Chamber shuts down Ruidoso visitors bureau

It looks like the Ruidoso Convention and Visitors Bureau (CVB) may be going on "vacation."

The CVB will have to stop all promotions of tourism and conventions and fall events because of a lack of a contract with the village of Ruidoso, according to Ronnie Paulger, Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce president.

Paulger reported the winding down of the CVB at a board meeting Wednesday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce.

"We can't even market Mesa Airlines," Paulger told the board.

Tuesday night, the Ruidoso Village Council voted to table consideration of the contract with CVB until June 19. CVB operates under the Chamber umbrella but, by ordinance, is financed through lodge's tax funds on a matching basis. Approximately $140,000 is involved in advertising and promotion funds and funds earmarked for economic development through CVB.

"We have complied with everything the Village of Ruidoso has asked us to do," Paulger told his board.

He said Ron Andrews and Jess Stinson voted not to table further consideration of the contract. Tracey Moran, CVB director, told Chamber directors that the Lodge's Tax Advisory Committee, headed by Jeff Chapman, favored immediate signing of a contract.

Paulger said that the lodge's tax committee and CVB had agreed on contract terms, but that Tuesday night some changes were noted in Mayor Victor Alonso named Charles E. Norwood of Wylie, Texas, as the new city manager/treasurer during Tuesday night's regular council meeting.

Norwood is a native of the city manager of Wylie, Texas, a community northeast of Dallas. He has been the city manager of Wylie since 1989.

Before becoming the city manager in Wylie, he was the city manager of Port Neches, Texas, from 1976 to 1989. He also served as the city manager of Huntington, Texas, from 1973 to 1976, city manager in Portland, Texas, from 1968 to 1973.

He worked for Honeywell, Inc. in Lubbock, Texas, from 1967 to 1968. Before that he served as city manager of Mexia, Texas, for 10 months in 1967, he served as city manager of Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, from 1965 to 1967, city manager of Aberrathy, Texas, from 1962 to 1965.

Norwood has also worked as assistant city manager in Georgetown, Texas, and for the Santa Fe Railway Company. He also served two years in the U.S. Army.

Norwood has a bachelor of science degree in public administration from Texas Tech University in 1962.

He has been affiliated with the Texas City Management Association, the International City Management Association, and the Government Finance Officers Association.

Ruidoso village councilor and Mayor Alonso interviewed the top five candidates for the position on May 19 and the offer was extended to Norwood last week.

During current village budget hearings, councilor Don Norwood total salary as $56,040. That includes a base salary, health, life and vision insurance, and a seven percent match by the village to the International City Managers Association retirement fund. The village has also offered to pay Norwood's moving expenses up to $3,500.

Former village manager Frank Potter's total salary was listed as $51,303.

As village manager, Norwood is also entitled to an automobile and four weeks of vacation per year.

Village councillors began the task Tuesday morning of reviewing the village's 1990-91 fiscal year budget.

Councillors had previously constructed departmental budgets for their budgets by 10 percent over last year to prepare them with no overtime and without using the 5.425 mill levied implemented by the previous council.

With all that village finance director John Varney told the councillors they still faced a deficit of $587,803. The deficit occurred in three specific areas: the general fund, airport allocations and the biggest area, $411,000, the council authorized to put in utilities in the subdivision around Grandstone Canyon Reservoir.

The council was scheduled to go over the budgets of six different departments on Tuesday morning but instead spent the morning discussing organization.

The salary for the new village manager was discussed as well as the salary for the newly created position of deputy village manager.

The council offered interim village manager Leon Eggleston the position of deputy village manager, and he has accepted. Eggleston had resigned effective May 31, citing philosophic differences with the direction the council was heading with the personnel ordinance.

Councillors set the total salary for the new village manager at $56,040 and the total salary of the deputy manager at $47,826.

Mayor Victor Alonso announced he wanted with the council approval to create the office of city attorney. Alonso said the city attorney would be an in-house position with a total salary, plus benefits of around $48,000. Alonso said he had spoken with current village attorney John Underwood about his desire to have the position in-house.

Underwood's current contract as village attorney expires on August 31, and councillors suggested there might need to be some cover up time for the new attorney to get familiarized. The mayor and council decided the expenses for a legal secretary would be left out until the attorney comes on board and can let the council know what the other needs are.

The Mayor and council also discussed relieving Varney of any managerial responsibilities and allowing him to focus on the numbers as the village accountant. The personnel currently under Varney would report to the deputy village manager.

The council discussed the elimination of all division director positions from upper management. The three divisions, finance, infrastructure, and Transportation and Aviation would also be eliminated. Currently only one of the division director positions is filled. Finance division director Leon Eggleston became the deputy village manager infrastructure division director Becky Bell-Durham resigned and Transportation and Aviation division director Tim Morris will be strictly the airport manager.

The first group to appear before the council with its budget proposal was the Lodge's Tax Advisory Board.

Chairman Jeff Chapman explained to the council how the board gave up to 75 percent of the lodge's tax promotional fund to the Chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau (CVB) and the other 25 percent was given to various organizations. He then gave the council a breakdown of how the advisory board proposed the $32,500 be distributed among 12 organizations.

After Chapman's presentation, Tony Wilcoxson presented the Convention and Visitor Bureau's proposed budget to the council.

The budget called for the CVB to receive $97,500 from the lodge's tax and $43,500 from the village's match of the Economic Development fund.

After going over the budget line item by line item, Councillor Ron Andrews raised concerns over the 15 percent agency markup the Phil Price Agency has for handling production of the CVB's material. He questioned whether it could be done cheaper by the CVB on its own.

"I think we should let the council and the Chamber do what they do best and let the advertising agency do what they do best," Wilcoxson said.

Following the discussions, members of the Chamber and CVB asked if the budget would be approved. Councillors said they couldn't approve the budget until they had reviewed all the departmental budgets.

On Tuesday afternoon, the mayor and council took up their own budget. Councillors deleted $10,650 for contract lobbying from their legislative budget. They added an additional $2,000 to their travel and schools budget of $4,000, and added another line item of $2,000 for board and commissions.

On Wednesday afternoon, the council approved a $37,500 line item in its budget for support of the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County (EDCLC).

EDCLC President Don Shaw said it was hard to get a day-to-day picture of what the EDCLC has done for Lincoln County. In the last 18 months, he said, the EDCLC had brought four companies to the Ruidoso area. Those four companies created 52 jobs and more than $500,000 in annual payrolls, will be spending $455,000 in supplies and business services, Shaw said.

The EDCLC would be receiving half a mill from the county for funding and another one-fourth mill guaranteed for every fourth they came up with in matching funds.

Shaw told the council for the $37,500 in funds, they would receive quarterly reports and quarterly financial statements on how the money is being spent.

The total budget for the legislative fund was $77,313.

Grand jury indicts 18-year-old for vehicular homicide in '89 fatal crash

by RICHARD A. HARROLD

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A Lincoln County grand jury on Thursday, May 24, indicted Michael R. Velasquez, 18, on four different counts related to an accident that occurred October 7, 1989, south of Carrizozo.

Velasquez is charged with vehicular homicide and great bodily injury by vehicle, both felony charges, and with having defective equipment on his vehicle and with reckless driving in an accident when the young man's vehicle's brakes failed and he drove into the back of a vehicle driven by Cynthia Morales.

Morales' baby daughter was thrown from the vehicle in the accident and died later at Lincoln County Medical Center.

Morales was also indicted by the grand jury on a misdemeanor charge of failure to use a safety belt to restrain the child.

The grand jury indictment alleges Velasquez was unlawfully operating his vehicle, allegedly driving recklessly "in willful disregard of the rights or safety of others and without due caution and circumspection and at a speed or in a manner so as to endanger or likely to endanger any person or property," stated the indictment document.

"I have never seen such an outrageous grand jury in my life," said David C. Serna, defense attorney for the 18-year-old serviceman.

Serna, Velasquez's attorney, told The News he believes the District Attorney's office has so far been very fair to his client, but finds the actions of the grand jury extremely outrageous.

He said the grand jury was hostile and accusatory.

"They were not fair," said Serna. "My client is extremely innocent."

Serna told The News he had been a prosecutor with the violent crimes division of the District Attorney's office in Bernalillo County for four years. During that time he presented hundreds of cases to a grand jury.

"Never in my life have I seen a grand jury behave like this one," he said of the Lincoln County grand jury.

Velasquez's father testified to the grand jury he paid to have the car repaired prior to the accident and had no reason to believe the work had not been done, said Serna.

The job involved work on the rear end of the vehicle, including the brakes, said Serna.

Although Velasquez's father did not personally inspect the vehicle, he told the grand jury he was informed the work was done and the vehicle was operable, said Serna.

The defense in the trial will claim Velasquez was returning to his home in Santa Rosa when the accident occurred, said Serna.

"It is an extremely unfortunate incident in which Mr. Velasquez's brakes failed," said Serna. "He was 100 percent sober."

State Police officer Jim Hall at the scene went over to the Velasquez vehicle and tested the brakes himself, discovering the pedal went all the way to the floor without effect, said Serna.

Serna also told The News that Velasquez volunteered at the scene of the accident to submit to both a breath test and a blood test for alcohol consumption, but was told by the officer at the scene the test was not necessary because the officer said he could tell Velasquez had not been drinking.

Other media reports that the accident was alcohol related are inaccurate, said Serna.

"I have been provided with only some of the articles currently circulated regarding this case," said Serna. "They are so filled with inaccuracies that a fair trial is virtually impossible."

Serna characterized his client as mayor was conditional upon the successful completion of a physical examination and a voluntary drug test. Norwood is expected to start work on Monday, July 2.

Councillors postponed the renewal of the contract with the Convention and Visitors Bureau until after a workshop meeting with the Lodgers Tax Advisory Board. The vote was 4-2 to postpone, with Councillors Ron Andrews and Jess Stinson casting the "no" votes.

The contract for the Convention and Visitors Bureau calls for one-third of the Economic Development Fund match by the village to go for administrative and up to 75 percent of the lodgers tax collected in a fiscal year.

During discussion on the contract, Councillor Andrews told village attorney John Underwood a paragraph referring to the one-third of the village's Economic Development Funds should be changed to read "up to one-third."

Chamber President Ronnie Paulger objected to the changes saying that's not what we agreed upon. Paulger said the ordinance states one-third of the economic development funds.

"You've moved the goalpost on us in the middle of the game," he said.

The Chamber announced on Wednesday it will not commit to any more advertisement and promotions on convention and visitors into a new contract is signed. See related story.

During a public hearing on Tuesday night, councillors approved a zoning map change from R-1 to C-1 in Tract B and the north half of lot 126, Block 14B, Sleepy Hollow Subdivision.

This was the first public hearing for the village council under the new quasi-judicial hearing procedures brought about by the batter shell case in Albuquerque. That case requires all witnesses in a matter concerning a planning and zoning decision to swear in. The Ruidoso Planning and Zoning is already using the procedures in its public hearings.

