Drug suspects head for court

The list of defendants arrested in a massive Lincoln County drug investigation grew to 16 this week with three persons still at large.

Oscar Garcia of Ruidoso was arrested Monday by the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department in Slaton, Texas. Garcia was charged with trafficking cocaine by distribution and with conspiracy to traffic cocaine by distribution.

He refused to waive extradition and District Attorney Bert Atkins will have to secure a governor's warrant to bring him back to New Mexico, according to a spokesman for the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department.

Ten of the suspects who were charged in a raid last Friday were in county jail today, unable to pay their bail, which ranged up to $25,000. The judge required those jailed to pay full bail, not the 10 percent allowed in some cases.

Those arrested are scheduled to enter pleas to the drug-related charges Friday in front of District Judge Richard A. Parsons in Carriazo.

Scheduled to appear are —Lorin Czeszneg, 28, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana and conspiracy to distribute marijuana, still in jail.

—Angela Tognazi, 21, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana and conspiracy to distribute marijuana.

—Fred Gurule, 37, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana, trafficking cocaine by distribution.

—Kurt Richardson, 25, Ruidoso, distribution of methamphetamines, trafficking cocaine by distribution, conspiracy to distribute marijuana.

—Jerry Chavez, 26, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana (two counts), conspiracy to distribute marijuana.

—Marsha Chavez, 42, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana (two counts), conspiracy to distribute marijuana, still in jail.

—Thomas Mark Brunett, 35, trafficking of cocaine by distribution (two counts), conspiracy to traffic cocaine by distribution, still in jail.

—Jay L. Goodman, 30, Ruidoso, conspiracy to traffic cocaine by distribution, trafficking cocaine by distribution (attempt), still in jail.

—Leoncio Rodriguez, 36, Ruidoso, conspiracy to traffic cocaine or in the alternative, trafficking cocaine by distribution of marijuana (two counts), still in jail.

—Todd Dentler, 21, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana (two counts),

Nature's chilly puzzle

Recycling won't provide any quick profits

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Recycling may be the wave of the future, but it will be a long while before it will be profitable in a small community like Lincoln County.

That was the assessment of Dave Warren who's with the Infrastructure Development Assistance Program of the University of New Mexico.

Last week, while members of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority were trying to recruit Otero County into a regional landfill, Otero officials were attempting to interest Lincoln in a $7-million recycling system.

"We went down looking for a landfill partner and they gave us this to look at," said authority chairman Victor Alonso, who also is mayor of Ruidoso. Authority members met unofficially Monday when they couldn't muster a quorum.

Officials of the Lundell System of Waste Management claim it will recycle more than 90 percent of all garbage and trash brought to its conveyor belts.

"The key is that whatever is left is refuse derived fuel, pelletized with carbonate," Warren said. It is to be burned in a co-generation plant and the electricity produced is sold.

Promoters of the system contend that with a population base of about 70,000 people or 20,000 households, the cost to each household each month to pay off the system would be $1.59.

"But some of the basic assumptions trouble me," Warren said. "I believe there are some optimistic assumptions."

Three-fourths of the revenue derived from the system is made from the sale of fuel, with the rest from the resale of glass, aluminum and steel. And if they don't recover revenue from the fuels, the rates will go up for each household.

That means they must have a buyer.

Authority manager Gene Green said one potential co-generation plant builder and fuel buyer would be Holloman Air Force Base.

Questions also have been raised about the efficiency of the fuel, he said.

The system is labor intensive and would require about 30 people to monitor and work the conveyor

Chino warns picketers to stay off Indian land

A threat to close down Ski Apache and the Ruidoso economy put the skids on protest plans by opponents to the possible storage of nuclear waste on Mescalero-owned land.

The threat was issued by Mescalero Tribal President Wendell Chino Monday to several Ruidoso business leaders. He was reacting to rumors that protesters intended to march and picket at the tribal-operated Inn of the Mountain Gods. Chino could not be reached for comment. He did not return a reporter's calls.

Dave Dale, organizer of Save the Sacramentos, said he was approached by the same business leaders, who asked him to cancel any plans to stage a protest on the Mescalero reservation.

"After talking to them for nearly an hour, I agreed that I would not move ahead with any plans to present on the reservation the opposition petitions collected over the weekend unless and until the Mescalero proceed to phase two of the study on an MRS (monitored retrievable storage facility for spent nuclear fuel rods)," Dale said.

"I had visitations and telephone calls from people until midnight about Chino's visit," Dale said Tuesday. "I was shocked and sad."

Grand jury names seven

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Seven people were indicted by a Lincoln County grand jury this week on charges ranging from insurance fraud to forgery.

Assistant district attorney Viola Rhodes, headquartered in Carriazo, presented the cases Tuesday and Wednesday.

Last week, the same grand jury returned 19 drug-related indictments, the culmination of a six-month investigation.

According to information from Rhodes' office, on Tuesday, the following persons were indicted:

—Stephanie C. Wright, 30, from Midland, Texas, on a charge of filing a false report, a fourth degree felony, and for false application claims proof of loss, a misdemeanor.

—Jerry Joe Gonzales, 21, from Ruidoso, on a charge of receiving stolen property between $250 to $2,500, a fourth degree felony.

—Bruce Anthony Spratt, 25, from Boise, Idaho, on a charge of commercial burglary, a fourth degree felony; larceny under $100, a petty misdemeanor; and for criminal damage to property under $1,000, a petty misdemeanor.

—Lloyd Carl Montes, 40, of Hondo on a charge of forgery, a third degree felony.

—Mike Dominguez, 20, from Alamogordo, for failure to appear in court on a previous felony charge, a fourth degree felony.

Wednesday indictments were returned against:

—Robert S. Gutierrez, 51, of Hondo on a charge of receiving stolen property over $2,500, a third degree felony.

—Merle Miller, 44, of Ruidoso, for receiving or transferring a stolen vehicle, a fourth degree felony. Miller already is in federal custody on drug charges.

The grand jury will meet again February 20.

DAVE WARREN

Even if a profitable system was devised, until it was built, the area would still have to handle its generated garbage, Warren said.

The authority has been dealing with Otero County as a natural partner in a regional landfill because that county's options are dwindling.

Village costs, revenues down

by BUDDY BAKER
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

On Tuesday morning the Ruidoso Village Council heard village manager Ron Wicker report that the village, in the first six months of the fiscal year, had spent 48 percent of the money budgeted.

In addition, Wicker said 51 percent of anticipated revenues for the year had been collected.

Wicker was referring to the general fund.

According to figures distributed at the meeting, overall expenses of all departments is 44.6 percent of that budgeted and revenues collected are 44.2 percent of those anticipated, making a shortfall of about a half percent.

The Village of Ruidoso's total operating budget is planned on anticipated revenues of $13,624,848, and expenses of $15,242,703, according to the mid-year budget review dated December 31, 1991.

The first half figures represent some annual payments that will not recur in the second half of the fiscal year.

All six councilors met in a special session for the semi-annual review of the budget.

Mayor pro-tem Barbara Duff presided over the meeting in the absence of Mayor Victor Alonso.

Wicker asked that the council give approval to the village staff to move items within a department's budget, if necessary. For instance, to move budgeted funds from office supplies to postage in any given department's budget.

He said that the biggest problem in the budget is the payment of overtime to village employees. It is difficult to anticipate how much snow removal crews will be needed or to know when extra policemen will be required at troublesome events.

Addressing the animal control problem, Wicker said that he is in the process of talking to Ruidoso Downs in an effort to work out an agreement with them on sharing an officer.

The public service building that houses the police department, magistrate court and municipal court is in need of structural repair. Major roof repairs have been delayed and temporary repairs made pending an engineer's evaluation of the building.

If the police officers continue to keep their vehicles while off duty, Wicker says that the village will have to budget four new cars each year instead of two.

Councilor J.D. James asked Wicker and deputy village manager Gary Jackson about the increase in the charges for participation in the gymnastics program.

Jackson said the increase was an attempt to recover some of the high cost of the program borne by the village.

Councilor Patricia Espinosa said that the program was pricing itself away from the average citizen and perhaps should be reviewed.

Tribemay go to court on gambling

The Mescalero Apache tribe will seek a court order to force the state to sign an agreement allowing video gambling on the reservation, according to a report in today's Albuquerque Journal.

Wendell Chino, president of the Mescalero Apache Indian Tribe, is quoted in the Journal saying his tribe will petition the court to order Governor Bruce King to approve a compact.

"We've negotiated for months in good faith and the governor has seen fit not to sign the compact," Chino is quoted as saying. "We're asking the courts to find that the state has acted in bad faith," he continues.

A busy video gaming operation is in place at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

dened that Chino could exercise enough influence to get these men in to see me."

None of his visitors were angry, but one caller "subtly, but definitely threatened me," he said.

Herb Brunell, owner of Brunell's in Midtown Ruidoso, said Chino and Fred Peso, Mescalero Tribal Council secretary, stopped in to see him Monday afternoon.

"They asked that there not be any protest or organized march on Indian lands," Brunell said. "They said people can protest anywhere else in the world, but they have no right to be on Indian land."

"Chino said that if there was a protest on Indian land, he would close Ski Apache for the rest of the season. He'd call (Roy) Parker and tell him to get everyone off the mountain and to padlock it."

Brunell said he and Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce director Jerry Watts went to see Dale.

"We were not asking him to change his position, simply to consider the economic problems that would occur with the closing. We found out that a protest wasn't his intent at all. What he has is a stack of petitions that he wants to present to Chino to let him know how people feel," Brunell said.

He agreed to find some way to present them without a demonstration.

Watts said the Chino-Peso duet reached his office about 4 p.m.

"I felt Chino was very serious," Watts said. "I felt he meant what he said. I was surprised. Frankly, I had not heard about any protest march."

"The issue that Chino and Frederick made to me was that protest certainly was expected. As long as it was here, all right. But take it on to tribal land and it's a whole different story."

Closing Ski Apache would be devastating to many Ruidoso businesses, but it also would be an economic blow to the tribe, Watts said.

"No question about Ski Apache being an important economic factor to the tribe," he said. "I believe from our conversation and his demeanor that they were willing to experience that type of loss. I didn't take it as a threat. I took it as a promise."

Watts said Peso had heard rumors that the protest march was scheduled for Tuesday.

