There's lots of water in those wells!

by BRIAN BLALOCK

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Well test results on the Eagle Creek well field show there is sufficient production capability to produce the amount of water rights the field is allowed.

This was the conclusion of John W. Shoemaker, a geologist and hydrologist from Albuquerque, who conducted the tests on the wells in January and April.

The water rights associated with the four wells equal 5,648 acre-feet per annum with priority dates in 1984.

The purpose of the test was to evaluate the long-term yield of the well field, based on an independent testing of the wells using the existing equipment and without reference to earlier conclusions as to the wells' capacities.

Shoemaker performed tests on wells one and three. Wells two and four were not equipped and were not pumped for the test, but used as observation wells in each test.

Shoemaker assumed water flowed into the well field in a radial pattern to the pumped well. However, after comparing results, Shoemaker said that linear, rather than radial flow, controls the response and the aquifer does not have uniform properties throughout, but rather, that a fracture of very high hydraulic conductivity governs the flow.

Data from the tests of well one and observation wells show well one lies very close to a major fracture which crosses Eagle Creek and coincides with the upper part of Carlton Canyon. Shoemaker estimates the length of the fracture in the well field to be about 9,000 feet. The orientation of the fracture as determined from the analysis of the test data corresponds with the direction of the major faults on the south and east sides of Sierra Blanca. Analysis yielded the orientation of the fracture, with respect to the wells, and the hydraulic diffusivity, the water flowing through the fracture. The diffusivity was calculated at 14,000,000 square feet a day. Wells three, four and five were found to flow at the surface before pumping. This is probably because the aquifer is not confined and the water flow near the surface. A test of well three was designed to give the transmissivity, the derived unit thickness of absorbing nondiffusing matter, of the aquifer. Well three was pumped at 1,200 gallons per minute for 1,418 minutes and wells one, two, four and five were observed. Plots of water levels in well three and four suggest a transmissivity of 1,400 to 1,500 square feet per day. Plots of well five suggest a transmissivity of

Citizens group gears up to stop golf course plan

by BRIAN BLALOCK

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Citizens in Action (CIA), a local group opposed to the proposed golf course and hotel on municipal land, said they will petition for a negative referendum, if the Village Council passes the proposed ordinance.

CIA met Tuesday at the Ruidoso Public Library, with Ron Andrews chairing the meeting. He said the group believes the Airport Master Plan should be followed.

Andrews said CIA is not opposed to another golf course in Ruidoso, but is opposed to this particular project.

About 25 people at the meeting discussed the proposed lease between the village, Colbert Golf and SWD Motels Inc.

Members of the group said the proposed golf course and hotel do not diversify the use of the property as called for by the master plan. They said it is ridiculous to tie up that much land for a 50-year lease period. They said the city will be providing water rights to the golf course free, and said the "so-called luxury resort" is no better than some of Ruidoso's present better hotels.

The design of the hotel was from a stock set of plans and the golf course was nothing more than a computer designed golf course, according to one CIA member.

Group members said the subordination clause in the contract would cause the village to lose control of the land and that things were intentionally left out of the contract. One man said the proposed lease was an obvious attempt to rip off the community and the legal aspects of the lease were scary.

The group discussed radio and newspaper ads they had put out to try and get their message across.

One man said regardless of what happens, the group should urge people to get out and vote one way or the other on the issues, so they are not decided by a small number of people.

Andrews urged members of the group to call council members and ask questions.

The group decided to wait until after the June 19 public hearing to meet next.

P&Z leaves mixed zoning on Upper Canyon's Main Road

by BRIAN BLALOCK

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A public hearing Monday before the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission (P&Z) ended with only four of the proposed properties rezoned commercial and the rest left zoned as single family residences.

The commission was considering the rezoning of properties fronting Main Road from the traffic circle to Whispering Pines in the Upper Canyon from R-1 single family to C-1 neighborhood commercial.

Village planning officials and the commission wanted to rezone the properties to eliminate spot zoning along Main Road and afford owners of commercial frontage the ability to use their properties for a use compatible with surrounding properties.

"Prior to one year ago, all these properties were commercial," said Chairman Robert Donaldson. "What we are looking at doing is returning them back to what they were."

Donaldson said of the 73 properties along the stretch of Main Road, 43 are already zoned commercial.

Hazel Haynesworth, a resident of the Upper Canyon, said a petition with 200 signatures against the rezoning was before the commission. She said residents were very concerned with the traffic, safety and fire hazard additional commercial businesses might bring to the Upper Canyon. Haynesworth said big trucks already have no place to turn around and they are parked along the street all the time.

She also cited letters from Ruidoso Police Chief William Newman and Fire Department Chief Virgil Reynolds which outlined problems already existing in the Upper Canyon.

Around 40 people were at Monday's hearing, including village councilors Jess Stinson and J.D. James. Several people spoke out on both sides.

Earl Malone said he opposed the rezoning, saying the way it is now is within reason with the current cabins in the area catering to a limited number. He said he believes the rezoning would decrease property values.

"We think it should be left alone," he said.

Mrs. Barney Courier and Mrs. Clifton Brooks said they opposed the commercialization of the area because it would spoil the natural beauty of the area.

Donaldson said the rezoning would allow commercial businesses to go in, but it was not commercialization of the area. He said the rights of those people who originally bought their property as commercial were being infringed on. He said the commission would have to give a balanced recommendation to the Village Council.

"It is a difficult question to address," he said.

Commissioner John White asked how the commission could zone the properties correctly. He said most of the properties wanting to change from R-1 to C-1 were properties which were for sale.

"You shouldn't change zoning on that basis," he said.

Chester Stone of the Upper Canyon Restaurant said the traffic problem in the Upper Canyon had been reduced somewhat since he moved his business to its present location. He said the Upper Canyon Business Association wanted the business people to continue to do business. He said there was more

Special Olympics torch is on the run

by BRIAN BLALOCK

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

To many people, running is simply an exercise.

But to a group of Ruidoso Police officers, Ruidoso EMS personnel, Mescalero BIA officers and a couple of village officials, running on Monday became more than exercise. It became a labor of love and support for Special Olympics.

The Special Olympics Law Enforcement Torch Run on Monday was the culmination of weeks of events designed to call attention to and raise money for Special Olympics.

The torch run began early Monday morning with all the officers, except Mescalero, gathering in the Wal-Mart parking lot. Most of the officers were joking and laughing about the day ahead. The biggest worry was where to get a cup of coffee.

Two shy young girls stood to the side, not sure what to make of all these people. The two, Serena and Janell Stockton, are Special Olympics athletes from Capitan.

They may not have known it but the torch's final destination is Milne Stadium in Albuquerque where they will see it on June 9, when they compete in the Summer Games. A quick stop for a group picture and officers Rocky Reynolds and Roxanne Pfeffer headed out of the parking lot with the two girls and the torch.

The torch run route was from Ruidoso, through Mescalero, to Tularosa along Highway 70. There police officers from Alamogordo and Holloman Air Force Base would take over.

The torch headed on toward Apache Summit with several different runners carrying it during the early part of the run. The two Stockton girls ran about three miles and someone noted that the girls looked better after their run than the officers. Officers Kathy Otero and George Buckley of the Ruidoso police, Sherrie Minsner, David Wheeler and Gary Bousler of the Ruidoso EMS all took turns running the torch to the cut-off to the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

Ahead, lay the hardest part of the entire run, the stretch from the cut-off to the summit.

