House debates MRS

by FRANKIE JARRELL

Ruidoso News Editor
State Representative H. John Underwood spent some time last week lobbying his colleagues to come out strongly against dumping high level nuclear waste in New Mexico.

Underwood introduced House Memorial 66 Wednesday, requesting the members of the house to send a message by way of resolution telling the federal government, all state and local governments and all Indian tribes located within the state of New Mexico that New Mexico leaders are opposed to an above-ground high level nuclear waste storage in New Mexico.

That above-ground storage is currently referred to as monitored retrievable storage (MRS).

Underwood's memorial asks that the message be sent to President George Bush, reminding him that New Mexico has done its fair share for the citizens of this nation regarding nuclear research, development, testing and waste storage.

"Enough is enough," said Underwood, who stressed that this memorial is limited to high level waste, and doesn't have any effect on plans for WIPP in Carlsbad.

The memorial also acknowledges the Mescaleros right of sovereignty and their right to study.

"We don't deny that right," said Underwood.

Meanwhile, Indian leaders were in Santa Fe this week calling for greater respect for Indian sovereignty, religion and cultural differences, more pay for rural teachers, a bigger share of state tax revenues for tribes and a monument to Navajo and Mescalero Apaches imprisoned at Bosque Redondo.

Mescalero Apache Tribe President Wendell Chino took the podium to berate the "hysteria and emotionalism" he says greeted his tribe's decision to apply for a Department of Energy grant that could lead to storing nuclear waste somewhere in New Mexico.

Chino also lambasted the Albuquerque Journal for an editorial cartoon published Sunday showing a road sign pointing to the Inn of the Mountain Gods and another pointing to "Dump of the Mountain Gods."

Chino said mountain gods are holy beings, and compared using them in a cartoon to using the Star of David or Virgin Mary.

Senate votes today on lottery

by FRANKIE JARRELL

Ruidoso News Editor

A state lottery and widespread video gambling could be in place in New Mexico by next year.

Voters may have a chance in November to vote on a constitutional amendment establishing the state lottery and opening the door for video gaming at all state racetracks and three or four municipalities.

State Representative H. John Underwood, a Democrat representing Lincoln County, is supporting Senate Joint Resolution 12, which will go to the floor of the Senate today for a vote.

"Basically, it's the same bill that died on the floor of the house last session," said Underwood, recalling the Republican filibuster that preceded the measure's death.

But the climate is different this session, and the resolution has a good chance of being placed on the ballots for the November general election.

If the voters enact the amendment, the state lottery and racetrack video gambling can begin.

If passed, video games in Ruidoso, Angel Fire, Sunland Park, and perhaps Ruidoso Downs, will be available by local option vote.

The provision that would include the Village of Ruidoso Downs is a new twist.

"I asked Senator Aragon to include it in his bill, and he didn't have any problem with it," said Underwood. "But the Senate may have to back off on that, based on the fact that if you add one, you may have to add others."

Underwood also was honored to be appointed to the subcommittee investigating allegations against State Rep. Ronald Olguin.

He's among five representatives meeting in closed session this week to rule on whether Olguin should be punished for allegedly offering his legislative influence and advice to a company from which he was seeking a $15,000 contract.

Underwood has been a leader in pushing for strong ethical reforms in state government. He helped write the ethics rules adopted last year.

Super readers!

Cookie Monster and kindergartners from Nob Hill have got the muscle it takes to be super readers. These very important readers (V.I.R.) and many others from the community will be at a V.I.R. party at 10 a.m. until noon Saturday at the Sierra Mall. The Cookie Monster will also hand out cookies. The event is sponsored by Lincoln County International Reading Association.

Chamber exec resigns his post

Chamber executive director, Jerry Watts, has submitted his letter of resignation to chamber president Paul Crown.

Watts, who has been director at the chamber for two years and two months, said he resigned because he wanted to pursue other opportunities. He said the thought of resigning had entered his mind from time to time over the past few months. In his letter he said it was also time for him to reevaluate his personal goals.

He said there are several things that he and any chamber member would be proud of that has been accomplished in his time here. Watts said when he first came here the chamber had a debt but that has since been paid off.

"I am also very proud of the formation of the Apache Trails organization and the acceptance of the advertising model we are structuring our advertising around because of its long range benefits," Watts said.

"Jerry IS Apache Trails," said Crown, who said he values Watts as a friend, and has valued his leadership and work at the chamber.

Crown said he's asked Watts to oversee a smooth transition, but especially to watch over passing on leadership for Apache Trails.

Watts said there are a lot of smaller things that were accomplished during his time at the chamber, but these things topped the list.

Watts will remain director until April 30. He said he wants to assist in any way needed before a new director is in place. He also will aid the Apache Trails group during this period.

"I wouldn't feel right about leaving anything hanging," he said.

Crown said he hates to see him leave the chamber.

"Adventures in Learning" offers 34 fun courses

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

It's been a year for firsts at Eastern New Mexico University's instructional center in Ruidoso.

Director Jim Miller barely puts one new effort successfully behind him before he has embarked on another.

Community education classes are the latest project. Registration is under way at the center's main office at 1400 Sudderth Drive.

"I hope most people have seen the newspaper insert on classes, but if they need to look at the schedule, just come into our office," Miller said.

Several of the classes will begin Monday. Others will just meet once or will start later. Most will run through April.

"Generally, the classes will meet at Ruidoso High School, but some are at other locations," he said.

"We're offering 34 different courses that range from being free to requiring a substantial fee," Miller said. "All of them are not for credit. They're more for personal interest and growth."

For example, ballroom and country western dancing will be offered, as well as a course in self defense and another in Southwest cooking.

"Senior citizens may be particularly interested in the estate planning course and then there's a beginning bridge class at the Ruidoso Senior Citizens Center," Miller said.

People interested in combining travel with some history might try one of the three-day, overnight tours.

In early March, a tour will take participants to the Pecos Valley, Carlsbad and the Living Desert.

Later that month, the center has scheduled "In Fountain's Footsteps," a journey to Mesilla Valley.

Miller said he's teaching two courses that may be timely in view of the shaky national economy. They focus on how to get a job and how to write a personal resume. Both are free. They will be offered at three different times.

"These are all non-credit courses," Miller said. "They are not subsidized by the State Legislature or local tax money. It's all pay as you go and have been offered based on expressed interest to teach a course or to take a course."

Miller said he expects to offer more community education courses again during the summer.

Students may register by mail, telephone or FAX, or they can stop at the main office in person.

County considers forming trash district

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The Lincoln County Commission should consider forming a solid waste collection district to cover unincorporated areas of the county, County attorney J. Robert Beauvais has advised.

A district would give the County Solid Waste Authority a solid basis for collecting garbage fees from county residents when it takes over the service in April, he told commissioners Tuesday.

"It would give us more leverage if the county had an ordinance," he said.

The authority will be handling the garbage collection service countywide. For residents outside of municipalities, it will be the first time they have been charged for the service. The proposed charge is $5.25 a month.

In a related matter, Beauvais also advised the commission that as a partner in the solid waste coalition, it was not necessary to advertise and approve an ordinance before transferring assets to the authority.

"The Department of Finance and Administration says all that is required is a vote of the commission, not the longer route of ordinance and possible referendum (chosen by the Ruidoso Village Council on advice from its counsel),"

Beauvais said. "The problem is that the city attorney opted to require an ordinance to be done. The practical effect is to impose a 70-day delay while they give opponents the opportunity to petition for a negative referendum."

"It's my opinion since Lincoln County only is transferring personal property, an ordinance is not necessary and would only impose additional delay and administrative work."

The state will have the final say on whether the transfer is approved anyway, he said.

Barring a move for a referendum in Ruidoso, the transfer date tentatively is set for the week of April 7.

In other business, the commission: —Learned that the position of home economist will be cut from the county extension service of the New Mexico State University due to shrinking state and federal dollars, while a 4-H assistant will be added next year.

—Turned down a request by the planning and zoning board for a stop sign to be placed at the intersection of High Mesa Road and Old Fort Stanton Road. A yield sign already is posted and commissioners said compliance probably will be no better with a stop sign.

—Agreed with a request from the zoning board that vehicles illegally parked on Old Fort Stanton Road during snowstorms be cited with a warning and towed if they are not moved.

People park on the side of the road because they are worried about getting in and out of their driveways, but it creates a dangerous situation for other drivers, said zoning board member Patsy Sanchez.

—Saw a presentation on construction of wooden bridges, as a possible approach to replacing a bridge at White Oaks. They told Howard Shanks to continue to look for less expensive options.

—Decided to stay with Nationwide Insurance for group coverage to require that enrollment be reopened to allow people who were not covered before the opportunity now that the county is paying 80 percent of the premium.

Road Manager Bill Cupit said he was turned down by the company until he loses weight and maintains the loss. Without reopening enrollment, employees with pre-existing conditions may be excluded from coverage.

—Postponed appointments to the county fair board to allow Commissioner Bill Elliott a chance to find a willing nominee from Ruidoso. Commissioners also postponed appointments to two positions on the Lincoln Historic Preservation Board.

Lincoln County Commission classifies road boss Cupit

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

As a show of support for the good job he's been doing, Lincoln County Commissioners Tuesday changed road manager Bill Cupit's employment status.

"He's now a classified employee," said Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer. "Basically, he no longer serves at the whim of the commission."

Just how unpredictable that whim may be was illustrated graphically last week when Nick Pappas, county manager for nearly three years, suddenly was discharged.

Cupit, like Pappas, was serving without a contract. He did not accumulate sick leave or vacation time. Commissioners said as long as the road department was running efficiently, Cupit could call his own vacation time.

Spencer said Tuesday that as a classified employee, Cupit only could be fired for cause and his file would have to contain a record leading up to the action. He still will be a salaried employee.

The commission did not decide to change his status in reaction to the Pappas dismissal, Spencer said. "The commission thinks Cupit is doing an excellent job and as we go to a five member commission, everyone will be fighting for (projects in) their districts and here's Cupit in the middle."

Two seats will be added to the commission in the November election and commissioners will be elected only by voters within their individual districts instead of by voters throughout the county.

"He's so good at allocating machinery and men, we want to keep him out of the political crossfire," Spencer said of Cupit.

He noted that the county is developing a five-year road improvement and maintenance plan with annual updates and adjustments. Commissioners would like to keep someone at the helm of the department who will look at the county as a whole while recommending priorities.

During the commission meeting Thursday, Cupit, who previously owned his own construction business, came face to face with the fiscal realities of working for the government.

He wanted to get the maximum hours of work out of his employees by having them haul gravel and do other jobs on rain days that knock out maintenance and repair projects. But commissioners said money is tight and the extra equipment probably cannot be secured.

Their answer was the same on many small repair calls from residents. Cupit can only do what his budget will allow.

Cupit submitted for commission review applications to the state to do several road projects, including 3.7-acres of Cora Dutton Road as the county's cooperative program for the year. The State Transportation Department will pay 60 percent and the county 40 percent of the $250,000 project.

Cora Dutton Road runs from Capitan to Nogal.

Since the work will be accomplished on already disturbed ground, the county only needed to certify that it will not be disturbing any archaeological sites instead of a full-fledged study, Cupit said.

He also told commissioners they need to post weight limits on county roads, especially on paved ones.

"We have a situation now on Lower Eagle Creek, they're logging on the end," Cupit said. "I thought it was the forestry, but it's not, it's a private subdivision, but they're taking heavy equipment on new paved roads and there is no ordinance to protect us. Heavy construction in Alto is tearing up those roads, too. They're bringing weights in that only interstates should be carrying."

County attorney J. Robert Beauvais said the county still can hold the developer responsible for any damage to the road.

The county could adopt state standards on road weights through ordinance, he said.