"Obviously, Chino was not too pleased," Watts said. "The point that Herb and I made to Dave was that up and down the street (business owners) are telling me this is the best winter in a long time. We're experiencing a recovery of sorts and anything that would hurt that would be critical."

"But we weren't there to do anything but urge moderation, to urge Dave to find another plan."

Another stop on Chino's rounds to village businesses was Don Victor's, the restaurant owned by Ruidoso Mayor Victor Alonso.

Village council member Bill Karn and Ted Bennett, owner of Bennett's Shur-Sav and son of one of the original developers of Ski Apache, already were meeting with the mayor when Chino and Peso entered the restaurant.

"He was fairly calm," Karn said describing Chino's demeanor. "He wanted to know what we'd heard about (a possible protest on the reservation). We managed to clear up all the misunderstanding."

Although Karn said he did not recall any specific threat to close down the ski area, "I believe that (Chino) mentioned he met with the tribal council and they gave him a free hand to act in any way."

Karn indicated that Chino may not have the authority to shut off the ski area.

"The ski area is on federal land and is there for the public benefit," he said. "It bothers the mayor and council members that the village's economy could be held hostage by the president of a tribe over which the local, state and federal government has little or no control."

Karn said closure has been threatened before by Chino.

Sam Tobias, supervisor of recreation with the Smokey Bear District of the U.S. Forest Service, said his agency has not developed a policy on the possibility of a closure by the Mescaleros.

"Our official position is that since no request has been made, we have not developed a policy," he said.

While the equipment is owned by the Mescaleros, the tribe leases the land from the forestry service.

The permit governing the lease states that the Mescaleros must keep the land open to the public.

It does not address shutting down the ski equipment, Tobias said.

Karn said while they had Chino in person, Alonso and he questioned the tribal president about the announcement of three possible sites in Lincoln County for the storage facility.

"He told us the release of information was not by the Mescaleros, but by the consultant," Karn said. "He said he told the consultants that they had gone beyond their scope of duties and if they didn't want to be on board, just keep it up."

Chino said the tribe still was getting back information from the phase one study of an MRS and had not selected any sites, Karn said.

"We expressed concern that we didn't want (an MRS) here," he said. Karn said he didn't necessarily feel relieved about the situation after his conversation with Chino.

"I talked individually to some of the village council members after a budget session and I believe we will create an official village committee to look into the MRS," Karn said. "We will submit names at the next meeting. We want them to stay in touch with the tribe and garner what information they can from the phase one study and where the tribe stands with phase two (designed to narrow down specific sites). We're trying to create a free flow of information."

Mescalero tribal officials announced last October that they had applied for a $100,000 grant to study an MRS. The grant was quickly awarded and the study started. The prospect of millions of dollars of immediate and longterm economic benefits has been dangled as an incentive by the Department of Energy (DOE) for a community to host an MRS.

Dealing with a tribal council and with reservation land, considered a sovereign nation, presents a unique opportunity for the DOE to bypass many of the avenues for communities to block such an enterprise.

Brunell and several others said that Chino and Peso indicated the tip that Dale's group was contemplating a march came from the Washington office of U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici, R-New Mexico.

Ari Fleischer, Domenici's press secretary, denied any involvement by the senator or his staff.

"Absolutely not, there was no discussion of that," Fleischer told The Ruidoso News. "There is nothing to any suggestion that Senator Domenici would have information about who would do what in Ruidoso to protest."

"Someone is spreading rumors and at a time when serious issues need to be talked about in a serious way. This is the last thing people should be doing."

The Lincoln County Commission can do little except register its protest if the MRS project is sited on Mescalero land, said county attorney J. Robert Beauvais. But if the project were moved off reservation property, the commission would be in a position to require a special use permit.

"We're not in that position now, but would be if the commission either completes its zoning ordinance and maps, or approves a specific ordinance dealing with hazardous waste," Beauvais said. "I would like to see them take that action."

Dale said although he will honor the requests by Brunell and others, he still wants to find a way to get the petitions to Chino.

"I'm unsure what I'm going to do," Dale said. "Maybe I'll build an effigy of Chino in the park and present the petitions to it if Chino won't accept them."

"I still would like to see a secret ballot among tribe members to accurately determine what his people really feel about it."

Domenici opposes MRS in state

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

To eliminate any questions about his position, U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici vowed Wednesday to oppose the possibility of locating a temporary high-level nuclear waste storage facility anywhere in New Mexico.

The stance was clearly stated in a letter to Wendell Chino, the president of the Mescalero Apache Tribe.

The letter stated the senator's recognition of the sovereign prerogative of the Mescalero Tribe to study whatever issues it chooses to study, but Domenici also vowed to oppose any site in New Mexico for a Monitored Retrievable Storage (MRS) facility.

Ari Fleischer, Domenici's press secretary, said the timing of the letter was in response to the possibility that the tribe could proceed this week from a phase one study of a MRS to a phase two study, covering the actual siting of a storage facility.

"Whether or not the project proceeds is not in (Domenici's) purview, but he will oppose it in all cases," Fleischer said.

In the letter, Domenici told Chino, "I think it is important that I tell you and your people, that as a Senator from New Mexico, I am opposed to the continuation of negotiations with the United States' Nuclear Waste Negotiator directed toward siting a MRS facility anywhere inside the State of New Mexico."

"My opposition applies to sites on tribal lands now held in trust as well as to lands purchased by the Tribe to be held in trust for this purpose."

Domenici ended the letter by referring to the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad.

"New Mexico is already doing its fair share for our national efforts to find responsible methods for solving the problem of storing nuclear waste," he wrote.

"While New Mexico's commitment has not been to high level commercial waste, we are taking definitive steps toward safely disposing of transuranic waste generated by this nation's nuclear weapons complex."

The senator's stance should come as good news to opponents of an MRS in Lincoln County or neighboring Otero County, where the Mescalero reservation is located.

Domenici has been pinpointed as a key power figure in the Congressional leadership that could squash an MRS project. Congress must approve any deal negotiated by the Department of Energy and a prospective MRS host.

GTE temporary employee arrested for embezzlement

Denice M. Mize, 28, was arrested Tuesday in connection with an embezzlement of an undisclosed amount of money from GTE, 2700 Sudderth, according to Sgt. Lanny Maddox, commander of the Criminal Investigation Division of the Ruidoso Police Department.

Mize was charged with seven counts of third degree felony embezzlement. She appeared before Magistrate Judge J.R. "Jim" Wheeler and was remanded to the custody of her father.

According to John Van Tussenbroek, GTE manager, Mize was a temporary employee, hired in October. He said that a substantial amount of the embezzled funds were recovered, along with a used car she had purchased.

Parents of RHS seniors to college information meeting

Seniors at Ruidoso High School and their parents are invited to attend a meeting to discuss financial aid necessary for the college-bound student.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. today (Thursday) at the high school cafeteria. Information will be provided on government student loans and pell grants and the deadlines for applying for them, according to Jean Forrester, high school guidance counselor.

Any questions on the aid will also be answered at that time.

End is in sight for water rights battle

by FRANKIE JARRELL

Ruidoso News Editor

It's been a long time coming, but the ongoing Lewis Water Case, involving hundreds of New Mexico water right owners along the Three Rivers and the Mescalero Apache Indian Tribe, is heading into its final stages.

Water Defense Association (WDA) members, meeting in Hondo last week, heard attorney Jim Brockman review the case that has pitted valley water users against the neighboring Indian tribe and the federal government.

The lawsuit is case number nine in category five on the New Mexico Appeals Court docket. Brockman said that means the case is within weeks of a hearing, and the next step — no matter who prevails in the state appeals court — is the U.S. Supreme Court.

WDA organized about four years ago to protect individual water rights from a claim by the reservation for more than 18,000 acre-feet of water rights annually for use in planned agricultural projects, including farming in the Pajaritos that would require deep wells.

WDA has said the Indian claim is more than the total annual flow of the Rio Ruidoso. They say it will dry up the entire valley and devastate their homes and economy.

The Indians claim they have the right to that water, and further say they need it for agricultural purposes.

Since the federal government drew the Indians into the ongoing case, the David and Goliath battle has continued with WDA gathering support from individuals and small governments and the Mescaleros bankrolled and supported by resources of the state and federal governments. Exact figures have been bogged in a bureaucratic mire, and have never been revealed.

"We have for a long time tried to get those figures," said Hubert Quintana, executive director of the WDA. "It's been very, very difficult to get a real handle on it, but the last kind of figures we had ... the federal government has spent $15 million (on the Indian's case) the state, $6 or $7 million (on the Indian's case) and the WDA, about $1 million protecting its members' water rights."

Quintana explained that the federal government, as trustee for the Mescalero Indian Tribe, is required to act on behalf.

"It's a legal relationship set up by Congress," said Brockman.

"Well, it's unfair," commented

Corine Swearingin, a member of the audience.

WDA members, seeing the light at the end of their tunnel, are planning to charter a bus and attend the appeals court hearing in Santa Fe.

Dub Williams, president of WDA, spoke proudly of the grass roots organization.

"They saw a problem, they saw a challenge and a group in this valley came together," said Williams.

Williams said his group had been asked to use its successful organizational abilities to help county residents stop the federal government from storing high level nuclear waste anywhere in South Central New Mexico.

"It's a new problem; no one else has been faced with this problem," said Quintana. He lined out what is a complicated and controversial problem involving a sovereign nation sitting in the middle of another country.

WDA members voted to organize a parallel group to bolster efforts by other organizations to stop the placement in and around Lincoln County of a monitored retrievable storage facility for spent fuel rods.

Also during the meeting, WDA elected new officers with David Lee as president; Joe Salazar, vice president; Phelps Anderson, secretary; Walter Hopkins, treasurer; and Williams as member at large.

Water Defense Association members, joined by their neighbors who are concerned over plans to store nuclear waste in South Central New Mexico, fill the Hondo School cafeteria to capacity during last week's meeting.

conspiracy to distribute marijuana.

—Martin Baca, 26, Tularosa, distribution of marijuana (two counts), still in jail.

—Nelson Evtott, 28, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana (two counts), conspiracy to distribute marijuana (accessory), still in jail.

—David Moran, 19, Ruidoso, distribution of marijuana (two counts), still in jail.