Officers Robert Achterberg and David Perkins, two veteran runners, took the torch and began the uphill climb followed closely by a caravan of bicycles and police and sheriff's department cars with lights on.

Someone said there hadn't been a car speeding by all morning.

"I'm used to running uphill," said Perkins. "It was a little warm, but you couldn't ask for a better day."

The torch arrived at Apache Summit about 9:30 a.m. and immediately a group of women headed downhill with it. Now, Betty Bennett, Connie Hopper, Mary Holdridge, Jill Trenchard, Joyce McMath and Cindy Green didn't exactly run with the torch, they actually walked with it. Still, they covered the three or so miles to the Highway 244 cut-off rather swiftly.

At the Highway 244 cut-off, officers from the Mescalero BIA were carefully stretching their muscles, getting ready for their part of the run. Officers Al Lapaz and Jerry Valdez took off with the torch toward Mescalero.

Along the way toward Mescalero, Officer Clybert Zunie and his son Fenton took the torch from Officer JoAnn Martinez. Zunie said his son started to run off and leave him.

"He started to take off from me,"

Zunie said. "I had to tell him to slow down."

As the torch traveled through Mescalero, carried by Mescalero BIA supervisor Mark Chino, sirens began sounding and people came out of their homes to watch.

The torch continued on through Mescalero toward Round Mountain and the hot air of the Tularosa Basin. Officer Ivan Bowelkaty carried the torch for awhile.

Finally, a trio of officers handed the torch off to Village of Ruidoso manager Frank Potter at Mile Marker 242. Potter carried the torch for three miles, up and down the hills to Mile Marker 239 where village clerk Tammie Maddox and Detective Lanny Maddox took up the torch and the challenge of running past Round Mountain.

As he was trying to catch his breath, Potter said, "I felt pretty good, but I wasn't for sure how far I had run."

As the torch run started to reach the hotter air near Tularosa, the pace began to slow down, but not the determination of those running.

Several people began to run together, to give support to the other runners. "That's the fun of it, running together," said Perkins.

Perkins and Achterberg took over the run about 10 miles out of Tularosa and started a steady pace toward the village limits. As they ran along the roadway, several of the others who had run throughout the morning, would run with them for a mile or so.

The plan called for everyone to run the last mile into Tularosa. The entire caravan of cars pulled over to the side and about 15 people who had followed the torch all the way from Ruidoso began to run.

When Sheriff's deputy Jim Rethmel handed the torch to an officer from Alamogordo at 1:30 p.m., it was almost anti-climactic. There were no cheers, except by the Alamogordo and Holloman officers as they started their run, no bands playing, just a bunch of tired and worn out people.

Officer Lou Wardwell, who was the local organizer for Special Olympics, said "I'm really happy with this year's project, everything's gone well."

Chester Stone, representing the Upper Planning and Zoning Commission. The Canyon Business Association, addresses commission was considering rezoning Monday's public hearing of the Ruidoso properties along Main Road.

commercial property in question than residential property and the area shouldn't be zoned R-1. He said the Upper Canyon Business Association wants to preserve the character of the area, but people who bought commercial property and want it commercial, deserve to have it.

"You make us feel like we want to chunk it and sell out," said Courier.

Clark Carpenter of Dan-Dee Cabins said commercial business had been in the Upper Canyon for years and "no one has been abused."

"I feel like they are trying to withdraw our ability to be commercial. These homeowners would like to make the whole area residential." He asked the commission not to take away the right of someone to put in a commercial business.

Earl Snyder said he bought his property five years ago as commercial and it was surrounded by commercial businesses. He said he got the feeling the property was changed to residential to satisfy some of the residents in the area.

Crawford, Heflefinger said the residents were not looking to make anyone lose their commercial businesses. He said he considered the Upper Canyon to be a historical part of Ruidoso and asked the commission to consider the letters from the residents in their decision.

"Don't zone more property in the Upper Canyon commercial," he said.

Donaldson said a possible compromise to the problem would be to poll property owners and have the city give commercial status to those properties which wanted it, asking city attorney John Underwood and planning administrator Cleatus Richards if that was possible.

Underwood said it would be legal and might be the only way to come up with a winning solution.

But Haynesworth said her group wanted a moratorium on all new commercial businesses in the Upper Canyon until something could be done about the traffic and fire danger problems.

Donaldson asked her if she would accept the compromise to poll the property owners. Haynesworth said she wanted a moratorium and would not go along with the compromise.

"If that's the case, we're headed for a big fight," she said.

The commission asked Richards what the response was to letters the village had sent out to property owners. He said four property owners had responded in favor of the change, 17 were opposed, but the majority had given no response or had not responded at all.

Underwood said what could be done was return commercial property to the owners who responded and said they wanted it and leave the rest R-1.

Kathy Hairston told the commission she wanted her property rezoned because it was zoned commercial in 1971 when it was purchased.

"Please, poll each property owner on an up-to-date basis on how they would be effected," she asked the commission.

Donaldson then made a motion to table the issue with the stipulation the village poll each property owner to find how they wanted their property zoned. He said the way the letter to the property owners was written, the commission could not take a non-response as not favoring the change.

Underwood said one option the commission could take would be to rezone the properties represented today as C-1.

Donaldson withdrew his previous motion and proposed a new motion to only rezone the four lots and leave the rest R-1. Commissioner David Harding seconded the motion, and the commission voted five to one to approve the motion with White casting the lone no vote.

The properties covered in the motion are:

—Cree Subdivision Lot 9.
—Sleepy Hollow Block BB, Lots 1 and 1A (which are contiguous properties with one owner), Lot 3 and Lot 133E.

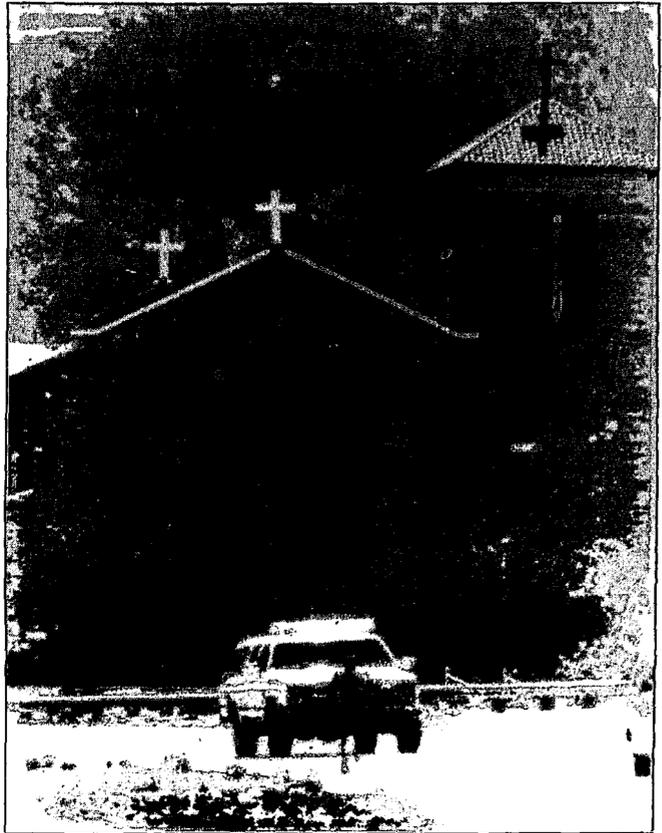

Donaldson said other property owners wanting to change to commercial would have to pay the regular fees with the village and there would be no more administrative reviews for the properties.

