Mescalero priest looks back on years at St. Joseph's Mission

by ROD MAYS

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Walking down a dark alley in Seattle on an October night while praying about an important decision, Father Larry Pebeashy suddenly was confronted by two unfriendly foes.

This was not the sign from God that he was looking for.

Father Larry was accustomed to walking down the streets of Seattle, talking to the homeless people. When a major decision was to be made he walked alone and prayed.

"I was working with people in skid row and the leader of a Catholic shelter," said Father Larry. "I had been asked to come to Mescalero and I didn't know what to say. I wanted to work with Indian people but it didn't seem to be the right time. I prayed about it and asked God for a sign."

Father Larry didn't recognize his two assailants who wanted to beat him up and maybe take his wallet. He was afraid. Suddenly an Indian fellow appeared, a big Apache named Al from White River, Arizona.

"I knew Al," Father Larry said. "And nobody messed with him. I'll never forget what he said."

Al came closer. "Leave father Larry alone, because I don't want to see your blood on the ground," he said.

The two thugs backed down and left Father Larry alone.

"How can I thank you?" Father Larry asked Al afterward. "Maybe one day you can help my people," said Al.

That was the sign Father Larry was looking for. God had spoken and he was going to Mescalero, New Mexico.

Arriving in December 1984, the new parish priest spent the Christmas season among the Crown Dancers.

Father Larry was blessed by the Crown Dancers when he first arrived. This type of blessing takes two days.

"It's hard to describe," said Father Larry. "It's an uplifting spiritual feeling." This feeling, he said, has stayed with him since that first December five years ago.

Now it's Christmas time again, five years later and Father Larry has been called by God to leave Mescalero.

"I have grown as a person and a priest," said Father Larry, when asked about his accomplishments at St. Joseph's Mission in Mescalero. He has been a Catholic priest eight years and in the Franciscan order for 15 years.

While in Mescalero, both of his parents died in Seattle. His mother died of natural causes and shortly afterward his father died also.

"I think he died of a broken heart," said Father Larry.

Recently, one of Father Larry's cousins died in Seattle. He returned from the funeral last week.

"Each time I have returned (to Mescalero), I have felt love from the people here. I have gained a family here," he said. "I have been made to feel at home."

Father Larry is moving back to Seattle to be closer to his two sisters.

Sister Juanita Little and Father Larry have been working together for the past five years in Mescalero. Sister Juanita was born in Mescalero and has centered her life around St. Joseph's Mission.

Some of the major events that Father Larry has witnessed during his five years of service, involve the Crown Dancers of the Apache tribe.

When Pope John Paul II visited Arizona two years ago, the Crown Dancers blessed the Pope and the group of 200 Native Americans.

"It was a blessing for the Indian gathering," he said.

The Crown Dancers were the only Native American dancers invited to Arizona by the National Pekakwitha Catholic Convention.

Another person that was blessed by the Apache dancers was Monsignor Paul Lenz from Washington D.C., the head of the Black and Indian Missions Bureau who had been working with Indian tribes for 15 years.

"He had never felt so spiritually moved as he did in Mescalero," said Father Larry. "We were honored."

A year ago last October, Bishop Pelotte of Gallup was blessed by the Crown Dancers. Pelotte is the first Native American bishop and the Apache dancers were also honored to bless this spiritual leader.

Father Larry will be leaving the Mission at the end of January, but said he'll continue to visit his new family in Mescalero.

"I have felt a real openness from the people. I am grateful for my stay," he said.

Inside St. Joseph's are many peaceful scenes. The descending dove and an open bible highlight a small circular room used for baptisms and prayer. The sunlight filters through many stained windows inside the church, adding to the serene environment.

Kateri Tekakwitha is the first Native American nominated for Sainthood. She was partially blinded by smallpox when she was young and therefore kept everything in a orderly fashion. Her Indian name, Tekakwitha, means, orderly. (Photos by Rod Mays)

The building of St. Joseph's Mission took the life of Brother Salesius, whose grave is pictured above, while he was unloading a huge stone from a truck. Father Larry is pictured with part of his family in Mescalero (below, from left) Todd Chico, Sister Robert Ann, Father Larry, Sister Juanita Little, Mitch Blake and Sutherland Comanche.

Celebrate Christmas mass in historic mission church

Father Larry would like to invite everybody to the Midnight Mass at St. Joseph's Mission in Mescalero this Christmas Eve.

This church celebrated its hundredth anniversary last October.

The mission was the inspiration and work of Father Albert Braun in 1916. Braun decided to construct a new church with a Gothic design while serving as an Army Chaplain in Europe. He wanted to dedicate the mission to those who had died in the war.

Starting out with little money and a couple of volunteers, Father Braun eventually completed the church in 1939.

The plans were drawn up by William Stanton, a Philadelphia architect who never saw the results of his work.

All the materials used to construct the church were native to the Mescalero area. The stone was quarried in winter four miles down the canyon near Bent. The lime was burnt in pits near the Church. The present windows were designed especially for the church and installed in 1961.

The church is 131 feet long and 64 feet wide. It is nearly 80 feet to the peak of the roof.

During the construction of St. Joseph's Mission a Franciscan brother named Salesius was killed while unloading one of the heavy stones. He had been an artillery man in World War I, fighting for the German army. It's ironic he died while building a church for the people he had once fought against.

The grave of Salesius is outside the church near the flower beds.

The unique beauty of the church envisioned by Father Albert is alive today in Mescalero. Its peaceful appearance will remain unchanged for many Midnight Masses to come.

P&Z delays action on carport variance

by BRIAN BLALOCK

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission met Monday and approved one variance and tabled another.

The commission tabled a request by James W. Cox for a front and side yard variance at 113 Perk Drive. The variance was for a carport addition.

Planning administrator Cleatus Richards said the open carport had been constructed without site development approval or a building permit. He said the building inspector had red tagged the carport on November 20, because the construction was deficient due to over-spanning of the roof support members and inadequate pier size.

Jean Temple, representing her father, Gene Woods, who owns the adjacent lot, spoke before the commission and said he was against the variance because it would place the carport too close to the property line.

She said the lot next to the subject property is currently vacant, but her father does have plans to build a home on it in the future. She stated he had said if the commission grants a variance to the subject property, it should grant him one as well.

Commissioner David Harding said he had a problem approving something which had been constructed improperly to begin with.

Commissioners also expressed concern because the carport was constructed without a building permit.

In the end, the commission tabled the issue until its January 15 meeting to allow time for the property owners to try and reach an agreement. P&Z also said if the applicant does not bring the carport into compliance with building code standards, it might have to be torn down.

In another action, the commission unanimously approved a request by I.G. Jordan for a front variance at 200 Sarah Lane. The variance will allow the applicant to cover an existing eight foot, four inch by 32 foot, two inch deck.

In his staff report to the Commission, Richards reviewed recent Village Council actions regarding the initial zoning of Wingfield Park and the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, the Airport Hazard Zoning Regulations, and the rezoning of two properties.

Richards also told the commissioners he had received notice that the flood hazard zoning regulations, governing flood control, will soon be requiring mandatory amendments prescribed by the Federal government. He said he will be working on those amendments.

Monday's meeting was the first meeting back for former commissioner Candace Garrett, who was appointed by Mayor Lloyd L. Davis Jr. to fill the position of Shirley Atwood, who resigned.

"I'll promote every holiday, if I can figure out how to do it," he said.

Next door to Chadwell, Gloria Montes, of Gloria's Wigwam, said Santa has helped her business, too.

"He's been a wonderful Santa," Montes said. "It has helped business and it's been wonderful."

As he walks along the sidewalk, Gomez cheerfully waves at every passing motorist. The motorists in turn honk their horns and wave back.

Gomez said he is surprised at the number of people who wave back. He said not only do the nice looking people wave, but the tough looking people as well. It seems everyone can have the Christmas spirit, he said. It's the reaction on the people's faces that Gomez says makes his job special.

"I like to see that smile on their face," he said. "I guess I just brighten their holiday."

He says he has enjoyed his seasonal job and thinks he might like to do it again next year.

"I'd enjoy it," he said. "I really would."

So as you drive through Midtown the next couple of days, look for Santa Claus and wave. He'll be waving at you.

Not only does Gomez wave at passing motorist, but he also welcomes visitors to the Midtown area. His employer, Dave Chadwell, says Gomez speaks Spanish and is able to greet visitors from Mexico.

Life is sweet for the county manager

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Nick Pappas has had a sweet life, and it all started with moonshine at the turn of the century.

For four years, Pappas was a purveyor of homemade candy. He learned the trade from his father who made the sweet stuff in Raton, where the younger Pappas grew up.