Spencer told Cupit to contact the state for cooperation about how to enforce such restrictions.

"They're always leaning on us for taxes, lean on the state and federal transportation guys for freebies."

In another matter, Harry G. Wilcox Jr. asked commissioners to concur with a 1988 variance to construction specifications for a loop road into Vera Cruz Ranches.

"We intend to finish up what needs to be done and the only way is to get that road into place," said Wilcox, who is president of the company that developed the subdivision.

Completion of the road is the major thing keeping him from being able to sell the remaining ten lots.

Commissioners agreed to honor the 1988 variance. The county in May 1990 slapped a suspension of sales restriction on the subdivision when promised improvements were not finished. Last year, one of the former officers was indicted.

In the interim, some of the lot owners have defaulted on their payments, said Carolyn Leitzman Wilcox.

"I'm not saying I blame them with no road," she said. "Once the road is in, some may start up and pay again. Others with this bad economy may not."

"The company was virtually bankrupt when I assumed control," Wilcox said. "I don't want to build an eighteen-foot road (as approved in a variance in 1988 by a previous commission) and then have the county say they want it larger."

Tim Collins, whose firm is handling the road design, said the 1.7 mile span originally was conceived as a 28-foot wide road, but was reduced with some stipulations.

Other design changes included changing the culvert type.

Wilcox stressed that the road is private and will remain that way. The county will not be asked to take over its maintenance.

"There has been full disclosure to lot owners...that it will remain private," he said. "Eventually, a lot owners association will take over."

Spencer pointed out that it still must meet county construction standards or be granted a variance, because the county engineer must certify that the road is properly built when it is finished.

"Are you prepared to pay for engineering and review necessary to be sure we're getting what you paid for," asked Commissioner Bill Elliott.

Collins said the contractor will be required to perform compaction and other tests periodically and submit the results to the county.

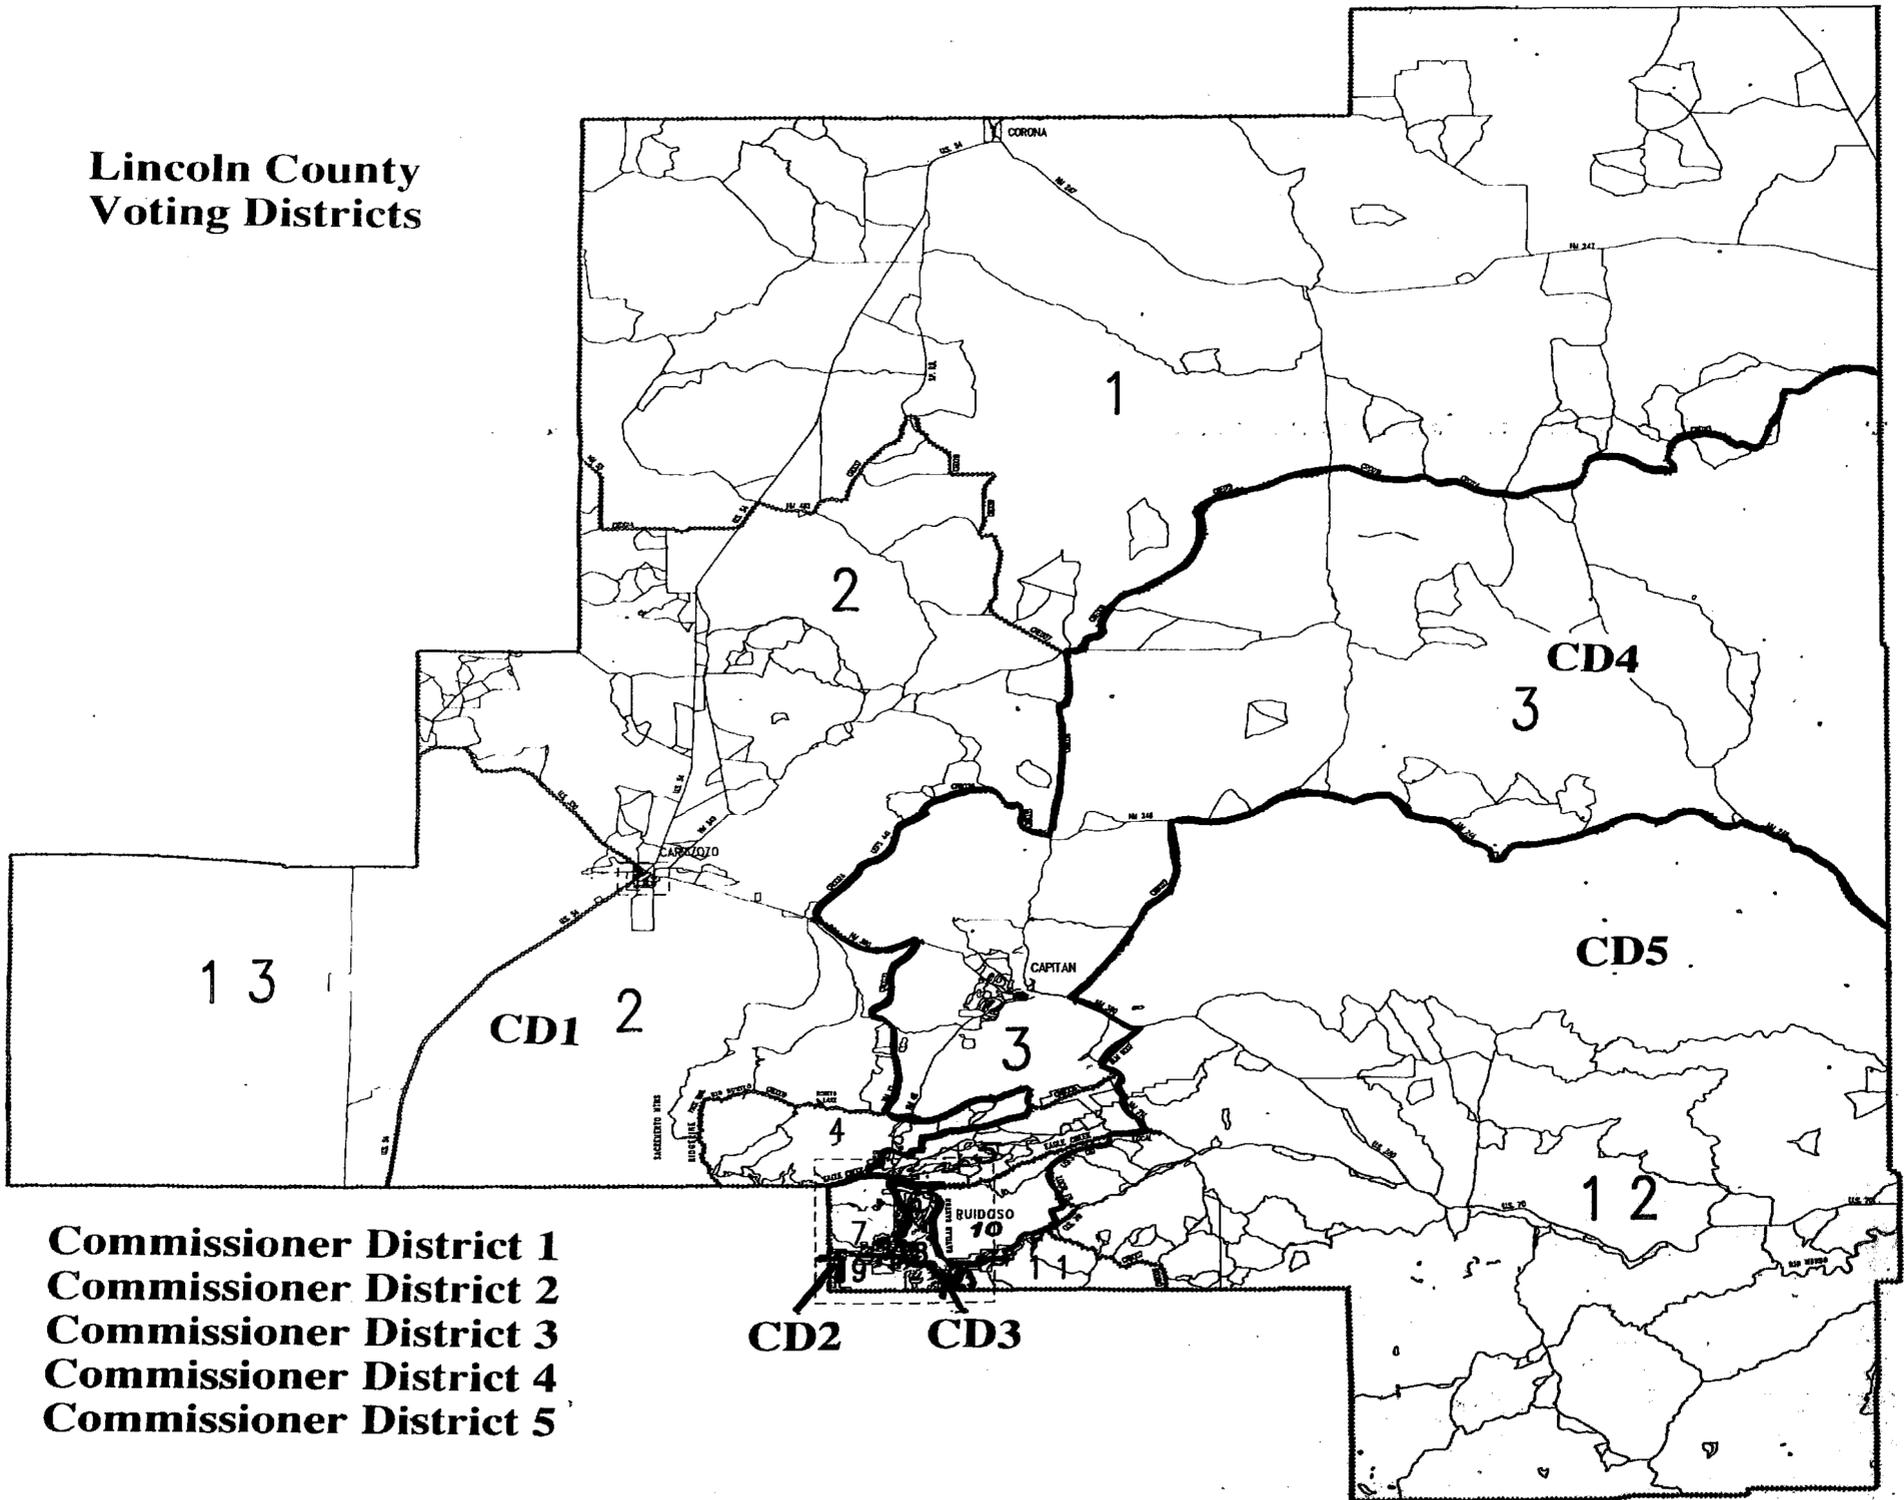

"That will be part of the bid," he said.

Beauvais said the county's leverage would be to not release the sales suspension action until the commission is satisfied.

The commission needs to have proof that the owners of the lots don't object to the new design of the road and that the buyer's disclosure statement has been amended to reflect the change, Beauvais said.

The county retains a claim against five pieces of property in the subdivision as security for the $150,000 road project.

New districts for November

Next November, the Lincoln County Commission will grow from three to five members. The map shows the new district alignments in heavy outline. Precincts are delineated by lighter lines. Candidates for the commission will qualify April 7. For the first time, they will be elected by voters only within their districts. The new District One includes precincts one, two, four and thirteen and encompasses Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer's home territory. District Two, covering precincts seven and nine, and District Four, including precincts three, five and ten, are the new seats on the commission. District Three covers precincts six and eight and is Commissioner Bill Elliott's area. District Five spans precincts eleven and twelve, and includes the home of Commissioner Monroy Montes.

