Voters pass hospital tax 1,431 to 82

In a landslide of support county voters approved the renewal of a mill levy for Lincoln County Medical Center and its clinics on Tuesday.

"I think it reflects a huge vote of confidence that we guard their tax money well," said Valerie Miller, LCMC administrator.

The unofficial results from the county clerk's office recorded 1,431 votes for the mill levy and 82 against it. The voter turnout for the one issue ballot was 22.7 percent, which the clerk's office said is great for a one issue tax question.

In precinct one, voting at Corona, 55 votes were cast for the levy and three against. For precincts 2A and 13 at Carrizozo 229 voted in favor of it and nine against. In precinct 2B at Nogal, 40 voted in favor and one against, while precinct three voters at Capitan cast 171 votes in favor and 20 against.

At precinct four and five at the Bonito Fire Department, 106 votes were in favor of the levy and six against. Precinct six and seven voters at the county sub office cast 245 votes for it and 20 against. Voters in precinct eight and nine at the Ruidoso Library voted 268 in favor and six against. Voting in precinct 10 and 11 at Ruidoso Downs went 91 for and seven against, while in San Patricio voters cast 53 in favor and six against.

Precinct 12B voters at Hondo cast 56 in favor and two against. Voters in precinct 12C at the old Capitan city hall voted 28 for and none against. The clerk's office also received 89 absentee ballots in favor and two against.

Miller said the positive votes in the Carrizozo and Corona areas show a real mandate to those clinics.

"They are proud of it, and they don't want it close," she said.

The vote at Hondo and San Patricio shows a lot of support for the new clinic there too. With the vote of approval 3.25 mills will go to LCMC and one mill will go to the Carrizozo, Corona and Hondo clinics. Under the current mill levy LCMC received the 3.25, but only the Carrizozo clinic was on the last ballot.

The current 4.25 mills was to run out June 30, 1993, but will now continue on July 1, 1993, for eight more years. Miller also agreed that the turnout for the election was very good when in past experiences the turnout had been around 11-12 percent.

The vote is a clear mandate that what LCMC has done what the people need and want, Miller said. The campaign for the approval of the levy would not have mattered, though, if the employees at the hospital and clinics hadn't given good service to the people, she said.

Miller thanked the hospital board of trustees, the mill levy committee, the hospital auxiliary and staff who have all helped inform people about the hospital, as well as all the residents who voted on the issue.

"I think this is reflective of the perception people have of this place and the care it gives," Miller said.

Next up? Aspenfest!

The turning of the leaves from green to gold is a sign that fall is here and that the annual Aspenfest celebration will kick off soon.

The season itself draws people here to drive through the mountains for nature on display in all of its colors, but plenty of fun activities are planned for October 2-4 in Ruidoso.

Put on your boots and be ready to scoot across that dance floor to the sounds of the Graham Brothers Band at the family dance from 7-11 p.m. on October 2 at the School House Park. Admission is free so bring the whole family.

The Aspenfest parade will wind its way through downtown starting at 10 a.m. Saturday, October 3, and the entries should be the best ever as paid entrants compete for a new traveling trophy for the best entry.

Emergency phone plan will link entire county

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A county-wide enhanced 911 system is closer to reality with Ruidoso Downs' decision to keep its own dispatchers but to have its emergency answering center at the Ruidoso police department.

The village had agreed with this proposal for E911 service but had not yet given its official approval to the county E911 board until Monday night. Dr. Bernhard Reimann, who became the new chairperson of the board a week ago, presented two proposals to the Downs board of trustees on how the calls could be handled. Ruidoso Downs was the last community in the county he needed approval from to keep the program moving.

An act creating Enhanced 911 was passed by the state legislature in 1989, and in 1990 a county board was formed to assist in implementing the plan. Communities began passing resolutions in favor of the proposed system of a Public Safety Answering Point (PSAP) at the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department and at the Ruidoso Police Department, but at that time Ruidoso Downs also wanted a PSAP.

The village later decided just two PSAPs would be more suitable, but Reimann said no minutes on the approval were kept by the county board. He said when he took over as chairperson he wanted to get the decision approved and on the minutes so the board could continue in its process of implementing E911.

Robert Gunter, state coordinator for E911, was also at the meeting to explain the proposals. He said collection of fees have already begun and $3.5 million has been gathered for the state so far. Each month 50 cents is collected from each telephone customer, with half going to purchase county equipment and half for the phone company's equipment. He said this county is eligible for about $211,000, and $178,000 would go to equipment and $24,000 to installation. The legislature has also provided $60,000 for maintenance for 1993-1998.

Collecting 25 cents wouldn't be enough to give Ruidoso Downs a PSAP too, he said. Each center costs about $70,000 but having a receiving point would cost about $10,000. Gunter said the current estimated cost for the whole network is more than has been collected so far.

Gunter said another option for the village would be to have the Ruidoso police department dispatch the calls to the proper emergency service instead of sending the call to the Downs dispatcher to do.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst said the whole village agrees that it doesn't want to consolidate dispatchers with Ruidoso, so that wouldn't be an option for the Downs.

In answering a question of the village attorney, police chief Will Hoggard said they may have to help pay for personnel costs for running the PSAP, but another cost will be to have a dispatcher at the Downs office 24-hours a day to respond to the emergency calls. He said his office dispatches all services for the village.

Currently callers in Ruidoso Downs have to dial the police department at 378-4001 in an emergency. Please see Emergency, page 2A

Council's tax savings could be the result of 'shell game'

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The public deserves less council bragging and more truth about tax cuts, according to Ruidoso Village Councilor Jerry Shaw.

Shaw said transferring airport bond money to the general fund to operate the village may not be illegal, but it's hardly a tax saving device either.

"I keep hearing we saved so much money at the airport and this prompted me to do a little research," Shaw said at the last council meeting.

After the meeting, Shaw talked to several people regarding the shifting of funds.

She said by ordinance the money should have stayed with airport operations.

Shaw gave a history of the bond and the ordinance amending the bond.

"On December 18, 1986, a majority of qualified voters in Ruidoso voted a 1/2 percent gross receipts tax.

"The purpose of the tax was to pay the appraised value ($2.5 million) of the old airport land to the Federal Aviation Authority (FAA) for the new airport.

