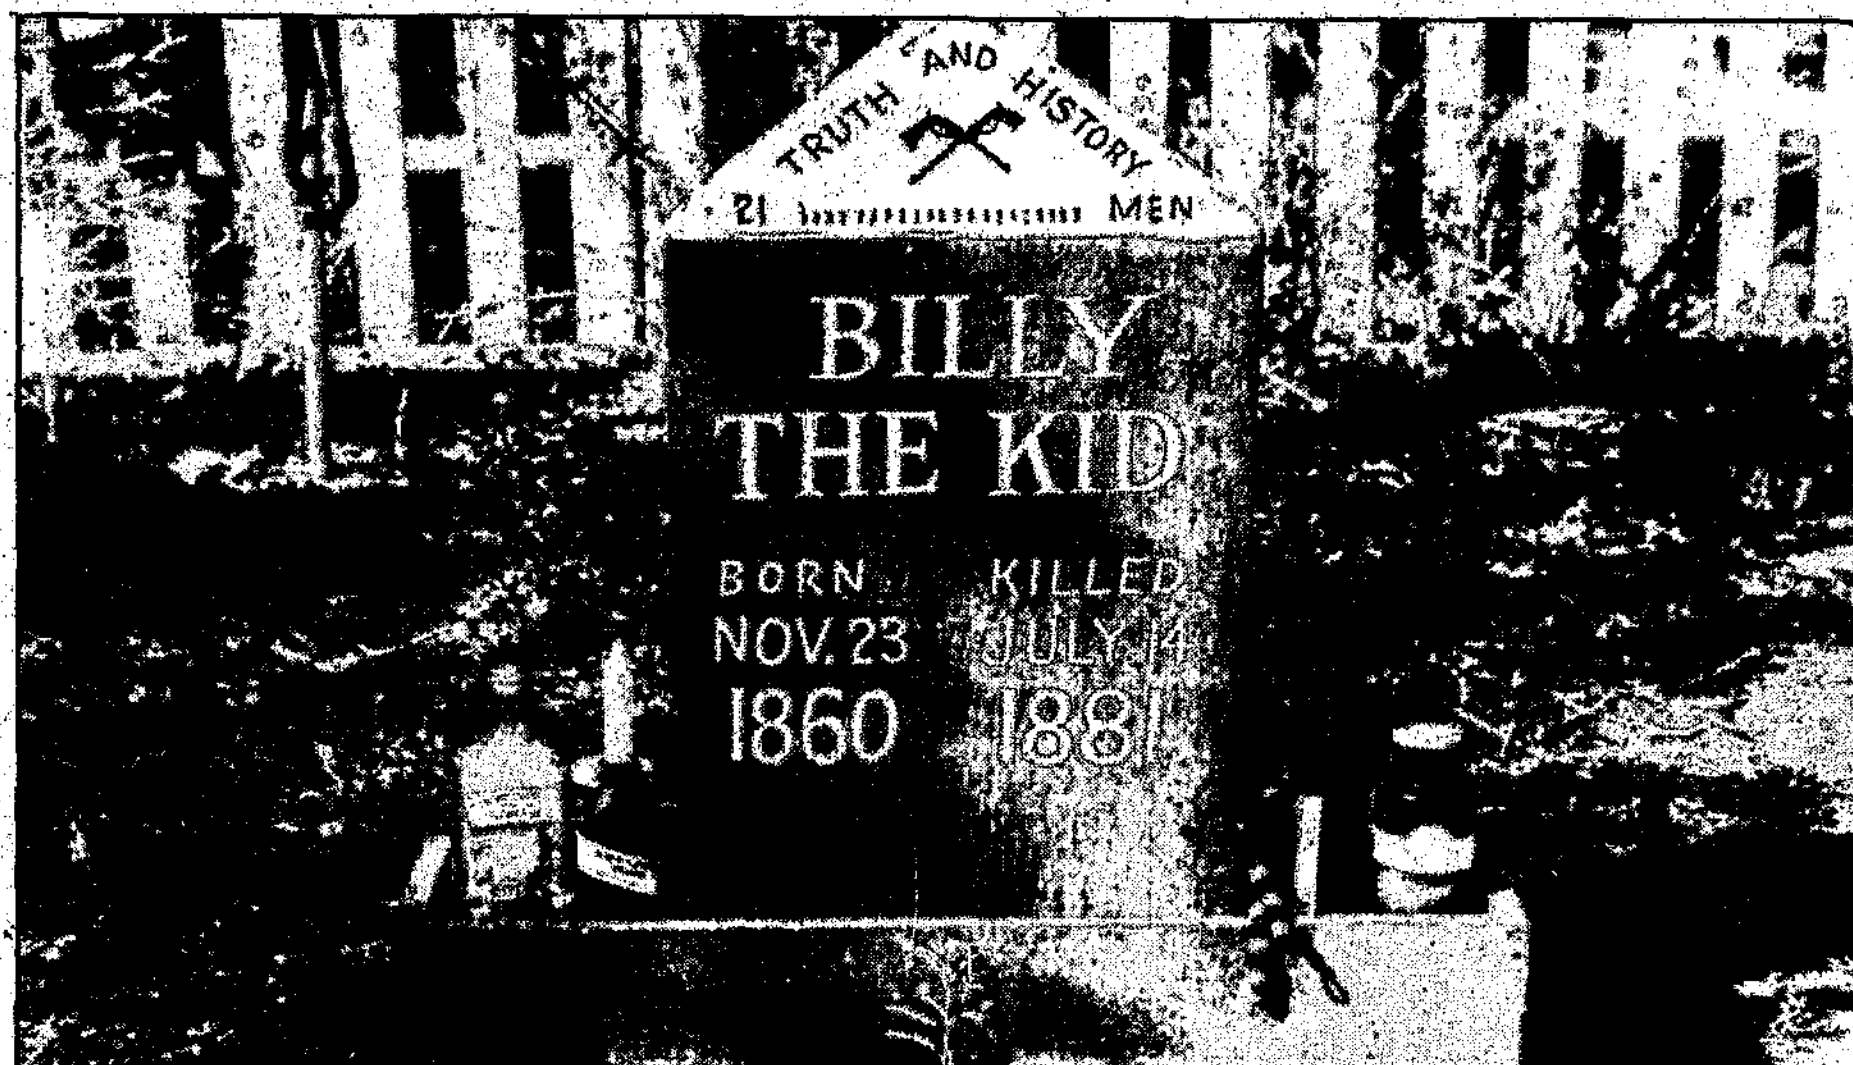

—Regarding the pageant, Diane Shrecengost, director, at 653-4893.

—For concessions, Chris Zamora, at 653-4673.

—For the parade, Rosalie Dunlap, at 653-4047.

—Regarding the fiddler's contest, Betty Shrecengost, at 653-4893.

—For general information, contact the Dunlap residence at 653-4047.

Environmental factions worry some New Mexico ranchers

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The effects of the environmental movement on agriculture were of major concern during a convention of New Mexico ranchers and farmers Tuesday and Wednesday at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

"We are certainly outnumbered," said Bill McIlhenny, president of the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau, during the two-day 1989 Summer Leadership Conference.

Reports were given on various topics of concern to ranchers and farmers, including the Food Securities Act, livestock disease, and public lands policy.

Bud Edwards, president of the public lands council, presented a short video titled "Big Park."

The video satirically portrays how the National Park Service takes over private land by forcefully occupying a family's home and turning it into a ranger station.

Ranchers singing in country-western fashion join in refrain with "We don't take 'no' from anyone. We just want to take your land."

The hapless family is gagged and tied and hauled from their home as the park service moves in.

The video represents the sense of frustration felt by many in the group on how the government takes land without consideration for private ownership rights.

"You give them the money, they'll take your land," said Herb Manig, assistant director of the natural & environmental resources section of the bureau.

Of particular concern to the bureau is the American Heritage Trust Act pending in Congress, which could create a pool of $25 to $30 billion to buy public lands.

Manig said the money, could be used to buy land whether or not it is for sale.

"It's a slush fund for a land grab," said a member of the audience.

Historically, ranchers have been forced to sell their land to the government, especially when the White Sands Missile Range was established.

"I'm pro-multiple use, but I think that video will get the people we want to see it mad and then they won't listen to us at all," said Ralph Dunlap of Lincoln.

"We have to acknowledge there are extremists on both sides," said Bradley Miller, executive director of the Humane Farming Association, located in San Rafael, California.

Miller's organization is leading a boycott of milk-fed veal because of the practices employed by the industry to produce their product.

According to Miller, young calves are kept chained in pens large enough only for the calf to stand in, generally in dark surroundings. He said the calves are purposely kept anemic to produce the pale color of the meat.

Because the calves are so unhealthy, they are given antibiotics to keep them alive, said Miller.

"We are not saying farmers are cruel," said Miller. "We are very critical of specific practices," he added.

Ranchers are very concerned over the wilderness legislative process, especially in New Mexico, because of federal reserve in-stream water rights.

Menig encouraged members of the bureau to join various environmental groups so they can become part of the policymaking process.

He also encouraged farmers and ranchers to turn their private lands into ecological showcases.

Through managing their private lands to increase productivity, ranchers and farmer can eventually become independent of federal lands, said Menig.

Another area of concern addressed at the convention is the introduction of predatory species into Yellowstone National Park, and the re-introduction of game species in rangeland areas.

Menig noted a case in which a rancher was arrested and fined for shooting a grizzly bear which he feared was a threat to his herd. The Supreme Court ruled the rancher had no right to shoot the bear to protect his private property.

The case could impact negatively on ranchers if wolves are successfully reintroduced into Yellowstone.

"The wolf does not know where the park begins and ends," said Menig.

Sheep herders have suffered financial loss also when highhorn sheep were reintroduced to rangeland in Nevada.

Menig said one rancher lost $60,000 when he was forced to remove his domestic sheep from the vicinity of the highhorns because his flock allegedly introduced disease to the wild sheep.

Studies are currently under way to determine if the potential exists for wild sheep to introduce disease to domestic flocks.

About 110 people were present for the convention sessions on Tuesday.

Aroundtown

LIVING HISTORY is a unique feature offered at the Lincoln Historical Center in Lincoln. Visitors can receive a limited tour of the historical town by Bob Hart or Betsy Nash, who provide a third person perspective from the point of view of a character from the town's history that each portrays. On Fridays and Saturdays, Roswell storyteller Boyd Barrett portrays various characters at the museum courtyard. The character tours are included in a regular museum ticket.

Sunday, July 30

THE LINCOLN BALLADEERS will perform at 3 p.m. Sunday, July 30, at the Dr. Wood's House Museum in Lincoln. Organized by the Lincoln County Historical Society, the Balladeers will perform traditional cowboy songs. Admission is free to the outdoor recital, but admission into the Dr. Wood's House requires a ticket.

Monday, August 1

ADMISSION PRICES IN LINCOLN change on Monday, August 1. Individuals up to age 15 receive tickets free, with adult admission of $2 beginning with individuals 16 years old and older.

Friday through Sunday, August 4, 5, 6.

"THE LAST ESCAPE OF BILLY THE KID," sponsored by the Lincoln Pageant and Festival Corporation, will be performed at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, August 4 and 5, and at 3:30 p.m. Sunday, August 6, at the pageant grounds in Lincoln.

Saturday, August 5

LINCOLN COUNTY PONY EXPRESS RACE is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. at the Capitan Gap turnoff. A dance is also scheduled for both Friday and Saturday nights, August 4 and 5, at the White Oaks Museum and Saloon. Ruidoso's gymnastics coaches say goodbye

A young gymnast appears to stand upside down in the air as she practices flips from the mat.

Masters and Johnson are leaving Ruidoso and their absence will leave a big hole in the promotion of Ruidoso gymnastics.

Robyn Masters has coached beginning gymnasts in Ruidoso for years. Since the program became so successful that she needed an additional coach, she has been ably assisted by Moe Masters.

Family career changes have swiped both from the community at the same time.

The Ruidoso Gymnastics Association honored the two with a farewell party last Tuesday at the Parks and Recreation Department Activities Center in the Gibson Building.

Bonny Richardson, president of the RGA, said the Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department has placed ads throughout the United States for a certified coach.

The municipal gymnastics program has 156 students enrolled, who are trained in the village Activities Center. The RGA is a support group of that program, and has provided funding for equipment and continuing training for the coaches.

Richardson said gymnastics did not do well in school systems, in her opinion, because it was thought of as a part-time sport, not year round sport.

"Nine weeks is not enough time to implement a good gymnastics program. The sport is more demanding than that. You can't just move to another sport and expect to run a complete gymnastics program," she said.

The high cost of insurance has been a notable cause for the decline in gymnastics in recent years.

One of the board members said the Parks and Recreation Department has assumed responsibility for the program's insurance, as well as for the facilities, utilities and coaches' salaries and benefits.