Bank teller is accused

The Criminal Investigator Division of the Ruidoso Police Department arrested three persons in connection with two separate embezzlement schemes, according to Sgt. Lanny G. Maddox, CID Commander.

An employee of United New Mexico Bank was arrested on January 29. Gia Heath Stirman, 23, was charged with third degree felony embezzlement.

Arrested on January 30, and charged with third degree felony forgery was Carmen M. Taylor, 27.

According to Maddox, Taylor and Stirman conspired to pass a forged $2,500 counter check through Stirman in her capacity as teller for the bank.

Stirman allegedly received $2,000 of the money with Taylor receiving the balance.

Maddox said that he anticipates full recovery of the embezzled funds.

Stirman and Taylor are each free on $2,500 bond.

Possible penalty for a conviction on a third degree felony charge is a $5,000 fine and three years in jail.

In an unrelated incident, a Wal-Mart employee, Gerald Conklin, 22, was charged with embezzling an undetermined amount of money from the store's electronics department. He was charged with felony embezzlement.

Conklin is free on $2,500 bond and faces a possible 18 months in prison and a fine of $1,000.

P&Z quickly OKs two requests

In what may be the shortest meeting of the year, timed by secretary Mary Maxwell at 5 minutes flat, the Village of Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission considered and approved two zoning changes.

A request by First National Bank of Ruidoso, represented by D.T. Collins as agent, for elimination of a blanket easement on 101 Bogie Lane was presented and approved.

The original easement had been put in place when the tract was zoned for R-4 Multi-Family development.

The property has been recommended for R-1 Single Family Zoning with public hearing scheduled for the February 25 meeting of the village council.

In another action in reference to a lot with a proposed address of 107 Navajo Road, the commission approved an application by W.T. Averitt III for change of zoning from C-2 Community Business to R-1 Single Family Residential, subject to replat approval.

Averitt is also represented by D.T. Collins as agent.

Notification was given to all properties within 100 feet of the subject property. There were three responses, all favorable.

In other business, P&Z director, Cleatus Richards informed the commissioners that as a result of the public hearing on the shake shingle ordinance, it was approved by the council.

Mayor posts poor attendance record

Mayor Victor Alonso has attended only 71 percent of the regular meetings, workshops, and special meeting of the governing body of the Village of Ruidoso.

Attendance records were taken from all meetings since January 1, 1990. Of the 52 meetings the council held, the mayor missed 15.

The second poorest record was that of Councilor Jess Stinson, who attended 40 meetings for a 77 percent attendance record.

Councilor Ron Andrews was present for 41 meetings for a 79 percent attendance record.

Councilor Bill Karn attended 44 meetings for an 85 percent record of attendance and Councilor Barbara Duff missed four sessions for an attendance record of 92 percent.

Councilor J.D. James had a near perfect 97 percent attendance record. He missed 1 1/2 meetings over the 13-month period.

Councilor Patricia Espinosa missed two meetings since she was appointed in September for an 89 percent attendance record.

SCC hears a series of project updates

The Service Club Council of Lincoln County met Monday at K-Bobs and heard Betty McCreight who describe the Women's Financial Improvement Program (WFIP).

The program, sponsored by American Association of Retired Persons is aimed at helping women in midlife and older become aware of how to handle their financial affairs when it becomes necessary because of divorce or death of a spouse.

In addition, it is aimed at younger women who may have made a choice to remain single.

McCreight is asking for volunteers, on a club or individual basis, to help in the presentation of the program during seven sessions in April.

McCreight asked anyone interested in sponsoring the program to call her at 648-2311.

Lora Givens, with the United Blood Services, made a pitch for donors for the blood drive that will take place on February 19. United Blood Services is a non-profit organization that is charged with conducting blood drives and providing blood for 19 hospitals in Texas and New Mexico.

Givens is looking for help from a community service club in making telephone calls, providing refreshments and then generally providing organization for the drive.

James Hobbs addressed the group in reference to raising funds for him and his band, The Flying J Wranglers, to travel to China.

They have been invited to represent cowboy music at a music festival in March. Hobbs emphasizes that while he doesn't want to divert funds intended for support of needy persons, this is a wonderful opportunity for him and his group to represent this area on an international basis.

His telephone number is 336-4291.

Guardiola goes for Lobos

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Until about 9 p.m. Tuesday, star quarterback for the Ruidoso Warriors Manny Guardiola was going to continue his football career at the University of Minnesota after he graduated from high school.

But at a press conference on Wednesday, Guardiola had two letters in front of him and his parents beside him when he picked up a pen and signed one of the letters. Guardiola will be a University of New Mexico Lobo this fall to the delight of his parents and area supporters alike.

Guardiola will receive a complete scholarship to cover his five years of eligibility at the school, including tuition, board, meals and books.

He said the main reason he is going there instead of Minnesota is because of Matt Simon, new offensive coordinator at UNM. Simon was a coach for the number one Washington Huskies this past year. "Things are going to be turning around there," Guardiola said.

Guardiola had visited the University of Minnesota campus last weekend and liked the coaches and the school. He said earlier he had wanted to go to Minnesota because it was a Big 10 school. Guardiola said Simon told him that he was only looking at the fact that Minnesota is in the Big 10, and he should look at other things besides that.

His parents, Jessy and Mary Guardiola, said they are very proud of their son and are happy that he is going to be closer to home. His father said he thinks this will be best for Guardiola. Their son will also be closer so they can attend some of his games.

Coach Mike Speck said it was a tough decision for the 18-year-old Guardiola, but there are a lot of people in the community who will be very supportive of his decision to go to a school in the state.

"Everyone who knows him and is a fan of his is pleased with Manny's decision to go to UNM. Manny is really quite a catch for any school," Speck said.

The University will also reap the reward of having plenty of people in the area watching their games on television and attending the games to see Guardiola in action, Speck said.

In his last season here as a Ruidoso Warrior, he earned a position on the all-district first team as quarterback. Guardiola was also awarded the most valuable player of the year by his teammates at the fall sports banquet. He said in school he would like to major in construction management or civil engineering.

With a sigh of relief and smile on his face, Guardiola said he would call Simon with the good news.

Manny Guardiola signs a letter of intent to play football for the University of New Mexico as his parents, Jessy and Mary Guardiola, watch. Up to the minute he signed the letter, Guardiola had two schools to consider, UNM and the University of Minnesota. He said he decided to go to UNM because of the new offensive coordinator, Matt Simon, and so he could be closer to home.

Cross Your Heart is just filled with fun

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News

Do you have a creative costume, a great figure, a sense of humor or lots of foam rubber?

Are you an outrageous flirt, a fast skier, a little girl, a foxy 50-year-old or sexy sexagenarian?

If you answered "yes" to even one question, then you're perfect for Ski Apache's Cross Your Heart Cup ski race Wednesday.

"We have trophies or prizes for the winners of both timed and costume categories, and there are categories for both women and little girls," said Sherry Turner, one of the race organizers.

Costumed categories are Best Costume, Best Boobs, Biggest Flirt and Best Buns.

Timed categories are as follows: ages 12 and under ages 13 to 25, ages 26 to 39 and 40-plus.

New this year are Nifty Fifties and Sexy Sixties. Judges will award a first place trophy in each category based on a combination of time, costume and "Cross Your Heart" Spirit.

Continuing a time-honored tradition, the Tootsie Division will allow men to compete — but only if they dress as women.

Sign up now or on race day, Wednesday, February 12. Fun begins at 11 a.m. on Smokey Bear NASTAR and continues at the post-race awards party at 6 p.m. at Casa Blanca Restaurant, official race sponsor.

Entry fee is $5, which includes two runs, automatic entry in a drawing for a free private lesson from a certified instructor, and the party. A commemorative souvenir headband is available for $3.

For information, call Ski Apache Ski School desk at 336-4357.

These buxom boys are costumed to compete in last year's the Tootsie Division of the Cross Your Heart Cup. The annual fun race is scheduled this year for February 12.

RMS students will wage Battle of the Books Sat.

Using knowledge as ammunition, children will compete in the Battle of the Books on Saturday at the Ruidoso Middle School Library.

About 30 students from the sixth, seventh and eighth grade in area schools will be teamed up to answer questions on a list of books they have read. The contestants should come at 8 a.m. and spectators can watch after 9 a.m. After several elimination rounds, a final competition should begin at about 11:30 a.m.

The winners in this event will go on to a state competition in April. This is a unique event in that it is sponsored by the school and the public library with assistance from the Friends of the Library, said Ellie Keaton, middle school librarian.

Native American group meets with Governor Bruce King

Frederick Peso, vice chairman of the Mescalero Apache Indian tribe, and Norman Jopola of the BIA Mescalero Agency, were in Santa Fe February 5 to meet with Governor Bruce King.

The two were among a group representing the Native American Fish and Wildlife Society.

Governor King assured the native American group that the state will work with them to coordinate fish and game regulations in New Mexico.

Consultants picked to oversee the county's low-cost housing grant

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An administrator was hired Tuesday by the Lincoln County Commission to handle a $250,000 housing rehabilitation project for low income families.

Commissioners agreed to pay up to $12,500 from the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) to Southeastern New Mexico Economic Development District to act as administrator.

Tierra Del Sol, the Las Cruces firm that helped the county secure the grant, probably will bid on becoming the supervisor of construction on the projects. The firm's official had expected to be in the running for administration duties too.

But Curtis A. Schrader, planning and development specialist with Southeastern, said because of the district's existing relationship with the county there would be no need to go through the advertising and bidding process for an administrator if Southeastern was picked.

"We would handle all applications (for rehabilitation) and verify income," Schrader said. "We'll come up with a priority list of those with the lowest income and those with the greatest need. Then we'll turn the information over to those doing the construction estimates."

The grant will pay one-half of the administrative costs and the county must pay the other half. The payment can include in-kind services such as office space.

The county originally applied to rehabilitate 37 units for $400,000. It received $250,000 and that will cover about 23 houses with $230,000 in actual construction costs, Schrader said.

"Why would we pay Southeastern $14,000 on top of six percent for construction monitoring to be done by Tierra Del Sol," Commissioner Bill Elliott asked. "That firm said it could do both for one fee."

But the fee was $33,600, Schrader said.

"They were looking at $18,000 for administration."

County attorney J. Robert Beauvais said to accept Southeastern "would be a win-win situation" for the commission.

"They're experts," he said. "If we tried to do it in-house, we would have to cut loose at least one person. Housing and CDBG projects can just eat you alive. The county still can determine the criteria for eligibility. I don't think you want contractors doing that."

He pointed out that even the high end of Southeastern's estimate of $14,000 was $4,000 under the administration figure proposed by Tierra Del Sol.

"We'll assist the county in bidding out the work to be done and setting up the criteria," Schrader said. "The amount to be spent will be less than $9,000 average per unit. Some will be more and others less, but those over will have to be authorized on a case to case basis."

Even if Southeastern puts in more hours than it is estimating, it will have to eat any cost over the maximum amount, he said.

"I just want Lincoln County to be the boss and we want the credit," Elliott said.

Schrader said if there are workmanship problems, the contractor has one year to go back and correct them.

"The primary liability lies with the contractor," Beauvais said.

Commissioner Monroy Montes will be liaison for the commission on the project. Schrader told him the project should be finished before the end of the year.

In another matter, commissioners appointed Martha Guevara, acting county manager, to coordinate county compliance with the Americans With Disabilities Act.

Beauvais said that as of January 26, public employers with 25 employees or more must provide handicap access to services and employment.

That will require changes in the county's recruitment and retention plan, access to telephones and counters, which now would be too high for someone in a wheelchair.

A grievance procedure also needs to be established, he said.