—Kerry E. Avery, 32, conspiracy to distribute marijuana and distribution of marijuana, still in jail.

—Shawn Childress, 24, distribution of marijuana (three counts), still in jail.

Friday's big drug raid revealed two things.

First, the village apparently was infiltrated with a number of small-time drug dealers who were spreading their deadly merchandise throughout the community.

Second, this pervasive disease has spread into Ruidoso High School in the form of LSD or acid.

Prior to Friday's massive raid, several arrests were made by the White Mountain Task Force, a coalition of area law enforcement that has been investigating drug crimes here for the past six months.

Two young men, one an 18-year-old high school student, were arrested and charged with selling LSD to RHS students.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor said his officers videotaped what appears to be drug deals between suspected sellers and RHS students. He said students pictured in those videos will be questioned by police.

Sgt. Lanny Maddox CID commander of the Ruidoso Police Department expressed dismay at learning that LSD is back in the picture.

"I thought we had passed this at Woodstock. That generation learned the horrors of the drug, but now we have to educate a new generation to the dangers of LSD, educate them not only to the danger of a bad trip but to the long term psychological effects of using the drug."

Recycling

The Department of Environment Monday issued a two year extension of a Waste Management permit to operate a landfill on eight more acres at Dog Canyon in Otero.

Krumtsiek said the extension will not solve Otero's long range problem.

"It may bring a sigh of relief to those officials who will be leaving office before the two years is up, but for those who will be staying, they have to be panicked," Krumtsiek said. "I think the environment department's decision was brilliant. They chose a middle ground, not shutting the county down, but putting it on notice that it has to do something."

The extension shouldn't discourage Otero officials from joining a regional landfill, he said. In any case, Krumtsiek, a former authority member, believes the organization should move ahead to establish a landfill.

Warren also offered some information about starting a new landfill based on data he is gathering for the community of Taos.

He said he will submit a summary of information compiled after he has presented it to that county's board. The study will include ways to cut start-up costs but answer the needs of Lincoln County.

"I don't think the cost of developing a full regional landfill are that prohibitive," Warren said.

In a related matter, authority attorney J. Robert Beauvais said an agreement was approved January 9 by the Roswell city council to allow the authority to use its landfill after the authority takes over garbage collection next April. The authority essentially will be assuming a previous agreement between the Village of Ruidoso and Roswell.

The authority has been delayed by 70 days because member communities selling their assets to the coalition must advertise, then approve an ordinance.

The process also includes a period of protest during which the acquisitions could be blocked and a referendum called if enough signed opposition petitions are received, Beauvais said.

"As mayor and chairman, I wasn't real happy that our attorney came up with this revelation at this point in time," Alonso said.

"To (David) Thomsen's credit, he's doing it the absolute safe way.

I had it worked out with the State Department of Finance and Administration to go the fast track," Beauvais said.

After April, the authority will handle the billing for county residents. Communities that have been supplying service will continue to bill their residents.

Green said the county was one out of 13 applicants nationwide selected for a $100,000 Partners for Environmental Progress grant. The grant would provide technical assistance, not cash. In return, the authority would put up matching services through manpower and equipment.

The group agreed to invite Environment Department Secretary Judith Espinosa to speak to them about regionalization during one of their regular meetings.

Business owner accuses the Chamber of discrimination

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

At least one area business person thinks the Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce is not performing all of its required duties as the village's visitor information center, but the final call will be up to the village.

Craig Rawlings, owner of Little Rascals day care center, said the chamber is discriminating against non-chamber members in giving out information, although an agreement with the village states they are obligated to "operating and maintaining a welcome and visitor center to help insure that area visitors use area facilities."

He said Little Rascals had been a member of the chamber for a year, but the only reason was to be able to put out their brochures at the chamber office. After the agreement between the city and the chamber in June to have the chamber provide the services, Rawlings said he cancelled his membership and thought he should still be able to use the chamber to get his information out.

The agreement states that the chamber will provide the service for $32,000 which comes from lodgers' tax funds.

"Since this is public tax dollars, anyone should have the right to use it. It affects the whole community, so the whole community should watch what is going on down there," Rawlings said.

When he called to the chamber office after not renewing his dues, Rawlings said he was told by a member of the staff that they were not referring people to his business because it was not a chamber member. He said in the past the chamber had stated that only members could use the office to pass out information, but the minute they accepted the agreement everyone in the community should have access to the building.

Rawlings said he has not heard of other businesses that have been discriminated against, but some businesses who were in the chamber to get their information out may watch this to find out if they can be provided the service through the agreement.

"If the chamber is discriminating, the city is administering it, (the agreement) and they will have to come in and stop it," Rawlings said.

Chamber director Jerry Watts sees the situation in a different light.

"We don't discriminate against non-members. We show preferential treatment to members. There is a distinct difference," Watts said.

Watts said when they get an inquiry for specific information the staff members give out the compiled list of chamber members who could assist.

"If we get requests that don't reflect our membership, we go to the phone book and tell them the name and phone number. We also tell them they aren't chamber members," he said.

Chamber staff member Lisa Storey said when she has an inquiry she states the chamber members that can fill the need, and if they ask for more she tells them the non-chamber members. She said it is reassuring to the people when they know the business is a chamber member.

Watts said the requests fall into certain categories, but most have to do with restaurants and lodging. Over recent weeks the chamber members have filled up quickly, so the chamber has developed a secondary list of non-members who have services available. The staff then calls the businesses to keep up on the availability.

"When we were able to we referred people to non-members, and it has worked to our advantage for assisting the visitor and in getting new memberships," he said.

He said he reads the agreement between the village and the chamber as a promotion of those attractions that are of appeal to the visitors.

"There is a mindset that views the contract as subsidizing the chamber. That is not correct. It is a partnership between the village and the chamber," Watts said.

The chamber handled more than 52,000 inquiries this past year with four staff members. Watts said only one of the salaries is offset by the contract, and the other three are paid for by membership. He said it is inconceivable for anyone to think with that volume of inquiries one person can handle it. All of the staff is involved with that process he said.

He said to the best of his knowledge the chamber is operating within the contract.

"If there is a different interpretation by the village they will have to tell us. Then we will go to the chamber board, and the staff will change the policy," Watts said.

City manager Ron Wicker said he has not discussed the issue with Watts, but he is concerned about what Rawlings is saying. The city does provide a substantial amount of lodgers tax to be used in the promotion of the community as a whole.

Since the money is being used for the city as a whole, the chamber should probably cover everyone in the community, Wicker said. He said he has not heard of any complaints other than Rawlings.

Wicker said he hasn't discussed the issue at length with the village attorney or anyone at the chamber.

Councilor Karn assaulted — twice

Councilor Bill Karn was assaulted by an old girlfriend as he drove up to his father's house in the early morning hours Saturday, according to Ruidoso Police reports.

Sharon Daniels allegedly opened the drivers door as he came to a stop and struck the councilor over the left eye. Karn managed to close the door and drive away, according to the official report.

The next morning around 11 a.m. Daniels surprised Karn and Gerri Wells in Ms. Well's bedroom and allegedly struck Karn several times, bloodying his nose and scratching his face, the report continues.

According to statements given to the police, Wells ran to call the police while Karn held Daniels to protect himself. Before the police arrived, Daniels left the house.

Daniels was later picked up at the Mountain Bayou Cafe. She had blood on her face and hands, which she said was Karn's.

She told police that she became very angry when she discovered Karn with Wells, and struck him several times in the face. He then held her down and slapped her, she said.

Karn denies striking Daniels.

When contacted, he had a bruised and scratched face.

"I simply grabbed her hands and tried to protect myself," he said. "I was too busy doing that to even think about hitting her."

Daniels is 5'4" and weighs 125 pounds, according to the police report.

According to Karn, Daniels called him later and told him to watch the movie on channel 10 at 7 p.m. The title? "Fatal Attraction."

Daniels was charged with three counts of assault and one count of criminal trespass.

She reportedly has volunteered to attend alcoholic rehabilitation.

Councilor Karn, who is serving on the Ruidoso Village Council for the second time, served one term as a member of the Lincoln County Commission.

According to police reports, Karn was involved in a scuffle with an unnamed woman last summer in a parking lot in Midtown on Sudderth Drive.

Doth resigns from Lodgers Tax Board

Mark Doth turned in his resignation at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Lodgers Tax Committee (LTC) and the Regional Advertising Board.

"When I took this job it did not require as much time as it does now," Doth said. "I feel like I owe more time to my family and job."

Doth is the marketing director for Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

He has been in the midst of a massive reorganization in the way the village allocates and spends its lodgers taxes. The process, which set out to form a regional coalition to market this area, is still evolving.

At this point, Ruidoso is still the only village or other taxing authority represented on its own regional board.

All five members of the LTC serve on the RAB, and the two groups meet one after the other, with the LTC routinely endorsing RAB action.

Also during Tuesday's back-to-back meetings of the LTC and the RAB, the RAB approved $700 to help refurbish the Village of Ruidoso exposition booth.

It also approved $8,775 in funds for advertisements in Texas Monthly and New Mexico Magazine, $2,000 for a cable TV test market in Dallas and $4,400 for newspaper and radio advertising in core Texas cities like Lubbock, Midland and Odessa.

The LTC committee approved the same expenditures in addition to authorizing a $9,000 bill presented by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce for Aspenfest expenses.

Doth attended the Dan Dipert Travel Show in Arlington, Texas, over the weekend, at his own expense, and staffed the Ruidoso Village booth. He said he passed out more than 800 village brochures.

Of the people who took the brochures, he said that 20 percent of them had been to this area and another 20 percent expressed a keen interest in the area and its recreational opportunities.

Lady Warriors need a hand in weekend games

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Ruidoso Lady Warriors basketball team will have its hands full this weekend as they charge into district competition against two teams ranked in the state.

On Friday at 5:15 p.m. all three squads of the team will square off against Socorro. The C-team will play in the White Mountain Gym, while the junior varsity will start things off in the high school gym.

Coach Jody Blanton said the Socorro team will be tough because they are ranked fifth in the state and are very quick.

The team will then travel to Las Cruces to tackle Oñate, the sixth place team in the state. Blanton said they will be hard to beat as well, especially playing in their gym.

The Warriors have a record of 1-1 in their district competition which came from back-to-back games on Friday and Saturday. Overall the team has a 5-9 record this season.