Ruidoso's original gymnastics program was offered with private coaching at the White Mountain School where the association rented gym space. Constantly moving the equipment and limited gym space for other sports forced the gymnasts to move.

The Ruidoso Athletic Club (RAC) building was the second location of record. When the RAC converted to an athletic club format, the gymnasts moved again, this time to the Herb Finney building located next to the Cablevision building.

The Finney building proved too small for the gymnasts and prompted the last move to the Gibson building, where the gymnastics program was able to expand and add additional activities for Ruidoso children.

Richardson said more than $20,000 worth of athletic equipment is housed in the Activities Center, including a spring floor, uneven bars, two balance beams, Gymnastics assistant coach Moe Masters (left) and coach Robyn Johnson are surrounded by their students who gave them farewell gifts at a party Tuesday.

Association has provided more than $20,000 in athletic equipment for the Parks and Recreation Department.

parallel bars, vaulting and pommel horse, landing mats, trampoline, rings and mini-tramps.

The facility was recently used for the weeklong Mountaintops Gymnastics Camp, and next week the Activities Center will be headquarters for a Village of Ruidoso day camp. Special programs that Johnson has offered have included babysitting seminars, a petting zoo, Fun in the Park and the Magic Bus field trips.

Serving on the RGA board with president Richardson are Nancy Radziewicz, Bill Smith, Carla Tam, Terry Jones, Marjorie Jones, Darlene Martinez, Vicki Conley, Gerald Ames and Cathy Ames.

RGA, as its major fundraiser, sponsors an arts and crafts fair during Aspenfest each year.

Another support organization for Ruidoso gymnastics is the Gymnastics Booster Club, which raises funds to aid the competitive gymnastics program. Cindy Eggleston is president of the booster club.

Richardson said Johnson is moving to Austin, Texas; but Masters will be in the area to help when the new coach arrives.

"Robyn and Moe will be difficult to replace," said Richardson. "The association will miss their enthusiasm and expert advice. They meant so much to many Ruidoso children. Communities much larger than ours do not have a program nearly this good. That's what Robyn, Moe and the parks department has meant to this community."

Herman Fox joins Warrior coaching squad

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Former Warrior coach Herman Fox has returned to Ruidoso and will join head coach Borde Williams and coach Zale Woodward at the Ruidoso Middle School this season.

Ruidoso athletic director Doug Ragsdale said school administrators are very excited about Fox returning to the school system.

"His excellent reputation in working with youth precedes him. We feel very fortunate to have a person with Herman's experience in our school system," Ragsdale said.

In addition to mid school coaching duties, Fox will aid in placement for special ed students.

Fox started his coaching career in 1965 at Silverton High School in Texas.

His coaching career was cut short when he seized an opportunity to work with juveniles in Texas. He stayed with that job for 19 years, helping juveniles with family, alcohol and drug problems, Fox assisted juveniles in need of a job, foster home or a half way house.

In 1986 he became a coach in Ruidoso under Cooper Henderson.

In 1989 Fox joined the Taylor County, Texas, juvenile authorities to again work with delinquent youth.

Fox's wife, Patay Ann, has been a nursing home administrator in Ruidoso, and currently holds a similar position in Texas. She plans to join her husband soon.

Fox has a daughter, Jennifer, who is a cosmetologist in Ruidoso; and a son, Jeffrey, who works and goes to Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas.

JOCK TALK

By Charles Stallings

Hey! It's normal, gang. When the forest burns of a natural phenomenon, let it burn. Yellowstone is looking great. There's forestry bulletins on it.

Many of our trees are dying from the ravages of the dwarf mistletoe. It's part of nature, the forest service told me. You can read about it in forest service pamphlets. Let it go.

The beetles that kill the trees? Beetles have to eat too.

Don't feed the bears. Starving bears will adjust. The strong will survive. Thin the herd. It's normal. It's nature. Read the forest service bulletins.

The press release from the forestry service said we could buy a firewood permit at any Lincoln National Forest office, and they will give you a map that guides you to the areas to cut.

At the Smokey Bear Ranger station, they told me I could buy a Turkey Fuelwood area permit there, but with all the paperwork needed it would be easier for me to travel to Cloudcroft. They didn't have any maps either. The person in charge of maps had been fighting fires and hasn't had time to get any.

You didn't really expect that I could just walk in and get a permit at the station or a map on the first trip, did you? That wouldn't be keeping in tune with nature. After all, the forestry service is part of our government, which we all know is a beautiful giant slug inching through a lovable bureaucratic quagmire that shuffles you from place to place. It's normal. It's part of nature. I wonder why we have never received a bulletin telling us that.

The fighting football Warriors are at Las Cruces this week for a little seven-on-seven passing tournament this Friday. Sixteen teams have signed up. Head coach Doug Ragsdale is excited about a really great Warrior team, loaded with young talent.

It's probably too early to say, "Let's not get too cocky."

On the other hand, if you've got it, flaunt it. And the Warriors have got it. I can't wait for Guardiola to stick a bullet pass through their ears or for Trapp to trample over bodies.

Did you know that last year Trapp had a clear field for a touchdown, but felt so badly that he had hit only 10 opposing players that he actually held up so the last player could catch up to him. It was a clash that kid will never forget. There's something special about a Trapp crunch. You can hear it throughout the stadium, a combination of pain and power. It commands respect and "ahhs" from the crowd, much like a spectacular fireworks explosion.

What a great season coming up. Season ticket holders will get their money's worth. Buy several and be a scalper. Ragsdale said regular season ticket holders have from Wednesday through Friday, August 9-11 for first choice. In the meantime, find a ride to Las Cruces for a sneak preview of our team.

Get 'em Warriors.

Warrior cheerleaders leap with honors

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Sports Writer

The Ruidoso High School cheerleaders returned from the National Cheerleaders Association clinic with a bunch of honors and a new enthusiasm for this season's games and activities.

The Warriors squad was one of three teams nominated for All American honors during the clinic at Eastern New Mexico University in Portales.

Senior Charmaine Rue was one of six girls nominated for All American out of 156 cheerleaders.

The Warriors also won the Award of Excellence and the cheerleaders were presented with four "superior" blue ribbons, the highest rating of the three ribbons given daily.

Iceing on the cake came with the presentation to the Warriors of the coveted red, white and blue "spirit" stick for the most spirited performance of the day.

It marked the first time ever that a Warrior cheering squad has brought home such honors from the NCA clinic.

Second-year Warrior sponsor Peggy Lawing was excited.

"It was a lot of fun and hard work by a group of excellent girls," she said. "I wish we could have had a videotape for people to see just how hard they worked."

Lawing said practice started two weeks prior to the clinic. At the clinic, the girls started the day at 7 a.m. every morning, broke for lunch at noon, returned to the gym from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., before breaking for dinner. Competition and evaluation was scheduled daily from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Senior cheerleaders are Kristin Goad, Roberta Montoya, Sophia Orosco, Charmaine Rue and Amy Sayner. Junior cheerleaders are Julie DeAngelo and Lori Swalander.

Lawing said the cheerleaders will begin their fund raising this season by selling balloons at the Ruidoso Arts and Crafts Fair this Friday through Sunday.

Flamingos win girls softball championship

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Sports Writer

The Flamingos, tested only once, easily won the Ruidoso Womens Softball League tournament last weekend at the Eagle Creek Sports Complex.

The Flamingos also finished first in the league at season end.

Leather and Lace started the morning's play with a thorough domination of the Shady Ladies 7-0. Fire then burned the Braves in game two, 10-8.

The Braves continued to treat the Shady Ladies shabbily 7-0.

In the Flamingos first contest of the day, they rapped Leather and Lace for a ton of hits and won in a breeze 12-1.

The only scare for the Flamingos came at the hand of the Braves. The tightly contested event ended with the Flamingos squeezing to a 8-7 victory.

Back at the ranch, Fire fired a shutout against the Shady Ladies, 7-0, leaving the poor girls without a single point in three games and their remaining game with the Flamingos.

The Flamingos warmed up for Shady Ladies by putting out Fire, 12-1. They then dropped Shady Ladies, 7-0, for a perfect four wins and the tournament championship.

The Shady Ladies were caught without a score. Collectively, the Ladies team lost 28-0, but there is always next year.

Stricklin attends baseball clinic

Scott Stricklin of Ruidoso has completed a two-week course of intensive baseball training at the Mickey Owen Baseball School near Miller, Missouri.

According to a news release provided by the school, Scott received specialized training in all phases of the game through the combination of instruction, practice and game experience.

Scott participated in 20 games during his two-week stay and was aided by the school's pitching machines, video taping equipment and evaluation from the school's coaches.

Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stricklin of Ruidoso.

Thoroughbred sale slated for Saturday

The Ruidoso Horse Sale Company will present its annual sale of Thoroughbred Yearlings Saturday, July 29, 7 p.m. at the Ruidoso Super Select Sales Pavilion.

The Pavilion is located 12 miles east of Ruidoso Downs in Glencoe, New Mexico.

This year's sale has 121 yearlings. Some of the sires represented are Bet Big, Bold Ego, Bucks Chief, Dawn Of Creation, Full Choke, Hawk's Special, Hyperborean, Invictus Drive, Ivan Lendl, Jeremi Johnson, Morning Bob, Prince O'

The Bronx, Staunch Avenger, and Sunny's Halo.

In 1988, Hookenonthehighway, who recently won the June 3 $44,037 Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity, sold for $2,200.

Hookenonthehighway is undefeated in two starts, but was entered in Thursday's Rio Grande Futurity Trials. Two finalists from the 1989 Kachina Stakes were also sold last summer.

Strictly Creative, who finished fifth in Saturday's race behind first Gin Fizz, sold for $1,300; and Velvet Diplomat, who finished sixth went for $2,500.

Horses that pass through the sales ring are eligible for the Sunland Park/Ruidoso Thoroughbred Sale Futurity that will be run in the fall of 1990 at Sunland Park. The race carries a purse of $10,000 added at a distance of six furlongs.

The Ruidoso Horse Sales Company will also hold a sale of Quarter Horse Yearlings August 24-26, 1989.

Winning ways

This jockey wears a look of intense concentration as he makes a beeline for the winner's circle for the traditional photo session at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

Hooken' leads Rio Grande Futurity

Hookenonthehighway, who romped home a seven-length winner in the Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity on June 3, will lead the second division of the Rio Grande Futurity Trials Thursday. The two trials will determine the finalists of the $42,453 final.

The series began with $44,037 Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity at five furlongs here on June 3, and concludes with the $42,453 Rio Grande Futurity at six furlongs on Sunday, August 6. The series is for registered New Mexico bred thoroughbreds.

Hookenonthehighway, trained by Alfred Fontenot, will be ridden by regular rider Alvin Brossette. The gelding by Full Choke has won both of his career starts by a combined 12 lengths. He worked four furlongs in 48 4/5 seconds on Monday, July 17.

Challenging Hookenonthehighway is Street Sweeper who won a maiden race on July 14 by six lengths. Evelyn's Blade, who was fourth in the Kindergarten, is also entered in the second trial. He was third in an invitational handicap on July 14 in his first start since the Kindergarten.

Two horses from a July 8 allowance will run in the first division of the Rio Grande Futurity. Benmatt, who was fourth, and Aces and Faces, who finished ninth, are entered. The top six finishers in each division will advance to the August 6 final.

Trick and Ego to lead Handicap

A field of seven three-year-old thoroughbreds, led by Fast Trick and Jae Ego, will race Saturday in the $8,500-added Hondo Valley Handicap. Run at 5 1/2 furlongs, the race has attracted an evenly-matched field.

First post time on Saturday is 12 p.m. The Ruidoso Horse Sales Company will present its annual sale of thoroughbred yearlings Saturday night at 7 p.m. at the Ruidoso Super Select Sales Pavilion. The Pavilion is located 12 miles east of Ruidoso Downs in Glencoe, New Mexico.

Fast Trick and Jae Ego will both carry co-highweight of 119 pounds. Jae Ego won the June 10 $30,770 Norgor Derby at six furlongs. Since that race, he was fourth behind Fast Trick in an allowance race on July 1. Trained by Roy Barrington, Jae Ego did not have a rider named at entry time.

Fast Trick, trained by Eddie Milligan, is a career winner of 3-of-5 starts, with one second. In his other start, he was a well beaten ninth in the Bachelor Stakes at Oaklawn Park.

Fast Trick's allowance win on July 1 was his first local start, and he was challenged the entire six furlongs. In that race, he beat Fly Dragoness, Jae Ego, and Reckless Winds, who he will face Saturday.

Fly Dragoness has been second in three races here this season. Aside from the second place finish to Fast Trick, the New Mexico-bred filly was second in the Memorial Day Handicap to Straight Reality and was second in a June 17 allowance to Stewing Sid.

