Are you really Santa Claus?

Niki Hudson takes a good look to make sure this is really Santa Claus before she tells him what she wants for Christmas. Santa came to breakfast with children of all ages as a part of the Fourth Annual Christmas Jubilee this weekend at the Inn of the Mountain Gods Convention Center.

Ski Apache opens

Hundreds of skiers came to town over the weekend to take advantage of Ski Apache's early opening. The visitors, many from El Paso and Mexico, were a welcome start to the holiday season for Ruidoso's merchants and lodgers.

Ski Apache reported a good inaugural weekend with 1,700 skiers on the slopes and more expected this week.

Ski conditions remain good as the ski area continues snowmaking in preparation for a busy Thanksgiving holiday.

"Overall it was a good weekend with lots of people in town and few problems," said Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor.

Over the busy weekend, police responded to only a couple of minor

MainStreet needs cash

MainStreet Ruidoso is concerned about developing off street parking and restrooms in the downtown area, but the group isn't in a position to take the necessary steps.

MainStreet's board decided at its meeting Wednesday to send a letter to Ruidoso village officials to ask them to consider these problems before plans get under way to do downtown improvements, including widening sidewalks and installing fire hydrants.

MainStreet project director Mary Maul said off-street parking and public restrooms in Midtown have been discussed for quite some time. It came up again as MainStreet had a public hearing Nov. 14 on the streetscape improvements planned.

In the letter, MainStreet will be asking the village to earmark or save some of the gross receipts tax that it will receive from a street overlay project on Sudderth Drive that will be completed by May. Maul said the amount would be approximately $16,500.

It is a unique situation in Ruidoso because there are not many public buildings in the downtown area so it is hard to have a public restroom she said.

The main problem with parking will come when Phase One of the street improvement plans on Sudderth Drive begins. After the improvements are made, there will be fewer parking spaces available.

MainStreet members also heard a presentation from Kerry Krumsiek, recycling center director, and Bill Allen, of the solid waste authority, on what is currently happening with recycling. Krumsiek said he would like to encourage everyone in the community to gather as many recyclable things as possible and bring them to the center which is located in Ruidoso Downs.

Krumsiek said they are also planning to establish drop-off sites throughout the town and would like input on where these should be. He said they will accept aluminum, paper products and glass in color coded containers, much like those seen in Roswell.

As their budget expands they may be able to offer this to other towns in the county, he said.

Allen discussed the experiments being done on developing compost

Courtroom is life-and-death to flamboyant lawyer

Gary Mitchell: An interview in two parts

by BONNY CHRISTINA CELINE
Special to The News

SANTA FE—Gary Mitchell of Ruidoso leans back against the wooden chair in Santa Fe's San Francisco Street Bar and Grill. He has tossed aside his tailored western-cut pin-striped jacket and loosened his red and blue tie, and now he is munching all the remnants of the evening's dinner — parsley, melted ice cream, radishes and toothpicks.

"Excuse me," he says as he rips the pulp off a lemon wedge with his teeth. "I'm finally starting to relax."

Six hours earlier Mitchell, on contract with the New Mexico Public Defender's Office, delivered a stirring closing argument to a Santa Fe jury in defense of Ricky Abeyta, accused of the largest mass murder in New Mexico recorded history.

While Mitchell is known for his impassioned, personal defense style, his closure of the Abeyta case was dignified, sincere and relatively low-key. After he reminded jurors that they are "as close to God as we can be," he explained the defense position on seven counts of murder and two counts of attempted murder in a rational, incident-by-incident manner.

"Nobody in Chimayo attempted to kill anybody that day," he said. "It was Ricky's only intent to survive, which is natural. What happened there was a tragedy but it wasn't a crime."

"This case tears my heart and soul out," Mitchell told the jury panel.

"Because seven good people died. But it was never a murder case. It was never an evil thing."

The controversial Ruidoso attorney, who has been practicing law since May 1977, looks disarmingly boyish when not in court or sitting behind the huge desk in his Mechem Drive law office. At the dinner table, with his shirt sleeves rolled up, or when wearing 501s and bare feet in his hotel room, Mitchell looks as if he might teach physical education at the middle school, or, more in liking with his original alternate career choice, play first base for the Albuquerque Dukes.

Just turned 41, with a height of 6'3" and weighing 200 pounds, Mitchell has well-balanced facial features which include dimples and laughing green eyes.

Laughing is something he does readily, tossing off compliments and light-hearted remarks as easily as he argues complex life-and-death issues before a jury or judge.

Several topics of conversation really get his horses trotting, including various aspects of state law, his family and the family ranch in Glencoe — and himself. Sometimes referring to himself in the third person, he is rarely at a loss for words.

Gary C. Mitchell is known not only in Lincoln County but throughout the state of New Mexico for his congeniality, his articulate gabbliness, his healthy ego, his no-holds-barred loyalty and defense of his clients — and his unrelenting crusade against the death penalty. He recalls that he has represented between 40 and 50 death penalty cases in his criminal law career, and not once thus far has his client been sentenced to be executed.

"You know, I'm in the middle of a death penalty case now, and we don't know what the result of that will be," he said. (The week after this interview, the jury returned four first-degree murder convictions against Abeyta, including one for State Police Officer Glenn Huber. The jury reconvenes today in Santa Fe to decide whether or not Abeyta shall receive the death penalty.)

"I have six cases pending in which the state has alleged the death penalty. One of those is from southeastern New Mexico, where they always try to seek the death penalty. One is from Tucumcari, where the same thing happens. So I suspect...that the six I have now will put me over 50 cases."

Since the death penalty came into the state, there have been nine people on death row, according to Mitchell.

"Out of that there's one left, and that's Terry Clarke, and I'm optimistic that his is going to be reversed because of the abhorrent conduct of the prosecutors in that case, because of the judge manipulating that court in order to get elected to the Supreme Court, in my opinion...so at present we're virtually trying to have a state in which no one is on death row. And hopefully, the state of New Mexico will finally say 'you guys have fought us so long and so hard, and it's been so expensive that we'll forget about it, and we'll concentrate on what we should be concentrating on in the criminal justice system, and that is on our youth and on first offenders."

Frankly, that's where the best lawyers should be."

In the state of New Mexico the death penalty is sought for seven aggravating circumstances: the killing of a police officer; the killing of a guard; the killing of another inmate in a penal institution; killing during kidnapping; killing during rape; killing of a witness to a crime; and murder for hire.

"The one that's most abused is the killing of a witness to a crime, because every prosecutor in the state can allege that you were a witness to something," adds Mitchell.

He raises his hands, palms open. "We're all to blame for it, whether it's you people in the press or lawyers like me who like doing high-profile cases. I like being in the battle. I love saving people's lives. So the publicity factor exists each time one of these cases come before the court."

"In a lot of these cases we try, it's simply not the truth that the defendant is a 'murderer,'" he says. "Sometimes they're innocent. Sometimes they're guilty of lesser charges. D.A.s constantly use the death penalty as leverage to get some kind of major plea, a worse plea than they should have."

And that's a horrible thing.

"You see, there are principles involved. If you're somebody who loves life, you can't have death no matter what the person does. That's God's decision. It's a principle thing, a religious thing, a historical thing, a civilization thing. And," he adds, "a freedom thing."

In his own way, Mitchell says, he is deeply religious although he embraces no formal church.

Mitchell is aware that many people do not understand that he is assigned death penalty cases by the state. "The people who know me well know that basically I'm an attorney who likes to fight for an underdog, and I happen to be anti-government, a Jeffersonian-type Democrat — the less government, the better, which is in a lot of ways a conservative viewpoint. I also happen to believe that the govern-

October spooks LCMC finances

by KRISTIE SULZBACH

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

October was a slow month at the hospital, but Lincoln County Medical Center hopes to recoup its losses with the winter visitors coming to town in the next few months.

Hospital administrator Valerie Miller reported to the hospital Board of Trustees that the hospital lost $52,000 in October, which blew her goal of an entire year with a positive bottom line. She said October of last year wasn't good either, but revenue recovered well with the ski season.

The hospital is ahead of net revenue from last year, but the figure is $133,000 behind budgeted revenue, Miller said.

The ambulance service also operated at a loss of $6,700 which goes along with the low volume of patients, she said. There were only four to five patients at times, Miller said.

The clinic had another positive month and was up $2,700, Miller reported.