The Cobre Indians came to town on Friday, but the Lady Warriors were able to stop them cold. The girls had them down 14-0 in the first quarter, and then let up until the third. In the first and third quarters the girls outscored Cobre 26 to seven.

"We were ahead all the way and played real well the entire game," Blanton said.

Lalena Valliant was strong on both sides of the ball in this game. She scored 21 points and had eight rebounds to lead the Warriors. Mandy Parker also shot well and had 12 points. Kansas Miranda and Amy Wishard both had 11 points each.

Miranda and Parker pulled down six rebounds each. Parker was also aggressive in the take-away department with four steals.

The junior varsity team played a good game as well and came away with a 58-29 victory. Sarah Dix led the team by sinking 19 points. Brandy Pfeffer scored 12 against Cobre.

Kristie Ryan made 11 points, while Danielle Morris had an even 10.

The contest against Silver City was a low scoring one, but the Warriors weren't able to hit crucial shots late in the game to capture a victory. The final score was 37-47.

"We played decent, but we missed some shots we wouldn't usually miss," Blanton said.

With less than three minutes left, the girls were only down by five, but they missed important shots while Silver made crucial three point shots. The girls also made only five of 14 free throws, Blanton said.

Wishard led the team with 15 points. Miranda, Cicelee Makowski and Michelle Morris all chipped in six points each. Wishard also pulled in 11 rebounds in the game. Miranda and Parker each had five off the boards.

The junior varsity lost their game too, 29-45. Pfeffer scored 11 points, while Dix had 10 against Silver City.

The girls have only eight games left in the regular season, with 14 games down. Blanton said the team is about where it should be as it goes into district competition.

"I think we are progressing as we should be. No one likes a loss, but it makes us work harder on our shooting and defense. It's early in the district (competition) so I think we'll be all right down the line," Blanton said.

Amy Wishard keeps her eyes on the hoop and the rest of the Warriors will go into a battle at 5:15 p.m. on Friday at home recent home basketball game. Wishard against Socorro.

Kiki tackles local goals, not Olympics

Local boxing and kickboxing star Kiki Germany won't be able to attend the Olympic training camp in June because he competed professionally as a kickboxer.

Although this puts an end to a dream he had to compete in the Olympics, it may have opened the way to reach his goal of becoming a police officer.

Germany said he received a letter from the United States Amateur Boxing Federation on Monday stating that he was disqualified from competing in the training camp. They stated a professional kickboxer cannot compete at the state, national or Olympic level, he said.

Germany earned the title of European kickboxing champion in 1990. He has been boxing for 17 years and has a record of 206 wins and only six losses.

This fall Germany won a gold medal for a boxing match in Puerto Rico and a medal for a kickboxing match in Miami. After those matches he received his first letter from the USABF saying that they hoped to see him at the training camp.

The kickboxing match in Miami was a benefit for the homeless, but it was still considered a professional match, Germany said. "I want to thank everyone in Ruidoso for their support even though I had a split decision loss here (in August). I will still pursue kickboxing as an exhibition sport," Germany said.

Plans are already on for an exhibition World Professional Kickboxing Association match for Germany in late June or early July in either Miami or Fort Lauderdale. He said he has started training and will have more details about the match in March. He said it will be televised locally and possibly nationally as well.

Germany still has his sights set on entering law enforcement in Ruidoso and is pursuing that goal. He said later he would also like to train children and adults in kickboxing and martial arts.

Currently he is working at the Three Bees convenience store and welcomes people to come talk to him there.

Wrestlers host all-day tourney

The Warrior wrestling team is on a roll with plenty of home matches for fans to catch, starting with a junior varsity dual this afternoon.

The J.V. will host Deming at 4:30 p.m. today at the middle school gym. The varsity's invitational will kick off at 9 a.m. at the high school gym and will feature talent of six schools besides the Warrior team. Action is expected to continue through out the day until about 5 p.m.

On Tuesday the J.V. team travelled to Gadsden for a dual. Coach Kevin Clawson said seven wrestlers went so a lot of weight classes were forfeited. Of those Billy Austin and Sergio Guerrero won their matches.

He said three of his wrestlers stayed at home to participate in the varsity dual against the New Mexico Military Institute.

It was a tough night for the varsity Warriors when NMMI came to call on Tuesday. Coach Gerald Ames said the team wrestled well and a good home crowd was on hand for it. He said the team tried to take the victory in the middle weight classes, but it didn't last for the heavy weights.

Gunner Johnson got the team off to a good start at 103 pounds with a forfeit win. At 112 pounds Jose Pierto wrestled strong and was leading 4-2 when his opponent took him down and pinned him in the second period.

Jerry Romero wrestled well against one of the best wrestlers in the state at 119 pounds. Ames said Romero gave the wrestler a good fight, and never gave up, but was pinned. At 125 pounds a young wrestler, Dylan Carusona was pinned in the first period.

Sam Gumbert, 130 pounds, was leading his match nine to six, when his opponent got him on his back and pinned him. At 135 Scott Stricklin made a quick one of his match and pinned his many in a little over a minute.

Chris Carusona had a lead in his match too at 140 pounds, but he got the pin against Matt Patel of NMMI. At 145 pounds Joe Zinn was pinned, but Ames said his opponent was a good wrestler.

The surprise match of the night was at 152 pounds when Matt Bates, a young member of the team, pinned his man. Bates was in the lead in this match before the pin too. Poncho Portillo was also surprised by his opponent at 160 pounds and barely won the match 8-7. Ames said the Warriors were only down by three at this point with only three matches left.

Mario Sanchez made a small mistake that his opponent, John Romero, took advantage of to beat Sanchez. The Warriors had no one to wrestle at 189 pounds so they had to take a forfeit. At heavyweight Robert Murry, who is new on the varsity, did his best but was no match for Ron MacAully who pinned him.

Weekend Warriors hit the court

The boys basketball team hopes the magic that helped them win by one point against Carlsbad is back in the air on Friday and Saturday when the team plays two district opponents.

On Friday all three squads will compete at 5:15 p.m. in Socorro. Coach Norm Wright said Socorro is the defending champion of the district and has been to the state tournament four years in a row which makes them awfully tough.

Socorro is tremendously talented and has several great athletes that will be hard to stop. Wright said they have a guard, Lawrence Baca, who may be the best in the district.

BLM gets a head start on County Commission

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Although the Lincoln County Commission didn't know it, the state director of the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) last month recommended that the agency move ahead with the acquisition of 1,400 acres along the Rio Bonito.

The letter from State Director Larry Woodard was sent to Cy Jamison, director of the Washington D.C. office on December 12, according to a copy supplied by the agency to The Ruidoso News.

The commission was unaware that Woodard had forwarded a recommendation until last Tuesday when the issue came up during a discussion between Woodard and Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer.

"We have determined the proposed action is in the best public interest, and concur with the (Roswell) Area Manager's recommendation that we approve the amendment to the West Roswell (resource management plan) and proceed with the exchange," Woodard wrote.

The BLM proposes to swap 30,000 acres of federally-owned land for the Rio Bonito private property near the settlement of Lincoln.

The county commission and several key organizations oppose the plan. If land is to be exchanged, it should take place within the county to prevent the loss of any more private land from the tax base, they have said.

They also have questioned the BLM's ability to properly manage the land, the lack of a definitive plan for the property and the possible adverse effects on grazing rights, adjoining non-public lands and private water rights.

In his letter, Woodard wrote that "Management of the lands proposed (for) acquisition would emphasize conservation and protection of important riparian (stream-related), watershed, wildlife habitat, fisheries and cultural/historical resource values."

He told Jamison he would like to have response letters to protesters mailed by January 3.

"Although on December 3, the commissioners voted against the exchange by a 2-1 margin, it has been clear through our ongoing communications that the bureau's and the county's goals and objectives of management of the land along the Rio Bonito are not dissimilar," Woodard wrote.

"In addition, there is widespread support in the community of Lincoln for the exchange as displayed in a letter to the Secretary of the Interior from a resident of Lincoln."

Woodard also included a copy of a response scheduled to be sent to Spencer in response to his board's protest.

He noted that the Lincoln Valley Land Company, which acquires the Rio Bonito land through a bankruptcy action, first approached the BLM in May 1990. The land to be swapped consists of isolated and difficult to manage tracts in the areas of Farmington, Las Lunas, Las Cruces and Carlsbad.

The amendment to Roswell's existing resource management plan that would allow the exchange was approved May 31, but the agency still is responding to 13 protests submitted through July 8.

Woodard wrote that the original 1,400 acre proposal was enlarged to 5,000 acres "to allow BLM to act on other exchange proposals along the Rio Bonito that might be filed prior to the (new) Roswell Resource Management plan being completed in 1994."

Michelena heads Crimestoppers

Kathleen Michelena will lead Ruidoso/Lincoln County Crimestoppers through its next year.

Crimestoppers met Thursday at the Great Wall of China Restaurant and elected Michelena, chairperson; Jim Bassett, vice chairperson; Patsy Sanchez, recording secretary; Mildred Crocker, corresponding secretary; and Roy Seay, treasurer.

The organization adopted bylaws for the first time and heard a report from police coordinator Lanny Maddox of the Ruidoso Police Department.

Maddox said nine crimestopper calls had been logged since the last meeting.

One of those calls provided information on the fire at the elementary school on the Mesalero Apache Indian Reservation.

Another led to the arrest and extradition of Charlotte B. McDaniel, who was wanted on embezzlement charges.

During the month, Crimestoppers received a donation from the Altrusa Club to be used in the Ruidoso High School and Ruidoso Middle School programs.

Crimestoppers also received a donation from the Golden West Trading Company.

Maddox said that since October 17 anonymous telephone tips resulted in a number of arrests and recovery of $3,500 in stolen property.

The organizations intends to target the incident that occurred in Capitan last week when the community Christmas tree was cut down.

On The Birthday of Martin Luther King

This is being sent to you on January twenty, birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. It is a silver lining day here in mid-morning with the sky covered in with a light layer of clouds with the sun shining through in silvery half light, casting the snowy mountain fields in a glow of light purple, rose and rainbow colors touched with gold.

After a day of blue sky on the nineteenth, the night was warm for the middle of winter, just twenty-two. Today at ten-twenty the temperature has already gone up to forty-six, a spring-in-winter interlude here in the deep of winter.