Suzy Sundance, has been third in two stakes races at Ruidoso Downs in 1989. She was third in the Memorial Day Handicap, and was third in the 870 yard Master Salls Handicap on July 4.

Reckless Winds, a winner of a claiming race on July 6, and a well-beaten seventh in the Ruidoso Downs Budweiser Breeders' Cup Handicap on May 27; Coleman County, who has been off for ten weeks; and Wise Blade, who was fifth in an allowance on July 16 round out the field.

I wish ... I wish

This young racing fan looks like she's and riding at Ruidoso Downs Race Track someday.

Around the track...

Below is a list of major stakes races left in the Ruidoso Downs racing season.

August 5 — Jeep Quarter Horse and Thoroughbred Challenge

August 20 — $300,000-estimated All American Gold Cup

August 27 — $750,000-estimated All-American Derby

September 4 — $2,530,000 All-American Futurity

Wicked Wind headlines a field of ten three-year-old Quarter Horses entered for Friday's feature race. The 440-yard race carries a purse of $3,800.

Wicked Wind was eighth in the Grade I $398,232 Rainbow Derby behind See Me Do it on July 3. In the Rainbow Derby Trials, Wicked Wind beat the 1988 All American Futurity winner Merganser by a nose to qualify for the final. Luke Myles will ride.

Dazzling Money Talk, who broke her maiden on July 5, was also entered. A filly by Dash For Cash, she will be ridden by James Lackey. Cadillacation, who was second in an allowance on July 7, was entered with jockey Gary Sumpter named to ride.

Pictured is top notch jockey Jacky Martin aboard Dash For Cash. Martin has teamed with trainer Jack Brooks to win four All American Futurities. Currently, they lead the Quarter Horse standings in their categories. Most recently, Martin and Brooks came in second in the Grade I Kansas and Rainbow Futurities with Strawberry Silk.

Familiar faces Jacky Martin and Jack Brooks, the jockey-trainer team that has won four All American Futurities together, lead the Quarter Horse standings in their respective categories after 39 days of the 71-day 1989 Ruidoso Downs season. However, the thoroughbred leader board has new faces at the top.

Through July 16, trainer Cliff Lambert and jockey Von Cunningham lead the thoroughbred standings. All four of the leading individuals are winning more than 20 percent of their mounts or starts.

Brooks and Martin have not won a stakes race at Ruidoso Downs in 1989, but they have been second in the Grade I Kansas and Rainbow Futurities with Strawberry Silk.

On June 15, they teamed together to win six races in the Rainbow Futurity elimination trials. They did win the Rainbow Derby Consolation with Merganser on July 2.

Cunningham is enjoying a successful first season at Ruidoso Downs. He has ridden and trained in the Pacific Northwest in the past. Through July 16, Cunningham had 43 wins putting him clearly ahead of second-placed Glen Murphey, who had 25 wins.

Cunningham has not won a stakes race yet, but has been second on two occasions: The May 27 $81,900 Ruidoso Downs Budweiser Breeders' Cup Handicap with Salud y Pesetas, and with Misty Autumn in the $17,625 Aspen Breeders' Cup Handicap on June 24.

Lambert has a narrow lead in the thoroughbred trainer standings. His 22 wins is slightly better than Doyal Roberts' 18, and Fred Danley's 17 wins. Danley is also tied for fifth in the Quarter Horse trainer standings. Lambert has saddled Trigo Dancer, who won an invitational handicap, and was fourth in the Governor's Handicap. He has also saddled Loose Lips Cash to an allowance win, and a second-place finish in the Jockey Club Handicap.

Jockey Larry Payne is also having a successful 1989 meet. He has won four thoroughbred stakes this season. He won two stakes with Just Like Lace, the Aspen Breeders' Cup Handicap and the First Lady Handicap. On June 10, he won the Norgor Derby with Jae Ego paying $47.40, and won the June 18 Norgor Futurity with Adios Mundo paying a whopping $120.20 to win.

With four All American Futurities to their credit, the team of Brooks and Martin will certainly have a say in the 1989 renewal of the $2 million classic. The first day of the All American Futurity Trials is Aug. 9.

And with new faces like Cunningham and Lambert leading the thoroughbred standings, August stakes races like the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Derby and the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity should be interesting.

McGary creation will stand guard at Roundhouse

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

He will stand six feet, ten inches tall, his face painted with a black, inverted wedge. His right hand will be on his hip and will pull back the coat of a Lt. Colonel in the Calvary, his left hand over the handle of a saber. His eyes will be narrow and piercing, with his shoulders thrown back and his long hair falling over his shoulders.

He is "Long Soldier," formerly known as Red Horn, and his bronze sculpture will be on exhibit in front of the Capitol Building in Santa Fe.

The bronze statue is the work of Dave McGary who creates his pieces at his own foundry south of Nogal.

The piece was originally commissioned by actor Mickey Rourke, of "Diner," and is part of a series of five, all but one of which have been sold, said McGary.

Long Soldier was an Oglala Sioux whose original name was Red Horn, but the brave was renamed after he killed a Lt. Colonel in the U.S. Calvary and rode back into camp wearing the officer's coat, saber and pistol.

Most all McGary's pieces are of Plains Indian subjects, the influence found throughout his home with various objects.

At the age of nineteen he was adopted by the Assinibion, a clan of the Sioux in Montana.

"My whole personality and my outlook on my work changed then," he said.

At the invitation of Gerald Red Elk, McGary lived with the Assinibion and became intimate with their culture and ways.

"I was at many ceremonies where I was the only white person in attendance," he said.

"Now I have a wonderful opportunity to educate a few people with my bronzes."

While his work exhibits the nomadic spirit of the Plains Indian, his technique was truly learned by the masters of renaissance sculpture.

McGary said he was fortunate to have a good art teacher in junior high school. It was then he began sculpting.

His work received recognition in the Cody, Wyoming, area, where he was born, and soon the artist Harry Jackson, of Casper, Wyoming, became interested.

When McGary was 15 years old, Jackson invited him to go to Italy and study the bronze casting process for one year.

"I had to wait until I was 16 to quit school so I could go," said McGary.

While there, McGary was one of four students who studied the craft of bronze casting with seventh and eighth generation artisans.

"They are the real masters," he said.

The primary reason for the trip was to educate students in the casting process, which Jackson thought was being lost in our country, said McGary.

The young McGary worked up to 12 hours each day in the foundry, then at night, would receive instruction in sculpting from Jackson.

Into the early hours of the morning, Jackson would request McGary to sculpt a skeleton, then put the musculature on it, followed by the skin.

"I hated him then," said McGary, but the intense lessons in anatomy paid off through the development of the arresting quality apparent in his work.

Another unique aspect in McGary's work is that he paints the bronzes, which adds a new character not seen in the bronzes of other artists.

With a process called patina, areas of the bronze can be selectively colored through the application of chemicals which speed up the process of oxidation in the metal. The process used by McGary is called the lost wax process.

Fifteen full time employees work at his foundry to produce his captivating bronzes. The process is long and detailed.

It begins with a wax original made by McGary. A master mold is made from this original with a rubber mold, a process which takes two weeks.

The master mold is pulled off and then filled with wax to provide the shape of the piece, as well as the dikes and tubes through which the liquid bronze will later be poured.

Tough-up and detail work follows to provide the precise replication McGary is seeking.

When this is finished, the wax model is dipped into a slurry to make another mold.

The model is dipped up to 14 times in the slurry, covered with sand and allowed to dry between each dipping.

This final mold is then baked in an oven and becomes hard with a ceramic character. The wax melts out during this stage, hence the term lost wax.

This final mold is what the liquid bronze is poured into. The mold is pre-heated so it does not crack when the metal, at 2,150 degrees, is poured in.

After the bronze has set for about four hours, the process called devesting begins, in which the mold is literally beaten off the metal with heavy hammers and a lot of plain old strength.

For each piece made, this process must be repeated. Just to make one bronze can take over a month.

After the piece has been devested of the mold, the final bronze chasing, welding and grinding begins.

With some pieces, the final product was cast in several stages, which later must be assembled.

The artisans under McGary's employ work meticulously to grind away any notion of a weld, and to enhance the lifelike appearance of the subject.

The final process is the patina and the painting. When completed, the subject has the appearance of texture, color, and even character that cannot be seen in many other bronzes.

To keep the entire operation running smoothly, McGary is indebted to his wife, Jerre.

She walks to and fro with a portable phone almost incessantly to her ear, scheduling appointments, making travel plans, paying the bills, and generally taking care of any headaches.

"She is truly wonderful," said McGary.

When they first began their business, with only two employees, she cooked for them also because the workers were both bachelors.

McGary's work ranges in size from the larger-than-life pieces, such as the "Long Soldier" for exhibit in Santa Fe, to smaller versions and busts, which are more easily sold.

