Federal land boss is lost, found

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Caravans of pickup trucks bumped over the back roads between Lincoln and Sierra Blanca Regional Airport Tuesday in search of the elusive federal director of the Bureau of Land Management.

While they waited in the settlement of Lincoln, he was landing in an agency (BLM) aircraft at the airport.

When a small group left to check the airport, director Cy Jamison was touring a soggy tract of land along the Rio Bonito.

Some of the opponents of the BLM's proposed acquisition of 1,115 acres along the river claimed they had been told an open meeting with Jamison was scheduled in Lincoln that afternoon.

The time and place varied according to which BLM office had been contacted.

Others said the only meeting planned was a closed session with the president of the Lincoln County Historic Preservation Board, who favors the proposed swap of private for public land to protect the historic character of the valley.

In contrast to the inconsistent and seemingly evasive handling of the situation by some of his staff, Jamison himself presented an image of cooperative openness when the objectors finally met up with him at the airport about 3 p.m.

Crawling out of the front seat of a van flanked by two armed BLM officers, Jamison broke into a broad smile. One by one, he greeted placard-carrying protesters, shaking their hands and asking their names.

He told the group of about 30 opponents that it probably would be late November before the agency comes up with a definite response to the land parity issue raised by the Lincoln County Commission.

"Give me a break," he told those assembled. "I've been playing catch-up."

But he cautioned, "I don't guarantee what we're going to come back with is exactly what you want." Commissioners have said they want the BLM to sell some of the land it owns in the county to balance the private land it would be taking in the Rio Bonito exchange.

They contend federal and state agencies already own too much of the county. Because they don't pay property taxes, the ownership negatively impacts the county's property tax base and thrusts an unfair share of the cost of services onto the remaining taxpayers.

Rancher Duane Frost and others asked Jamison what the BLM has in mind for the 300 acres of water rights connected to the Rio Bonito land swap parcels.

When someone began to debate a detail, Jamison intervened.

"I think that's fair (question)," he said. "We'll argue that point later. This is their turn."

Then turning back to the questioners, he responded, "I've offered the water rights to Lincoln County."

He said that by late November, the agency should have laid out some plans for the Rio Bonito land. He should be able to make a commitment to the county not to change the land use and should have a package of land sale proposals he thinks are fair.

It was about the same speech he offered County Commission Chairman Stirling Spencer earlier in the day during a brief meeting in Roswell.

Rancher Jeanette Smoot said her family is concerned not only with this swap, but the government's attitude decades down the line.

"If you take this land, are you going to take more?" she asked. "Will we be inched out of our land."

Rancher Bill Hays, chairman of the county's agriculture and rural affairs committee, asked Jamison why the BLM doesn't sell more land instead of arranging exchanges.

"The Congress pushes exchanges," Jamison said. "We just Please see Lost, page 2A

Insurance costs ground windsurfers

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

An angry Ruidoso Village Councilor Ron Andrews condemned enormous insurance rates quoted to allow windsurfing on Grindstone Lake as "unrealistic hurdles" during Tuesday's Village Council meeting.

The Municipal League's Self Insurance Fund asked for a whopping $10-15,000 to insure Grindstone Lake for windsurfers and non-motorized boaters, plus other demands that would drive costs to the village above $100,000.

Some of those demands included a certified aquatic rescue team to be formed by the village, an attendant city employee to be on site during operating periods and he should be a certified lifeguard, a telephone booth and increasing the size of the parking lot.

"If there are rational reasons we can't overcome to allow petitioners the use of the lake, that's one thing," said Andrews. "I think we're getting some hurdles placed in our way, for what reason, I don't want to get into."

It's unfortunate, that they (Self Insurance Fund) aren't under the auspices of the insurance commission. If you were an insurance company and tried to do this, they'd take your license," Andrews said.

Andrews said some things didn't make sense. "If we add an activity to the lake, they won't insure it unless we close it off when it's not being used. If we don't add an activity to the lake, they will continue to insure it. I have a problem with that," Andrews said.

Village insurer Dave Parks said the Self Insurance Fund was created by the Legislature and given to the Municipal League as an adjunct to fund raising for their organization.

"I would say this is a quasi-insurance," Parks said. "Rather than a fully, free standing insurance company."

Andrews asked if they were subject to the rules and regulations to the state insurance commission.

"They are not subject to anything, sir," Parks responded. "They were created by the legislature and the insurance industry created the climate in the early part of the 1980's which made it necessary."

"Rates were going out of sight, and the governmental entity screamed and went to the legislature. The legislature created the New Mexico Self Insurance Fund."

"I'm not sure exactly what lobbying and who the players were that it wound up with the Municipal League, although it's not an unreasonable place to put it."

They handle the front of a lot of these claims, they do have re-insurance like the home insurance company for property coverage."

They have an advisory committee comprised of Governor appointed people and people from various elected bodies that sit on this committee."

Parks said that Gary Jackson's report indicated an Alamogordo representative on the insurance board asked, "What is that council thinking about, wanting to have windsurfing anyway?"

"It doesn't make any difference," Parks said. "They're an insurance company. Why do they tell you politically how to run your business?"

"The point I'm making if we were dealing totally with an insurance company, we could deal on a more rational basis."

Parks told of a consultant in Ruidoso that called for several of us presented bids," he said. "His (consultants) statement was if you don't present a bid from the self insurance fund, we'll get one direct from them and cut you agents out completely."

Parks said he submitted two bids, one from the self insurance fund and one from a regular insurance company.

"It is a unique situation and it is inconsistent," he said.

Parks said four years ago, the legislature created the Public School Insurance Authority and again exempted from any oversight from the department of insurance, or from even any specific committee in the legislature.

Mayor Victor Alonso summed up the different alternatives.

"We can do it for $50-60,000 one way, or we could say no, or we can explore and alternate that lease the recreation rights to an entity and let them be responsible and hold us harmless."

Windsurfer Lisa Dinkins suggested a permit be created to hold the village harmless and indemnify the village against liability.

Dinkins said the windsurfing club could obtain general liability insurance that would also make the village as an additional insured.

Dinkins told of an industrial airpark in New Mexico that has a group that runs gliders in the park.

"They have liability insurance through their Please see Insurance, page 2A

Nuke-waste study continues

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Wyoming has dropped out as a candidate for a temporary nuclear storage site leaving the Mescalero Apaches near the top in the federal government's quest.

Mike Sullivan, Governor of Wyoming, wrote the Fremont County Commissioners that he was vetoing Phase II of the Monitored Retrievable Storage (MRS) facility study in that state.

"For better or for worse, the process Congress has now adopted places the decision making authority to halt this process with the Governor," Sullivan wrote. "In what I believe to be the interest of Wyoming, I chose to make the decision at this time."

But while others are backing off from the project to store spent nuclear power plant fuel rods, the Mescaleros are charging ahead.

The Tribal Council recently announced it is forming a Citizens Advisory Committee.

"The Mescalero Tribal Council has not decided that the MRS is a good idea, but we have learned enough to know we should take a longer look at the project," said Fred Peso, Tribal secretary and MRS project manager.

"It appears an MRS can be built and operated safely. And it appears there could be significant economic benefits for our people. But many questions still have to be answered before the council would recommend the siting or an MRS. Many of those questions include impacts on our friends and neighbors," he said.

To date, $9,000 remains as cash on hand from the $100,000 Phase I grant and $200,000 Phase 2A grant.

The expenditures generally were divided between consultants and tribal employees.

Pacific Nuclear received $15,000 per month for such items as salaries, travel and expenses for 10 months, or about $150,000.

The public relations firm of Holt, Ross and Yulish received $5,000 per month for salaries and a clipping services. Those 10 months totaled $50,000 in public relations money.

Former state senator Maurice Hobson, Inter-Governmental Coordination and Communication, received $13,500 in grant money.

Consultant expenditures totaled about $213,500. Tribal expenses totaled about $77,500.

Council per diem costs were about $11,000 and project travel, $39,000. Miscellaneous items such as phone, office supplies, utilities, printing and the establishment of an information center all totaled $18,000.

Peso said the MRS would be one of the largest construction projects ever undertaken in southeastern New Mexico and likely would become the largest economic generator in the region.

The issues of safety, environmental protection, infrastructure demands and economic restructuring, which the Mescalero Apache Tribal Council has been weighing, also will face neighboring communities, according to Peso.

At Tuesday's Ruidoso village council meeting, Mayor Victor Alonso, although not approving of the MRS, decided to keep an open mind and open communication by appointing three members to the tribe's citizens advisory committee.

Over a vocal protest by one anti-MRS activist, the rest of the council agreed that keeping the lines of communication open is the best route for the village.

Former Nuclear Pacific consultant Miller Hudson, who now works for the tribe, is convinced the MRS could have an economic impact of a high dollar ticket like the super collider.

Hudson looks on the MRS as the enormous economic impact not likely to come along again in this area and deserving an "open mind" approach.

"These are high tech jobs, lots of money involved," Hudson said. "And the politics of the nation are such that the big guys usually get those high tech jobs and a state like New Mexico gets the MRS's and WIPPs (Waste Isolation Pilot Program)."

Hudson said careful planning and negotiation could make the package attractive enough to ensure the economy of the area for the Please see Nuke, page 2A

Wednesday's high.....	77
Thursday's low.....	44
Thursday's predicted high.....	near 70
Friday's predicted low.....	near 40
Friday's predicted high.....	middle 70s

According to Ruidoso's meteorologist, Bill Hostetter, the weather for today will be partly cloudy by afternoon with a chance of a few scattered light showers. For tonight, it will be fair and cool. Friday will be fair to partly cloudy and a little warmer with isolated afternoon thundershowers.

Precipitation probabilities are 20 percent today, 5 percent tonight and 10 percent Friday.

Precipitation totals: total for the month to date is 3.10 inches or .062 below normal; total for the year to date is 17.70 inches or 2.66 inches above normal.

The outlook for Saturday through Monday: Chance of daily afternoon thundershowers with temperatures near the seasonal low of 44 degrees and high of 78 degrees.

From The Almanac: On August 27, 1989, Ruidoso measured 2.50 inches of rainfall in the 24-hour period, ending at 11:15 a.m.

Aspen parade will be seasoned just right

The season is almost here for the annual AspenFest parade but get your ideas together now if you want a chance to win the new traveling trophy.

The AspenFest parade will be October 3 and will travel from the intersection of Sudderth and Mechem Drive to the parking lot at Gateway Church of Christ, 415 Sudderth Drive. The best overall float will receive an AspenFest traveling trophy to display until next year's competition. The winner will also get a ribbon to keep, and the name will be inscribed on the trophy.

The theme of this year's parade is "Ruidoso—Seasoned Just Right," which should give people plenty of ideas to work from. The deadline to enter the parade is September 30. The cost for political or commercial floats is $50 and for non-profit groups it is $25. Political or commercial non-floats will be charged $35 and all others will pay a fee of $10. The first place float will win $100 and second place will get $50. The third place winner will receive $25.

No one can throw candy, gum or any other items from the floats, but adult outriders can hand it to children along the route. Kids can enter their decorated bikes or pets in a parade too, and prizes will be awarded to these entrants in grades K-6.

Entry forms have been sent out to chamber of commerce members and businesses, but if you did not get one stop by the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce office to enter or call the office at 257-7395.

did one in Nevada with 36,000 acres in and out. Most people up there were madder than heck to start with."

Jamison said one of the problems in trying to sell isolated parcels of BLM land is that when it gets down to hard cash, many people who say they will buy, back away.

With that, he headed into the airport lobby to talk with advocates of the exchange including preservation board president Cleis Jordan, board member David Lee, and Max Kiehne, one of the principals in the Lincoln Valley Land Company.

That firm acquired property along the Rio Bonito in a bankruptcy action. The owners approached the BLM about swapping up to 5,000 acres for about 36,000 acres of isolated BLM tracts across the state. The company will earn its profit from the sale of that acquired public land.

Lee told Jamison he was concerned about the integrity of the historic valley along the river and surrounding the town of Lincoln.

"I'm concerned about water rights, the density factor and sewage (running into the stream system)," Lee said. "There's not 50 acres between the Rio Bonito bridge and the town of Lincoln that anything can survive on but ironweed."

"It's been raped, abused, overgrazed and ruined. I hope the BLM completes the exchange and takes care of the land."

Jamison didn't say much.

"I'll be up front and honest with you," he told the eight proponents, as an edgy crowd of opponents listened. "There's a lot of misinformation floating around and I wanted to come out and see."

He told of his meeting that morning with Spencer and the four things he would try to accomplish.

"I appreciate your civility and candor and I have tried to be the same in return," he said. "And now I'm getting out while the getting's good."

BUMP WOODARD

Some of the placards carried by protesters Tuesday called for the resignation of State BLM director Larry Woodard.

The New Mexico State Council of People for the West has sent a resolution and letter to Jamison asking for the same thing.

"As can be seen from the resolution, Mr. Woodard has not tried to coordinate, cooperate, or consult with local government officials or local citizens in making and adopting rules and regulations that have had, or will have, profound impact on the economic, cultural and heritage of the state," the council president Lewis Derrick wrote in his cover letter with the resolution.

"Mr. Woodard assumes that working for the federal government gives him the right to run rough shod over any citizen that does not share his personal point of view, and also the right to usurp the rights of the citizens of New Mexico by changing the water laws of the state through his agency's actions instead of through the State Legislature."

"Mr. Woodard is not a credit to his profession and needs to be relieved of his duties."

TO MEET OR NOT TO MEET

Earlier in the day preservation board president Jordan had told The News she had no knowledge of a meeting with Jamison at her business or elsewhere.

But BLM Roswell resource management director Sandra Allen told The News Jordan had called and asked to meet with Jamison on his swing through southeast New Mexico.

"No, there was never to be a (general) meeting," Allen said. "Cy was coming out on other business and we set up a meeting with him to come up and see the area and talk to (Mrs. Jordan) one-on-one at her request."

Howard Parman, community relations officer for the BLM in Roswell, took the blame for the deception.

"I told her (Mrs. Jordan) to keep (the meeting) quiet," he said. "When you called, she didn't know what to say. It put her in a bad position and it was my fault. She's worried about her credibility."

County manager Andy Wynham said a few weeks ago he received calls from commissioners Monroy Montes and Spencer about rumors of a meeting in Lincoln.

"They were upset because we didn't know anything about it," he told The News.

On August 18, county attorney J. Robert Beauvais called Wynham to pass along information from Roswell District BLM director Leslie Cone. He had been told a meeting was set for August 25 at the Jordan business, Casa de Patron, and that commissioners were expected to be there as well as proponents.

"I commented that if that was so, someone should have called to advise us," Wynham said. "About a half hour later, Cone called and suggested we send a representative to the meeting. I told them it was late notice and we had other commitments."

Wynham and Spencer were scheduled to appear as part of a program in Carlsbad that day.

Wynham called BLM state director Larry Woodard.

"I said I can't believe they set a meeting and as an after thought scheduled us," Wynham said. "I asked why they were meeting with (proponents). I pushed for a meeting with Jamison."

Wynham said Cone called back with the suggestion for an "on-the-run" morning meeting in Roswell Tuesday between Spencer and Jamison.

"But Monday, we kept getting calls (about a meeting in Lincoln)," Wynham said. "Apparently, they (BLM) didn't want the public there."

Different times and places were given out to residents who wanted to attend, the opponents said.

"I called Roswell and confirmed the meeting still was at Casa de Patron and told them to let us know of any change because a commissioner might be coming," Wynham said. "We never heard from them again."

Jordan was among the proponents waiting for Jamison at the airport before opponents received word he would not be stopping in Lincoln.

Spencer told The News he was a little miffed earlier in the day when Jamison finally breezed in late to their scheduled meeting, apologized and said he only had a few minutes to talk.

"He grabs me into a corner to talk," Spencer said. "He said he is getting a lot of pressure to go forward on the swap. I told him we can't move on the land parity issue and he should put something in front of us quickly."

"He said he will hold off until late November. During that time, his special assistant will come to Lincoln County and try to put together some guarantees."

"He seemed like a man to believe, but he is getting enormous pressure from the people who stand to make money on the deal, from our Congressional delegation and from Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan."