The property owner, Mark Carpenter of Dan De Camis, said he wanted to have the land zoned the same as his regular property. He said currently he has no plans to do anything with the property, adding if he did do anything it would probably be to put in a nature trail.

Hazel Haynesworth, representing the Upper Canyon Land Owners Association, said she objected to the rezoning as a private citizen and the president of the association.

Haynesworth said the rezoning would cause a domino effect in the Upper Canyon which would ruin the picturesque, charming and historic area. She said she has no objection to developing existing commercialization, but to rezone a property commercial without a plan is not a good idea.

"To simply rezone property without a plan is dangerous and simply not fair," she said.

Two other Upper Canyon residents, Jackie Rawlins and Kathy Hairston, spoke before the council and said they supported Carpenter's efforts and the addition of the commercial property would not bring on additional traffic or cause additional fire hazards.

Carpenter told the council the extra land for expansion was a dream of his and he just wanted this property commercial for possible future use.

"There is something about commercialization in the Upper Canyon that makes people think we are putting in a nuclear plant," said Carpenter.

Village councillors voted 5-0 for the rezoning, with Councillor Al Junge abstaining from the vote because his daughter owns property next door.

The Council heard a complaint from Dorothy Ann Mahanay of Amarillo, Texas, regarding the failure of the village to install or to require a developer to install a proper retaining wall behind the Sierra Mall Shopping Center. Mahanay owns the property at 106 Cedar Place.

She said a rent house located on the property is only 15 feet from the dropoff to the mall parking lot. She added when the mall was being put in she contacted the developer Wayne Dacy about the situation, but received no reply.

"One of the first rules of real estate is you can't damage someone else's property with your property," Mahanay said.

The property was eventually damaged by fire and Mahanay said she again tried calling Dacy with no success. Dacy's company, CSD Incorporated, filed for protection under Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Mahanay said the property has been for sale since 1986, and she has not been able to sell the property or repair it. She produced and read from two newspaper clippings which reported the village made the developer go in and backfill the area behind the True Value Hardware store. She asked why the village had not required the entire area behind the mall to be backfilled or to have a retaining wall.

She said she had visited several state agencies in Santa Fe and Albuquerque and they told her the same thing: get a good lawyer and sue. Mahanay asked for the village to either put up a retaining wall or purchase her property.

Village attorney John Underwood said the mall property is currently in bankruptcy court. He suggested the village should join Mahanay in a cooperative effort to locate the potential buyer and take enforcement action against them to put up the retaining wall.

"Everyone she looks to has filed bankruptcy except the Village of Ruidoso," Underwood said.

Councillors unanimously voted to join Mahanay in her efforts. Mayor Alonso stressed this was a cooperative effort, not a lawsuit.

In other action before the council on Tuesday night:

Councillors heard a report from Chester Haughawaut of Eastern New Mexico University on a survey to determine the feasibility of a community college in Ruidoso. Haughawaut said they had already surveyed the students in town and were in the process of surveying the parents.

He added an important part of the survey would be for the business community to respond. He said surveys would be going out to business owners in the next few days and it was important for them to respond and let the school know what kind of training, vocational or academic, is needed.

Haughawaut said similar community college centers are a good way for communities to get higher education at lower costs. He added the center would offer primarily a two year curriculum, with vocational and technical training.

Harold D. Smith of the Environmental Protection Agencies Region Six office in Dallas, Texas gave the council a report on limiting factors which could prevent the Regional Waste Water Treatment Plant from working properly.

Smith listed four potential factors which could keep the village from meeting its limitation on discharges under its Federal Discharge Permit. Those factors are: sludge management, infiltration flow in the city, operator retention, and a user charge system.

Smith said it remains to be seen what effect the new drying beds will have on sludge in winter conditions. He said operator retention involves low salaries and without significantly trained people, there are going to be problems. He said the user charge system is part of the Federal grant requirements and is used for operations, maintenance and replacement parts.

Councillors approved a request by Convention and Visitors Bureau Director Tracy Moran to commit the yet-to-be-built civic events center for the New Mexico Association of Counties (NMAOC) 1992 Convention.

The NMAOC had asked for complimentary use of the civic events center, but councillors felt this was not appropriate. They instructed Moran to submit a proposal to NMAOC saying the village would provide the civic center at a fee which would recover the village's expenses for utilities, staff setup and janitorial services.

Councillors gave their approval for the Tri-Cities Rod Run to be held in School House Park on October 5 through 7.

The Council gave Mainstreet Ruidoso director Mary Maul permission to seek proposals for a planning consultant firm to develop a comprehensive master plan for Mainstreet.

The extension of the contract for the air traffic controllers at the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport (SBRA) was postponed until June 12, because the mayor and council wanted to find out if the tower was really necessary.

Councillors gave the staff at the SBRA permission to advertise for an opening for a beginning lineman.

Resolution 90-10 regarding several budget adjustments was approved by the council. All items, except for one in vehicle maintenance, had a corresponding line-item decrease.

The council postponed for 90 days consideration of Resolution 90-11 regarding uncollected water accounts. Councillor Al Junge felt the new village manager should take a look at the policy regarding water accounts.

Village Finance Director John Varley received permission from the councillors to seek written quotes from an outside accounting firm to perform the annual audit for the next three years.

Councillors approved an easement with the Ruidoso School Board for the jogging track behind White Mountain Schools.

The regular June 12 council meeting was the date set for a public hearing regarding Ordinance 90-6 and the Uniform Traffic Ordinance. Chief William Newman said the proposed ordinance would repeal the existing one and replace it with the new one which contained updated traffic laws.

June 19 was the date set for a council workshop with the Lodgers Tax Advisory Board to go over policies and give directions.

Councillors awarded the bid in the amount of $25,000 for a chip spreader to Excel Machinery Company Incorporated of Amarillo, Texas.

Shuts down

the contract. Paulger said he thought that any differences would be ironed out Tuesday night.

The Chamber president said that workshops had been held to acquaint new city councillors with the operation of CVB.

"I don't know what we have done wrong... we can't even proceed with replacing Tracey," he said.

CVB director Tracey Moran has resigned effective June 7 to join the Radisson Corporation which plans to build a hotel in Ruidoso at the old airport site. She will train in Santa Fe for eight months and then return to Ruidoso. The Chamber has been soliciting applicants for that position.

Concerning the advertising committee of the Chamber, which utilizes lodger's tax funds for advertising and promotion, Paulger said, "Let's start winding this sucker down. We aren't going to obligate the CVB if we can't follow through."

Moran said she feels that the council's reluctance to sign a contract is because "particular councilmen" feel that all power should be in the Lodger's Tax Advisory Committee.

She said that if the council "won't give us enough money, let them do it. We will lose the ad committee and the Phil Price Advertising Agency."

Of terms in the contract, Moran said, "It was the strongest budget we have ever developed. We came up with a blockbuster of a budget."

The CVB sponsors the Aspentest events and handles promotion and advertising for other activities including the Bavarian Bash and Connoisseur Classic, among other major events.

Moran mentioned that the mayor had appointed lodger's tax committee member Ed Hyman to the Chamber advertising committee, adding that Hyman missed the first meeting since he was appointed.

She said Ron Andrews was appointed to the Chamber board and to the ad committee as a village council representative, that he has missed the past two meetings of the board.

Paulger indicated he is optimistic that the Chamber board and the village will work out their differences eventually.

"We don't know if the CVB will have any money the rest of the year," he added.

"The community has to market Mesa Airlines," Paulger said. The Council has agreed to provide revenue guarantees in exchange for Mesa providing scheduled air service to Sierra Blanca Regional Airport.

Promoting that service will be vital to provide the passengers needed for the airline to break even or make money.

He suggested that board members ask all entities that mail out monthly bills to include flyers about Mesa serving Ruidoso for the next 90 days, at which time a decision will be made on further service. "Load factors" will be the determining factor. Board member Becky Bell Durham agreed to co-chair a committee to "get the word out" on Mesa's air service.

Paulger praised the Council's agreeing to underwrite Mesa's operation for the next 90 days.

He said the Village Council accomplished "a bold step in agreeing to guarantee Mesa into this area."

In other business, the Chamber board approved a slate of officers for next year as proposed by Ron Wall, chairman of a nominating committee.

President-elect is Tony Wilcoxson; treasurer, David Saylor; vice president of organizational development, Don Dutton; economic development, Mike Seelbach; advertising and promotion, Mickey McGuire; community development, Dan LeCrone.

Realtor Greg Masters was elected to the board to fill a vacancy.

council reviewed the budgets of the Library, Parks and Recreation, Senior Citizens, and Sanitation.

Councillor made two changes in the Library's budget requests. $5,000 was deleted from the Library Book line item of $25,000. $3,000 was deleted from the $9,000 paving lot line item in the capital improvements part of the Library budget. The total budget for the Library stands at $136,980.

In the Parks and Recreation budget, the council transferred all telephone expenditures from the swimming pool department to the regular parks and recreation department. They also approved a $1,060 increase in the budget for chemicals at the swimming pool. It was noted that $10,800 in the budget would be used for the repair of the pool after the season is over. The final budget for the swimming pool department is $72,880.

In the regular parks and recreation budget, councillors decided, after considerable debate, to add an additional $6,000 to the general park maintenance fund for repair of two of the tennis court in School House Park. Councillors did delete $14,750 from the parks and recreation's capital outlay budget. This left a total budget for the parks and recreation department at $237,868.

Councillors made only two minor changes to the Senior Citizens budget. One a $90 dollar increase in the telephone line item and the other a $75 decrease in the travel and schools line item. The total budget for the Senior Citizens department is $44,936.

The Sanitation/Solid Waste Department had two major adjustments to its budget. A vacant truck drivers position was eliminated, reducing the personal services line item by $25,319. Councillors also reduced the required physical examination line item by $400, but added a new purchasing line item in the amount of $1,200.

A $60,000 tractor was deleted from the department's capital outlay budget, leaving it with a total budget of $533,762.

The budget for the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport took up most of Wednesday afternoon. A total of $13,235 was added to the airport's jet fuel line item of $64,100. Councillors felt it would be better to go ahead and put the extra money in the budget for the fuel, than have the airport come back during the year and ask for a budget increase.

An additional $370 was added to the $150 required physical examination line item. An ice machine capable of making 600 pounds of ice will be gone from the airport after the council deleted $1,020 for it from the $3,709 equipment rental line item. Only one member of the airport staff will be going to a special crash training school at the Brayton Fire Training Academy in College Station, Texas. Councillors cut the travel and schools line item in half to $2,535.

The largest deletion in the airport budget came when the councillors cut the $7,350 vehicle and fuel allowances line items. Two of the employees at the airport had received $150 a month from the village for leasing their personal vehicles. Councillors told airport manager Tim Morris and assistant manager Richard Stegall to go back and look at a possible way of giving the employees a pay raise as compensation for the loss in revenue.

Councillors added $75,000 to the airport budget as part of a guarantee subsidy for Mesa Airlines. This brought the total budget up to $757,848.

Budget hearings continue today (Thursday) and Friday, then again next Monday, June 4.