"Action is needed now," Beauvais said. "Elected officials and department heads should meet and go into detail on what needs to be adapted. You need to appoint a coordinator and start developing a compliance plan."

Beauvais said he will work on a grievance procedure. Guevara was directed to research the cost and immediately purchase one telephone transcription device for the sheriff's dispatch center to ensure emergency communication capabilities for the deaf and hard of hearing.

Commissioners also want her to recommend whether the county should purchase a second unit for the manager's office.

Guevara's duties also will include working with Beauvais on the compliance plan after meeting with elected officials and department heads to put together what they need for their offices.

She will bring the information back to the commission for action within 60 days.

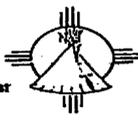

"This is not as painful as some say as long as we're making a good faith effort in revamping our hiring procedures and setting up a grievance process," Beauvais said. It's all a matter of "reasonable accommodation."

THE WAY WE WERE - PART II

Even Back In FDR's Time, Wasting Gas was A "No-No"

More significant than their discovery, however is their observation: "If 30 million cars and trucks in the U.S.A. left their motors idling for one minute, a total of approximately 291,666 gallons would be consumed."

Commenting on this nostalgia, Ruidoso Ford observes that energy conservation was vital to the war effort. "Today, it is essential to our energy independence and our balance of trade," they say. "What's more, vehicle population pushes the gas consumption figure into the millions of gallons."

"Air quality is more of a matter of concern, too, as an engine sitting at idle is a heavy polluter."

It is tempting to let the engine run to keep the car cozy and warm, but it is a bad habit. Another no-no, long periods of idling with the air conditioner running. Not only is this habit particularly wasteful, it also can cause the engine to overheat.

Shut off the engine if you expect to sit for more than a minute and keep the engine properly tuned for optimum fuel efficiency and minimum exhaust emissions.

Capitan

Tree choppers chastised

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

They may have thought it was funny at the time, but the humor of the situation was lost on the residents of Capitan.

Two of the four boys arrested for chopping down Capitan's living Christmas tree have been fined $200 each and put on probation.

When the striking 12-foot blue spruce next to village hall was cut down after the holidays, people were incensed. A $500 reward was offered for information.

Finally, someone came forward with their suspicions, said arresting Capitan police officer Rudy Saiz.

After he received a tip, he asked one of the suspects to come down to village hall and confronted him.

"One thing led to another and they told on each other," Saiz said.

He said no one was pinpointed as the ring leader of the vandalism.

"It was an idea that was brought up and they went with it," he said.

"They denied that they had been drinking."

In Capitan Municipal Court Wednesday, Judge Jimmy Stewart said three of those arrested pled guilty. They are Weldon Smith, 18; Jeff Chavez, 18, and Michael Luna, 21.

A 16-year-old juvenile suspect was referred to juvenile authorities and Cosima Faustino Gallegos, 21, pled not guilty. His trial was set for February 21 in Capitan municipal court.

Smith is a senior at Capitan High School.

"I fined him $200 and put him on one year's probation," Stewart said. Luna also was fined $200 and put on probation. Chavez will serve probation, but was not fined, based on Stewart's determination that his degree of guilt was less.

Smith, Chavez and Luna will be responsible for replacing the tree with another twelve foot blue spruce in good condition," Stewart said. "Mayor Frank Warth estimated the cost at about $800.

"Smith and Chavez will be required as part of their probation to water the tree twice a week. Luna attends college and won't be here. If the tree is vandalized or dies, they will have to replace it."

Other conditions tied to probation are that the boys will not consume alcohol or use drugs. Smith cannot leave Lincoln County without checking with his probation officer. He must report to his probation office once a week. Luna must check in on Saturdays.

Stewart said the defendants were quiet in his court Wednesday. Smith arrived with his mother, Chavez with his father from Roswell. Luna and Gallegos were alone.

"I hope this brings home a message that this wasn't just a prank," Stewart said. "A lot of kids don't realize when they turn eighteen they're considered old enough in the eyes of the law to answer for everything they do."

Junior cagers grab trophies

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The newly-formed Capitan junior basketball teams for elementary-age children won two trophies in last weekend's Smokey Junior Classic Basketball Tournament.

To compete against the tough basketball teams in eastern New Mexico, Lincoln County hopefuls have to start earlier and play harder, said Johnny Autrey.

"In the eastern part of the state, they start playing in the third and fourth grades," he said. "That's why the teams are so much better."

To offer that same opportunity to fifth and sixth graders in Capitan, Autrey, Mel Holland, Deke LaMay and Jack King have organized basketball teams for girls and boys in those elementary grades.

"We started it last November, the weekend before Thanksgiving," Autrey said. They played at Grady in November and at Melrose at the end of December.

Last Saturday the home teams invited teams from Cloudcroft and Ruidoso to a tournament in Capitan. The Ruidoso team was older, sixth and seventh graders, but had not been practicing together as long, Autrey said.

On the girls' side, Capitan took first place and Tim Wishard's team, one of two Ruidoso teams, placed second. In the boys' competition, Capitan took top honors and Cloudcroft came in second.

"The Cloudcroft boys played a good game, it was very close, and Ruidoso's teams are coming along," Autrey said. "They've just started practicing together. We'd like to have a rematch at some point."

In fact, Capitan would like to set up games with any teams of the same general age.

"What these kids need is support from the community and from their parents," Autrey said. "If they want to be cheering a winning team in high school, now is the time to start training our players."

The Capitan teams will meet

Clovis in two March tournaments.

"They're real tough teams down there," Autrey said. "They start them in third and fourth grade and they know how to play ball."

For more information about the Capitan junior players, call Autrey during business hours at 378-5426.

Next week...

Capitan school will be closed Monday, February 17, in recognition of All Presidents Day.

Teachers will be busy participating in a Region IX in-service program on Wednesday, February 26, so students will get a second day off this month according to School Supt. David Lock.

The Capitan Board of Trustees will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, February 10 in village hall.

Composting plan could someday turn trash into cash

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Everyone has a stake in finding a solution to what can be done to reduce the waste going into landfills.

Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority's composting committee is investigating making waste into a marketable product.

The committee invited Jon Dellios, operations manager of FertiGro, a division of Santa Fe Racing, to a meeting on Monday to share ideas and advice on composting waste material. Dellios also consults with the Albuquerque Downs in their composting program.

Max Johnson, general manager of Ruidoso Downs Race Track, was also at the meeting to discuss the position of the track here.

Dellios first asked the group if they had done any research on marketing of a compost product, but so far the committee has not been able to.

"I strongly believe before you begin composting, you should look into marketing, completely," Dellios said.

He said the Albuquerque track has about 2,500 stalls for horses and creates about 240 cubic yards of waste a day. The track is also in a joint venture with the city of Albuquerque with the composting being done on a 10-acre site, he said, but that space is getting tight.

They then sell the compost in bulk by the cubic yard, in some cases back to city projects for architecture, landscape and highway or street projects. Individual customers are not allowed on the site, he said.

At the Santa Fe track, less than 200 cubic yards of waste is generated each day from the 2,000 stalls, Dellios said. He said they only compost about one-third to one-half of the waste because they can't use some of the waste or don't want to use it in the mixture. The compost is then sold to individuals who want to use it for their gardens or nurseries, he said.

Jim Edwards, member of the committee, said compost here could also be used by the municipalities, the golf courses and the orchards. Dellios said some of the food growers and farmers will still not want to use a product with sludge in it, although it meets all regulations. It will still have a stigma, he said, but Edwards said an extensive educational program could possibly overcome that.

Dellios said the compost they create is analyzed about a dozen times a year at a soil laboratory for nutrients, minerals and phosphates among other things.

The traditional fertilizers of peat moss and bark are blown out of the water by a true compost, Dellios said. Edwards said they could also make several products to meet the different needs of people.

Dellios said Albuquerque has gone to a lot of expense for a nice facility, but he thinks composting will be a grass-roots type of business. For a long time there may not be a lot of money in it, he said.

He recommended that the group purchase a minimum of equipment and keep expenses down. Dellios said a compost wind-row turning machine is essential to have because the environment and temperature of the wind-row needs to be controlled. It also makes a higher quality compost than is on the market, he said.

It will be difficult for the group to compost in the winter because of the needed environmental control, Dellios said, but it will be easier here because of the moisture.

He said it is also important to determine where the natural drainage is so the wind-rows don't block these.

Johnson said Ruidoso Downs has about 2,000 stalls that generate 30,000 to 35,000 cubic yards of waste during each meet season. He said they have purchased 40 acres of land five miles east of Ruidoso Downs and have stored about a year's worth of waste on five acres already.

Currently a private group is doing a marketing survey on the possibility of composting for the track, he said.

A big concern for Johnson and the track is that horses will be in the stalls in mid-April so he will have waste to deal with immediately. Johnson said he wants to work with the authority and the county, but he will have to take into consideration which will give him the best deal, including the cost and what services are provided. He said he should get a report from the private group in the next 30 to 60 days.

"We don't want to be in the composting business, but we have to look at what is best for us as far as costs and what is done," he said.

One concern Johnson said they have is that the access to the storage area is not very good, especially with the wet weather. He said they would be willing to work with the authority in whatever way possible if they could, including the use of this storage area.

Gene Green, director of the authority and member of the committee, said the group is ready to move on in this process. He said they should put together a proposal in the next three to four weeks to take care of waste for the track.

"We need to set a time frame on this (composting project), but we need to know who the players are. We need to look at the volumes, the sites and then look at a plan," Green said.

Committee chairperson Dr. Bernie Reimann has a pilot compost project to find the proper mix of waste materials for a marketable product. He also has a special project involving turning pine needles to compost, too, because the needles and other yard waste is one-third of the material that goes into the landfill.

Dellios said he is also doing an experiment this spring with shredded paper for bedding in the stalls and will let the group know about the results. He said most bedding for stalls is considered an agricultural product and is exempt from governmental permits because it is considered a solid waste. If anything is added to the material the group would have to get a permit to dispose of it, he said.

One product the authority is concerned about is sludge. Dellios said sludge is hauled about 30 miles to the composting site in Albuquerque. The Santa Fe operation doesn't compost the sludge, but the city has approached the Downs about the possibility, he said. The track has been open to that but wanted to wait until the new solid waste regulations came out in 1992, Dellios said.

He said soon the expense of having a landfill will be too much for a small entity.

"You can't have empty trucks going in any direction from the landfill. When people take a load in, they need to take something back, like the compost, to do their part," Dellios said.

Bonnie Addy, committee member, said the group will have to withstand the time gap when people don't take the load back with them. Dellios said the composting business is going strong and hard right now, but he expects it to reach a plateau, and the group will have to find a good regional market for the waste.

"There are things here you have that we don't (in Santa Fe or Albuquerque), but we have some things that you need," he said.

Dellios said he thinks information on composting is something that could and should be shared.

Addy said Dellios and his group had the general information needed for the authority to make its next step. In the future when they get the operation going they hope to exchange some of their information with him, she said.

"If we don't tear down some of the regional fences to share problems and expenses we won't accomplish anything," Addy said.

Members of the committee said the meeting was informational and constructive and will help them go on to the next step. On Wednesday the authority inspected a site that may be used to set up a composting facility. Reimann said a site for composting needs to have adequate water and electricity.

Edwards said committee members should keep their eyes open for grants that could help them purchase equipment. He said the items they need, such as the wind-row turner, is specialized and can be expensive.

Six entities formed the authority which has two main committees, the composting committee and a recycling committee to help meet regulations that call for a reduction of waste by 50 percent by the year 2000.

Rep. Underwood seeks scholarship applicants

State Representative H. John Underwood, District #56, Lincoln County, is seeking nominees for a scholarship to be offered next fall at New Mexico Military Institute.