Spencer said the late November timing probably also relates to elections that will seat some new commissioners and expand the county commission from three to five members. The Republican Party also could be ousted from the White House, which probably would mean someone new at the helm of the BLM.

"He changed once already," Spencer said of Jamison, noting a previous reversal of position. "I want to believe him, but I'm not wet behind the ears anymore and the political pressure is heavy."

"Some people are telling me the exchange is going to happen November 1, and the agency is just going to run over us. If they do, they'll have an injunction lying at their feet."

The way some BLM staff members approached the Jamison tour and meeting with Jordan, only further cemented the impression of opponents that the agency is not forthright and can't be trusted, according to the ranchers who first chased rumors and then Jamison across the countryside.

"There already is talk about the agency circumventing and lacking openness," said County Commissioner Bill Elliott, who previously voted for the swap.

County Commissioner Monroy Montes and Elliott Monday said they were upset to hear Jamison might meet privately with proponents and shut out opponents.

"I think anything Cy Jamison or the BLM have to say about the transaction should be communicated with the commissioners," Montes said. "I heard about the meeting second hand and I don't appreciate it. I think in fairness to the commission, someone should be there to hear and report."

Elliott said, "I think (someone) should raise hell if they try to close a meeting. Everything should be out in the open."

Spencer said what bothers him is that the people who support the swap seem to have no difficulty getting access to Jamison and Lujan.

"Yet we're the people they're supposed to be dealing with and we can't even get 10 minutes with him," Spencer said.

Jamison told supporters and opponents Tuesday the main thrust of his trip to Lincoln County was sightseeing.

"It was nothing official," he said to the crowd surrounding him in the airport lobby. "Does this look like a private meeting?"

Jamison faces off with picketers at the regional airport where he flew in Tuesday.

national soaring foundation with the municipality as an additional insured," she said.

She said the half-million dollar policy cost about $300 to $400 dollars a year.

"If people like that can get insurance, and people that hang glide or hot air balloon, I don't understand why they are trying to make this so difficult, because nobody that I have ever heard of has gotten hurt by windsurfing around here."

"You can skin your knee or something," she said.

The council examined every possible alternative for over an hour in an attempt to push windsurfing, while keeping costs within reason.

"I've been brought back full circle to the fact that we should administer it, we should control it, we should let them windsurf, let them boat, let them fish. We should be responsible," Alonso said.

The mayors comment drew a large applause from the audience.

The council recommended that Parks and the windsurfers working with Parks, search for a better insurance policy and creative ways to allow windsurfing and non-motorized boating.

Village manager Ron Wicker said the village recently sought proposals for concessions at the Civic Events Center and received no bids, although 50 to 60 request for proposals (RFP) were sent.

Wicker said the sizable capital outlay and the short contract term didn't allow time to recoup any investment.

The council discussed ways to allow service organizations to cater their own events.

Andrews said he was concerned that to many clubs, their own catering was a major source of income.

Wicker suggested a way of determining the caterer may be the difference in a sit down dinner.

Andrews made a motion to resubmit another RFP with reduced guidelines.

Councilor J.D. James urged that the RFP be kept "short and to the point."

In other business, the council:

—Told Wyatt Sparks that the council could not waive the 50 cents per square foot for his applicant, Sue Cartledge, to vacate the right of way containing 4,080 square feet on East Brady Canyon Road.

—Approved a proposed police promotional procedure allowing public input (Resolution 92-16).

—Appointed Marcia Grover to the Parks and Recreation Committee; Rick Evans and Dan Swearingin to work with Planning and Zoning on banners; Bill Karn, Bob Walters and Connie Kumler for the MRS Mescalero Committee.

—Passed a consent item for a lease agreement with administrative offices of courts.

—Resolved a complicated error involving White Mountain Search and Rescue and village insurance coverage of the rescue team. The matter is to be resolved through an agreement with village insurer Dave Parks and service to the community by White Mountain.

—Councilor Barbara Duff said she was confused at the last council meeting's public hearing regarding Councilor Andrews' property and took it off the table for discussion.

Andrews said he requests that the property owners within 100 feet be notified by mail of the new hearing.

Andrews seemed to defuse prior controversy by telling the council he did not want to increase the density of the 5-acre tract. He expressed a willingness to put a restrictive covenant against the property confining the tract to five lots. His apparent concern is to make two of the five lots, 3/4 of an acre each.

The council approved a new public hearing for September 29.

future.

"Why don't we say that one of the things we want is the spaceport (construction project) and to approve that in a negotiated deal to Congress," he said.

"That's the kind of opportunity that is there for the state."

New Mexico is considered in the driver's seat for a proposed spaceport for a reusable rocket that would send packages to and from space within hours or minutes, project supporters say.

But a better offer could draw the permanent spaceport outside the state, according to Ron Spain, project director for the McDonnell Douglas Corp.

New Mexico legislators have been urged to finance a state space office next year that would cost between $300,000 and $500,000.

Hudson said another legitimate concern about the MRS project is terrorism.

"It's one thing that you have to think about," he said. "We've already talked to Otero County about a provision that says as long as the MRS is located on Mescalero, we want Hollaman Air Force Base to remain open."

"In other words, we want a military presence in the county near the facility. It would be nice if New Mexico didn't have to fight (the possibility of) Holloman closing every two or three years."

"These are the kinds of things you can go out and work for," Hudson said. "And it doesn't cost Congress a nickel."

The federal nuclear negotiator has told all applicants he wants an environmental cleanup component as part of the agreement.

Hudson said in exchange for accepting the responsibility of overseeing the MRS for 40 years, the state that is hosting it should have an opportunity to clean up any Superfund hazardous waste sites they have around the state.

"There's over a hundred million dollars of unfunded uranium mine cleanup in New Mexico," Hudson said. "Unless a project like this comes along, that will remain unfunded for a very long time."

"What if we want $10-million a year for 15 years to give to the state of New Mexico to clean up all the uranium sites. The negotiator's office is tickled pink with that."

"Their response is, that is exactly the type of thing we would like to see done. We think Congress would like to see that. And it extends benefits statewide."

"There's kind of a justice to that. New Mexico absorbed the damage when it was taken from the ground, now that we're getting ready to get rid of it, we can clean that part up."

"At a Colorado meeting of the Council of Energy Resource Tribes, one of the questions was how much money can you ask for?"

"It's like tax money, but it's really being contributed by the utilities. Hudson said nuclear power plant representatives indicated they wouldn't flinch at giving $50-million dollars a year."

The current figure is $10-million a year, but that is 15 years old, he pointed out.

The money could be used to support education and road infrastructure, he said.

The tribe would like to expand the ski area it operates, Hudson said.

"They've wanted to for some time, but (they've been) stymied by the U.S. Forest Service, because they don't want the ski area expanded until they get a road and who's going to pay for the road," he said.

"One of the things the tribe is going to ask for is money to build a new road and take title to the base area for future development. That's the kind of thinking ahead. There's an opportunity here to do that type of thinking, but we can't get anybody to listen long enough to know that this is possible."

During a meeting with Department of Energy (DOE) representatives in Washington D.C., the tribe was assured the MRS would be for storage only, Hudson said.

"Any packaging would be done at the reactor area," he said. "If you want to reconsolidate this stuff or repack it before you bury it, do it at the reactor before you send it to us. Or do it at Yucca Mountain when you get it there (for permanent storage)."

"We're not doing hot cell fuel handling operations at the Mescalero MRS."

"And frankly, the DOE didn't like to hear that. Because they would like to have what works best for them. But the truth is, as you'll begin to see in this process, they're not going to get a lot of choices."

The tribe also wants assurances that if a permanent storage site project falls through at Yucca Mountain in Nevada, that New Mexico will not be asked to become the permanent site.

"No one knows whether or not Yucca mountain will get built or not," Hudson said. "I wouldn't put 25 cents on it. It's got so many problems with that site."

"There's going to be a huge temptation in four or five years to throw this high level stuff in a hole over by WIPP next to the low level stuff in Carlsbad."

"There's going to be tremendous pressure to do that if they can't make Yucca Mountain fly, because they've got to start all over again to get a repository. And we know DOE doesn't do this type of thing."

"I think without that guarantee, you're going to see New Mexico fight it down somewhere."

Hudson said, "I've always told the council, even if we get to the point of negotiating an agreement, we finally get a package with all the bells and whistles on it, the negotiator agrees to it, the tribe agrees to it, and we send it to Congress, we only have a 50-50 chance of getting it through Congress."

"I believe the price tag is going to be damn high and it ought to be. You shouldn't take this thing for just 500-600 jobs and if you can't permanently restructure your economy in a way that's going to create jobs, not for 40 years, but the next 100 years."

"If other companies see long term economic stability in the area, they may move to the area," he said.

Hudson said he was upset last October when local officials reacted instantaneously and negatively to the announcement of the study.

"The thing that made me the maddest was when we made the announcement, within three days we visited every one of the local governments. We said, this is going to be scary, you're going to take a lot of local heat and pressure, but before you do anything, if you need more information call us back and we'll try to explain."

"Hell, our chairs were still warm when Ruidoso passed a resolution saying they were opposed. We were barely out the village council door. "The Mescaleros know this thing is dangerous. They don't have the slightest illusion that they're manufacturing dolls. They are taking the most dangerous substance known to man and they're going to hold it for 40 years."

"I can guarantee you before they sign off on that they're going to be (covered)."

Peso on Tuesday sent out a news release saying that the Mescalero share many of the concerns raised by Governor Sullivan in Wyoming.

He said, "Unless the Mescalero Tribal Council is fully satisfied with the assurances it receives from the federal government regarding questions about the permanence, control and safety of an MRS facility; the tribe will also terminate its involvement in the siting process."

Council calls special meeting to settle lodgers tax dispute

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A dispute over authority triggered the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce decision to drop a $6,000 relocation advertising campaign from its budget.

Tuesday, Ruidoso council members wanted to know why.

Chamber director Joan Bailey reluctantly pointed to a disagreement with the chairman of the Lodgers Tax Advisory Board.

During the last lodgers meeting, the battle between chairman Jay Francis and Bailey picked up where it left off the month before.

Bailey had submitted a list of budget items to the committee for approval that included $6,000 in relocation money, advertising money for retirees or young families to move to Ruidoso.

Francis, who works for his father-in-law who owns Swiss Chalet Motel, bucked the chamber's relocation funding as he did the month before.

At that meeting, Bailey informed Francis that it was his job only to see that money was spent according to law. She said it was the council's job, not the lodgers tax board, to critique the chamber's advertising program.

At one time, Francis and the lodgers tax committee had more authority in dictate advertising buys for the chamber.

But when the council decided to drop the Regional Advertising Board, they also voted to allow the chamber to direct its own advertising program.

Apparently, Francis is not willing to follow the new dictates of the village council and continues to direct Bailey and her chamber advertising committee on how to spend money from the chamber budget.

Bailey, however, is not the type of woman who can be intimidated and resubmitted the line item last week.

Francis again rejected the proposal for money that would allow advertising for families to live in Ruidoso.

Bailey told Francis that the correct platform to discuss whether or not ads to bring families to Ruidoso is legitimate should be brought before the council.

"I don't think it's a matter of debate (sic)," said Francis. "If we don't have any say so over this thing, I don't see any reason to bring this in front of us any more."

Board member Patricia Espinosa expressed a desire for something other than a unilateral decision. She said she thought the committee should have a clear picture of its legitimacy and then "vote as a committee what we want to recommend to the council."

Francis has said lodgers tax money is for the purpose of visitation and overnight stay, although lodgers are only the collectors of the tax.

Francis scoffed at Bailey when she said The Ruidoso News had printed a portion of the ordinance dealing with economic development.

He shuffled through his papers, but could not find anything sanctioning economic development use from lodgers tax.

Lodgers tax adviser Tammie Maddox read him Ruidoso's Resolution 91-27 regarding lodgers tax, which states the purpose is "to assist and encourage marketing and advertising of our village that promotes tourism, travel and economic development."

Bailey told Francis that he was at the last council meeting when the subject was raised and she reminded him the council was supportive.

"Whether you choose to see it or not is up to you, I'm going to propose it and you can be there to share the presentation," she told Francis.

Speaking for the board at the last meeting and preparing to make a motion, Francis said, "I do not approve of the relocation expenses of $6,000 coming from lodgers tax money. I would approve of everything up to that, but not that $6,000."

After much arguing back and forth, Maddox suggested that the $6,000 be taken off the motion in order for the meeting to proceed.

She said the budgeted item was targeted for the spring of the year and would have adequate time to be brought up again.

Bailey, not wanting to disturb the rest of her program, allowed the item to be dropped.

Tuesday, Bailey said the matter had become too personal, but she vowed to bring the item up at the next council meeting.

Councilor J.D. James said the conflict should be discussed, but he didn't want a workshop.

"I want a special meeting," he said. "Where we can make decisions, with the lodgers tax and the chamber."

James said the matter was "out of hand."

Shaw agreed. "We should get this cleared," she said.

Maddox requested the council schedule the special meeting.

The council voted to approve a $13,400 request from Bailey for advertising. The $6,000 was not included.

The meeting between the council, chamber and lodgers tax was scheduled for 3 p.m. on Thursday, September 10, at village hall.

New Mexico Masons open exhibit in Lincoln County Courthouse

by ROSALIE DUNLAP
Special to The News

The grand opening for the Lincoln Masonic Traveling Lodge display was conducted Saturday in the Lincoln park and Lincoln County Courthouse.

The opening was under the leadership of Ralph Dunlap and members of the Carrizozo Lodge #41, along with John Tinker and Tom Capperton of the New Mexico State Monument Division of the Museum of New Mexico.

Following the welcome by Carrizozo Lodge #41 Worshipful Master Woody Schlegel, Ralph Dunlap introduced the guests and speakers B. Mac Page, Grand Master of New Mexico Masonic Lodge and Tom Capperton, director of New Mexico State Monuments Division of the Museum of New Mexico.

A beautiful flag ceremony was presented by the Spirit of '76, National Sojourners, Inc. The ceremony began with the first flag of 13 stripes and the Union Jack in the upper left corner. After the flag had 15 stripes and 15 stars (which replaced the Union Jack) Congress decreed that the flag have 13 stripes for the original colonies and a star for each state.

This meant that the last red and white stripes had to be removed.

The Sojourners then named each state as they joined the union and a star was placed on the flag. A 25-star flag presented by the Sojourners of New Mexico, was then carried to the reason display on the second story of the Lincoln Courthouse Museum.

The ribbon cutting was officiated by B. Mac Page, Grand Master of Clovis and Tom Capperton of Santa Fe.

Following the flag ceremony, everyone enjoyed a delicious barbecue by Wesley Lindsay and Mike Shivers of Carrizozo Lodge #41.

The 150 Masons and guests then visited friends, museums and the new Masonic display.

Herman Weisner, who was to present a paper on "Masons of Lincoln County," was unable to attend due to ill health. Ralph Dunlap read Weisner's paper. A brief introduction, "What Masons Are," was followed by the history of the early Masons influence on the governments of New Mexico and especially Lincoln County.

Furnishing for the display were donated by the following lodges: Carrizozo Lodge #41; Chapman Lodge #2, Las Vegas (originally from Fort Union); Grand Lodge of Albuquerque; Kit Carson Lodge 447, Albuquerque; Liberty Lodge 31, Santa Rosa; Mountaintop Daylight Lodge, Timberon; Tularosa Lodge #49; and York Rites, Roswell.

Due to the threatening weather, the Carrizozo Lodge #41 held its monthly meeting in the Community Church at 3 p.m.

New soccer program starts season at Gadsden

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

With three scrimmage games under their belts, players for the new Ruidoso High School soccer team are ready to start the regular season on Saturday.

Coach Dean Hood said he was quite pleased at the performance of the team in Alamogordo on Saturday, although there are a few things the team needs to work on. The Warriors played the Alamogordo junior varsity in the first game of the round-robin event and lost 1-0. In the second round the team made an incredible stand against La Cueva J.V., which ended in a 1-1 tie. La Cueva, of Albuquerque, was made up of all juniors and finished the tournament with two wins and one tie.

In the third game the team kept it close against Sandia J.V. until late in the game, but lost 3-1. Hood and La Cueva and Sandia have two of the top soccer programs in the state so it was exciting that the Warriors were able to compete so well against them. He said La Cueva will probably be the toughest team they see all season.