In other discussion, Miller gave the board a packet of information

"Without the support of you, the taxpayers, and the county commissioners, we couldn't exist." Dub Williams on the tax mill levy and a bill in the House on setting up a state indigent fund. The purpose of the House bill 509 is to increase Medicaid eligibility to children that are older than newborns, she said.

If passed the additional children who could be covered in Lincoln County would be 228, Miller said that since Lincoln County doesn't have pediatric specialists, the children would be referred to Roswell or Albuquerque. These institutions could expect to receive $107,570 of the $115,667 generated by HB509 for hospital payments, she said.

Board chairman Dub Williams said it is important for all the board members to know what is happening with these two issues because the mill levy will be on the ballot next year, and health care overall will be an important issue in national elections.

"Without the support of you, the taxpayers, and the county commissioners, we couldn't exist," Williams said. The hospital has received assistance from a county mill levy since 1985.

Miller said the county commissioners recently made the decision to put the 4.25 mill levy back on the ballot in November 1992 after they were told they could decrease the amount of the tax mill in the future year if it was not needed by the hospital.

Another concern the hospital has is uncollected accounts of which 83 percent are from Lincoln County. Miller said 49 percent of these are offset by the mill levy which is $390,000. The remaining uncollectable accounts, $576,079, is funded out of hospital operations.

In other business:

—Miller announced the CT scanner has arrived and will be in operation in about two weeks after employees receive training.

—Sally Avery reported 300 women had participated in the mammogram screening recently. Of those 179 were in the healthy category, she said. In the second category of possible problems, 79 people were identified. Only six were in the problem category. Avery said she thought the event was a big success.

—In the auxiliary report, Inez Tanner said they had a good month with an increase of 10 new members in the past month. She said the auxiliary is providing a valuable service by helping with families who have patients in surgery by letting them know how the patient is doing.

—The board also approved the recommendation of George Langdon, Corona school administrator, to the Carrizozo Health Advisory Board. John Allen has resigned from that board and will need to be replaced in January. The next hospital board meeting will be Jan. 16, 1992, in the hospital conference room.

ment is there to protect the people. I believe that a man or a woman ought to go out and do the very best they can with their life, and not ask for help unless they need it. And if they need it, doggone it, good neighbors ought to come and help you out." His personal generosity to friends and neighbors is well-known, though rarely publicized.

"I also happen to believe that it shouldn't be only the rich who get to go to college, or who get good medical care — or who get good legal help. It ought to be the same for everybody."

"Lawyers like myself who think there should be a lot of honor and dignity to the profession refuse to advertise or seek out clients."

In Mitchell's case, he is sought out.

"The death penalty stuff simply started because nobody else wanted to take the cases, nobody wanted to fool with 'em and they pay so little."

He says that to be called a "public defender" would be a compliment, but that actually he takes cases on a contract basis for the state. Lincoln and Otero Counties do not have public defender departments, so Mitchell and his law partner Noel Ortiz do conflict cases there for the public defender's office.

In New Mexico, according to him, this department is made up of excellent lawyers.

"By and large, they are the best criminal defense lawyers in the business," he says. He also gets death penalty cases when the state has a conflict — for example, when the public defender's office has two defendants and can only properly represent one.

"Then I get the other one," he says.

"It's a bid system, but I don't know anybody who bids on 'em other than me."

"You cannot separate the death penalty from the politics involved,"

Mitchell claims. "Those of us in this business have a joke. You know how they say 'whenever there's a full moon, the crime rate goes up?' Well, I've noticed in my career that every time we get close to an election and some D.A. is in trouble, suddenly I get a lot of death penalty cases out of his jurisdiction."

And then he shows up in the courtroom, even if it's only one witness, so he can say to voters that he's 'tough on crime.' Well, if he's really tough on crime, his concentration should be in children's court, because then he can use that time and money to benefit society rather than waiting till it's just plain too late."

Parents invited to tour school

Parents will have a chance to tour Ruidoso Middle School and meet school board members Tuesday.

The board will meet at 7 p.m., but the only items of serious business will be the announcement of the first half of the $5.5-million revenue bond sale January 10 and a closed session on personnel, according to School Supt. Mike Glad-

"We primarily will listen to school officials explain their programs, then tour the building," he said. "We'd like to invite parents to be there."

parking lot accidents, one stolen Radar Detector and a juvenile runaway who later reported in.

An Alto woman saved the day for an accident victim Thursday evening.

Tami Hightower was in the Inn-Credible restaurant when she heard a crash. She raced through the kitchen and was one of the first people to arrive at the scene of a truck crash.

A pickup driven by Ralph Michels of Alto had landed in the shallow creek bed beside the Inn-Credible. The vehicle doors were jammed shut and water was trickling into the cab.

Hightower, having worked on an ambulance as an Emergency Medical Technician, knew just what to do. She took the driver's vital signs and assisted him through a window she managed to roll down. In the process she soaked herself in the cold night air.

Michels was unhurt. He was charged with DUI, according to officer Steve Standridge of the New Mexico State Police.

In an unrelated accident, a vehicle overturned Saturday night at the three-way intersection of Mechem, Cree Meadows and Country Club.

A 1986 Toyota left the road, ran up a guy wire and then overturned about 9:30 p.m.

The driver, Kathryn Diane Whiteley, 28, of Ruidoso, was transported to Lincoln County Medical Center, treated and released. She was then arrested for DUI and cited for careless driving.

from pine needles, grass clippings and other organic waste. Solid waste is currently being sent to the Roswell landfill, but they will not accept these materials. He said from the experiments they hope to turn these products into a marketable item.

A state mandate requires that by 1995 the amount of waste going into a landfill be reduced by 25 percent. By the turn of the century it must be reduced by 50 percent.

Because of this, consumers will have to change their attitudes and learn to recycle, Allen said.

In other business, Maul reported to the members that a grant application to the Village of Ruidoso was approved at the Nov. 12 council meeting. The grant will help fund an irrigation system and a variety of trees for Phase One of the street improvement plan.

Ruidoso's Cemetery Board is reincarnated

Ruidoso's Cemetery Board, inactive for the past few years, is alive and well.

The Board, reactivated recently with all new members, met Thursday at Ruidoso Municipal Administrative Center to review qualifications of two local surveying companies.

The purpose of the meeting was to select a surveyor to begin the preliminary work on the planned cemetery expansion.

After studying the qualifications of the two companies, Gary Thompson made a motion, with a second by Alan Morel, that Ruidoso Land Surveying be contacted and asked to talk to the committee at a meeting to be called at 4 p.m. Monday, December 2. The motion carried.

Terri Ward was asked to contact the company.

Forest Lawn Cemetery, which is municipally owned and operated, is located on Mechem Drive. According to Cemetery Board Chairman Danny Sisson, the cemetery is nearly at capacity.

The reactivated board will oversee expansion plans on the cemetery's undeveloped land already owned by the village.

Clem Clutter keeps smiling through tough times

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Bouncing back has become second nature to Clem Clutter.

In the last six months, life has thrown some of its sharpest curves his way.

With the help of family and friends, he's survived the sudden death of his wife, the unsolved murder of his stepson and a fire that severely damaged his home and a portion of his pet shop.

But Clutter, 78, moves ahead, relying heavily on the emotional support and practical help of his daughter-in-law, Tina Cooper, and his many friends in the community.

EARLY DAYS

Clutter was born in northeast Texas on his grandfather's plantation, where the family grew wheat, cotton and oats.

His family moved to El Paso, Texas, when he was four and a year later, they were on their way to Lubbock, where his father farmed and ran livestock.

"While I was in school, I worked in the family dairy," Clutter said. "I milked 225 cows in the barn year-around. We bottled and delivered it."

While he was attending high school, he decided he wanted to be a drummer. He competed against two other bass drummers and won a place in the band.

His talent was sufficient to be selected by Texas Tech for a seat on its band when he was a high school senior. The hard work earned him a college music scholarship.

Then came the big time. John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster and composer, came to town for a performance during Clutter's freshman year in college.

His drummer was hospitalized with an emergency and was expected to need about two weeks to recover.

"Sousa came to my science room with one of my professors and asked me to be his drummer until his regular player was well," Clutter said.

"I talked it over with my parents that night and with the dean, because I would be out of town."

Clutter played 13 concerts over a seven-week period with the famous bandmaster. The band performed in Oklahoma City, Albuquerque and all over Texas.

"He was a fantastic musician," Clutter said of Sousa. "I was scared to death, very nervous the first rehearsal. He said, 'Clem, just do what I tell you to.' I did and we got along."

"He was a very calm person, just wonderful. I never had a chance to meet him again. He passed away shortly after."