One working copy of the proposed budget was due in the Department for Financial Affairs (DFA) office in Santa Fe on Friday, June 1.

Varley explained, because of problems he has had, the budget was not ready until this week. DFA has been notified the budget will be late.

Two copies of the final budget, approved by the governing body, have to be in the DFA office by July 20.

The proposed budget will allow DFA to approve Ruidoso to write checks and close out its books for fiscal year 1989-90 on June 30. Until the books are closed, the village will have no idea of the unaudited beginning cash balance it will start the new year with. Varley explained that is why the final budget is not due until July 20.

"a most decent, most respectful and most honorable young man and went on to say an untainted jury could easily determine his innocence."

"However, pre-trial publicity has tainted the name of this young man who is currently serving our country in Germany," said Serna. "The coverage in local media, particularly given by Mr. Joiner, will make it difficult to find a fair jury. I would certainly urge Mr. Joiner to shut his trap if he believes in the American System."

Serna referred to Ernest Joiner, editor and publisher of the Lincoln County News in Carrizozo.

"It is my personal belief that criminal charges are being pursued in order to achieve financial gain for the unfortunate victims," Serna also said. "My client is also an unfortunate victim; yet he is not pursuing financial gain."

Serna has already filed in District Court for a waiver of an arraignment hearing.

"We've waived arraignment because my client is a member of the U.S. armed forces stationed in Germany," said Serna. "He has pleaded not guilty to each and every charge in writing."

Serna, who is the chairman of the board of directors of the criminal law section of the State Bar of New Mexico, said he is taking the Velasquez case at a reduced fee because of his strong commitment to justice.

Serna also replied he is not running for public office, nor has any intention to do so.

Attorney Gary Mitchell is representing Cynthia Morales who was indicted by the grand jury on a misdeemeanor charge for safety belt use required.

The District Attorney's office sought an indictment on child abuse charges, alleging Morales was negligent because she did not have her baby daughter properly restrained in the vehicle, said Mitchell.

However, the grand jury decided not enough evidence was present to indict on the child abuse charge, he said.

"We do appreciate the grand jury had the decency not to indict a mother who lost her baby in an unfortunate accident," said Mitchell. "She just wants to get on with her life."

Mitchell told The News Morales accumulated between $60,000 and $70,000 in medical bills for treatment to injuries she sustained in the accident.

Cisneros keeps eyes on the big picture

by FRANKIE JARRELL
Ruidoso News Editor

Henry Cisneros is the kind of guy who wants to know where he's going and how he's going to get there — and on the way he'll take another look at where he's been.

The former mayor of San Antonio, Texas, told The News Saturday that he and his staff worked at 150 percent while he was leading that Texas town forward. Well, he hasn't slowed down.

Cisneros, headed for Ruidoso to speak during an Economic Development Corporation and Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce seminar at the Inn of the Mountain Gods, stepped off a commercial airliner in El Paso, Texas, and started asking questions.

The man who is credited with turning the San Antonio economy around, was all set to tell the story of how he accomplished that feat to the seminar participants. But, before he climbed aboard a single-engine Cessna for his ride to the Sierra Blanca Regional Airport, Cisneros made some telephone calls, took a look at a map to locate Ruidoso and asked about a dozen questions about Ruidoso.

Pilot John Russell and Anita Sanders, administrative assistant for the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County, were on hand to greet Cisneros, and the three settled in for the 45-minute flight from El Paso to SBRA.

Cisneros made a quick review of his notes, and then agreed to answer some questions over how he worked what some say was a miracle in the floundering Home of the Alamo.

Cisneros said he tried to get the people of San Antonio looking at the big picture, asking some questions about direction and talking among themselves. He said it was important to get people with diverse views to communicate.

He said his program started with Target 90, a process that involved about 500 people sitting on various task forces, reviewing the town's needs and setting some goals for the community.

"I asked them to suspend their disbelief and skepticism," said Cisneros, adding that he challenged all those volunteers to imagine what could be done under the best of circumstances.

And when those goals were set, he called on some political capital to begin to implement some huge programs. Cisneros said his administration was able to persuade voters to tax themselves for a $500 million bond for streets and drainage, to redo downtown and for the dome stadium. He said he worked with the state, and the state made a $300 million investment in San Antonio highways.

He also asked to state to invest in higher education as well as the medical school.

"All of it in the context of how does it fit the larger plan."

Cisneros, who still lives and works in San Antonio, said those "big picture" things are set.

"We put some basic building blocks in place and they are doing well," he said.

At the same time, in spite of a scandal in his personal life that may have marred his public image, Cisneros left office with a 70 percent approval rating.

Since Cisneros has been out of city politics and in the private sector, several things have happened to hurt San Antonio's economy. Economic difficulties in Texas hit San Antonio through banks and savings and loans.

The property tax rolls have decreased over the last few years, and the city has gotten into some financial difficulties.

But, the building blocks and long-range planning that is in place will see that Texas town through the rough spots.

Cisneros has some advice for people who want their communities to succeed and prosper. He said the community is the focal point for economic development, but it's up to that community.

"If communities are going to prosper or succeed, it's going to be because they've decided they want to and set a direction."

But the vehicle has to be in place for people to work together.

"It's almost like a set piece formula you can follow," said Cisneros. He's convinced his formula will work anywhere, and noted there is enough momentum in our economy, enough prosperity to be shared.

Cisneros, who continues to be involved in state politics, is also sitting on several boards and chairs a number of groups. He said his visit to the Inn of the Mountain Gods, even though it was for just a part of one day, was almost like a vacation.

As the plane bumped along over the Alamogordo, White Sands area, Cisneros was ready to check out the view and get his bearings... is that the White Sands? where is Cloudcroft? and so forth.

As the little plane landed and taxied into the SBRA, Cisneros was off and running, ready to take his message to the group gathered at the Inn, and head back home.

Cisneros calls that kind of action 150 percent... or maybe he means 150 miles per hour.

Search continues for rape suspect

Area law enforcement officials are still looking for a man suspected of a rape and an attempted robbery.

Local law enforcement officials released a composite sketch of a man accused of a rape and attempted robbery in Carrizozo on Wednesday, May 23.

The victim said the suspect had a deep voice, smooth and very light complexion. He was wearing a red collared short-sleeved shirt, similar to a golf or Polo shirt. He was also wearing faded blue jeans and white, low top tennis shoes.

The suspect forced his way into the victim's home after she answered his knocks to the back door, said Lincoln County Sheriff James McSwane.

The suspect may have been looking for drugs, said the sheriff.

The Carrizozo Police Department responded to the call.

Anyone who may have information on the suspect is encouraged to call the Lincoln County Sheriff Department, Lincoln County Crime Stoppers or the Carrizozo Police.

No golfcarts allowed on public roadways

by FRANKIE JARRELL
Ruidoso News Editor

Golfcarts have taken to the roads, and even the highway, in Ruidoso Downs lately.

Downs Police Chief Skip Hazel said he's been getting several complaints a day from motorists who have had to dodge the slow off-road vehicles. His officers have been issuing warnings.

"We'll warn them once and then we'll impound them," said Hazel, who is concerned that the golfcarts, as well as other off-road vehicles, are a danger to the public when taken onto public roads.

"They should stay off of all the village, public streets and the state highway," said Hazel last week. He explained that many people at the Ruidoso Downs Race Track have the small carts to get around the racing complex.

"They can cross the main highway, as long as it's straight across,"

he said.

But he wants the drivers to know that the practice of driving on public roads is dangerous and is against the law. He and his officers, if they see a violation, will be issuing citations. Citizens also can file complaints.

State Statute 12-7-9 deals with off-highway motor vehicles, and says, in part:

"No person shall operate an off-highway motor vehicle on any limited access street at any time."

That statute sets forth enforcement regulations.

"Every police officer displaying his badge of office has the authority to enforce the provisions... and may require the operator... to produce the certificate of registration, the personal identification of the operator, and may issue citations for violations... of this ordinance."

Maskew named new acting AD

RUIDOSO (AP)—Ronnie Maskew, longtime Ruidoso high school track and cross country coach, has been named acting Warrior athletic director.

Incoming school Supt. Mike Gladden said Maskew will serve for the coming year with his performance to be reviewed in a year's time. Gladden also announced that Norman Wright will be coming to Ruidoso from Deming to serve as head boys basketball coach.

Maskew said he was pleased with his appointment and planned to keep his head cross country and track coaching responsibilities.

"We have a lot of work to do to get our program back up to the very high standard, but we expect to get there," he said.

Wright completed his first year in Deming after five years as head coach in Clayton, where he made three trips to the state tournament, winning the AA title in 1987.

Antelope numbers are down in the southern part of New Mexico

Pronghorn antelope numbers have generally decreased in southern New Mexico and are stable or increasing in the northeast, according to aerial surveys just completed by the Department of Game and Fish.

The agency does not anticipate any drastic changes in the number of hunting licenses available in 1990, but the final number will not be set until July 12.

In southeastern New Mexico, antelope populations have declined due to several years of dry weather, poor range conditions, adult mortality and poor recruitment of fawns into the herds, said Mike Bell, area game manager in Roswell. About one buck was counted for every two does, but the figure ranged from 24 percent bucks to 7 percent bucks, depending on the area surveyed.

In the southwest, dry conditions also prevail on many grasslands, said area game manager Mike Robertson. The survey average was one buck for every two does, with the figure ranging from 27 percent bucks to 55 percent bucks, depending on the area observed.

Northeastern New Mexico has had better precipitation, so herds there are generally stable or increasing, said game manager Lisa Fisher.

The aerial surveys result in estimates of the ratios of bucks to does in spring, and fawns in early summer. The surveys help show trends from one year to the next, but are not intended to estimate the total number of antelope in the state.

The final number of hunting licenses will not be set until July 12, for both public and private land hunts, said Robert Jenks, assistant chief of game management for the department. The agency may issue about 1,500 licenses through public drawings and 3,000 through landowners, slightly lesser numbers than in recent years. The deadline for landowners to sign hunting agreements with the game department is July 11.

Archery and handicapped sportsmen will have an unlimited number of licenses in 1990, as contrasted to 1989. They will also make hunting arrangements directly with landowners. Antelope hunts begin as early as Aug. 4 for bow and extend into early October for rifle and muzzle-loader.

Hunting has far more of an impact on antelope than range conditions do, and will not occur in areas where antelope numbers are marginal, said Jenks.

Typical hunter success for antelope is 10 percent for archery, 50 percent for muzzle-loader and 80-90 percent for rifle.

Whoooo gives a hoot about the spotted owls?

by RICHARD A. HARROLD
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

At least two New Mexico organizations object to measures to protect the Mexican spotted owl.

Both the New Mexico Land Use Alliance (NMLUA) and the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association (NMCGA) believe recent measures to protect the Mexican spotted owl in New Mexico will negatively impact local economies supported by ranching and logging.

In a news release the NMLUA, a coalition of public land use groups, said it was asking the U.S. Forest Service to "delist" the owl as a sensitive species because of the bird's peripheral and improved status in New Mexico.