"The fact that we were so competitive was a big boost to the kids. They really enjoyed playing and that's what it is all about," Hood said.

The first regular season game for the Warriors will be Saturday at Gadsden, and the players are set to take the field after such a good showing in the scrimmage in Alamogordo. Hood said Gadsden is also going through the same process as Ruidoso to form a high school soccer team, as is Oñate. The Warriors' other opponents, Las Cruces, Mayfield, Alamogordo and Carlsbad already have an established varsity and junior varsity program.

Roy Seay is assistant coach for the team. Last year Seay was the head coach of a 19-and-under league team.

About 15 kids are out for the team, which is in its first year as a high school program. This year's team has five seniors, two juniors, and one sophomore as well as seven freshmen who are fresh out of the 14-and-under league team that initiated the high school program. Three of the freshmen have also participated on state cup teams in the past two years. Although the team won't be eligible for any post season play, the players are still very competitive in games and practice, Hood said.

"Practices have gone quite well, and the kids have a good attitude. They are really putting a lot into it," he said.

Hood said several players have taken the lead in pulling the team together. Walberto Murillo has been an inspiration to the younger players and has exceptional soccer skills, he said. Matt Harshey is one of the best goalies in the southern part of the state and is phenomenal, Hood said.

Some of the older players have competed on a consistent team since they were in the 14-and-under league, he said.

"It is surprising that the older kids are as competitive as they are against these kids who have been playing soccer for seven or eight months a year for the past few years," Hood said.

The team has been practicing at the White Mountain Sports Complex and the high school practice field, but the squad will play its games at W.D. Horton Stadium. A group that includes volunteers from the Lincoln County Soccer League and others interested in the soccer program have been working on the White Mountain Sports Complex all summer, but it still has some rough spots. Hood said they are still installing a sprinkler system and fencing around the area, and the entire project probably won't be complete until next summer.

Hood said he hopes with a good season they will get others interested in the soccer program, which will help them rebuild the feeder program that brings the kids into the high school. He said the team is going to be competitive this year and that is the way he wants it to be. He said he would like to have the team play this way for two years before beginning play in the New Mexico Activities Association, but they may begin sooner.

The first home game of the season will be on September 12 against Las Cruces High and Hood encourages everyone to come out to watch a new sport.

Casey Ward (in back) goes on defense in a scrimmage game in Alamogordo on Saturday. The new team did well against tough competition from J.V. teams from Alamogordo and Albuquerque and is ready to begin the regular season on Saturday.

The Warrior defense gang tackles a Tucumcari Rattler in a pre-season scrimmage there Friday night. The scrimmage helped the team and coaches gear-up for the regular season, which begins Friday at W.D. Horton Stadium against Artesia.

Warriors tackle Bulldogs in season-opener

Dig out your stadium chair, find that blue and gold sweatshirt and be ready to cheer on the Ruidoso Warrior football team Friday night in the first game of the season.

Kick-off will be at 7:30 p.m. at W.D. Horton Stadium, but you better get there early to get a good seat when the Warriors take the field against the Artesia Bulldogs.

"Our kids are really excited about playing Artesia. Monday and Tuesday we had the best practices of the year. We will be ready to play," Coach Mike Gaston said.

The team is coming off a good scrimmage against Tucumcari last Friday, he said.

"They saw that they could play

Friday night, but there are a few things that they need to iron out," Gaston said.

Junior Jimmy Varnadore, who was to play as linebacker, tight end for the team, cracked a fibula and will be out for four to six weeks. Otherwise the team came out real healthy, he said.

Artesia, though, will be a tough team to tackle. Gaston describes them as a typical powerhouse Artesia team. They have a real strong defense and a great running back. The main goal of the Warriors Friday night will be to stop Artesia's running game and make sure no long passes slip by the defense. Gaston said the Bulldogs have a junior at quarterback that can really keep the offense going.

The key for the Warrior offense will be to make the first downs and keep the Artesia defense under control. Sophomore quarterback John Echols has severely sprained his thumb, so Gaston said they will be alternating Echols and junior Victor Cocchiola in the position through the first half, then evaluate the situation. They may decide to go with one or the other or stick with alternating them through the second half, he said.

Gaston said Echols executed well in the scrimmage and did an outstanding job of marching them down the field, into the wind, with just two minutes left. The team still needs to work on protecting the quarterback to give him time to do his job, he said.

Before heading the stadium, stop at the middle school cafeteria for an Italian dinner sponsored by the junior class and the cheerleaders. They will be serving the meal from 4 to 7 p.m. and advanced tickets are $4 for adults and $2.50 for children. The tickets are available from Karen Morris at Ruidoso State Bank or at the high school office.

If you just can't get enough football on Friday night, come by the stadium at 10 a.m. Saturday to see the upcoming Warrior players.

KEEP THE PRESSURE

Like a pressure cooker, your car's cooling system is pressurized to keep the boiling point at a temperature to prevent overheating. When pressure is lost because of a leak in the system, the boiling point drops and the engine overheats. CAUTION: Sudden release of pressure, such as removing the pressure cap from a hot engine, can cause a blast of superheated steam. Someone could be scalded! For cooling system efficiency, be sure pressure cap is OK...for safety do not remove the radiator cap from an overhated cooling system until pressure has been released.

Get ready for little league too

Parents and volunteers who are interested in the little league football program will meet for an organizational meeting tonight at 8 p.m. at the Texas-New Mexico Public Power building. The program is for children ages eight to 12 years old and the meeting will be to determine interest in the program. The children will sign-up for the program from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at the middle school gymnasium. Participants must bring their birth certificates, and the fee for the event is $30. The fee provides the players with everything they need to play with and also insurance while playing. The first game will be on September 19 and following games will be on Saturdays and Wednesdays. Hoyt Graham, organizer of the program this year, said they hope to play the Super Bowl on October 24 after the teams play eight games. The program still needs coaches and referees to help make it successful. For more information parents may call Graham at 257-5297.

Gymnastic classes begin soon

The Ruidoso Gymnastics program will begin classes on Monday for boys and girls at every skill level. The cost for the program will be $12 for Jelly Beans, who meet one time a week; $16 for tots through kindergarten for one time a week and $25 for those who meet twice a week; $20 for six-year-olds and up for one time a week and $35 for that age for two times a week; $50 for blue team members and $60 for gold team members. To get a schedule of when the classes meet or to enroll in the program call Bonnie at 378-4661 or Wendy at 257-7182.

Pro shot

Senior PGA tour player and 1991 Senior PGA tour rookie of the year Jim Colbert gives an exhibition at the Links at Sierra Blanca for about 150 people. Colbert used a little humor and good advice to keep the audience laughing and learning.

Bowlers earn honors in mixed competition

The Wednesday Night Summer Mixed Bowling League ended its season at the Ruidoso Bowling Center last week. The winner of the team competition was O.S.I.M.I.A. with 32 wins and just 16 losses for a pin total of 22,102. Two teams, Steve's Harem and Floyd's Fillies, tied for second at 28 wins and 20 losses. The Harem earned the top spot, though, with a pin total of 21,726 and the Fillies finished at 21,014. B and H Express finished fourth with a 26-22 record. The Over the Hill Gang proved it could still bowl with the best and finished with a 23-25 record. Individual winners for the high series scratch winner for the men's division was Floyd Danielson with a 634. The handicap high series went to Dean Shelby with a 655 score. The men's high scratch game was won by Harold Shelby with a 226 score and Steve Standridge had the high handicap game with a 269. Harold Shelby also earned the men's high average with a 177. Dean Shelby was most improved with eight pins. In the women's division Irene Sambrano bowled a 555 for the high scratch series, while Lucy Servies was the high handicap series winner with a 666. Kathy Hanson earned the high scratch game with a 218 score. The high handicap game went to Terry Sanchez, who bowled a 258. Irene Sambrano also earned the high average title with a 165 for the season, and Gloria Wheeler was the most improved player, also by eight pins.

Alifax contests All American Gold Cup trials

Alifax has won 15 races and $243,000.

He's competed in stakes and handicaps in New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma. He's won two stakes this year, the Mr Jet Moore at Ruidoso Downs and the Cabeza de Vaca at the Downs at Albuquerque.

Although trainer Lonnie Barber is proud of his trainee's accomplishments, he is disappointed the gelding has not been able to win a Grade I race. Alifax will, however, get another chance to add a Grade I race to his dossier when he goes postward in Friday's trials for the Grade I All American Gold Cup. Alifax is one of 14 horses which will compete in the two trials. The 10-fastest horses will advance to the rich Gold Cup final September 5.

He's won two Grade III races, and came close in some Grade II and Grade I races, but he's never won one a Grade I," said Barber who trains the bay gelding for the partnership of Pat Apppling, C.L. Battin and Madison Traster. "I thought he could win the last one (Grade I World Championship Quarter Horse Classic), but it just wasn't his day."

Alifax finished third behind Femmes Frolic and Trullytack in the World Championship Quarter Horse Classic last month. Alifax will face Trullytack again in his All American trial.

"I was a little disappointed in the Classic," Barber said. "He really had no excuse for running as slow as he did. I guess like people, he just wasn't feeling 100 percent and had an off day."

Barber said Alifax appears to be on the top of his game and is hoping for an "on day" Friday.

Trainer Fred Danley said his trouble-prone Trullytack also appears to be on target for the Classic trials. Earlier this year, Trullytack won the Grade I Rainbow Silver Cup.

"If I could get this horse a brain transplant she'd be one heck of a horse," Danley said of Trullytack.

"She's so hyper and she always wants to go 100 miles an hour."

Trullytack's type A behavior makes her dance around in the gate and sometimes prompts her to false break and/or flip.

Danley will also saddle Celadon in the trials, who Danley claims is just the opposite of Trullytack.

"He could care less if the world goes round," Danley said.

"But he doesn't have the talent Trullytack has."

Celadon will start in the second trial, the ninth race, and will face off against One Slick One and Special Legend.

One Slick One is a Grade I winner and most recently won an allowance race at Ruidoso Downs by more than a length. It was his first race this year. The colt spent the spring being bred to 73 mares.

"He should run real big," said owner Richard Parrish of Meadows, Texas. "It's only his second out this year so he's real fresh and he came back real well after his last race."

Special Legend is the richest earner in the trials behind Alifax. He most recently finished fifth in the World Quarter Horse Championship Classic.

Eighth-race entrants in order of post position area: Alifax, J.R. Valenzuela; Special Depth, James Lackey; Hot Colours, no rider named; Gooseberry Pie, Mike Short; Smashe Caesar, no rider named; Attaque, Eugene O'Neill; no rider named; Trullytack, Joe Martinez.

Ninth-race entrants are: One Slick One, no rider named; System, Glen Murphy; Tinys Effort, Luke Myles; Streakin Pass, Larry Layton; Strait To The Bank, no rider named; Celadon, no rider named; Special Legend, no rider named.

Also on tap for Friday are two simulcast. The sixth race will be the $100,000 Seneca Handicap Saratoga for 2-year-old Thoroughbreds. The 14th race will be the $75,000 Balboa Stakes from Del Mar, also for 2-year-old Thoroughbreds.

Yearnings

Jockey Joe Martinez and Yearnings return to the winners circle after winning Sunday's Zia Freshman Championship by a head in 20.09 for 400 yards. Bobby McQueen is the owner and Roy Barrington is the trainer.

Tellum Dear challenges 11 in Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity

Rest is all Tellum Dear needs to be her best for Saturday's $95,500 Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity.

Tellum Dear is one of 12 two year-old thoroughbreds expected to compete in the six-furlong futurity. The finalist earned a berth for the rich futurity by finishing sixth or better in their August 20 qualifying trial. The 42-year-old futurity is Ruidoso Downs' richest thoroughbred race of the season.

Tellum Dear has raced six times so far this year, and while her races were respectable, her efforts were nothing to write home about. However, the bay filly astounded many race fans when she sprinted wire to wire to win her Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity trial by three lengths. Overlooked, Tellum Dear paid $19 for the win.

"She ran a much improved race in her trial because she had a little rest," said Don Farris who trains Tellum Dear for Sam Ewan of Irving, Texas. "Before the trial, she had been racing every two weeks and it was just too much for her."

Farris gave Tellum Dear a 30-day rest between her previous race and her futurity trial. Earlier in the season, she had placed fourth in the Norgor Futurity and fourth in the Kachina Stakes. She is the richest starter in today's field with earnings of $13,500.

"She came back from her trial good and she's still real fresh," said Farris, who will also saddle Oyster Bay and Buyimback for the futurity. "The boys are going to have to get hooked up if they're going to outrun her."

Tellum Dear is one of three fillies in the race and one of three Kentucky-bred horses.

While Tellum Dear surprised bettors in her trial, Oyster Bay disappointed many with his dismal trial performance. Oyster Bay was sent off as the favorite in his trial, but finished sixth behind Power Connection in the second of the two trials.

Perplexed by his trainee's performance, Farris called the horse's previous trainer for advice.

"I hadn't had this horse very long," Farris confessed, "I called his California trainer and we came up with some changes which will make a big improvement in his performance."

One of those changes will be the edition of blinkers for Saturday's race.

Prior to coming to New Mexico, Oyster Bay raced in California where he broke his maiden against $40,000 claimers at Hollywood Park. Oyster Bay is one of two horses in the futurity owned by R.D. Hubbard of Fort Worth, Texas. The other is Buyimback, who finished sixth in his debut at Ruidoso Downs earlier this month then finished third in his trial behind Tellum Dear.

"He raced real green in his first race," Farris said of Buyimback, "but he gained some confidence in his last race so I think he'll run even better Saturday."

Among those looking to beat Farris' trio to the winners circle are Power Connection and Slew West. Power Connection won the second trial by a nose over Slew West.

"It will be a close race," said Roy Barrington, who trains Power Connection for Richard Parrish of Meadow, Texas. "In our trial, the top four horses were all right there at the wire and Tellum Dear looks awfully tough."

Horses vying for the futurity winner's share of $47,760, in order of post position are: Tellum Dear, Chris Zamora; Rob Red, no rider named at time of entry; Buyimback, Jerry Nicodemus; Oyster Bay, Duane Sterling; Silver Clinders, no rider named; Lear Fan's Fling, Von Cunningham; Exclusivengagement, Flavio Martinez; Madam Rouge, Vickie Smallwood; Waco Connection, Stuart Dolphus; Power Connection, Joe Martinez; Collided, Glen Murphy; Slew West, Eric Perner; and also eligible, Purl's Plenty Coup.

Pullastreak pulls away in $11,875 Gene Hensley Handicap win

Pullastreak continued his domination of Ruidoso Downs Quarter Horse distance races when he won Saturday's $11,875 Gene Hensley Handicap.

The gelding's 2-1/4 length victory in the 870-yard race was Pullastreak's third consecutive win of the summer season.

Earlier, he won the 870-yard Fine Loom Handicap and just two weeks ago waltzed away from his competition in a 1,000 yard allowance race.

"The race laid out just like we wanted it to," said jockey Glen Murphy who picked up the mount on Pullastreak when Manny Ortiz shifted his tack to New Jersey last month. "Once we headed out of the turn I saw we had clear sailing and had the race won."

Pullastreak won the race by setting just off the pace set by Oh Bid Go and Todd Fincher. The early leaders, however, could not stave off Pullastreak's late charge.

"He ran a perfect race," Fincher said of Oh

Bid Go. "Pullastreak just flat outran us."

Pullastreak posted a time of 45.28 seconds for the 870-yards and at odds of 7-5 returned $4.80 to win, $3.80 to place and $3.20 to show. Oh Bid Go returned $7 and $5.60. Raise In Class finished third to pay $8.40.

Pullastreak is trained by Nene Simmons and owned by Mike Levi of Spicewood, Texas. "I was surprised he won so easy," said Simmons.

Three trifecta races pay big dollars on Saturday

Three consecutive trifecta races paid six digits when longshots found the winner's circle in Saturday's fourth, fifth and sixth races. The 5-10-4 combination in the fourth race paid $4,418 on a $2 ticket. The fifth race trifecta combination of 5-3-1 paid $3,385 and the sixth race trifecta of 10-7-8 returned $4,098.