"There was a lot of discussion at that time about going for a 1/2 or 1/4 percent tax. The council decided on 1/2 percent noting that the bond issue could be paid off sooner.

"The 1/2 percent creates $580,274 a year in funds. The bond payment is $377,474 leaving an excess of $202,800.

"In early 1987, an ordinance (87-04) was passed dedicating the 1/2 percent revenue from the tax to airport purposes.

"In 1990, the Victor Alonso council cut the mill levy that had been brought in by the Lloyd Davis council. They also took the $202,800 tax revenue money from the airport and put that money into the general fund.

"Without that maneuver it would have been much harder to cut the annual property tax.

"Now, during the 1992 budget hearings, it was decided to refinance those same airport bonds and stretch them out over an even longer period of time. This would leave another $145,000 out of that same tax money to go into the general fund," Shaw said.

"That would make $347,800 of that tax money dedicated to the airport that will go into the general fund.

"Extending the loan from 15 years to 20 years will cost a lot more interest and will also defeat the purpose of the prior council to pay off the loan quicker with the 1/2 percent gross receipts tax."

"They said they went in and cleaned house and saved all this money. But in this case their taking money out of one pocket and putting it in the other, and creating more long-term debt service in interest."

"It seems misleading to play around with these bonds unless the public knows where the money is coming from and where it is being spent," she said.

During the last council meeting, Shaw was intent on reminding Alonso of the circumstances.

Alonso said he had a slightly different perspective.

"What happened is that the airport was losing money in its operating fund. Not the 1990 council (his council) but the council before that (Lloyd Davis's council) by ordinance changed the law," Alonso said.

"The people voted to tax themselves to buy airport land. The (Davis) council then, by ordinance, voted to change what the people had agreed to and started putting money into the operations of the airport to pay for the red ink with which the airport was operating," Alonso said.

"What we (his council) did was cut the expenses of operating the airport, more in keeping with the original referendum that the people approved," he said.

That reduction included eliminating the operations of a tower and cutting one employee.

"But what bothers me, is that we are fixing to refinance bonds and this Ordinance 87-04 has never been rescinded," Shaw said. "You and I were both on the council and we both voted for it."

"It says to dedicate the revenue from the tax for airport purposes including but not necessarily limited to (a number of things.)"

Alonso couldn't recall voting the way Shaw mentioned.

"The thing that people voted on said the acquisition of real estate. I don't remember being a part of the council that agreed to spend the money other than that," Alonso said.

"You voted on this, so did I," Shaw said holding a copy of ordinance 87-04.

"You may have me on that one," Alonso said.

Shaw indicated a more forthright approach would be to rescind the ordinance.

"Since we keep playing around with that bond ordinance, maybe we should rescind it and (make it clear) that any excess money go into the general fund," she said.

Ruidoso is seasoned just right for a busy fall.

Once the Golden Aspen Rally and Aspenfest, with its chili cookoff, arts and crafts fairs and parade, become just a memory, the fun continues.

Stick around the area for the second weekend of October and you'll see why the cowboy is America's hero.

The third annual Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium will be October 8-11 at the Ruidoso Super Select Sales Pavilion at Glencoe.

Activities for the four-day celebration include the world's richest chuckwagon cookoff, historical trail rides, cowboy music and storytelling, western arts and crafts and team roping.

Downs board approves salary funds for C of C staffer

by KRISTIE SULZBACH
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Although they would have preferred something that has a more direct promotional benefit to the village, Ruidoso Downs trustees will give a new chamber of commerce project a year to see if it will get the results they want.

The Downs trustees vote three to one in favor of providing $5,800 to the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce to hire a part-time person for a year to respond to visitor inquiries about the area.

Chamber executive director Joan Bailey had requested the funds from the lodgers tax advisory board and received approval, but trustees tabled it at their last meeting until she provided them a job description and a list of the Ruidoso Downs businesses that are members of the chamber of commerce.

Bailey had told the board that in the first seven months of this year the chamber has had more visitor inquiries than all of last year, and the staff has been overwhelmed trying to get information out to people within a 24-hour period. It is not only because of paid advertisements in such magazines as New Mexico Magazine and Texas Monthly, but also because of free promotions in national magazines as a top vacation spot, she said.

Mayor Joe Hayhurst first said he didn't have a problem with supporting the chamber, but he would be more willing to give the money for advertising to get the name of the village added to more advertisements. Bailey said the chamber gets its current advertising money from the Village of Ruidoso, but she would be happy to come back to request funds for advertising Ruidoso Downs. She said she was making the request for the salary because of the consequences of the current advertising campaign.

"The demand shows we don't need so much more advertising as someone to take care of those who respond," she said.

Bailey said their advertising has been a county-wide effort, which means mention of all communities in the county. Advertising more wouldn't address the problem they have now, she said.

She said she recently met with representatives of the Museum of the Horse because they wanted to know what the chamber had done for advertising the upcoming Cowboy Symposium before they planned their own advertising.

She said she also met with Mark Doth, marketing director at Ruidoso Downs Race Track, on next year's season. Many people say the racetrack takes care of the summer, but that isn't fair to the track, she said.

Doth, who attended the meeting in support of the chamber, said he has served as a director on the chamber and as a member of a lodgers tax board so he understood the trustees' concerns.

"Sure, $5,000 would help to advertise, but it won't mean a thing if there is no one to answer the calls," he said.

During the racetrack's peak period in the summer, Doth said they get about 1,000 calls a day, but a third of those are from people wanting to know where to stay or where to eat and even what other activities are available in the area. He said they usually refer the callers to the chamber through its 1-800 number.

In answering telephone inquiries, Bailey said the staff first asks when they are coming and if they have any particular type of lodging or area in mind. She said during the summer more than half of the people want to stay in Ruidoso Downs and in the winter most people want to stay in Alto. The staff makes the referral, on a rotating basis, to lodgers or businesses that fit the person's needs.

"Our first goal is to satisfy the request and that depends on what they are looking for. We give out the phone numbers and information on any business they ask about, even if it isn't a chamber business," she said.

Currently 10 businesses in Ruidoso Downs are members of the chamber and several of them made calls to the mayor or wrote letters of support for this project.