Under a program approved by the 1989 Legislature, each senator and representative in the state's 112 legislative districts is being asked to submit the names of four candidates for the scholarship to the NMMI scholarship committee. The best qualified candidate of the four will receive the $2,250 scholarship at the beginning of the 1992-1993 school year and up to three years thereafter, a total of four years, so long as he or she meets the requirements.

"I support this $2.5 million program when it came before the Legislature," Representative Underwood said. "I'm sure it will result in substantial increase in the enrollment of New Mexico students at NMMI, which is its primary purpose." NMMI is a four-year accredited college preparatory high school and two-year junior college with an enrollment of about 950 students. It is state-supported and has been coeducational since 1977. It has observed its 100th anniversary this past year.

A junior college student at NMMI can obtain an Army ROTC commission in two years by attending ROTC Basic Camp during the summer after high school graduation and Advance Camp between the college freshman and sophomore years.

Representative Underwood said any student interested in applying for the Legislator Scholarship should contact him at 258-9090 as soon as possible. The candidates will have until March 1 to complete the application forms and write their essays and biographies.

The Silver Lining Sun shines to end coldest January since '29

January's Last Day

All day on January 31, the sun shone down on the patches of snow, glistening with rainbow colors under a blue sky. The temperature was a mild 60, and the snow melt water was running over the winter fields of golden ripe grass, filling the meadows with miniature lakes, swamps and springs. With the Vale basking under the sun in winter interlude, you looked back through this January.

Surely this has been the wettest winter I can remember, with the deepest ruts in the little road leading to the house. All over the county, high and low, the story is the same—the wettest January they can remember.

Our weatherman, Bill Hostetter, tells me that this has been the coldest January — the coldest average temperature — since 1929. It got down to six below one night in Ruidoso, and four above one night here in the Vale. Yet somehow the cold has not seemed so severe as in other January with less snow. There has not been as much wind this month as in drier years. And the snow purifies the air, making for a healthier winter.

All in all this has been a wonderful January, with the great snow and moisture money in the bank for Good Mother Earth and a guarantee of a green and flowery Spring.

As the sun set over the western hill, and the sky became touched with orange and purple, January bid the Mountain world a fond farewell for this time.

On Ground Hog's Day

Now here we are on Ground Hog's Day in mid-afternoon of a typical February day of sunshine and shadow, of blue sky, white clouds floating overhead, purple gray clouds on the eastern horizon, and silver linings all along the top of a long bank of billowy white clouds extending all along the western sky from mountain to mountain. Now the sun breaks through over the top of the cloud wall lighting up all the Vale with sunny, pearly half light.

By Dan Storm
The Ridge
Munier

The Weather Spirits and Mother Earth are presenting a pageant here in the Mountain World, of February's changing moods, with Winter and Spring playfully contesting for possession of the day.

There was enough sunshine through the day that the ground saw his shadow. Even for a little while is enough to spook him and causing him to make a swan dive into his underground shelter—safe for six more weeks from the bombs and blasts of Winter's final days.

Six more weeks of winter? Surely the Ground Hog will bring us some interludes of sunny days during this time. Anyhow, fair or cloudy, windy or calm, cold and warm—February remains a very beloved month, one of the favorites of all the year.

Happy Birthday To the Gipper

This will reach you on February 6, the eighty-first birthday of Ronald Wilson Reagan our fortieth president. He was born on this date in Tampico, Illinois, to John Edward Jack Reagan and the former Nelle Wilson.

He worked his way through Eureka College where he played football, and worked in the summer as a life guard at a swimming pool. One year he saved seventy people from drowning.

He is the only actor to be elected president, and also the oldest man ever elected.

From his Scotch Presbyterian mother he inherited a devout nature and from his Irish father a great sense of humor, a ready wit, and a sunshiny outlook on life.

In one of the favorite motion pictures of all time, "Klute Rockne, All American," Reagan played the role of George Gipp, the great running back on Notre Dame's football team. George Gipp, ill in the hospital, told his former coach Knute Rockne:

"Rock, some time when things are not going right for the team, tell the boys to go out there and win one for the Gipper."

From his role in this motion picture Reagan gained his nick name which he bears to this day. Let us all wish a happy birthday to Ronald Reagan our fortieth president.

We Wish "The Kid" Speedy Recovery

Johnny Thomas, veteran rodeo performer as bronc rider, roper, and bull dodger is in the hospital recovering from broken ribs, but this time not from mishaps in a rodeo.

"I was feeding 50 head of cattle," says Johnny. "When one of the cows butted at the feed bag and tossed me up in the air, when I came down the feed was scattered all over, and all the cows were on top of me. I rolled under the Jeep, then got in the Jeep and drove off."

To hear him tell it over the phone, he spoke in the laughing tone of voice which is his trade mark, along with his million-dollar smile,—as if the whole thing was good for a big laugh. This is the true westerner's way of joking his way through life, looking at the bright side of everything.

Like the time he told me about when his spur caught in the kicking strap of a bronc he was riding, and he was drug all around the corral. This was in the old days when we had rodeos in the Old Cree Branding Corral, which used to be across the street from where the Ruidoso State Bank now stands.

Johnny has played the part of Billy The Kid in the Lincoln County. We wish Johnny a speedy recovery and are grateful to God that his injuries are no worse.

Way to go, Manny!

Ruidoso High School Warrior quarterback Manny Guardiola is headed north to play football.

Guardiola, who will graduate from RHS this May, had some choices about where to play football next year. He could have gone WAY up north to play for the Big 10 University of Minnesota, but opted to stay a little closer to home and play for the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque.

This season has been mixed for the Ruidoso athletics program, but Guardiola was a standout in an unspectacular football year for the Warriors. It's good to see that individual talent is recognized even when a team isn't bringing home many trophies.

Guardiola has the height and the strong throwing arm to compete well in the big leagues. He was named all district first team quarterback, made academic all district and was district 3-AAA's quarterback nominee for the south all-star team this season. His teammates voted him most valuable player for the season.

Congratulations, Manny! You've made your school and your town proud. We'll be rooting for you wherever you go.

Don't miss free talk by well-known author

TO THE EDITOR:

The citizens of New Mexico and particularly those in this area have a wonderful opportunity on Wednesday, February 26, to hear an internationally acclaimed family life and prevention specialist. Stephen Glenn will be speaking from 3:30-5 p.m. at the First Christian Church in Ruidoso and will focus on interpersonal skills that are important to families but also to relationships in the work place.

This free talk will be an opportunity to hear this expert who has a practical approach to the problems we face in the areas of education, alcoholism and drug abuse.

Perhaps best known as co-author of "Raising Self-Reliant Children in a Self-Indulgent World," Stephen Glenn is a most delightful and inspiring speaker who provides some down-to-earth suggestions for growth in family life and other relationships.

Sponsored by the Region IX Cooperative Center and Drug-Free Schools and Communities board, this is a chance to share his knowledge in areas that should be of benefit to all New Mexico citizens. I encourage everyone to take advantage of this great opportunity.

Youth Authority complains about syndicated series

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent series on the New Mexico Youth Authority focused attention on some of the unmet treatment and program needs in this relatively-new state agency. However, I believe your readers did not receive a balanced report of the overall picture. The writers took a small number of incidents and used them as a basis to question the effectiveness of the entire agency.

For example, much attention was paid to the resignation of one administrator and two part-time consultants.

Emphasis was placed on the departures of the two consultants as if the department would be unable to function without them. One of them worked approximately six hours a week for the Youth Authority. The other was employed not by the Authority, but by the University of New Mexico School of Medicine, which continues to provide consulting services. Neither departure created a negative change in the level of services provided.

One of the consultants provided the agency during the previous administration with a contracted study pointing with accuracy to overcrowded facilities, undertrained staff, and the need for major improvements in programs and services. Although it was helpful it generally served to confirm what juvenile justice experts in New Mexico have been saying for at least 10 years and provided little new information. Prior to the report being released the Youth Authority had already begun to act, within the financial resources available, to improve the system.

What was also frustrating about the articles was the timing of their publication. Only after the consultants had disagreement with the Youth Authority and went public with their concerns did the reporters express interest in the department. Because these consultants were also physicians and part of a distinguished university their concerns drove the direction of the articles. Had the writers divorced themselves from the opinions of the consultants and approached the issues in a more objective manner, a more accurate representation of the department would have been presented. Instead, readers were subjected to an onslaught of hyper-critical rhetoric reflecting poorly on the present administration, its employees and the Youth Authority in general.

It should be made clear that the above consultants are respected professionals, who have made contributions to the department. To suggest however, like the reporters did that there is turmoil within the troubled youth authority because of the loss of two consultants is tabloid news and just plain silly.

Similarly, the articles contained remarks of a number of former or current employees who were not identified, but unhappy about the agency. They were entitled to their opinions, but anonymous individuals can hardly be considered an objective source of information. If reports had wanted balance, they would have sought and published information from employees willing to go on record and state alternative points of view.

In fact, the Cabinet Secretary and his executive staff have made a concentrated effort to visit communities and neighborhoods throughout the state, including Ruidoso. We have heard from youth advocates, legislators, public officials, community leaders the general public. We have not insulated ourselves from public comment and criticism, in spite of the implication in the recent articles.

The most damaging implication was that the current administration is not dedicated to improving Youth Authority's services to youth. Emphasis was placed on personality characteristics of the current Cabinet Secretary, and reports of political and bureaucratic infighting. Had the reporters had the willingness to go out side the narrow interests of a few former employees and consultants, they would have discovered new programs and services outside institutions, requests for new positions to address overcrowding, and revamping of training to more directly focus on youthful offenders.

The examples given above reflect only a few of the reporters' preconceived biases toward the current administration of the Youth Authority. The articles discussed conditions in institutions and in the field as if they had appeared overnight. The situation as it now exists is a cumulative record. For years, we as a society have failed to provide youth and professionals in juvenile justice with the necessary resources. The very reason the Youth Authority was given cabinet status two years ago was because of the disregard juvenile justice issues had received in the past. To expect absolute improvement after years of neglect is unrealistic. To ignore the improvements that are being made is unfair.

From the public, we seek only some time and resources to make things better. From our critics, we seek more fair and balanced treatment. We just might surprise you.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The series referred to in the above letter (or column or whatever it was meant to be) was researched and written by the Summit Syndicate staff. It was very thorough and very well-written. If the Youth Authority's response, from its timing to its tone and composition, is an example of that state department, then it's definitely not a well-organized or well-run organization. How typical of bureaucrats to be unavailable when reporters are researching stories, and then complain about stories that don't follow the "party line." We've met some "graduates" of the Youth Authority system, and believe that revolutionary changes are needed.

Removing horse feed tax benefits only the wealthy

TO THE EDITOR:

RE: Representative John Underwood's introduction, and/or support of legislation to remove tax from horse feed.

(That bill) to benefit the race horse industry to better compete with adjoining states may or may not have economic benefits for New Mexico.

However, I am actively opposed to such legislation on the basis of priorities.

Firstly, New Mexico makes claim it wants a large tourist and retiree industry. Maybe, but the legislators don't seem to be or perhaps they are unaware that today's retirees are an informed group, often studying, several years, prior to retirement where they will live. They use retirement atlases, subscribe for 3-6 months to newspaper from a considered locality, in short they know that besides an income tax New Mexico taxes all medical services, food and all other services and, because of taxes on medical service and food, especially, retirees go elsewhere.

Legislation to remove those taxes would economically benefit the state of New Mexico by attracting retirees who generally have stable economics income generated from outside of New Mexico being spent in New Mexico, plus retirees do not necessitate building of new schools, additional personnel for state and local police, they are a profound medical and funeral industry asset, not to mention revenue generated by children and grandchildren visiting them.