The grand adventure nearly cost Clutter his college grades.

"I like to never get caught up with my books," Clutter said.

He majored in animal husbandry, staying with music only to finish college on the scholarship.

"I was too busy to try to make a living with it," Clutter said.

Another grand adventure of his youth occurred when he decided to leave the farm and run off with a friend. They didn't run far. They landed in Liberal, Kansas, where they scooped wheat from sun up to sundown.

"We got an education," Clutter said, smiling at the memory. "We'd go to the back door and they'd hand you a plate. We slept on the wheat, took baths in the horse tank after dark."

"We were gone three weeks and it felt like three years. I didn't run off anymore."

Clutter first visited Ruidoso in 1928 with three other boys.

"It took us three days to get here and we had 14 flats (on their community Model T) from Roswell," he said. "The patches melted off the inner tubes because it was so dog-gone hot."

On the way to and from Ruidoso, the boys slept over night at a roadside park east of Roswell.

"We were about 15 or 16 and did the mechanical work on the car ourselves," he said.

They didn't go hungry. The park was just one mile east of the railroad tracks and farmers hauled their vegetables, chickens and country cured ham there to sell.

"We ate well," he said. "We bought a 100-pound sack of potatoes, called a toe sack. We had a good time."

When the quartet reached Ruidoso, the first place they stopped was some cabins where the lounge Win, Place and Show is today.

As he approached the first slot machine he had ever seen, Clutter said, "I had three dimes in my pocket."

"I had heard of slot machines before, but I had never seen one. Well, I won some money with two dimes. The pockets of my overalls were nearly full of dimes. I put one more in and the machine nearly went crazy. There were dimes everywhere. I just put my hat under it and filled it to the crown."

His first purchase with his winnings was four new inner tubes.

FLYING HIGH

A few years later, Clutter was bitten by the flying bug when a friend took him up for a ride.

"There was a raffle for free flying lessons and a license. Tickets were $1 each," Clutter said. "I won the raffle and passed my test real quick, then went on and got my commercial license."

His parents thought he was crazy and preferred to keep at least one foot on the family's 2,000-acre farm, he said.

Clutter found a bargain and bought an open cockpit plane in 1933.

"It was quite an experience," Clutter said. "I wouldn't do it now. I was acting the fool," he said with a chuckle. "I was flying east from the Lubbock airport about 14 miles and the plane started shaking. I landed it in a field between shocks of bundled feed, checked it over and couldn't find anything wrong."

But when he began to crank the propellers to start the plane, he noticed one blade was broken and the air was passing through unequally.

Despite the defect, he crawled back into the cockpit and flew it back to the airport to order a new propeller.

Before he earned his commercial license, Clutter gave a Federal Aviation Administration inspector the ride of his life.

The inspector mistook him for a commercial pilot who flew out of the same airport and went up with Clutter in the open cockpit model.

"He was in front and I told him to take over and he wouldn't," Clutter said. "I decided to make him do it and went into a dive. But when he still didn't take over, I chickened out and pulled back on the stick."

Only after they landed did Clutter learn that the inspector couldn't take over the controls, because there was no stick in his area.

"I forgot I had loaned it to someone to get parts in Dallas," Clutter said.

His next purchase was a five-passenger enclosed plane, but he didn't keep it long because of nagging problems. The motor would conk out while he was flying. "It was an electric starter and hard to get going," he said.

"One time I knew I couldn't get over the high wires coming into the airport, so I landed in a corn patch and tore all the fuselage off."

After that he didn't go up for a long time, Clutter said. When he did climb into a plane with a friend about 18 years ago, he was lost. The dashboard was so full of instruments, he told his friend he wouldn't know where to begin to fly it.

In 1937, he was hit with a rough case of pneumonia and the doctor told him to check into a hospital in El Paso, where he stayed for six months. After he was well, he continued to live in the El Paso area for another one and a half years.

In 1938, he bought a motel, then sold it in late 1940 to move back to Lubbock.

He bought a farm over the telephone and began raising livestock.

Eight years later, he was on the move again, this time to Fort Worth, where he bought a ranch.

By 1957, he changed states and moved to Albuquerque to repair machines in a friend's laundromat.

"My friend told me if I found a good location, he'd back me in setting up a new laundromat," Clutter said. "I ended up with five in Albuquerque."

It was back to Texas in 1959, where he opened an investment business and operated a nursing home in San Angelo. He realized a hefty profit when it came time to sell out in 1972, and he was on his way to Ruidoso to run a trailer park he had purchased there.

"We were very close in my family," Clutter said. "We all worked together. My dad taught me everything I know, common sense."

"He knew I loved Ruidoso. He said if I bought property in the mountains, to buy where the sun rays hit so I would have a way in and out of the property."

"I've seen 25-inches of snow here and I've never needed a plow. Across the street is a different story."

His property has 565-feet of river frontage and runs from Sudderth Drive to Paradise Canyon. He also built rental storage units.

But Clutter has never been content with just one or two occupations.

About 13 years ago, he and his wife, Mary, acquired a few exotic birds for pets. The birds ate so much food, the couple decided to open a pet shop. Then they branched out into dog grooming. They added lines of fresh and salt water fish and all types of pet supplies. And finally, raised teacup poodles.

The Clutters quickly became well known in the area for raising rare birds, macaws, cockatoos.

"They all were hand fed since the time they were babies and people were waiting in line for them" even as far away as California and Mississippi, Clutter said.

THE FUTURE

Mary Clutter died suddenly July 12 from a heart attack brought on by her emphysema. She had been hospitalized on a Sunday, felt better by Friday.

"They let us in to see her and that evening, she had another attack," Clutter said. "She sure was a wonderful person."

Clutter's stepson, John Cooper, was killed September 11, apparently in connection with his drug undercover work he had been doing for the past four years. Cooper and his wife had been in the process of moving to Ruidoso to help Clutter with the shop.

"He was very ambitious, but Mary and I could always call and he never turned us down for anything," Clutter said of the stepson he had raised since the boy was seven. "Tina decided to stay here. I can't figure out why. She has a big family in San Angelo. She's sure been a big help to me."

"She and John were real close. They loved each other. I was lucky she wanted to stay. She treats me like a baby. We have a lot of fun. We have the same birthday, December 31."

Also staying with Clutter are his grandchildren, Ashley and Justin Cooper.

About one month after Cooper's death, on October 8, a fire broke out in the Clutter home that adjoins the pet shop.

"Friends heard a crackling sound and smelled smoke," Clutter said. "They went through the living area and saw a blaze in the kitchen, a grease fire. A burner had been left on by accident. The cabinet above the stove was going fast. They shut the door to keep the draft out. The fire trucks were here real quick."

"We lost some small animals, mice, gerbils and two beautiful doves we were baby sitting and two finches on top of the dove cage," Clutter said. "They just can't take much smoke."

"We saved all but one dog. He just wouldn't come out. I had a new knee put on a few years ago, so I just stayed out of the way as people poured in to help. People just parked their cars, jumped out and helped."

"I just kept thinking of all the memories."

But Clutter never thought about closing the shop.

"A lot of memories burned up, but everyone was very helpful," Clutter said. "A couple of motel owners called and invited us to stay and it wouldn't cost us a cent. People brought clothes. We didn't have much of anything left."

The family temporarily stayed in a vacant house on Clutter's property, but it was too small and in poor shape. He called and asked if he could rent a friend's trailer.

"The owner said, of course, move in right now," Clutter said.

"It's great to live in Ruidoso with the cooperation of people who care. Everybody sure has been nice to us, even restaurants called and said come eat on us. We didn't, but it sure was nice."

The pet shop is fully operational, but it probably will be early March before Clutter and his family can move back into the living quarters of the building.

But Clutter doesn't miss a beat. He appreciates each extra minute, he said. He spends his days with his birds, handing out humorous business cards to newcomers and joking with longtime customers.

Clem Clutter and employee John Caranta converse with some of the pet shops residents who were rescued from the fire by Caranta, firemen and friends.

Drop by shelter and meet Flecks

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer
The small spaniel mix had been wandering through the Cree Meadows area for months.

Two weeks ago, he finally miscalculated and was bumped by a car. A resident saw him limping down the street and called the Lincoln County Humane Society Shelter.

"He's timid. I don't think his experiences with humans have been real good yet," said shelter manager Randy Basch. "He's spent quite a long time dodging golf balls and being chased away by people."

"Fortunately, he was only bruised by the car and seems to be getting along fine now. He sure was hurting for a while."