Bailey had said that there were about 20 members, but she found out many of those were actually in the county.

Village clerk Leann Weibrecht asked if Ruidoso Downs motels and businesses published brochures, could they be distributed at the chamber? Both Bailey and chamber president Paul Crown responded that they definitely could, especially since the Village of Ruidoso Downs is a member of the chamber.

Chamber visitor promotions director Lisa Storey said she feels strongly about promoting the whole area when she does her job. She is also vice president of the Apache Trails group, which also promotes the region. She said she puts an Apache Trails brochure in every information packet she sends out, and it has a map of the whole area, showing Ruidoso Downs is a separate community.

The sites and attractions for visitors are also listed for each town, including the race track and the Museum of the Horse for Ruidoso Downs. Downs businesses are also listed on the lodging and dining guide that they send out to potential visitors, she said.

The part-time person would help Storey with her duties in providing information to the general public through mail, telephone and personal contact with walk-in visitors. The job description states that the results will be measured on the acceptance of the image perceived by visitors, members, the public and all others who have contact with the chamber.

Village attorney Bob Beauvais said since the chamber does give referrals to all businesses, including those in Ruidoso Downs, the village could legally approve the advertising funds for this project, but he recommended the two groups sign a contract and also establish a feedback system on how this is helping the village. If the referrals are done in a fair manner this could be money well spent, he said.

Bailey said she is required by the Village of Ruidoso to give a report each quarter, and she could also give one at the Ruidoso Downs board meeting at that time. Trustee Ray Hayhurst asked if they could fund the project on a quarterly basis so they could stop funding it if they are unsatisfied with the results. Bailey said it would be hard to hire someone if they thought they might just be there three months.

The mayor and Beauvais agreed that giving the project a year would be best to see if it will work. Doth suggested after the first year they have a three-year option to continue because such a commitment would give it more chance of success.

Although he couldn't make a motion on the project, Mayor Hayhurst recommended the trustees approve it since it did have the support of businesses in the Downs. Trustees Margie Morales, Judy Miller and Hayhurst voted for it, while trustee Charlotte Craig voted against it. Bailey said she will see the trustees in about three months for the first report and hopes she will be able to change Craig's mind with the numbers.

"I appreciate councilors who think for themselves," she said. Shirlene Fitzner, president of the Ruidoso Downs auxiliary, said the group appreciated the chamber's assistance during the annual arts and crafts fair. She said it was the first time she, personally, remembered the chamber cooperating to provide the concession booth.

"Joan needs a special thanks for this. It is really neat to be able to work together with the chamber," she said.

She also thanked the trustees for their support and hard work at the fair. She said they don't have the final financial numbers on the event, but it was successful. The money will be used to help get the senior citizens center open for use on a regular basis.

The auxiliary will be sponsoring another event to improve the community. A clean-up of the area around the senior center and the two miles of highway through the middle of town is scheduled for September 25. Fitzner said they didn't set a starting time because people get off work at different times. A potluck dinner is planned for 7 p.m.

that night, but if people don't get done by then they can come back Saturday, she said.

The group is also building a float for the Aspenfest parade in October, and the trustees approved the use of a fire truck bay to work on it. Fitzner also announced the senior center will have an open house at the end of the month so people can begin using the center.

In other business, the trustees approved a bid by Jose Gonzales of Juarez, Mexico, for $500 apiece for two 1985 Impala police units. Each has more than 100,000 miles on it. The village received no bids for a salt box it advertised for sale.

Under an emergency procurement, the village approved fixing a backhoe, which will cost about $1,000. The board also approved sending animal control officer Tom Armstrong to a state certification program in Albuquerque in October.

In action taken after an executive session to discuss pending litigation and personnel matters, trustees voted to appeal a suit with Wilma Webb and to retain the services of Beauvais for the case. An independent attorney had been hired for the case when it came up because the village's attorney was also Webb's attorney at the time.

Trustees also decided to have the village clerk bring delinquent utility accounts before the board on a case by case basis and to send a letter to Windsor Laceywell concerning his condemned property. The letter states that if Laceywell complies with the terms of improvement the condemnation resolution will be rescinded.

In personnel matters the board also enacted a policy of no personal use of village equipment.

Garbage tax needed to develop a landfill

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Tax receipts now pledged to pay back the purchase of garbage collection equipment may have to be used instead to help finance a regional landfill.

Frank Warth, chairman of the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority, said Monday the target date for a regional landfill to be in operation is January 14, 1994.

He was reporting to the Capitan board of trustees about a meeting with members of the Otero County solid waste group. Warth is mayor of Capitan. The garbage groups are coalitions of each county and their municipalities.

"We may have to pay off the (more than $800,000 of) equipment purchased by the authority (from three of its members) with operational revenues," he said. "Then we can use the environmental gross receipts as collateral for a bond sale of $2.5-million to $3-million for a landfill around the Three Rivers area."

Authority director Gene Green said Tuesday that Warth accurately reflected the discussion at the Otero meeting.

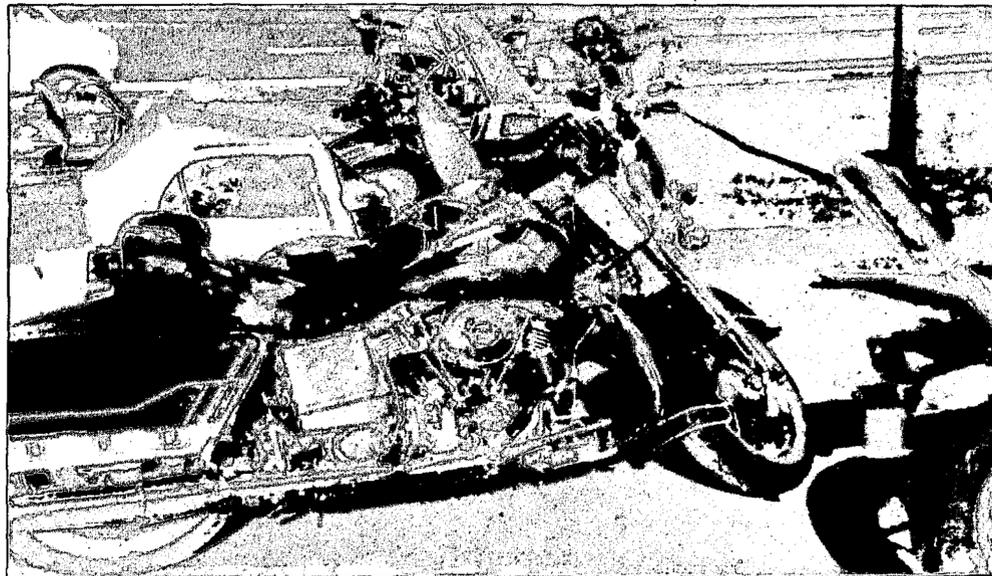

"It looks like we're going to need to free up some of that environmental gross receipts tax," Green said. "I don't know how much at this point, but to put up our share, it might be $75,000."