Secondly: The poor. The misery of their poverty is made more miserable by the heartless imposition of a tax on food and medical care — but then who cares about that when there are wealthy, out of state, racehorse owners to be concerned about.

Further, such tax is self-defeating by driving marginal poor to state coffers for aid.

Thirdly: You were elected to represent the majority of the full-time residents of your district. You were also elected by them. You got not one vote from wealthy horse owners who reside in Texas, Arizona, Oklahoma, California or Illinois.

Except for horse owners, locals, ranchers, who benefit among New Mexico residents from removal of tax exempt status. Such rescission should apply to every business organization as well.

Remove tax on horse feed, indeed! Benefit wealthy, out of state horse owners, indeed!

On dignity, prosperity and inalienable rights

TO THE EDITOR:

In response to Mr. Poulos' letter to the editor of January 27, I agree with him on several points. There are indeed entire generations of Mescalero opponents in tribal elections for many years, this is because he altered their constitution so that he appoints the tribal judges and the election board himself and no one other than they are allowed to see the ballots.

Mr. Poulos continues, "given the high degree of prosperity the tribe has enjoyed (regardless of whether it is distributed equitably) during Mr. Chino's protracted tenure." The word "regardless" is well chosen if by "the tribe" Mr. Poulos means Mr. Chino, his family and relatives, the council, the judges etc. Mr. Chino himself has been quoted in the press as saying that he needs the MRS to cure a 25 percent unemployment among his people. If that is prosperity, then again I must agree with Poulos.

As to "Anglo arrogance," it was not I, but Chino, who called his old friend Bruce King a "political racist." So far as I am aware, that was the first time the ugly term "racist" has emerged in the dialogue, except for Poulos' own reference to Anglos.

As to "name calling, snide sarcasm and empty threats," I must seriously question Mr. Poulos' ignorance of the immediate results of last week, which for me were not just coincidence but were directly connected to our actions. Within three days after the "inflammatory" petition and the demonstration in midtown Ruidoso, the two senators, Domenici and Bingaman, both broke their three-month silence (I called them nearly every week), and soundly opposed the Mescalero further study of the MRS. Next the Chaves County Commissioners voted unanimously to oppose the MRS study.

Then Chino came out from behind his hired consultants, whom he publicly criticized, and threatened an entire community with what some might call "economic racism." Ultimatum, Ruidoso! To hell with your peoples' livelihood, my peoples' jobs, my children's benefits in the Ruidoso school system! If that man sets foot on my reservation with those petitions, I'll shut you all down!

Mr. Poulos, with all due respect, if you find my tactics "inflammatory," they pale into insignificance compared to that outburst. I, or Chino, or anyone could have delivered nearly 2,000 similar signatures and hand-written messages from concerned citizens to George Bush or Bruce King or the County Commissioners or Mayor Alonso, with no reprisal.

Instead, our whole community was for a short time seemingly enslaved by a sovereign person/entity next door to us. In any event, Mr. Chino sent a delegation to me on Friday to accept the petitions. Since I didn't have copies readily available at the time (I wasn't exactly expecting them!), I delivered them Monday, January 27, to Mr. Fred Peto, tribal secretary, at the Otero County Commission meeting in Alamogordo.

So much for the events of last week.

As to failing to recognize the dignity and self esteem of another person, I believe Mr. Chino far exceeded me when he blatantly tried to intimidate a whole population of his sovereign neighbors. I hear he has done this more than once before. I believe I fight for my own, my community's, the Mescalero people's, and my sovereign state's economy, freedom from fear, integrity.

David Leroy, the Nuclear Negotiator, told me two weeks ago he would "seriously evaluate" the level of public opposition to the Mescalero MRS Phase II application before approving such a request. I am sending him today a FED X package full of printed proof of that opposition. I think he will read it wisely and go off to greener pastures with his totally misguided MRS.

Maybe the hired consultants from Pacific Nuclear and SAIC will get the message and do the same, especially after Chino's rebuke to them.

I was born in Illinois, where Abraham Lincoln said, "As I would not be a slave, so I would not be a master."

Mr. Poulos, let us together recognize the dignity, first, of our sovereign selves. Then we can more clearly recognize the tyranny of others and take effective action against them when they threaten that inalienable right, that precious dignity.

Changes threaten "The Valley" we know & love

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to submit this piece entitled "The Valley" for you to share with your readers. It was written over 30 years ago about a pristine and beautiful valley in northern California that was slowly swallowed up by unsightly urban blight, factories, poor zoning and greedy individuals who saw PROGRESS only in terms of dollars.

Those of us in Lincoln County who are aware of the God given natural beauty, the magnificent Sierra Blanca and its watershed, the serene and beautiful Bonito and Hondo River valleys, can surely appreciate the message of "The Valley."

Perhaps the supporters of this proposed MRS nuclear facility really need to read and understand the message!

No, we do not want your megabucks! No, we don't want the benefits you espouse. Yes, we are suspicious. If this project were so great, so safe, why aren't more Indian tribes, more municipalities and states competing for the "benefits" such a project will bring to our area?

Why should we be conned into accepting what others have refused?

We say "NO" to becoming a dumping ground for others. It would be a tragic mistake and a blight on the quality of life we all cherish!

The Valley by J.F. Carithers

There was once a quiet place — created by chaos in the dim past, its every nook and cranny filled with tranquil life by Nature in one of her gentle moods ... trod by the Red Man ... later by the long robed Padres ... and finally by a breed seeking the good life.

In the beginning the slopes were grass ... and then, here and there, clumps of majestic oaks held sway — to soften still more the gentle hills that rose wave on wave, to gaze down on the singing stream with its miniature cataracts, over which streaked the glistening trout.

In the quiet of evening bands of deer could be seen, and every patch of green was the haven of the shy bush rabbit and the cattering quail — and high overhead the hawk rode the winds.

Every season was an adventure ... the green and gaudy dress of Spring ... the golden hues of Autumn ... the silvery grandeur of Winter ... and a blue sky above all.

White-faced calves frolicked in the sun ... orchards with their splash of color in the lowlands ... fields of corn and pumpkin ... white fenced farms and tilled earth that carried a cherished look ... a school, that was really more than a school ... and the high cross of a church in which all gave thanks. It was a good place in which to live ... with room to breath in ... beauty to walk through, endowing all with a kinship that was rare — and fragile.

Then came the changes — so imperceptible as to go unnoticed. There was a cry for water — and the musical stream that originally molded the character of this place was dammed, and in many places ... and its song was hushed.

The slender ribbon of black — the main visible link with the world outside — the controller of pace of the valley was suddenly inadequate — and it was broadened.

The way-of-life attracted attention, and the population grew ... and the fine rules ... some unwritten — that had guided its destiny became old-fashioned, and were revised ... in a new light ... that reflected the doom of this lovely place.

Space became important — not for its own sake — but for living room. Soon, like a giant conglomerate glacier the artificial features pushed up the grassy slopes, and when these scattered affronts to nature reached the tops of the ridges they started down again, filling in the spaces missed on the first assault ... and this was repeated again and again. Giant stands of age old oaks were no more. The tall grass was shorn ... and burned. Brush that was shelter and food for quail and the quiet deer was erased. To prevent fire they used fire — to the creatures of the bush it made little difference what thought was behind the match — the result was the same ... and spelled death.

With people came the demands for conveniences ... and they came ... and grew. Suddenly the quaint village stores, that served the needs in a way apart from the ordinary — suddenly these could not keep pace ... and they were joined by many more ... that knew little of the past, and based their hopes for the future on the sterile ring of the cash register. A five & ten ... supermarket ... dispensers of fuel for the metal monsters that could now find their noisy way into all the once cloistered places — no stone was left unturned in this frantic drive to make the valley over in the image of a thousand places: the tall, blinking, steel finger of entertainment, puncturing the starlit sky ... and then a through highway ... to save people a few minutes driving time. It looked not unlike a freeway ... but it was not free ... it had cost so much.

And the remaining noble trees, that had weathered storms untold, found the ripping tooth of the bulldozer too much to bear and reluctantly fell to earth ... and in their place appeared exotics ... as alien as the palm.

The hills, now trod by thousands, and packed unmercifully till they were like cement, refused the gentle rains that still came in the old amounts, and this precious life-blood of the land rushed off to the sea, carrying in its swiftness the brown cells of a once abundant earth. Soil that had taken eons to mature, was washed away ... a drop at a time ... till the barren rock protested.

And what of the people who now lived there? They did not have the look of happiness — the look of a person living the good life. They looked different now ... but the same as everyone else, in a thousand cities across the land. For they did live in a city ... every square inch of it made over in the dubious guise of progress. There they had once had originality, some difference, some touch, that set them apart, made them hold their heads a little higher, face the world a little braver ... and walk hand in hand with their Creator — now they were common ... and in many ways lost.

How different this once quiet place looked — and in just a few lifetimes. Gone was its glow — the sun didn't shine as bright any more. Gone were its sounds — the meadowlark long since flown ... for the want of something to sing about. Gone were the smells of clean rich earth ... and the fragrance of pear blossoms ... and the never-to-be-forgotten sweetness of a million blades of dewtipped grass. Gone were the signs — of the softly contoured hills ... the gentle slopes ... the bottomlands dotted with story-book farms ... fine horses racing in the meadows ... and children gaily picnicking in the lacy shade of the oak.

But that which you can neither see, smell or hear — the spirit of this place — was the most tragic loss ... for it was irretrievably gone. It seemed like yesterday that it was with us.

And then, mutely from beneath the blacktop ... and macadam ... and cement, from beneath the storm-gutters and the weight of thousands ... mutely this spirit cried for attention ... but few heard ... and they went on ... and soon its faint voice grew tired ... and it was gone.

The harvest was over ... the deed was done ... and the world was a little more empty.

Watch "Nuclear Waste" to learn all about MRS

TO THE EDITOR:

"Nuclear Waste and the West" is a program that was shown on the Portales PBS Channel 5 station last Sunday afternoon. We have been informed that so many people called the station and wanted the program repeated that it will be aired again next Friday night, February 7, at 11 p.m. Please watch this!

This program is a lively discussion with a panel of men representing the interests of private industry, government, and the states that are involved. It will give you an overall view of our national waste program and what is happening right now!

You must hear the statement that there is not a crisis situation for MRS programs. It was the consensus of the group that the spent rods are far better off left at the sites where they are generated. This was emphasized by Dan Richer of the Natural Resource Defense Council who says that it is unwise to handle and ship the rods to MRS sites for temporary storage because of the vulnerability of the casks. You will better understand the immense problems when you hear them talk about a permanent storage site for these rods. This above ground structure will have to last at least two thousand years. Never in the history of mankind has any structure lasted that long.

Of special interest to this area is the story of the Indians along the Columbia River who are trying to get their nuclear storage site moved farther away from the water. And how the government is making very slow studies on just how much damage has already been done to the area and to the people who have a very high incidence of rheumatoid arthritis.

These people, accepted their obligation as Guardians of the Earth, but the sad fact is that we still don't understand or realize the long range dangers of the radiation of nuclear waste. And all our technology is still in the experimental stage.

So, what is the bottom line in this area? It is money, big — BIG MONEY!

It is all very well for Miller Hudson to talk about jobs, a new water system for Ruidoso, new school, landfills, etc. etc. and dangle these goodies before our eyes. If the MRS is an accomplished fact here, Ruidoso will lose all credibility as a vacation spot and a resort area. People who have the money will move. Who on earth would want to chance living next to another Rocky Flat?

Surely all New Mexicans have fulfilled their obligations as Guardians of the Earth with the WIPP site. No one can make us feel guilty that we have not done our FULL share in our fragile beautiful state.

"JUST A STUDY?" We hope and pray that this is true. And that it never, never, never becomes a reality!