But the group may be hooting at the wrong tree, because the status listings that will have the greatest impact are determined by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (F&W), a division of the U.S. Department of Interior.

The Forest Service is a division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Mexican spotted owl was the target of a population survey last summer in the Smokey Bear Ranger District of the Lincoln National Forest. Another survey was completed in the Cloudfcroft District in the Sacramento Mountains before that.

Another survey is being conducted by the Forest Service this summer, the results of which will be useful in making the final determination of the owl's status in the federal registry, said Charlie McDonald of the F&W.

In December 1989, a resident of Phoenix, Arizona petitioned the F&W service to list the owl as an endangered species, which would have dramatic impact on activities in federal lands where the owl has its habitat.

James Hartshorne, president of the NMLUA submitted comments to the F&W as well as the Forest Service requesting the bird be delisted because it is actually a resident of central Mexico and not an indigenous species in New Mexico.

The NMLUA news release also stated that recent studies on the bird indicate the Mexican spotted owl has improved its status during the past 50 years in spite of heavy timber harvesting in its habitat range.

However, numerous wildlife biologists representing the Forest Service and other organizations have previously stated that recent studies provide no information yet as to the owl's population growth or decline because no baseline data over the years has been collected.

Also, the Endangered Species Act provides the determination a species is threatened or endangered be based on the species status in all or a significant portion of its range.

It has already been determined the U.S. constitutes a significant portion of the Mexican spotted owl's range, which means the final determination can be made based on the owl's status in the U.S. alone, said McDonald.

Currently, the owl is considered a "candidate" species for federal listing. This status does not provide for any mandated protective measures, said McDonald.

Whether or not the petition filed last year is warranted is now under consideration by the F&W. This review must be completed by December 21 this year.

"This issue has not as much to do with the owl as it does with a handful of fringe groups trying to monkey-wrench the timber, mining and livestock industries in the state," said Hartshorne in the NMLUA news release. "Raising the false specter of an endangered species where none has been proven to exist is merely an attempt to disrupt important industries in the state."

"Monkey-wrenching" is a term derived from the novel The Monkey-Wrench Gang, written by the late Edward Abbey.

The novel describes techniques used by environmentalists to disrupt activities they believe threaten environmental quality. These techniques include dismantling heavy equipment, cutting down billboards, removing survey markers for new roads or generally undoing what already has been done.

The term has taken on a new quality with activities promoted by the controversial environmental group Earth First! which has been responsible for spiking trees marked for timber harvest.

The activity has been widely condemned because when a chain saw goes into a spiked tree, the chain can break causing serious injury or even death to the logger.

However, it has been predominantly mainstream environmental groups, such as the National Wildlife Federation, the Wilderness Society and the National Audubon Society that have been involved in promoting protection of the Mexican spotted owl, rather than what the NMLUA calls "fringe groups."

The entire endangered species policy has recently come under attack by various groups, including Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan who is charged with enforcing the act.

The NMCGA in a news release supported Lujan's comments which recommend Congress review how the Endangered Species Act is being implemented.

NMCGA president Bud Eppers of Roswell said in the release that recent restrictions on logging and other activities threaten to destroy fragile rural economies.

"These foundation industries have provided a stable tax base for rural communities and counties for decades," said Eppers in the release. "The restrictions imposed by the administering agencies will force local governments to turn to Congress for financial support."

The Forest Service already has historically made payments to counties to offset the effect public lands have on the local tax base.

"Reduced supplies of meat and timber will add additional costs at the retail level," said Eppers.

An estimated eight to ten percent of all ranching outfits rely on public lands to sustain their businesses, according to Jim Hest, founder of the Public Lands Action Network.

Still, the NMCGA urges the New Mexico Congressional delegation to halt implementation of restrictions on multiple use activities until the Congress can conduct oversight hearings on the impacts.

"It is imperative that all costs associated with Endangered Species protection be evaluated before we destroy the rural, state and national economies," said Eppers.

However, in spite of requests made by various industry groups that a decision be delayed until further data is collected, the F&W is required by law to come to a decision based on the best information available now, said McDonald.

"We don't have that option," he said.

The first decision will be whether or not the petition is warranted, which will be followed by a status review before listing is recommended or not.

At its full limit, the process can take until December 1991.

In the meantime, any protective measures now in place are self-imposed guidelines by the Forest Service.

Current guidelines affect activity in the Lincoln National Forest to protect the Mexican spotted owl provide for a 1,300-acre management area around a confirmed nesting site in which owl activities are limited.

Within that 1,300-acre area exists a 450-acre core area in which all ground disturbing activities are prohibited.

The 450-acre core area was increased in size from 300 acres last year, while the management area was reduced from 1,300 acres.

These changes were made because the Forest Service determined that, while the owl may need protection, the previous management area negatively impacted the local timber industry.

Spencer running for commission

Stirling T. Spencer is a Republican candidate for County Commissioner in District II, a fourth generation Lincoln County resident, Spencer is the great-grandson of the first governor of New Mexico, W.C. McDonald.

Spencer attended Carrizozo public schools and graduated from high school and junior college at New Mexico Military Institute in 1968. He went on to New Mexico State University and earned a degree in chemical engineering (BSChE) in 1971.

He described in a prepared release his board involvement as extensive. He has been the chairman of the Carrizozo School Board, member of the Soil Conservation Service board, chairman of the Lincoln Territorial Historic Commission, director of manufacturing, engineering, research and development for Continental Water Systems Corporation, and a director on the board for the Albuquerque Production Credit Association.

Spencer is also a registered professional engineer.

"With my past experience in the manufacturing business, director at a financial lending institution, public school and territorial regulatory involvement along with my lifetime participation in the many events with county residents in Lincoln County, I feel that I am qualified to best represent the wishes of the residents of greater Lincoln County and my district in optimizing the best solutions to opportunities presented to the county governing body," said Spencer through a prepared statement.

Spencer currently owns and operates the Bar W Ranch near Carrizozo.

Bob Hemphill seeks another term

Incumbent County Commissioner Robert B. Hemphill is a Republican candidate for reelection in the June 5 primary.

Hemphill also served as a trustee for the Town of Carrizozo, mayor pro-tem in Carrizozo and mayor of Carrizozo. He was elected to the county commission in 1989 and was chairman from January to August, 1989.

"During my tenure with Lincoln County I have been proud to be a member of an elected official team that has been commended for the spirit of cooperation among all offices," Hemphill said in a prepared statement. "This cooperation has allowed the County to operate more efficiently, more effectively and cheaper."

Hemphill teaches math and computer science at the Carrizozo Municipal Schools. He served in the Air Force from 1959 to 1966. He has a bachelor's and masters degree from New Mexico Tech.

"If re-elected I pledge to continue to work with all agencies in our county, state and federal governments for the betterment of Lincoln County as we continue to make Lincoln County a desirable place to live and work as we enter the decade of the 90's," said Hemphill.

Dawn Street lights up the track Saturday

Dawn Street, with jockey Jerry Nicodemus on for the ride, leaves the field behind in the $57,378 Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity Monday at Ruidoso Downs Race Track. R. Dee Hubbard and Edward Allred are owners and H. Don Farris is the trainer. Ego Ideal and Mount Capitan were in a dead heat for second/third.

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Sitting pretty behind the pacesetters under jockey Jerry Nicodemus, Dawn Street powered to the front on the turn for home and held off the late charges of Mount Capitan and Ego Ideal to capture Monday's Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity, the $57,378 stakes, reserved for New Mexico-bred juveniles, was unusual in several regards.

First, the race featured two deadheats.

Prohibitive favorite Mount Capitan, who had won three of four lifetime starts, deadheated with Ego Ideal — the fastest qualifier from the time trials — for second place. Also, Jolly Ego and Tropical Rhythm finished in a deadheat for fourth.

Secondly, the winning jockey, Jerry Nicodemus, is far better known for his quarter horse rides, and rarely rides a thoroughbred. In his younger days, however, Nicodemus regularly rode thoroughbreds.

"We brought Nicodemus out of retirement," quipped trainer Don Farris.

The daughter of Dawn Of Creation sat just behind pacesetters Tricky Lieutenant and Jolly Ego for the first half mile of the race. When the frontrunners began to tire, Nicodemus moved the filly outside and she accelerated away from the field.

Dawn Street, a $5,500 yearling purchase by owners R.D. Hubbard and Edward Allred at last year's Ruidoso Horse Sales, entered the trials as a first-time starter, but qualified by finishing second.

Dawn Street covered the 5 furlongs in 1:00 flat Monday, the third-fastest final time in six runnings of the race. Farris indicated that his lightly-raced filly would probably skip the July 12 Kachina Stakes, reserved for fillies, and concentrate instead on the Aug. 5 $50,000 Rio Grande Futurity, another New Mexico-bred stakes.

Monday's fourth race trifecta paid a season-high $9,106 when Written Right, Foxy Expression and Elite Mystique ran first, second and third. For the fourth consecutive day, nobody selected the twin trifecta as the carryover for Thursday's card reached $29,508.

CAR CARE TIPS
 Presented By
RUIDOSO Ford Lincoln-Mercury

One of the best ways to keep track of your car's health, requires no mechanic...The only equipment is a little notebook and pencil. Keep track of your gas mileage, suggests the Ruidoso Ford Lincoln Mercury. Keep a record of the odometer reading and the fuel consumed from fill-up to fill-up. If you see a noticeable increase in consumption it may indicate the need for service...Perhaps something no more expensive than a new air filter or tire inflation.

NOTE: IF YOU ARE A "SEVERE SERVICE" DRIVER (TRAILER TOWING OR OTHER ABNORMAL LOADS) CHECK YOUR OWNER'S MANUAL FOR SPECIAL SERVICE REQUIREMENTS. CONSIDER INSTALLING AN AUXILIARY TRANSMISSION COOLER.

Fly Dragoness tops the field for the First Lady Handicap

Fly Dragoness seeks her third consecutive victory and second at this meeting Saturday when a field of eight fillies and mares square off in the $15,000-added First Lady Handicap at 6 furlongs.

Fly Dragoness, a New Mexico-bred daughter of Full Choke, was quite impressive while scoring a 1-length victory against most of the same competition she faces Saturday in an allowance race here May 20.

The second through fifth place finishers from that allowance race all return in this spot to again test the stakes-winning speedster from the Doyal Roberts stable.

Fly Dragoness, a 4-year-old bay filly, seldom turns in a dull effort. In 29 lifetime starts, Fly Dragoness has notched 13 wins and has been in the money 23 times.

Fly Dragoness, who last year accounted for the Road Runner Handicap here, is a career-earner of $123,500.

Another Doyal Roberts-trained horse, Ruffetta, could offer Fly Dragoness her toughest competition. The 7-year-old Kentucky-bred daughter of Sharpen Up reeled off fractions of 22.2 and 44.4 before bowing to Fly Dragoness in the stretch run of their last confrontation. Ruffetta, however, was easily best of the rest that day, finishing 3 1/4-lengths in front of third-place finisher Cool Lucille.