"The tax was not being used to pay back the equipment debt. It only was collateral."

Ron Andrews, a Ruidoso village councilor and treasurer of the authority board, indicated his village probably would go along with the change of collateral, Green said.

Equipment purchased from Ruidoso represents the largest portion of the existing debt. The Lincoln County Commission and town of Ruidoso Downs also sold equipment to the authority.

Green said it won't be too long before Otero and Lincoln will be drafting a joint powers agreement that will include financial commitments

The eagle flies

Eagles and flags are on the run in Ruidoso on motorcycles ridden by the many riders in town for the 23rd annual motorcycle festival with headquarters in the Ruidoso Civic Events Center. The night light parade is planned for 9 p.m. today, with the "big" parade at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Emergency

gency, but many people from out of town try to call 911 because of its national use.

With the enhanced-911 callers in the Ruidoso Downs area can dial 911 and will get the Ruidoso PSAP, but the computer then lists the name of the person and the address for the dispatcher. If the address is in Ruidoso Downs the Ruidoso dispatch will push a button to send the computer information and the caller to the Downs dispatcher.

Both Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs will also get an immediate printed copy of the information on the computer. Reimann said the PSAP to be placed at the sheriff's department and the one at Ruidoso will be interconnected so if one system goes out the other center could handle all emergency calls.

Gunter said the village would have to determine what residents are part of Ruidoso Downs. He said he has talked to Ruidoso police chief Dick Swenor and he has said it should be no problem. The state will be going out for bids on the equipment and will try to get those in 40 days, he said. A decision will then be made as soon as possible after that.

Gunter said he hopes to begin testing the system in December and go live with it about 30 days later. Reimann said he also hopes people can begin using the system in January.

"It is necessary to get this system off the ground as soon as possible," he said.

"We all need it desperately. To get things workable we need to go ahead with Ruidoso as the center and us keeping our dispatch," Chief Hoggard agreed.

Board members then voted unanimously to have Ruidoso serve as the PSAP and to continue to have Ruidoso Downs dispatchers send out the services.

In an informational presentation to the board Alamogordo Youth Center director Ladona House told the trustees about how that group got started to help them get ideas on how to start one in Ruidoso Downs. She said the center was built in 1968 through a donation project called "Buy a Brick." Construction companies also gave free labor to complete the project.

Activities offered at the center include pool, ping-pong, fitness and tumbling and boxing among others. She said the center also directs soccer and basketball leagues for three to six year olds, and the kids and parents both love it. They also have a pre-school discover club that is like a mother's day out. During the summer they also do a day camp that 200-250 kids attend. The whole program brings in about $50,000 to $60,000 a year, but it is also funded by the city.

They have a regular staff of three people but have to hire four extra during the summer, plus several students in the job training partnership agreement. She said many programs start with one good idea by a person. The boxing program started in her garage, House said.

House has also been researching grants and she said she would be willing to share the information she has with Ruidoso Downs. She said Alamogordo is looking at a bond issue to build a new center, but that probably wouldn't work for Ruidoso Downs because of its current concern for a village hall.

She said Alamogordo has had trouble with gangs recently so the center has helped get the kids off the streets and started doing something productive. Trustee Judy Miller, who had visited the center and invited House to speak, said there is going to be a great need for a center in the near future because the gymnastics center will be gone after January 1.

She said there are not many after school functions for kids either, so someone will have to start somewhere to provide a program for kids.

Miller said she would like to get a lot more people interested in starting a youth program and if they are they should call her to let her know. She said they would probably have to start with a youth club, but she would eventually like to get a center built.

"It is going to take parent involvement and possibly the help of other clubs. When I went to Alamogordo I saw a lot of happy kids and the program was well structured. I would like to see that here," she said.

In other business, village attorney Bob Beauvais advised the trustees that the village would not be able to assist a resident with a contaminated well. Nettie Bradley said her domestic water well has been tested by the state environment department and it shows signs of total coliforms, a bacteria that can come from barnyard waste or can be found naturally in the environment.

She said she believes the contamination comes from a horse that has been corralled less than fifty feet from her well for at least two years. The well has been there since the 1950s and she has never had a problem with it before this time.

"I have buy drinking water at $1.26 a gallon at the Circle K, but who wants to wash dishes or take a bath in contaminated water?" she asked.

She said the well is sealed and when she asked her well service person if it could be chlorinated, but he said it would be a useless expense because of the time involved and the fact that the water is an underground current. She also asked the Culligan Company but it doesn't purify water, it just softens it.

Carl Stubbs, local EID agent who did the test on the well, said the state law is not clear how far a single animal should be away from a private water supply. He said the EID doesn't generally follow-up on private cases but ask the people to work through the district attorney's office.

Beauvais said he would hate to require the removal of the animal

Democrats to rally at barbecue

Lincoln County Democrats will rally this weekend during their annual barbecue at the McTeigue place just off U.S. Highway 70 at the Lincoln turnoff.

Rose McTeigue is continuing the tradition started by her late husband, Lincoln McTeigue, by inviting county Democrats to share barbecue in an old-fashioned rally in the Hondo Valley.

The barbecue will be from 1 to 4 p.m., and county chairperson CeCe Griffin promises a fun-filled afternoon of food, drink, music, games and political speeches.

All New Mexico Democrats who are running for office this November have been invited, and many of them have responded that they'll be in Lincoln County to talk to the home folks.