"I probably had the greatest childhood anyone could ask for," he said, reminiscing about the days as a young boy working in his father's shop.

But what has all this got to do with moonshine? Read on.

In 1912, Pappas' father, a Greek immigrant, came to northern New Mexico to work in the coal mines.

His complete name was Dimitrios Papadomanolakis, but the mine foreman decided that was too long for the ledger and shortened the name to its present form. The first name was also tossed for the simpler name, Jim.

It was very hard work in the mines, and dangerous. Some of the elder Pappas' friends died in mining accidents, so one day he tossed a lump of coal over his shoulder and vowed never to return to the mines.

Although there were not many jobs being offered at the time,

Dimitrios had one excellent reputation in the area.

"He knew how to make the best moonshine," said Pappas.

Dimitrios purchased some goats and herded them at an area cave where in the back were the stills. The sheriff paid him a visit one day and arrested him, but not for moonshining. Turned out Dimitrios received a draft notice for World War I, but because he couldn't read English, he tossed it. Uncle Sam decided he needed to serve anyway.

After the war, Dimitrios returned to set up another moonshine operation and as his new front he started the Busy Bee Restaurant. The Feds discovered the operation and Dimitrios this time spent a stint in jail.

He was still looking for the perfect front for another moonshine business after he got out of jail, and with another Greek man, Dimitrios set up a candy shop. But the elder Pappas discovered he enjoyed candy making more than making shine. In 1923, Pappas Sweet Shoppe was established in Raton.

The younger Pappas grew up working in the shop among the smells of peppermint, chocolate, and butterscotch. Residents in the town would come by to watch the candy made and to just hang out and socialize.

After Nick went out on his own, he continued candy making as a hobby, but professionally he spent the next 18 to 19 years working in government.

When his father died he inherited many of the large copper kettles used in the process, as well as other items. Then on July 1, 1983, the second Pappas Sweet Shoppe came into being in Roswell. "We could almost make anything," said Pappas.

School groups came to the shop to watch the process, and Pappas also taught classes in candy making at Eastern New Mexico University in Roswell. He also made one Christmas more interesting for a group of little girls who visited to watch him make candy canes.

At one time, Pappas was on the board of directors for the Girls Club and for an activity two days before Christmas, he instructed a group of young girls in the fine art of candy cane making.

During the process one girl innocently asked Pappas for his name.

"You can call me Nick," said the rotund and jolly gentleman.

The group of girls became a little bit quieter.

"Where do you live?" the little girl asked.

"Oh, I live up north," Pappas replied quickly and matter-of-factly.

There was silence in the room.

"You got them now, Nick," someone else in the room said.

"I suddenly realized what these little girls were thinking and so I went along with it," said Pappas.

He then went on to explain to the girls how he worked all year long to make candy canes so there would be enough at Christmas time. After all, he had a lot of orders to fill.

"I never let on."

Pappas still receives inquiries from other candy makers about special problems and possible solutions. And visitors to his office in Carrizozo will find a candy jar generally full on his desk.

"There's something very special about the gift of candy," said Pappas.

Sheriff charges man with assault

A Carrizozo man was arrested and remains in custody after threatening two sheriff's deputies with a loaded rifle.

Jimmy Means was arrested December 13, and charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon on two sheriff's deputies who came to his residence to investigate a domestic dispute, said Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane.

Means is still in custody held on $100,000 bond for the incident when he pointed a loaded and cocked 30.30 rifle into the stomach of deputy Gilbert Archuleta.

Deputy Connie Hopper was also present during the incident.

Means voluntarily surrendered his weapon after a lengthy confrontation with the deputies present.

The Lincoln County Sheriff's Department is still investigating three unsolved murders, but will not ignore other criminal activity for the sake of solving these murders, said McSwane.

Ruidoso Downs Mayor Jake Harris asked The News last week why the sheriff's department was busy serving search warrants and serving criminal complaints for illegal dumping of garbage when there were three unsolved murders in the county.

"We will continue to investigate other crimes that are presently occurring," said McSwane.

Three juveniles will be referred to the Juvenile Probation Office in connection with a series of burglaries in the Alto area.

Many of the burglaries involved stolen weapons, as well as VCRs, stereo equipment, and other household items, said McSwane.

Most of the stolen property was recovered, but other burglaries in the Alto area are still under investigation.

In other Sheriff's Department activities:

December 15—Broken windows on a car were reported at mile marker 18 on Highway 48.

December 16—At 12:40 p.m. a pistol was reported stolen from a residence in Carrizozo.

December 16—A breaking and entering that occurred in the Carrizozo Canyon area is being investigated.

December 16—A burglary was reported in Corona. The Sheriff's Department is investigating the incident which also involves larceny and criminal damage to property.

December 16—Raymond Montano, 26, was arrested on one charge of assault and one charge of aggravated assault at the adult trailer park next to the Elks Lodge. He was held on $25,000 bond with 10 percent allowed, and was bonded out on Monday, December 18.

December 16—A fight at the Rodeo Bar was reported at 10:34 p.m. The Sheriff's Department and the State Police responded. An estimated 25 people were involved in the fracas. Police authorities closed the bar at 11:25 p.m.

The Silver Lining

by Daniel Agnew Storm

An Early Visit From Santa Claus

On the afternoon of December seventeen Santa Claus came across the creek with three of his elves, and brought a Christmas blessing to me and the Storm Ranch cat, Corrina.

Santa in full bright crimson uniform with bells on his black snow boots, was Wayne Ward, and his Elves were his wife, Marilyn, and sons, Casey and Matt. Marilyn brought homemade rolls and bread and other Christmas goodies. It was a beautiful day and we had a fine visit. And the Santa and his elves went on their way to bring happiness to other homes. This beloved family carry out the old-time Christmas tradition of house-to-house visits and I will always remember this visit by Santa and his elves. This reminds me of the days when Dr. Lynn Willard and his wife, Donna, and sons, Cody and Lance, would go from house to house singing Christmas carols. Last year Dean Brewer and his wife, Jackie, and son, Roper, and daughter, Tracey, paid me a Christmas visit bringing presents, and we were happy as the piñon fire glowed brightly in the fireplace.

Our Postal Service

Our father used to say, "The post office is always a pleasant place." How right he was. With the Christmas cards coming in from all directions, the thought comes to you of what a wonderful thing our postal service really is. Just to think for twenty-five cents you can send a Christmas greeting to any place in this wide world.

And the folks at the post offices are helpful and cheerful always. Scotty Grantham at the Ruidoso Downs Post Office told me the other day that they are having open house there on the 19th of December.

The Glencoe Post office is always a pleasant place, especially this time of year with Della Bonnell, the true spirit of Christmas, with her red hair and smiling eyes of green.

Let us all wish a happy Christmas to the postal workers of America.

"El Nacimiento"

(The Nativity Scene)

Last time we had a few words about the early New Mexico custom of the Luminarios or "Lighters of the Way."

The Christmas custom of "El Nacimiento" or the Nativity Scene, or the Manger Scene—goes away back through Spain into the earliest Christian times.

In pioneer and colonial New Mexico this took many forms. Sometimes the scene was formed by the replica of a stable with real sheep of goats and cows with people representing Joseph, Mary and the Christ Child. Or figures carved out of wood or fashioned from clay would be out in the night lighted by pine torches under a shelter of pine of piñon poles.

Often the sacred group could be seen in a cave dug out of a clay bank by the wayside, or in a small cave up on the side of a hill lighted by candles.

A Manger Scene Cedar Branches

Some forty years ago, my friend, Elfege Polaco, a native of San Patricio, now living in Tularosa, was looking at some small figures of Mary, Joseph and the Christ Child belonging to our Mother, and he said to her:

"I will make you a Nacimiento for these 'figueritas' and you can put it in the church."

A few days later he brought a little arched shelter made of Cedar branches, bent and twined and woven together. We placed this little evergreen round topped rustic stable in the Church of Saint Anne, and placed the sacred little figures inside, with a small light bulb for a star.

Elfege said, "you must get some small animals for this nacimiento, sheep, cows, goats, burros and a rooster; because the animals are sacred in the eyes of God because they welcomed Joseph and Mary into their stable when the people turned them away. And these animals warmed the new-born Christ child with their breath.

Every year I make one of these same little shelters and place the figures inside. And our Mother's spirit visits me from Heaven, as we both say a prayer of thanks to God. And I think of Elfege and his words about the sacred animals, and pray he will have a happy Christmas.