The dog has been nicknamed Flecks by shelter workers.

Basch said Flecks is almost cocker size and about two years old. His coloring is mottled black and white.

"He's real affectionate," Basch said. "Once a person earns his confidence, he's a very loving dog."

"He'd probably be better in a more settled household where there aren't a lot of young kids or a whole lot of activity."

Basch said Flecks is a very neat dog, but it is hard to judge in a shelter whether he is housebroken completely.

C.L. Hicks, one of the society's most generous and consistent supporters, is sponsoring Flecks for neutering, which is the major cost of adoption.

The fee without neutering will be $27.50 to cover the dog's city license and rabies shot.

All animals adopted from the shelter must be neutered or spayed to ensure they do not produce more unwanted litters. Those innocent offspring may be abandoned or abused, and eventually have to be destroyed. Or they may suffer and die from diseases because they have not received protective shots.

The shelter is temporary home to many fine-looking dogs and cats who would like to brighten the holidays for new owners.

The cattery is crowded with kittens and full-grown cats including a Siamese mix, several tiger striped, lovely gray varieties with mid-length hair and compelling wide eyes, three with tortoise shell markings, some all black, some all white and some with mixed black and white markings.

In the shelter, Brandy the exotic Hungarian Vizsla, still waits for a home as does Misty the gentle greyhound mix with a big heart. Doc, a bird dog with attractive brown spot markings; Dumas, a hunting hound; Amigo, a black border collie; and Happy, a white terrier are anxious to find loving new owners.

And there are plenty of others from collie-shepherd mixes and labradors to golden retrievers and blue heelers.

If you're looking for a new pet, take the time to check the shelter. Basch said visitors are welcome to come back, visit and walk the animals to get to know them before adopting.

For more information about the lonely little spaniel or any of the other dogs and cats, call Basch at 257-9841 or stop at the shelter on Gavilan Canyon Road.

Chamber supports Oakland ad

by KRISTIE SULZBACH

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce will show support of a recent advertisement on Ruidoso and Lincoln County placed in a California paper but not financially.

The advertisement, which ran in Sunday's Oakland Tribune, was created by a group of Realtors and business people in an attempt to entice people to come to the area.

The Ruidoso Village Council put up the money so it could be done immediately and hoped that it would be paid back, according to Ron Wicker, village manager.

Paul Crown, acting chairperson, said Cindy Lynch requested the Chamber donate money from the Retirement Services Fund, which has been discontinued. He said that fund has been changed to a relocation fund. There is approximately $500 in the fund.

Jerry Watts, chamber director, said the money in that fund is used for postage on sending out information on relocating in Ruidoso. Chamber member Don Dutton said there may be projects in the future that this money could help with.

Member Clark Carpenter said he doesn't have anything against placing an ad about Ruidoso in a major newspaper, but he did have trouble with someone placing the ad and then asking the Chamber to help pay for it.

Watts said the phone number to call on the ad is for the Chamber, and there have been several calls already.

Crown said by doing this in-kind activity, it is a show of support and contribution to the advertisement. Several Chamber members also thought giving money from the fund may set a precedent they don't want to follow.

In other business, the Chamber approved a preliminary budget for 1991-92 with an increase of $13,000 in revenues from members' dues. Crown said the increase could come from an increase in existing member dues or an increase in old and new membership dues. He said if they relied completely on new memberships, they would need more than 70 new members.

Crown said dues have not increased in the past three years.

Bill Hirschfeld moved that the proposed budget be approved but without an increase in dues.

Watts said if the Chamber cannot achieve a plan to raise the money for the increase, they will have to adjust expenses prior to the end of the year.

Rain dampens Chamber of Commerce office

by KRISTIE SULZBACH

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

When it rains it pours into the Chamber of Commerce Building because of several large leaks in the roof, but the Chamber hopes to fix them soon.

Chamber member Jim Bassett reported to the Chamber at its meeting Wednesday that it would cost approximately $5,000 to have an area construction company take off the old shingles, replace them and raise the pitch of the roof. He didn't seek any other bids at this time.

Acting Chamber chairperson Paul Crown said they do not have the money right now, and they may want to think of some way to reduce the cost. He said they may want to schedule a Chamber day and have all the members that can come to help do the work.

The one concern is that it must be done under a construction contractor's license, but someone that is a member of the Chamber should have one, Crown said.

Member Don Dutton said they should try to get some publicity on it and encourage volunteers to come help. He said volunteers in this community do so many good things, they should be given a chance to help.

Although others expressed doubts that the turn-out would be good, Dutton said they should never sell the people short.

Crown said it will be too late to get the work done before winter, so it will probably be a spring project. Before that time several Chamber members will meet with the Home Builders Association to discuss how the project should be done.

Business

Forestry service forks over funds for New Mexico public lands

New Mexico will receive $930,749 as the state's share of interim national forest receipts collected in the fiscal year 1991.

"We estimate 41 states and Puerto Rico eventually will receive $302-million as their total payments from national forest receipts for the year," said F. Dale Robertson, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service. Last year, the states received total payments of more than $346-million. The money is used for schools and roads.

By law, the service pays 25 percent of the revenues it collected from timber sales, grazing, recreation, minerals and land uses to states where national forest lands are located.

The estimated total payment to New Mexico for the fiscal year 1991 is $1,240,997, with the remaining money to be paid in December.

Business &amp; Economic Development

You have to spend money to make money

Senator Roman Maes unveiled the strategy developed by the legislative Economic Development Committee, which he chairs, at the commission meeting held the last week in October at the Governor's Rural Economic Development Forum in Socorro.

He painted a bleak future for New Mexico's economy, signaling the predicted loss of 8,000 federal defense related jobs over the next four to five years, and ever lower oil and gas prices to be brought on largely by increased production from Mexico.

It seems that the array of interviews and meetings held around the state led the committee and the Senator right to the heart of the problem. As Senator Maes put it, "The culprit is gross receipts tax."

This is a very original idea. Lower taxes to boost economic performance. Maybe Senator Maes should call George Bush and tell him he's figured out how to get the economy out of the doldrums.

Originality aside, the idea is politically expedient. Senator Maes and the other committee members can join the chorus crying for lower taxes. Democrats and Republicans have both seized upon this idea in Washington. Who are we in New Mexico to buck the trend?

Senator Maes pledged to bring to the fore a host of bills to deal with the problem at the next session. He proposes to eliminate gross receipts tax for new companies investing in plant and equipment according to standards of "economic impact." (The former phrase is double-speak for companies who don't really need the help.)

Because agriculture is so important for our

by Darien Cabral
Sunmount
Syndicate

state, we should eliminate gross receipt tax on new agricultural investment. Let's allow local governments to reduce their share of the gross receipts tax paid, and use the incentive to help them lure companies that they want to catch.

While we're at it, we should eliminate gross receipts tax for telemarketing businesses, too.

This is not to say that some of these ideas do not have some merit. We need to be competitive with other states. Eliminating tax on new investment and contractual services to be more in line with other states makes sense.

Senator Maes's hodge-podge approach has some real dangers, however. A number of businesses in the State don't even pay gross receipt taxes, or at least cheat.

New Mexico Taxation and Revenue Department has a very lax enforcement policy. People tend to pay taxes when taxes are perceived as simple and equitable. Eliminating taxes for a few based upon debatable criteria would not make the Taxation Department's job any easier.

There is a basic principle of business here which our politicians in their frenzy to garner political support from the taxpaying public, seem to ignore. Any business person will tell you that in order to make money, you must spend money — invest. The same principle applies to government. If government invests in our country — in education, infrastructure, R&D — there will be an eventual payoff in improved economic performance and accompanying tax revenues.

Lowering taxes may give us some better short term statistics, as consumers with slightly more disposable income give a boost to Christmas spending. But it will do little for the long-term economic vitality of our nation.

Senator Maes did come up with some positive directions as well. He spoke of the need to change the Anti-Donation clause, to involve Indian tribes in economic development partnerships, to invest a portion of the state permanent fund in our own state (instead of everywhere else) and to empower the Economic Development Secretary to implement fast-track training curricula in schools to respond to business needs.

He also spoke of the need for the Economic Development Department to develop a direction for targeted company recruitment. The old policy was to "shoot at everything that flies and take credit for anything that falls." Even though the Senator did express these very positive ideas, my impression from listening to his presentation was still pessimistic.

SAT the next legislative session, we should expect a lot of band-aid bills to lower gross receipts taxes — and probably not a whole lot more.