All Democrats are invited to the free barbecue. For information, call 257-7558 or 258-5767.

based on the one report because it would be hard to find the point source of this total coliform. He said they would need a strong legal basis, and neither he nor Stubbs feel comfortable saying this horse is the source. The only way the village could pursue it is if a village ordinance was in violation.

"We are not unsympathetic to your problem, but we would have to prove it," he said.

He said there have been violations at this property in the past, and code enforcement officer Tom Armstrong confirmed that the fencing and shelter is still out of compliance. Beauvais said he would talk to Armstrong about the problem first and then get back with Bradley. If the village doesn't pursue correction of its violation, Bradley can file it in magistrate court as a public nuisance.

The trustees also approved amending the lodgers tax ordinance to direct all money to the lodgers tax fund, not an economic development fund that requires matching funds from the village.

—appointing Trustee Miller to the lodgers tax advisory board to replace Karen Stevens.

289th unit WWII vets gather in Ruidoso

When they went their separate ways about 45 years ago, members of the 289th Station Hospital probably thought they wouldn't see each other again, but one member made sure that didn't happen.

Fourteen years ago Elvin Moore, a summer resident of Ruidoso, started tracking down members of the hospital for a first reunion. Out of about 130 people he contacted 87 members and 75 came to Ruidoso to reminisce about their experience during World War II and to visit about what they have done since.

Each year after that the group traveled across the United States to someone's home for another reunion. The reunion has taken the members from coast to coast and destinations in-between. They have been at Moodus, Connecticut; Franklin, Tennessee; Cincinnati, Ohio; Albuquerque; Stone Mountain, Georgia; Harrisburg, Pennsylvania; Ontario, California; Virginia Beach, Virginia; Las Vegas, Nevada; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Savannah, Georgia; New Orleans, Louisiana and Ruidoso.

This past week the group was back at Moore's home in Ruidoso, and 18 members attended. They came from as far away as North Attleboro, Massachusetts, and as close as Alamogordo for the four-day event. The group had several meals together and caught up on everyone's families.

The 289th was formed in the summer of 1943, at Camp Harahan, New Orleans, Louisiana. In early December the group moved by train to Camp Stoneman, California, then by barge to San Francisco. Moore said they sailed on the Monticello to Honolulu, arriving in time to go swimming on Christmas Day.

Moore said after intensive training in Hawaii, they sailed from Pearl Harbor, but then laid off-shore at Kwajalein and Eniwetok for several weeks to give the combat troops time to catch up.

"On the 53rd day after boarding her, we went over the side and down the nets and into the landing crafts soon to become the first medical unit on Guam. We were only a 100-bed-hospital, but at one time we were 'a bit crowded' when there were about 450 patients," he said.

For their service they received the Meritorious Unit Award. Later a naval hospital was opened, then the 373rd Station Hospital and the 204th General Hospital opened, giving the group a much needed relief.

The station's first permanent hospital was just above Harmon Field, from where planes flew to bomb Iwo Jima, Okinawa and Japan. Moore said they treated many airmen injured in crashes on attempted take-offs from short runways. The group also treated casualties from Leyte, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and other places, but the most memorable to him was the first Americans released from P.O.W. camps, one of which was General Jonathan M. "Skinny" Wainwright.

When the war ended, the 289th was deactivated and those who had not been shipped home yet were moved to the 373rd Station Hospital. The last of the group, which included Moore, finally sailed for home on December 28, 1945.

"We never made headlines, but we were an indispensable part of our nation's attempt to preserve freedom for mankind," Moore said.

Moore went back to Guam for the first time in 1985. He met the governor of Guam, who presented him with a certificate from the citizens of Guam in thanks for what the hospital had done.

Those attending the reunion this year were Irvin and Lillian Alder of Yonkers, New York; Wally and Cecile Anderson of Millbury, Massachusetts; Arsie Ballard of Ardmore, Oklahoma; S.W. Barnett of Savannah, Tennessee; E.G. and Mary Brett of Murfreesboro, North Carolina; Harry and Doris Cafeo of Cincinnati, Ohio; Bennie and Ophelia Chavez of Albuquerque; Lonnie and Mildred Dickerson of Hallsville, Texas; Heri and Sally Hammonds of Alamogordo; Phillip and Mary Hogard of Memphis, Tennessee; Lois and Cliff Klinefelter of Lebanon, Pennsylvania; Ben Massa of Hartford, Connecticut; Lucille and Bernard Schlumpf of Durand, Wisconsin; Frances and Edwin Scroggs of Stone Mountain, Georgia; Paul Turgeon of North Attleboro, Massachusetts; Billy and Dorothy Walker of Midland, Texas and Tom and Jean Wilson of Douglas, Georgia.

Before the members packed-up to head back to their homes, they collected a few more memories to tide them over until the reunion next year.

County board sets a special meeting, cancels regular one

What started as a special meeting to canvas the results of Tuesday's hospital tax referendum has grown into a full-fledged Lincoln County Commission meeting.

Commissioners will gather at 10 a.m. Friday in the county courthouse in Carrizozo. Their regular meeting September 22 has been canceled.

On the agenda are joint powers agreements with the town of Carrizozo and the Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority, a petition to open Pine Drive in White Oaks and a progress report on the county's housing rehabilitation program.

Fund established to help child

One year old Chase Dickerson of Payne Springs, Texas, needs a bone marrow transplant in order to survive.

Chase is related to Kathy Dickerson and Rayann Lane of the Ruidoso area.

The toddler suffers from an extremely rare form of Mucopolysaccharide Disorder (MPS) known as Hurlers Syndrome.

This disorder is so rare, one in 25,000 births, that the majority of doctors haven't heard of it, according to a release given by Kathy Dickerson.

In Hurlers Syndrome the bones grow at an accelerated rate, outgrowing the body and causing protrusions.

The Dickersons have to raise approximately $400,000 for the transplant, plus living expenses near the Minnesota hospital for six months, to start the process of recovery.

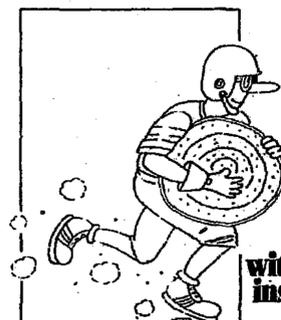

Chances of survival for Chase are 50-50.