Right now I am thinking of Randy Basch and Sundry Propsner and the animal under their care at the Humane Society. As a child I read a story of a kitten who wanted to be a Christmas present. There are lovable little creatures at the Humane Society who would make wonderful Christmas gifts.

Merry Christmas

The next paper will come out on the twenty-sixth, so I am sending you my wish that you have a blessed Christmas.

Let the blessing of our Infant Saviour abide with us all in this world and with our loved ones in Heaven.

Hammontre accuses Capitan trustees of acting illegally

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Thomas Hammontre wonders if the Village of Capitan was in violation of the Open Meetings Act when his job was eliminated.

The Capitan Board of Trustees announced after a closed session during the November regular meeting that the position of junior police officer was eliminated because of budgetary matters.

Hammontre and a number of Capitan residents were at the December meeting of the trustees to question village representatives about the decision.

Public meetings may be closed for limited personnel matters that include hiring, promotion, demotion, dismissal, assignment, resignations, or the investigation or consideration of complaints or charges against any public employee, according to information provided by the New Mexico Attorney General's office.

Also, when discussions in a closed session involve a particular public employee, that employee can demand a public hearing and any final action must be taken during open session, according to that Open Meetings Act.

Because the position of junior police officer was eliminated for budgetary reasons and, therefore, a particular employee was not dismissed or terminated, Hammontre believes the closed session was illegal.

Budgetary matters have been a topic of discussion for a long period of time, said Capitan Mayor Benny Coker.

The village staff reviewed the number of calls requesting police assistance and also reviewed the number of law enforcement personnel living in the Capitan area, said Coker.

The trustees concluded with the number of other law officers living in the area, the number of calls did not warrant two full-time police positions.

"It was not Tom's performance," said Coker. "You start looking at your budget and see where the red lights are."

But Hammontre doesn't believe that explanation is reasonable.

Capitan's budget was approved by the state Department of Finance Administration (DFA) for the entire fiscal year, and was accepted by the trustees in July.

"The State of New Mexico does not approve a budget unless the money is there," said Hammontre.

If budget was such a concern, Hammontre also wonders why the village purchased two 1989 model year police vehicles.

Hammontre began working for the Village of Capitan as the junior police officer on August 1, 1984. He was commissioned as a police officer in 1976, he said.

Many residents in Capitan, and other public officials, are concerned that the quality of police service in Capitan will suffer with only one officer available for routine patrols.

"It dilutes the level of service throughout the community," said Capitan Municipal Schools superintendent Scott Childress. "All hours of the day cannot be covered by one officer."

"They've lost an active patrol," said Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane.

Capitan will also lose personal service that will not be as readily available with one village officer, said McSwane.

"I honestly feel Capitan would be better off with two officers," he said.

McSwane said the Sheriff's Department will be available to respond to emergency calls, but limited manpower prohibits routine patrol of the village by deputies.

"I only have 11 available for active patrolling in the entire county," said McSwane.

An attorney representing Hammontre contacted village attorney Don Dutton, although no suits have been filed at this time, said Dutton.

"I feel the action the council took is proper and legal for the situation," said Dutton.

Any person can apply to a state district court for an injunction or other appropriate order whenever the Open Meetings Act is believed to have been violated.

Violations may also be reported to the Attorney General's office for investigation.

If the Open Meetings Act is discovered to have been violated, any action taken by a group in the violation can be invalidated. In addition, the group responsible for the violation can be charged with a misdemeanor and fined for up to $500.

With deepest appreciation for your friendship and

SPORTS RAP

By Rod Mays

At every Ruidoso High School varsity football game and at most varsity sporting events you'll notice a certain group of leaders. Their presence seems to fade from your memory after the game but these sideline heroes reappear again at the next sporting event.

The same type of individuals are also found in professional sports, and most noticeable at NFL games. Sometimes the camera must back away from these professional leaders because of their alarming fashion wear.

Well, if you haven't guessed which leaders I'm talking about, I'll give you a hint. At RHS they are all female.

Of course, you guessed it, the cheerleaders! These young ladies are very dedicated and deserve recognition for their efforts. It may be impossible to imagine no RHS fans showing up for a sporting event, but if this ever happened the team would still have a reliable and heartwarming bunch of cheerleaders singing victory songs on the sidelines.

The names of these girls are:

Roberta Montoya
Lori Swalander
Kristi Good
Julie De Angelo
Charmaine Rue
Sophia Orasco
Amy Sayner

I'm sure you'll be seeing these yellors of the blue and gold at the next sporting event. Try to remember them during and after the game.

Thank you, RHS cheerleaders! You have done a great job this year and I'm sure you'll continue jumping to the cheerleading beat for many sporting events to come.

It's Christmas and the 1980s are nearly over. The holiday tradition in America involves sports on the TV, food, family and friends. It's the time of year for giving. The Yuletide tradition is centered around many things, but being a "good sport" is also a part of this season.

What do I mean?

The idea of a sport, no matter what kind, involves either winning or losing. During my time spent in high school sports, the coach told us to be good sports, especially after a loss, that was when we had to go and shake hands with the opposing team. Believe me, when I shook hands with someone that just beat me, I wasn't sincere. But when I shook hands with someone that I just beat, I FELT sincere, smiling all the time. Maybe I wasn't honest with myself in either case, but the coach still tried to make us "good sports."

I still notice these gestures of good sportsmanship in high school sports. A few times I witnessed Ruidoso High School football players helping opposing teammates up from the ground. I'm sure there have been other moments of goodwill shown by the members of the RHS athletic teams, and I'm sure the coaches are still teaching the players about the merits of good sportsmanship.

However, the competitive spirit of high school, college and professional athletes is hard to control. Sometimes we see athletes being over aggressive, maiming opponents and themselves. Occasionally I find myself wondering why a basketball player would punch an opponent in the face or why a football player celebrates after severely injuring an opposing team mate.

Is this good sportsmanship?

Being over aggressive has always degraded competitive sports. Not thinking of the consequences and running head-on into anything that moves is a dumb thing to do, but many athletes continue to play in this fashion.

It's hard to see, but there are also moments when opponents congratulate each other sincerely. I've seen it happen.

A "good sport" congratulates a competitor after an outstanding play, even if his team is losing. A slap on the backside of an opponent is not saying, "Hey, I give up, you win," but "Hey, you beat me that time and that's something to be proud of."

Individual sports, like tennis, are a little different but good and bad sports are also noticed. Screaming at the referee and blaming the loss on anybody but yourself is the easiest way out of a defeat. Remembering young Jimmy Connors or John McEnroe brings back scenes of spoiled children. Banging tennis rackets on the ground and arguing with linesmen is not good sportsmanship.

All of this sport talk might seem far away from the meaning of Christmas, but it's not.

It's hard for me to give someone a gift after I have been disheartened by them. Whether or not the other person has been naughty or nice to me should not matter. Forgetting all the differences between me and another person is sometimes difficult. But, if I can give with the spirit of good sportsmanship then I have overcome my own worst enemy, myself.

Try and notice a few good sportsmen on the TV this Christmas and watch for this same attitude on the RHS athletic teams. You might be surprised at all the good things that you see.

Merry Christmas.

Girls fall to Portales

by Rod Mays

Ruidoso News Sports Writer

The girls basketball team had its hands full with the team from Portales Saturday night, losing the contest, 45-29, while, at moments, controlled the game.

"We got in foul trouble early and weren't hitting our shots," said head coach Jody Hopkins. "We also weren't handling the boards," she added.

The girls shot only 14 percent for the game, but kept Portales from controlling the entire game. Ardena Comanche and DeAnna Swanner started up the Warriors, making two hoops each. Those were the only points scored in the first quarter by the Warriors.

The Ramettes scored 11 points and had a seven-point lead. During the second quarter, Ruidoso came back to earn nine points, but trailed 25-13 at the end of the first half.

The Warriors built up momentum toward the end of the first half but couldn't hit the hoop in the last two quarters of play and were slowly defeated.

Hopkins believes the Warrior defense has done a good job during the past two games and feels her team will come around. They have a 3-5 record.

Here are the points scored by each Warrior during the contest:

Rosie Shanta, 10
Jennifer Parker, 2
Ardena Comanche, 6
Candace Muniz, 2
DeAnna Swanner, 5
Diana McMasters, 4

Leading rebounder was Amy Wishard with seven defensive rebounds and one offensive rebound.

The Warriors play Goddard next January 2, in Roswell. Go Warriors!

Candace Muniz battles her way through the tough Portales defense toward the basket Saturday night. The Warriors had a hard time penetrating the Ramette defense and lost the contest.