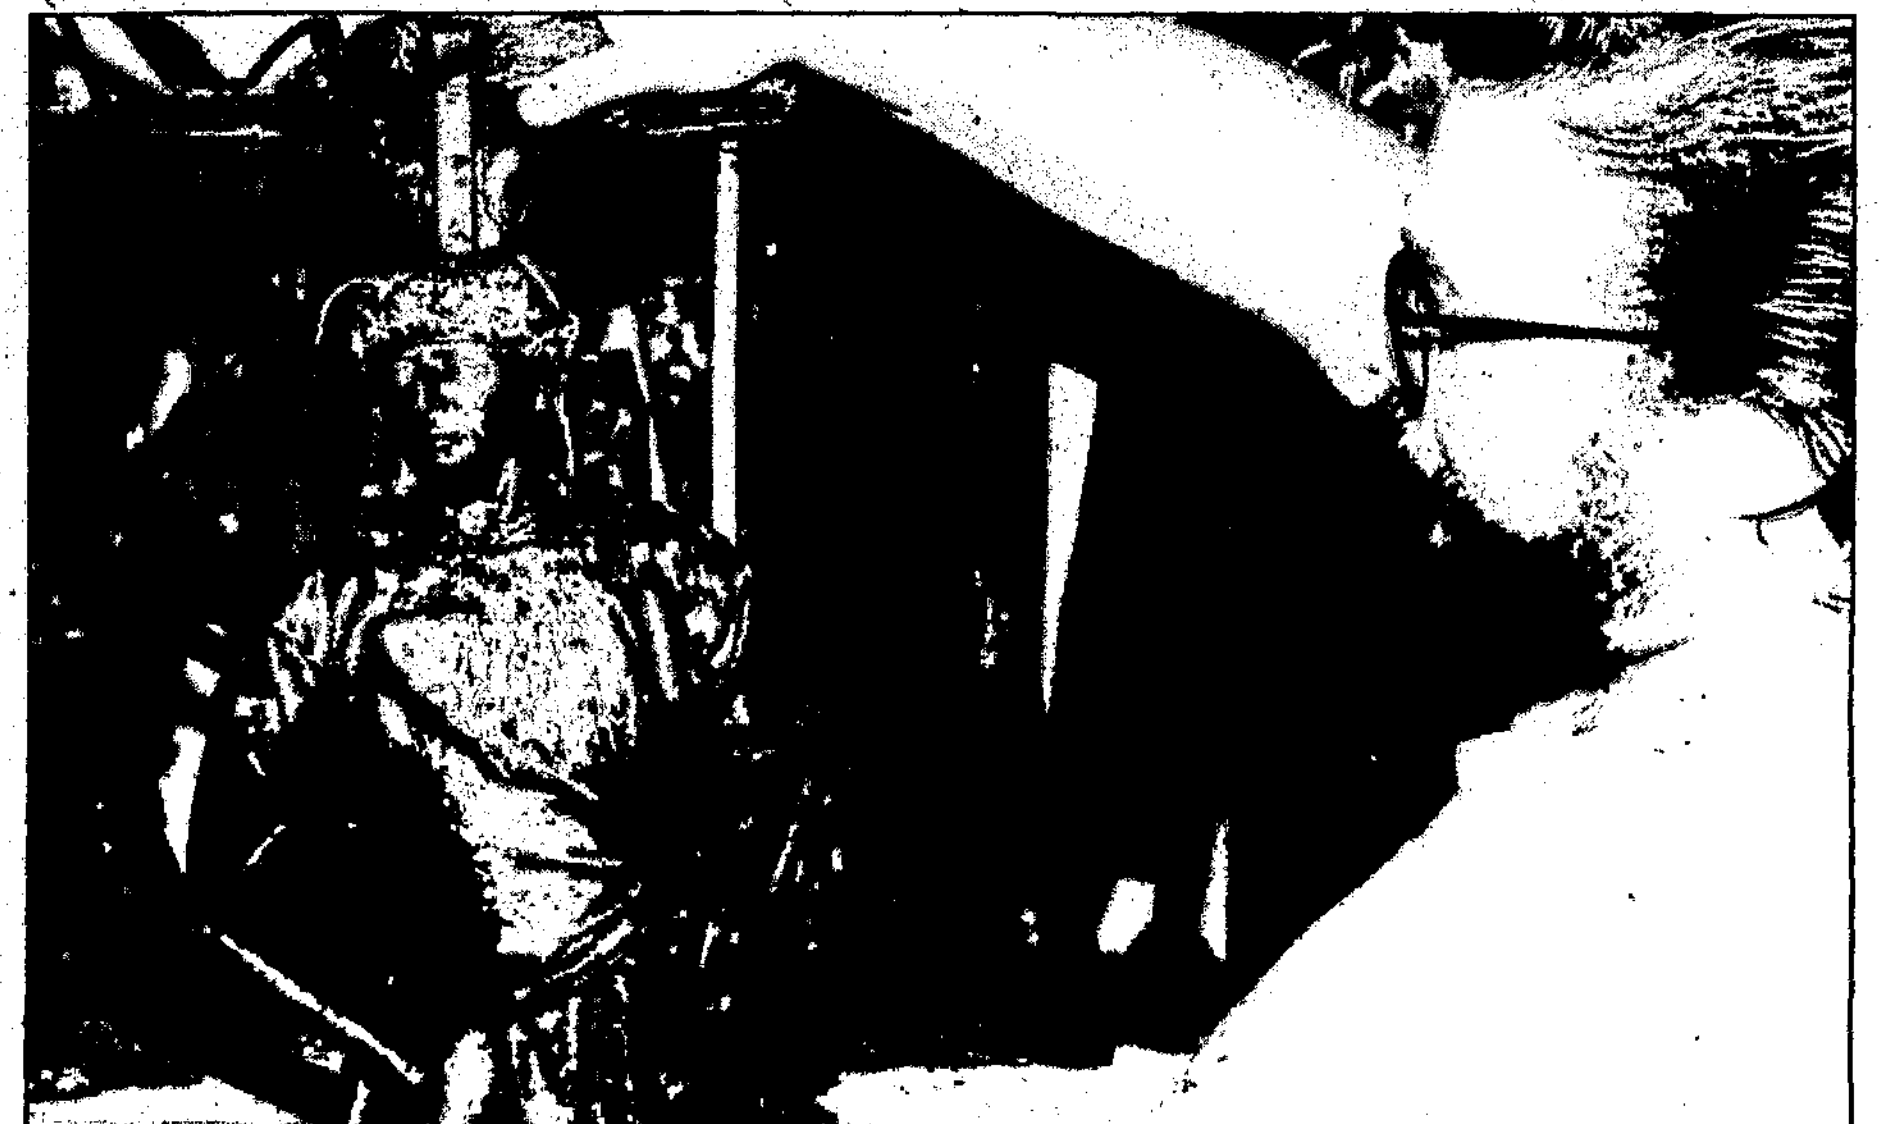

Just beyond his home, the sound of hurried but exacting work goes unheard, lost in the foothills breeze of Loma Grande. McGary's work reflects the free spirit of the wandering plains Indian, a refreshing diversion from the ubiquitous pueblo culture.

His bronzes reflect courage, the spirit, an unfettered way of life.

Visitors are welcome, but call first.

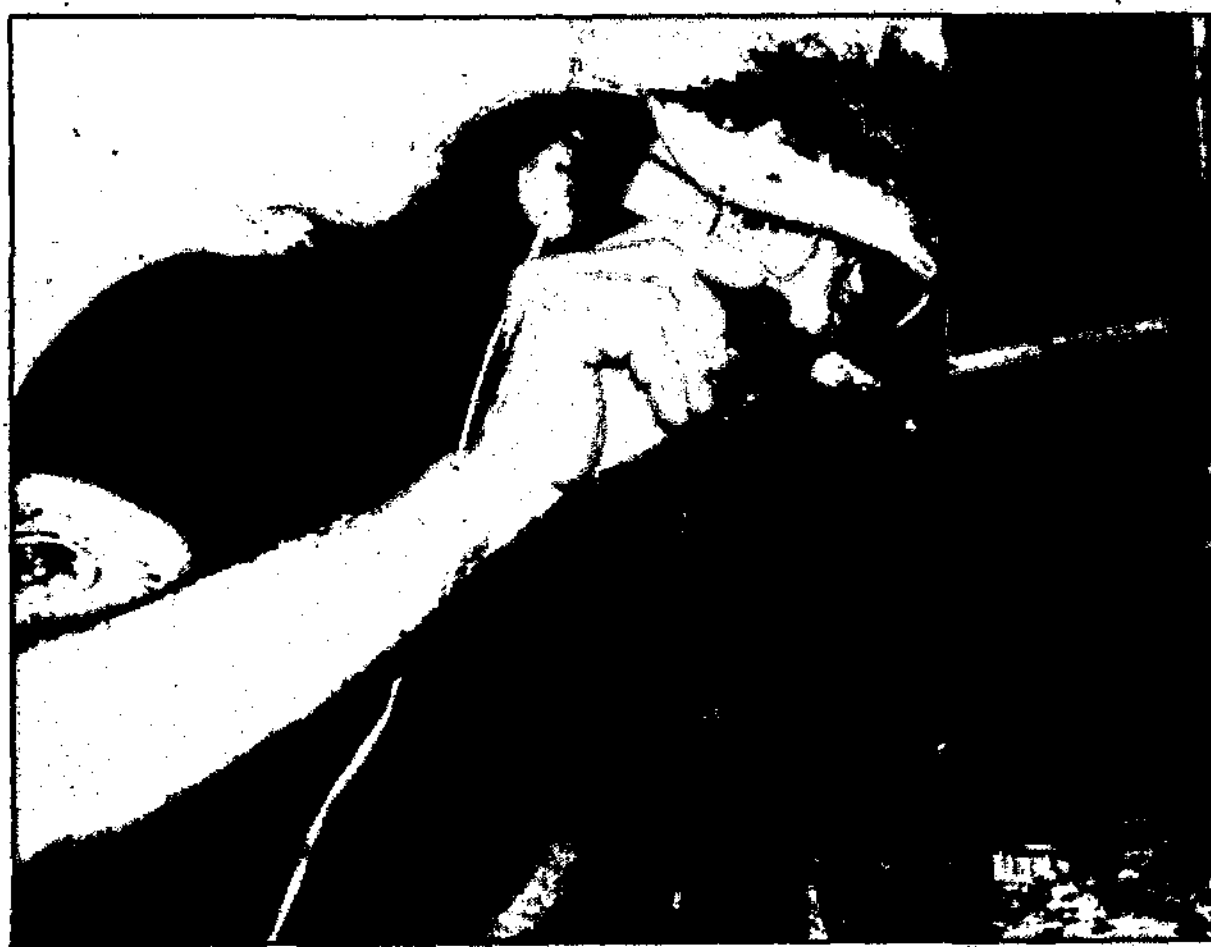

DAVE MCGARY

Artist Dave McGary (above) holds a wax mold as he explains the lost-wax method of bronze casting. McGary employees 15 people in his foundry, such as Steve Miller, (left) who is dipping a wax mold into a slurry to make the final mold in which the bronze will be poured. For every piece cast a mold must be made.

Bill Bagby is touching up detail work on a wax form which will be used to make a mold for casting. The work is very detailed and exacting. "I am very particular," says Dave McGary, who also notes he has a very fine group of employees.

EDITORIAL

A going away party Tuesday for gymnastics coach and activities director Robyn Johnson and her assistant, Moe Masters, was doubly sad.

Johnson is the person most responsible for forming and continuing a competitive and recreational gymnastics program in Ruidoso. The Village of Ruidoso program, through the Parks and Recreation Department, has reached hundreds of youngsters over the past few years. Besides the exercise, self-discipline and agility training offered in recreational gymnastics, the Activities Center has been an after school stopping off place for dozens of children. We suspect many of those kids dropped off by the school busses at the Activities Center each day would have been latchkey kids without the gymnastics program.

Johnson and Masters were more than coaches, touching many youngsters' lives through the assorted programs they offered in addition to gymnastics. The two energetic women were significant in the lives of many area youngsters.

They will be missed.

Added to the loss of these two dedicated village employees, is the concern that the Village of Ruidoso may not be as committed to continuing the successful program once the forces behind it are gone. The Parks and Recreation Department is without a director, and that slot is not slated to be filled until December.

Although we were assured privately that the show will go on, and people will be recruited to coach and assist, we haven't seen any advertising or other evidence of a search for a qualified gymnastics program director. Fall programs usually begin when school starts, and that's just a month away.

We hope a successful program that has benefitted hundreds of area youth, and is expected to enhance the lives of many more, doesn't fade away when Johnson and Masters leave town. We urge village administrators to move quickly to continue this worthwhile program.—fj

Letters to the editor

DEAR EDITOR:

For those of you who haven't already heard about it, or seen the heinous film footage on television, the African elephant is rapidly approaching extinction. They are killed for their ivory tusks, which are traded on the international market and worked into bracelets, earrings, and statues for consumers in the U.S., Europe, Canada and Japan.

At the present rate of killing, the African elephant could disappear from the face of the earth in the next ten years! As many as 300 elephants are slaughtered everyday in Africa! Ivory hunters machine-gun entire elephant families and then hack their faces apart with machetes to get the tusks! If reading about this is making you sick, you should see the pictures I have of this very scenario!

It is legal to kill African elephants for ivory if it is done under an international quota system established by CITES (the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species). Under the CITES ivory-central system, ivory export quotas are set and member nations that produce ivory are required to mark tusks to identify them as having been legally obtained.

The CITES central system has proven to be a dismal failure however. The problem is that nearly 80 percent of the ivory traded on the international market in recent years has been poached (illegally obtained). The ivory trade is now so out of control that even middlemen in the ivory trade can't distinguish between legally and illegally obtained ivory. This means that there is an eight in ten chance that a new ivory trinket in any store anywhere in the world is from poached elephants!

The U.S. government recently joined the governments of Tanzania, Kenya, and five other nations in proposing that the African elephant be listed on Appendix I of CITES. The species is currently listed on Appendix II, which means that trade in products made from the species is regulated. An Appendix I listing would mean that the species is in danger of extinction and all commercial trade would be banned.

President Bush has just announced a ban on ivory imports into the U.S. But, while this is an important step forward, the president's action is not enough to save the African elephant. Commerce in ivory products will continue, and the ban can be lifted at any time.

The African elephant must be listed as an endangered species and on Appendix I of the CITES treaty now! Only this, plus heavy diplomatic pressure on countries worldwide, will save these animals!

What can we, as concerned Americans, do to save the elephants?...First of all, don't buy or wear ivory! Let stores in your area (and there are a few selling ivory here in Ruidoso) know that you are adamantly opposed to the sale of ivory products. Let them know that you will not patronize their establishments so long as their business contributes to the slaughter of elephants!

Secondly, write to Manuel Lujan, Secretary of the Interior, and James Baker, Secretary of State, and urge them to hasten the listing of the African elephant on Appendix I of the CITES treaty.

The situation is moving quickly and is now in the crisis stage. Please help! The ivory trade must be destroyed or the elephants will be destroyed!

People can live without ivory. Elephants can't.

Sincerely,
Stacy A. Peña

DEAR EDITOR:

The reason for this letter is to correct one item and to reply to two other statements made by others in Mr. Harrold's report in The News on Monday, July 17, on the meeting of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Advisory Board, July 14, 1989. Mr. Harrold's report mentions a question asked by chairman Nick Pappas during the meeting whether "Capitan (would) be willing to allow the use of their (Capitan's) landfill for the entire County..." This was not the question, but rather whether Capitan would be interested in establishing a "transfer station" on its landfill site. Although the question as stated in the article seems to be a logical extension of the question actually asked, my reply to it would not have been the same.

The reason for Mayor Harris' opposition to the report of my Technical Sub-Committee is erroneous: At no time was the Technical Sub-Committee charged with providing any cost information; it was solely concerned with the technical feasibility of a new landfill. To establish a landfill under the new EID regulations requires time which the county does not have, since we are running out of space in the Fort Stanton Mesa Landfill. For the handling of the financial matters at hand a Financial Sub-Committee had been established. The mayor of the Village of Ruidoso Downs has been present at most of the Landfill Advisory Board's meeting and should have known better—that the Technical Sub-Committee made its recommendations purely on technical and not on cost considerations.

Mr. Bollschweiler "questioned if having an EID official making recommendations on a sub-committee was legitimate." The answer is "absolutely!" Both county and Municipal League litigations against the State of New Mexico in general and the Environmental Improvement Division in particular never questioned the need and validity for the new Solid Waste Management Regulations. Their value for the future of the state and Lincoln County's environment is out of question. Instead, the litigation referred to a constitutional amendment that requires the state to supply funds for the implementation of new regulations imposed on the municipalities. A technical committee is concerned with the physical, chemical, geological, hydrological factors for a new landfill to be established, and the best sources to help with such a task are those who have established the regulations and who are going to enforce them. One would think that an expert with the qualifications of Mr. Bollschweiler would know better than to question the presence of such a person with advisory function on our sub-committee. Mr. Edwards' input to this Subcommittee was of invaluable help.