Local man earns MAI

David D. (D.D.) Swearingin, III has earned the MAI professional membership designation and was admitted to membership in the Appraisal Institute.

MAI members are professionals who are experienced in the valuation of commercial, industrial, residential and other types of properties, and who advise clients on real estate investment decisions.

According to a news release, stringent membership requirements demand that those who earn the MAI designation have substantial practical appraisal experience, pass extensive written tests, and submit demonstration appraisal reports.

Swearingin is certified as an appraiser by the New Mexico Real Estate Appraisers Board.

He has been an appraiser for eleven years. A graduate of Colorado State University, he holds a bachelor of science degree with a major in range-forest management.

Swearingin holds membership by election in the Society of American Foresters and is also a member of the Society for Range Management. He is a member of the board of directors of the Eagle Creek Inter-Community Water Supply Association.

The Appraisal Institute is the result of the January 1, unification of the appraisal profession's two most respected organizations: The American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers and the Society of Real Estate Appraisers. Individuals holding Appraisal Institute membership designations are recognized as the most qualified in their fields.

Members of the Appraisal Institute form a national network of highly experienced and qualified appraisers. The appraisal Institute continues to uphold strict enforcement of its Code of Professional Ethics and the Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice.

Stroud Crop wins the "Viva"

Stroud Crop Insurance is the winner of the 1991 Governor's Viva Award for the southeast quadrant of New Mexico.

Viva stands for vision, investment, vitality and action, qualities the business has committed to New Mexico, according to a news release provided by the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County.

This award is made to businesses that have made a significant impact on the area in which they are located, providing jobs, civic involvement, stability and a consistent rate of growth for at least five years.

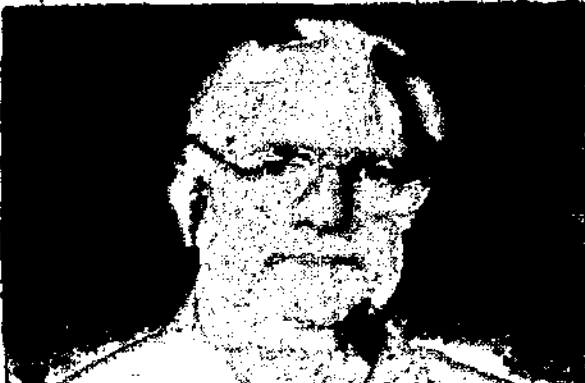

The winners will be honored at a banquet December 4 in Albuquerque, when Governor Bruce King will present the honorees with their awards.

DERMATOLOGY NOTES

ACTINIC KERATOSIS is the term used for a roughening of the skin caused from years of sun damage. These "bumps" on the skin are more easily felt than seen since they are flesh colored. They occur more often on the arms and faces of red-headed, freckle faced, or otherwise fair skinned people. They are easily removed with an anti-cancer medication applied daily to the skin for two weeks or frozen off. Most of them will go away by themselves if you stay out of the sun or wear long sleeves for several months. Its not a bad idea to remove those that do stay after using lotion and avoiding the sun because skin cancers develop more commonly in areas of sun damaged skin than from normal appearing skin.

Hospital provides patients with information required by Patient Self Determination Act

Lincoln County Medical Center (LCMC), along with all hospitals throughout the country, will soon be required by law to provide information to admitted patients about the right to refuse treatment and about the issue of advance directives.

LCMC began providing the information to inpatients October 14, but the new law takes effect on December 1.

According to a news release, advance directives are written instructions, most commonly a living will or durable power of attorney, that direct how healthcare decisions will be made if the patient becomes incapacitated.

The new requirements are the result of a law passed in January, commonly referred to as the "Patient Self-Determination Act."

Passage of the Patient Self-Determination Act resulted from many ethical issues and court cases over the past few years concerning the desire of family members to withdraw life-sustaining treatment for incapacitated patients.

"Today, at Lincoln County Medical Center, we are encouraging patients to make these decisions themselves, before they may become incapacitated," said Roger Beechie, M.D., chief of the medical staff.

"With today's technology, we have unprecedented control over life and death. But we don't always know when and how to use this control. Advance directives help physicians and patients' families decide at what point a life-sustaining treatment may not be desired," Beechie said.

New Mexico State Law requires that when patients are admitted, they are to be informed in writing of the hospital's policies regarding patients' rights to refuse life-sustaining treatment in certain circumstances. This information must be presented upon admission to the hospital.

Patients also will be asked if they have already signed a durable power of attorney or living will. If they have, and a copy is easily accessible, it will be placed in the medical record. If they have not issued these documents, hospital staff will provide a brochure describing advance directives and will have forms available for those wishing to sign such a document.

"We want to make sure our patients know that they are not required to produce or complete a living will or durable power of attorney, and that not having one of file will not affect admission to the hospital. We are simply making it easier for patients to consider, discuss and document future wishes," said Valerie Miller, Lincoln County Medical Center administrator.

Miller and Beechie point out that it is never too early to make decisions about life-sustaining treatment such as artificial nutrition and cardiopulmonary resuscitation for terminally ill patients.

"The worst time to determine a patient's wishes is in the middle of a medical crisis when the family is upset and the patient is too disoriented or in too much pain," Beechie said.

"Once a patient has lost consciousness or become unable to make decisions, we have no valid indication of what the patient wants, which puts the physicians, the hospital and the family in an emotional and ethical dilemma," Beechie said.

Beechie advises that patients talk with their families about issues such as refusal of treatment and organ donations and then put it in writing. It also is recommended that people discuss these issues with a family attorney.

For more information on the Patient Self-Determination Act and advance directives, contact Betty Testerman at 257-7381 or stop by the hospital after December 7 for a free brochure.

Miller also is available as a speaker on the topic for local service clubs.

The Dreamer

Snow artist paints the Valley white

Snow Artistry

This is being sent to you a little after dark on November 20. Yesterday rained and snowed; it snowed most of the day and then at evening the North wind came charging in and turned the rain to little balls of sleet and the temperature dropped from 40 to 30 in a few minutes.

And then this morning before sun up all the world was a wonderland of Jack Frost's snow artistry. All the children of Mother Earth were outlined in pure shining white. The little banners of the gramma grass were covered with fine frost that turned them into little winter flaglets celebrating the Thanksgiving season — after the wonderful harvest of grass all through the mountain land.

The needles of the piñon trees and the small cones stood covered in snow white in the quiet air under the pure blue sky. Even the tiny needles of the Cholla cactus were traced in shining white, while the branches, formed in the form of crosses, formed a sacred little snowy emblem of thankfulness.

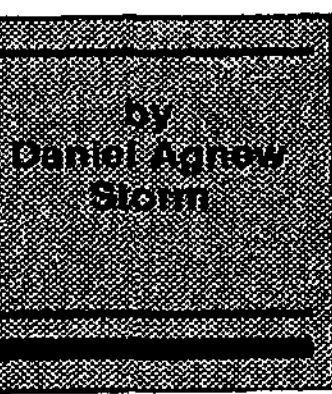

Then the sun appeared over Sunrise Mountain turning piñons and cedars on the top of the hill into trees of red and golden fire welcoming the first rays of the golden disk of morning into this snowy vale.

From on top of the fiery trees the golden sun sent down upon the white world shafts of rainbow-colored light, which cast the slow clad mountains on the west side of the valley into shades of purple, crimson and pink. The trees on the western mountains caught a touch of the gold and orange fire on top of Sunrise Mountain. The stream winding under the river trees reflected the airy colors on its shining water.

The first rays of the sun after it cleared the mountain turned the Vale into snow touched with gold. And soon from the blue sky the sun transformed the land into a display of snow jewelry, as the snow melted.

The cedars with their mantles of soft white were turned into snowy trees full of sparkling rubies, emeralds and sapphires, and diamonds — as the sun struck the droplets from the melting snow.

By noon all the snow had left the valley — high and low you looked and could not see a trace. And so all in a day we had winter turned back to fall.

La Sierra Blanca

Today in mid-afternoon when you came in sight of the mountain, you had a pleasant reminder once again of why the early Spanish named our mountain "La Sierra Blanca" (The White Mountain.)

After the journey up the valley without a sight of snow all along the way, there, like something in a dream, stood the giant peak with its summit high in the blue sky, with the afternoon sun turning it into a mountain of pure white and gold. The picture of the mountain in pure white, once you have seen it, will abide with you forever.

I think this is the earliest that I have seen the mountain so heavy with snow this early in the year. This is not only a beautiful sight but also a shining signal of good days ahead for Mother Earth and for all of us.