Indians may be selling out future generations

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is about your article on 1-23-92 titled "Chino Warns Picketers to Stay Off Indian Land." This was a great title but not at all what the article was about!

It is a form of terrorism and blackmail for Chino to go into a place of business and tell the owners he will cause economic disaster even for the Apache Tribe itself, if people protest the MRS. It seems that the business people just shook in their boots and didn't let him know that they are not responsible for the actions of the general public.

How can Chino expect that just because someone owns a business that they are to be held responsible for the average Ruidoso citizen using his freedom of speech, even in protest?

It is true that no one should trespass and protest on the reservation. Chino owes the business people of Ruidoso an apology for his terrorist remarks.

The DOE found an easy mark on the reservation. Many generations ago land was bought for a hand full of beads from the Indian nations and now they want to sell their future generations for a few more dollars.

A plea to President Chino to stop the MRS

TO THE EDITOR:

(Open letter to Mr. Chino)

I address this letter to you in hopes that perhaps my voice combined with that of both local people and those who come here as tourists may somehow influence your decision as to whether or not you continue with your study on the MRS.

It is my hope that you will realize both the consequences and the danger of having such a thing placed here, or anywhere.

On the short term perhaps it might not affect you or your people to any great extent, the moneys that it would bring in would offset the decrease in the tourist trade. It would certainly be a blow to Ruidoso as I believe very few people would choose to move to a place with any such facility nearby and I myself would also be looking for another home, as would many other locals.

On the long term there most certainly looms the prospect of some untimely disaster. Nobody is certain as to how such materials can be safely stored, let alone for how long. At some point it seems inevitable that some of those materials would leak into the environment and make any place nearby uninhabitable. If it were possible to guarantee against any such thing happening, then why don't they keep these materials where they are being produced and why won't any of the states or their people welcome such a facility with its promise of great amounts of money?

It is my hope that you will realize that the long term dangers will certainly offset the benefits that you would receive upon accepting the governments offer. Why endanger the lives of not only your own people but those of countless others to store the waste product of something that we don't even benefit from?

Inn employee says nobody else speaks for him

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading Fredda Draper's letter, I feel compelled to speak out. I am employed at the Inn of the Mountain Gods as a security officer. I also teach a small Karate class in Ruidoso. Ninety-five percent of my students are Mescalero Apaches. And I am very proud of them. I am a white man, yet my ancestor was a seven-year-old Cherokee girl who walked the Trail of Tears. I say these things so that the contents of this letter may not be misunderstood as coming from a racist viewpoint.

Fredda Draper presumes to speak for some employees at the Inn about not shopping at certain businesses because of petitions or brochures protesting MRS. Who these employees are, I do not know. No one speaks for me. I think for myself. I do not agree with the MRS proposal.

Yet, when the threat of protest came, I stood ready to do my job and protect the Inn with everything I had, for violence and threats are not answers to problems.

When I see a petition, I see Americans' rights to speak up for themselves about real, genuine concerns on issues backed up by facts, not misinformation or hysteria. Rights that were paid dearly for by the lives of Indians and non-Indians. They did not pay the price so that many may use racism or insults to personally attack others.

Cheap, insulting poems, thinking for others without their permission, and threats of sanctions have no place for intelligent people concerned about their environment and their health.

MRS: how much money are we talking about?

TO THE EDITOR:

Gez Whial Miller Hudson says we'll "maybe" get 800 new jobs! "Perhaps" new schools. "What better way to have the federal government build you a regional." (Hear that, taxpayers?)

He failed to point out that what we really need in case of an "accident" will be a reliable alarm system, evacuation routes, and hospitals at the ready to treat radiation burns. And lots of bone marrow!

Is Pacific Nuclear going to make THAT MUCH MONEY?

Exploitation? Let's talk of hypocrisy

TO THE EDITOR:

Let's talk about exploitation! Let's talk about governments! Let's talk about religions! Let's talk about ideologies! Let's talk about the history of the world ... and let us also talk about hypocrisy!

For centuries the male ego ideologies of the world have engaged in the wholesale rape of women's minds to convince them that they are second class citizens, that their intuitive strengths are weakness and that their greatest use is to bear sons. To care for them, to teach them "Christian" principles, and to joyously send them off to kill each other and the creatures we share this earth with.

This is what I call exploitation! This rape of the mind is accomplished with words. Words like "Original Sin" and "Chosen People." Or words like "Divine Right of Kings" and "Superior Race." And of course let's not forget "Holy War" and "To Protect Our Way of Life."

A way of life that requires us to use a disproportionate amount of the world's resources and leave a large number of the world's population in poverty. Those we haven't killed off with our "Holy Wars."

This is what I call exploitation! Rather than call young people, who are exercising their right to express their opinions freely, exploited ... I think I shall reserve that word and use it the next time I read of the sympathy call by our president to the mother of some young man who has died in war. And since I know how sad the president and all those people who make money from wars are, while they are mourning on the golf course or on their yachts, I think I would also throw in the word ... Hypocrisy!

Trust me — I'm from the government...

TO THE EDITOR:

I, like many others, am very upset about the possibility that nuclear waste will be stored on or even near the Mescalero Apache Reservation, but probably the reason for my dismay is different than most.

I believe that the Apache tribes have been sorely used by the federal government. It is difficult to understand how the Apache nation can trust the government on an issue as lethal as nuclear waste.

They have been lied to and deceived for over a hundred years. The only justice that any American Indian has received has not been given to them, but fought hard for and won through the legal court system.

It is especially sad that the leader of the Apaches is either so naive or gullible that he is going to accept the waste of the "white eyes" on the tiny remnant of land left to his people. He should tell the government to put the waste on some of the huge pieces of land that were stolen from the Indians. It just seems like history repeating itself. Once again, the Indians are to be used for other's gain.

MRS consultants are corporate salesmen

TO THE EDITOR:

I respond to your story in the January 30 edition, "Consultants sing praises of MRS."

Miller Hudson, regardless of his corporate title, is a salesman. What he is selling, I, and most thinking people, don't buy. I am not willing to trade the good things we know we have for what he is selling.

I don't believe him. I resent him. I think he and his company are holding their breath, hoping Mr. Chino and the Mescalero Tribal Council will buy what they are selling. The U.S. government, through the Department of Energy, is certainly eager for the deal to be made. That makes me even more uneasy.

It was interesting that Pacific Nuclear admitted having been used in Russia and several iron curtain countries. This, in itself, is reason enough to be alarmed. The record of those countries on nuclear safety and the environment is well-known to be an ongoing disaster. Nuclear Pacific should be comfortable in this situation, because, like in Russia or other iron curtain countries, they are dealing with leaders with little or no restraints on their power and simple greed.

What a great climate for doing business, but is it good for anything or anyone else?

Let's talk about services leave MRS to leaders

TO THE EDITOR:

This is probably directed mostly to people who wish to retire here and those of us already retired here. Most of the talk around here now is about MRS, but I believe if left alone, our elected officials will do what they have to do or be on the outside looking in.

For us, I think the main concern is services. I am disturbed when walking almost anywhere, you are challenged by dogs, lots of dogs! I am disturbed when I continually have to call the Sanitation Department for garbage pickups or the Water Department to repair a leak we've found while walking.

I'm dismayed when they go to the trouble of putting a crosswalk in front of the post office and yellow curbs and never enforce it!

I am unhappy when good neighbors move away because they have been burglarized, one of them twice.

And to finish it off, it's frightening when a certain segment of a Motorcycle Club can "Tree a Town," with shootings, drunk driving and nude dancing in the streets.

So, come on down, up, or over! If enough people are of the same mind, there's still hope.

Voters expected better...

TO THE EDITOR:

(Open Letter to Mayor Alonso)

Dear Mr. Alonso:

How unfortunate that during the week of Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday we read about village councilor Stinson's racist remarks during a workshop session. Obviously Stinson did not expect his offensive words to go public the way they did.

If one were to resort to the same type of attitude he displayed, one might be tempted to refer to Stinson as, say, an "ignorant redneck" or this like. Rising above it was the correct thing to do; however, we should not ignore it and I believe it's time he left office. No one should be in public office, even the lowest one of village councilor, if he or she displays racist attitudes. I'm sure Stinson would even vote for David Duke if he had the opportunity.

I thought we were past the days of derogatory names for other races. When will people like him realize that we are all on this planet together? We've got more important issues to deal with (such as saving our environment) and we don't need racists fostering negative attitudes that keep people from working together.

Let's get this man booted out of public office immediately!

Citizen calls for village action on animal control

TO THE EDITOR:

Your January 20th editorial about dog control problems was right on target. My wife and I recently came here to decide if we should make this our long-term residence. While we have found many positive things, the considerable number of loose dogs are real negatives.

My wife, who loves to stroll along public roads and trails in what should be a peaceful mountain area, has been challenged by loose dogs to an extent that makes her fearful as she tries to enjoy the outdoors.

As for me, the many dogs that bark and bark for no good reason in our area are real irritants. They bark because other dogs bark, they bark at stray dogs within visual range, near or far, and at passersby and vehicles. The sound carries in this environment, and the tranquility that can and should exist is thereby marred.

Yes, dog problems here are a blight on this community.

While some dog owners may just be inconsiderate, I suspect that many are not aware of existing animal control laws. For example, how many don't know that it is unlawful for a person owning, harboring or having possession of any animal to cause or allow the animal to:

"Be beyond the boundaries of the premises of the animal's owner or keeper and not confined within a fence or wall or on a leash except such animals which are under the physical restraint and immediate control of the animal's owner or keeper and is on a secure leash no more than six (6) feet in length."

"...make excessive noise and thereby disturb the peace of others..."

My wife and I believe that people who want dogs should have them so long as they care for and prevent their animals from creating problems for other people.

It is truly unfortunate that law enforcement authorities, apparently with the tacit consent of village officials, have adopted their present "let it ride as long as we can" and "respond only if and when we get complaints" posture regarding animal control laws enforcement. They need to recognize just how bad the situation already is and actively undertake remedial actions without continued delay.

Chamber of Commerce prez explains resignation

TO THE EDITOR:

As many of you know, I have not been enthusiastic in my support for the Chamber of Commerce during this year as president. The reasons are many, but basically stem from the fact that I have a very different business, social and personal philosophy than does the executive director.

A year or so ago, the executive board went through an agonizing and soul searching meeting and voted 50/50 on the question to terminate the executive director. The then president broke the tie in favor of non-termination.

Following the vote, promises were made by the executive director and the board to work together to better the Chamber for its members and the community. The executive director vowed to act to improve those areas wherein his evaluation showed he was lacking. To date, I have seen neither. What I perceive is an executive board intentionally stacked to hamper and hinder my presidency and an executive director who continues in his old ways.

It is with some regret and with a great deal of relief, that a resigned both as president of the chamber and from the board of directors.

BLM land swap gains support of area residents

TO THE EDITOR:

I am only one of many Lincoln residents who would like to see the BLM acquire the 1400 acres in the Bonito Valley. Several people outside the Lincoln area seem to be suddenly interested in helping the county commissioners decide on what is best for us.

Unfortunately the county commissioners seem to be listening. I question some of the statements made at the last county commissioner's meeting. I wonder about the concern that the BLM will start condemning private property to enlarge its holdings. I can understand that concern, since the Atomic Energy Commission and the US Army took over private holdings for the White Sands Missile Range back in the 1940s. However, the BLM is not the AEC or the Army. I would like to see some documentation on how often the BLM has used its power to actually condemn any private property. I was married for 25 years to a BLM employee, and I cannot recall one instance where the BLM condemned any private lands. As for water rights, hey, folks, who was it who bought up all the water rights in the Bonito in the early 1900s and nearly destroyed this valley? It was the railroad, which was strictly private enterprise and at that time had the kind of money, power and influence that private developers have today.