The decisions made by the Technical Sub-Committee were based on technical factors which include the factor of time. When I agreed to represent the Village of Capitan on the Lincoln County Landfill Advisory Board there were two reasons for it. Due to my chairmanship of the Solid Waste Commission of the Village of Capitan and due to many years of experience of how to comply with federal and state regulations, I felt qualified to do that job. The same was true when I was asked to chair the Technical Sub-Committee of the Lincoln County Landfill Advisory Board. The second reason was that of a concerned resident of Lincoln County. I am retired from federal service, I receive no salary, honorarium or other monetary reward for this activity for the County. I am worried about the tax burden which the residents of Lincoln County will have to bear.

Sincerely,
Bernhard E. F. Reimann, Dr.
rer. nat.
Capitan

DEAR EDITOR:

I cannot think of enough words to express my thanks for the help financially, the encouragement, the concern and the love Ruidoso friends have given to me and the children.

Elmer was aware of the cards, letters and flowers sent to the hospital and enjoyed them very much.

Elmer and I have watched Ruidoso grow over the years, and it was a great pleasure for him to know he had been a part of its growth and advancement. Our thanks to each and every one from the bottom of our hearts for the sympathy and love in our time of grief.

Shrine potentate to visit here

Richard F. Taylor, Potentate of Ballut Abyad Shrine Temple, will visit the Ruidoso Shrine Club from Friday through Sunday, July 28 through July 30. He will be accompanied by several other officers and nobles of the Shrine which is headquartered in Albuquerque.

Activities planned for the visiting Shriners and their guests include a golf tournament at Cree Meadows Country Club, a visit to the Ruidoso Arts and Crafts Show, a women's luncheon and fashion show at Cree Meadows Restaurant and a visit to Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

The Potentate and his wife will host the officers and members of the Ruidoso Shrine club for refreshments at 6 p.m. Saturday, July 29, at the Ballut Abyad Hospitality Room in the Ruidoso Inn. The Potentate and his staff will meet informally with officers and members of the Ruidoso Shrine Club prior to attending a dinner meeting at 7 p.m. at the Ruidoso Inn.

Officers of the Ruidoso Shrine Club are President Gene Crossland, First Vice-President Jack Barber, Second Vice-President John Shrive, Secretary/Treasurer James Starr and Potentate's Representative, Fred Fryer.

During 1988, Ballut Abyad Temple paid for 407 trips to Shriner's Hospitals for crippled and burned children and their parents or guardians. These costs amounted to more than $157,708. This was at no cost to the parents or guardians.

Some of the medical problems eligible for treatment at Shriner's Hospitals include scoliosis, osteogenesis imperfecta, back problems, leg length discrepancies, neuromuscular problems, spina bifida, osteopetrosis, Vitamin D resistant rickets, club foot and other problems of the bones, joints and muscles.

The potentate of the New Mexico Shrine is making a special appeal to Shriners and other citizens to help locate additional children in New Mexico who need the help of the Shriner's Hospitals or burn centers. At present, there are four active cases in the Ruidoso area.

Anyone knowing of a child needing orthopedic treatment or needing plastic reconstructive or restorative surgery as a result of scarred burns is urged to contact Gene Crossland at 257-4871.

Modern Eye Care

Eye Surgeon
LENS-IMPLANT HISTORY
While lens implantation for cataract patients is a relatively common procedure today, it was unheard of forty years ago. It was only due to the misfortunes of war and some inspired thought that the idea to substitute synthetic lenses in place of cataracts was thought of at all. It was during World War II that Spitfire fighter planes came equipped with special plastic windshields. The unfortunate fact was that some windshields shattered under enemy gunfire, spraying fragments into the cockpit. Some pieces of flying plastic penetrated the eyes of pilots. However, remarkably, some of these flyers could still see after the mishap. It took the thinking of an English eye surgeon to apply this information to his own patients. In 1946, he implanted plastic lenses in the eyes of a cataract patient to create the first lens implant.
For further information, please call or schedule an appointment with your eye doctor. Dr. Delamater specializes in medical and surgical diseases of the eye. Local artist Vicki Conley says she's "gone to pots"

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Some women dream of having a career and a home life with children. Just how many women actually achieve this dream, no one knows. But, one woman from Ruidoso Downs found a way to have her cake and eat it too.

About 10 years ago, Vicki Conley took a course in pottery just for fun.

Conley, who has a master's degree in physiology, didn't believe it would ever be more than just something fun.

When her children came along, Conley said she didn't want to work while the kids were at home.

She began making pottery as something to keep her occupied. The last four or five years she has been making and selling pottery on a part-time basis. But now that her two daughters are in school, she is in the pottery business full-time.

"It was the perfect thing for me while I was raising my kids," she said. "The business has grown and I've totally dropped out of the science world and into pots."

Conley runs her business, Piñon Pottery, out of a studio adjacent to her home. She used to work in her garage when she and her husband first moved into their house.

Conley makes wheel thrown, high fired stoneware which is totally functional and designed to be used.

She has done a few decorative pieces, but mainly it is functional pieces. She makes plates, salsa containers, tortilla warmers and bowls. She said she has about 60 different items for the kitchen.

Conley said she likes working with clay because it can be made into any shape.

"Clay is real pliable, you can do any shape you want as long as it doesn't get too wet," she said.

Conley begins her creations by slamming the clay down on a table to get all the air bubbles out of it. The clay is then shaped into a pyramid and put on the wheel.

She said the key to throwing clay is control. The arms have to be braced and really still.

As the clay spins around on the wheel, Conley uses her skilled hands to shape the former hunk of clay into a piece of stoneware. She uses a pair of calipers to make sure the lids she throws will fit the bowls she has already made.

Once the proper shape has been obtained, she uses a wire to cut the piece loose from the wheel and sets it aside to dry. Any design on the stoneware is made by a rubber stamp and is placed on the piece before it dries.

She either sets the piece on a bench in her crowded studio or in the sunshine outside.

Conley said the weather has an effect on the drying process. Humidity causes the pieces to take longer to dry, she said.

"I have to really watch the weather," Conley said.

Once the piece is dry, she dips it in a lead-free glaze and fires it in a 1,750 degree bisque oven for five hours, which hardens and absorbs the glaze.

After the piece has cooled for about half a day, it is dipped in the glaze again and this time fired in a 2,350 degree glaze oven for twelve hours. This time the piece takes a whole day to cool.

The glaze she uses on her pieces is really a liquid suspension of chemicals which she mixes up like a recipe. The glaze is also what gives the color to her pieces.

Conley said she is doing almost everything in a blue color because people seem to want blue in their kitchens. She said people used to want an earthy look to kitchen, but the motif has changed back to blue. She said she still prefers the brown colors over the blues.

All around Conley's studio are pieces of stoneware in various stages of completion. The studio has shelves and a couple of benches to handle those items which are either completed, between oven fires, or are in the process of drying.

In one corner of the studio is the large oven she uses to fire her pieces. In another corner of the room is a television set.

Conley says she is a television addict. She said she does a lot of her work at night, when her children are in bed. She turns the television on to give her something to listen to when she is alone in the studio. She said she likes daytime and night-time soap opera best, because you can just listen to them and figure out what's going on.

Conley will be showing off and selling her stoneware at the Ruidoso Art Festival on July 28, 29 and 30. This is the third straight year Conley has been at the art festival.

Conley said she usually goes to art festivals all over the state between May and November.

She said being on the road is tough. She says potters have the hardest time at art shows because it takes them about four hours to set up. Conley said she takes between 12 and 24 of each item she makes to the shows.

Vicki Conley of Ruidoso Downs makes high-fired stoneware pottery at a studio adjacent to her home. Conley will be showing her stoneware at the Ruidoso Art Festival July 28, 29 and 30 at the old unicipal airport site.

Catholic youth attend a leadership seminar

"Never Gonna Be the Same" was the theme of a one-week camp at Camp Thunderbird in Mimbres, that enabled the youth participating to come back to their parishes and work as peer leaders in local youth groups.

Representing St. Eleanors Catholic Church at the Diocese of Las Cruces Summer Leadership Camp, which was offered for freshman and sophomore youth leaders, were Victor David Alonso and Jackie Cremona.

There were about 57 different youths from Catholic parishes around New Mexico.

"We were instructed in communication skills, organizing and planning," said Alonso. "The neat thing about it was the way the program was set up. The instructors only gave us the topic we had to plan, then they would walk off and let us plan whatever it was we had to plan. We had to plan various youth activities, for example, our group planned a spontaneous dance one night."

"This taught us how to plan, how to work together and how to make the plan work," Alonso said. "Other things that we did were a good morning prayer, a liturgy, a social and a good night activity. As you can see we were involved in almost every part of the programming. The way that the camp worked is that the director taught us the skills we needed to do a project and then made us do a project that tested our new skills."

"In this way they force feed us on how to be a better leader. When I returned from the camp, I felt better about my ability to communicate and my ability to lead with the ability to include everyone."

According to Father Dave Bergs, pastor of St. Eleanors, the skills the youth learned will be used in the coming high school youth program at St. Eleanors.

About 10 youth leaders will be trained to facilitate the program based on peer ministry and youth led discussion. This will enable more youth to participate in the youth program, which starts in early September at St. Eleanors.

Couple is honored on their golden anniversary

Nina and Ray Taylor were honored on their fiftieth wedding anniversary Saturday, July 22, at the Perry Ranch, near Glencoe.

The affair, hosted by the couple's children, was under a big cottonwood tree on the old Perry homestead. The honorees were presented with a yellow rose corsage and boutonniere.

Their children took turns cutting the cake and serving refreshments while Ray and Nina met and visited with their family and guests.

All their children and grandchildren except Margaret Cox and her daughter, Friday Watson of Ignacio, Texas, and granddaughters, Terry Pickett and Christie Taylor were able to attend. The youngest family member at the celebration was the couple's new great-granddaughter, Alisha Wagley.

More than 100 family members and friends attended the affair.

 The property described as Tract 2 is located at 111 Wimbeldon Road, in Ruidoso, New Mexico.
 The sale will be made pursuant to the Summary Judgment, Decree of Foreclosure, Order of Sale and Appointment of Special Master entered by the Court in this cause on June 5, 1989, which action was a suit to foreclose Promissory Notes and Mortgages held by the Plaintiff, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in its corporate capacity (FDIC-C).
 The Judgment directed foreclosure of the Mortgages on the subject real properties to satisfy the following Judgment lien:

Principal $463,357.19
 Interest to date of sale - 8/15/89 $294,006.95
 Costs $310.20
 Real estate taxes $10,574.74
 Special Master's fee $200.00
 Attorney's fee $10,000.00
 Total $778,449.08
 In addition to the sums due on the Judgment referred to herein, there will be accruing costs, together with costs of publication of the Notice, which costs of publication will be borne by the Plaintiff, FDIC-C.
 WITNESS my hand this 27th day of June, 1989.

for municipal purposes within the Village of Capitan. The Village of Capitan is presently authorized to divert 107.5 acre-feet per annum from the above described wells. Request is made to divert 16.25 acre-feet per annum under this application. The request is based on 50% efficiency of irrigation use and a historic 50% return flow for municipal purposes. Municipal consumptive use will be equivalent to irrigation requirement.

Any person, firm or corporation or other entity objecting that the granting of the application will be detrimental to the objector's water right shall have standing to file objections or protests. Any person, firm or corporation or other entity objecting that the granting of the application will be contrary to the conservation of water within the state or detrimental to the public welfare of the state and showing that the objector will be substantially and specifically affected by the granting of the application shall have standing to file objections or protests. Provided, however, that the state of New Mexico or any of its branches, agencies, departments, boards, instrumentalities or institutions, and all political subdivisions of the state and their agencies, instrumentalities and institutions shall have standing to file objections or protests. The protest or objections shall be in writing and shall set forth all protestant's or objector's reasons why the application should not be approved and must be filed, in triplicate, with S.E. Reynolds, State Engineer, P.O. Box 1717, Roswell, New Mexico, 88202, within ten (10) days after the date of the last publication of this Notice.

Ruidoso Art Festival is better than ever

"Escape the summer heat!"

The Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce invites everyone to cool off in the cool pines and see some of the best arts and crafts ever gathered in one spot.

The 18th Annual Ruidoso Arts and Crafts Festival promises to be the best ever, with more than 132 artists and artisans on hand to give demonstrations, display their wares and offer some unique items for sale.