He then made a resolution to amend the village's transportation plan to make Main Road, from the second bridge to the reservation, a residential street instead of a collector. He said this would ensure there would be no further commercial development in this area.

In other business, the commission:

—approved a front yard variance for Trigger V. Phillips on part of Tract A, Block E, Singing Pines Subdivision.

—approved a variance and commercial site development for parking and an addition to Jess Stinson at 2535 Sudderth.

Supervisor Mark Chino of the Mescalero BIA carries the torch past St. Joseph's Mission in Mescalero.

Ruidoso Police investigate a rash of burglary reports

by BRIAN BLALOCK
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso Police are investigating a series of burglaries which have occurred since the first of the month.

Since the first of June, there have been nine burglaries and several cases of breaking and entering at various residences and businesses in Ruidoso.

"We have had a rash of them all of a sudden," said Detective Mike Lovelace of the Ruidoso Police Department.

Southwest Sun and Fun, at 2306 Sudderth reported a burglary sometime between Thursday and Friday, with several items missing.

A burglary was reported on Friday, June 2, at 105 Granite in White Mountain Estates subdivision. A Sears direct drive table saw was reported missing.

A residence at 101 Apache Trail in Carters Park was broken into on Sunday, June 4, but nothing was reported missing. That same day, the house next door was also burglarized. A microwave oven and a VCR were reported missing.

On June 5, every house but one on Geronimo Place, off Carrizo Creek Road, was broken into. Burglars took $5,350 worth of items from 102 Geronimo, including three large silver sculptures, a complete stereo system and a VCR.

The residence at 106 Geronimo was broken into, but nothing was reported missing. However, residents of 108 Geronimo reported a stereo was missing.

That same day, a burglary was reported at 143 Singing Pines in the Upper Canyon. A VCR and an electric calculator were reported missing.

On Tuesday, June 6, a residence at 203 Warwick in the Camelot area was broken into and a television set was reported missing.

Police say they have not made any arrests yet in the burglaries, but they are still under investigation.

1,100 to 3,400 square feet per day.

The pumping levels in wells one, two, three and four were estimated for a period of one year. With the wells pumping at a constant rate the following would be the number of acre-feet per annum from each well:

—Well one pumping at 660 gpm would yield 1,065 acre-feet per annum.

—Well two pumping at 570 gpm would yield 920 acre-feet per annum.

—Well three pumping at 1,514 gpm would yield 2,442 acre-feet per annum.

—Well four pumping at 757 gpm would yield 1,221 acre-feet per annum.

Shoemaker indicated it was difficult to estimate the ultimate capacity of a well or group of wells without a significant period of production and water-level history. He concluded his report by indicating the results do suggest that sufficient production to perfect the permitted right is not beyond the realm of possibility.

Village manager Frank Potter was pleased with the results of the test. He said the results show there is plenty of water in the well field. He said because of the fracture running through the well field, "the recharge area of the aquifer has got to be incredible."

Potter also noted that well field is a separate water source for the village, not connected to any other source except the run-off area of Eagle Creek and the underground water flow.

The village, with Rio Ruidoso low because of lack of rainfall, is pumping two million gallons of water a day from the Eagle Creek wells.

Village offers summer programs

The Village of Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department has many exciting events planned for children of all ages this summer.

Session I of the Mountaintops Day Camp will be June 12-16 and will offer a fun-filled week of gymnastics, swimming, hiking, arts and crafts and a "magic bus" trip to White Sands—all for $60.

Magic bus trips are open to children five years and older with the first trip June 16 to White Sands National Monument and Alameda Park and Zoo in Alamogordo. This trip will cost $15 per child. All summer youth programs offer a 10 percent discount for families with more than one child participating.

The second annual Mountaintops Gymnastics Camp will be June 25 through July 1 and will again feature internationally known coaches. For more information concerning these activities, as well as a schedule of events in July and August, please call the activities center at 257-5030.

Apache woman blends old with new

by CAROLYN SHORT
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Culture and tradition have continued to lock horns with the "white ways" ever since the Indians and the white men first laid eyes on each other.

As the Indians on the Mescalero Apache Indian reservation struggle to hold on to the culture that unifies them, new innovations designed to improve life draw to a close the era known as "the old world."

But one woman believes in both ways: the old and the new, the young and the old. Elbys Niche Hugar helps to bridge the gap through her rich background abundant with famous Indian blood ties and her extensive knowledge of the Indian people and their ways.

Elbys, granddaughter of Niche, who surrendered with Geronimo in 1806, is also the great-granddaughter of Cochise, famed leader of a band of Chiricahua Apaches known as the Chok'anande.

Elbys believes her ties with these two great historical figures put a strong responsibility on her to keep the culture of her people alive and flourishing. She helped compile the Apache language dictionary and she works with children at the school to help them learn a little of the language and the history surrounding it.

"I'm proud that I learned to write my language to pass it along to the children so we don't lose it," Elbys said. "I feel like I've done something good to give to my people on the reservation."

Elbys still speaks in the native Apache tongue and she says that it is often difficult to relate the feeling and warmth she tries to convey in English. Somehow, she added, the Apache language helps her express what she's really trying to say.

"There's something within the language. With English, I just can't bring out that feeling," she said.

Elbys' father came to the Mescalero reservation following Geronimo's death in 1909 and the subsequent release of Indian prisoners in 1913.

"They were given a choice to either remain in Oklahoma or relocate with the Mescalero tribe here," she said.

Elbys' father died at Mescalero in 1979, only three months away from his 90th birthday.

"My father used to sing for the famous Apache war dancers and at the mountain spirit dances," she said.

Elbys added that he enjoyed the morning songs the most. These were sung to draw lovers closer together.

"My father taught me to always look at the good side of people and always be willing to help no matter what. It doesn't matter what color or anything, he always had respect for anyone," she said. "I look at his picture everyday and it causes me to have good feelings about people."

The closeness she had with her family was intimately bonded to her strong religious beliefs.

"There are five denominations out here. But we are all praying to the same person in the Indian ways or in English," Elbys said. "We don't worship idols."

As with her native language, Elbys feels very strongly about her past and she believes in keeping those memories vivid and fresh. The memories of the elderly, she said, are precious to the endurance of culture and history of the tribe. Through their knowledge and experience, they provide leadership and strength, Elbys said, like the leadership provided by Cochise and current Mescalero Tribal president, Wendell Chino.

"That's why an elderly person is like a piece of gold," she said. "They're the ones we look up to. We respect them and love them."

If Cochise were alive today, Elbys said she doesn't think he would disapprove of the easier life provided through "white ways."

"I think he would say, 'I'm glad to see my people the way they are today,'" she said. "But he would still want us to keep the culture, the religion and the language."

Elbys stays active in keeping the history and culture alive as curator of the Mescalero Apache Cultural Center Museum. Through the museum, she is able to show the history of the tribe as well as their current lifestyle. She added that the blending of the old with the new is not bad for the tribe and culture.

"When you're an Indian, you're always an Indian," she said. "You can still have white ways but live in your culture."