What's left of existing water rights in this valley after being sold off by private individuals for years would be gone for any useful purpose with any intensive development of land. What good would your water rights do you then, when the water is gone, and who would you complain to? Where does this idea come from that your government is your worst enemy? The BLM may not be the ideal landholder, but I'd much rather deal with them than with a developer who cares nothing for our land, our history or the culture of this region. As a citizen I can complain to my congressman about actions of the federal government. What recourse do I have if a developer decides to put up condominiums or little one-half acre ranchettes up and down this valley?

On the important issue of the future of this fragile and unique valley, I would prefer to take my chances with the BLM any day.

National appointee commends Ruidoso Council

TO THE EDITOR:

Within a few hours of returning from a meeting of the National Commission on Wildfire Disasters in Washington, D.C., I learned that the Village of Ruidoso had passed an ordinance that will prohibit the construction of houses with wood-shingle roofs in the future.

I would like to commend that decision and suggest that the County Planning and Zoning commission at least recommend that homes built inn the wildland-urban interface areas have a nonflammable roof.

Over one hundred years of fire suppression and the resultant fuel-load buildup has greatly increased the exposure of rural homes to disastrous wildfires. Homes with wood-shingle roofs are certainly the most vulnerable.

I will get additional information to you soon explaining the Commission's plans to deal with this situation in the future.

Take the profit out of drugs and treat the abusers

TO THE EDITOR:

Sexual assault of a minor girl is a criminal offense. Now to answer that problem, some public schools are passing out condoms.

What does this tell you?

It tells me that sex attracts a lot of attention. When my daughter reaches mid-school she will no doubt be approached for sex by a high school boy armed with a condom and the subtle message from a public school board that protection is more important than morality or ethics.

I have attracted your attention and would like to express another pet peeve I have. The recent cosmetic arrest of a dozen or so people on drug charges is a crime in itself. The people we put in jail or prison would be better served under the care of a physician.

The arrests drive up prices, remove people from the drug market that are not local citizens and crowd our jails. Once the jails are overcrowded the real threat to society is released early to prey on the poor slob that sit back and let this happen.

We must face facts someday. This country is not in a recession but a depression. The drug war is a farce and the only major industry that is going to survive will be the lucrative drug trade and Congress knows this to be true. It's time we voted out the incumbent congressmen and elected people that do not have vested interest in special interest groups, included in that category are the drug lords.

Just think of the money that would be free for public programs once we put drug users under the care of doctors and not wardens. A simple prescription for a user and a simple prescription for the welfare of our country.

I know your reaction, and can tell you that crimes are committed by people that supply drugs without prescription and not by the average user. You or a co-worker might be using drugs presently and not suffering any noticeable effect at work or home. Take for example the athletes that use drugs and steroids, they function in society and earn enough money to maintain their habits.

Take the immense profit out of this industry and treat the person with the drug habit humanely and you will find that the great majority of these people would rather kick this habit under a doctors care and not cold turkey in some jail cell. It should be reserved for career criminals.

To Legislature: keep Agriculture Dept. in Cruces

TO THE EDITOR:

During the current 30-day fiscal session of the New Mexico Legislature, we will see another unwarranted attack on the people who produce our food and fiber. It will come in the form of a piece of legislation that seeks to take the director of the New Mexico Department of Agriculture away from the farmers and ranchers and throw that position into the political arena of Santa Fe.

This legislation is opposed by the overwhelming majority of farmers, ranchers and rural people in this state, which makes us wonder why someone would pursue a bill that serves to damage one of our state's leading industries. The politics of that aside, consider the fact that the New Mexico Department of Agriculture and its director are now under the New Mexico State University Board of Regents and the president of that institution. Its director is chosen by the NMSU president and regents, but also serves as a member of the Governor's cabinet, giving the chief executive complete input into the NMDA. The proposed legislation would move the New Mexico Secretary of Agriculture to Santa Fe, with the intention of making the position and the department another politicized agency, a long way from farmers and ranchers who rely on its many services.

There are many strong arguments against moving the NMDA Secretary from the state's land grant institution (NMSU) to Santa Fe. First and foremost is the fact that the NMDA is a lean, efficient machine in the governmental sense. The NMDA not only services its agricultural constituents well, but also administers some 30 laws for the state. And it does it with a minuscule staff in comparison to other areas of state government. In addition, the NMDA deeps its expenditures in line with the revenues, which is almost revolutionary in the realm of ever-growing government. You can be assured all that would change with the addition of the political baggage at the "merry round house."

The attempt to move the director of NMDA to Santa Fe is not in the best interests of our hard-working producers and rural residents. On behalf of the tens-of-thousands of ranchers, farmers, and small businesses who depend on the MNDNA, I urge you to call your state Senators and Representatives and relay strong opposition to this legislation.

Stop lawmakers from taxing non-profits

TO THE EDITOR:

The possibility of New Mexico taxing not for profit organizations is of great concern to the board of directors, members and friends of girl scouting in New Mexico. A tax would threaten the very existence of our programs in this state!

Girl scouting has a long and distinguished history. We teach girls to be contributing citizens—to make a commitment to their community. This is the opportunity for our elected representatives to show their commitment to the lives of girls and women of the State of New Mexico.

Again, thanks for your support and encouragement, fans and merchants.

The Plant Corner

Sally takes a little R&R across the world

DEAR READERS:

I am sincerely grateful to you for your generous words of appreciation for my plant column. I have written the Plant Corner column for The Ruidoso News since 1980, and have made many very dear, plant loving friends through my column.

In the 12 years I've worked for five or six editors at the News.

The best, by far, is our current editor, Frankie Jarrell. We always get the facts, regardless of what we want to read, the paper circulation has grown with Jarrell at the helm. Jarrell is a born leader with a nose for news and always fair. She is devoted to many community volunteer jobs, is dedicated to her church. Frankie is "Mom" of the year and her husband, Bud, always pours her catsup for her at lunch, that just about says it all about being a loved wife.

Frankie is a pleasure to work for and I do want to come back to my job when I have had some vacation time.

I have sold my Lincoln home and plan some vacation time in New Zealand, the "Garden Spot" of the world and in Houston with my precious new grandson.

I've not had a real vacation in more than five years and New Zealand is where I've always wanted to visit. I plan to take an apartment in Arrowtown, not far from Queenstown. It was Mark Twain, who in 1805 observed, "the people here are Scots, they stopped here, in Arrowtown, on their way to Heaven thinking they had arrived." I will be anxious to see for myself the beauty and warmth of New Zealand.

My apartment will have a sofa that makes into a bed and I'd love a visit. Frankie will have my address for you.

When I first came to Lincoln, my first thoughts were the same as those of Mark Twain about New Zealand. I was so sure in this beautiful village with the peaceful little river flowing through could only have peaceful, loving people, all living harmony, sharing the love of one another and being grateful to God we were all able to live in this, what I thought was a near perfect place.

So I was wrong. I had to learn, the hard way, there are a few bad apples in the Lincoln apple barrel the same as anywhere, but we will continue to pray for those sad few troubled makers that they too will learn to love one another and live together in peace.

Soon the Wortley Hotel will be open, serving delicious food, a great place to "meet and eat," and the beautiful Lincoln flowers will be in bloom and the many wonderful, loving people who live here will welcome you, as I have always done.

I shall return, so watch for my new plant column. And remember to save your questions.

Send questions to Sally Black, c/o The Ruidoso News, P.O. Box 128, Ruidoso, N.M. 88345.

Nunley speaks to Demo women

Lincoln County Democratic Women met at noon Tuesday and heard pharmacist L. Ray Nunley report on his appointment to the State Nursing Board.

Nunley reported on his first meeting with the board since his appointment by Governor Bruce King.

"Nursing is the backbone of the medical field," said Nunley. He said the meeting, which lasted several days, included 30 disciplinary hearings which had accumulated over a four-month period.

Five attorneys are assigned to the board, said Nunley. Four licenses were revoked as a result of the hearings.

Nunley was elected vice chairman of the board and asked to write a paper on the drugs that healthcare professionals generally abuse.

The board also established a new category for a non-nursing person called a medication aide. It is a two-year pilot program that will require the person achieving the title to have 30 hours of schooling and then 15 hours each year to keep this title.

Nunley said that nursing will continue to expand and take on a larger role in health care because nurse specialists are more available.

Nunley ended on a political note, saying that Democrats need to hear and respond. Politics are a lot like business.

"We must look to the future, not the past," said Nunley.

Also Tuesday, three new members were welcomed.

Jerry Shaw announced how her decision to run for another term on the Ruidoso Village Council was made after hearing a speech by National Committee Woman Mary Gayle Gwaltney at the last Democratic Women's meeting.

Gwaltney challenged women to take on leadership roles.

CeCe Griffin gave an update on upcoming candidates and presented petitions. She announced that the Democratic Party will meet at 6:30 p.m. March 13, at Cree Meadows.

Norma Falwell reports on the opening day of the legislature that was attended by a large group of Democratic women.

Because of the March 13 meeting and due to the fact that the next meeting fell on election day, March 3, the women will not meet in March.

"We are again fortunate to offer a wide variety of merchandise donated to us," said Person. "Clothing, jewelry, toys, ceramics, art work and so much more."

Participants may enjoy a cash bar and complimentary hors d'oeuvres.

At the conclusion of the Silent Auction, "we'll announce the winner of the season pass drawing. Ski Apache Resort again donated a full season pass for next year. It's fully transferable by the winner. The pass is valued at more than $500, and tickets are $2 each."

Monica Calderone, 24, is skiing on the mono-ski, one of Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association's newest equipment. She's participated in the program for 15 years.

Teams for next day's Businessperson's Handicapped Ski Race will be picked during the auction and may be purchased for $50 each.

Call 336-4416 to donate merchandise or to buy a ticket for the season pass drawing.

"Outriggers are forearm crutches with short skis on the bottom."

Business people interested in racing may call Terri Hemphill at 258-5559 to enter. Entry fee is $25. Ski Apache will provide a lift ticket.

Who benefits?

Proceeds from February's fund raisers further the work of Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association, a non-profit charitable organization that brings the joy of motion on snow to those who would not otherwise know it.

"Last year our staff taught more than 200 students to ski," said Person.

"They represented a wide variety of disabilities including the blind, partially paralyzed, amputee, developmentally disabled, paraplegic, cerebral palsied and others," she said.

This was done at little cost to the SAHSA participant.

"Our services — including instruction, specialized ski equipment and sometimes ski clothes and accessories — are free to our students. Ski Apache provides half-price daily lift tickets to those aged 19 and over, and complimentary tickets to those aged 18 and under," said Person.

For information on the SAHSA program, or to contribute, call 336-4416.

Nobody ever said, "Dare to be similar". Or, "Sameness is the spice of life". Yet, year after day, month after month, people eat the same boring burgers. Hey, wake up and smell the au jus. Or the cheddar, swiss and parmesan. Try one of Arby's French Dip or Triple Cheese Melt sandwiches, with a bag of french fries for a special price. They're 180° different from burgers. And different is good. Available for a limited time only.

WHATEVER YOUR NEWSPAPER SAYS, IT REPRESENTS FREEDOM

These sheets of inexpensive paper you are now looking at are among your most priceless possessions; not for their intrinsic value, but because of what they represent. In your hands at this moment is a fair, unbiased account of everything happening in your town, as well as in many other places. You will learn about government meetings, at which you are asked for your input. You can read letters from other citizens like yourself, and are given the opportunity to underscore or rebut them, as you can with the editorial comments. Your own club activities, fund-raising drives, etc., are publicized at your request. Most of all, you can thank the Lord for the freedom represented by everything you can read here, by attending the House of Worship of your choice; another freedom, listed here in your newspaper.