The Art Festival is scheduled from noon to 9 p.m. Friday, July 28; from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, July 29, and from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Sunday, July 30, under the big tents on the old Ruidoso airport site just a few blocks from Midtown. Cost of the show is $2 for adults and $1 for children 12 and under.

The festival will include the works of several Ruidoso area artists, including Donna and Austin Spray of Alto, Lorene Caywood and Paul Crown of Capitan, Vicky Conley of Ruidoso Downs, Denise Dorn and Tim Wierwille of Ruidoso and Kire Cole of San Patricio.

These area artists will be among more than 132 artists and artisans chosen from among 475 applicants from Arizona, California, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah.

Media featured at the show will include oils, pastels, bronzes, wood carvings, fabrics and metal work.

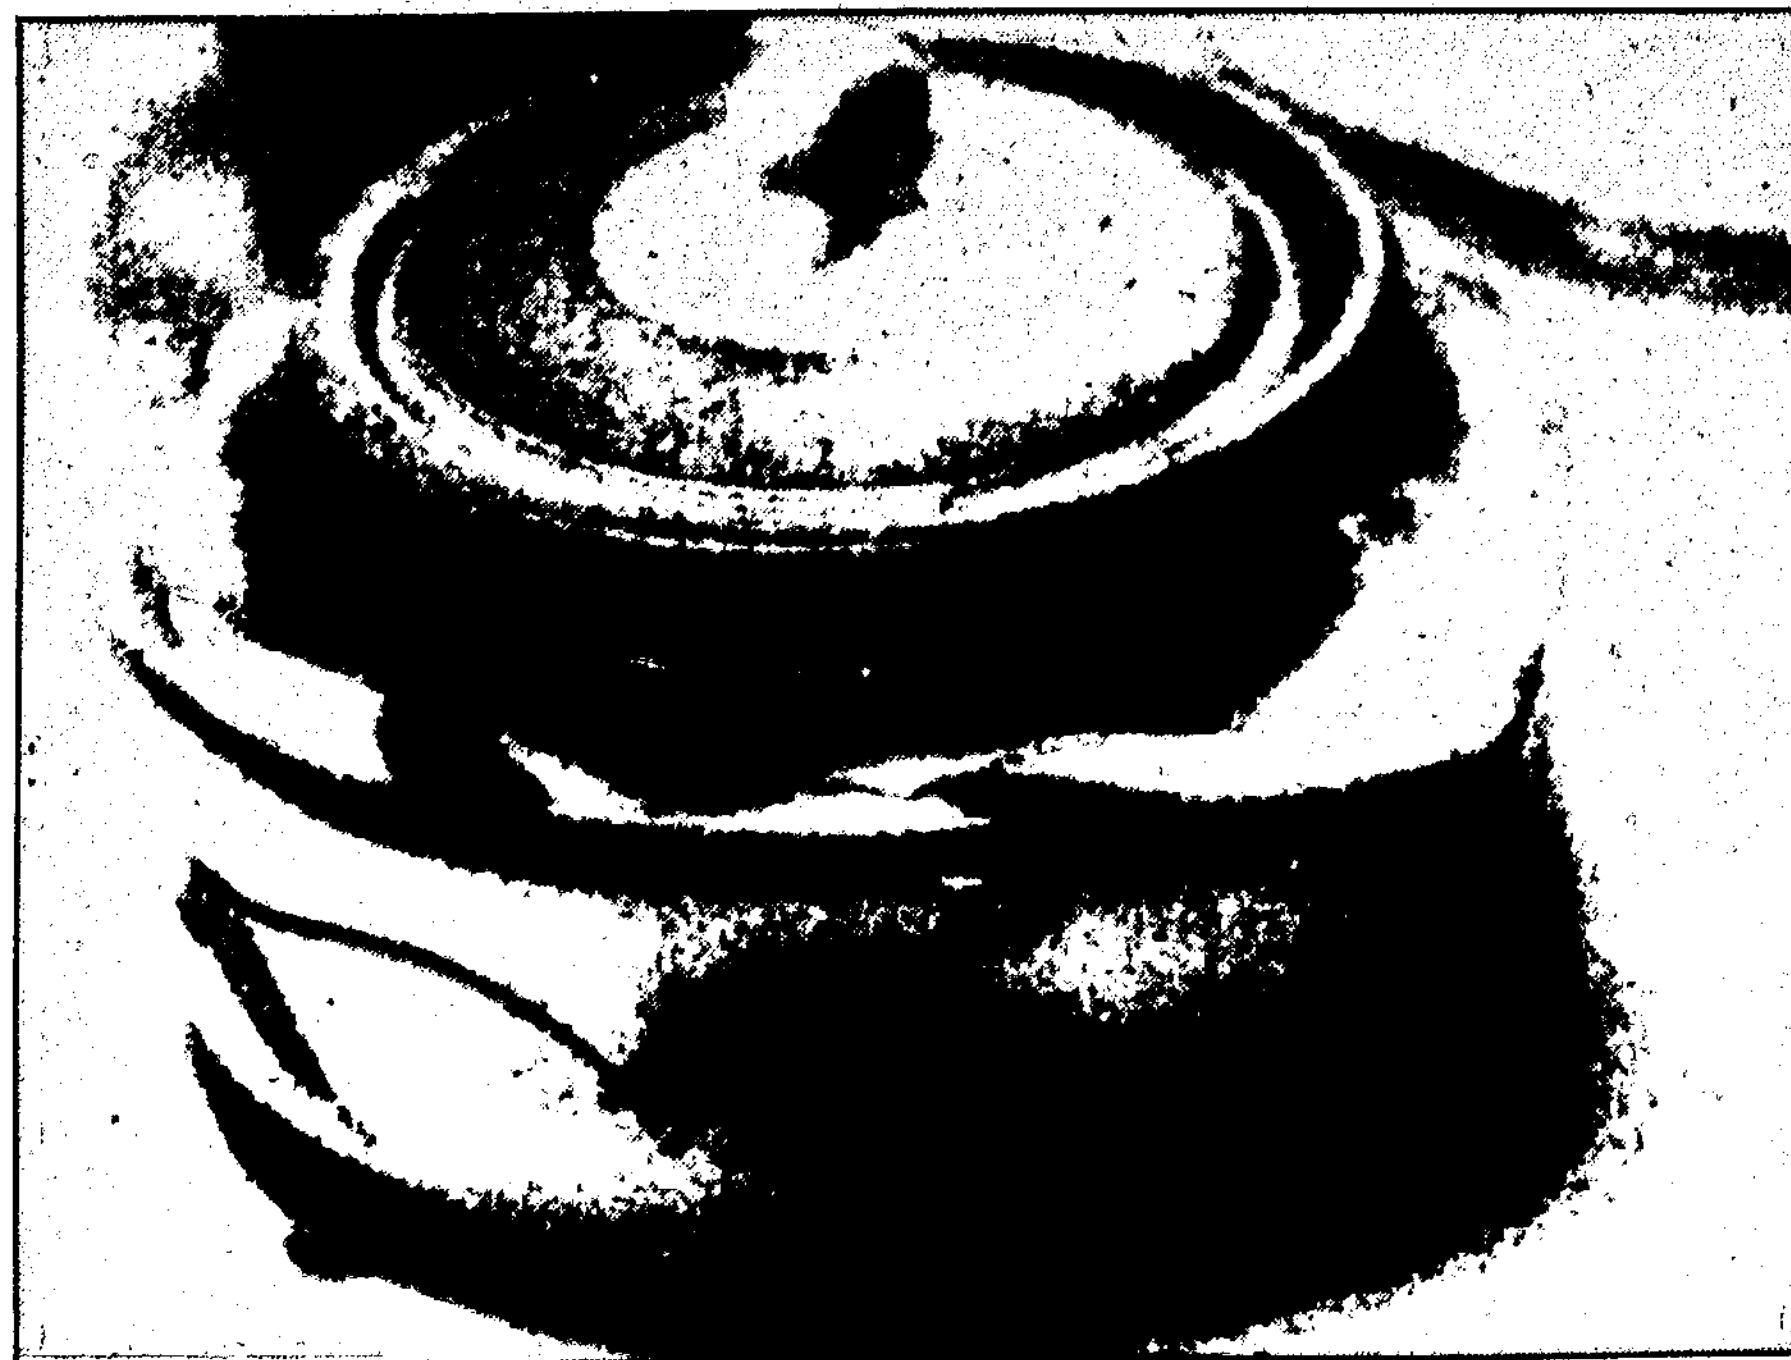

A variety of food and drink booths also will be on the site.

"The weekend is a must for all individuals and families interested in enjoying art and a relaxing vacation in the cool pines of Ruidoso," says Tracey Moran, director of the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

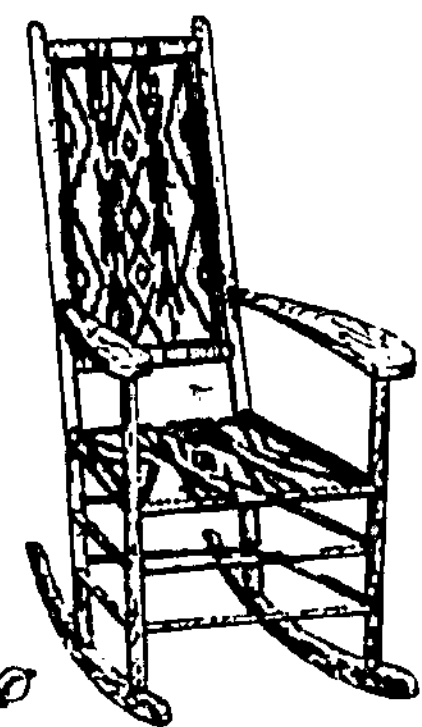

Check out the art and have fun at the Ruidoso Art Festival!

Paul Crown

From inside a plain, two-story, house in Capitan you can hear the almost constant, high-pitched, whirl of table saws, lathes, and sanders. The air inside is filled with a fine dust which settles in colors of cranberry red, purple, bright orange.

Wait a minute. Orange sawdust? That's right, because this wood shop is owned and operated by Paul Crown, who, with two full-time employees, works with exotic tropical woods to produce decorative boxes, bases for bronzes and mirror handles.

Crown, of Ruidoso, has been in the woodworking business for 15 years. His now active business began as a woodshop hobby at home when he began to make wooden toys for his daughter.

Five years ago he moved the operations into the present house in Capitan, where two full-time employees follow his design instructions and produce many of the objects for wholesale.

Some of the exotic woods used in the shop live up to their names, such as purple heart, a wood with a deep violet-red color. Another exotic, paduka, looks as though it had been stained, but has a natural orange color.

Much of Crown's production is for other area artists, producing bases for sculptures and bronzes.

His wood comes from lumber outlets in Albuquerque, where he frequently must drive to select the boards he wants, or settle for a lot of waste.

His only training was in woodshop class in high school. When he began making toys, all he had was a hand drill and a Skilsaw.

Eventually, the market became inundated with wooden, hand-made toys, forcing Crown to develop other items for sale, he said.

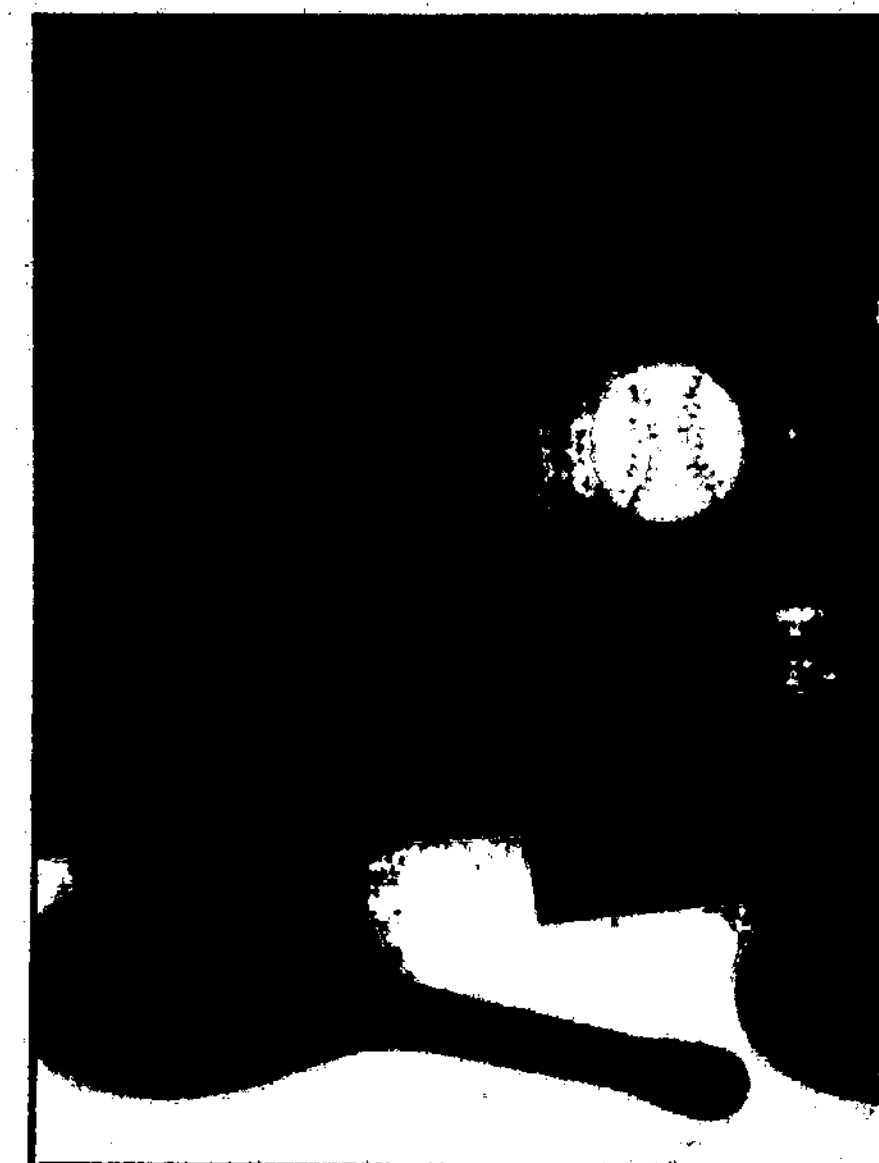

In the past he has done 50 shows a year, but now goes to only 15 to 18. He said Ruidoso's is one of his better shows.