The snow birds are singing their cheery little songs, and a few jays have flown in flashing their navy blue coats in the silvery half light of the silver lining sky.

On this day my thoughts are drifting back to the time in Denver, Colorado, when I was four years old. We had just arrived from Valdez, Alaska, and were staying with Grandma and Grandpa Kennedy.

Some little black boys came in from next door, very friendly, and I asked Grandpa why they were black. Grandpa said: "Danny those are little colored boys. You must always be kind to them."

Grandpa Kennedy, John Calvin Kennedy

was a captain in the thirteenth Illinois Cavalry in the Civil War. He inspired me to be kind to all races and creeds of people. And taught me a little prayer: "God bless me, keep me from evil, make me a good man."

Then together we would ask God to bless everyone in the family.

On this day let us send up a prayer of thanks to God for Martin Luther King Jr. and let us pray for peace on earth and the brotherhood of all men under the fatherhood of God.

Robert Burns' Birthday

Robert Burns, world beloved poet of Scotland, was born January twenty-five, 1759, near Alloway, Scotland. Known as the "singing plough boy" he lived a life of rustic turmoil and although having very little education, he inspired the world with his poems.

Every New Year's Eve we sing his verses: "Should Auld acquaintance be forgot And never brought to mind Should Auld acquaintance be forgot And days of Auld lang syne"

He was a man of great compassion with a reverence for all life. One of his most famous poems is "To A Field Mouse" in which he apologizes to a field mouse for turning him out of his home with his plough.

In his poem "For A' That" he speaks of the true worth of mankind being without regard to wealth or position, that we are all brothers under God.

A verse from this poem follows: "Then let us pray that come it may And come it will for a' that,

That man to man, the World o'er Shall brothers be, for a' that" Let us send up a prayer of thanks for Robert Burns.

The twenty fifth is also the birthday of Miss Tommie Sue Dunnahoo, of Roswell. She is a true birthday mate of the immortal Burns — a poet and singer. We wish Tommie many happy returns of the day and all God's blessings.

And let us be ever more grateful to God for our many, many blessings.

Capitan teachers learn to mediate

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The age-old approach to schoolyard problem solving, pushing and shoving, is about to be shelved with other antiquated behaviors at Capitan Elementary School.

The school staff just went through its first training session with representatives from the Center for Conflict Resolution.

"The goal of the training ultimately is to teach kids to solve problems in ways other than hitting, kicking and fighting," said school principal Jerry Newsom.

And those learned skills then can be carried forward over a lifetime, giving an alternate to violent behavior.

The teachers spent the afternoon Friday reviewing the program curriculum for the classroom. It involves mediation and active listening skills, Newsom said.

"But it's not a one time shot," he said. "The training extends over several weeks and then the teachers go back to the classroom and teach the techniques. It's not a quick fix," he said.

After teaching the curriculum in classes kindergarten through sixth, teachers in fifth and sixth grade then will select the most likely candidates to fulfill the roles of mediators.

But the students only will slip into their new roles after more training and after the entire school has gone through the initial exposure to understand the program.

"The children must have an understanding that these students can assist them with problems," Newsom said.

"We want to emphasize that this program in no way removes the adult responsibility for supervision.

This approach only will be used for minor incidents and it always will be optional. No student will have to go to a mediator student for help. They can always bypass the mediator for a teacher."

Newsom explained that a student mediator would not suggest a solution to a dispute. The mediator will encourage the participants to solve their own problems by first defining the problem and then helping them review possible solutions they suggest.

"This program has been going on for a few years and as many as fifty to sixty schools across the state use the approach," Newsom said.

"We probably will concentrate only on training this year and working in the classroom on skills. We won't get into the mediation stage until next year."

The school staff became interested in the mediator program after two teachers attended a workshop last summer, Newsom said.

The professional trainers from the center are paid through the state, he said. "Our cost is only $250. There will be follow up workshops for teachers and a representative will come back and oversee the mediation program in the classrooms."

The teachers who attended the summer session will act as supervisors for the program in two different divisions.

"The thing I want everybody to understand is that this program is not an abdication of the adult role," Newsom said. "No students are required to mediate and it will be closely monitored to ensure it does not get out of hand with a student who develops a big head."

The end result may be a new generation of students who really listen to one another and can problem solve in non-violent ways.

A pint-size hoop shooter with a deadly eye, Mariah Runnels won in the Elks National regional free throw competition and soon will be on her way to the state contest.

Runnels is still the hoop-shoot queen

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Mariah Runnels, a spunky ten-year-old from Capitan, will be on her way to the Elks National state hoop shoot competition in February.

For the third year, the fifth grader will compete with other top free throw shooters across the state. Last year, she went on to test her basketball, eye-hands coordination in Oklahoma in the regional semi-finals.

Mariah already trounced her competitors at Capitan and Ruidoso. Her next shot will be February 9 at Grants against shooters from all over the state.

The free throw program is sponsored by Elks National.

"She was the only one from Capitan to make it through the regional contest," said Capitan Elementary Principal Jerry Newsom, who coordinated the competition locally with Elks officials.

Andra Fish, a seventh grader, won first place in an initial contest with Ruidoso, but didn't make it past the regional competition, Newsom said.

Miss Runnels, who also won first against Ruidoso, sunk fourteen out of twenty-five shots in the regional shoot.

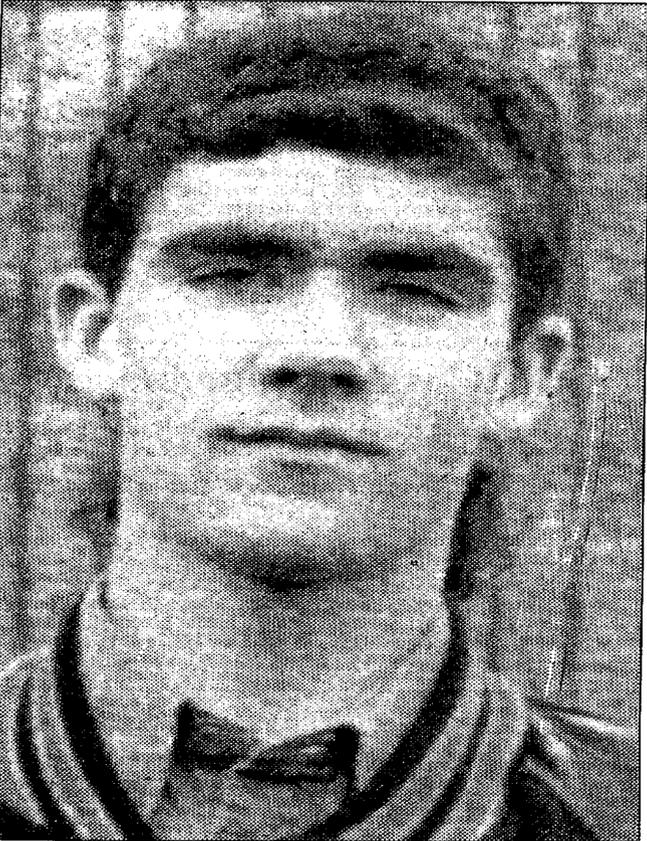

"That's was very good considering that she had only started practicing a few weeks earlier at that distance," Newsom said. "When she competed before, she was in the eight and nine-year-old category and they shoot from a closer mark. She had to move back four feet to the regular free throw line in this year's contest."

Miss Runnels started out only making six or seven out of twenty-five in her initial practices, he said.

"I suspect by the time she reaches Grant, she'll be hitting the mark eighteen out of twenty-five," he said.

Early practice sessions with her sister helped develop her skills, Miss Runnels said. When she was small, she shot a lot of balls with her sister, who was a member of the basketball team. Miss Runnels hopes to follow her sister's lead and join the team too.

Her parents Debbie and Benny Runnels of Bonito are behind her with encouragement all the way, she said.

Kyle Traylor was named all tournament player at the Reserve Tournament, helping his team to one win and solid performances in two other games.

Traylor named to all-tourney team

Kyle Traylor, a junior at Capitan High School, was named all tournament center at the Reserve Tournament last Thursday through Saturday.

The Capitan boy's basketball team got off to a solid start, but couldn't pull it off, losing 59-55 to Navajo Alamogordo, coach Pat Ventura said.

"We should have won," he said. "We came within four points. Everyone was playing pretty well, especially Traylor, Trevor Cox, Ernie Gallegos and Damian Roybal."

The Tigers then clawed their way to a win against Magdalena in the consolation bracket, but slumped back to the losing side of the scoreboard in a match with Silver City.

"We lost by about 18 points in that one, but the boys came back with a different attitude and practice has been going real well," Ventura said.

The Tigers' first district game was scheduled for Wednesday evening against Hondo at Capitan.

"I look for a win," Ventura said. "We're going to work on things that we haven't so far this year like the press. And we're going to get up and down the court faster. Experience will help."

Although the junior varsity boys didn't win at the Reserve tournament, "overall they did pretty good and they learned a lot," Ventura said. "It's good to play a faster paced team."

On the flip side of the competition, the girl Tigers won their first round against Colonial Juarez, but then lost to Reserve by about two points, Ventura said.

"It was a real good game despite the loss," he said. "Then the girls played for third place against Quemado and lost by about six points."

Named to the all tournament team were Tammy Payne and Jennifer Eldridge.

Ventura said the junior varsity girls played Colonial Juarez for the consolation trophy, but lost after making a good effort.

In junior high competition, the boys lost to Tularosa last week by two points and the girls won their match.

Against Cloudcroft Saturday, Ventura said each team played two games and Capitan won all four.

Chamber is looking for new members

Members of the Capitan Chamber of Commerce are looking for new names to add to the organization's roster.

A membership drive will begin in May aimed at getting all community businesses to join and support the chamber. Dues are $35 a year.

The decision to move ahead with the drive came during the group's first meeting of 1992 earlier this month.

Dorothy D. Smith, corresponding secretary for the chamber, said any business or private citizen with constructive criticism of the chamber are invited to join and add their input.

Members agreed to continue game nights each Thursday, to award scholarships, to put up Christmas lights and to sponsor an annual clean-up day, the fourth of July parade and a meet the candidates night.

In addition to the activities to be continued, accomplishments during the past year included bringing the circus to town, offering a 55-Alive Drive Course and organizing a letter-writing campaign to Gov. Bruce King urging that Fort Stanton Training Center and Hospital remain open.