The stakes record for the First Lady Handicap — 1:09.2 — is also the track record for 6 furlongs, set by Flamed in 1986.

Saturday's 14-race card features two simulcasts from Hollywood Park, including the $100,000-added Honeymoon Handicap,

Horses to Watch

WOULDA BEN: Made a bold move on the turn in a 7 1/2-furlong test last week. This 5-year-old mare is gearing up for a big effort. She will be hard to handle next time out at 5 1/2 or 6 furlongs.

FOLS BID: Was stilled in the 10-hole last out going 870 yards, but still ran a game race to finish third. This 8-year-old gelding still has a few more wins left in him and will be double-tough next time out if he draws a better post position and remains at the 3200 level.

NUKE'S HI FLY GIRL: Uncorked a bold move trying a mile for only the third time in her career in her last outing. This 4-year-old filly from the Doyal Roberts Shedrow prefers to sprint and will be extra-tough if dropped back to a 6 furlong race in her next start.

SOUTHERN STARLET: Ran a monster race while breaking her maiden here last Sunday.

Proposed budget provides raise to village employees

The Capitan budget for 1990-91 could expand slightly in spite of a decrease in expected revenues.

Expected revenues for the new budget will total $223,335. Municipal taxes are expected to be $63,884, less than in '89-90 because of lower property valuations and a drop in gross receipts.

General fund expenditures are expected to be $249,254, which does not include the fire department or the beginning cash balance.

Village employees will receive a five percent across the board pay increase if the budget is approved by the state Department of Finance Administration.

The five percent raise is in addition to raises some employees received in April. Other employees will receive additional raises after July, according to information obtained at village hall.

Major new expenses will be realized by the water department and the highway and street department. A new $11,700 fee for Eagle Creek water rights will be added to the water department, and $11,344 will be added to the street department for street lights.

Other departments experienced slight increases in their salary line items, although the Finance Department salary line jumped from $5,787 in 1989 to $9,614 for 1990. The operating expense line in the Finance Department also showed an increase of about $2,200 to $30,481.

Although some line items are budgeted, they are never spent, such as $1,100 for juvenile recreation.

The Law Enforcement Protection Fund Grant went down by $300 to $17,300 because at the time the grant application was made the village had only one police officer.

The water and sewer department, which operates under its own budget, is expecting less monies collected than was budgeted in the past because records show the department historically never collects the amount expected.

National honoree

Vickie Sedillo was selected as one of the outstanding high school juniors from 15 states, Canada, Korea, Mexico, Guam and the Virgin Islands by the Phi Delta Kappa professional education fraternity. She is eligible to participate in a camp for prospective teachers sponsored by the fraternity.

Corona jumpers raise cash

Students from kindergarten through the sixth grade participated in the Jump Rope Project sponsored by the New Mexico Heart Association at the Corona Schools.

Winning jumpers for each grade are Julie Kessler (kindergarten, 50 jumps), Beth Bragg and Albert Sanchez (first grade, tied with 64 jumps), Sarah Stewart (second grade, 102), Amy Bonds (third grade, 393), Jackie Feldman (fourth grade, 318), Yesenia Arellanes (fifth grade, 587) and Lindsey Bonds (sixth grade, 779).

Kim Riley was the grand champion jumper with 1,443 jumps; runner-up was Sandy Brown with 1,215 jumps.

A total $1,138.21 was collected in donations for the Heart Association.

Protect pets from the plague

With springtime comes warm weather and that also brings fleas.

In a release from the Environmental Improvement Division, Lincoln County residents are cautioned to be aware that fleas carry the plague and precautions can be taken to prevent infection from this curable, although potentially deadly, disease.

The plague is caused by a bacteria and is primarily a disease of wild rodents, such as rats, rabbits and mice. The disease can be transmitted to humans from fleas from the infected rodent by a flea bite, or by direct contact with the infected blood or tissues of rodents, rabbits or carnivores.

After an incubation period of two to six days, symptoms appear which include a high fever, chills, headache and malaise.

Because the flea is a primary carrier of the disease-causing bacteria, domestic pets can carry the disease to humans also.

All forms of plague can be treated and cured with antibiotics if treatment occurs in time.

Of New Mexico's 190 human plague cases, 85 percent have survived. Most fatalities resulted from a delay in seeking medical attention.

In bubonic plague, the most common form, the bacteria infect the lymphatic system resulting in a painful, tender swelling in the lymph nodes, called a bubo.

In septicemic plague, the blood stream is infected. This type is difficult to diagnose because there is not characteristic bubo.

The most dangerous form of plague occurs when the bacteria infects the lungs, resulting in pneumonic plague.

Pneumonic plague can be transmitted from one person to another through airborne contaminated droplets when a pneumonic plague patient coughs or sneezes.

No person to person transmission of pneumonic plague has occurred in New Mexico.

The rock squirrel and its fleas have been responsible for more than half of New Mexico's human cases. The disease is maintained in nature because many species of rodents, primarily mice, are resistant to the plague bacteria but able to infect a flea which is feeding on them.

Among animals that are susceptible to plague, such as rock squirrels or prairie dogs, the disease is spread rapidly. When the natural host dies, its fleas must find a new host.

Often this is a person or domestic pet. The best plague prevention is to avoid contact with wild animals and their fleas.

The Environmental Improvement Division recommends staying away from rodent burrows and using insect repellent when outdoors.

Teach children not to attempt to feed or play with wild animals. Animals that appear tame may be sick.

Since most people acquire plague within one mile of their home, eliminate rodent attractants around the home. Rodent-proof your house and any outbuildings.

Remove piles of junk, lumber, trash, abandoned vehicles or appliances which afford shelter for rodents. Wood piles should be stacked neatly above the ground to discourage squirrels from burrowing underneath.

Pet dogs and cats should be dusted with flea powder or flea spray on a weekly basis and prevented from roaming. Many human plague cases have been the result of pets carrying plague-infected fleas into the home.

Dogs are generally resistant to plague bacteria, but cats can become ill if the ingest a plague-infected rodent or rabbit.

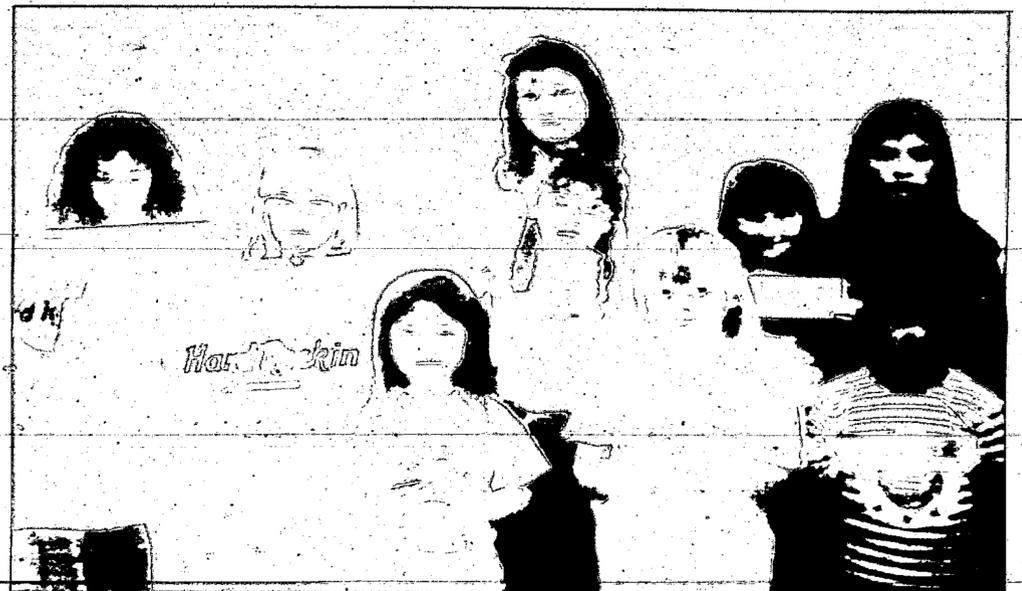

Feline plague is closely monitored because of a cat's ability to transmit the disease to people. Humans have contracted plague through the bite of an infected cat, by direct contact with abscess material in a cat with bubonic plague, and from cats with pneumonic plague.

Plague symptoms in a cat include fever, swollen lymph nodes, lethargy and loss of appetite. If your cat is a hunter and shows any of these symptoms, have it examined immediately by a veterinarian.

Anyone who has noticed an unexplained disappearance of rodents, or who has seen sick or dead rodents or rabbits, can report this to the local office of the Environmental Improvement Division, Suite A-4 in the Ruidoso Financial Center at 1096 Mechem Drive, or call 258-3272.

The local office also has a copy of a videotape available for free loan to schools and civic groups.

For more information on plague call the local EID office or the vector control program staff in Santa Fe at 827-2790 or 827-3791.

The first step of ladder safety is simple
LOOK UP

Before you climb a ladder, look above you to make sure that there aren't power lines nearby. If your ladder could come into contact with a power line, place it in another location. Most ladders conduct electricity, so you could be shocked just by holding a ladder that touches a power line.

For more information on power line safety, call or visit your local TNP office today.

Harrison will speak at a noon seminar

In announcing the topic for the next monthly mini-seminar on June 6, Dr. Birgit LaMothe said, "In my private practice as a Mental Health Counselor I have found that many psychological problems or difficult relationship issues stem from a spouse and/or mother having to adjust to hormonal changes in her life cycle, or to actual female disorders.

This, in turn, affects the whole family, and I thought it might be a subject of interest to the public. Fortunately, Dr. William Harrison enthusiastically agreed to address our regular monthly discussion group on this matter."

Physical and psychological symptoms connected with various conditions such as pregnancy, post-partum blues, hysterectomy, or just difficult periods may be discussion material. A presentation will be made, but there will also be a question and answer period.

The goal for this session is to make people aware of how physical changes can affect mental functions, to clarify expectation, and to offer some helpful suggestions.

The brown bag lunch mini-seminars are a free community service. The meetings take place at noon at the office of Dr. LaMothe, 445 Mechem Dr.

Barbel French and Aurora Wellborn are the two activities directors at the Ruidoso Care Center in Ruidoso. The two try to keep things happening for center residents.

Ruth Hammond is a candidate for judge

Ruth Hammond announces her candidacy for Democratic nomination for probate judge of Lincoln County. Her name will appear on the Democratic ballot in the June 5 primary.

Hammond and her husband, Bud, have lived in Lincoln County since 1983.

"We visited here and were impressed with the friendly people and decided to make this our home," she said. The Hammonds, whose six children are grown, live in Carrizozo.

Since moving to Lincoln County, Hammond has been active in local and state organizations. Hammond is a member of New Mexico Press Women and was reporter-photographer for the Lincoln County News for seven years.

"I have enjoyed living here and working with the people of Lincoln County. I believe working with, and for, all the people in the capacity of probate judge will be very rewarding," Hammond said.