Crown is the manager of Cablevision in Ruidoso. He is also the sole promoter of the Chili Cookoff during Aspen Fest.

He plans to have 250 to 300 pieces on display at the Art Festival, mainly the boxes and mirror handles.

Tiny Girl, tiny thought, Big girl, big thought!

Three year old stardust, Jeanette McDonald, Nelson Eddy, ballet, piano, art, Texas, voice lessons, debut 13 years old with Metropolitan Star, Tennessee, Opera, 2 children, New York, New Mexico, television, musical comedy...all of this equals Art, Music and Beauty.

My history I bring to you in brush strokes. All the music, drama, passion, color, love and intensity! Come with me and experience the joy I feel in creating these "non-pastel" visions of contemporary realism. A celebration of life!

Lorene Caywood

Sitting atop a ridge just south of Capitan, Lorene Caywood's studio and gallery has the best of both worlds.

While sitting at her work table, painting or forming the miniatures she creates to accent her oils, she can look out one window and see the Capitan Crest, or out another to see Sierra Blanca.

"It can sometimes be distracting," she said.

Lorene and her husband, Larry, form a team in the production of original oils and hand made frames. She does the oils, he the frames.

Painting for more than 20 years, Lorene's work has taken on a new approach in the last two years.

With a distinctive Southwestern flair, she paints images of original pottery designs from various pueblos, such as Acoma, or San Ildefonso. Accompanying these paintings is an inset in which a miniature clay version of the painting is placed, combining the two-dimensional with the three-dimensional with complimentary ease.

She's done a great deal of research on Southwestern Indian art, producing images true to the pueblo represented.

After cutting her own matting to make the shadow box for the miniature, her husband completes the package with a custom frame.

Without any formal training, other than a high school art class, she began painting as a hobby after her children were old enough to stay out of the paint, she said.

"I never thought I would be making a living from this when I started," she said.

Sticking primarily to oils, her work has included mountain landscapes, painting of animals such as deer, bison, and various birds, and now art of the southwestern Indian.

"I would prefer to do animals if they would sell," she said.

For this year's Art Festival, she plans on displaying approximately 100 pieces.

The studio is open when she's there, so call ahead. Custom framing of other works and prints can be done also by her husband.

Patti Fish

Patti Fish, potter, and Suzanne Sandoval, creator of "Shaman Designs" jewelry, will be sharing a booth at the Ruidoso Art Festival the last weekend of this month.

Normally the creations by these two artisans are found in the Wayside Pottery shop at the corner of Chipmunk and Swallow in Cloudcroft. Fish also creates jewelry, most of which is fired in her kiln along with her distinctive pottery.

Patti Fish has been creating pottery for seven years after she took classes at New Mexico State University and after moving to Cloudcroft 10 years ago. She found the weather a bit harsh, however, and, although her shop is in Cloudcroft, the Fish family now resides in Alamogordo.

The family consists of Patti, George and son, Alex, who is six.

Suzanne Sandoval is a native of Alamogordo. She has a studio in her home there. Her jewelry is terra-cotta with acrylic paint applied.

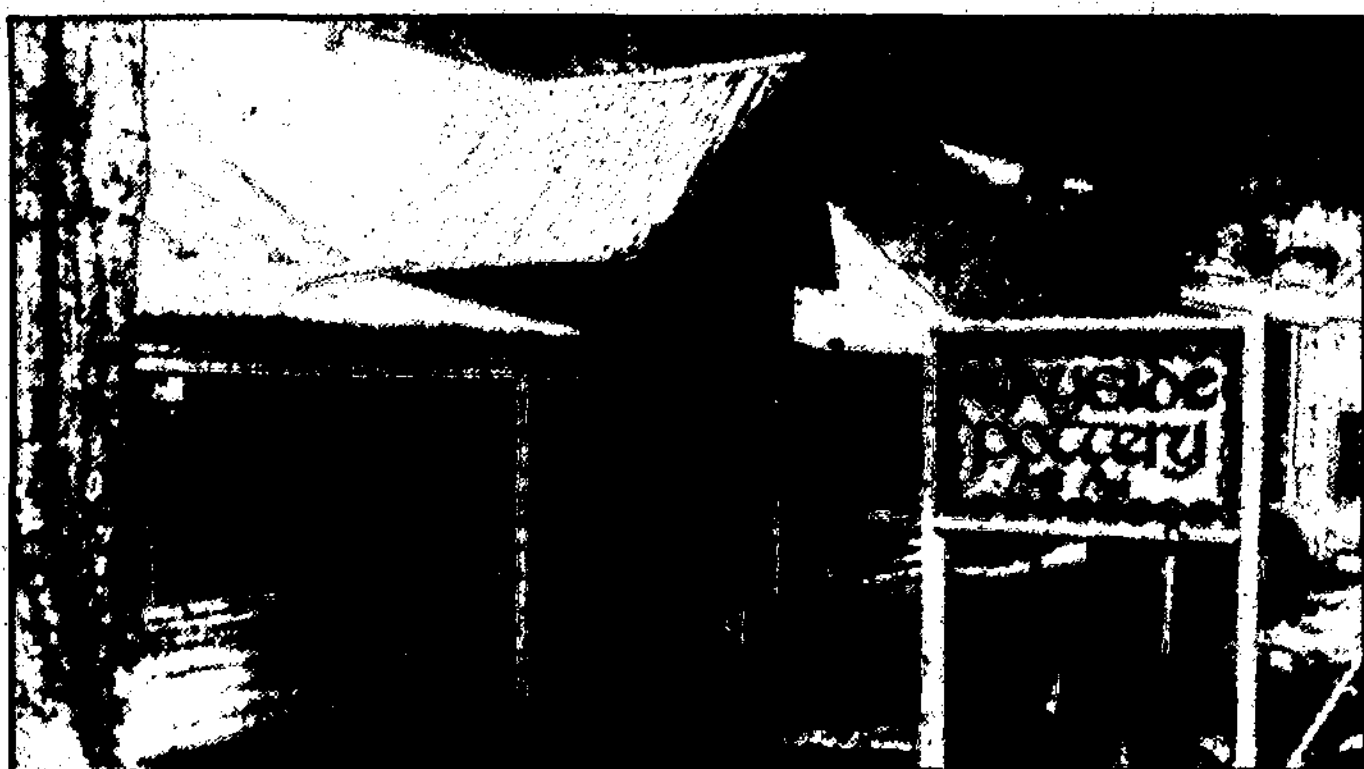

Fish says colors and decorations help make her pottery distinctive. She loves blues and lavenders. She makes all of her own glazes.

Her pots are mostly functional, like salsa bowls. Many of her pots are designed for Mexican cooking.

Fish is originally from St. Louis, Missouri, but she has been a resident of New Mexico for 14 years.

Patti Fish (above) offers her pottery for sale in her gallery, Wayside Pottery, in Cloudcroft. Fish will take part in the 18th Annual Ruidoso Art Festival July 28-30, at the old Ruidoso Municipal Airport land.

VICKI CONLEY

Vicki Conley

A lot of handmade pottery is made for decoration. But, not the wheel thrown, high fired stoneware made by Vicki Conley of Ruidoso Downs.

Conley, who will be one of the featured local artists at the Ruidoso Art Festival, July 28, 29 and 30, says her stoneware is totally functional and designed to be used.

She was not always in the pottery business. Conley, who has a masters degree in physiology, said she began having fun with pottery about 10 years ago.

She said she didn't want to work when she had children and working with clay and making pottery is the perfect thing to keep her busy while she is raising her children.

"The business has grown and I've totally dropped out of the science world and into pots," she said.

Now that her kids are in school, Conley has turned full-time to making stoneware. She runs her business, Piñon Pottery, out of a studio adjacent to her home.

She said clay is a very pliable material and easy to shape into anything as long as you don't get it too wet.

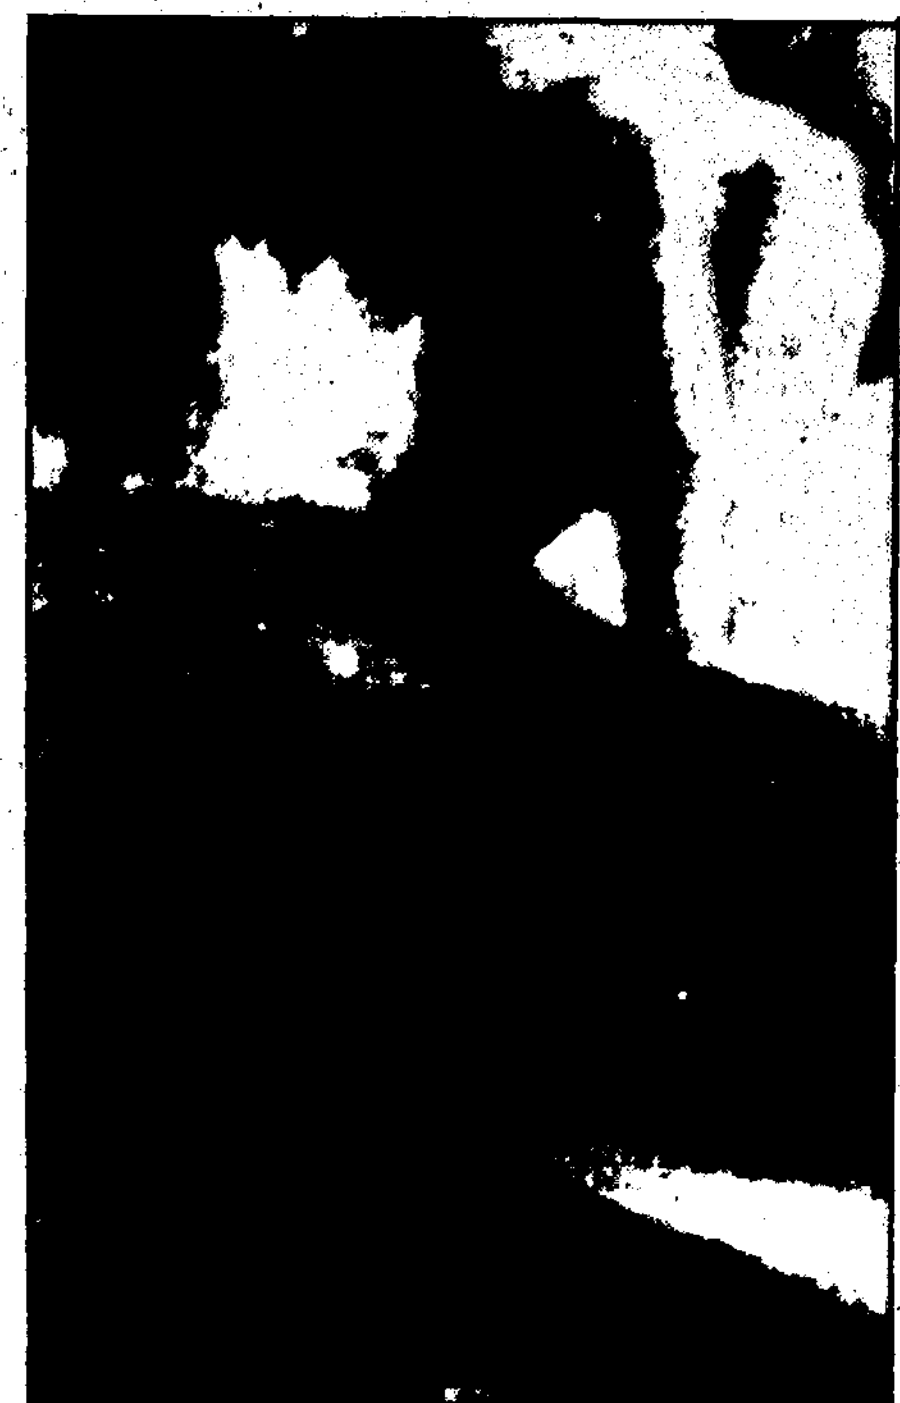

After throwing the clay, the key to which is keeping the arms braced and still for control, Conley removes the piece from the wheel and allows it to dry, either in her shop or out in the sun. Conley says she has to watch the weather because humidity has an effect on the drying time.