Three pick six tickets had the proper combination for a payoff of $497.50 each. The consolation payoff on five winners paid $64.80. The twin trifecta was evasive Saturday resulting in a carryover for Sunday of $6,949.

Economic development conference focuses on tourism

With the increase of visitors from Mexico to this area throughout the year, Ruidoso is beginning to understand the importance of a new market and so is the whole state of New Mexico.

Economic development through tourism in rural border areas will be the theme of a two-day conference in Las Cruces Sunday and Monday, hosted by Senator Pete Domenici (R-NM) and sponsored by United New Mexico Financial Corporation.

Area representatives planning to attend the conference are Chamber of Commerce executive director Joan Bailey and Museum of the Horse Development Director Frank Potter, who will also have an exhibit at the session.

Bailey said she is looking forward to the conference because the schedule of speakers shows that it will be a working conference. She is especially excited because Mexico has been a market that this area has wanted to get into, and this will help her understand it better.

"It used to be we would only see Mexico (license) plates at Christmas and Easter time, but now we are seeing them 12 months a year," she said.

Unlike visitors from other markets, Ruidoso is the one travelers from Mexico hit first, even though Ruidoso hasn't done an ambitious advertising plan for the area. It is the closest destination for them, Bailey said.

"It is a market we don't want to turn our backs on," she said.

Not everyone is sold on it, though, she said and in part that is because of miscommunication and lack of education. The two communities do have things in common, such as a beautiful environment and the emphasis put on families, Bailey said.

"Difference is good, too. It can be charming. We need to give ourselves and them a chance to know each other," she said.

Potter is also excited about the potential of this conference. He said it is fortunate that it is going to be hosted by Domenici and the Mexican Embassy. The museum has already seen an increase in visitors from Mexico and having a working relationship between Mexico and the United States can only help. Potter said the timing of the conference is just perfect.

An extensive museum exhibit will be set up in the lobby of the Hilton, where the conference is happening, for all those attending to learn more about.

Gustavo Petricoli, the Mexican Ambassador to the United States, will be the keynote speaker at the conference, which will draw government and industry officials from both sides of the U.S.—Mexican border. Domenici and Governor Bruce King will make opening remarks for the conference before beginning the morning session.

The conference comes on the heels of the recent agreement on the North American Free Trade Agreement and is a united attempt to work on three major tourism projects which will lead to greater levels of tourism—and economic development—in border areas.

The three major tourist projects are a "two-nation vacation" campaign, the best possible use of a Department of Agriculture Extension Service grant of $230,000 to New Mexico State University for rural development and a general marketing of the culture of the border region.

Domenici said these projects are to be implemented during the 12 months following the conference. He said he hopes the conference will be a spring board to a much greater level of interaction between the border states in the U.S. and Mexico for improvements in the areas of marketing and developing tourism.

In addition to developing cross-border tourism projects, participants will hear of "success stories" from local communities which have attracted greater levels of tourism. Moderating the sessions will be Congressman Joe Skeen, New Mexico secretary of tourism

Michael Cerletti, New Mexico State University college dean Dr. John Owens and F. Leroy Pacheco.

Happy Trails

Let's get physical: conditioning for the hike

by YVONNE LANELLI

Special to The News
In previous articles we've prepared your hiking exterior — boots, clothing, etc. Today's article focuses on your interior, a well-conditioned body.

Before beginning this or any other physical activity, consult your doctor, especially if you're diabetic, overweight, have asthma, high blood pressure or a heart condition.

RUN, DOC, RUN
For advice based on experience and training, I called on Dr. Michael Carbuto who has hiked our mountains since the '70s and now competes in marathons.

He advises, "First get a good pair of hiking boots and socks. Next, decide on a goal, a particular trail or certain distance you'll work up to. Then begin conditioning in segments." (For boot and trail selection, see "Happy Trails" July 30 and August 6.)

S-T-R-E-T-C-H
Begin and end every conditioning walk or hike by stretching. This warms and gently prepares muscles for intense activity. Dr. Mike warms up with quadriceps and Achilles tendon stretches. In Athletic Injuries and Sports Medicine, the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons describes how to do these stretches.

The quadriceps is the large muscle in front of the thigh. Lean against an immovable object such as your vehicle with one hand. Use the other hand to pull your thigh straight back behind you. Make sure the leg you are pulling back remains straight. Hold for 10-15 seconds. Switch legs and repeat.

To stretch the Achilles tendon behind the heel, stand about two feet from an immovable object. Lean into the wall, keeping back straight and one foot pointing straight ahead. Bend the opposite knee while keeping the other heel on the ground. Hold for 20-count then switch legs.

SHORT AND FLAT FIRST IS REAL
Since most wilderness trails involve either high altitude, hill climbing or both, begin on a flat surface in town such as the high school track. "Walk as much as you can comfortably two or three times a week. Your goal is to strengthen your leg muscles and cardiovascular system (heart and lungs), mildly elevating your heart rate for at least 20 minutes. Your doctor can advise you on the specific training heart rate appropriate for your age and condition."

Gradually increase speed and distance until ready for the next level of difficulty such as the gentle hills of the Cedar Creek Fitness Trail. Try a quarter or half mile two or three times a week then increase the distance, varying your pace with frequent rest stops.

When ready for higher trails, stride at a sensible speed and, again, rest frequently. "Remember, you're doing this for enjoyment. This isn't a forced march!"

If in a group, encourage everyone to walk at his or her own pace. "This is especially important if you're hiking with kids or a non-athletic spouse. You want to inspire them to enjoy the hike, not make their first time miserable." Rests provide an opportunity to enjoy the mountain's beauty. "Isn't that why you're here?"

ALTITUDE SICKNESS IS REAL
It takes time to become acclimated to higher altitudes. If you experience severe headache, shortness of breath, nausea, vomiting or disorientation, get to a lower altitude immediately and seek medical attention.

NUTRITION
Dr. Mike suggests a high carbohydrate meal — pasta, bread or vegetables — the night before. Breakfast should be well-balanced; don't overeat. Then pack snacks for the trip such as dried fruits, nuts, crackers, bread, perhaps a little cheese.

ALONG THE WAY

Drink lots of fluids. Athletes call this "hydrating." Sweating and hard breathing cause the body to lose water. Replace this immediately or risk dehydration.

Water is good; however, many hikers prefer sports drinks such as Gatorade or 10-K. These contain sugar, potassium and sodium so don't use them if you're diabetic, have high blood pressure, or retain water or sodium.

Dr. Mike advises to drink frequently, before you feel really thirsty. And naturally, no alcohol. Higher altitude increases its effects.

GOOD MEDICINE

Hiking is a great stress reliever, the good doctor believes. "Being in the mountains, doing physical exertion, you forget your problems." With mock seriousness he adds, "Caution, hiking may be habit forming!"

Next week: getting there from here: trail signs & map orientation.

EDCLC to meet tonight

The Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County will meet at 7 p.m. tonight at the office in the Stroud building.

The main item on the agenda will be in executive director Karen Kopp's report. She will be discussing with the directors what kind of advertising campaign the corporation should begin to make businesses aware of the opportunities of the area. The group will need to decide where and when the advertisements would do the most good.

Leaders and Domenici talk

U.S. Senator Pete V. Domenici, R-New Mexico, will be in town Friday, August 28, for a Ruidoso and Lincoln County Leadership Conference.

The hour-long meeting will begin at 2 p.m. in the Village of Ruidoso Council chamber at 313 Cree Meadow Drive. The senator will discuss local issues with mayors Victor Alonso of Ruidoso, Joe Hayhurst of Ruidoso Downs, Cecilia Kuhnle of Carrizozo, Ernest Lueras of Corona, Frank Warth of Capitan, and with Lincoln County commissioners Stirling Spencer, Monroy Montes and Bill Elliott.

Skeen to visit Corona

U.S. Congressman Joe Skeen, R-New Mexico, will be spending his congressional recess visiting communities in New Mexico. Highlights will include the Otero County Fair, an all-day visit to Artesia and a meeting with farmers and ranchers in Corona in Lincoln County.

The Corona meeting September 3 will begin at 9 a.m. at the school auditorium, followed at 10 a.m. with Skeen addressing an assembly of school students before he joins them for lunch.

At 1 p.m., Skeen will visit the Senior Citizens Center and at 2 p.m., he will tour Huey's Steel Plant.

Turn on energy savings by switching to high efficiency lighting

Brighten your home — and the outlook for your energy budget — by replacing your ordinary light bulbs with compact fluorescent bulbs. They use only one fourth of the electricity and last about 10 times as long as incandescent bulbs.

Lighting typically isn't a home's biggest energy user, but you still can reduce your total energy needs by making the switch — particularly on lights that are used more than two hours a day.

For more ways to save energy, call or visit your local Texas-New Mexico Power Company office and ask for the free brochure, "Energy Management Guide."

HAMBURGER KING

Dear Ruidoso,

If you have been in my cafe this summer, you're bound to have noticed all of the longhorns I have hanging on the walls. As you can guess, I am partial to horns. I think they are beautiful. I have three sets of massive horns that come from an African cattle called "Watutsi". It looks kinda like our oxen. The rest of them came from Texas Longhorns. They are true, original Western art. Each set is accented with a hand tooled leather mounting. They are truly the product and symbol of the American West.

The horns do not belong to me. They are owned by Clyde Barker, who runs the "Silver Eagle" in Midtown. If you think I'm partial to horns, you ought to see Clyde's collection.

He and his wife, Tina, specialize in handcrafted Indian jewelry, but they also have a wonderful assortment of horns in both my place and the Silver Eagle are for sale. I enjoy selling them, but it always makes me a little sad, too. I have grown fond of every set, and I know they are limited in number and getting harder and harder to replace.

When I first hung the horns up in the cafe, my wife, Carol, said that she thought they are appropriate in there. "Because of all the beef we sell?" I asked. "No, because of all the bull that gets thrown around in here when you are drinking coffee with your friends."

Welllll.....What does she know.

Sincerely,
Cliff Mann

Animals are big business for Lincoln County fair winners

Animals were big business at the Lincoln County Fair earlier this month.

Julie Ann Barham's heifer won first champion in the over one-year, under two category. Amanda Bird's entry won reserve champion. Julie also took a first with her light Hampshire, first and second with her light crosses.

Brett Barham took first in beef, first champion in swine Duroc light and in light-heavy crosses.

Katie Hightower won first with her heifer calf while Amanda Bird took beef showmanship. Tonya White placed first in Cabrito, Joe Burchett was tops in OPB, Sherry Dockery, first champion in Hampshire heavy and Kristian Lovelace, reserve champion in Duroc heavy.

Brett Racher won champion under medium crosses and Neil Montes took first in heavy crosses.

Back in the main 4-H display building, Julie Barham won first with her sweatshirt and swept the New Mexico Flavor division with her green chili pods, flour tortilla, recipe boxes and wreath.

She packed away more firsts in the flowers competition with her marigolds, petunias, alyssum, snapdragons, perennial pinks, stock, black eyed susan and dahlia. Under baking, she won first with her whole wheat health bread and banana nut bread. In gardening, she won senior first for her tomatoes, reserve first for cherry tomatoes, first for slicing cucumbers, for acorn squash, for zucchini squash and for scalloped squash.

Shayla Marshall scored firsts in senior paper craft, sweet william, strawflower, gladiolas, snap beans, summer squash, chili peppers, cherry peppers, spinach, red leaf lettuce, yellow wax beans and strawberries, and for her clock under leathercrafts.

Amy Bond's blue ribbons came in novice ceramics, novice fun with children, interior design, applesauce muffins and chef's apron novice.

Other firsts went to Amanda Greer in Senior Minitack Board, mini tack board, welding and junior picture frame; Ashley Martin in novice recycling, poster recycling, 4-H banner; Jayla Cupit for painted t-shirt; Annalise Haussler for 4-H project book; Katie Hightower, junior fit it all together; Debbie Bond, senior fit it all together; Cara Baker in crochet and pillow; and Lindsey Bond in embroidery, crewel, afghan knitting, footscraper welding.

Under different braiding categories, winners were Amanda Bird, Kristian Lovelace, Buffy York, Kerrie Shafer, Betty Hobbs, Cara Baker, Katie Hightower and Lindsey Bonds.

Downs pitches in for 'cycle rally

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso Downs has tossed its money in to the collection hat along with Ruidoso and the county to help pay for advertising the annual Golden Aspen Rally.

Downs trustees approved a recommendation Monday night from the Ruidoso Downs Lodgers Tax Advisory Board to give the event $1,000 for advertising, after rally promoter and Ruidoso village councilor Ron Andrews made a presentation to the board. The 23-year-old event has historically benefited the entire area, but in the past the rally received its advertising funds from the Ruidoso Lodgers Tax Advisory Board, Andrews said.

This year, though, the Ruidoso LTAB and council decided to set a limit of $1,500 for each group requesting funds, he said, so that was all the rally could get. The group also received $500 from the Lincoln County tax board. Andrews had requested $4,200 from the Ruidoso group and had budgeted $12,600 total for advertising.

The event will be September 16-20 at the Ruidoso Civic Events Center instead of the old Chapparal building in Ruidoso Downs, but several activities will roar through Ruidoso Downs. Andrews said one of the breakfast runs on Wednesday leaves from Pappy's Diner and another from the Texas Cafe. A Poker Run will stop at sites in the Downs on Thursday and the Prime Time Lounge is hosting a Harley Owners Group (HOG) reception on Friday.

Andrews said other Ruidoso Downs merchants who are participating are Inn at Pine Springs, Budget Inn, American Motel, Champions Run, Cimarron Center, Circle B campgrounds and the Hollywood Inn. He said a major part of the KOA campground is reserved for one particular group of rallygoers, who will be traveling through Ruidoso Downs daily. Andrews also showed the trustees a brochure that was put out by the rally which lists the businesses that are supporting the event.

Andrews said he also takes a variety of brochures from this area to cycle trade shows he attends to promote this rally. He also takes pins and items to hand-out to people to encourage attendance. Trustee Ray Hayhurst asked him if he took any Ruidoso Downs pins and he said he did two years ago.

Last year, 1,784 people registered for the rally, while 6,000 people went through the trade show, according to Andrews' tally. He estimated that those attending the five-day event last year spent about $327,000 in lodging and about $780,000 for non-lodging purchases. The tax benefit for the area for the five days would be about $13,000 for lodgers tax and $53,000 in other taxes, Andrews said.

Andrews said he cleared $257 last year on the event and had to get a personal loan to do the event this year. The fee to enter the trade show will be $5 and the registration fee for cyclists is $30 per person or $28 for American Motorcycle Association members, but they will also be taking gate registration. He said so far his registrations for this year have been 40 percent over last year. The rally has budgeted about $42,000 to $45,000 in expenses.

"People ask me why I do it (with only a $257 profit). It is because it fills my motel for five days when it normally wouldn't be busy," he said.

Some people have asked him to move it to Labor Day weekend, but the area is already full that weekend, he said. Andrews said he takes the approach that the event helps the area on a dead week. Andrews said reports from travel magazines and the American Motorcycle Association say that motorcycleists spend more money per day than any other traveler because they can't carry anything with them. When they stop they either have to eat out or go buy groceries to eat in their motel rooms. They can't carry much home with them either, so they have to have souvenirs shipped back, Andrews said.

Of those registering last year less than 12 percent were from New Mexico and less than two percent were from the Ruidoso area, Andrews said.

As with all approved recommendations the rally will have to present paid invoices to the Ruidoso Downs village clerk before he will receive the money. Andrews also invited the trustees to a hospitality night on Thursday, September 17, at the trade show.

In other business the board approved the hiring of one full-time dispatcher, Jonnell Lynn, and three part-time dispatchers, Jacquelyn Foxworth, Betty Brumlow and Joe Zepeda. New police chief Will Hoggard said when he started work last week he realized they needed someone in dispatch right away because of resignations, and he appointed a hiring board to select these people.

No hours are guaranteed to the part-time dispatchers because they will be working on a rotating basis, but the hours available will be divided as equally as possible. The part-time people are also not accumulating benefits, he said.

Trustees also approved a clean-up resolution for the 1991-1992 budget. The resolution did not change revenues or expenditures significantly but matched up actual numbers with what was budgeted, so the village still ended the year on the positive side. The budget will now be sent to the auditor for a final report.