DeAnna Swanner tries to pass inside to team mate Jennifer Parker. Swanner was held to only five points while Parker had only two points for the evening. The Warriors next game is against Goddard on January 2.

May the joys of Christmas inspire you with new and happy experiences. We appreciate the opportunity to know and serve you.

All American Gold Cup opens to four year olds

In a move designed to increase the racing opportunities for older horses Ruidoso Downs has announced that starting in 1994 the Grade I All American Gold Cup will be open to four-year-olds and up.

In all previous years, the All American Gold Cup has been limited to only four-year-olds, but beginning with the foals of 1989 who are nominated in January to the All American program, the race will be open to four-year-olds and up.

The All American Gold Cup is the major race for older Quarter Horses at Ruidoso Downs during the summer racing season. The race has been won by such major stakes runners as Dasha Dream, Dashing-ly, Heavenly and the 1989 winner, Dash For Speed.

The All American Gold Cup is still limited to horses who have stayed eligible for the All American Futurity and the All American Derby. Nominations for the 1991 All American Futurity will close on January 15.

"We feel that opening up the Gold Cup to four-year-olds and up will not only add a great deal to the All American program, it will also be a big step towards giving the older stars in racing a reason to stay on the track," said Ruidoso Downs General Manager Rick Henson.

"We plan on following the same program with the Rainbow Silver Cup and when you combine these two races with the World's Championship Classic, we think it will give Ruidoso Downs the strongest older horse stakes program in the sport."

At the same time the change in the All American Gold Cup was announced, Ruidoso Downs also announced a change in the All American Futurity program which allocates far more money in the form of nominator awards.

Starting with the 1991 All American Futurity, not only will the top three finishers in the All American Futurity receive nominator awards, but the nominator of any horse who makes the finals or one of the consolation will also receive awards.

Lighting contest winners are named by Ladies Auxiliary

Don and Lavina Reba, who live on U.S. Highway 70, number 10, are winners of the lighting and decorating contest sponsored by the Ruidoso Downs Ladies Auxiliary. Second place went to Andy and Virginia Miller of Parnell Street, who were helped by Pancho McTeigue and Corina and Dean Silva. Jesus and Joanne Vasquez of 216 Griffith were third, with honorable mentions to Susan Allen, Sally Rue, Harold and Juelin Rushing, and Mom's Kitchen.

Tour guides available

The 1990 New Mexico Vacation Guide is bigger and better than ever, according to the New Mexico Tourism & Travel Division.

The lead photograph in the guide is of Bonito Lake in Lincoln County.

Gracing the cover of the 152-page tourism promotion publication is young Kinsey Eddakie, a Turkey Dancer from Zuni Pueblo.

Amid the 90 color photographs in the 1990 edition are 19 sections of information. Two of them, recommended reading and emergency phone numbers, are new.

The most noticeable improvement is the chronological list of almost 540 events in 1990. In recent years, the annual guides had divided the events into geographical regions. The single calendar returns to the simpler format of earlier guides.

For a free copy of the guide, contact the New Mexico Tourism & Travel Division ED&TD, Room 751, Joseph M. Montoya Bldg., 1100 St. Francis Drive, Santa Fe, New Mexico, 87503 (505)827-0291. From out of state, call the office toll-free (800)545-2040.

A great party!

Letters to the editor

DEAR EDITOR:

Keep Christ in Christmas.
So often people are caught up in the spirit of the season; rushing to get a parking spot at the mall. The long wait in shopping lines, wondering what to get that special person; and in this preoccupation we tend to forget the true meaning of Christmas, the Birth of Christ.
We need to remind ourselves, our families and friends of this true meaning. One simple way that everyone could do this is the next time you buy postage stamps ask for the Madonna and Child version and use them to mail your cards and gifts.
Another way to celebrate the birth of Our Savior is by fulfilling the needs of others, the underprivileged children, the sick, the elderly, the homeless and the handicapped.

This is the time to thank God that Christmas is here again and to remind ourselves that it's not what you're going to get out of life that is important... it's what you are going to give to life.

The members of Father E. Dolan council of the Knights of Columbus at St. Eleanor's extend wishes to all for a blessed Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

DEAR EDITOR:

We want to thank all of our wonderful friends for attending our 70th Wedding Anniversary reception and helping make it such a beautiful occasion.
Also want to wish you a very Merry Christmas and a bright and Happy New Year.

May God bless each of you.
Very sincerely,

Capitan

DEAR EDITOR:

I am writing in response to a situation now present in Capitan. As of November 15, 1989, one of two Village of Capitan Police Department positions was done away with. At the Village Council meeting of December 11, 1989, it was explained that this move had been contemplated for several months before the action was taken, although the officer involved was only notified on the effective date.

Reasons given by council members pertained to evaluation of number of citations, number of calls received, and time spent on duty with the primary consideration being placed on being able to utilize these funds for something the village of Capitan really needs, such as a new sewer system or replacement of waterlines.

Justification for doing away with this position at this time was on the basis of having Lincoln County law enforcement officers and a State Police officer living in the Village of Capitan limits who could help out with law enforcement duties. These officers would be more than willing to help out when called for specific reasons, but their primary responsibilities lie outside the village limits of Capitan. The one remaining Capitan officer cannot be expected to work or even be on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

People of Capitan, can you place a value on peace of mind, on seeing a police vehicle patrolling your neighborhood at all hours, on having a response time to your call for assistance not being determined by whether or not someone is nearby and available? The list could go on and on, but it is up to you, as citizens of Capitan, to let your feelings and desires be known to village council members, who have indicated they would like your input.

Please don't sit back and do nothing. Let your views be known. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Jim Wright

Reporter's Round

By Brian Blalock

Well folks, just a few more days are left before all the excitement and hoopla of Christmas is over.

The days before Christmas have to be some of the most stressful days in the year, surpassed only by the days before April 15.

During the Christmas season, even the most simple tasks can produce enough stress to cause a few extra gray hairs to sprout and a few new wrinkles to show up.

Let me give you a couple of examples of what I mean.

This year, I brought home a beautiful seven-foot tall Christmas tree. I thought it would look great in our living room.

My troubles began when Melodee and I tried to put the tree in our Christmas tree stand. After shaving the base of the tree to make it fit, we took it into the house and stood it in the corner. It immediately fell over on top of one of the cats. The stand was too small for the tree, and was now all bent out of shape. We tried wooden blocks, rocks and everything in the kitchen to get the tree to stand straight. Melodee even suggested getting a string and tying it off to a hook in the ceiling. Despite everything, the tree stood firm and refused to stand up. The ultimate solution to our problem ended up being to go down to the store and purchase a heavier stand. I was so frustrated by this point, I permanently fixed the old bent stand with a swift downward motion of my foot.

Having finally gotten the tree to stand right, the next project was to put the lights on it. Don't you hate those tiny twinkling lights. I mean one burnt out light can keep the whole string from working. Of course, you have to spend an hour pulling every bulb on the string out and replacing it with a new one until you uncover that one pesky light which caused all your problems.

After the lights are on the tree, comes the usual stupid fight between couples about where certain ornaments go. This usually starts when one person sits on the couch, points and says, "You need to put one over there." This is always followed by the comment, "You want to know where you can put this ornament?"

Last year, Melodee and I gave up putting icicles on our tree. Melodee liked to carefully place each individual icicle on a branch of the tree. I preferred the old wind-up and pitch method of putting them on.

Throughout the whole process of putting up the tree, the cats were looking at us like we were idiots. Look at it from a cat's perspective, here these two humans are re-arranging the furniture to put a lighted bush in the living room. Oh well, the cats didn't think it was that bad when they discovered they could lie on their backs and bat the ornaments on the lower branches around like a boxer hitting a punching bag.

Undoubtedly, one of the most stressful and time consuming parts about Christmas is Christmas shopping.

Shopping in Ruidoso is not very stressful, it's nice to shop in the quiet surroundings of our small village. However, Melodee's Dillard's card was burning a hole in her purse.

So this past weekend, Melodee and I ventured into the most ferocious of territories at Christmas time: a shopping mall.

We got there in the morning when the mall first opened. It was decorated with bright colors, lots of lights and Santa Claus was sitting in his chair bellowing out, "Ho, Ho, Ho."

Now shopping with Melodee can be an experience. Every store we went into, Melodee would find some item and comment on how she would love that for Christmas. In a mall with more than 100 stores, you can imagine how my shopping list was growing.

As the day wore on and the crowd in the mall grew bigger, it became harder and harder to maintain that Christmas spirit. Women with small children in strollers began to use them as legalized battering rams to push their way through the crowds.