The Silver Lining

An Honored Visitor From Montana
A special blessing was brought to us last Sunday at Saint Anne's Chapel, Glencoe, by the presence of Mrs. Mary Hartung from Billings, Montana. She is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Cooper, and was down for a two-weeks visit with John and Mary at their ranch out north of Tinnie. Mrs. Hartung was happy working in the garden, and most of all feeding the dogie lambs. She says, "I love Lincoln County and I think this little church is one of the nicest I ever saw."
We wish Mrs. Hartung all God's blessings and hope she will honor us with many more visits.
Gerald Tully Roping Contests

The ninth annual Gerald Tully Roping will begin Saturday, June ten at the Tully Roping Arena at Glencoe. Top ropers will gather for miles around for a weekend of roping contests and good fellowship.
With his eighty-sixth birthday coming up on July twelve, Gerald will be among the contestants. His Son, Gerry, a chip off the old block, will be there.
Gerald, in his time, has been at the very top in the nation's contest ropers. And we all congratulate him for being active in these contests, and sponsoring this celebration.
A Letter From Across The Water
With the East wind carrying a message of rain on the way, and filling the vale with the sweet aroma of the fragrance of wild flowers, I am thinking of a letter I received the other day sent from across the Pacific in Japan by a man who fondly remembers all the charms of The Land of The Pines and Pine.

I would like to present you with some of this letter, from Mr. Robert C. Hendel, a man who appreciates the wonders of God's world, and who said many kind things about my columns and our Mountain Homeland.
Dear Mr. Storm,
This is to let you know how much I've enjoyed reading your column over the years. It just now occurs to me that it has been over 20 years, in fact.
I first came to New Mexico closer to 30 years ago, under auspices of the U.S. Army, and started coming to the ski area that had just opened at Sierra Blanca. I was taken with New Mexico enough to return there on my own volition several years later (El Paso, actually) and stayed there until the late '60s.
I keep reading the Times to stay reminded that there is a place like the New Mexico mountains. I've had the good fortune of visiting and living in some beautiful and interesting places since, but New Mexico remains special.

And nothing describes this better than your column. It is always a joy to read about the changing seasons and their manifestation in the surrounding of your home. Someone unfamiliar with New Mexico might see the mountains as a succession of peaks and ridges variously covered with cedar or pine trees; after many years it is still an education to read your description of the variety of plant and animal life that they support. While of course I don't know the people whom you write about, it is still impressive to know that many of them are the sons and daughters of people who settled this area, or native Americans who have been here far longer than that. Your accounts of your animals are equally moving; every reader must have shared some grief at Shady Logan's passing and happiness in the arrival of his successor.
Please keep up the good work, and I will continue to eagerly await the Times wherever I may be.
Sincerely,
Bob Hendel
Minato-ku, Tokyo
Thank you for your fine letter, Mr. Robert Hendel, we hope to see you one of these days. God bless you.

The Plant Corner

by Sally Black

DEAR SALLY:
Thank you for your advice about new plants for the county clerk's office. Would you please give some "general plant care" instructions? Many of us care for the plants and we would appreciate a few general rules to follow.
Martha McKnight Proctor Carrizozo

DEAR MARTHA:
Providing the proper treatment and correct cultural conditions for a plant will take you three parts of the way along the road to successful growing. But all the proper treatment and conditions ever invented will be of no avail if the plant purchased is sub-standard. If a plant leaving a greenhouse, where it has almost ideal conditions, is of poor quality, there is not much hope of it doing well in the home or office where conditions are likely to be much less agreeable. So look for healthy plants to buy and the end result will be very much more satisfactory.
Plants are very much like people in their requirements; they are much more likely to respond favorably to conditions and treatment that offer "moderation" rather than excess. Too much of almost everything will be detrimental to both flowering and foliage plants—too much water, too much heat, too much fertilizer, or too little of any of the above. The key word is moderation. Refer to a good book, such as The Complete Book of Houseplants with Edwin M. Stefek, consultant editor for particular plant needs.

Given reasonable warmth of about 60 degrees throughout the 24 hours of the day, the next most important need is good light. Daylight is preferable, although many plants will do perfectly well with artificial light or a mixture of both. When shade is the recommendation for growing, it does not mean the plant should be sent to the darkest corner of the room.
Established plants will benefit from feeding with a balanced liquid fertilizer. But if plants produce lots of lush leaves and seem reluctant to bloom, it may help if the fertilizer normally used is changed to a tomato fertilizer. Mix at about one-quarter of the package instructions and water and feed with the weak dilution about once a week until the flowers come.
It is sometimes thought that feeding plants is like giving medicine to a person lying sick in bed. Nothing could be further from the truth. Feeding plants is like feeding a healthy human being; it sustains and keeps the body in good condition, but is not necessarily a cure.

In fact, the feeding of sick plants could very well finish them off altogether. The plants to feed are only those that are well-established in their pots and freely producing new growth, and the best time to feed is during spring and summer months. Always wait from four to six months to feed newly purchased plants or newly potted plants.
Cleaning plants helps to control pests and improve appearance. Avoid chemical cleaners. Use "soapy" suds and rinse with distilled water. Never clean new growth; clean only the dark green, glossy leaves and never try to clean the plants with hairy leaves.
Watering plants is done by fingers touching the soil; if the soil is dry just beneath the surface, it's time to water. The water schedule depends on the size of the pot, heat, potting soil, etc. Water until water is flowing out of the drainage holes. If the water flows out too fast, cork the holes, and then remove the corks after the soil is soaked. Never allow plants to stand for more than five minutes in a tray of water. If plant and soil become too soggy-wet, it is often sure to kill the plant. Heavy watering leaches out plant nutrients. Try for a moist soil without water flowing to much from the drain holes.

Good drainage is absolutely essential for healthy plants. Try for a non-smoking area, free of smoke polluted air as most plants are just as allergic to tobacco smoke as people. Keep the air fresh and circulating, even if you have to use an electric fan.
Good luck, Martha, and I will return to check on your plants real soon.
Send questions to Sally Black, c/o Ruidoso News, P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, NM 88345.

ATTENTION: CITIZENS OF RUIDOSO AND LINCOLN COUNTY!

ELECTED and APPOINTED officials (who are supposed to be representing YOU and YOUR needs and desires) apparently are supporting and "railroading" a proposal for development of the old Municipal Airport Property as a golf course, even though most of you who have spoken out are OPPOSED to this proposal, which, if it receives final approval in its present form, would give up (almost rent-free) nearly the entire 160-acre parcel for an exclusive single-purpose project. We must act to ensure that the true costs and benefits of this proposed project (or any proposal for development of the property) are thoroughly examined before this development is allowed to proceed. Please consider the following:

The Municipal Airport Planning Board (MAPB) and others in favor of this proposal have stated the following:

Those who oppose this golf course proposal offer the following:

POINT	COUNTERPOINT
This proposal complies with the Airport Property Master Plan.	The Municipal Airport Property Master Plan calls for a multi-function development, including an educational/cultural complex of mixed uses.
This proposal must be accepted because it is the only one which has been submitted.	MAPB has not sought other proposals. The Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County (EDCLC) has received over 100 inquiries. Surely, a few of those could result in serious proposals for development in accordance with the Master Plan.
This project will not cost the Village anything.	It will cost citizens the value of vast amounts of water, and the environmental and health impacts of pesticide and fertilizer use. Ruidoso will receive no meaningful revenue from the developers for at least fifteen years, but your tax dollars are still being used to retire the bond which was issued to purchase the Airport Property. In case of bankruptcy or default by either developer, the Village would have no rights to the improvements unless the Village assumes this defaulted note, also.
This project will stimulate the economy, provide many jobs, and relieve the seasonal nature of business.	This project actually will provide only a few jobs, at the expense of other tourism-oriented businesses. A golf course is still seasonal (and the season is nearly the same as the racing season).
We must begin developing the property immediately.	There will be no magical "overnight" economic turnaround. We must ensure the property is developed according to the best interest of all area citizens.
There is plenty of water available to supply the needs of this project.	Millions of gallons of water will be required every week. Our ground-water supplies are not infinite. Entering into a contract to give away valuable water before obtaining the State Engineer's approval could cause great harm to the citizens of Ruidoso.
This proposal includes provision for a convention/civic center.	Under the terms of the proposed contract, the Village of Ruidoso MUST build a 12,000-square-foot (minimum) activity or events center as soon as funds are available. This requirement forces the Village to build an inadequate facility with currently available funds, instead of waiting until funding is available to build the much more functional facility already approved by the Village Council.
Are you aware that the MAPB endorsed this proposal after a public hearing at which nearly two-thirds of the citizens who commented spoke against this proposal? What is the purpose of a public hearing if the stated facts and opinions are ignored when making decisions?
If you have questions or if you have additional facts or concerns which should be brought to the attention of area citizens, please contact CITIZENS IN ACTION at any of the following telephone numbers: 257-7614, 257-6317, 257-6340, 258-5645. Also, please be sure to participate in the next public hearing (to consider lease terms) on June 19.