In addition, the group gave $100 to the Lincoln County Fair Board for fair book covers, $100 to the county Ranch Rodeo Association, $500 to Friends of Smokey and $500 as annual dues to the Apache Trails Association.

Nearly 400 inquiries were answered by the chamber during the past year and hundreds of brochures were requested and distributed to other chambers in New Mexico and Texas, Smith said.

"All local businesses benefit from this publicity whether or not they are members," she said.

Crimestoppers offers $500 reward in Capitan case of the cutdown tree

The vandals who chopped down the Capitan village Christmas tree may have misjudged the reaction of the community to their nasty prank.

A $500 reward has been offered to bring the vandals to justice, said Capitan Mayor Frank Warth.

The 12-foot high live Blue spruce was decorated with ornaments creating by elementary students. It's lights were turned on in conjunction with the national living tree in Washington D.C.

Under the darkness of night two weeks ago, someone snuck up to village hall and hacked it down, leaving the dying tree lying on the lawn.

Ruidoso Police Detective Lanny Maddox said the Ruidoso/Lincoln County Crime Stoppers are offering a $500 cash reward "for information that leads to the arrest and magistrate court bind over or grand jury indictment of the person or persons who committed the crime.

"Any time a municipal official or sheriff calls me personally, we normally offer a reward," Maddox said.

"The fact that it was a living tree and a symbol is especially upsetting. There was absolutely no reason why someone would do that."

Mayor Alonso reports all is well with the Village

by BUDDY BAKER

Ruidoso News Staff Writer
Victor Alonso is approaching the end of his second year as the mayor of Ruidoso.

He is a man who is not without personal problems in that two years.

His restaurant, Don Victor's Mexican Food, burned to the ground in the spring and the past eight months have been spent purchasing and remodeling a new building at the end of Sudderth.

Mayor Alonso was able to open in his new location this fall in time to take part in the great ski season the village merchants are enjoying.

When asked if he likes his job as mayor, having now had the benefit of two years on the job, he doesn't hesitate to voice his opinion.

"I don't like my job. It is not rewarding and a constant battle; I don't intend to run again unless certain political events take place, that is if I see a reversion to the past (politics), I will run."

In spite of his expressed frustration with the job, Alonso does look with pride at the accomplishments of the council and village staff the past two years.

"I take comfort in the fact that the village is in sound fiscal shape. And that, according to the auditor, budgets are being met and a serious attempt to bring other costs under control. For this I credit the staff (village manager Ron Wicker, deputy village manager Gary Jackson and village attorney Dave Thomsen). They are career professionals."

"We've guided the civic events center through diverse opinions to create a workable asset, and this was done harmoniously."

"We've lowered the tax base two mills without lowering the level of service. However, we did have to raise the gross receipts tax a sixteenth of one percent to address environmental requirements."

The mayor is particularly pleased with the formation of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (LCSWA), of which he is the chairman. He said that two years ago solid waste was the number one issue and now LCSWA is being recognized statewide by proponents of regionalization.

In the coming year the mayor feels that the village has four legislative priorities that should be addressed by the New Mexico legislature, they are:

—repeal of the law that allowed the state to siphon off $250,000 from the village's gross receipt tax.

—passage of a bill that will allow the counties to increase their local gross receipts tax and dedicate those revenues to revenue bond issues.

—a bill allowing resort communities to impose a 1/2 percent sales tax (hospitality tax) that will target the tourist trade (restaurant, hotels, etc.).

—a bill that will allow local lodgers tax committees to combine to form regional advertising boards, a positive move toward regionalization.

—a constitutional amendment that will allow video gambling on a local option basis. Alonso is opposed to gaming facilities being limited to a select one or two people in the area. Any law should allow municipalities to participate, and any hotel that has 75 rooms or more.

MRS

The controversial Monitored Retrievable Storage System (MRS) is opposed by the mayor but with a clear-cut rational approach.

"As mayor, I do not want the facility within 50 miles of Ruidoso," he says. "Maybe New Mexico has some desolate lands that are suitable for the facility, but I know Ruidoso is not that area."

If it is 100 miles away then it is Roswell's problem or El Paso's problem, or Albuquerque's.

"I am not informed enough to know if it should be at Roswell or somewhere else."

"There also has been voiced a concern for the management ability of the Mescalero Tribe. I share a doubt in their ability to manage a technical facility like MRS."

He indicated that in viewing the problem from his vantage point, it would make sense to consolidate the spent fuel rods into one location to prevent terrorism, but it also makes sense to move them only once, to their final resting place.

He echoed the concerns of other people about the possibility of "repackaging" of the rods at any MRS.

Civic Events Complex

According to Alonso, the civic events center is on budget and scheduled for a late spring opening.

He has been assured by R.D. Hubbard that the Radisson Resort Hotel will be built.

"My belief is that if the gaming bill passes the hotel will certainly be built, but that was not a condition for granting him (Hubbard) that lease; that's something I am not real happy about, being held hostage to the gaming bill. I don't appreciate that at all."

The lodgers tax has been raised from three to four percent, and this additional revenue will provide operating and marketing capital for the civic events center.

Special Events Committee

According to the mayor, This committee was formed following the Golden Aspen Rally (motorcycle rally) last fall. The purpose of the committee is to come up with a uniform policy for all special events and to specifically prevent the problems that developed among rival motorcycle gangs at the Golden Aspen Rally.

"At the minimum I feel that we will not have outdoor drinking. I think that was the biggest problem."

He indicated that for a number of years this rally has been a benefit to the community and he doesn't see discontinuing it on the strength of what happened last year.

He suggests talking to other communities to explore ways to prevent problems occurring this year.

"Maybe this issue should be addressed in the upcoming elections," he says. "Let the people decide."

Police Merge

In November Ruidoso councilors met with Ruidoso Downs trustees to explore the possibility of merging the two police forces. Mayor Alonso feels that the talks should continue.

"I think that there are potential savings in the plan," he said. "Economics dictates that we do what we can do to save money. It doesn't make sense to me to have Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs police departments working side by side. Here we have an opportunity to do a better job at less money and I think we ought to follow it. I know that some people have some very strong feelings about it, but the only smart thing is to save money."

Perspective on Council

Alonso was introspective when asked to view the council and the job its members are doing.

"This is a serious job and I think the councilors take it seriously. They are responsible people doing a good job."

"I take the lack of candidates for the council as an indication of satisfaction with the council." (In addition to the incumbents seeking their seats, there are two other candidates.)

About the agenda of individual candidates, the mayor had this to say:

"Councilor Jess Stinson has an interest in keeping some sanity in regulating liquor license establishments."

"Councilor J.D. James is interested in the Civic Events Center and the spending of lodgers tax dollars."

"Councilor Bill Karn is taking the lead in opposition to the MRS facility and interfacing with state and federal agencies. He also takes a strong interest in the proposed river walk."

"Councilor Barbara Duff is interested in local service groups. She is probably the most positive person on the council. She is working with the transportation committee also."

"Councilor Ron Andrews has made invaluable contributions to the village in the area of fiscal responsibility with his grasp and understanding of economics. He is the most controversial of the councilors, given his activity with the motorcycle rally. But I want to say that this council would not be near as effective without the contribution of Ron Andrews."

"Councilor Patricia Espinosa has come on board (She was appointed in the summer to fill the seat of Al Jungue who resigned) and she has expended a lot of energy and has shown a lot of interest. She asks a lot of astute questions."

"I am highly pleased with having two women on the council."

Mayor Victor Alonso is pictured speaking in 1990 at the Community Update luncheon sponsored by The Ruidoso News and MainStreet Ruidoso. Alonso was among a dozen leaders who spoke on issues affecting the Village of Ruidoso.

Council Pay Raise

"In two words, I favor." In order to keep this from being an elitist group we need this. $250 per month is not adequate to take a person from their business. It cost me money to pay people to replace me when I am away from my business. Most other councilors are in the same predicament."

Other Projects and Issues

In reference to the workshop, the mayor still feels that he personally doesn't like them but that he is happy with the way the council has conducted its business.

He believes that if the workshop has contributed to that, then maybe they should stay.

Refinancing the village debt has come up at council meetings in the past. With the lower interest rates it may be possible to secure the capital necessary to make necessary repairs on the wastewater plant and reduce the taxes for homeowners.

The village has hired a financial consultant to pursue this.

According to Alonso, there is no orderly fashion in paving new streets or extending the sewer system. In fact the village may be falling behind in repairs.

In the annual auditor's report CPA Ronnie Hemphill expressed a certain discontent with the appearance of his compiling financial information for the village's financial statement and then auditing that financial statement.

Alonso believes the only other option to this is hiring a full-time village accountant at a $30,000 to $40,000 figure. That is not feasible, according to the mayor and would be a needless drain on the budget.

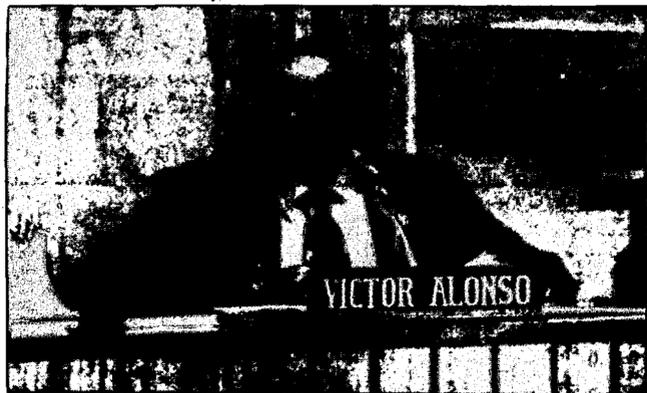

He thinks that the community should back the transportation committee's and Dick Weber's efforts in establishing Resort Air.

"We need air transportation and Resort Air is the only game in town," he said. "But it will not be subsidized as was Mesa Airline in the past."

In regard to the riverwalk, the village is still working on securing right of way along the river. When the state resurfaces Sudderth in the summer they have offered to give the village enough pavement to surface the trail.

Eventually the Mayor sees business on the north side of Sudderth having entrances on the street and the river, much like the San Antonio riverwalk.

Such is the state of Ruidoso village, midway through Alonso's four-year term.