She is on the state board of directors for the Association for Retarded Citizens of New Mexico (ARC-NM) and a member of the New Mexico Developmental Disabilities Bureau regional advisory council.

She is president-elect of the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, Carrizozo Lodger's Tax Committee secretary, Carrizozo Industrial Development Corporation secretary, Carrizozo Woman's Club vice-president and a member of the Carrizozo Little Theater Group. She served on two citizen's advisory committees for the town of Carrizozo, one for the recent town water improvement project and another for a street paving project.

The Silver Lining

Lovely flowers brighten Saint Anne's

Special Flowers From Saint Anne's Chapel in Glencoe

Flowers for the altar at Saint Anne's Chapel in Glencoe for last Sunday's service were large white iris brought by Eleanor Bonnell Shockey from her garden. After the services Eleanor and I took some of these beautiful flowers to the Frank Coe Cemetery nearby and placed them on the graves of pioneer founders of the church. Then Eleanor gave me some of the flowers for the Storm Ranch Cemetery.

Nellie Ruth Jones recently brought some of the same type off large white iris — especially large and radiant this year — as memorials for the service. Mary Cooper has made some special beautiful home made flowers to go on the altar during the deep of winter when the flowers in the garden are asleep.

The Reverend Anne Gaddy preached an inspiring sermon based on the forty seventh Psalm: "Oh clap your hands together all ye peoples. O sing unto God with the voice of Melody."

In the prayers of the people, Nellie Ruth Jones gave thanks for the birthdays of Scott Annala, Marjorie Hall, Lois Hostetter, Ronnie Garner, Cynthia Whatley, Letha Barnes, Anne Cull and Cordye Hall. Also for the anniversary of Dick and Ruth Wardlaw and for the birth of Kristopher Jameson.

A Fond Tribute By A Daughter To Her Father

About the twenty-third of May, I think it was, I received a telephone call from Fran Randall of Mescalero saying that she had written a little Memorial Day tribute to her father,

by Daniel Aracow-Stom
The Ruidoso News

Victor was born and raised on the Mescalero Apache reservation and is one of many Mescalero Indians who served our country in all wars. He was in the Pacific area in the U.S. Navy during World War II and was a long-time member of the Mescalero American Legion Post. Many times he came over with his Mescalero members to help out in military funerals here in Ruidoso. We all appreciate Fran Randall's tribute to her beloved father; and we are happy that Victor Randall is safe and happy with Our Lord in Heaven.

the late and beloved Victor Randall; and wanted me to run it in my column knowing that Victor and I were friends for many years and that I was a pallbearer at his services.

Fran said she would deliver this little memorial to me at the news office or somewhere; and I told her to read it to me over the phone, just in case. Sure enough, somehow I missed receiving Fran's written tribute.

However the spirit of the words is that on the approach of Memorial Day, she was remembering all the happy days spent with her mother and father — that Victor was a kind and very devoted husband and father, a man of great Christian faith who lived out his faith in everyday life, that he was helpful to everyone and did everything he could to make his family happy.

Fran said that her father was a veteran of the Navy in World War II and said:

"He is in Heaven now with Our Lord, and I will fly the American Flag on Memorial Day in his honor, and I will say a prayer to God thanking him for the blessing my father brought into our lives. And I will thank God for taking care of him in Heaven."

Special Day
This is being sent to you on legal Memorial Day, May 28, just a little after high noon. Early this morning the world was overcast with clouds, and a delightful cool breeze was drifting all through the Vale. This message will reach you on the last day of May, and what a glorious May it has been.

The mountain world is getting ready for a wonderful June, with all the children of Mother Earth rejoicing throughout the land.

The little new pinon cones have appeared on the branches like little golden candies, more numerous than in years, sending their evergreen and honey incense all through the cool moist air. The mesquite on the sunny side of the world is out on full leaf, the last of the plants to leaf out the crimson cliff cactus is in full bloom, and our state flower, the Yucca is growing stalks two or three feet higher than usual, and the blooms should be larger and more beautiful than in many years.

Let us rejoice and be glad, and thank God for our veterans in this life and in Heaven; and for all our many blessings.

"Image Maker" is an oil painting started by E.I. Couse before he died in 1936, but was finished by E. Martin Hennings, another Taos founder, the same year. Both signatures are on the painting. The painting is part of a collection of New Mexico masters on display at LindaVida Fine Arts Gallery until Tuesday, June 5.

Lindavida Fine Art presents summer schedule of exhibitions

"All the good art is no longer above Interstate 40 in New Mexico," says David Smith, owner of LindaVida Fine Art, located at 1085 Mechem.

Lindavida Fine Art presents an open house show and sale Friday through Monday, June 1-4, featuring some 30 works by the New Mexico Masters.

The Taos society of artists was a small group of talent that made Taos the cultural center of the Southwest in the early twentieth century. Our heritage today from that small but powerful beginning is the entire group of New Mexico Masters.

The open house includes Joseph H. Sharp, E.M. Hennings, Walter Ufer, E.I. Couse, and O.H. Berninghaus, among others. Nicolai Fechin and Leon Gaspard, Russian born and educated, are represented, as is Thoman Hill with one of his Yosemite masterpieces.

"This is a museum quality collection of the late 19th and early 20th century American Masters—conservatively valued at $2,000,000," says art connoisseur Linda Smith.

"This is the season that marks the emergence of Ruidoso as a destination art center offering not only the finest contemporary art in the country, but also the best of the New Mexico and American Masters."

New works by veteran and newly-discovered artists will also be shown.

This season Lindavida Fine Art will present five exhibitions that will include painters Kent Wallis and Bye Bitney, sculptors Nick Moffett and Sandy Scott, the Ruidoso Colony Show and the Third Annual Plein Air Show.

Lindavida Fine Art is unlike any existing gallery. Its vast collection of sculpture and paintings is displayed in more than 16 separate rooms throughout the 7,000 square foot Ruidoso facility.

Lindavida Fine Art 1990 Season Schedule:

- Friday-Sunday June 1-3
10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily
- Open house exhibit of New Works by contemporary artists and important American art by deceased artists.
- Friday, July 6—Kent Wallis and Nick Moffett
- Friday, August 3—Bye Bitney and Sandy Scott
- Friday, August 31—Ruidoso

Colony Show.
Saturday, October 6—Third Annual Plein Air Show.

Public gets its first look at Henriette Wyeth-Hurd sketches

Fifty-eight sketches by renowned artist Henriette Wyeth will be revealed for the first time in an exhibit starting June 3 at Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery in San Patricio.

The exhibit, called "The Drawings of Henriette Wyeth," will begin with a special showing, by invitation only, at the gallery June 3.

Wyeth, who is best known for her paintings, drew the 58 pencil, charcoal, and pastel sketches in the 1920s while attending the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Art.

All of these original sketches, as well as original art work and prints by N.C. Wyeth, Miss Wyeth, Peter Hurd, Andrew Wyeth and Michael Hurd, are featured at Hurd-La Rinconada Gallery.

Wyeth was born in 1907 in Wilmington, Delaware. She was a student at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts from 1920 until 1925 and studied privately with her father, N.C. Wyeth, who was a famous illustrator.

Both private and public collections present the paintings of Wyeth, whose works include the portrait of Mrs. Richard Nixon.

She is represented in many major private collections, including those of Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and Helen Hayes MacArthur.

Editorial

Sometimes we kind of take things for granted ... like having the likes of Henrietta Wyeth Hurd, Michael Hurd and Dave McGary, living and working in our midsts ... and the likes of R. Dee and Joan Dale Hubbard spending millions in our community. We're used to having world-famous artists in our community, and we're quickly getting used to having a millionaire with the ability to keep making investments in the area. It's no big deal, right?

Well, lest we forget ... it is a big deal, and this weekend's $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence is not just a big deal, but also an unheard of melding of big money and top artists. The award is the biggest ever offered to one artist for one piece of art. And 40 "American Masters," top artists in the realism genre, have responded by putting forth their best efforts.

People all over the world will be hearing about Ruidoso Downs Race Track, the home of the world's richest quarter horse race, biggest art award and best realistic art. What an opportunity! Let's make the most of it by making the artists and visitors to our area so welcome that they can't wait to come back. And, maybe it's time we thanked the folks who came up with this great idea and are backing it up with a huge investment.

Thanks, R. Dee and Joan Dale Hubbard. We like what you're doing for our community.

Letters

DEAR EDITOR AND OUR GOOD CITIZENS:

Are we going to stand by and let terrorists come into our town and threaten our people with threats of bombing and killing our people?

This is war. And we should declare war against them. It is time for us to take our guns out of mothballs.

A number of good citizens rose up against the Hells Angels a few years ago. Why not against the Terrorists?

If they come down my street I am ready for them.

Several people have asked me what they can do against terrorists. Be Alert! If you see anyone that looks suspicious around the hospital area or near any of our schools, call the police immediately. If you hear anyone planning any terrorist act call the police immediately.

Reporter's Round

We share one Earth—the only one by RICHARD HAROLD

Ruidoso News
Staff Writer

I am tired of all the name calling. I am tired of the rhetorical hyperbole where editors and writers and organization representatives think they're so smart because they can make absurd comparisons.

It is time for the environmentalists and the ranchers and the corporate world and the know-it-all editors to stop calling each other names because all they're doing is halting progress in creating a cleaner and more productive environment.

No matter how you slice it, every group shares a considerable portion of blame in the demise of our earth.

Yes, it is true the group Earth First! engages in activities I personally find highly irresponsible. Their practice of spiking trees can be compared to terrorism as it is a premeditated threat to human safety, but the comparison stops there. To put Earth First! in the same category as those responsible for the bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut is elevating the group to martyrdom. I just don't buy that.

Yes, a majority of ranchers employ sound rangeland management techniques, although it is very likely even better techniques exist. Still, there is a significant portion of ranchers who do not manage their land well, or the public lands they use at rock-bottom prices, and the effects of this mismanagement is seen throughout the west, which does look like a moonscape in some parts.

Earth First! gets all the media attention because what its members do is dramatic. But when a rancher kills the land through mismanagement, is his crime any less significant? Not much media attention goes nationwide when a rancher, which actually occurred near Prescott, Arizona, illegally kills elk because the population increase competes with his cattle for grazing material on public lands.

The environmental movement has been criticized for being excessively negative. But if it hadn't been for the screams and outcries, Lake Erie would still be a sludge pond unsuitable for aquatic life or swimming. If it hadn't been for the alleged negativity, attempts nationwide wouldn't have been made to stop irresponsible dumping of toxic chemicals in residential aquifers.

I bet most of you can't even remember Times Beach. In fact, I hear a lot of people talk about Love Canal, but they can't tell you where it is.

Never mind looking for Times Beach on a map, unless it's an old one. The town is not there any more because of what happened.

Let's get to the real facts that the corporate world has blatantly lied to all of us. Exxon for 20 years told everyone the company was prepared to deal with any type of oil spill in Alaska and would be able to clean up everything. And now after its meager attempts to clean up, the firm publicly admits there is no way it can remove all the oil caused by the Exxon Valdez spill of Good Friday last year.