A sign request was approved for the Economy Inn, formerly the Timberline Motel. The sign has already been approved by the state highway department and will be in the same place as the current sign. Also approved was an amendment to the lodgers tax ordinance to have the tax board members serve at the pleasure of the board to be reviewed at two-year intervals, instead of having them serve in two years.

Maintenance supervisor Dennis Riddle congratulated the maintenance department for its hard work in putting the new village hall building together the last few weeks. He said Dave Weibrecht and Dale Graham had been especially versatile in the work they have done. He also thanked the village trustees for being so cooperative and helpful in the move.

The village offices and police department used the weekend and the first part of the week to move from the old office building to the new temporary site beside the senior citizens center. The board's plan is to build a new village hall on city land off Highway 70.

Pat Delhotal, secretary for the Ruidoso Downs juvenile probation and parole officer, contemplates where to set a box of files down Monday in the new Downs village hall. The village offices began moving at the end of last week and used Monday to begin organizing the office. The police department also moved to the building on Tuesday and Wednesday. The building is located next to the senior citizens center and is open for business. The board of trustees voted to get a temporary building to reduce utility cost, and the next step will be to make plans for a new building.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst said he is glad to see the move go so smoothly. They are fortunate to have such a good crew, and he said if hadn't been for village clerk Leann Weibrecht putting it all together they would be wondering what to do. The board went into executive session with attorney Don Dutton for pending litigation, but no action was taken before the meeting was adjourned.

Trustees nix plan to fund Chamber employee

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Ruidoso Downs trustees want more clear-cut evidence that the village will benefit from funding a part-time person to respond to visitors' needs.

The trustees tabled a request Monday night from the Ruidoso Downs Lodgers Tax Advisory Board for $5,800 to provide the part-time person at the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce until a job description can be provided that shows how it will effect Ruidoso Downs. The $5,800 includes all the tax and insurance necessary.

LTAB chairperson Mike Warren said the group recommended the approval of the amount but turned the podium over to chamber executive director Joan Bailey to explain the proposal.

Bailey told the trustees that although she has only been the director of the chamber since April 1, she has lived in the area for 16 years and has served on committees for area events, which gives her a personal interest in this community too. In the last five months this area has been in several national magazines as a top place to visit and that shows the chamber finally has its act together, she said.

This year, through July, the chamber has handled more telephone calls and mailings for visitor inquiries than for all of last year.

"It is an extremely positive situation, but the consequences are that we can't do as well as we should in responding to these inquiries," Bailey said.

She said the procedure is to have a 24-hour turn-around period, which means the requested information gets into the mail within 24 hours of the request. They have been able to fax some of the information to people to get it out quicker but that isn't always possible, she said.

The chamber has also been working with the Cowboy Symposium, the All American Festival and the race track as well as with the county to advertise the entire area. One new project they are doing with the county is to have a visitor information booth at Santa Fe.

As far as the advertising itself, Bailey said the chamber's primary source of funding is the Ruidoso Lodgers Tax Advisory Board. She said All American Festival director Lara Johnson came to her and asked for assistance because her funds had been cut for the event.

"We just used one of our ad spots and put her information in. It doesn't matter if it is my advertisement or your advertisement, we just need to sell the area," Bailey said.

"We realize the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce in a large degree hasn't conducted itself like an area chamber. We are trying to change that and make a commitment to the whole area, not just Ruidoso," Bailey said.

She said the chamber is in the second year of a seven-year contract with the village of Ruidoso to do the typical chamber work of promoting the individual businesses and the area to visitors. The $5,800 from Ruidoso Downs would go strictly for someone to respond to visitor information and promotions inquiries received at the chamber, she said.

She assured the board that the person would do specifically that work and nothing related to the chamber because they already have one full-time person and one part-time person who do only visitors' inquiries. The chamber office is open seven days a week, and the building has a 24-hour lobby for people to pick up brochures.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst said an example of how Ruidoso Downs is slighted is in a Cowboy Symposium advertisement it says how many miles it is to Ruidoso, not Ruidoso Downs. Bailey said he is right and that is something they all need to be more conscious of, although the chamber did not place that particular ad.

"We have to talk about the whole area. There is plenty out there for all of us," she said.

Village attorney Bob Beauvais said although the statute concerning the use of lodgers tax funds would allow for this type of allocation, he didn't feel comfortable paying a staff position when the net effect of spending it as advertising money would be the same. He suggested the chamber show the scope of services this person would provide and repeatedly asked how it would help Ruidoso Downs, specifically. He said he would feel more comfortable with paying 20 percent of the cost of the person and receiving an equal amount of benefit.

LTAB chairperson Warren said the board discussed this issue and decided if visitors come to town, the chamber is a place they can go to find out where to stay and what to do, which serves as advertising for the whole area. The group also agreed with Bailey that the chamber has done a better job at promoting the whole area, not just Ruidoso.

"Most all of the attractions are actually outside of Ruidoso. Activities in Ruidoso Downs are one of our main promotions," she said.

Several trustees again pointed out that Ruidoso Downs gets slighted in other advertising, but Bailey said the advertising and the request for the money for the position are two different things. She asked that the board have the same confidence that the 20 chamber members of Ruidoso Downs have in the chamber that they all will get fair treatment.

"The direct benefit is that you have 20 businesses in the chamber of commerce that we send people to. Advertising money gets directed to one event. This is the overall picture, not just an advertising campaign," she said.

"The advertising money comes from the village of Ruidoso, but if time prevails and you want me to take part in funds from your lodgers tax collection to advertise, I would love to do that as well."

"How this benefits you on a daily basis is that we are sending people to the track and to the museum. You've got something (the Museum of the Horse) people can go to for 12 months a year. We are trying to get away from this tunnel vision (of promoting one event). Those days are over. We can't think of ourselves as Ruidoso or Ruidoso Downs or even Lincoln County," she said.

Chamber of commerce president Paul Crown told board members that after an article came out earlier this month in the U.S.A. Weekend magazine promoting the whole area, he went down to the chamber office to talk to Bailey about it. He said Bailey and all the staff members were answering phone calls generated from the article.

"If you can't take care of the tourists or answer their questions it won't do you any good no matter how much advertising you do," he said.

Trustee Judy Miller asked Bailey what benefits a chamber member gets and what the cost is to be a chamber member. Bailey said the chamber serves both on the community level and as a place to promote and advertise these members. When chamber members join they also make a commitment to the community, she said. The businesses are up-dated on what is going on in the community through committees and through the business after hours program. The village has had the confidence in the chamber to give it the advertising contract because the chamber responds to the needs of more than the winter and summer visitors, she said.

The minimum cost of a membership is $120 and then an additional charge is added based on the type of business it is, such as $5 per unit for lodging businesses.

Mayor Hayhurst said he had no qualms with the proposal, but he would like a job description for this position with the services that person would provide. He also requested a list of the Downs businesses that belong to the chamber of commerce. The board then voted to table the request until the next meeting on September 14, when Bailey can provide this information for the group.

Also set for the next meeting will be a presentation by Ladona House of the Alamogordo youth center.

Council considers annexing Carrizo

The Ruidoso Village Council Tuesday explored lodge annexation of Carrizo Lodge.

James Porter of the Carrizo Condo Homeowners Association and C-Net Resorts, Inc. requested the village provide water services to the lodge.

Village manager Ron Wicker said several items come in to play when considering laying a water line to the property.

"We're talking about a line of 1.4 miles that would have to be extended down Grindstone Canyon Road and Carrizo Canyon Road to make the connection," Wicker said.

"Before this could be considered, Carrizo Lodge should be annexed into the corporate limits of Ruidoso."

During the workshop meeting, Carrizo had offered to supply the material if Ruidoso would provide the labor. Councilor J.D. James, however, said labor costs could run two-to-one higher than material costs which didn't favor the village.

Wicker said if Carrizo came into the village, the lodge would pay the necessary taxes, pay the same water fees (service outside the village is twice the rate.)

Wicker said the staff is prepared to look at costs and potential revenues to the village as opposed of costs of providing the service.

Councilor Jerry Shaw said she would also like Wicker and attorney David Thomsen to research taking in the entire Carrizo Road so that no pockets would be created within the village limits.

Barbara Ward (center), program director of Zia Senior Centers, visits with some of her friends after she announced her retirement. Ward will retire on October 20.

Ward retires from Zia Senior Centers

Special to The News

Like a Gardner nurturing delicate plants, Barbara Ward has tended the lives of hundreds of Lincoln County residents aged 60 and over.

But now it's her turn to be nurtured.

"I've accomplished a great deal but now I'm retiring. There are things I want to do while I can still do them."

So on October 20, Ward retires as program director for Zia Senior Centers of Lincoln County, a post she's held since August 11, 1981.

Zia serves county residents outside Ruidoso.

In her crowded office in Carrizo, Ward reflected on her unique position.

"This program has helped a lot of senior citizens — medically, economically, physically (see related article). We're a preventive program. We keep people out of nursing homes and save taxpayers money."

Ward has brought Zia far from its early days. In 1978, the program was run by the Carrizo Woman's Club with centers in Carrizo and Corona.

In 1981, Ward assumed her position and Captain joined Zia.

In 1984, Lincoln County became Zia's official sponsor.

In 1990, San Patricio acquired its own center and the county created an ordinance developing a seven-member board to advocate the senior program.

Ward feels program as well as professional satisfaction.

"Our program helped an alcoholic senior become sober. And we get wonderful cooperation from Home Health Services of Lincoln County. They coordinate with us so that when a senior gets out of the hospital, Vera (Adams, RN) or her staff is waiting to help them settle in. It's beautiful."

Helping people is more than just a job to Ward. Her care reciprocates. When Ward announced her retirement, a Capitan senior said,

"I'm going to miss her terribly; she's always there for me."

The plants flourish now and the gardener must move on.

"I'm going to travel a bit and enjoy my grandchildren, but I'll still live in Carrizo and I'll still be around to advocate for seniors."

P&Z OKs addition, waterfall on Sudderth

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

One of these days, Ruidoso residents will see water cascading down a 60-foot slope behind the Cattle Baron, a landscaping improvement presented before the Ruidoso Planning and Zoning Commission last Monday.

Planning director Cleatus Richards said Cattle Baron was also approved for a 16- by 116-foot addition for added restaurant seating and kitchen remodeling.

Richards said some drainage problems will have to be worked out with landscaping.

The planning commission began the meeting by going against the grain of everything village staff is working toward in minimum lot size.

Patricia Benton requested approval to plat her property as purchased in 1976 — purchased by deed and without plat approval of the village. Tract I contains about 20,000 square feet, tract II about 6,000 feet.

The village staff wanted her to shift some property from Tract II to Tract I so that both properties could have the 10,000 square feet minimum lot size as required under current standards.

Richards recommended denial of the plat. He said a shift of 32 feet would leave one tract at 10,000 square feet and the other at 16,000 square feet.

The board, made up mainly of builders and real estate professionals, didn't discuss the issue with Richards, but approved the replat unanimously, leaving the problems of the 6,000 square feet property to future buyers.

Robert Kakuska's request for a variance was approved on the front lot line on his property in Country Club Estates, but a garage to be built must stay within the 10-foot side lot line requirements.

Sue Cartledge wanted the right of way property between her East Brady Road lots vacated, but she is unwilling to pay 50 cents a square foot for the property and will take her case before the village council Tuesday.

Attorney John Underwood, representing Jock Tallman of the Hideaway Lounge, was given three weeks to map out a plan to correct the problems for Tallman and his lounge.

Kurt Schussler was allowed expansion of his existing commercial building to establish a sandwich shop at 2717 Sudderth Drive. Expansion includes a 40- by 18-foot addition with wood deck.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Planning and Zoning Commission story above was the one that was scheduled to be printed in Monday's edition. Instead a previous story slugged P&Z, the preview story of the meeting, was reprinted. The News hopes the error didn't cause anyone any inconvenience. Sorry.

The Silver Lining Valley is blessed with everchanging weather

Sunshine and Clouds Cheer the Mountain Land

After several days of thunder and lightning and rain storms, and a light rain in the night, here at mid morning on August 24, a gentle west wind is moving the colors of the American flag, and blowing the clouds overhead, forming a picture of a sky of moving blue and white over a mountain land of every shade of green, with sunshine and drifting over.

The pinon sand cedars and the mountain meadows are bright with raindrop jewelery-changing color as they are moved by the light breeze, from diamond to emerald, from topaz to ruby, and opal to rainbow colors.

The river winds long under its tunnel of trees, heavy with leaf, singing a song of contentment along its green banks, and bringing a message of good tidings and cheer all down the way.

The air purified, by the rain, make your heart rejoice as you inhale this breath of life, so fragrant with leaf, eve green and summer flower. Mother earth is beaming with pride and thankfulness, and long with her we say a prayer of thanks to Our Good Lord for all our blessings.

A Light Touch Of Fall In Summer

Oftentimes in rainy summer such as this one, along about this time you will see signs that fall is looking over the horizon, sees little signs here and there, that summer is bringing in a messenger of welcome.

The sun flowers, the glory of late summer, suddenly are wearing a golden smile on their faces as they greet us all along the way. The blooms of sunlight yellow are larger and more abundant this year than usual, and wave in the breeze on very tall stems, six and seven feet high. These favorite flowers of song and story begin blooming in late summer and lead us on into early fall and autumn.

Along with the sunflowers you may see the goldenrod, the traditional flower of the fall — out very early the year, encouraged by the heavy rains. They too, are blooming abundantly and on tall stalks.

Already in the higher reaches the early New England daisies, the light lavender ones, are suddenly appearing among the summer mountain flowers such as the Scotch Blue Bell, the English Buttercup, Salmon Colored Mallow, wild Four O'clock, and Indian paint brush.

The wild grapes are beginning to turn purple, and the leaves of the Box Elder along the river have turned a lighter green in some spots.

Just the same, fall is still quite a ways ahead of us, since it begins the twentieth of September; and summery weather will be with us well past that time.

The Fruit Picture

Especially in the orchards you can see the early messengers of the approach of the season harvest — the apples. They are showing their colors of red and gold earlier this year. And the branches are heavily laden, bending down to the ground with the weight of the fruit growing in site as it ripens.

Word comes from down the Ruidoso Valley that plums and pears are ready at the San Patricio orchards; also peaches and the early pears.

The apples ripen in the San Patricio area around the last of September and early October — that is main fall varieties. Early varieties such as Henry Clay and yellow transparent and Mackintosh ripen in mid September.

The main fall varieties of apples in Lincoln County and the Bent-Mescalero area are: Jonathan, Red Delicious, Golden Delicious, Winesap, and Rome Beauty, ripening in that order.

The apples in near Ruidoso Downs are showing signs of a very heavy crop, and will ripen a little later than those lower down in the Valleys.

In the upper Bonito there are trees planted more than one hundred years ago bearing such old favorites as Virginia Winesap, Arkansas Black, Pearmain, Black Twig.

The Black Twigg is a very favorite apple; and there are some in the orchards of Rufino Herrera and Dr. Lynn Willard.

The Lincoln County apples are some of the best in the world; and they will be especially good this year. Meanwhile make a trip into the orchard regions to pick some of the early fruit like plums and peaches.

Let us thank God for this golden year and all our other blessings.

Three cheers for the Humane Society of Lincoln County!

What's more helpless than a domestic animal? We invite them into our homes where they quickly learn to rely on us for all their basic needs — from food and water to proper training, grooming and healthcare. They give us love, loyalty and affection with no regard for our income, looks or even our treatment (or abuse) of them.

In Lincoln County, come the end of the summer season, man's best friends (of the canine and feline varieties) are often forgotten and left behind to fend for themselves. When some summer residents leave for the winter that soft, cuddly puppy or kitten that was so loved in June is apparently just excess baggage by the end of August.

That's why, for years, the animal shelter has been overwhelmed with abandoned pets at the end of each summer.