ALONSO PRESIDES AT COUNCIL MEETING

Parents gather at Ruidoso Middle School for ABC session

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Parents at Ruidoso Middle School need to know about their ABCs too. The Academic Booster Club, that is.

The club met Tuesday night to discuss its plans to honor academic and merit achievements students at the middle school have made over the last nine weeks of school. Students who had earned three or more merits from their teachers were treated to a party earlier this week, while more parties are scheduled later this week for the signature club, the honor roll list and the principals list.

To earn a position on the merit list students must be awarded merits from their teachers for being cooperative, courteous, helpful or having a positive attitude. For the signature list a student must receive three votes from teachers on the basis of a tremendous improvement or all-around good characteristics.

To be on the honor roll students must have 3.2 grade-point average. Students with a 3.7 grade-point average or higher will earn a spot on the principal's list.

Principal Paula Papponi said she is seeing a lot of new faces on these lists, and it seems to encourage the students to try harder.

"We need to give them the recognition they deserve. I've seen a lot of good changes in some of the students. They love getting the merits," said Papponi.

Jim Stover said the club needs to establish a consistent plan to award the students because in the past the number of merits needed for the list has not been communicated to the students. The group decided to keep that number at three and to make an announcement of it to the students.

The group also decided to let the students only go to one of the parties if they should happen to get on more than one list to help cut down on the cost of the parties. Although it does not happen often students may be on the merit list, and one of the grade point lists. Students on the merit list may also be awarded bumper stickers and pins.

Stover said all of the parties together involve about 250 students, which is half the student population at the middle school. The group will wait until the second week after report cards are given before having the party so they have a firm list for the honor roll students.

ABC has done fund raisers and will continue to do them to get the money needed to provide the parties, but the group may be able to get some assistance from area banks. Stover said he had gotten an application to apply for funds that are collected through the banks for charities and other groups with special projects.

He said most of the requests they get from the schools are for the sports programs so it would be likely they could get the money. They would have to apply for it each year, but it could be a good source of income. The Rotary also donates money to ABC.

The club is planning a dance on March 13 for Saint Patrick's Day for a fund raiser. This will help pay for end of the year rewards, such as T-shirt and sweatshirts.

In other business, Kathy Echols, drug-free coordinator with Regional Cooperative Center Nine, told the group about a special speaker coming to Ruidoso on February 26 from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. for an inservice for area teachers and residents.

The speaker, H. Stephen Glenn, is a family psychologist who has written many papers, articles and books about the family.

Echols said he teaches skills for parents in an interesting way. She said she hopes to reach parents they have never reached before with this speaker.

The group discussed ways to get the word out to all parents in the area. Echols said the best way to promote it is one-on-one, telling people in person about it. He is too important of a speaker to have a small turnout, she said.

She is getting posters made and members in ABC will get it into any bulletin they know of. Echols said she is encouraging business owners to let their employees off of work to listen to Glenn speak. Several businesses have already agreed to do it, she said.

ABC meets every third Tuesday of the month and all parents are invited to get involved in the group. Stover said the meetings start at 7 p.m. and only take one hour or less.

Adults volunteer in the schools

A concerned group of adults, some of them parents and some community volunteers, have organized to offer their assistance to the professional staff in Ruidoso High School.

It was decided to name the new organization Student Service Council.

Elected as co-chairpersons were Steve Hightower and Libby Richardson. Carolyn Henson was elected secretary.

According to principal Mike Kakuska, the volunteers have already established themselves in the school and have been provided an office with a telephone.

The group is interested in recruiting other volunteers that have an interest in students and the school. Persons that have such an interest are urged to contact Steve or Ellen Hightower at 396-4044, Libby Richardson at 257-3133 or Carolyn Henson at 257-5111.

Some projects that the group is presently undertaking and some that are anticipated are:

—Generally getting to know students and the school.

—Handling the detention classes; some of this entails supervising and assisting work projects.

—Acting as role models with the students.

—Making telephone calls to parents about problems that arise with the students. For instance poorer than normal grades or absenteeism.

Principal Kakuska says there is little danger of having too many volunteers.

Hightower pointed out that it does take a commitment, not necessarily to the program, but to the individual students. The students will depend on many of the volunteers to be there when they need help or want to talk.

Another way to get involved with the program is to substitute teach or to simply be a classroom observer.

"If you observe a class you cannot help but be interactive in that class and with the students," says Kakuska.

Assistant principal Danny Flores says "lunchtime is a perfect opportunity to visit the school as a volunteer. It is a comfortable and natural time to establish a casual relationship with the students."

Travel writers schedule a media tour in Ruidoso and at Ski Apache

Members of the media will visit Ruidoso and Ski Apache on Friday and Saturday as a part of a Ski New Mexico tour of resorts.

The eight-day tour which began on Saturday, January 19, included stops at Red River, Taos Ski Valley, Taos and Taos Pueblo, Angel Fire, Santa Fe and a last stop at Ruidoso. The tour is also sponsored by the New Mexico Department of Tourism.

Staff writers, columnists and freelance writers from California, Texas, New York, Pennsylvania and Washington D.C. are gathering information for stories, as well as enjoying the beautiful New Mexico scenery on the tour. While they are here the group will stay at the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

They will have a great opportunity to experience the slopes of Ski Apache for themselves as they are scheduled to ski most of the day Saturday.

The writers will be hosted by Pat Morrison, marketing director of Ski Apache. Later in the afternoon they will also tour the Inn of the Mountain Gods.

Saturday night the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce will host a final dinner for the group which will depart for Albuquerque Sunday morning.

Chamber of Commerce director Jerry Watts said it is good to have Ruidoso and the area on the tour "circuits," which helps get information out to areas where Ruidoso is not advertised.

He said that on a tour last year two guests skied in the morning and then golfed in the afternoon. When the area has a situation like this it is good to take advantage of it by getting it out in the media, he said.

"This is something we couldn't afford to do on our own, but with the state's assistance it opens some doors for us," Watts said.

Alcohol identified as major drug problem here

Alcohol and violence are long-time partners.

Eliminating illegal drugs from Lincoln County schools was the topic for a gathering of the Drug Free Schools and Communities Advisory Board Monday.

Alcohol was singled out as the main villain.

"Alcohol still is our biggest problem," said Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor. "And it's a problem with more adults than kids."

"Over the past year, we have seen a 66 percent increase in domestic violence in our area."

His department spends an enormous amount of its time on violent domestic disputes, he said.

"Alcohol fuels it, whether the economy or other factors aggravate it," Swenor said. "This is one of the most violent years of my 13 here, not just family violence, but stranger violence too. And it's not just here."

Reaching out to children and involving them in drug free programs has helped, he said.

"It's the older group we're having trouble with," he said.

"And they are the role models," said advisory board officer Kathy

"Alcohol still is our biggest problem. And it's a problem with more adults than kids." Police Chief Richard Swenor Echols, who also lectures on fetal alcohol syndrome.

Swenor said a raid last Friday that resulted in 50 felony drug charges against 19 persons culminated a six to seven months investigation.

Two persons were picked up 10 days earlier in a related situation, Swenor said. "They were selling acid at the high school," he said. "I'll be talking to several other kids who were caught on videotape buying."

On a lighter note, Billy Rogge, president of Ruidoso Middle School Future Farmers of America (FFA), said the school was one of the first middle schools to be enrolled in the state.

"When I heard we were going to have FFA and agricultural education, I thought everybody was just going to raise a cow," said Sandy Gladden, director of Region IX and chair for the evening meeting. "You've broadened my knowledge. There's speech, mechanics and horticulture, and so much more."

The board complimented teachers Mike Gaines and Shawn Dennis for their work with the students.

Bob Biggers, drug free community coordinator from the governor's office, explained how he realized that one week of passing out red ribbons was not going to solve the problem. The red ribbon campaign now is an on-going program.

"One hundred and twenty-three communities statewide are involved in the red ribbon program," he said.

"Someone said that in every New Mexico community you can find a church and someone to sell you drugs. Now, there's someone to give you a red ribbon."

From the University of Michigan comes the good news that the age group of nine to 13 is the most cohesive against drugs, he said. The bad news is that the 35 and older group is using more drugs.

"So we're sending the kids home to the problem," Biggers said.

Experts are predicting by the year 2000, inhalants will be the number one problem, he said. "They're cheap, accessible and legal."

The next meeting of the advisory board will be March 16 at the Carrizozo school.

Speaker will bring a drug free message

H. Stephen Glenn, an internationally acclaimed family psychologist, will speak in Ruidoso at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, February 26, in the First Christian Church on Hull Road.

"The time of the day Glenn is coming is tough, but his message is family oriented and parents need to get out of the house and hear this with their kids at the same time," Gladden said.

"I realize we're asking a lot for employers to let their employees off to hear Glenn, but I think he's worth it," said Kathy Echols, who is an officer of the Drug Free Schools and Communities Advisory Board. "We're trying to get the information out early so that employers and people can make plans."

GOD GIVES US THE STRENGTH TO DO HIS BIDDING

There was many a thing you attempted to do,
Then discovered it couldn't be done;
Like a worthless vocation you tried to pursue,
Or some foolish adventure for fun.
With your mission abandoned, in only one way could you learn it was not in accord
With your temple of worship, where lessons convey
That your life's in the hands of the Lord.
Let's obey His commands and remember at length
It will help us in getting along.
If we heed His advice He will give us the strength
That we need, and we'll never go wrong.

Give a child a home...

A safe home is a luxury not to be taken lightly and not to be taken for granted. Sometimes that haven — where you go to unwind and regroup before facing the cold (and sometimes cruel) world again — is not safe at all.

When children are battered, beaten, humiliated and generally abused, it usually happens in their own homes. Those physical and emotional atrocities most often are delivered by parents and family members — the very people youngsters depend on for love, care, comfort and support.

Sometimes the abuse is in the form of neglect. That includes denying a child all kinds of physical and emotional necessities from food, medicine and the proper clothing, to the basic need for love and acceptance in the form of a hug and a kind word. The bruises may not be visible, but they are there.

The tragic circle of child abuse and domestic violence only can be broken by education and intervention. The problem is too big for most families, and that's when society is called on to intervene. That outside help comes in the form of other family members, friends, church members, fellow workers and finally, the state through the Social Services Department.