Foresters seek wise course for both loggers and nesting owls

by RICHARD A. HAROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The economic impact on the local logging industry played an important role in the decision to reduce the protective buffer surrounding an uncommon owl's roosting areas in the Lincoln Forest.

The Mexican spotted owl, a relative of the endangered Northern spotted owl, has been found in mixed-conifer stands in several national forests in New Mexico and Arizona.

Because so little is known about the Mexican variety, a task force recommended that logging be prohibited in the 450 acres closest to a confirmed owl's, or a nesting pair's, home range.

An exception was made in the Lincoln National Forest, where the buffer, described by the task force as a "minimum" standard, was reduced to 300 acres.

The reduction in standard was made because of "critical demand for saw lumber in the local economy," said a letter from Dave Jolly, Regional Forest Director for the southwest region, to David Henderson, New Mexico State Representative for the National Audubon Society.

Henderson, also a member of the task force which made the recommendation, said he was angry the exception was made for the Lincoln forest. He also said the exception was made to supply lumber to White Sands Forest Products in Alamogordo.

Jolly said the guidelines are temporary and will be reviewed in March 1990.

The two factors bearing on his decision, he said, were the protection of the owl and "not to unduly restrict an industry."

Mike Hess, manager at White Sands, said if the 450-acre buffer zone was implemented in the Lincoln forest, all timber sales presently planned would have to be suspended.

"It would shut down operations in the Lincoln," he said.

"I don't believe that to be the case," said John Peterson, the National Forest wildlife biologist involved in the owl studies.

Both Peterson and Max Goodwin, the district ranger in Cloudcroft, agree that timber sales would be reduced, but not eliminated.

The forest plan for next year allows for 16 million board-feet of saw lumber to be harvested in the Lincoln forest, said Marlin Hughes, director of timber for the southwest forest region.

This yield would be reduced to nine or 10 million board-feet if the 450-acre zone were enforced, he said. He also said all the present sales outlined to be made would have to be re-surveyed if the 450-acre standard were used.

Based on information received from the district office, said Hughes, the regional office was not willing to shut down a mill by implementing the 450-acre standard.

"It is not the forest service's responsibility to keep a mill operating," said Henderson.

"This goes against good biology," he said. "I believe this bird could be proved to be as rare or rarer than the Northern spotted owl," an endangered species.

The Mexican spotted owl, officially listed as a sensitive species, prefers old-growth, mixed-conifer forests for nesting, officials on both sides agree.

The disagreement arises over how rare the bird is, and whether or not it can survive with even minimal logging activity.

The task force which recommended the guidelines on logging activity was made up of representatives from the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, New Mexico Game & Fish, Arizona Game & Fish, the National Forest Service, the National Audubon Association, and other citizens groups and individuals.

Roger Skaggs, a graduate student from New Mexico State University and who has done most of the research on the owl in the Lincoln forest, also participated in the task force.

Henderson said the guidelines recommended were the "minimum protection standards, and emphasize minimum."

He also said the guidelines were designed to avoid listing the bird as endangered.

The Mexican spotted owl "is one of the most understudied rare birds in the southwest," he said.

Besides the economic impact on the lumber industry, the forest service cited the greater number of Mexican spotted owls found in the Lincoln forest as a reason for relaxing the guidelines.

Marlin Hughes said the population density of the owl in the Lincoln forest is greater than in any other similar type.

Sixty owl sites have been confirmed, said John Peterson, and there are 90 others, the majority being pairs, to be confirmed.

Henderson explains this is misleading, because more time and energy has been spent searching for the owl in the Lincoln forest than in any other.

Without baseline information, it is impossible to tell if the owl population is increasing, stable, or decreasing, he said.

He also said a single bird that responds to a call is different from a nesting pair, though these numbers are frequently mixed together.

The forest service said at this point there is no evidence to suggest logging activity threatens the owl's habitat.

Hughes said the Lincoln forest, especially in the Cloudcroft area where the greatest number of owls have been found, was heavily logged between 1900 and 1920, including large areas of clear-cutting.

"I don't think we'll impact on (the owl) that much," he said.

Logging activity in this area has been more selective, he said, since 1930.

He also said that fewer Mexican spotted owls have been found in similar stands in other forests, though he did acknowledge the same effort to find the owls has not been repeated outside of the Lincoln forest.

Most NM teachers get 5% raise

New Mexico public school teachers can expect an average five percent increase in pay, said a news release from the National Education Association of New Mexico (NEANM).

Of the 88 school districts in the state, the State Department of Education (SDE) reported 63 districts scheduling pay increases of at least four percent. Forty-two districts have planned pay increases of five percent or more.

Ruidoso teachers will receive a 4.24 percent increase, raising their average salary to $27,828.28; Carizozo, a 4.69 percent increase to $25,379.02; Capitan, a 6.96 percent increase to $27,377.49; Hondo, a 4.89 percent increase to $23,160.56; Corona teachers received no increase.

The release said legislators during the next session will "consider specific earmarking of salary monies if school boards didn't allocate the funding to employees."

The five percent increase costs $33 million for the 1989-90 school year, said the release.

NEANM president Ima Wells said New Mexico ranks 40th in teacher salaries. The average teacher salary in New Mexico is $25,134.02 for a professional group with an average 12 years experience.

Ruidoso's salaries are 10.72 percent larger than the state average.

The highest average salary in New Mexico is $31,686.91 in Texico whose teachers received an increase of 5.24 percent.

Tatum teachers have the second highest pay in the state at $31,229.68, with Los Alamos third at $30,225.28, and Jal fourth at $30,098.46. Tatum teachers will get a 4.79 percent increase; Los Alamos, 7.01 percent, and Jal, 1.45 percent.

The man who helped Smokey tells his tale

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Smokey the bear cried like a baby the day he was found during a forest fire.

M. Smith Houston, of El Paso, Texas, was there when the charred bear cub was brought out of the forest fire that burned in the Capitan Gap in 1950.

Some firefighters wondered if they should kill the badly burned cub, but Houston said no.

He dug a hole large enough to hold the cub, then filled the hole with water to make a mixture of mud, "like cake batter," said the 84-year-old Houston.

The bear was lowered into the mud while his head was held up, and "in awhile he quieted down and went to sleep," said Houston.

Afterwards, the cub was wrapped up in a toe-sack and sent off to Roswell.

"That was the last I ever heard of him," Houston said of Smokey the Bear.