November Full Moon

Just at sundown I arrived in the Vale. The last rays of the sun were still brightly reflected on the hillsides to the east of the house. The gloaming had not yet set its early golden signals of approaching night in the sky. It was still daytime.

And yet here was the round full moon already fairly high above the mountain — all pale, silvery white in the blue sky. You have the feeling that night was in a hurry to arrive in the mountain land.

As the golden gloaming spread from the sunset all across the sky, the moon rising high turned from silvery white to light gold, sending down soft beams of moon rays across the tops of the cedars and piñons. The gloaming turned to twilight and the dusk came down upon the vale like a purple curtain.

And the moon changed into pure gold outlined with a rim of rainbow lights, sending a bright benediction from the sky down upon the mountain world, cheering the early night time with its heavenly light.

Thanksgiving Spirit Blesses the Vale

Now I am sending you Thanksgiving wishes here a half hour before high noon on November 21. At mid-morning the bright golden sun was shining from a sky of a special pure and heavenly blue that made your heart rejoice. Each month has its special blue in its sky. Today the sky looks down upon the mountain world with a special blue just for today. You feel thankful for the God's gift of sight just to behold this sky, pure and unbroken all around the mountain horizon.

There is no cold in the north wind as it travels over the sunny lands away to the lower country. The gold and crimson and amber mountain meadows are glowing and shimmering in the sunny air in a temperature of 65. Not a snow bird is in sight, having gone on a pilgrimage to the mountain. Finches and other summer birds are feeding at the feed stations. Corina the Storm Ranch cat is dozing next to her spot by the sun room window.

Indeed Indian Summer has paid us a Thanksgiving visit.

The Card Shower Continues Showering

Frankie Jarrell said she hoped the number of birthday cards would equal or surpass the number of my years. The cards are still arriving. I have received cards from folks who have never met me, but say they feel like they know me from having read The Silver Lining and The Dreamer. To hear from you folks made my heart glad this Thanksgiving season. I thank you and look forward to seeing you one of these days. And I wish a happy Thanksgiving to all the friends I have made through the magic of the printed page.

Let us all make sure that we all have a blessed Thanksgiving, and be grateful to God for all our blessings.

Obituaries

Opal Ruth Sowder

The mother of Nob Hill Elementary School principal Roger Sowder of Ruidoso died Friday at the Muleshoe Area Health Care Center in Muleshoe, Texas.

Services for Opal Ruth Sowder, 79, were at 2 p.m. Sunday at the First Baptist Church in Muleshoe. The Rev. Roger Foote of the Three Way Baptist Church and the Rev. Mike Doyle of the Spanish Assembly of God officiated.

Burial was at the Morton Memorial Cemetery in Morton, Texas.

Sowder was born in Cook County, Texas, and previously lived in Idalou, Texas. She moved to Bailey County in 1931. She was married on Dec. 10, 1929, to Everett Madison Sowder who preceded her in death in November 1966. She was a homemaker and a member of Three Way Baptist Church in Three Way, Texas.

She is survived by four sons: Bill Sowder of Littlefield, Texas; Joe Sowder and Mickey Sowder, both Goodland, Texas; and Roger Sowder of Ruidoso; and two daughters: Frankie Loter of Amarillo, Texas; and Janice Farris of San Antonio, Texas.

Also surviving her are two brothers, Norville Stapp, Salem, Oregon; and Moody Stapp, Amarillo, Texas; and two sisters, Lela Mae Harris, Arlington, Texas; and Marie Sowder, Levelland, Texas.

The family received friends at the funeral home Saturday.

Steve L. Wohlgemuth

Steve L. Wohlgemuth, 65, died at Memorial Medical Center in Las Cruces. He was a resident of Tularosa, but had lived in Ruidoso from 1975 to 1989.

Wohlgemuth was in the U.S. Navy and a veteran of World War II. He was a member of the St. Frances De Paula Catholic Church in Tularosa.

He is survived by his wife, Teresita of Tularosa; two sons, Steve and Jeff, both of Tularosa; three daughters, Jeanette Wohlgemuth of Alamogordo, Roberta Mills and Stephanie Lloyd, both of Arizona. Survivors include a brother, Emil Wohlgemuth of Tularosa; and two sisters, Josephine Seaman of Alamogordo, Grace Foddrill of Las Cruces and five grandchildren.

A rosary was recited Friday at Alamogordo Funeral Chapel. Memorial mass was Saturday at St. Frances De Paula Catholic Church in Tularosa.

The family suggests memorials to the American Cancer Society.

Warrior girls hit the courts for b'ball

The Ruidoso Warrior girls basketball team is looking good and getting ready for a tough district schedule this winter.

The girls will be getting off to a quick start with their first game at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in Tularosa. The first home game will start at 5:15 p.m. on Dec. 3 against Goddard.

Coach Jody Blanton said she is really excited about the season and is proud of all the girls on the team because basketball is a hard sport.

She said most of the girls played on the volleyball team and didn't get much of a break before basketball season began. They have put in a lot of hard work and are willing to put in a lot of time for the sport, she said.

More than 30 girls are out this year which is up from last year, Blanton said. The team will be relying on three returning varsity players, Amy Wishard, Kansas Miranda and Cicelee Makowski to lead the way with their experience.

For such a short period of practice, Blanton said the girls are running the offense well and are strong inside. The girls are also more aggressive this year which will be a key to success against the tough district competition.

One of the strongest competitors will be Oñate again, Blanton said. They were runners up in the state last year and have several varsity team members returning.

"There is not one game on the schedule that will be easy for us," Blanton said.

One major strength is the team has quite a bit of height on the court.

"These kids can move real well under the basket, and they can run a press real effectively too," she said.

One goal the team is working on is the outside shooting game. Several of the girls are working hard on it.

"At this point the kids really look good," Blanton said.

Leading the Warrior girls basketball team this season will be returning varsity players (from left) Kansas Miranda, Cicelee makowski and Amy Wishard.

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

When lifelong dreams and reality duke it out, it is sometimes hard to tell which will win.

Kiki Germany, Ruidoso's amateur boxer and kickboxer, won two gold medals in competition two weeks ago, but is still contemplating a decision to leave amateur boxing or to continue to achieve goals in the ring.

Germany set an ultimate goal for himself to make the Olympic boxing team, which will be having its trials in June 1992.

Germany has had two matches since he came back into the boxing scene from five years of competing in kickboxing where he earned the European kickboxing championship last year.

His first boxing match after leaving kickboxing was in Ruidoso in August.

"I haven't made a decision on leaving amateur boxing, but in my last fight here I lost in a split decision. In my opinion I didn't fight to the best of my ability. I was offered the opportunity to go fight in Puerto Rico which I thought may be my last one and I wanted to go out on a winning note," Germany said.

On Nov. 16 Germany did fight in the San Juan Amateur Boxing Invitational as the main event.

Germany beat San Juan heavyweight Ricky Perez in only two minutes and 24 seconds.

Germany, who has been boxing for 17 years, now has a record of 206-6.

Germany also competed in the Miami/Ft. Lauderdale WKA/PAK Open Kickboxing Benefit on Nov. 17. He won the five-round exhibition against Miami's top heavyweight Michael Page. He said the benefit raised almost $200,000 for the homeless.

"My dream was to try to make the Olympic team. I don't want to put amateur boxing down, but even if I was to make it to the Olympic trials, there are a lot of politics going on, so I don't know what my chances would be," he said.

Germany said being a member of the U.S. Boxing Team helps those who are trying for the Olympics because they have better training facilities and more international competition. Germany has his training camp here.

He will be taking a break until the first of the year so he can think about his decision. One thing he is considering is that the State and National Golden Gloves competitions are in February and March.

"It's not the same as when I first started boxing. I think I'm realizing if I had had better opportunities and hadn't quit to kickbox I would be doing better. There are a lot of new techniques that I haven't learned. The most important thing is I may not be as hungry for the Olympics as I thought I was," Germany said.

He said he also realizes that the sports are for the younger and the stronger.

While living in Ruidoso Germany, trained six days a week. With little money coming in it was hard to make it, he said. This bit of reality made him consider another goal he has, to become a police officer in Ruidoso. Germany was a police officer in Miami.

Germany said he realizes trying out for the Olympics will take money for training, coaches and travel, and he can't guarantee he will win every fight.