Education is the long-term answer, but intervention provides immediate protection for endangered and at risk children. Sometimes that includes reporting the suspected abuse to law enforcement and removing children from the unsafe environment until changes can be made.

In Lincoln County, Social Services investigates an average of three child abuse/neglect complaints each week. It's the philosophy and goal of the Social Services Department to work with the family and return children to the natural family as quickly as possible. Meanwhile, the children are caught up in a system that can go from bad to worse if suitable foster homes are not available. Temporary and long-term foster homes, particularly for teenagers, are needed in every village in this county, and a special need has been identified for Hispanic and Native American homes.

During the Christmas holidays, three teenagers were placed in detention and/or group homes outside the county because there was no place in Lincoln County to place them. It's tough enough to be caught in the vicious circle of an abusive family, but it only gets worse if a youngster also is separated from his school, friends and community.

Cliff Johnson, the Social Service placement officer, is on the lookout for people who can provide a safety net for abused and neglected children and teenagers. To learn more, call Johnson at 257-9217. He invites anyone with a little love to spare to "give a child a home — YOURS."

Reporter's Round

Maybe they did bust the big guys

Sitting hunched over my laptop computer at a desk in the police station typing the police activity reports, I was hardly aware of the two guys talking until one of them said "You think we should tell the press?"

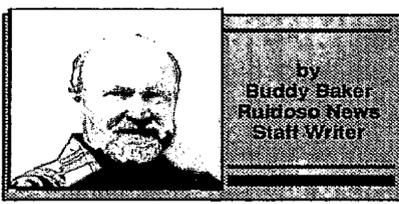

"Naw, 'specially not this guy," another voice replied. Not knowing whether I was being hurried or whether they were serious, I looked up inquisitively to see two guys grinning at me. One was about my age, a young fella, but better looking, and the other one much younger than either of us, and big, a veritable man-mountain. Both were wearing Levis, flannel shirts and baseball caps, pretty un-cop looking.

A week later I saw the big guy at the station. He looked at me, grinned, and said, "If I was you I'd be here Friday morning at 5 a.m."

"What's going on?"

"Secret, if I tell you I have to kill you."

"Forget I asked."

Those 19 individuals, as well as eight of their vehicles, were the center of attention this cold January morning.

Teamwork

Teams had been organized and now those names were called out along with the name of the team leader and the suspect they were assigned to locate and arrest.

After a hurried conference with Chief Swenor and Deputy District Attorney Scot Key, I got permission to accompany one of the teams.

The teams retired to a corner of a spare office and reviewed their subject, pooled their knowledge about the subject's neighborhood and then fanned out over Ruidoso in an eclectic mixture of police vehicles and some private cars.

The team I was with was headed by a Ruidoso Police sergeant. The suspect lived on the hill behind the graveyard. I stayed in the background while the team secured all entrances and the sergeant knocked on the door.

The arrest was made and I entered the house after the suspect was in handcuffs and was being read his rights.

Not your everyday wakeup call

It was a neat, comfortable middle class home, full of tasteful furnishings and with friendly family pictures on the wall. A toy here and there and little coats draped over a chair spoke of the two children, asleep in the bedroom. It was a home anyone would be glad to be a part of, except today.

A fresh pot of coffee was in the coffeemaker, and a thermos being warmed with hot water was in the sink. The suspect had been getting ready to head to his construction job.

He wouldn't make it today. He was charged with distribution of marijuana and trafficking of cocaine by distribution.

A tearful wife, in a terry cloth bathrobe, controlled her sobs and cooperated with the arresting officers.

In a short time the paper work was done, the house searched, and the suspect and a confiscated vehicle were on the way to the police station.

In the Magistrate courtroom, command post for the operation, the rest of the morning was spent keeping score.

How many teams had gotten their suspect? How many of the cars had been found? When the final tally was made, the raid had netted 13 of the 19 suspects and taken seven of the eight vehicles. A successful morning's work.

One ranking officer said that raids like this often come under criticism for not having caught the big guys.

Every little bit helps

In a sense that was true. The raid had taken no stacks of baggies containing pure cocaine, or no bricks of marijuana wrapped in Saran, or bundles of hundred dollar bills in trash bags — just a dozen or so suspected street sellers.

But, before the raid, the task force in charge of the operation had arrested Kelly O'Brien, an 18-year-old high school student. He was charged with selling LSD at the school. Also charged with selling LSD was Rees Garner, 21, he also is suspected of selling to high school students.

If your young son or daughter is a student at Ruidoso High School, or the middle school, then you'll know that they were targeting the "big guys." The suspects they reeled in could be the very ones selling to high school and middle school students.

Whether these suspects, who haven't made their way through the court system yet, are found guilty or not guilty, they're suspected of small deals — the kind of deals that target kids.

Maybe some of them may turn out to be the "big guys" — the ones who were exposing your children to drugs.

H. STEPHEN GLENN

Drug-free sponsors speaker

Set aside an hour and a half February 26 to listen to H. Stephen Glenn, an internationally acclaimed family psychologist.

Glenn is being brought to Ruidoso as part of an in-service program involving school staff from throughout Region IX of the state's education system. More than 750 people are expected. But Glenn's portion of the day full of speakers will be open to the public.

"He's an author and publisher with the emphasis on self-esteem," said Sandy Gladden, Region IX director. "We want to get community leaders and parents in to hear his presentation."

The money to pay Glenn's fee was secured through a grant from the Department of Public Safety, Echols said.

The location has not yet been determined, although the in-service being conducted at Ruidoso High School.

Glenn has been a consultant to the Congressional Subcommittee on Children, Youth and Families and the Senate Select Subcommittee on Narcotics.

He served on the faculty of the Medical School of the University of Miami, where he also directed the U.S. Office of Education Southwest Regional Training Center.

He has served as director of the National Drug Abuse Center for Training and Resource Development in Washington D.C. He has written more than 100 papers, articles, books and courses and has produced several television and film programs, including an award-winning educational television series on the family called, "Involved."

Co-author of "Raising Self-Reliant Children in a Self-Indulgent World," he also was the author of several training series.

The Plant Corner

Recycle old panty hose, says Sally

Just when I get to thinking I know everything, along comes Bonnie Coe to tell me one more very good reason to save those old panty hose.

We were talking about growing Boston ferns. Bonnie recalled my column telling how to make an organic fertilizer.

Boston ferns hate any fertilizer containing salt, which means most all commercial fertilizers. The very best fertilizer to use on ferns of all types is what we used to call Manure Tea. I have to tell you, I had given up on making this fertilizer until Bonnie Coe came along with her panty hose idea.

If you can find a good manure fertilizer to buy, great, if not make your own. Visit some of your rancher friends, take along some sacks or five-gallon cans; most ranchers will allow you to gather your very own cow manure to make your own Manure Tea.

The old way was to take a five-gallon can, fitted with a wire-screen lid. Fill the container half with cow manure, filling to the top with water, cover with tight fitting wire-screen lid and let stand about a week or more. Using a hoe or long stick, stir well before using each time.

To use, stir well, then add one cup of the mixture to one gallon of rain water, stirring well again.

by Sally Black
Ruidoso News
Plant Specialist

All foliage plants will love this fertilizer. Just be sure not to fertilize any newly purchased ferns for the first three to six months after bringing home.

Bonnie's way to make her Manure Tea for ferns is to use the same five-gallon plastic can only, fill over half with water, next fill an old pair of panty hose with cow manure. Tie-off the top leaving the foot part up to the knee to hang over the can.

Use the tight fitting wire lid, and when stir time comes, remove the lid, take the foot of the panty hose and dunk vigorously a few times, your fertilizer is ready to use, no mess no fuss. Doesn't this method sound great? We thank you Bonnie Coe for your idea.

I have a truly magnificent Boston fern. All who come to my home comment on its beauty and ask how I care for the fern.

I suggest repotting the Boston fern, as well as other types, to a clean, large, more permanent type container as soon as you bring it home. Ferns demand fast drainage. Use a very porous soil mixture, after filling the new pot about three to five inches with plastic chunks and dribble sharp river sand over these plastic chunks to fill all the space between the chunks but allow fast drainage and air to get to the roots.

The soil must be kept moist at all times, never dry or soggy. Either will cause leaves to turn brown and drop. Ideally, water daily, according to size of pot and temperature. You can use the manure tea each time you water all spring and summer. Just never allow plant to stand in drip tray water, not for a minute.

Miracid is a good commercial fertilizer, cut to half manufacturers recommended use.

Ideal temperature year-round is 50 to 80 degrees. Try to emulate the forest floor for light, little to none direct sun. At least 150 candle foot power is needed for artificial light. Good, cool, bright light required.

Humidity is essential for ferns. Plastic pots are better than clay, they do best in bathrooms, setting on tray of damp pebbles helps and also to be near other plants.

Hondo Fiesta dancers take a "busman's" holiday

By special invitation, more than 70 Hondo students, in grades six to 12 attended the spectacular Ballet Folklorico performance in Las Cruces.

Not only was this an unusual dance company, but it included a welcome by the closest living relative of Christopher Columbus. Duke Cristobol Colon de Carvajal read passages from his ancestor's journals and answered questions from a large audience of professors, students and the general public.

According to a news release provided by the school, the field trip was organized by Fiesta dance instructor Cecelia Gomez Sanchez and Fiesta dance coordinator Profiria Montoya Zinn.

"We want our students to be exposed to a variety of Hispanic and Indian styles," noted both instructors.

And, exposure they got. The ballet company, recent winners of international dance competition in Scotland, began with a dramatic and lively series of dances from throughout Mexico. Their colorful costumes were very authentic and they were accompanied by a lively group of talented musicians from Chihuahua.

Perhaps the most dramatic was the originally directed and choreographed "Danza de Paquime." This was dedicated to the highly advanced culture found centuries ago at Casas Grandes.

Musical instruments, carefully researched, and in some instances made especially for the performance, included Conch shells, rattles, drums, bone and shell flutes and others.

Costumes were designed based on archaeological evidence from murals and other artifacts excavated at the site. Exquisite head-dresses, feathered and exotic cotton costumes all contributed to an incredible performance that touched everyone.

"Usually when one mentions a 'Ballet' few takers are involved, but we took over 70 individuals," said co-sponsor of the trip Lynda Sanchez.

"However, our young people have always understood dance and have a special place in their hearts for such activity. It is not 'sissyfied' to them."