Cashier stands began to have long lines in front of them similar to college students lined up for registration. The whole mall began to turn into a crazy house of horrors.

But, without a doubt, the most crazed places in the mall were the toy stores. I have seen smaller crowds at Dallas Cowboys' games this season than the ones in those stores. There was absolutely no place to move inside one of the toy stores. Kids were screaming at the top of their lungs at their parents. Little girls shouting, "I want a Barbie." Little boys yelling, "I want a Nintendo." No wonder, by the end of the day, Santa Claus wasn't going "Ho, Ho, Ho" anymore, just "Ho."

After a strenuous day of playing Plastro-rama, that's the plastic card money game, Melodee and I were not only totally exhausted, but we just wanted to get back to our nice safe house.

As Christmas approaches, let's all be thankful this special and wonderful time only comes around once a year.

So, from the Blalock family, Brian, Melodee, Kringer and Frank, may you and your family have the Merriest of Christmases and a Happy New Year.

And to all, a good night!

Modern Eye Care

by Wayne A. Delamater, M.D.
Eye Surgeon

EXTENDED WEAR AND TEAR

Many eye professionals are tempering the happiness that accompanied the advent of the extended wear contact lens in 1981. Some now believe that extended wear (wearing contacts continuously for up to two weeks) should give way to "flexible wear." This schedule features day-use primarily, with only occasional consecutive night use. The reason for the shift is that overuse increases the risk of corneal infection. An extended wear lens can cause the cornea to swell by 10 to 15 percent overnight and leaves the outer eye coating more vulnerable to abrasive deposits left on contacts. Prolonged wear also creates an oxygen deficit for the cornea that increases irritation. Seek medical attention if eyes feel painful and water excessively for more than a few hours after contacts are removed.

For further information, please call or schedule an appointment with your eye doctor, Dr. Delamater specializes in medical and surgical diseases of the eye. He is certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and of the American College of Surgeons. His practice is located in Roswell, New Mexico. 884-8876

Deyo receives Girl Scout award

Jane Deyo of Ruidoso received the Thanks Badge II during the Fall Council meeting of the Zia Girl Scout Council on Saturday, November 4.

The Thanks Badge, Girl Scouting's highest honor for a registered adult, is the symbol of recognition presented to an adult member.

Many times, people who are recognized with the Thanks Badge continue to serve Girl Scouting and councils want to recognize their continued service. The Thanks Badge II is a symbol of that recognition.

The criteria for both recognitions reads, "The service performed by the candidate is truly outstanding, benefits the total council or the entire Girl Scout organization and is so significantly above and beyond the call of duty that no other award would be appropriate."

Deyo has held many positions in girl scouting, including service team manager, Zia Council president and vice president, delegate to the National Council meeting in 1987, member of the Executive Director Search Committee, Council Fund Campaign Chair for Lincoln County, co-chair for Woody's Cabana dedication, plus many more.

In addition, Deyo has given many hours of community service to the Altrusa Club of Ruidoso, PEO and the Episcopal Church of the Holy Mount in Ruidoso.

Library offers forgiveness

As a "gift" to the Library's many patrons, the staff at the Ruidoso Public Library is declaring Forgiveness Week, December 24 through 30.

Overdue books may be returned during this time, with no questions asked and no fines due, just an appreciation for returning the library books.

The staff at the Ruidoso Public Library wishes everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Happy Holidays to one and all.

Hit the slopes at sky high Ski Apache

Skiing at Ski Apache on Sierra Blanca just keeps getting better.

This year, when the area opens on Thanksgiving Day, it will be with one brand new run. As part of a three-phase expansion, Ski Apache has announced the opening of Elk Ridge.

Ski Apache marketing director, Patricia Morrison is excited about this new addition to the ski area. Morrison is currently the marketing director of Ski Apache and has been working with the ski area since it was purchased from Robert O. Anderson in the summer of 1963.

"It only had three T-bars at that time," said Morrison.

Ski Apache has grown a little since then. Now the area has five triple chairs, two double chairs and a Mitey Mite handle tow. Also, Ski Apache has a four-person gondola, the only one in New Mexico.

Including the new Elk Ridge, there are now 41 trails to choose from. There is also open bowl skiing near the top of the summit.

The new expansion is located on the south side of Ski Apache and on part of Mescalero Apache tribal land. Spanning 1,000 vertical feet, Elk Ridge follows the southern most ski area boundary and intersects Solomon Hill at the bottom of the mountain.

That's quite a drop!

Elk Ridge is one of the longest trails of Ski Apache and, remember, this is only the first phase of the three-phase expansion project. Once a permit has been obtained from the United States Forest Service, Ski Apache will continue to improve the mountain.

Elk Ridge is rated as intermediate to advanced, so don't wander down this trail if you're a beginner.

After the new area has been fully developed, Morrison says there will be snow making capabilities on eight of the 10 new trails. Also a new day lodge will be constructed at the top of a new high capacity chair lift. Skiers will feel well accommodated on these fashionable slopes.

Ski Apache is a Mescalero Apache enterprise. The name was changed five years ago from Sierra Blanca to Ski Apache.

The peak elevation of Ski Apache is 12,003 feet and at the skiing summit, 11,500 feet. The vertical drop is 1,800 feet and there is an annual snow fall of more than 15 feet.

Most of the runs at Ski Apache are considered advanced. 30 percent of the mountain is intermediate and 25 percent for novice skiers. Chairlifts have an uphill capacity of 12,800 people per hour.

"Top equipment and staff is a main resource which keeps this mountain in top condition. An experienced group employ eight state-of-the-art grooming machines.

Along with snowmaking equipment, which can completely cover the lower third of the area, the groomers are constantly working the snow into soft hills of skiing delight. Groomers arrive for work at 4 p.m. and fluff the white stuff meticulously with their convoy of snow tractors. They traverse the trails all night until 7 a.m. the next morning.

SKI '89-90: Get ready

Exercise for great skiing

Skiing uses almost every muscle in the body.

That's why cardiovascular endurance is just as important as muscular fitness when getting in shape for the ski season.

This is the word from Bob Houston, fitness trainer at the Ruidoso Athletic Club (RAC).

"To be good, a skier needs upper body strength and a strong abdomen," Houston says.

Houston, who also works as a ski instructor at Ski Apache, says this time of year he concentrates on getting skiers and ski instructors in shape. His main job right now is supervising the strengthening and toning of muscles for all people interested in keeping super fit.

At the RAC the Nautilus room is popular. "Circuit weight training" is what Houston calls workouts in the weight rooms.

But it isn't necessary to have an instructor or machines to prepare for the ski season.

Many exercises can be done alone or with a partner, but as ski season approaches, it's time to get started.

It is hoped that skiers already have been walking, bending, flexing, squirming, puffing and such.

Aerobics provide an excellent way to get in shape. Start easy and work up to increase endurance.

Once in shape, skiers are reminded to become acclimated to the ski area's high altitude and do some stretching before making the first run of the day. Knee bends, back twists and rotations are a good warm-up before catching the lift.

Don't be surprised if you get out of breath at Ski Apache. You'll be between 9,000 and 11,000 feet in elevation. Air gets rarefied at that altitude.

Jeanie Whitwam, a registered nurse and co-owner/manager of the RAC, says the two factors to consider when getting into condition for skiing are aerobic and leg muscle conditioning.

"Aerobics conditioning is a working of the heart and lungs to build your capacity to withstand and endure long periods of physical activity."

Ways to accomplish this are running, fast walking, swimming or aerobic exercise classes.

Stretching may be the single most important factor in injury prevention for skiing, Whitwam believes.

Here are a few simple exercises:

—With a partner, grasp each other's left hands and drop quickly into a deep knee-bend. Then pull each other erect. Repeat four times, then try it with the other hand.

—Sit opposite each other, supporting yourself with your hands, the soles of the feet pressed together and "bicycle." Push against each other's feet as you do it.

—Leap-frog sideways, over your kneeling partner! Rest your hands on his shoulder blades and stand beside him. Quickly, up with both legs, kicking your heels high up behind you, and land on the other side of him. After two brief, in-between hops, spring back the other way again.

MAINTAINING MAKES GOOD SENSE

Fine tune those skis for top performance

With ski season just around the corner, it's time to take those skis out of the closet and give them a yearly tune-up.

Binding manufacturers recommend ski bindings should be cleaned, lubed and tested at least once a year or after every 15 to 20 times skiing.

"This is to make sure the binding performs as it should perform," said Robert Donaldson of Pro Ski Sports.

Ski boots should be cleaned in a mild detergent to make sure all dirt and oil has been removed.

Donaldson said skis should at least be waxed before being skied on the first time.