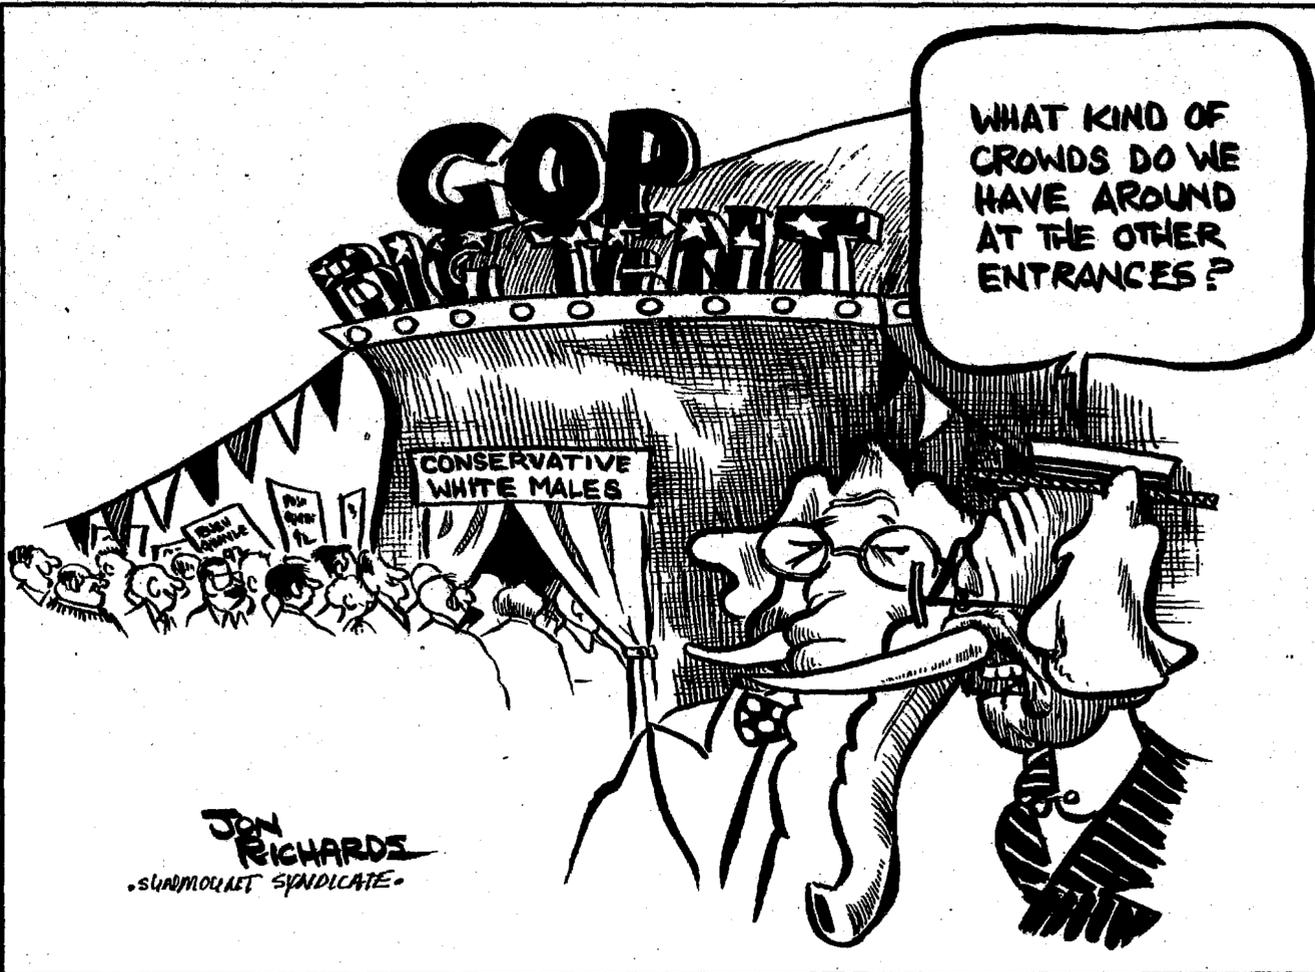

If you drive off and leave an animal behind, don't even kid yourself that neighbors will adopt that lonely dog or cat — "somebody will feed him, he's so cute." The ugly truth is that abandoned animals are destroyed every day in shelters all over the United States. There are just too many of them, and if you abandon an animal in Lincoln County, it's likely you've just sentenced your pet to death. That death will be a cruel and senseless one, whether it's through euthanization at the shelter, starvation or being hit by a car.

And so, think twice (or more) before abandoning a helpless pet; and then think again before taking on the responsibility of an animal you may not want to keep for its entire lifespan.

This is also the time of year when the shelter is in dire need of money, dog food, cat food and volunteers. With that influx of animals (it always happens), the shelter's resources grow slim. So, stop by with some food or money and maybe even walk some dogs. Some of them are pretty lonely and confused when they lose their home and family.

And, if YOU MUST leave an animal behind, at least take it to the Humane Society Animal Shelter on Gavilan Canyon Road. You can leave some food (maybe even make a donation) and tell shelter workers your pet's name and help ensure the animal of a good chance at a new home and family.

Here's the good part of this sad story: here in Ruidoso we have the Humane Society of Lincoln County where they provide the best and most humane care possible for lost and abandoned animals. Our Humane Society and its volunteers are the greatest and a real brag point for this area. Read all about it in the special section tucked into today's paper.

"We can't afford to wait another day..."

Later this month, the Justice Department will release homicide figures for 1991. It will undoubtedly come as little surprise to any of us to learn that, once again, the U.S. has set a deadly new murder record. In fact, preliminary figures released in April showed that homicide is projected to be up a whopping seven percent for 1991, and violent crime up five percent.

As the President of the nation's largest rank-and-file law enforcement organization, the Fraternal Order of Police, dealing with the certainty that violence continues to escalate out of control — especially gun violence — is deeply frustrating. But what is even more frustrating is that during the last 12 months — during which we saw more than 23,000 Americans lost their lives in handgun fire, Congress had the chance to pass life-saving legislation — and did nothing.

The Brady Bill, requiring a national waiting period and background check on handgun purchases, cleared the U.S. House of Representatives on May 8, 1991. The Senate passed the measure the following month, as part of a comprehensive anti-crime package, which the House then adopted in November. But this crucial gun control measure has remained hostage to the Crime bill which is gridlocked by partisan politics in the Senate.

America's law enforcement community has never claimed that the Brady Bill is the total anecdote to our epidemic of gun violence. We desperately need more jails; money to hire more police; and tough, mandatory sentences. But we also need a mechanism to provide enforcement of our federal law which says that by

Dewey Stokes
National President
Fraternal
Order of Police

fugitives, felons and drug abusers cannot purchase handguns. All of these components are part of the solution.

Every major law enforcement organization in the country has endorsed the Brady Bill, because police know it will stop the cash-and-carry sale of handguns that fuel the illegal black market of handguns creating so much of the random gun violence which we as a nation are now experiencing. Members of my organization, the Fraternal Order of Police, overwhelmingly passed a resolution to support this public safety bill.

We no longer need to debate the merits of the Brady Bill. It has the support not only of law enforcement, but of 95 percent of the American public, according to a Gallup Poll.

What we need are leaders with enough backbone to put public safety ahead of politics and enact this vital bill into law.

The U.S. Senate has had nearly nine months to send the Brady Bill to the President. During that time, we lost another 18,000 American men, women and children to handgun violence. We can't wait for one more life to be lost. The time has come to demand that the Brady Bill be called up for a vote on its own and passed immediately.

Our lawmakers need to heed the advice of law enforcement officers on this issue. More and more is being asked of my brothers and sisters in blue, yet we are being given less and less with which to do it. Citizens want to see more law enforcement officers on the streets; politicians under pressure to combat crime turn to us, while our budgets are stretched to the limit.

America's police are ready and able to fight this epidemic of gun violence and crime. All we ask is that we have the tools to do our job. The Brady Bill is an essential tool in that battle. The nation's law enforcement community knows that unless we enact this public safety measure immediately, we will set another shameful record of deaths next year, and the next.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dewey Stokes is National President of the Fraternal Order of Police, which represents 240,000 rank-and-file law enforcement officers nationwide. In asking editors to publish his opinion piece, Stokes said: "I am outraged that Congress has yet to take strong action to turn this tide against this epidemic of violence...I am joining law enforcement and concerned citizens across the country in calling on the U.S. Senate to call up this vital public safety bill on its own, pass it, and send it to the President. We can't afford to wait another day or lose another life."

Patient praises LCMC

TO THE EDITOR:

I had the unfortunate pleasure of being admitted to the hospital on Friday night, August 14, with a kidney stone. I was in the hospital until Saturday afternoon...I have been in a couple of hospitals and the hospital at Ruidoso (Lincoln County Medical Center) is by far the best one that I have ever been in.

Their care of me was excellent, when I needed a nurse, they were right there, a few minutes after I buzzed for them.

The emergency room crew and the X-ray tech were also excellent on my list for good service to the public.

In other words, the hospital of Ruidoso (LCMC) is one of the best in the State of New Mexico.

Local hospital offers best in medical and emergency services

TO THE EDITOR:

We Ruidoso residents are very fortunate to have such wonderful services and facilities (as LCMC and Emergency Medical Services) available to us. Anyone who has needed the care of Ruidoso EMS and/or LCMC knows exactly what I'm talking about.

Let's all keep these fine services available to us and our visitors. Vote "YES" on September 15 for the 4.25 mill levy. Even if it did mean a raise in taxes, which it does not, wouldn't it be worthy anyway?

To the Ruidoso EMS and LCMC keep up the fine work! God bless you all.

ARMED ROBBERY

On the 4th day of December, 1991, the Furr's grocery located on Mechem Drive in Ruidoso was robbed. The perpetrator left the store with an undisclosed amount of cash, and may have been seen by someone outside the premises.

Crimestoppers will pay a $1000 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and magistrate court bindover or grand jury indictment of the person or persons who committed this crime. Crimestoppers will also pay cash rewards for information that solves other felony crimes or leads to the recovery of stolen property.

Anyone having information relating to this crime or any criminal activity is urged to call Crimestoppers. The Crimestoppers phone line is manned twenty-four hours a day, and persons calling Crimestoppers do not have to give their name to become eligible for a cash reward. The Crimestoppers phone number is 257-4545. Anyone calling Crimestoppers outside the local exchange, may call collect within Lincoln County.

Volksmarch is planned

The 15th Annual Ruidoso Mountainmarchers volksmarch will take place Wednesday and Thursday, September 26 and 27, at the South Forks Campground above Bonito Lake.

The event will take place on a 6.2 mile marked trail during the height of the changing aspen colors in the lovely area above Bonito.

The volksmarch is a non-competitive friendly walk for the entire family.

Participants travel at their own pace, and they may walk, run or jog. Hikers can begin anytime between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. either day and must finish by 5 p.m.

The event is open to anyone free of charge; however, a commemorative medal can be purchased by those who compete for a nominal fee.

The volksmarch is being sponsored by ENMU-Ruidoso and the Ruidoso Woman's Club.

Knights of Columbus local council contributes to two local groups

During the week of August 4, the Father E. Dolan Council of Knights of Columbus in Ruidoso made donations to Region IX Cooperative and to the Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association.

Most of the money donated was collected by the Knights during the group's local Tootsie Roll Campaign to aid the handicapped.

The Tootsie Roll Campaign actually is a year-round effort, with collection cans placed in local businesses.

On the first weekend in April, the Knights, in their yellow aprons, can be found around Ruidoso passing out Tootsie Rolls.

Sandy Gladden, executive director of Region IX which covers six school districts, accepted the check for her organization. She said the funds will be used toward the purchase of equipment to be used locally.

Diana Person, director of the Handicapped Skiers program, said the money donated to her group will be applied to the purchase of new equipment that will open the sport to more severely disabled for the next ski season.

Spokespersons for the Knights, Region IX and Ski Apache Handicapped Skiers Association all thanked the community for the continuing support.

Nob Hill School offers safe after-school care

Nob Hill Elementary School, using a grant awarded through the State Human Services Department, is offering an after school program this year from 2:20 to 5:30 p.m.

Parents interested in signing up their children for the safe, fun, after school care is invited to an orientation at 6 p.m. today (Thursday), August 27, at Nob Hill.

The program will begin Monday, August 31, and parents must attend the meeting to enroll their children.

WHATEVER YOUR NEWSPAPER SAYS, IT REPRESENTS FREEDOM

- George Mason

These sheets of inexpensive paper you are now looking at are among your most priceless possessions; not for their intrinsic value, but because of what they represent. In your hands at this moment is a fair, unbiased account of everything happening in your town, as well as in many other places. You will learn about government meetings, at which you are asked for your input. You can read letters from other citizens like yourself, and are given the opportunity to underscore or rebut them, as you can with the editorial comments. Your own club activities, fund-raising drives, etc., are publicized at your request. Most of all, you can thank the Lord for the freedom represented by everything you can read here, by attending the House of Worship of your choice; another freedom, listed here in your newspaper.

LINCOLN COUNTY HUMANE SOCIETY

ADOPT A

PUBLISHED BY:  The Ruidoso News

Society provides humane care for homeless animals

Formed in the 1970s to respond to the callous handling of impounded animals, the Lincoln County Humane Society was dedicated to the cause of abandoned dogs and cats.

The opening of the society shelter on Gavilan Canyon Road five years ago was a significant step forward that allowed the group to take over responsibility for animals impounded in the Village of Ruidoso.

This past year, the society board agreed to expand its coverage to Ruidoso Downs' animals. The long-term goal has a facility in mind large enough to handle all dogs and cats impounded countywide.

But the main thrust of the group is to control the production of dogs and cats at its source, the pet owner.

Because of the large number of unwanted and abandoned pets brought to the shelter each year, only a small percentage will find new homes.

As a result, the rest must be euthanized. Society officials find that an unsatisfactory and inhumane approach to the problem.

Armed with the cost that negligent pet owners thrust on village government and the taxpayer by not spaying and neutering pets and by allowing them to run loose, society leaders went to the Ruidoso Village Council last April.

A few weeks later, they emerged with the second mandatory spay and neuter ordinance passed in the nation. Since its passage, four other cities or counties have followed suit.

The commitment is to stop the production of dogs and cats, who later end up in shelters to be euthanized.

Congratulations to those early leaders such as Earline Phillips, board president Hazel Haynsworth, adviser Dr. Lynn Willard; and to the society's more recent friends, Jacque and Bernie Farwick, Gerry Oswalt, Eleanor Shockey and shelter manager Randy Basch, who recognized a need and have stayed in the trenches to fight the battles.

Training is essential for happy pets & owners

Owning a dog and not training him is a little like owning a car and never learning to drive, says Randy Basch, manager of the Lincoln County Humane Society animal shelter.

"You can admire either one and point them out to friends as yours, but you would be missing nine-tenths of the pleasure of ownership," he said. "The rewards of training to both you and your pet are immeasurable.

"I believe anyone who is willing can train their dog."

Basch, who has more than 16 years of dog training experience, outlined a few basic steps.

1. You need a good training book (one of the best is "How to Be Your Dog's Best Friend" by the Monks of New Skete), a six foot leash of nylon or leather, a slip collar and "patience, patience, patience."

2. Never hit your pet or "choke" your pet with the choke chain while training.

3. When you train your dog, you are teaching him a language. Be sure you are consistent and use commands you have taught him.

"I've seen many pet owners teach their dogs 'down,' meaning 'don't jump on me,' but when the dogs starts jumping, they yell, 'stop it,' or 'don't' or 'go-away.' No matter how loud or angry the owner becomes, these still are foreign commands to the dog. Be consistent.

4. The first and most important word for a dog to learn is 'no.'

5. Teach him to come when you call. Never call him to you for a punishment or scolding. If discipline is required, go to him.

6. Try to spend at least 10 minutes every day in training.

7. Keep the experience fun for both of you. The dog needs diversity to keep him interested. If you or your dog gets angry, frustrated or tired, it's time to quit for the day.

8. Praise works better than discipline.

"You can be the most important person in your dog's life," Basch said. "Once you establish your leadership, you must maintain it. A dog's rebellion may be subtle at first, not coming when called or a gentle nip. If the behavior goes by uncorrected, it will continue and possibly escalate."

Establishing dominance can be accomplished through subtle and not so subtle actions such as eye contact, discipline, consistency and firmness of commands and praise, he said.

Two methods of discipline outlined by the well-know dog trainers, the Monks of New Skete are the under the chin cuff and the shakedown. They warn never to strike a dog or use an object to hit a dog. Discipline should come immediately after an offense.

In both approaches, the dog should be in a sitting position and you should maintain eye contact.