Donations for Chase's transplant and medical costs can be sent locally to Chase Dickerson, Account #8064237, Ruidoso State Bank, Ruidoso N.M., 88345.

For further information, call Kathy Dickerson at Ruidoso State Bank, 336-8352.

Soccer team blasts Las Cruces, Roswell for first wins

In its first outing at W.D. Horton Stadium in front of the home crowd, the Ruidoso High School soccer team gave an outstanding performance to earn its first win in the regular season.

The team squared off against Las Cruces High School on Saturday and was able to keep the opponent from executing. The Warriors, though, scored three points to Las Cruces' one for the victory and a one win, one tie record on the season.

All three Ruidoso points were scored by senior Wally Murillo, who was also a leading scorer in the past game. His first score came on a cross shot from Corey Hood to Aaron Laubhan, while his second was a head shot on a corner kick. The third point was on a penalty kick.

Coach Dean Hood said he was pleased with the players' performance in the game, but there are still things they are not doing as well as the coaches would like. The players were able to stop Las Cruces from running its triangles, or plan to move the ball down the field, Hood said.

The Warriors also tried a few things they had never done before. One was to have the goalie punt the ball for a direct attack on the opponent's goal, instead of controlling the roll to another player.

Hood said it is more effective on a smaller field, such as Ruidoso's. He said Matt Harshey, the goalie, did a good job at it even though he wasn't used to that kind of attack.

The Warriors didn't score any points with it, but they eventually will, he said.

Hood said team members didn't pass as well as they had in the past, but that was because during practice last week the coaches emphasized shooting for goals instead. They just need to keep a good balance between shooting and passing, he said.

The team was able to control Las Cruces in part because of the size of the field. He said the stadium field is the legal size, but it seems smaller because the whole area is smaller. This field is about 100 feet by 55 feet, while others may be as large as 110 feet by 65 feet. He said the situation may be different when they travel to Las Cruces to play. "The kids played with a lot of intensity, and we were pleased with the crowd because they made a lot of noise for us," Hood said.

He said the older players are really coming around after not playing soccer for several years. The younger players are also doing well, which is very positive.

"We aren't large in numbers, and we will need those other players if anyone gets hurt," he said.

"It was a neat day for the kids and a good way for them to start the season. They have drastically improved over their last game (two weeks ago). We have to be pleased about it and hope it continues each game," he said.

The team added another victory to its record after crushing the Roswell junior varsity team on Tuesday with a score of 6-1. The next soccer game will be Saturday against Mayfield in Las Cruces, but the Warriors will return home again at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday to play Alamogordo at W.D. Horton Stadium.

Lady Warriors defeated by Portales teams

Freshman Lindsay Willard watches a Portales player serve the ball and prepares to make a kill during the C-team game Thursday. The team lost its match but will play the Ramettes again later this season.

The Portales Ramettes can't be counted out until that last point goes on the scoreboard, and the Lady Warriors are going to remember that when they travel to Portales next Friday to seek their revenge.

The Lady Warriors almost had the Ramettes down for the count here Thursday, but it wasn't enough to keep them from fighting back for the win. The girls won the first game 15-12 and the second 15-9, but Portales didn't give up a single easy point. In the third game the Lady Warriors struggled and lost 14-16 and then were defeated by the same score in the fourth. The girls tried to rally, but Portales had the momentum and won the final game 12-15.

The high server for the game was Jeri Ann Keeton, who had 35 attempts and just three misses in the five games. In hitting, Cicelee Makowski, Monica Martinez and Michelle Morris each had five kills during the match.

Coach Jody Blanton said overall the girls didn't play a bad match against Portales.

"We hit well in the first two games and we got away from that in the last three. Portales is mentally tough. You never have them beat until the final ball lands. We have to be consistent all five games to win," she said.

The girls have another match with Artesia on Saturday, but the Lady Warriors have beaten the Bulldogs in three games earlier this month for the first match of the season. The Lady Warriors will then make a road trip to Socorro on Tuesday before making their way to Portales for the grudge match.

The junior varsity team won one game against Portales by the score of 15-9, but the Ramettes dominated the first game 0-15 and then came back to win the third game 8-15. Portales also swept the C-team by scores of 3-15 and 7-15.

Coaches Patsy Page and Yelena Temple both said their girls improved but were nervous since it is so early in the season.

The JV team will also play Artesia, Socorro and Portales, but the C-team won't play Artesia. The next home game for all three teams will be at 1 p.m. September 26 against the Oñate Knights, last year's state champions.

Kids learn to golf at the Links

Kids love to run and jump and play sports. Unfortunately, learning impaired children may not be able to participate in team events. Staff members at The Links at Sierra Blanca in Ruidoso believe any kid can learn to hit a golf ball, and they are going to prove it.

A four-week golf clinic will begin at 3:30 p.m. today, Thursday, for Danette McNulty's learning impaired 12- and 13-year-old boys and girls from Ruidoso Middle School, according to a press release from The Links. The children have been excited about the challenge for weeks. The parents have signed release forms and some will be out to watch.

The release says the staff wants to share this unique idea with other golf courses throughout New Mexico and West Texas, as a way to bolster the fact that anybody can play golf and encourage community spirit.

New policy says pay to return if you leave the football game

Starting Friday the Ruidoso Municipal School District will follow a new policy regarding exit and re-entry for home football games. If individuals choose to leave W.D. Horton Stadium prior to the end of the game they will be required to purchase a new ticket in order to re-enter the stadium.

The football game will kick off at 7:30 p.m. with the Warriors ready to tame the Tularosa Wildcats for what will be the first win of the season for one of the teams.

Take along your camera

by YVONNE LANELLI
Special to The News
Part 9 in a series

"Vistas covering hundreds of miles and flowers so small — endless possibilities."

Professional photographer Herb Brunell waxes enthusiastic when discussing photography on the hike.

In between shooting advertising brochures and coordinating photo contests, busy Herb paused to chat about a favorite topic.

useful), abstracts of tree trunks or shadows (try unusual angles such as looking up).

If with a group, look for human interest: a small child with mini-pack, dad hoisting child on shoulders, child encountering flower or butterfly.