He said the skis should have the bottoms filled in with P-tex, a repair material and then flattened. He said the edges should also be sharpened.

Sharpening the metal edges on skis gives them more true and sure grip on the snow.

Donaldson also recommends checking the baskets on your ski poles to make sure they are not torn or broken.

He said most ski shops will sell wax and some other items for those who want to tune their own skis at home. He said to check with your local ski shop to see what is available.

Full ski tune-ups at most ski shops cost around $20.

Wondering where to ski? compare facilities

How much does it cost to spend a day on the slopes?

Downhill skiing is an expensive sport and if there's a chance to save money, most skiers will take advantage of it. But price isn't the only factor to consider when choosing a ski area.

Some of the characteristics that are important when comparing ski areas are lift ticket prices, number of trails offered, number of lifts, vertical drops from summit to base and packages offered.

Of course, the final qualifier is skiing on the slopes. Statistics won't tell you if an area is well groomed or compatible with your individual skiing ability.

Travel time and accommodations are also key factors in choosing a ski area. If the area requires a long drive, will it leave enough time for full days of skiing? If the accommodations are very expensive, will it cut down on the number of ski days?

But, before you go skiing this year take a look at this comparison of costs to ski. (Ski areas are listed, followed by lift ticket price, season pass price, number of trails offered, number of lifts, vertical drop).

Certainly, there are many other ski areas which could be listed and compared, but these were contacted at random.

Also the various areas have special packages for groups and beginners. Some ski areas have package deals through hotels, for instance the Inn of the Mountain Gods offers ski packages for Ski Apache.

The number of lifts at each area refers mainly to double and triple chairs. All of the areas also have surface lifts, (tow bars, etc.).

Most areas are planning a Thanksgiving day (weekend) opening and have adequate snow-making equipment to accomplish this.

As for the snowboarding enthusiasts, all the listed areas allow snowboarding except Taos and Ski Apache. Certain rules apply to snowboarding, such as required certification, mandatory lessons and designated trails.

Season passes at many areas are available for weekdays only, with a reduced price. Special discount cards can be purchased as well, saving money on lift tickets and in some areas giving discounts on lodging, food and entertainment.

SKI '89-90: Down under

There's no place like the home slopes

"There's no place like home..."

No, Dorothy, not Kansas, but Ski Apache.

That's the opinion of local skiers Lester "Rusty" and Yvonne Lanelli who spent two weeks skiing in New Zealand in August.

"We loved the idea of skiing Down Under while friends sunbathed here," reminisced the Alto couple. But the experience only made them appreciate their hometown more.

Ski areas, or ski fields as they are called in New Zealand, are concentrated in the Southern Alps, a mountain range forming the backbone of New Zealand's South Island. New Zealand itself is a small country about the size of California and consists primarily of two islands, the temperate North Island and colder South Island.

The Southern Alps are located between the forty-second and forty-fifth parallels in the Southern Hemisphere. In the Northern Hemisphere, this would be equivalent to Wyoming.

In altitude, New Zealand's ski fields lie between 5,400 and 6,800 feet.

For comparison, Ski Apache lies slightly above the thirty-third parallel at an altitude of 11,500 feet.

The Southern Alps typically enjoy a full ski season beginning in June, winter, and extending into October, early spring Down Under.

Normally "Kiwi" ski fields are known for their fabulous snow, almost all of which is skied above treeline.

"Because of the altitude and latitude, snow conditions can vary from New England-style boilerplate to New Mexico-type powder to sort-of-Sierra cement.

"Here, our altitude produces more powder days with more sunshine."

But this year, the New Zealand locals apologized to visitors for the sparse conditions. Apparently they were experiencing a short, dry winter similar to the one we had in Lincoln County last year, said Lanelli.

While Down Under, the Lanellis skied three areas: Mt. Hutt, Cardrona and the Remarkables. They also heliskiied the Richardson Range.

To get to each ski field, they were bussed from their hotels located in resort towns not near the slopes.

"The shortest drive was 45 minutes; the longest, two hours," said Lanelli. "It made us appreciate the 30-minute drive from our home to Ski Apache."

Although flatland visitors sometimes shudder at winding Ski Run Road (NM 532), the Lanellis said it's a super highway compared to some of the roads they traveled in New Zealand.

"Imagine Ski Run Road, only twice as long, with few guardrails and a dirt surface—and a $5 toll," said Lanelli. "Every ski field we skied had those for access roads," she added.

The only good point was that, because it was a private toll road, tire chain requirements were easily enforced. When chains are required in those areas Down Under, vehicles are not allowed beyond the toll gate without them.

"Still, every time we backed up to get a second run around a steep hairpin, everybody on the bus shut their eyes," said Lanelli.

Once at the ski fields, differences between U.S. and Kiwi skiing became even more apparent to the New Mexicans.

"We don't realize how technically advanced the U.S. ski industry is," said Lanelli. "For example, Mt. Hutt, reputed to be one of their leading resorts, has only one chairlift. The remaining lifts are surface lifts. And naturally, there was a long line for the only chair."

Once off the lifts and on the snow, a visiting skier notices the differences in slope grooming. At Ski Apache, as well as at other U.S. slopes, it's the norm to find the intermediate and beginner areas groomed daily. That's not always the case in New Zealand.

And snowmaking?

"Here we enjoy a high quality," said Lanelli. "There, it hasn't arrived yet, but their past season showed a need for it."

The Lanellis said they discussed these differences one evening with "Sugar" Robinson, the retired manager of New Zealand's Coronet Peak Ski Field.

Nearly 20 years ago, Robinson worked as a ski instructor at Ski Apache, then called Sierra Blanca Ski Area.

Rick Vincent, Ski Apache Ski School director, told the Lanellis to look up Robinson, and they did, meeting in Queenstown, a mountain resort similar to Ruidoso. Queenstown is an hour's drive from three major ski fields.

Over a Kiwi Lager, a popular local brew, Robinson reminisced.

"While at Sierra Blanca, I learned quite a lot from Roy (Parker, general manager then and now), especially about grooming and snowmaking. When I came to Coronet Peak, no one had heard of either. I brought the first groomer to New Zealand," said Robinson.

"At first, everybody scoffed, but now they all have it. No one had heard of snowmaking either, and I tried to put it in before I retired, but..."

His voice trailed off and he grinned.

"There's a lot of Sierra Blanca in New Zealand," said Robinson.

Yes, but the Lanellis are convinced it may take the Kiwi areas a generation before they compare to the Alto couple's favorite place to ski, right here in Lincoln County at Ski Apache.

SKI '89-90: Etiquette

You're not alone! Ski with care

An Albuquerque radio station has been conducting a call-in ski trip promotion. To be eligible, you must call when you hear the "out-of-control Texan skier."

While it may sound funny on the airwaves, most accidents on the slopes are a result of either skiing beyond one's ability, wreckless skiing, or skiing under the influence of alcohol or other drugs.

In every ski basin brochure, and on the bulletin board by the lift at every ski area, is a display of the Skier's Responsibility Code, something every skier needs to know by heart.

By following these simple rules, the skier can ensure an enjoyable and safe day on the slopes for himself and for fellow skiers.

These rules also apply to snowboarders.

—1. Ski under control and in such a manner you can stop or avoid other skiers or objects. This also means you don't go on a black run after your first three days on the boards.

There is nothing more aggravating to an advanced skier than to see someone on a steep mogul slope scraping their way down the run, cutting the bumps into a hodge-podge of icy gut-busters.

But skiing on a difficult slope before one is ready is also dangerous, not only to yourself, but to the other skiers nearby.

Ski lessons go a long way, even if you think you don't need them.

—2. Yield the right of way to the skier below you. As you proceed downhill, be aware of what others are doing in front of you because you can see them, they cannot see you.

—3. When stopping on a trail or run, be sure you are visible from uphill and be sure you are not blocking the run.

If you fall below a headwall or are hidden in moguls, and you're not hurt, move to the side of the slope to put your skis on. Better yet, if you are a smart skier, you will have a partner who can stand up hill from you.

—4. When entering a trail from the side, yield to the approaching skiers.

Makes perfect sense. After all, who would step out into the street in front of moving traffic?

—5. Your skis must be equipped with either safety straps or ski brakes to prevent runaway skis.

—6. Keep off closed trails and do not ski out-of-bounds.

Skiing under control is perhaps the most important rule to keep in mind. In fact, it's the law in Colorado, known as the Skiers Safety Act.

In Colorado, if skiing out-of-control, or fast through areas marked as slow, you may not only lose your lift ticket, but can be fined and/or put in jail.