In the chin method, with palm flat, use an upward motion to rap your dog under the chin sharply enough to elicit a response.

In the shakedown, you are playing the role of alpha wolf female, who disciplined her litter by grabbing them in her mouth by the loose skin on the back of their necks and shaking them. It should be used on young pups instead of the chin rap.

Grasp the scruff of the dog's neck on either side, looping your thumbs through his collar. Lift the dog so that his front feet are off the ground, look directly into his eyes and shake him back and forth in quick, firm motions. Scold him and carry on for about 30 seconds.

Ignore the dog for about a half-hour and then make up without any dramatics, rather by resuming normal activities.

Healthy house cats and dogs love fun and games

They wait all day and then you walk through the door.

It's time to play with your pets, but you have groceries to unload and other chores to do.

The American Humane Association has some suggestions that will allow you to interact in games with your pets, but also will let you put the house in order.

After perusing the newspaper, just open a few sheets and toss them on the floor.

Most cats enjoy tunneling around under the paper and then peeking out at their owners.

To add some more interest, get down on the floor and scratch or poke gently at the cat through the papers in an attempt to convince the cat there's something on the other side of the paper that needs to be caught.

It's a great game for a household with more than one cat.

Grocery bags also create new adventures for cats. Drop several paper bags on the floor as you unpack them.

Dogs are curious too. Surprise yours with an unwrapped and ready-to-eat treat or a toy. Drop it into a paper sack and let him get it out.

For the next game, all you need is a bathtub and a wad of paper or some other round object like a ping-pong ball.

Put the homemade puck in the tub and give it a swat sending it rolling around the perimeter. The sound will grab the cat's attention and she'll soon be in the tub, providing the paw momentum to keep the puck in play.

Be sure to close the drain.

In another version, cut holes in a box large enough to push the ping-pong ball or puck through. Then turn over the box and let your cats stick in their arms to bat around the ball while lying on or next to the box.

If someone else is home, enlist their help for a game of keep-away with your pet.

Using one of your pet's favorite toys, just encourage your dog to get the object, and then start tossing back and forth.

If the dog manages to grab the flying object, reward him or let him run with it and turn the game into a chase.

If he doesn't get the ball, towel or toy away quickly, let him have it occasionally to keep his interest.

Another suggestion by the society plays on a dog's desire to be with his master.

Command your dog to stay and then hide somewhere in the house such as behind a door, in the shower or in an open closet. Then call your dog in an inviting, playful voice. Keep calling him as he races around the house looking for you.

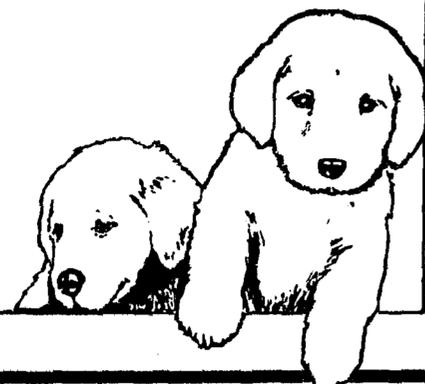

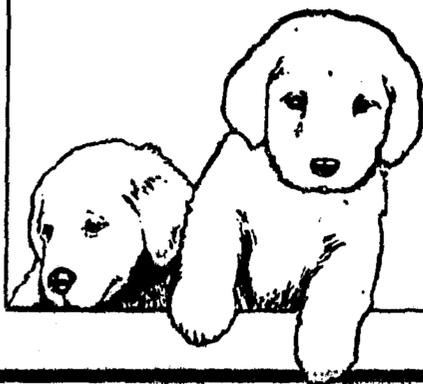

When he discovers you, reward him with hugs, pats and praises and try it again. Keep the game between you and your dog. Letting others hide at the same time, may confuse him.

Pet ownership is nothing to sneeze about

Allergy sufferers shouldn't despair. Several dog breeds do not shed. They are the poodle, the Kerry blue terrier, the soft-coated wheaten terrier, the bichon frisé.

the Bedlington terrier, the Irish water spaniel, the Portugese water dog and the Schnauzer. The Mexican hairless and Chinese crested have virtually no hair to shed.

Good grooming is more than just looks

Grooming is far from a frill for most dogs. It serves as much more than just a visual boost.

Randy Basch, manager of the Humane Society's animal shelter and a professional groomer, said it stimulates and distributes the natural oils that make an animal's coat shiny. Grooming also removes dead hair, dirt and other foreign matter and it prevents matting.

It allows early detection of health problems, dry skin, parasites and wounds. And during those sessions at home between visits to a professional groomer, it can provide quality bonding time for pets and owners.

Grooming services are offered by some area veterinarians and other Humane Society supporters such as Clutter's Pet Shop, boarding kennels and local grooming businesses.

Alison Walstad of Hondo Valley Kennels, who donates a free grooming for any pet adopted from the society's animal shelter, offered a few grooming tips for home sessions:

Four key areas should be included in a home grooming routine: coat, teeth, nails and ears.

When grooming the coat, brush all the way down to the skin. The massaging action stimulates the blood circulation and loosens and removes flakes of dandruff.

Carefully remove mats and solid masses of hair, found most often behind the ears and under the legs in long-haired dogs. Be extremely careful not to cut the skin.

A dog should be bathed as seldom as possible. Frequent washing removed natural oils and causes the coat to become dry and harsh.

When necessary, bathing should be done with a mild soap, baby shampoo or coconut-oil shampoo. Plug the dog's ears with cotton and place a gentle ophthalmic ointment or a few drops of mineral oil in his eyes.

Rinse all shampoo out of the coat and avoid drafts until the dog is thoroughly dry.

Nails should be trimmed about once a month, so that they just clear the floor. In active dogs, it may not be necessary, because they may wear their nails down through exercise on rough surfaces.

To trim your dog's nails, use specially designed nail trimmers from a pet shop. Make the cut just outside the pink bloodline visible in white nails; in dark nails, remove only the hook-like part of the nail that turns down.

Ears should be cleaned about once a month, more often if the dog is prone to ear problems. Using a damp towel or cotton ball, soaked in mineral oil or alcohol, clean only the part of the inner ear that you can see, never stick anything beyond that area.

In case of ear infection or excess hair in ears, consult your veterinarian.

Just because dogs don't (or shouldn't) eat sweets, doesn't mean they don't suffer from tooth problems. Regular at-home tooth cleaning can prevent many harmful problems.

Clean your dog's teeth about twice a week. A gauze pad or washcloth, wrapped around your finger and dipped in baking soda works great. Vigorously scrub teeth from gum to crown.

These grooming measures will help keep your pets looking and feeling their best, but are no substitutes for regular examinations by a veterinarian.

Feed your pets right...

Pets have different nutritional needs based on their breed, age, size, general overall health, special medical problems and a number of other variables.

The type of food they receive will have a significant impact on their fitness and quality of life, according to the ADVOCATE, a publication of the American Humane Association's Animal Protection Division.

Your veterinarian may have specific suggestions for a particular pet, but some general guidelines are listed below:

—Cats should not be fed milk because it contains lactose that can be difficult to digest. They could suffer symptoms of diarrhea. Good substitutes are cottage cheese or yogurt, which contain much lower levels of lactose.

—Give dogs rawhide chew bones or hard rubber chew toys. Bones can splinter and lodge in a dog's throat, mouth or stomach.

—Be careful with generic foods. They may not contain the nutrients your pet needs.

—Don't feed cats dog food. Cats need an amino acid called taurine that is not contained in dog food. The lack of taurine leads to blindness and death.

—Go light on table scraps. Pets have different nutritional needs than humans and table scraps should not account for more than a fourth of his meals.

—Excessive consumption of chocolate could be lethal for dogs. Most cats don't like it, but many dogs do and they can not process it like humans.

Tips for successful housebreaking

Housebreaking a puppy should be an easy task, not an emotional scene for either owner or dog.

Bear in mind the average dog is basically neat and prefers to keep his sleeping area clean.

Puppies almost always will relieve themselves within 20 minutes after eating and usually soon after awakening.

Dogs also enjoy picking a spot that they or another dog already have anointed.

Veterinarians stress that the trick is timing. A pup should be confined to a crate or carrier at night, then taken out first thing in the morning to the spot in the yard reserved as his bathroom.

If he has wetted a newspaper, take that page out into the yard. The scent should help pinpoint the spot. Once he has performed, praise him for his good work.

Follow the same procedure after each meal. Take him out to the same spot and wait. Play a little. Sometimes it helps speed up the process.

If a pup errs inside during your absence, it's best to overlook the mistake and clean it out outside of his view. But if you catch him in the act, scold him and take him outside immediately. If he manages to come up with some more to eliminate, praise him lavishly.

Be sure to clean "mistake" spots in the house well enough to remove any lingering scent. Never scold if the mistake is a result of diarrhea. Be sure to attach one word to the action to help your pup begin to recognize it.

Soft Paws takes the sting out of kitty climbing

Much to the chagrin of many of those living in the nation's 59 million cat households, their cats just ignore the scratching post. They prefer instead to tear up an expensive carpet or a treasured chair cushion.

A Louisiana veterinarian has come up with a solution that will save wear and tear on cat owners, their families and the furniture.

Soft Paws is a set of press-on fingernails that cover a cat's claws, deterring its ability to scratch humans and shred sofas.

The non-irritating vinyl Soft Paws slip snugly over the cat's newly trimmed nails and stay put with a non-toxic adhesive.

Invented by Dr. Toby Wexler, a veterinarian in LaFayette, LA., Soft Paws is distributed by Smart-Practice of Phoenix, Arizona.

Thirty claw caps, a tube of adhesive, three applicator tips and an instruction sheet come in each kit, which sell for about $12.

A cat's nails must be trimmed first. The adhesive dries quickly and a cat will be ready to walk with no discomfort at all in a few minutes. The nails can retract as normal.

Just like human fingernails, however, the cat's nails also will grow out in about four to six weeks. The artificial caps will be pushed off as the new section of claw grows and a new set will have to be put in place.

Of course, cat owners have the option of trimming their pet's nails on a regularly basis. Another approach is to declaw the front paws, but many people are adverse to putting their pets through that ordeal.

A free consumer brochure on Soft Paws is available at .....

Roadmap for more humane pet care

The ADVOCATE, published by the American Humane Association's Animal Protection Division, recently suggested 10 steps to kinder pet ownership.

1. Spay or neuter pets as soon as possible for their benefit and for the benefit of their species.

2. Introduce overweight dogs to one of the high-quality, low-calorie pet foods. Cut table scraps out of their diet.

3. Put a collar with current identification your dog or cat. Make sure it fits, especially with a young pet that's growing.

4. Take pets in for a professional grooming and follow up with daily brushing and routine bathing and nail clipping.

5. Reward your pets' devotion by making playtime a part of your daily routine. They yearn for attention.

6. Sign up for an obedience class, regardless of your pet's age, if there is some behavior that could stand to be refined. You'll both enjoy and benefit from the experience.

7. Small pets such as rabbits, hamsters, rats, guinea pigs and mice, need attention too. Provide some variety in their diets and supply them with clean bedding, stimulating toys and a roomy habitat.

8. Take your pets on at least annual visits to the veterinarian. Vaccine boosters, teeth cleaning and physical examination will help pets live long, comfortable and healthy lives.

9. Dogs require daily walks. Enjoy the time together and get some exercise too. You may be able to coax your cat or rabbit to explore the world on a leash too.

10. Bring your cat inside permanently. Indoor cats live longer, healthier, safer lives. You'll never again have to worry about the dangers beyond the front door.

Fascinating feline facts...

Cats and Dogs both are descended from tree dwelling animals called miacis that lived more than 13 million years ago.

The giraffe, the camel and the cat are the only creatures that walk by moving front and hind legs together first on one side, then the other.

Famous cats lovers include Abe Lincoln, George Washington, Winston Churchill, Albert Einstein and Mark Twain.

Cats' hearing is among the sharpest in the animal world. A cat can recognize its owners footsteps from hundreds of feet away.

The oldest cat on record was "Puss," who died in 1939, one day after its thirty-sixth birthday.

The heaviest cat on record is a 45-pound, 10-ounce Himalayan weighed in Cairns, Australia in 1982.

The most prolific cat on record gave birth to a total 420 kittens in her lifetime.

The most popular names for cats in the United States are "tiger" for males and "samantha" for females.

Cats purr at 26 cycles per second, the same frequency as an idling diesel engine.

Cats not only purr to show contentment, but also to indicate a need for attention, an illness or injury.

A cat uses its tail to balance while walking as well as for communication. A relaxed cat holds its tail down, but may raise it slightly if it becomes interested in something or someone.

An adult cat sleeps on average of 18 hours a day, much of it in five or 10 minute catnaps. It spends about 30 percent of its waking hours grooming itself.

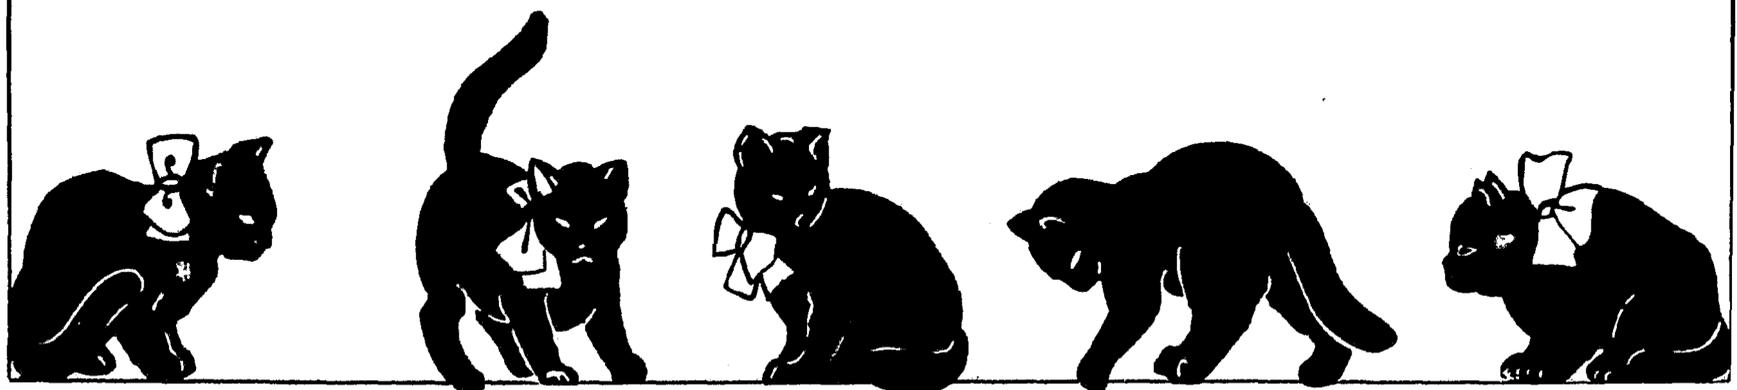

Cats have an average of 24 whiskers, arranged in four horizontal rows on each side of the nose.

Forty-nine breeds of cat are recognized by the International Cat Association.

One in 3,000 calico and tortoise shell cats will be a male. Only one in 10,000 will be a fertile male.

Shelter animals are best

Buffy jumped into the chair next to Debbie Bolton, snuggled her backside into place and rested a wet nose on the padded arm.

The two-year-old chow/labrador mix certainly knew her place in the order of this family.

"I think animals from a shelter are more appreciative," Mrs. Bolton said. "They're really loving."

Buffy was adopted from the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter on Gavilan Canyon Road when she was about eight weeks old. The couple's Siamese mix cat, Colada, came from the shelter in Deming, the Bolton's home town. Both animals have been spayed.

Ironically, Randy Basch, manager of the Lincoln County humane facility for more than four years, headed the Deming shelter then.

"He called me because I was looking for a pure white cat and he was sure this was it," said Jeff Bolton. "Years later, she has a striped tail and body color and I think she's beautiful."

The Boltons hardly endorse shelter adoptions.

"We've had great luck with every animal we've chosen from a shelter," Bolton said.

Adoption seems to be second nature in the Bolton family.

"I was adopted," Bolton said. "We adopted all of our animals. I adopted my daughter. I want to give back because so much has been given to me."