Houston was born in Sulphur Springs, Texas. His great-grandfather, C.M. Houston, cousin to Sam Houston, settled the area. Traveling with Fred Riley, Houston stopped at Tinnie while on his way to California.

Riley told him he knew where there was a restaurant for sale.

Houston bought the restaurant and was operating it at the time of the fire. Early one morning, the sheriff pulled in as Houston opened his store. After coffee, the sheriff asked Houston to cook for the fire crew then fighting the fire.

"I told him I didn't have anyone to watch my store, but he said 'never mind, lock it up,'" said Houston.

He then went out to a ranch adjacent to the fire and dug a large pit and covered it with a cattle-guard for a barbecue.

It was on the morning of the third day the fire fighters brought the crying bear cub into camp.

Karon Petty wins the Annual Founder's Tourney at Alto

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Sports Writer

Karon Petty walked off the 18th green the overall winner of the Annual Founder's Day Tournament at Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club Wednesday.

Joyce Van Landingham was the first flight low gross winner for 18 holes and Melba Draper won low net honors.

Mary Madden grabbed top honors for the second flight 18-hole gross. Joy Seiler was the low net golfer.

In the nine-hole group, Velma Treadwell was the winner over all the field.

Phyllis Long dropped her putts to win low gross. Frances Berry was low net in the tournament.

Mable Draper won the "chip in" pot, snaking a pitch and run for a bullseye on the eighth green.

Publicity chairman Carol Bayless said more than 50 golfers participated in the event honoring the late Moizelle Kirk, founder of the Alto Ladies Association.

The Ladies Association hosted the players with a punch bowl and an award ceremony.

Bayless said the Kachina Doll Tournament, the association's largest tournament of the year is next week, June 13-15.

Bayless said the Kachina tournament is for members and guests.

"The Kachina Doll Tournament has gained so much in popularity that for the past several years we've had a waiting list of participants," she said.

Alto Lakes Golf and Country Club's 12th fairway is not only long and challenging, but one of the most beautiful fairways in the southeastern United States.

Alto's Carol Bayless seems to like her Founder's Tournament, honoring Moizelle Kirk who formed Alto's Ladies Association. Bayless was playing in the Kirk drive.

A young squirrel keeps a watchful eye on the flag, perhaps to gather a ball that might come a little too close.

Bayless and many of the Alto Ladies Association played in last week's Cree Meadows Uprising golf tournament. The two clubs play several tournaments together during the summer season.

National bike race proposed for Ruidoso area next spring

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Sports Writer

A National bicycle race featuring some of the best cyclists in the world is being scheduled for the Ruidoso area in the spring of 1990.

Before the preliminary promotions and advertising begin, the race committee decided a good name is needed to herald the event and a name-the-race contest was announced.

Ann Evans, a member of the committee, said everyone is eligible for the contest and stressed the race will be considered a multi-community event. Participants need only to jot down their name, address and telephone number, along with a proposed name for consideration. Entries may be mailed to PO Drawer 4330 or dropped off in the post office entrance.

Participants can enter as many names as they want and as often as they want until the deadline at 5 p.m. Monday, June 26.

The committee plans to announce the winner in the special Fourth of July edition of The Ruidoso News.

The name should reflect the area and the event.

Galen Farrington, coach of the local bicycle team, said the race has to be very challenging to bring in top racers. Farrington will handle the technical aspects of the race.

He said races would include a prologue, a short time trial to determine race leadership. He said the day following the prologue the established leader will wear the shirt of a marked man. He said it is possible that the leader's jersey would shift from leader to leader.

Farrington said he envisions the 100-mile road race starting in Ruidoso, moving through Capitan and Nogal, circling that area twice and returning to the Ruidoso area.

Farrington said a third element of the race will be a true time trial, perhaps on the new airport road where he said conditions are ideal.

Farrington said the race will be patterned after the popular Tour of the Gila in Silver City.

Coaches clinic feeds Ruidoso sports program

The Inn of the Mountain Gods golf course was alive with football players Monday and Tuesday for the annual Ruidoso Football Clinic.

Cooper Henderson and Mike Speck, former Ruidoso coaches who now coach in Artesia, sponsored the clinic to benefit the Ruidoso football program.

Speck said 75 percent of the clinic's proceeds will go for the marketing of next year's Ruidoso football clinic. Speck said 15 percent will be used for the student players and 10 percent is to finance Ruidoso coaches clinics and game day uniforms.

Borde Williams and Clifton Neal are in charge of disbursing the funds for the program. There are no coaches salaries disbursed with clinic money.

Belmont simulcast to highlight Norgor Derby

The tenth running of the Norgor Derby and the simulcast of the Belmont Stakes highlight Saturday's 13-race card at Ruidoso Downs.

In the Belmont Stakes, Sunday Silence will try to become the 12th horse to win thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown. The last horse to win the Triple Crown was Affirmed in 1978.

Sunday Silence won the Kentucky Derby by two and a half lengths, and won the Preakness by a nose. In both races, Sunday Silence beat Easy Goer. Easy Goer was the 1988 two-year-old champion. He is also expected in the Belmont. Others expected in the Belmont Stakes are Irish Actor, Imbibe, Le Voyageur, Triple Buck, Awe Inspiring, Fire Maker, Hawkster, and Rock Point.

The Norgor Derby will be Saturday's live feature at Ruidoso Downs. The Norgor Derby will be the 12th race on the card. The 12-horse field is highlighted by Clever Leader and Just Like Lace. Clever Leader is trained by William Leach. Just Like Lace is trained by T.E. Davidson. Those two horses won Norgor Derby Trials on June 2. The top six finishers in each of the Norgor Derby Trials earned berths in the finals.

Clever Leader won the 1988 Norgor Futurity. He has had two starts in 1989: a fifth-place finish in an allowance, and the Derby trial victory. Clever Leader will be ridden by Joe Martinez, who won aboard both trial winners.

Just Like Lace has won 11-of-16 career starts. She is 5-for-6 in 1989. In her last start before her trial victory, she won the Las Senoritas Stakes at The Downs at Albuquerque. She also won the Las Cruces Handicap at Sunland Park in March. Just Like Lace will be ridden by J.R. Valenzuela.

Special Show spies victory

Special Show surges to the front of the line in the Kansas Futurity Consolation on June 3. Special Show was ridden by Larry Payne and is owned by Itallcounts, Inc.

Did I win?

This horse takes a gander at the board the winner's circle at Ruidoso Downs to check his winnings as he's led out of Race Track.

Armed Response takes aim at Friday's Norgor Futurity

Three divisions of the Norgor Futurity headline Friday's 13-race card which includes one simulcast from Hollywood Park. No one correctly selected the proper combination for the Twin Trifecta on Sunday so the carryover for Friday is a whopping $72,826.

A total of 27 Thoroughbreds passed the entry box on Tuesday, for the Norgor Futurity trials with the probable favorite being Armed Response. Armed Response, trained by Bob Arnett, is in the third division of the trials which is race 11. Armed Response ran second by a length to Five R's Koolady in the $154,474 Riley Allison Futurity at Sunland Park near El Paso on May 7th.

Acey Ambassador, trained by Cliff Lambert, will likely be the second favorite. Acey Ambassador won the Riley Allison Futurity Consolation at Sunland Park on May 6. He is in the first division of the trials which is the sixth race.

That Special Time, trained by Charles Mattox, ran sixth in the Riley Allison Futurity. He is in the seventh race on the card which is the second division of the trials.