"When I started this ordeal about trying to make the Olympic team, I might have overestimated how tough it would be. I want to thank everybody in town for the support they have given me and still are giving me. If it wasn't for the push my family and friends have given me I wouldn't have thought about doing this. Whatever I decide to do it will be the right choice," Germany said.

The Politics of Juvenile Justice

Special Investigative Series on New Mexico Youth Authority

Part 2 in a series by Sunmount Syndicate

Old problems, new purges...

by HAL RHODES
Sunmount Syndicate

Part II in a 4-part series
I'm afraid there are a lot of problems in the system," Celondonio Vigil told a reporter visiting his office in early October.

It was Vigil's last day on the job as Superintendent of the Youth Authority's Youth Diagnostic and Development Center (YDDC) in Albuquerque. His office evoked the melancholy of a once-bustling center of activity now being vacated. The worn desk was barren. Plaques honoring Vigil's professional accomplishments lay casually on a nearby credenza, their dusty outlines still evident on the wall.

A veteran of three decades in New Mexico juvenile corrections, Vigil had headed YDDC for the past nine years. His retirement this fall at age 49 left many associates and former colleagues discouraged.

"It's a big loss. Cel Vigil is a fine person and a progressive leader," said one official, "but he's not a favorite of [Youth Authority Secretary] Robert Portillos, so he's being forced out."

Vigil's departure robs New Mexico of perhaps its most nationally prominent figure in juvenile corrections. A member of the American Correctional Association's prestigious Board of Governors, Vigil also serves on the ACA Standards Committee, and is in demand by juvenile systems around the nation to audit and evaluate their programs.

"YDDC is probably the best managed facility in the Youth Authority," says Judy Nichols, head of the New Mexico office of Protection and Advocacy, a congressionally-mandated agency responsible for monitoring compliance with federal law on facilities for the emotionally and physically impaired.

"We've had very few complaints coming out of there..." Nichols says of YDDC. Credit for this success, she believes, must go to Vigil. "That may explain why he has the recognition and respect of his peers nationally," Vigil feels he was forced out by Portillos, and ascribes it to differences in correctional philosophy.

"I believe we must look to the most current standards and practices in the field," says Vigil, "and move faster to change to contemporary professional concepts if we are going to improve the quality of life for these kids and improve things for employees too."

For his part, Portillos maintains that, "There is no bad blood between Cel and myself." Others note, however, that Vigil's national reputation made him a potential rival to Portillos.

Policy differences with Portillos have also led to other recent departures from the system, and one source even speaks of a "purge" may be underway in the Youth Authority.

Dr. Ross Snyder, a well-known UNM Medical School professor, resigned in protest September 30. Sole psychiatrist at the YA's Secure Treatment Center for emotionally disturbed juveniles prone to violence, Snyder scored Portillos for appointing "another bureaucrat" instead of a clinician to head the Center. Portillos, in turn, accused Dr. Snyder of "overstepping his bounds" by intruding into "management matters."

Gone also is Dr. Ben Daitz, another UNM professor of medicine who doubled as YA Medical Director. Portillos refused to renew Daitz's contract last spring after the physician had submitted a report urging sweeping improvements in staff training and psychological counseling services.

Daitz's report was especially critical of the N.M. Boys School at Springer, where the physician found widespread problems, and where Portillos worked for 30 years, the last 14 as superintendent.

Portillos says he disagrees with the Daitz report, and press accounts have reported him to have been angered by its revelations.

Others have reacted to the Daitz report more favorably. "Daitz summed it up pretty well," says an aide to former Youth Authority Secretary Jacki Riggs.

"I told Jacki we should make a hundred copies, put them in boxes outside the door, and beg people to read them. Maybe then people would understand some of the problems we have to deal with."

Several legislators say they are disappointed by Portillos's rejection of the report. Daitz's findings were "on target, if overly kind" says Rep. Bob Hawk (D. Bern.).

Established in 1988, the Youth Authority combines in a single department all state juvenile corrections facilities. (See sidebar "Youth Authority Facilities" in the Thursday, Nov. 21 edition of The News.)

For many lawmakers, the new agency represented a major initiative in juvenile justice policy, and a mandate for innovation.

Lawmakers are also critical of Portillos beyond his handling of the Daitz affair, from his management of the department to what one legislator calls a "lack of vision." "I think you'd have to say that many legislators just don't see Robert Portillos doing much in the way of innovations," complains Rep. Patricia Baca (R. Bern.), who describes herself "frustrated" with the Secretary.

"Portillos has dropped the ball on a lot of things, lost momentum and wasted time purging people who don't agree with him," says another proponent of reform.

Portillos contends that his critics are premature, and much of their criticism is unwarranted. "After all, I've only been on this job for 10 months, and we're still a new department with a lot of start-up problems..." he says of the 3 year-old agency. "We're not where we should be, but eventually we'll get there."

Others, like Rep. Ruben Smith (D. Dona Ana) who ramrodded the YA bill through the legislature, fear time is running out. "Unless things improve quickly," Smith predicts, "I would expect some advocacy group to slap us with a class action suit."

"I hate to say it," laments Hawk, "but it may take federal court intervention to turn the situation around."

Rumors of such a lawsuit are rife throughout the Youth Authority, with parallels drawn between problems at juvenile facilities and those culminating in the Duran consent decree, a federal court order which forced New Mexico to make multimillion dollar changes in adult corrections.

One potential source of legal action, many believe, is Protection and Advocacy.

"I cannot affirm or deny that we will pursue a class action suit," says Judy Nichols, Director of the Congressionally-mandated group.

"Frankly, there's been a honeymoon with the state since it (the YA) was established, and we have gone along with that honeymoon for the last two years. That's a long honeymoon, however, and I don't think the system has lived up to the vision the people who created it had for it."

If New Mexico finds itself in federal court, many sources believe, its legal Achilles heel will be those unaccredited facilities which fail to meet federal legal standards, including the Carlsbad Reintegration Center and Albuquerque's Secure Treatment Center.

Most vulnerable to legal action is the Boys School at Springer in northeastern New Mexico, where problems common throughout the juvenile system have been allowed to multiply many times over. Those problems, even top Youth Authority officials admit, read like a litany of chronic neglect and failure — understaffing, overcrowding, low staff pay, inadequate staff training, physical abuse of inmates, obsolete physical facilities, out-of-date and poorly equipped educational programs, deficient psychological counseling services, a dearth of alternative programs appropriate to a juvenile population ranging between the ages of 10 and 18.

More ominously, legislators and Youth Authority officials say they fear a violent eruption at Springer.

"We are absolutely sitting on a powderkeg," warns Rep. Smith.

Boys School Superintendent Robert H. Pasternack does not quarrel with Smith's bleak assessment.

"If you look at the (1980) riot at the state prison, and the conditions which led to that riot," says Pasternack, "there were a lot of things who had been warning that things had better change, and fast, that we needed more staff, better trained staff, more programs to deal with (inmates) needs and problems, or it would blow. And it did."

"Yeah, we need to be more proactive if we want to keep this place from exploding," Pasternack concludes. "One of the things I give Robert Portillos credit for is that he managed to keep the lid on at this place as long as he did."

Ruidoso artist, Linda Smith, exhibits in New York show

Ruidoso artist Linda Smith has been juried into the 78th Annual Exhibition of the Allied Artists of America with an oil painting titled, "Casey's Carousel: an allegory."

The show and sale is currently at the National Arts Club Upper Gallery, 15 Gramercy Park South, New York City and is open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. daily, November 21 through December 15.

According to a news release, out of more than 3,000 entries from all over the United States, only 287 art works were chosen.

The exhibition includes oil painting, sculpture, watermedia, pastel, and graphics.

The entry slide of Smith's painting will be included in the A.A.A. Traveling Slide Program.

Smith's work includes still life, landscapes, and figure work in oil and pastel. She is well-known for her portraits, and has just completed commissions for Dr. Arlene Brown and Paul Vordermann, and Dr. T.T. Marquardt in Ruidoso, and Mrs. Jo Johns, JCJ Ranches, Santa Theresa, New Mexico.

Smith's work is found in many corporate and private collections here and abroad. Her new works can be seen in the following galleries: Canyon Gallery, Ruidoso; Gallery at Simply Santa Fe, Santa Fe; Burke Armstrong Galleries, Taos; Hayden-Hays Gallery, Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colorado; Galerie du Bois, Aspen, Colorado; Spirit Seeker Gallery, Sedona, Arizona; and Gallery at Shoal Creek, Austin, Texas.