There are other common sense ideas to keep in mind, and most involve common courtesy.

Don't throw things from the chair lifts, such as trash, cigarette butts and other litter. All ski areas have trash receptacles. Use them.

When carrying your skis on your shoulders, keep in mind when you turn around, you are approximately three feet larger in diameter than what you're used to.

When riding the chair, it's a good idea to avoid holding your poles between your legs. Some areas have mid-way landings, and if your poles are dangling between your legs, you might be getting off the chair sooner than you think.

And speaking of poles, when dis-mounting a chair, try not to stick your poles between the skis of the person next to you.

No one likes to stand in line. However, no one especially likes the person who cannot abide by the unwritten law of "Stay off my skis!"

And speaking of lines, when two columns merge, there is another unwritten law that each line alternates who goes first. Some ski areas have personnel to control lift lines, but many don't. Please, you always let someone go ahead of you before you go in front of someone else.

If you live in low altitude areas, keep in mind that the effects of alcohol are greatly enhanced at high altitudes. And alcohol will not only slow your reflexes and reaction times; it will also make you more susceptible to hypothermia.

Also, if you live at 1,000 feet, don't be surprised when you arrive at Ski Apache and you see multi-colored dots in front of your eyes at the top of the mountain. Start off slow and easy, warm yourself up and get used to the lack of oxygen. Better yet, spend the night in town before you hit the slopes.

Skiing is a wonderful recreational activity. But like any other, the participant must be aware of personal responsibility. The best way to learn to avoid mishaps is to always consider any mishap your fault, not the other guy's.

By being aware of your own actions and of those around you, by skiing at your level and not beyond it, you will have an enjoyable experience on the slopes.

And your skills will improve!

SKI '89-90: Instruction

Ski School offers classes for the whole family

Ski Apache offers a fine way to jump into winter, which is a skier's favorite season.

Ski school offers instructions, not only for beginners, but also for all skiers on how to improve.

Rick Vincent, ski school director, has been encouraging downhillers for 19 years. He knows from experience that skiing can be dangerous without proper training.

Rick encourages people to learn skiing techniques from a professional, then conquer the mountain.

Too many times beginners find themselves totally discouraged after their first attempts at downhill skiing.

Beginners often fail because they are over enthusiastic, wanting an Olympic medal on their very first day on the slopes. Injuries can be the ultimate reward.

Why not avoid the beginner blues and join a ski class?

Matching your skills with other students, the ski school makes learning a group affair.

Getting lost on your first day among mountain mogal jumpers or behind swift windings of parallel pivoters is no fun, but joining a group with like skills can make those first days on the slopes more enjoyable.

It doesn't matter how old you are, there are classes for all skiing levels and every age.

Ski Apache will be offering special weekday prices on all ski school classes until December 22.

All day classes for beginners are at staggered times, seven days a week, starting at 9:30 a.m. to noon. This includes adults, teens (ages 13-18) and children (ages 6-12). Cost for the lesson and lift ticket totals $30.

Two consecutive days of beginner lessons, with lift ticket and rental equipment is offered in a package deal for $75. If you don't need rental equipment the price is just $65.

Sometimes high altitude air depletes one's oxygen efficiency and beginners have less energy. Or maybe you only need a few hours of professional advice.

No problem, take a half-day lesson.

For adult, teen or child beginner, $23 will buy a half day lesson and lift ticket.

Non-beginners or master skiers purchase their own lift ticket and then get a half day lesson for $25.

Maybe after taking the non-beginner class you would like more advice, well take a full day class for $33, or two consecutive days for $50.

"Ski Wee" is a children's program for four and five year olds. These little ones also will receive a free lift ticket with a private lesson.

Of course private lessons are available to all interested.

No more than five people will be allowed in an all-day private lesson which costs $250.

$45 an hour is the cost for individual lessons and for each additional person a semi-private price of $25 is required.

Rick Vincent believes in the ski school and has helped produce at least one professional. Dale Pearson took lessons in the 70s and now is a professional downhill racer.

Rick advises anybody who is interested in becoming more involved to contact Carla Grover at 257-4580. She is the director of the junior ski program in Ruidoso.

The ski school also organizes recreational skiing on the mountain. Coin operated racing slopes and training clinics are available. Rick Vincent says this year powder skiing will be taught along with any other clinics desired.

If downhill skiing has eluded your athletic endeavors, don't wait another year.

Plan on ski lessons from Ski Apache's ski school.

SKI '89-90: On patrol

Patrollers watch over the slopes

Members are first on, last off at Ski Apache

You're all alone on a ski slope and the afternoon sun has faded, the ski lifts have closed, it's the last run of the day and you're tired.

Suddenly your ski slips on an ice patch and you twist an ankle.

Who do you call?

SKI PATROL!

Every day after the lifts close the ski patrol scans the ski area for lost or hurt skiers.

Led by Fred Pavlovic and Charles Scott, the Pro Ski Patrol at Ski Apache has about 15 employees. All of these patrollers are members of the National Ski Patrol (NSP). This small band of reliable hill rovers, form the core of all Ski Apache safety programs.

From grooming and snowmaking to rescues and first aid, the Pro Ski Patrol has safety on the slopes as their first priority. This professional organization has been involved in making skiing a safe and enjoyable sport since Ski Apache opened more than 20 years ago.

Robert Donaldson, owner of Pro Ski Sports in Ruidoso, leads another important part of the patrol called the "Nationals." This is a volunteer group of about 80 individuals who are a part of the National Ski Patrol.

What other kind of unpaid occupation attracts people from Santa Fe or from Houston, Dallas and El Paso, Texas, and Tucson, Arizona?

"The National Ski Patrol is a system. There are 10 divisions, in excess of 500 patrols, across the country and internationally," Donaldson said.

"Prior to the early '70s almost all patrols were volunteer," he added.

The "Nationals" substitute for the pro ski patrollers on the weekends and whenever the pro ski patrol needs the extra help.

There are around 24,000 members in the NSP and the number has grown with the increased interest in skiing in the United States and other countries.

Canada, Japan and Europe also are a part of the NSP, with minor divisions in other parts of the world.

The patrollers are first out on the slopes each day, making a run before the lifts begin. They also make a final sweep at the end of the day to be sure there are no injured or lost skiers on the mountain.

In between, the patrollers are available to help.

So, if you run into trouble on the slopes, call for the ski patrol.

SKI '89-90: Clinic

Ski area clinic provides emergency medical care

Skiing equipment is making the mountain sport safer than ever, but people still get injured once in a while.

Since 1936, when a New York insurance broker named Charles "Minnie" Minot Dole, broke his ankle while skiing in New England, there has been a reason for ski areas to have clinics.

Unfortunately, in 1936, there were only local farmers that surrounded the ski area and none offered to help this injured adventurer. Luckily, Minnie Dole was with companions and they rushed him to a doctor.

Two months after breaking his ankle, one of Minnie Dole's friends was killed in a skiing accident.

Since then, ski clinics have become a part of most ski areas and Ski Apache is no exception. Located at the bottom of the mountain, the ski clinic is especially designed to attend skiing injuries.

Dr. Larry Ydens is the medical director of Ski Apache and has been treating injuries at the ski clinic for five years. The clinic is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week.

Dr. Ydens has a certified emergency room nurse to help him treat accident victims.

The clinic treats flu symptoms and other minor sicknesses as well.

The auxiliary ski patrol and clinic closely overlap in duties. Both departments care for people inside the clinic. These members of the ski patrol are certified in Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) and Emergency Medical Techniques (EMT).

A program named Winter Emergency Care Center (WECC) was started nation-wide last year. This program was developed over a four-year period and is a derivative of the EMT training program. It concentrates on emergency situations surrounding ski areas. The auxiliary ski patrol has been trained in this new program.

It is hoped that this ski season will not find anyone needing emergency care.

But, it's nice to know that downhillers at Ski Apache have a qualified staff of professionals ready to help, if medical attention is needed.

SKI '89-90: Helping out

Group helps hundreds of handicapped skiers

The 1989-90 season at Ski Apache will be the 14th year of operation for the Ski Apache Handicapped Skier Association (SAHSA).

The organization is the largest of its type, serving a wide variety of individuals with mental and physical disabilities, said SAHSA president Diana Person.

The non-profit organization provides specialized equipment and ski instruction for disabled persons free of charge. The ski basin provides lift tickets at half price for adults 19 years and older, and free for those 18 years or younger.

Disabled persons or organizations representing them need to establish an appointment to receive the instruction from one of the 64 volunteer instructors or three paid instructors, said Person.