Other horses of note are Courtney's Native, Lads Ego, Fast Gin Fizz, Coys's Princess, Almost Texas, Adios Mundo, Track Charnmer, and Bold Botchery who are all winners.

The simulcast of the Grade I Belmont Stakes will highlight Saturday's racing card. Sunday Silence will meet Easy Goer for the third time and try to be the first horse to win the Triple Crown since Affirmed in 1978.

Economic development group worries about funding

Item 2 on the agenda for a meeting Thursday of the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County board of directors will be the "hot potato."

That's "discussion of county funding." The Lincoln County Commission has indicated funding for next year may have to be cut to allow the county to address "infrastructure emergencies that need immediate attention," according to Commissioner Karon Petty.

Petty, who also is on the board of EDCLC, made the remarks at a budget hearing May 15. EDCLC officials were advised at the hearing that they may have to seek other sources of funding beyond this fiscal year.

A mill levy has been used to fund the EDCLC and expires at the end of this fiscal year.

Responding to critics of the EDCLC program, George Puckett, executive director, said, "I find it hard to comprehend people who knock the fact that we have prospects."

Objectives of the EDCLC are to attract stable industries and businesses to Lincoln County to create more jobs.

that Ruidoso can be something besides a tourist town with minimum wage jobs," said Puckett.

He said response to an advertising campaign has been gratifying. The EDCLC placed newspaper advertisements in Houston, Austin and Dallas in Texas, in Albuquerque, and in Phoenix and Tucson in Arizona.

Puckett produced a stack of several dozen inquiries which the ads produced.

The EDCLC became involved last week in the continuing debate within the village over the highest and best use of the old airport land in the heart of the village when Puckett told the council that the old airport land is the only site available in the Ruidoso area for industrial development.

Meanwhile, the village called for a public hearing June 19 on plans to put a golf course and hotel on the land.

Buddy Bundick, president of the EDCLC board, said the board is on record as favoring the golf course and hotel concept.

However, he said, "There is no other land affordable for an industrial park in Ruidoso."

Puckett told the council last week that the EDCLC had an inquiry from a group contemplating a Disney-type theme park which eventually would employ up to 4,000 people. In an interview, Puckett said that group also is considering 22 other sites for the theme park and that all he has in hand on the project is a telephone inquiry resulting from the newspaper advertising.

The director said he would rather see 20 companies with 20 employees each rather than one company which would employ 400 people.

However, he said, "we wouldn't turn down the 400." In defending progress made by EDCLC, Puckett said the first month was spent "getting acquainted," the second month, "organization," the third month, "advertising," and since then, responding to the advertising campaign.

EDCLC has a $130,000 budget, offices in the Ruidoso Financial Center and two paid employees. Bundick told the county commission that the organization could survive on a $95,000 budget.

Part of EDCLC's funding comes from memberships from businesses in Lincoln County.

Fish Hatchery helps ensure good fishing

by CAROLYN SHORT
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

It's a sport that requires enough talent to fling a piece of lead at the end of a string into a chosen spot and a strong enough stomach to pierce a squirming slimy worm.

This sport is not for everyone, but for those who have chosen it as a summer pastime, the Mescalero Reservation certainly provides an adequate outlet for those who hold onto the dream of hauling in the inevitable "one that got away."

But many sportsmen don't see the other side of this popular pastime; that is, where the "big ones" come from.

The Mescalero National Fish Hatchery is responsible for most of the fish caught out of the reservation waters. Hatchery manager Dean Chase said in order to produce a natural population, the fish need a sandy place to spawn and this area doesn't provide adequate spawning areas.

Rainbow trout and the Snake

River cutthroat trout are the primary fish produced at the hatchery. The eggs of these fish are shipped in from different hatcheries around the United States. Once the eggs arrive at the hatchery in Mescalero, it then becomes the hatchery staff's responsibility to raise the fish from tiny eggs into full-grown "keepers."

Chase said they receive the eggs in the "eye stage" where the eyes are visible through the soft opaque egg shells. The tiny fish hatch in about a month, and from that point on, Chase said it's just a matter of feeding them and cleaning their runways.

"We're primarily a production hatchery," Chase said. "That means we produce fish for stocking purposes."

Once the fish are about three inches long, they can be placed in the larger runways. The fish are constantly graded and separated according to size. In about three years, the trout will be large enough to brave the reservation rivers and lakes.

Chase added that about one-third of the fish produced at the hatchery go to Mescalero waters. The remaining two-thirds go to other reservations in New Mexico, including the Acoma Pueblo and the Jicarilla Apache Reservation. Some are sent to non-reservation waters in Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and Fort Hood, Texas.

"We drive 41,000 miles a year to distribute fish," Chase said.

In addition to the more common species of trout raised in the hatchery, Chase said they are also producing two other species whose numbers have been decreasing over the recent years. The Gila trout, which is on the endangered species list, and the Rio Grande cutthroat trout, a threatened species, are both being produced at the hatchery in an effort to restore their numbers in the wild.

The Gila trout, Chase said, is occupying only about five percent of its native area, the Gila wilderness. A Gila trout recovery team is studying the different streams the trout have been known to inhabit to see if subspecies of the Gila trout exist.

"They want to make sure they have that same population in a stream someplace else," Chase said.

The Rio Grande cutthroat trout has been seen in areas ranging from the Mescalero area to the southern portion of Colorado.

"The Rio Grande cutthroat numbers are declining, but they're not to the endangered point yet," Chase said.

Originally, the hatchery was built in 1965 for the purpose of maintaining the fish population on reservation waters, Chase said. They now supply the rivers, streams and lakes with about 100,000 pounds of fish each year, enough to keep the average sport fisherman busy.

"The fish are caught as fast as we can stock them," Chase said.

SCULPTOR JIM KNOX WITH ANGELINA'S PRIDE

Two-man show opens Friday

Angelina's Pride, a sculpture in front of Lindavida Fine Art, 1085 Mechem Drive, has become a familiar friend to residents and visitors alike since its installation over two years ago.

Visitors stop to photograph the sculpture almost daily, according to a news release.

Sculptor Jim Knox of Tucson, Arizona, will be at Lindavida Fine Art Friday night at a show and sale featuring numerous works of the well-known sculptor. The large sculpture on Mechem is one figure of a trio done as a commission for a state park in Texas. A smaller version, actually done as a study for the monument is also on display at Lindavida.

Gallery owner Linda Smith hopes the life-size Indian sculpture will be the first of many sculptures to be placed around the village.

"Publicly displayed sculpture can be an important part of the artistic environment for residents as well as visitors to our village. I see the possibility of reinforcing Ruidoso's image as an art center by implementing a public art program, much like the one that has made Loveland, Colorado, a sculpture center of national importance," Smith says.

Knox will be joined by painter Loren Willis of Heber, Arizona. Willis is a true westerner through heritage and spirit. His grandfather was an Indian fighter and guide for pioneers headed west. Willis has chosen the American Indian as his favorite subject and presents a distinctive look at them through his own style and imagination.

The Knox-Willis show and sale will continue through June 27.

Group budgets $100,000 for promotions

The advertising committee of the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce Tuesday shaped up a $101,000 promotion budget for consideration later by the chamber board of directors and by the Ruidoso Village Council.

The funds are for brochures, public relations and media expenditures for the Convention and Visitors Bureau of the chamber.

Advertising committee members heard from Tracey Moran of the CVB that an ad placed in "American West," a slick publication comparable to "Southern Living," drew 400 responses.