I wonder how significant that is, that the spill occurred on the same day Jesus died. If it weren't for the Endangered Species Act, the symbol of this nation might be extinct, but now is being considered for de-listing. The Act and the laws under it played an extremely important role in the revival of the peregrine falcon.

Perhaps it seems silly to come that the law is equal to all species, no matter how tiny or insignificant some may claim them to be. But this attitude only reflects there are still those in our society who do not believe that our laws are for equal application, that there are some segments of our society, either human or animal, that for some reason do not deserve equal protection under the law.

It is time we all start to work together. We are in the same boat. Whether we are white, black, red, yellow; whether we are democrats, republicans, communists or even fascists; whether we live in Captain, Corona, California, New York City, or Bangladesh; we all breathe the same air, we all have to drink the same water.

It's too easy to sit back and call each other names because that absolves us of our true responsibility to the earth. As long as we can blame someone else, we can continue in our own irresponsible ways. And as long as we continue to do that, there is nothing we can do.

As Jesus pointed out, a rich man won't give up all his wealth even for a guaranteed trip to Heaven. It would be easier to stick a camel through the eye of a needle. It seems some of us, too, are unwilling to shed our masks of self-importance to work together for a change. After all, glory goes to God in Heaven; for man, it's peace on earth and goodwill toward each other.

But even that seems impossible.

DANNY AND DEBRA D. ISAACS

Clarke, Isaacs marry

Debra D. Clarke and Danny Isaacs were married April 28 at the Community United Methodist Church in Ruidoso.

The Reverend Bob Bellows was the officiating minister for the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Diane Clarke of Ruidoso and the late Amand Ray Clarke. Eniver B. Clarke of Roswell is the bride's grandmother.

The groom is the son of Sylvia Isaacs of North Richland Hills, Texas, and James Isaacs Sr. of Fort Worth, Texas.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Ezell Ray Clarke.

She was wearing her mother's wedding gown of tulle over satin with Alencon lace bodice and sleeves. For something new, she wore a veil and headpiece that she made with silk flowers and sprays of seed pearls. The bride crocheted a blue garter for "something blue" and borrowed her sister's diamond drop necklace to wear for her wedding.

She carried a mixed handied bouquet of star gazer lillies, frezia, gerbera daisies, roses, wax flowers and statia.

Donna Clarke, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor. She wore an iris-colored tea length dress and carried a nosegay of sterling silver roses with purple statia.

Terry Beem of Fort Worth, Texas, served as best man. The men wore gray tuxedos with tails, gray jeans, boots and burgundy rose boutonnières.

Dianna Isaacs, sister of the groom, and Jackie Beem, the best man's wife, seated guests.

The bride's mother wore a fuchsia silk suit and a wrist corsage of sterling silver roses and purple statia.

The groom's mother wore a pink street length dress with a corsage of sterling silver roses and purple statia.

Jean Spurlock played traditional wedding music on the organ.

The reception followed in the home of the bride's mother. The bride's table was decorated with a handmade cloth of tulle over purple, with satin and sequin decorations by Grace Oliver.

The groom's table was decorated with a tablecloth crocheted by the bride.

The room was decorated with lilac, statia and daisies in antique candlewick vases.

Shirley Montgomery, Leann Needham, Donna Stricklin and Rita Oliver-Muller assisted in serving guests.

The couple is at home in Fort Worth following a wedding trip to Cloudfroft.

The groom is a metal mechanic at Sunset Manufacturing in Fort Worth.

The bride is a graduate of New Mexico State University in Las Cruces and works as an accountant at Photo Etch in Fort Worth.

Couple marries May 14

The former Ida Brantley of Ruidoso Downs married Wayne Fenack of Seguin, Texas, May 14, in the First Baptist Church of Ruidoso.

The Reverend D. Allen Cearley performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Albert and Emma Richardson of Ruidoso Downs. The groom is the son of Tony and Ruth Fenack of Seguin.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Barbara Richardson, of Ruidoso was maid of honor. The groom's father served as his best man.

A reception was at Cree Meadows Restaurant immediately following the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of Ruidoso High School and works as a cosmetologist at the Crystal Pistol.

The groom is a racehorse trainer. He graduated from Brownsville High School and Southwest Texas University in San Marcos, Texas.

The couple will be at home in El Paso, Texas.

This plant has many names and many colors

DEAR SALLY:

My friend has a plant she calls "Moses-in-the-boat." Can you give us more information about this plant and indoor growing instructions? We enjoy your column and would love to see your plants sometime.

Thanks,

Plant Specialist

DEAR STELLA:

Well, I had to hit the books for this one. But learned it is a tough plant and is a perennial outdoor plant in zones 16 through 24, and a very interesting, if not beautiful, indoor plant anywhere.

This plant is also called "Moses-in-the-Cradle," "Moses-in-the-bull-rushes," "man-in-a-boat," "boat-lily and oyster plant."

Moses-in-the-Cradle gets its name from its tiny white flowers which lie deep within boat-shaped, petal-like leaves, or bracts, like a baby in a cradle. The showy parts of the plant, however, are the 8" to 15" inch stiff, swordlike leaves, which have purple and green topsides and purple undersides; there is a variegated type with leaves striped with yellow.

Soil—Here again use a fast drainage mixture. A good mixture is packaged general-purpose potting soil with some Vermiculite added with plenty of plastic packing chunks in bottom of pot. If you mix your own, use 1/3 potting mix, 1/3 peat moss and 1/3 sharp sand. Add about 2 teaspoons of 5-10-5 fertilizer per gal. of mix and a tad of limestone.

Water—Let dry to touch between waterings. The roots should always be barely moist. Never allow to become soggy—it is best to remove the drip tray so as not to allow plant to become too wet. Small, frequent waterings are best, and even so let the top soil become dry to touch before another watering. This plant does best on the "dry side", but, as I have said, do not let the roots become completely dry and shriveled less they won't recover.

Light—Moses-in-the-Cradle does best in bright indirect or curtain-filtered sunlight; if only artificial light is available, provide at least 400 foot-candles. If on the deck or patio keep back under cover and protected from harsh winds. If near glass, keep far enough back from the glass to prevent scalding and keep away from heat vents or other sources of intense heat.

Temperature—Regular home heat is ideal for this plant from about 55 degrees to 75 degrees. It will stand a little wider range if proected from the elements.

Fertilizer—Feed established plants every couple of months with complete house plant food cut to at least 1/2 the label recommended use, but wait 4 to 6 months before feeding newly purchased or potted plants. Remember the nursery has had the plant on a forced feeding program to promote fast growth, as the larger the plant the more money it's sold for. Newly potted plants need to establish new healthy growth before feeding begins. Never feed a sick or struggling plant. Only healthy, established plants may be fertilized.

Pests—Most hardy plants are pest resistant and if checking weekly you find pests it usually means poor watering conditions. Keep plant dust-free and well drained with fresh air circulating and the pests will keep looking.

Propagate old and straggly plants at any season by dividing the roots. New plants can also be started from the young shoots, or suckers, that spring up from the base of the plant. Oh, yes, one thing I forgot to tell you, when watering, keep water out of leaf axils, pour out from the plant and if you do get water down where the blooms are, simply turn the pot upside-down to empty. You are welcome to see my plants at any time with a phone call before hand. The News office will be glad to help you.

Send questions to Sally Black, c/o The Ruidoso News, P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, N.M. 86345.

$250,000 Hubbard Art Award celebrates realism

An unprecedented celebration of representational art will be the focus of the premiere presentation of the $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence June 1-2.

Considered the world's oldest known form of visual expression, representational art is a constant in art history while other genres of expression may not sustain such continuity, says John V. Hall, the Hubbard Museum director.

"Representational art dates back to the cave drawings; it's interpretational — it tells the story of the times," says Hall.

R. Dee and Joan Dale Hubbard, originators and sponsors of the quarter of a million dollar award, are joining museum directors throughout this nation in their belief that realism is undergoing a resurgence.

"Not so long ago, during the heyday of Abstract Expressionism, young art students drawn to realism often felt lonely and out of place in their classes," says Nancy Roberts in an article in the April edition of "U.S. Art."

"While they may have appreciated the prevailing abstract style, they sensed that it was not for them. But in those days few art teachers presented alternative models," she continues.

"Somehow artists such as Chuck Close, Janet Fish and Sondra Freckelton managed to remain faithful to their own realist vision. And so did other artists, despite a climate of often lukewarm support.

"As the '60s gave way to the '70s ... and now the post-modernist '90s, an interesting thing has happened: Realism seems to be coming into its own, at last.

"Or perhaps more accurately realism has simply reclaimed its important position."

"Excellence in realistic art should be recognized, and we believe there are Audubons, Whistlers, Pyles and Remingtons in the art world today," say the Hubbards.

Henriette Wyeth Hurd of San Patricio, considered the grande dame of American representational art and one of the entrants for the Hubbard Art Award, recently reflected upon Picasso and the connection between training in representational art and the creation of abstract art.

"He was trained at the age of 13 or 14, the way we are in our family. He began to draw — just as deeply and as well as possible, addressed to human beings and to life and to what happens to them in life. And then, having that solid knowledge and a feeling forever from inside your body what it's about, then is when you can begin your abstraction. Then you know what you're doing."

That sentiment expressed by Wyeth-Hurd may explain the resurgence of interest in representational art in America, Hall believes. He thinks the demise of the family may have rekindled our desire to see and feel expressions of reverence for the beauty of life and the joy of familial love.

"Representational art evokes emotion," says Hall. "The representational artist pours emotion and shared human experiences into a recognizable image."

Native New Yorker Burt Silverman, once considered one of the "young rebels" of realism, says the great diversity of work within the realm of realism will be one of the most exciting aspects of the award, show and sale.

R. Dee and Joan Dale Hubbard have originated the $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence to be presented to one artist during a Gala Presentation Saturday at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

Hubbards originate art award

The driving force behind the largest art award ever presented is the team of R. Dee and Joan Dale Hubbard of Fort Worth, Texas, partners in the Ruidoso Downs Race Track. The Hubbards have made a huge financial and emotional commitment to the Hubbard Art Award for Excellence.

The Hubbards emerged into the world of contemporary art last year when they acquired a substantial art collection and established the $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence.

"We believe excellence in American art should be recognized," said R. Dee Hubbard. "We wanted to provide incentive for artists to paint or cast their best work."

To house the Doheny collection, acquired just last year, the pair established their own museum inside the Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

R. Dee Hubbard is chairman and CEO of AFG Industries, the second largest glass manufacturing company in the United States, with assets of $1 billion.

Hubbard believes in the benefits derived from hard work, discipline and excellence, and on June 2, he will join his wife, Joan Dale, in awarding one artist the quarter of a million dollar prize for the work that reflects these qualities.

40 'American Masters' compete

The 40 contestants selected for the premiere Hubbard Art Award for Excellence competition have each submitted two paintings and sculptures for judging.