After the piece has dried, it is glazed and fired in a 1750 degree bisque oven for five hours. After it cools from that it is fired in a 2350 degree glaze oven for 12 hours.

Conley says the design and the glaze on her pieces are simple. She wants her pieces to be pretty, but functional. She said there is no lead in her glaze.

She has done a few decorative pieces, but mainly it is functional pieces. She makes plates, salsa containers, tortilla warmers and bowls. She said she has about 60 different items for the kitchen.

Conley uses her hands to form the shapes for her useful pottery creations.

Lynden Bear

Hickory dickory dock, Lynden Bear is a maker of clocks, hundreds of them ... and people are buying them up like crazy.

Lynden's clocks are the colors and shapes of New Mexico. His studio, a maroon red adobe on the corner of Granado and Fifth in Tularosa, is a rainbow of lamps and clocks in gray, mauve, turquoise, cream and lavender.

People tell him they are unique. He said his clock concept that evolved was a slow trial and error process.

"My designs have grown and changed a great deal since I've been here. I got a phone call from my aunt several years ago and she asked me what my new work was looking like. I told her it was Pueblo Deco, the phrase stuck. I drew on a lot of traditional Southwestern and Indian designs, but by the time a new piece comes off the drawing board, it's mine."

Bear said living in Tularosa and not Santa Fe helped in developing the designs. He feels it has prevented copying and enabled him to keep a cleaner design.

"What I do is a very spiritual thing to me. The mind can conceive perfection, but it is only through hard work that mastery of the tools and materials make possible a concrete reality even approaching the conception. The amazing thing is that when you dedicate your life to acquiring that skill, you seem to undergo some kind of tempering as well. I have a long way to go, but I think I'm on the path. The work I am doing this year seems much better to me than the work I did last year and I hope that will always be true."

Bear said it disappoints some of his customers that his work tends to change. He always tells people that if they really like a piece, not to wait and that is not marketing hype as much as his desire to progress.

Bear thinks the turning point in his art career came with the blue ribbon he won at last year's Ruidoso Art Festival. He said his phone started ringing a lot more after that show.

Bear said he credits Maurice Hobson and Mary Gillen for helping him get established in this area and who also encourage New Mexico arts.

Bear's work is also available at "Spirit Winds" in Ruidoso and at the Copper Butterfly in Cloudcroft.

Bear will not be in Tularosa long. He is making a bit of a circle. His wood working apprenticeship took place in Santa Fe some 17 years ago. He left for California because he thought it would be easier to earn a living. After living in the San Francisco Bay area for awhile he became homesick for New Mexico and moved to Tularosa. Lynden is now planning to move back to Santa Fe to be with his friends and to build more clocks.

At the old Ruidoso Municipal Airport

Joy & Roy Brown

The big wheel keeps on turning, and Joy Brown keeps on burning in her kiln, proud pieces of pottery.

Roy and Joy are Tularosa's husband and wife pottery team and you can find them almost every day working their wheels in their mini-factory a block off U.S. Highway 70.

The Browns say eight tons of clay lasts about six months, and supply barely keeps up with the demand for their pieces.

Functional, decorative, unique, distorted, square, almost any design seems possible in their artist's hands and each is made one at a time.

Joy dropped a hunk of clay on the wheel.

"First you have to center the clay," she said. "Then you start to throw or pull to start forming the piece. It's done with your fingers and at this point it's automatic because you've done so much of it. You can't believe how many pieces you've got to make in a year's time to make it profitable."

As she talked, a beautiful vase began to take shape.

"You don't want mass production," she said as she worked. "You want a one-of-a-kind quality. Money is nice, but what you do and how you do it is very important to me. Quality, not quantity. And style, something that is unique."

Roy's work involves intricate carvings and artwork on the pots. Joy's art is more brushwork and unique pot design.

Although the Browns ship the work to several vendors, the bulk of their sales comes from shows like the Ruidoso Art Festival. The shows are located in the west, Colorado, Utah, Texas and New Mexico.

"There are enough shows, 12 to 14, to schedule ourselves a year in advance," Brown said.

ROY BROWN

Brown said many of the shows require resumes and slides for a jury to either select your art or not to be in a show.

Brown said potters opt for shows rather than wholesaling because her merchandise doesn't lend itself to mass marketing.

"A potter could drive themselves crazy in a hurry if they tried to keep up with wholesaling their merchandise," she said holding up a one-of-a-kind $6 vase.

One of the hot items in her factory are clay water coolers for $45. These coolers, quite large, are built to hold five gallon water containers upside down on their lid, rimmed with a plastic insert. The coolers have several designs and colors with top of the line manufactured spigots.

Joy said before the new infant was born she would throw enough clay in a day to make two dozen pots. Now, between feedings, she still manages a dozen pots a day.

The Browns have been potters for more than 10 years. Both have taken pottery in universities and Roy has a masters degree in his craft.

SPLASH A LITTLE FUN & FASHION INTO UR LIFE

Denise Dorn

Local artist Denise Dorn will be displaying the Indonesian art form of batik at the Ruidoso Art Festival, July 28, 29 and 30.

Dorn has been creating batiks since she was in high school.

"I'm pretty much self-taught," she said. "I never took any classes in batik."

Dorn was an art major at the University of Texas at Arlington. She came to Ruidoso about 13 years ago and works out of a studio in her home.

Specializing in Southwestern scenes,

Dorn normally does Southwestern designs like chiles, adobe and Indians.

Batiks are made of fabric, with a design drawn on it, which is dipped into dyes of various colors. Portions of the fabric are waxed with a mixture of beeswax and paraffin to save the desired color underneath.

The fabrics most suitable are cottons, muslin, batiste and silk, but never synthetics.

Dorn's colorful batiks may be seen in her booth at the Ruidoso Art Festival.

TIM WIERWILLE

Tim Wierwille

Ruidoso area potter Tim Wierwille uses his artistic hands to mold a cold lump of amorphous clay into a beautiful piece of artwork that can be both admired and used.

Wierwille has been a potter in the Ruidoso area for 14 years, and he has firmly established a career in the pottery-making business.

His life as a potter fell into place when he took his first course in pottery as an elective at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

From there, he moved to Santa Fe to work as an apprentice under master potter Frank Willett for four years.

He then moved to Ruidoso in 1975, and this is where his and his family's roots are now firmly established.

Wierwille's pottery is hand-thrown. He does not use a mold, and shapes his artwork on a pottery wheel.

The pottery is then painted and glazed and fired in a kiln at 2300 degrees Fahrenheit. Wierwille added that all his pottery is lead-free.

Most of his works are grouped by designs and divided according to series.

These include his White Mountain series, Lone Star series, Aspen series and Pit Fume series.

His newest design is the Misty Mountain series. Wierwille said this design is accomplished through a color wash, similar to the effect of water-colors.

"I would call it an abstract landscape," Wierwille said. "It's very colorful."

He added that the Misty Mountain series is currently his main focus.

Wierwille said he loves the scenery around Ruidoso, noting that this area has been good to him.

"I feel fortunate to be in Ruidoso and that I can make a living here," Wierwille said.

He added that he would like to be able to give something back to the community, and he feels the best way he can do that is through donating his services to the performing arts center planned for Ruidoso.

"I am so excited about the performing arts center donated by Mrs. Spencer," Wierwille said. "I would like to give something back to Ruidoso by donating my services to the center."

ALAN DAY

Alan Day

Easterner Alan Day discovered the west and New Mexico 15 years ago when he happened to drive to Santa Fe. The High Rolls, New Mexico, potter stayed in Santa Fe five years.

Day, who has a studio tucked away in the woods just out of High Rolls in Otero County, will be showing his wares for the third straight year at the 1989 Ruidoso Art Festival at the old airport in Ruidoso, July 28, 29 and 30.

Originally from the Massachusetts and New Hampshire area, Day has been creating functional pottery off and on for 20 years. He has been firing his own pottery full-time for the past six to eight years.

Day has had the studio in High Rolls for two and a half years. He came to this area from Denver where he was associated with a pottery cooperative.

The artisan resides in Alamogordo.

Day was majoring in architecture in college, and says, "I hated it."

After taking a course in pottery making, he decided that he had found a lifetime profession.

Day sells throughout the Southwest, in Scottsdale, Arizona, Santa Fe, and Colorado Springs, Colorado, as well as in this immediate area.

It's Day's belief that the soft pinks and reds he works into his creations help make his pottery distinctive.

He calls it the "Manhattan Pueblo Style." He mixes his own stains from metallic oxide.

The pottery is fired twice, with the color added between firings.

"I stick to functional things," he said. His tortilla warmers are an example. The pottery is fired so that it can be used for cooking.

Day buys clay by the ton out of Kentucky and Tennessee, and says a ton will last two or three months.

Day has a master of fine arts degree from the University of Massachusetts and a bachelor of arts degree from the University of New Hampshire.

Day can be reached at (505) 682-3142.

Donna & Austin Spray

Jewelry designers Austin and Donna Spray spend a majority of their time collecting artifacts that have the potential to become wearable accessories.

Donna said all sorts of objects end up as jewelry pieces, such as a pair of earrings made from Egyptian coins, hand-painted beads from Peru, juniper berries and African trade beads.

"We use wood, bone, horn—anything we can make a piece of jewelry from," Donna said.

Aside from the jewelry made from "found" pieces, the Sprays use a "direct metal technique" to form many elaborate and unique shapes in their jewelry.

In either bronze, copper or nickel, the metals often take the shape of forms found in nature. Twisted, winding curlicue, shapes as well as desert cactus scenes are just a few of the one-of-a-kind pieces they make.

They use no molds and all the jewelry is made one piece at a time. An oxy-acetylene torch is used to soften the metal so it can be shaped into the desired forms.

Donna added that she and her husband enjoy traveling to different shows, although a higher demand for the jewelry has kept them near their studio to fill orders.

Owning their own business allows them to set their own hours, which Donna said she likes, but she added that they end up spending more hours at it than at a 9 to 5 job.

"We don't have to punch a clock, but we put in more hours," Donna said.

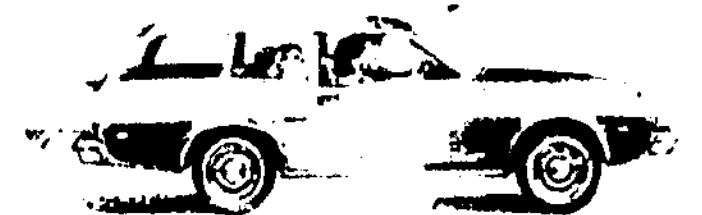

She added that their business is continuing to grow, and she and her husband have made significant improvements in the quality of work that they produce.

"We learn along the way," Donna said. "We learn something every time we sit down."

Kire Cole

Kire Cole, an artist known for her brilliantly colored large-scale oil paintings, is starting to make her move in the fashion industry.

Cole has begun incorporating her flair for color with an artistic eye for design and combining that with her fashion sense.

Ranging from boxer shorts and socks to evening attire, she paints anything from "raining chiles" to bright green prickly pear cacti.

She added that she feels the designs she does on clothing are just as much pieces of artwork as anything she does on canvas.

"I think of them as paintings on clothing because of the detail and color," Cole said. "It gets pretty involved working on some of the designs."

Cole said she enjoys painting anything that catches her eye, but a majority of her subjects have a Southwest motif.

"A lot of them are Southwest with a modern attitude," Cole said.

"The main emphasis is on color," Cole added.

Currently, she exhibits some of her clothing at Flavours Restaurant in Roswell.

Cole graduated from Southern Methodist University with a bachelor of fine arts degree in studio arts.

SAN PATRICIO ARTIST KIRE COLE

Her talents also reach into other mediums, including photography, sculpture, printmaking and drawing. Cole's main studio is the 100-year-old John Thomas Cole house located in the art-rich community of San Patricio. She plans to display both her oil paintings and her painted clothing at this year's Ruidoso Art Festival.