The Boltons said it's difficult for them to understand how a pet owner can give up their defenseless and devoted companions.

"I've never known a bad animal, just bad animal owners," Bolton said. "It's the same as kids from a dysfunctional family. When you take an animal in, it becomes part of the family."

"Mixed breeds may not be any good for dog shows, but you still can look for the best attributes and select what attracts you."

THE BOLTON FAMILY

Dogs: best friend of the whole family

The famous truism, "A dog is man's best friend," first was spoken 119 years ago in a Warrensburg, Missouri courtroom.

Charles Burden sued his neighbor Leonidas Hornsby after finding his beloved foxhound, Old Drum, shot dead.

To represent him in the courtroom, Burden hired George Graham Vest. The attorney wrung out the jury's hearts and a $500 damage award with these words:

"Gentlemen of the jury, the best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter, whom he has reared with loving care, may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us — those whom we trust with our happiness and good name — may become traitors in their faith.

"The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it the most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action.

"The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads.

"The one absolute, unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world — the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous — is his dog.

"Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he can be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world.

"He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wing and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens.

"If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies.

"And when the last scene of all comes and death takes the master in its embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even in death."

Myths breed misguided animal owners

Misguided or neglectful pet owners often based their failure to spay and neuter their animals on myths that have been floating around for generations.

Randy Basch, manager of the Lincoln County Humane Society shelter, said that stopping the reproduction of unwanted animals should be the solution to over-population, instead of the inhumane approach of killing abandoned pets.

"When people bring in puppies and mother dogs they don't want, I hear things like — she keeps having litters, like it was the dog's fault," Basch said.

"And they say other ridiculous things like they keep her tied in the yard, but the yard isn't fenced. Or they're sure we can find good homes for the pups even though they couldn't.

"The sad fact is that puppies brought to the shelter have a low chance for survival. Usually, the owners have not given them protective shots. They are likely to pick up Parvo or distemper. And the sheer numbers require that many be put down."

Basch responded to some of the common myths owners hide behind include:

MYTH: If I have my pet neutered, it will get fat and lazy.

FACT: Improper diet and lack of exercise make pets fat and lazy, not spaying or neutering. Correct amounts of pet food and adequate exercise will keep your pet fit and trim.

MYTH: Neutering will break my pet's spirit.

FACT: All neutering does is prevent your pet from reproducing. It does not affect your pet's personality, spirit or temperament, except to relieve anxiety, stress and aggression.

MYTH: A female should have at least one litter before she is spayed.

FACT: No medical evidence supports this statement. In fact, the longer a female goes without being spayed, the more likely she is to get mammary tumors or uterine infections. Unneutered males also are more prone to prostate disorders and cancer. Unaltered pets are more likely to escape from you trying to find a mate, sometimes resulting in the pet being lost, stolen or hit by a car. A spayed or neutered pet should be healthier and live longer.

MYTH: It's all right to breed my pet as long as I find homes for the litters.

FACT: Ten animals compete for every home. Nine lose. Each new animal brought into the world means that others will have to die in shelters or face starvation and abuse on the streets. Many people are distressed to find that less than 50 percent of the pets they found "good" homes for are still in those homes a year later.

MYTH: All children should experience the miracle of birth.

FACT: Books, films and classes are available to teach children about birth. Letting your pet breed for litters you have no intention of keeping is irresponsible. That sense of irresponsibility is what you really are teaching your children. Complete their education. Take them to the shelter to learn the tragedy of death waiting for those unwanted pups and kittens.

MYTH: I can't afford it.

FACT: Spaying or neutering is a one-time only charge. This dramatically reduces the animal's chances of getting tumors, cancers and injuries related to running at large: something that could be much more expensive in the long run. The cost of caring for unwanted animals also is reflected in your tax dollars. By altering your pet, you are saving lives and surely, that too has value.

MYTH: The Humane Society can make money by selling all the puppies and kittens that are brought to the shelter.

FACT: Humane Societies don't make money from pet adoptions. Unwanted litters are a financial burden for shelters, not a source of income. To adopt an animal from the Ruidoso shelter, you pay $18 to $45 for neutering or spaying and $7.50 for a rabies shot. That money goes to the veterinarian. Only the $2.50 to $5 for a city license goes to the shelter.

It's a dog's life

Being a backyard dog is a lonely job most of the time.

The American Humane Society in its Shoptalk magazine recently pointed out the despair associated with being relegated to the isolation of a chain or back yard:

"You see one in every community, a dog tied day after day to a back porch or fence, lying lonely on a pad of bare, packed dirt. The waterbowl, if there is one, usually is empty or just out of reach.

Abandoned, but chained up, backyard dogs cannot move to comfort, shelter or companionship. In winter, they shiver. In summer, they languish. Year round, they suffer.

Of course, dogs can be forced to live outside, alone and away from their human pack. But to force this kind of life on a dog is one of the worst things you can do. Being alone goes against the dog's most basic instinct.

If you doubt this, think of all the whining, barking, clawing dogs you have seen tied alone outside. These dogs are trying desperately to get the attention of their human families.

People who keep their dogs constantly tied outside rationalize it, saying that they do spend time with them. But even the most well-meaning among them do not spend significant time with their animal companions.

Under the best of circumstances, the backyard dog gets a bowl of food and water, a quick pat on the head and maybe a few minutes of contact with another living being each day.

Dogs can offer people the gift of steadfast devotion, abiding love and joyful companionship. Unless people accept those offerings and take the time to return them in kind, it would be best not to get a dog.

A sad, lonely, bewildered dog tied out back only suffers, and what sort of person wants to maintain suffering?"

The author of the piece is unknown.

In dog years...

Feeling old this morning? Then have a little empathy for your dog, because he's aging at a much faster rate.

Although a one-year-old dog physiologically is about on a par with a 13-year-old child, the difference per year slows after that to seven man years and then levels off at about five. Here's a general guideline based on the assumption that the average lifespan of a dog is about 11 years.

DOG YEARS	MAN YEARS
2	20
3	25
4	30
5	35

A DOG SITS WAITING

A dog sits waiting in the cold autumn sun

Too faithful to leave
Too frightened to run
He's been there for days now
With nothing to do
But sit by the road just waiting for you
He can't understand why you left him that day;
He thought you were stopping to go with him to play.

He's sure you'll come back
And that's why he stays
How long can he suffer, how many more days?

His legs have grown weak,
his throat parched and dry,

He's sick now from hunger
He fall, with a sigh
He lays down his head
He closes his eyes.
I wish you could see how a waiting dog dies.

Caring veterinarians are key to successful shelter

For a humane society to operate successfully, it must have the support of local veterinarians, who are willing to cooperate on clinics, community education projects and special adoption programs.

Lincoln County is fortunate to have special cooperation from Ruidoso-area veterinarians. Below Drs. Lynn Willard, Warren Franklin and Earl Leslie discuss some areas of concern in selecting and caring for pets.

Dr. Lynn Willard:

One visit to the Lincoln County Humane Society will convince anyone the number of unwanted pets is heart-breaking.

Although there are various reasons why the shelter is overwhelmed with unwanted animals, one is the consequence of a mismatch between the temperament of a dog or cat and its caretakers' personality and lifestyle.

An estimated 1.5-million serious dog bites are reported each year in the United States. That equates to one bite for every 33 dogs owned. The tragic result is that more than 300 dogs are put to sleep each day for curable behavioral problems.

Not all the incidents are the result of incompatibility. But choosing a pet should entail serious consideration of breed and temperament.

Picking up a cute, fuzzy kitten or puppy at a supermarket parking lot is called impulsive pet selection and probably is not a good idea. Consider what it will look like in a year and how it will interact in your neighborhood. How will it get along with other family members?

In a year, will your puppy be running loose, reproducing or biting someone? Will the Humane Society add your pet or its offspring to its already full kennels.

Puppies should be selected based on breed, behavior and temperament. A prospective pet owner should be concerned with size and how much exercise an animal will need; hair type, shedding and the need for grooming; and overall temperament.

Several dimensions of temperament have been defined, including indoor and outdoor activity, vigor, behavior constancy, dominance in the presence of strange dogs and familiar people, territoriality, emotional stability, sociability with strangers, learning rate, obedience and problem solving, watchdog ability and guard dog ability.

Ask for guidance from a local veterinarian or the Humane Society representatives. Pick up one of the many books on canine training, selection and behavior.

Pet ownership is a commitment. Make it a lasting one.

Dr. Warren Franklin:

Worming of pets should be scheduled twice a year in most cases. Internal parasites may cause damage that goes beyond disruption of the intestinal tract.

They have complex migratory lifecycles and the larvae can migrate to the liver, lungs, skin and eyes, causing diarrhea, vomiting, coughing, jaundice and general malaise.

A more important reason has been highlighted in recent years with the increase of parasitic infections in humans communicated from dogs and cats.

Children playing near litter boxes or in sandboxes where animals may have frequented is a common method of infection.

Some cases, where the larvae reaches the brain, eyes or liver, can be highly dangerous and even fatal. But the simple precaution of worming can eliminate exposure from family pets to round worms and hook worms.

Routine worming for tapeworms also is advised, although some owners prefer to bring a fecal sample from their pets to avoid unnecessary worming.

Annual immunizations against Parvo and distemper also is recommended.

If they aren't fatal, they can mean a long stay at the veterinarian's and costly medication. They are diseases that are very difficult to beat.

Vaccinations are recommended at eight, twelve and sixteen weeks for pets weaned after six weeks. If weaned earlier, an additional shot should be given earlier.

The vaccinations protect against leptospirosis, Parvo, hepatitis, parainfluenza, distemper and corona virus.

Feline vaccinations are needed at about eight weeks, with a booster at 13 weeks. The vaccine covers rhino tracheitis, calici virus, chlamydia and panleukopenia.

Rabies vaccinations, of course, are required for both dogs and cats at 12 weeks and then annually. Lincoln County historically has outbreaks of rabies, usually tied to skunks or raccoons.

Protection against feline leukemia also is urged.

Boosters should be kept up even as a dog ages, because immune systems in older animals are less efficient.

Dr. Earl Leslie:

Regular checkups are extremely important, especially for very young or older pets.

Retained baby teeth, hernias, heart murmurs, breeding and behavioral problems are just a few of the conditions that can be treated successfully when diagnosed at an earlier age.

The older pet, cats, dogs and some of the more exotic pets, have many common health problems that can be treated safely and effectively when caught early.

Teeth and gum problems often are overlooked by owners as just part of growing older, but the yellow to brown deposits on a pet's teeth can lead to a more serious gum infection that is a source of complications for other organs.

Scaling and cleaning the teeth can be done safely with the newer inhalant anesthetics available to veterinarians.

Simple screening tests on blood and urine can pinpoint potential problems developing with the kidneys in an older pet. A change of diet often can slow the course of the disease, if detected early enough.

A older pet that is inactive, yet drinks a large amount of water may be symptoms of a kidney problem, diabetes, thyroid dysfunction or disturbances in the endocrine system.

At least annual examinations for a pet can make a world of difference.

Help stop the population explosion

Population problems in the human world don't even begin to compare to the population explosion in the pet world.

According to a release from the Humane Society of Lincoln County, starting with one female dog, with an annual reproduction rate of four puppies, two of them female; seven years later she and her female offspring will have produced 4,372 puppies.

For every human born, 15 dogs and 45 cats are brought into the world.

More than 14-million unwanted dogs and cats are killed each year in impounding facilities and shelters across the nation.

Please spay and neuter your pets.

A rare breed...

The rarest breed of dog, now extinct, was Canada's native Tahl-tan Bear dog. Only three were known to exist as of 1980. They consisted of two spayed females and a 14 year-old male. The rarest breed now recognized is the American hairless terrier. Only 70 now exist and 68 of those are owned by the same people.

Vaccine can protect feline friends from disease

Feline infectious peritonitis (FIP) is a painful and almost always fatal disease.

More than 25 years after the discovery of the disease, no precise diagnostic test exists, no effective treatment and no cure. A preventive vaccination is the only way to protect a cat.

The vaccine is recommended for use in cats 16 weeks of age or older.

The disease virus can be shed in saliva, urine and feces of infected cats. The most natural route of infection is through the mouth or nose.

Studies indicate as much as 25 percent of cats worldwide may be exposed to a corona-virus, which is the group that includes the FIP virus.

Once signs of the disease occur, the condition cannot be successfully treated or cured. In the most dramatic form, called wet FIP, the cat's abdomen swells with fluid as a result of widespread injury to the circulatory system.

Fluid also may accumulate in the chest cavity, causing breathing difficulty. Other signs of this forms and the more prolonged dry FIP include general illness, fever, weight loss, anemia and depression. The dry form also exhibits itself in central nervous system abnormalities such as partial or complete paralysis of hind legs, convulsions and personality changes.

Cats at highest risk are those kept outdoors, those raised in multi-cat households and these stressed from malnutrition or other infections.

Sponsors can be lifesavers for homeless animals

Sponsors willing to pay for the spaying or neutering of animals are needed to improve the abandoned pets' chances of survival and adoption.

Neutering can run from $18 for a male cat to $45 for a female dog.

The donation may be earmarked for a particular animal or for any of the animals up for adoption. Being a sponsor is the most direct way to help save a dog, cat or other animals.

The shelter occasionally is a refuge for unwanted or injured birds, domesticated rodents, miniature pigs and assorted other creatures.

Donations also may be directed to the foster puppy program, in which volunteers provide a home for litters until protective shots take effect. The money would be used to pay for puppy food.

Unprotected puppies, even though they receive shots when entering the shelter, usually die from distemper, Parvo or other infectious diseases.

Volunteers for the puppy program this fall and winter also are needed. And donations toward the general operation of the society's shelter are greatly appreciated at any time.

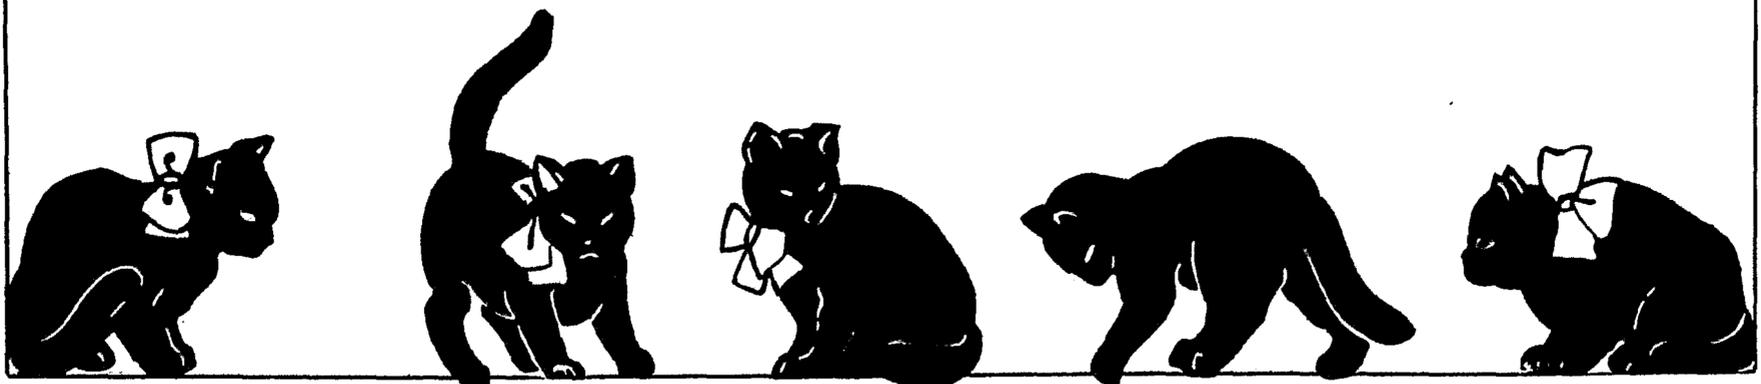

For more information, call shelter manager Randy Basch at 257-9841 or stop by to chat at the Gavilan Canyon Road facility.

Puppet show raises funds for Society

The imaginative puppeteering of Loren Kahn will delight audiences at 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Saturday, August 29 at White Mountain Elementary.

Kahn's puppet show is an annual event to benefit the Lincoln County Humane Society.

Tickets are $4 for general admission. Donated tickets will be available at the door.