These artists, considered American Masters by the museum directors who nominated them for a chance at the quarter of a million dollar prize, are all expected to be at the Gala Presentation on Saturday. The winning artist will be presented with the $250,000 prize during the Saturday night Gala.

Sam Donaldson of ABC-TV will be master of ceremonies for the Saturday night presentation.

On Friday, the five judges will make their final selections from among the 80 pieces of art, and the sponsors, R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard, will cast the deciding vote for the single winning work. Two of the judges already have viewed the work, and their votes are in the keeping of the accounting firm of Dean, Noltensmeyer and Barraclough.

All other submitted works will be included in a special show and sale June 2 at The Hubbard Museum. One piece from each artist, including the award-winning piece, will continue to be shown free to the public at The Hubbard Museum through Labor Day 1990.

Members of The Hubbard Museum will have a chance to see the art during a "Members Only" showing from 6:30-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 6. Everyone in the community is invited to a public exhibition from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, June 6 and 7, at the old convention center at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

After Labor Day, the art collection will be taken on an international tour that will include showings in Russia and Germany.

Following the international tour, the award piece will become a permanent member of The Hubbard Collection at The Hubbard Museum in the Turf Club at Ruidoso Downs Race Track. Over the years, the collection is expected to emerge as one of the nation's most prestigious collections of American contemporary art.

The five judges were nominated by 15 of the top museum directors from across the nation.

The judges are: Fred Meyers, director of the Gilcrease Museum; Nina Zucker, former chairman of the United Nations Art Council; Tair Salakhov, first secretary of the Union of Artists in the Soviet Union; Michael Duty, director of the Eiteljorg Museum in Indianapolis, Indiana; and well-known art collector Mark Flieschner, president, CEO and chairman of Franchise Finance Corporation of America.

Born in Anchorage, Alaska, William Acheff is of Russian Athabascan Indian descent. He moved to San Francisco, California, at a young age, and studied under Italian artist Roberto Lypetti in 1969.

Acheff moved to Taos in 1973, and found a world of inspiring subject matter in an extremely supportive and creative atmosphere. Acheff is fascinated with the challenges that a two-dimensional surface present when painting, and tries to capture the illusion of that third dimension.

Acheff continues to work at his style of "Trompe l'Oeil" or literally "to follow the eye."

He is nationally known for his unique manner of representing artifacts of southwestern cultures.

CLYDE ASPEVIG
Loveland, Colorado
Oil

Clyde Aspevig was born and raised in a small town in Montana near the Canadian border. The primary influence upon his work has been the study of the turn of the century representational artists, such as Sargent and Zorn.

Aspevig's career has been filled with many achievements, including more than 15 one-man shows.

In March 1991, Aspevig will be honored with a one-man show of his field of studies at the Rockwell Museum in Corning, New York, where two of his major works are in the permanent collection.

GEORGE CARLSON

Some may say George Carlson is a western artist — a sculptor of Indian art — but he prefers to think of himself as a sculptor of humanity.

Born July 3, 1940, in Elmhurst, Illinois, Carlson studied at the American Academy of Art in Chicago, Illinois; the Art Institute of Chicago; and the University of Arizona, in Tucson, Arizona.

Carlson was most recently a lecturer at the first U.S. Soviet Art Summit in Tretyakov Museum in Moscow, U.S.S.R.

Marble and Bronze

Gerald Balciar believes that all people should learn to understand animals — Balciar is a wildlife sculptor.

Combining an artist's techniques with an engineer's painstaking precision, Balciar has successfully offered originality in the difficult discipline of representational wildlife fine art.

His art is noted for its readily identifiable artistic style which is grounded in an in-depth knowledge of animals. He is a fellow of the National Sculpture Society and a member of the Society of Animal Artists.

Balciar, 45, was born in Medford, Wisconsin.

Santa Fe, New Mexico
Oil, Acrylic and Watercolor

Woody Gwyn was born in 1944 in San Antonio, Texas, and pursued his education at Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he completed his degree in 1963.

Gwyn mostly paints the landscape as it is seen from the highway, and a deserted stretch of blacktop usually figures prominently.

Lately, the artist has been exploring a more abstract rendering of light, in which long bands of neonlike luminosity hover in layers of haze over the receding hills.

Special Artists Reception for Miqui Mendes

on Saturday, June 2

MIQUI MENDES

Miqui Mendes' dynamic and enthusiastic art is unlike anything else. Her color and use of color, combined with her unique subject matter, place Miqui in a class by herself. No one else does Miqui. Using primarily watercolor and guache, she achieves a vibrancy that has to evoke emotion in the viewer. You cannot help yourself - You will become involved - and that is what fine art is all about...

With an "unexplainable fascination with the Indian past," Miqui listens to the voices of yesterday and projects what she hears into the future with her art.

JACQUELYN KAMMERER CATTANEO

"I Believe an artist is a special person who searches for truths and strives to record statements. Artists are geared to develop concepts of painting, train the eye and become sensitive to natural as well as metaphysical stimuli. In portraiture, the depiction of the human element, individual dignity and spirit are learned through living."

Jacquelyn Kammerer Cattaneo began her art education at Texas Women's University, Denton, Texas. She has also studied with Frederick Taubes, George Cherepov, Ben Konis, Sergei Bongart, Daniel Greene, Everett R. Kinstler, Bettina Steinke and Dr. Wilfred Stedman.

Former Student and Teacher of the Carrizo Lodge Art School : Jacquelyn Kammerer Cattaneo

As seen in U.S. Art: Ron Shell

FRANK MCCARTHY

FRANK MCCARTHY
Sedona, Arizona
Oil

Frank McCarthy, 65, was born in New York City. He has studied at the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn and the Art Students League of New York.

In 1949, McCarthy toured the American and Canadian West sketching and photographing his impressions. He became a gallery artist in 1969.

McCarthy's works are dramatic, meticulously researched depictions of historical Western scenes from the life of the Plains and Southwestern Indians.

DAVE MCGARY
Nogal, New Mexico
Bronze

The classic standing poses that sculptor Dave McGary chooses for many of his bronze figures reveal an early and significant exposure to European art disciplines. Those poses echo ancient Greek sculptures in heroic simplicity and anatomical sensitivity. In Dave McGary's case, however, the works accurately portray historic figures from Native American life and lore.

Raised on a ranch in Wyoming, McGary's muse chose him early; at 15 years old he won a grant to study bronze processes in the Carrara Alps under the aegis of American sculptor Harry Jackson and the watchful eyes of master Italian craftsman. McGary's return to the states brought him into kinship with a Sioux tribe and gave him the base for an ever-deepening vision of the cultural histories of Northern Plains Indians in general.

DAVE MCGARY

SHERRY SANDER
Kalispell, Montana
Bronze

Sherry Sander is an animal sculptor whose work is directly re-

The artist makes her home near Glacier Park in Montana.

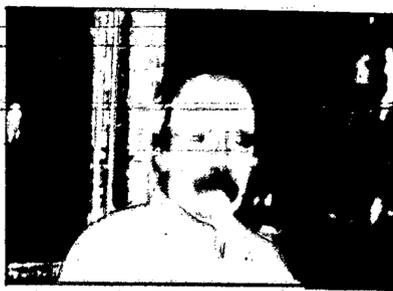

MICHAEL COLEMAN
East Provo, Utah
Oil

A hunter and trapper since childhood, Michael Coleman grew up in Provo, Utah, with a backyard full of wildlife and mountains. Coleman, born June 25, 1946, in Provo, was greatly influenced by his surroundings at an early age. He would explore the land with a paintbrush or a trap in hand.

Coleman attended Brigham Young University.

Today Coleman, who has no commercial art background, still draws on his childhood influences, combining them with images from more recent real life hunts to British Columbia, Alaska and Africa.

MICHAEL COLEMAN

Russell mural is star of the show

The Hubbard Collection, with headquarters in The Hubbard Museum at Ruidoso Downs Race Track, features some of the finest western American art that exists today.

The collection started when R. Dee and Joan Dale Hubbard acquired the Doheny Collection. The art showcases six masterpieces by Charles M. Russell, Frederic S. Remington and William R. Leight, fathers of western art.

Two prominent pieces of the collection are Russell murals. Titled "History of the West," they were painted by Russell in 1926 — the last year of the famed artist's life. Art authorities consider the murals to be Russell's greatest works. Each mural is 30 inches high, together they have a combined length of more than 44 feet.

The artist was commissioned to paint the two oils in 1925 by California collectors Estelle and Edward Doheny. The artists spent three months on the murals, which he painted in a rock-walled cabin on the California ranch of silent-screen star Harry Carey. Russell was paid $30,000 for the set, the largest commission he ever received.

In addition to the murals, The Hubbard Collection comprises other works by Russell: a bronze titled "Meat for the Wild Men," which was done in 1924, and a smaller oil titled "Snow Trail," painted in 1921.

Also included are Frederic S.

Remington's "The Navajo Raid," an oil measuring 27 by 40 inches and William R. Leigh's "The Happy Hunting Grounds," an oil measuring 40 by 60 inches.

The collection was profiled last year in Southwest Art magazine.

Originally, the art was owned by the Dohenys but later, following Edward Doheny's death, the art was donated to a small Catholic seminary in California.

Until the Hubbards opened the Hubbard Museum and put the collection on display last summer, the works had only been on public display once.

After the racing season, the collection formed a traveling exhibit that was displayed all over the United States.

This year, the winning entry in the $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence will be added to The Hubbard Collection.

During the racing season, 40 of the art award entries will remain on display in The Hubbard Museum in the Turf Club at Ruidoso Downs.

"MEAT FOR WILD MEN" BY CHARLES M. RUSSELL

"History of the West," a mural by Charles M. Russell, was the featured piece in The Hubbard Collection last year the The Hubbard Museum in the Turf Club at Ruidoso Downs Race Track. The winning piece in the Hubbard Art Award for Excellence will be added to The Hubbard Collection after the award presentation Saturday.

Coldwell Banker SDC extends its sincere appreciation for all the energy, creativity and financial commitment put forth by the Hubbard Museum and The Hubbard Art Award of Excellence. The same attitude displayed by the artists in their drive for excellence and by the Museum in its quest for the finest presentation of its kind in America is inherent in the fine staff of Coldwell Banker SDC. It is this type of association that makes us proud to be a part of this great community and this GREAT EVENT!

Furr's. Our people make a real difference.

Sharon Maines
Director of Consumer Affairs

Dear Sharon:

I've taken your advice and have started purchasing your Furr's Brand products and I'm happy to say they're terrific! I've found them to be every bit as good as the National Brands. My question is, can you offer more Furr's Brands than are currently available? The product is great, but you need a better selection.

Sincerely,
Carol Atworth, Plainview, TX

Dear Carol:

Thank you for writing. You're right, we do need a better selection and we're working hard on doing just that! We are currently developing over 1200 items for our Furr's Products, each one offering the same consistent quality and savings. You will soon see the Furr's label in practically every section in our grocery store. We're glad you enjoy our product and soon you'll have many more Furr's Brands to enjoy!

Sharon