Girl Scouts "Care for the Earth"

Approximately 40 people from Southeast New Mexico attended a fun weekend in the Lincoln National Forest where information from Project Learning Tree and Project Wild were presented by foresters from Smokey Bear Ranger District and the Zia Girl Scout Council.

Participants learned how to select a campsite and got some tips on outdoor cooking, as well as low impact camping, fire prevention, safety, games and activities.

The day long session was led by the forester, Peg Crim of Tularosa.

Special guests included Smokey Bear and Woodsey Owl.

According to a news release, this is the first in a series of joint programs to focus on the theme "Girl Scouts Care for the Earth" national service project.

For more information about these activities contact your local Girl Scout office.

The Plant Corner

Lincoln's artist series is a hit

The weather was great and a very large crowd came to renew old friendships with artist Ted
Robertson and wife,
Carol, who have just moved back to Lincoln.

I enjoyed a visit with A.N. and Jackie Spencer who had come to especially see Ted's work Jackie said she had long admired Ted's work.

I had a chat with Carol Bayless, we reminisced of the "olden" days at First Christian Church. Carol said she loved the exhibitions.

Max Young and Bonnie Tuck drove over from El Paso to meet artists Ted and Elissa. They were impressed with the historic buildings of Elissa's and they particularly liked the "Sunset" by Ted.

Martha Proctor came to lend support to her very dear friend of many years, Elissa Phillips.
Martha Proctor, our County
Clerk, told us she is also a student at ENMU-Ruidoso, and while it's difficult getting used to "homework" again, she recommends those who possibly can to sign up for some spring classes.

"We should all strive to be the best we can," said Martha.

The final art show this season will be December 14 and 15 from 1-5 p.m. at Dr.

Wood's Annex. The same delicious food will be for sale at the "Eatery" just across the street from Dr.
Wood's Annex.

Featured artist will be Linda Miller, who lives and works in San Patricio. Linda Miller's original works and prints will be for sale during the exhibit.

All Lincoln shops will be open for browsing and Christmas shopping.

The Lincoln Hospitality
Group appreciates your interest and they wish to thank The Ruidoso News for the publicity given to "Meet-the-Artist" of our area and a big thanks to Rosalie
Dunlap for her photos and support.

Editorial

Do we want it all?

New Mexico may have been designated the nuclear dump ground of the nation, but some New Mexicans aren't pleased with that designation.

When state leaders cut the deal to become the home of the Waste Isolation Pilot Project some years ago, people at the meeting recall that the Department of Energy assured them that New Mexico wouldn't be asked to provide space for any other nuclear waste. The promises of money that went with the WIPP deal also have gone sour, with some members of the House Energy and Power Subcommittee saying earlier this month that they oppose paying New Mexico the millions of dollars approved by the Senate to build roads — the kind of roads needed to transport nuclear waste.

Meanwhile, the Department of Energy believes it has hit a bull's eye in identifying the beautiful Mescalero Apache Reservation as a temporary disposal site for nuclear waste. Again — more promises of millions of dollars.

Even as the feasibility study for Phase I is initiated on the Mescalero site, some Washington insiders say that the ink already is dry on Phase II documents — with the DOE waiting for the timing to be right to push through another of its 10-day or less approvals. Hard to believe, but it was just as hard to believe that the first application went through on the express plan.

Part-time Ruidoso residents who live in Texas (many who plan to retire in the Ruidoso area) are very concerned about their new nuclear neighbor. They're getting organized, meeting, writing letters and studying nuclear waste. They say that the rest of the world wants to know how Ruidoso feels about having a nuclear waste site right next door.

The Ruidoso Village Council passed a resolution stating its opposition to any nuclear waste disposal in the area. How do you feel?

Please fill out and return the questionnaire below, with all responses returned to The News; PO Box 128; Ruidoso NM 88345; by Thursday, December 12. You can drop them off at The News office, 104 Park Avenue in Ruidoso.

New Mexico Perspective

When push comes to shove, that's politics

Late on Thursday, Oct. 3, Energy Secretary James Watkins called a hasty press conference in Washington to announce what amounted to unilateral confiscation of land around the controversial Waste Isolation Pilot Project (WIPP) near Carlsbad.

Only minutes before he met the media, Watkins had telephoned Gov. Bruce King, formally notifying him that within a week the first long-disputed radioactive shipments would begin to cross New Mexico regardless of environmental standards.

If the state tried to contest his action, Watkins threatened, DOE would withhold millions of federal dollars pledged for highway improvements, emergency training and other safety measures.

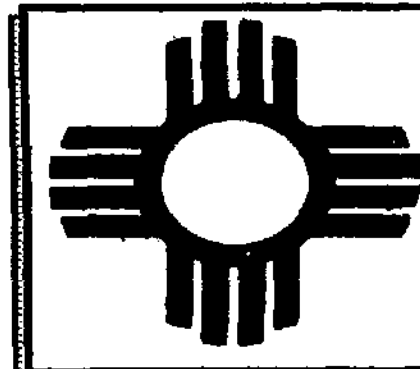

The ensuing clash of state and federal authority made national, even international news. In an historic act, New Mexico sued the United States of America on Oct. 9, to block the land seizure and shipments.

Soon after, Energy officials agreed to delay the opening of WIPP for another four to six weeks, postponing though not resolving the deeper crisis in public policy.

It was seven days of Constitutional drama, some high, some low. But behind the headlines, it was also by several accounts a scarring week in New Mexico political history, an episode of betrayal and shattered myths that subtly altered the landscape of leadership.

For New Mexico Democratic Sen. Jeff Bingaman, it was another lesson in Washington politics. Along with his senior Republican colleague, Pete Domenici, Bingaman had been steering through the U.S. Senate a WIPP land withdrawal bill allowing 4,500 barrels of waste to be stored over an initial experimental period, and carrying environmental safeguards sought by both citizen critics and state scientists.

Early on that fateful Thursday, however, Bingaman was confronted with a veritable ultimatum from Watkins suddenly increasing the experimental storage to some 8,500 barrels.

Angry that his own deadlines for Senate action had passed, Watkins swiftly went behind Bingaman's flank to get agreement to the 8,500 from both Sen. Domenici and Washington's other ranking New Mexico figure, former Congressman and Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan. When Bingaman held firm, the Energy Secretary moved before the day was out to have Secretary Lujan quickly sign over the land to DOE, and then called his evening press conference to bypass both the Senate and the state with Domenici's silent blessing.

Left in the debris of the attempted coup was one of the most cherished myths of New Mexico politics. Thousands of voters may not savor the special interest records or corpulent corporate backers of GOP politicians like Domenici or Lujan. But they repeatedly send them to Washington on the venerable theory that seniority protects a sparsely-populated, poor state. When push comes to shove, they say, Pete and Manny will be there for new Mexico against the big boys.

Shove came with a jolt that first week in October, and Domenici and Lujan stood aside to let it slam into what little prerogative and policy dignity the state has left. The precedents and portent can hardly be measured. Where will our genial men be the next time a federal agency treats New Mexico like a Banana Republic?

The picture was no more edifying back in Santa Fe. Attorney General Tom Udall answered Watkins' fiat and threat of appropriations blackmail with a resounding, "See you in court." Udall's 1000 page brief not only posed the Constitutional issue, but contained the state's first high-level recognition of serious scientific doubts over the geological integrity of the WIPP site, as well as myriad questions about transportation and accident response.

Yet Udall and his lawyers stood all but politically and legally alone the long weekend after Watkins spoke. Typically on one or more sides of the WIPP issue, Gov. King first agreed to champion the lawsuit. But then, in an Oct. 4, press conference remarkable even by statehouse standards, King pointedly pulled back from his young Attorney General, holding out the chimera of some Senate compromise and wandering like a stranger through an issue haunting New Mexico for more than a decade.

There were other embarrassing footnotes. Where were our Constitutional conservatives, our Republicans standing against federal tyranny? Some interests of Big Brother are more equal than others. And what if Congress comes to the rescue with one of the pending bills, providing only a few months preparation of safety measures.

Admiral Watkins seems soon destined to open his $1-billion cavity despite its dubious morphology and insidiously seeping brine. The chronic abdication of state and federal officials makes it inevitable.

What a tragically Pyrrhic victory for our neighbors in Carlsbad, now too dependent on nuclear waste in the absence of any intelligent, caring economic development policy for Southeastern New Mexico. More than everyone, they had a stake in an orderly opening of WIPP, achieved not with fearful division, doubts and lawsuits, but in sound policy, unselfish politics, and public confidence. Like the rest of us, they have lost on what matters.