SAHSA provides instruction to blind individuals, wheelchair-bound persons, the developmentally disabled, those with cerebral palsy and those with many other disabilities.

The instruction is also used for rehabilitative purposes with stroke victims and those recovering from major surgeries who may need physical therapy.

With students going through physical therapy, the ski instruction can be a positive motivator, encouraging children to work harder and more diligently during therapy sessions, said Person.

Also, the experience of skiing has been shown to increase the concentration and attention span of developmentally disabled persons both on the slopes and elsewhere.

"They don't have the time to let their minds wander," said Person.

The experience for these skiers also becomes strong motivation to perform well in other settings.

The organization is completely dependent on private donations. Not a penny comes from the state or the federal government, said Person.

Much of the equipment necessary is very specialized and expensive.

For example, wheelchair-bound individuals can enjoy skiing in something called a sit-ski, a self-contained unit with a roll bar in which the individual sits.

Specialized hand controls enable the participant to control direction, and the skier sits snugly in the unit.

Each year SAHSA organizes fundraising events, including an enchilada dinner that is scheduled for February of 1990. And on February 28, 1990, the fundraising race is scheduled, with a silent auction the night before.

Person said 727 individuals were helped by the program during the '88-89 season.

She said the program couldn't continue to grow and thrive without the help of generous people and groups. Person extends her thanks to the Village of Ruidoso for its support of the program, and especially to Dr. A.N. Spencer and Jackie Spencer for their very generous help throughout the years.

SKI '89-90: Ski racers

Ski team members work hard

The Ruidoso Ski Team is already preparing for an extensive race season in the Rocky Mountain Division.

"The schedule is pretty intense this year," said team president Debbie Wharton.

The first races are scheduled for December 9 and 10 in Keystone, Colorado and the last event of the season is scheduled for April 21 and 22, the Loveland Derby in Loveland, Colorado.

Members of the team, aged eight to 18, have been dry land training since September 16 with coach Habert Seigman, a native of Anis, Austria.

Tim Royer, from Glenwood Springs, Colorado, is another coach with the team.

If the weather is cooperative, the first day on snow for the team should be the day after Thanksgiving, said Wharton.

The training schedule will then be all day Saturdays and Sundays, with half-day sessions on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, she said.

The different days provide the team members with a flexible schedule so the students can arrange training with school.

Team members come from throughout Lincoln County and southeastern New Mexico.

Wharton said members come from Ruidoso, Capitan, Cloudcroft, Alamogordo, El Paso, Artesia, Roswell and from Juarez, Mexico.

"We reach out to a lot of other kids," said Wharton.

Over the years the team has been very competitive, said Wharton.

Every year, members of the team go to the various championship runs in their divisions, as well as the Prather Championship Race conducted in Crested Butte, Colorado. There are always members competing in the Junior Olympics, conducted in Vail, Colorado, as well.

Team members travel on Fridays, usually leaving at about noon. Distances often involve an eight- to nine-hour travel day.

The racers then compete on Saturdays and Sundays, and after the award ceremony on Sunday afternoon, the team travels back to Ruidoso, arriving in the early morning.

Each member competes in their own age class, and can choose the level of competition.

For example, students new to the team, or who may be more interested in racing for pleasure race in unlicensed events, called fun races, in New Mexico.

Other racers who may be more serious about competition, or who ski at a much more advanced level, can ski in licensed events as a member of the United States Skiers Association.

A fun series race is scheduled for Ski Apache on January 28, 1990.

Hit the slopes

Other parts of the ski area which might attract sports fans include a cafeteria at the base of the mountain. It's open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. with cocktails served in the bar until 5 p.m.

There are three snack bars and two burger stands.

Rental and repair shops are also available in the ski lodge on the mountain.

A clinic was established five years ago at Ski Apache and offers the services of Dr. Larry Ydens. This clinic can handle all emergencies, as well as mild cases of flu or other sickness.

The full service ski shop offers more than 700 quality rentals. Multi-day renters can keep the equipment overnight or take advantage of the convenience of leaving their rentals on reserve at the Ski Apache rental shop, ensuring early skiing pleasure the next morning.

Ski Apache ski shop features K2 skis, Salomon Step-In bindings with brakes, Nordica, Salomon and Raichle boots.

The ski shop also offers free inspections on binding and equipment. This helps keep every skier safe and sound.

Also, the area offers a ski school for the young and old. For children four to five years old a Pee-Wee program is offered. Skiwee is for children ages six to twelve. Other private and adult lessons are available.

For those more advanced skiers, there are coin operated race courses that are open daily except Wednesdays and Sundays.

This year Ski Apache is also offering a two-day beginner course for $75. Along with lessons for two days, the student receives lift tickets and rentals. First timers that purchase a lesson will receive a free lift ticket.

Adult lift tickets are $30 a day, and $32 during holiday season (12-23-89 to 12-31-89). Lift tickets for children are $18 per day and $20 during holidays.

For half a day $20 will buy skiing from 1 p.m. to closing. The half-day tickets are available weekdays only, holidays not included.

There are several types of ski packages and all can be purchased by contacting the Inn Of The Mountain Gods at 1-800-545-9011.

"It's a great mountain," said Morrison. "The best in New Mexico," she added.

She's been spreading the word on the great skiing here by promoting the area at trade and ski shows. She and her marketing companions expect their efforts to pay off with big crowds this year.

They were very successful in promoting the area in Dallas, Texas, and Morrison sent for more literature. 15,000 people passed through the ski show in Dallas and the promotion lasted for two and a half days.

Arizona and California have also been targets of Ski Apache. Morrison says she has been receiving phone calls from California every day.

The area has a 24-hour ski report which can be reached by calling (505) 257-9001.

TRY THIS ON FOR SIZE

No skis? No problem

If you're ready to go skiing, but you don't have any skis, Ruidoso's numerous ski shops can fix you right up.

Rentals in Ruidoso range from $8 to $12 and include skis, boots and poles. Individual equipment, like boots only, can be rented separately, but in general the combination package is the cheapest way to go.

Some ski shops even rent clothing, like pants and bibs.

Ski shops generally carry 500 or more pairs of skis for rent, and most will carry several different types of boots and skis to fit more people and please an individual's taste.

Robert Donaldson of Pro Ski Sports offers the following recommendations for anyone renting ski equipment.

Less experienced skiers should use shorter skis while more experienced skiers can use longer skis. The heavier the skier, the longer the skis need to be.

Skis for beginners should be about shoulder to eye level in height, while skis for intermediate skiers should be eye level to higher than the head and skis for the advanced skier should be higher than the head to over 25 to 30 centimeters higher than the head.

Kids should be fitted for kids' skis and not equipment designed for adults. "Kids skis and adult skis are different," Donaldson said.

When renting boots, Donaldson said the thing to consider is the fit.

"Boots should be comfortable, but snug," he said.

He said when your foot is in the boot, your heel should not come up in the boot when you flex forward.

Socks are also important to getting a good fit in a boot. Donaldson said don't wear cotton or wool hiking socks. He said thin wool socks or polypropylene socks work the best.

Donaldson said the length of the poles varies with individual, but a general rule of thumb in finding a pole is to hold it under the basket with your elbow at a ninety degree angle. If the pole touches the floor, it's all right for your height.

Ski shops are located all over town, and a rental shop is also located in the chalet at Ski Apache.

SKI '89-90: Clothing

Ski in style with brilliant clothing

If flying down those slopes at lightning fast speeds isn't enough to make skiing fun for the whole family, try shopping for bright new ski clothing.

Warmth and comfort have teamed up with electric and brilliant colors this year to light up the ski slopes.

Ski shops in this area carry clothing for the entire family, from the inside out. A skier can choose a budget price or spend as much as he chooses for a designer ski outfit.

According to information provided by Obermeyer Skiwear, American consumers usually shop for a complete outfit, including coordinated parkas, pants and one-piece suits with sweaters, gloves and accessories.

Skiwear is showing up on the street, as it is crossing over for use as streetwear and other sports, including snowboarding, cycling, hiking and even golf.

Parka shapes continue to taper at the waist, revealing an upside-down triangle silhouette.

Stretch pants are still the best way to show off a sleek physique. They can also be topped with shell pants that ensure protection from wind and water when the weather changes.

One-piece suits continue to be popular on the slopes.

Men have broken through the color barrier, tossing aside those navy blue and brown bibbers and opting instead for parkas, shells, pants, sweaters and accessories in brilliant tones.

High thread count polyester fabrics are being used by some designers as an alternative to conventional nylon.

Check out the clothing available at Ruidoso area ski shops and boutiques, and have a bright day on the slopes.