Humor abounds on the hike: a small hiker with too-big pack next to bigger companion with smaller pack, the on-my-foot-hurt shot, the zinc-oxide streaked face.

If it's a family outing, tell the story of the hike, suggests Herb.

on the trail, hang the camera around your neck.

"A camera in the pack doesn't take pictures," observes Herb.

Finally, pack lots of film, four or five rolls. For prints, Herb suggests 100 or 200 ISO for good contrast with small grain. For slides, he prefers Ektachrome 64 X because of its contrast and colors.

"My wife and I disagree on this point. She prefers Fujichrome 100 because she likes those colors," he says with a smile. Herb's wife, Anne, is also an accomplished photographer.

Herb recommends slower film for two reasons.

"If your goal is enlargements, then you want a film with a minimal grain. Second, a slower film allows your camera more operating range."

The latter is important when considering depth of field. In other words, will everything in the shot be sharp or will you isolate your subject against a softer background?

"Show everyone getting ready. Include a shot of just feet, of food in the pack, and so forth. On the trail, use the cinema principle: wide angles, medium shots, and closeups. Show folks wading in the creek, smelling flowers, kids napping. Snap people looking over cliffs or up tall trees. Catch the dog burrowing into someone's pack at snack time. And don't forget the going home phase, collapsing in the back of the car, sleeping on the way home."

To avoid the common mistake of too much clutter in the picture, "get closer. Look through the viewfinder and eliminate unimportant things." Herb feels no condition is wrong for a hiking picture, even rain. To protect your camera in the rain, pop it into a plastic bag, cut a hole in the plastic for the lens and shoot away. Not only does rain create unusual effects in your scenic shots, it provides humor opportunities too.

Regardless of your ability, photographing your hike is fun. Whether your equipment fits into a shirt pocket or the biggest pack is immaterial. Just remember to pack the most important element — your imagination!

Next week: fall and winter hiking, the last installment.

WHAT DO I NEED

You don't have to haul bulky gear to take good pictures.

"Photography on the hike is limited only by your imagination, not by your equipment," he proposes.

As a minimum, Herb suggests a 35 mm single lens reflex (SLR) and a zoom lens with close focus or macro. This provides versatility for closeups, wide angles and some telephoto. For shooting wildlife, Herb adds to his pack a 28-200 zoom lens. He protects these lenses with a daylight filter and carries in his pack a polarizing filter for special effects.

The principal reason for failed photos is camera motion, believes Herb, so he suggests a tripod, mono-pod or clamp pod.

"A mono-pod can double as a walking stick."

If you choose not to carry the above, then brace the camera or yourself against something solid such as a rock or tree.

"Hiking makes you breath hard, so sit and wait until you've recovered before you shoot!"

To further minimize weight, remove the camera's motor winder and leave its case in the car. While

WHAT WILL I SHOOT?

Everything — wide angle views (uses a haze filter), clouds (polarizing filter here), wildlife (telephoto helpful), wildflowers, leaves, or tree bark patterns (closeup or macro

The big one got away!

The big one got away, but a few fishermen cashed in on the Kiwanis Club fall fishing tournament Saturday and Sunday at Grindstone Lake.

Local residents fared well in the 126 fishermen field, but no one hooked the $10,000 fish. Star Silva of Ruidoso caught two fish for $60 total. Jose Uibarri of Clovis and Johnny Carrillo of Las Cruces also caught a $30 fish. Shane Walker of Ruidoso Downs snagged a $30 fish as did Ricky DeVara and Richard Urban, both of Ruidoso.

The big winner for the day was Frank Randolph of Ruidoso Downs. He caught two $30 fish and one $100 fish. In other prizes Renette Carrillo of Las Cruces and Shaun Childress of Ruidoso earned $25 each for the smallest fish, while Woodrow Rogers of Ruidoso and Veronica Zamora of Alamogordo received $25 for the largest fish.

The Kiwanis stocked the lake with about 150 tagged fish ranging in prize money from $30 to $100, besides the $10,000 grand prize fish.

Deceptively and Last Don B nab top horse honors

Undefeated Deceptively was named Ruidoso Downs' 1992 Quarter Horse-of-the-Meet while multiple stakes winner Last Don B. was named Thoroughbred-of-the-Meet.

Deceptively won the hearts of racing fans nationwide when she demolished her competition while winning the Grade I Kansas and Grade I Rainbow Futurities. Although she only raced four times this summer, the 2-year-old filly won each race with authority.

The bay filly also set a new track record for 350 yards when she won the Kansas Futurity in 17.22 seconds.

Trained by Bruce Bell and ridden by Jerry Yoakum, Deceptively is one of only two Quarter Horses to win two Grade I races this year. In all, Deceptively won $186,000 at Ruidoso Downs.

Racing fans boost 1992 attendance

Average daily attendance on track during Ruidoso Downs' 1992 season was up one percent over 1991 while the total average daily attendance, including off-track wagering sites, was up 2.35 percent.

During the 74-day season, 337,993 on-track and off-track fans wagered $34.5 million for an average daily attendance of 4,567 and an average daily handle of $466,733.

The average daily handle on track of $305,191 was down 7.34 percent when compared to last year. The daily average handle of both on-track and off-track wagering was down 7.09 percent. Last year, Ruidoso Downs raced 78 days.

"We experienced an unusually wet and cold May which had a negative impact on our attendance and handle early on," said Max Johnson, Ruidoso Downs' general manager.

"The general downturn in the economy, the Texas Lottery, and Indian gaming in our own back yard also took its toll."

Ruidoso Downs recorded its biggest day of the summer on closing day, Sept. 7, when an on-track record of 10,801 fans wagered almost $1 million.

The 10,801 was also a record high for attendance at the mountain track. On-track and off-track attendance closing day totaled 14,063 fans who wagered $1.2 million. The largest payoffs of the summer included a $74,334 payoff on a single $2 ticket in the twin trifecta and a $16,449 payoff on a $2 trifecta ticket. Other season highs were a $214 win payoff on a $2-win ticket; place, $162.20; show, $27.20; exacta, $4,094; quinella, $449; daily double, $405.60; and a $2 pick six ticket of $9,064.

Purses distributed during the 74-day season totaled $6.8 million.