The committee voted not to renew a contract with the Bob Gold Agency for public relations since Gold has announced he will run for governor in 1990.

Gold has been a lobbyist for the Ruidoso Chamber and has handled public relations.

The committee, however, can hire Gold on a per-project basis.

Tina Ridley of the Phil Price Agency, of Lubbock, Texas, has been designated by the Price agency to handle Chamber PR for the next year.

Moran said the committee had applied for state matching funds for public relations and promotion as it has in years past. She said the amount allowed by the state has been dwindling, however, as the state has been emphasizing regional advertising and promotion rather than concentrating on individual communities.

Two years ago the state provided $23,700 in matching funds; last year the figure was $18,000. The committee is budgeting $15,000 this year, but the actual amount approved by the state won't be known for some time.

Next meeting of the committee will be at 1:30 p.m. July 11.

Water...

With the Rio Ruidoso trickling down a rocky streambed, it looks like we're pretty lucky to have enough water to take care of this village's needs this summer.

A number of New Mexico cities are talking about rationing water as the state suffers from the least amount of rainfall in years. The Rio Ruidoso is low, but it's not dry. And Alto Lake is full enough to afford some good fishing.

And Ruidoso residents and visitors can still shower, water their lawns and drink all the water they want. So, what has separated this little village from so many others faced with rationing water?

Eagle Creek wells.

That's right. Ruidoso is pumping two million gallons of water a day from the Eagle Creek wells. And, according to recent tests of those wells, there's plenty more water down there.

Without those wells, the village would already have used all the water stored in Alto Lake. That would have put a stop to the fishing at that municipal lake. And the little trickle along the Rio Ruidoso would be nothing but a memory, if the village had to divert the entire flow into the water treatment plant.

And, does anybody remember when we had to call emergency wells into service, including the Hollywood Well? Remember the slime on our dishes and the yellow water that left rings in tubs, and showers? Well, thanks to the Eagle Creek wells, we aren't having to use those emergency wells with their hard water even though we're experiencing a drought.

Sometime today, have a nice, cool drink of water, and take a moment to be thankful for the Eagle Creek wellfield. We'd be up a dry creekbed without it.—fj

On The Record... By Frankie Jarrell

There are two sides to every-thing, or so I've been told.

But, it's kind of hard to hear both sides, if you're so busy defend- ing your own ideas that you can't listen to somebody else. I wasn't al- ways willing to listen to the other side, but that is no longer the case.

I listen, I ask questions, listen some more and then I make up my own mind.

Just because I don't agree with you, doesn't mean I didn't hear what you had to say. It's OK with me if you disagree with me—that doesn't mean you're being bribed or bought off or that you're a complete idiot. It just means we've taken the same information, and come up with two different conclusions.

I spent a lot of time a few months ago with a friend who had some very definite ideas about some of these issues. We talked a lot, he shared his ideas, and I listened.

In the end, after doing some serious thinking and further re- search, I came down on a different side than my friend. I thought we would still be friends.

"You've been listening to the wrong people," he said, upon learn- ing that I didn't agree with his con- clusions. And we haven't talked since.

That friend is quite the opposite of a woman that I also consider to be a friend. The two of us disagree regularly.

But, when she calls me with a comment or a question, I always listen, because I have a lot of respect for her opinions. She's pro- vided me with valuable information that I've used in digging for facts and following up on stories.

I don't question her honesty or the reasons she believes the way she does, and she gives me the same respect.

Councillor J.D. James, when he was running for office, often said "we can disagree without being dis- agreeable." It sounds kind of corny (sorry, J.D., but it does), but it also contains a most important philoso- phy.

There's no reason to write off everybody who doesn't agree on every subject. This world, and even this little village, have plenty of space for adversity.

We have some important deci- sions facing village residents over the next month. We'll all be hearing all kinds of facts, half truths and outright myths about proposals be- fore the council on a golf course de- velopment and about a change in form of government.

We'll all hear the same informa- tion, and we'll come up with a vari- ety of questions. In the end, some of us will believe one way and some another.

That won't mean we're listening to the wrong people, being bought off or bribed or anything else. It will just mean we've taken the same information and come up with different answers.

That's OK with me. I kind of think that's the American way...like in a democracy.

Jehovah's Witnesses to attend Lubbock meeting

Members of the Ruidoso congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses will be among 5,000 expected for a district convention in Lubbock, Texas, this week.

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York announced a series of 133 district conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses in the United States this summer, including the Lubbock meeting.

Spokesman D.E. Shropshire said approximately 1,370,000 delegates are expected to attend the meetings in 67 different locations. Shropshire said more than 5,000 persons are scheduled to attend "Godly Devotion" District Convention at the Lubbock Civic Center on June 9 through June 11.

"To acquire godly devotion requires taking God and his Word seriously," Shropshire said. "To exercise godly devotion, one needs to know God accurately and then act in harmony with that knowledge."

"This calls for us to be conscious of our spiritual need," he said. "And in these times we need all the help we can get. Our district conventions will do much to provide us with that help."

Shropshire said representatives from 44 congregations in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico will attend the convention in Lubbock.

The principal address at the convention is scheduled at 2:10 p.m. Sunday on "Deliverance Near for People of Godly Devotion!" All seats are free and no collection will be taken.

Lions support dogs for blind

More than 300 blind people around the world are more mobile each year because of the Leader Dogs for the Blind program which furnishes trained animals carefully matched with their masters.

The Leader Dogs and their new masters are trained together for nearly four weeks at the Leader Dogs for the Blind training facility, a mile south of Rochester, Michigan. The Leader Dogs are free to blind people.

Lions around the world furnish about 70 per cent of the cost of operating the Michigan facility.

Larry C. Colbert, who is blind, spoke to Ruidoso Valley Noon Lions Wednesday at the Ruidoso Inn concerning the program. His Leader Dog, Aero, was at his feet during the speech and question and answer period. Colbert is special representative of Leader Dogs for the Blind.

Colbert, who is from Tempe, Arizona, told Lions it costs about $8,500 to match a Leader Dog with a potential master and train them to be utterly compatible. Costs include veterinary medical care at a $1.5 million veterinary hospital at the training center.

Three breeds of dogs are used in the program, German Shepherd, Labrador Retriever and Golden Retriever.

Leader Dogs for the Blind was founded in 1939 by a group of Michigan Lions to train dogs to lead blind persons and provide facilities and means whereby blind persons may obtain leaders. The nonprofit organization is served by a national board of 30 trustees.

Lions Club

Modern Eye Care

by Wayne A. Delamater, M.D.

BOYS WHO WEAR GLASSES

People tend to associate the wearing of glasses with high intelligence, and they may be justified. A study of more than 150,000 teenagers was conducted by researchers at Toi Arvy University to look for a link between nearsightedness (myopia) and high intelligence. Their findings, published in the American Medical Association's "Archives of Ophthalmology", showed that nearly 28 percent of the boys in the 17 to 19-year-old age group had a standard I.Q. test score of 128 or more. This compares with only 8 percent in the age group who were both myopic and had an I.Q. below 90. (An I.Q. score of 100 is the mean, while 130 is gifted). Furthermore, these statistics hold even as age and the years of schooling increase. While no one knows which begets the other, nearsightedness or high intelligence, an obvious link has been established.

For further information, please call or schedule an appointment with your eye doctor. Dr. Delamater specializes in medical and surgical diseases of the eye. He is certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and of the American College of Surgeons. His practice is located in Roswell, New Mexico. 634-0370