Stakes purses to jump by $400,000

Ruidoso Downs will increase Quarter Horse stakes purses by $400,000 for the 1993 racing season. The increase will also be effective for 1994 and 1995.

Ruidoso Downs Racing Inc. and a group of prominent Quarter Horse horsemen have committed $400,000 to be used as added money for major stakes. Several of Ruidoso Downs' top stakes will become $100,000-added races including the All American Gold Cup, Rainbow Silver Cup, Rainbow Derby and Rainbow Futurity.

"This is a significant development that is important to the future of Ruidoso Downs," said Ruidoso Downs' President R.D. Hubbard. "These horsemen recognize the importance of Ruidoso Downs in the national Quarter Horse picture and this commitment demonstrates their resolve to the future success of Ruidoso Downs."

Jim Helzer, first-vice president of the Texas Quarter Horse Association, approached Ruidoso Downs' management with the suggestion that horsemen and Ruidoso Downs work together toward the future success of the track. The horsemen committed to raising $200,000 for each of the next three years with Hubbard agreeing to match the $200,000 all three years.

"I can't say enough about the Quarter Horse horsemen that race at Ruidoso Downs," Hubbard said. "It is working together such as this that will truly produce positive results for racing."

Helzer spearheaded such an effort in Texas resulting in a major fall futurity and derby at Texas' Trinity Meadows racetrack.

Complete details of Ruidoso Downs' new added-money format for 1993 will be released soon.

Sports Theater keeps racing action alive

The jockeys and race horses may have moved down the mountain, but Ruidoso Downs still offers exciting racing action via simulcast wagering at the Ruidoso Downs Sports Theater.

The Sports Theater will host races all winter long from other New Mexico racetracks including the New Mexico State Fair and Sunland Park. The theater is currently simulcasting races from the State Fair at Albuquerque and accepting wagers on the fair's daily 12-race program. First post of the fair program is 1 p.m. with Sports Theater doors opening at noon.

State Fair racing will continue through October 12 with the theater picking up the races from Sunland Park on October 23.

Sunland Park will race Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday through Dec. 31 with first post at 12:30. Sunland Park will race Friday, Saturday and Sunday beginning Jan. 1 with first post at 12:30 p.m. There will also be two special Monday holiday cards offered Jan. 18 and Feb. 15 and one Wednesday program March 3. Feb. 19 to May 2 the first post will be 1 p.m.

The theater will also simulcast the rich and prestigious Breeders' Cup series from Gulfstream Park on Oct. 21, 1992 and the Kentucky Derby from Churchill Downs May 1, 1993. Both cards will offer an early post, yet to be determined.

Parking and admission to the Sports Theater and general seating is free with theater style reserve seating available for $2. Full food and beverage service is also available. For more information call 505-378-4431.

Martinez and Martin take top jockey titles

Although it was Flavio Martinez's first season at Ruidoso Downs, the 34-year-old rider ran away with leading Thoroughbred jockey honors.

As usual, Jacky Martin clinched the honor as leading Quarter Horse jockey.

Strictly a Thoroughbred rider, Martinez won 74 races from 434 mounts for a win percentage of 17.1 making him the overall leading jockey in races won. His wins included the Ruidoso Oaks on Automatic, Choke, the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity on Exclusion, the Ruidoso Mile on Last Don B. and the $12,400 Hondo Valley Handicap Valeme.

Todd Fincher, who primarily rides Thoroughbreds, was second overall with 54 wins from 366 rides for a win percentage of 14.8. Glen Murphy, who rides all breeds, finished third with 52 wins from 319 mounts.

Breaking down the leading jockeys by breeds, Martinez, Fincher and Duane Sterling were 1-2-3 in the Thoroughbred standings.

Jacky Martin was the leading Quarter Horse jockey with 37 wins from 135 mounts and a win percentage of 27.4. Martin topped off his summer season by winning his sixth All American Futurity on Dash Thru Traffic and the All American First Consolation on Runaway Cash.

Jeff Williams was second in the Quarter Horse jockey standings with 25 wins from 171 rides for a win percentage of 14.6. Joe Martinez was third with 21 wins from 132 mounts. Larry Chavez and Martin tied for leading Quarter Horse stakes winning rider with four stakes wins each.

Fred Danley wins trainer of the meet title for '92

Although Fred Danley was not the leading Quarter Horse or leading Thoroughbred trainer, he was the leading trainer overall with 53 wins from 292 starts. Danley ranked second in the Thoroughbred trainer standings with 32 wins from 166 starts for a win percentage of 19.3. He ranked third in the Quarter Horse standings with 21 wins from 126 starts for a win percentage of 16.7.

The race for leading Thoroughbred trainer went right down to the final day with Danley losing out to Doyal Roberts, Sr. by one win. Roberts reigned supreme with 33 wins from 222 starts for a win percentage of 14.9. Danley was second and Bob Arnett finished third with 23 wins from 193 races.

Jack Brooks solidified his position as Ruidoso Downs' all-time leading trainer by once again clinching leading Quarter Horse trainer honors.

Brooks won 43 races from 225 starts for a win percentage of 19.1. Brooks teamed up with Jacky Martin to win the $1.8 million All American Futurity with Dash Thru Traffic and the $178,279 All American Futurity First Consolation with Runaway Cash.

Brooks was also the leading Quarter Horse stakes winning trainer with five wins.

Although it was only her first year training at a pari-mutuel track, Nene Simmons finished second behind Brooks. She saddled 21 winners from 155 tries for a win percentage of 13.5. Danley was third.

Road crews get pat on the back

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

It's not often that a county road manager is singled out for special accolades.

But the residents of the Village of Corona have done just that for Lincoln County road manager Bill Cupit and his employer, the County Commission.

Eighty-nine of the ranchers and village residents signed a petition directed to the commission. It read:

"We the people of the Corona area would like to thank the county commissioners and the county road manager for the quality of service we are currently receiving.

"In past years, the roads in the northern portion of Lincoln County have been forgotten and neglected, however, with the current organization of the road department, and the recent placement of an additional maintainer, dump truck and backhoe, the entire northern half of the county has shown noticeable improvement."

The improvement is long overdue and it still may take years to bring the roads up to the standard in the rest of the county, they wrote.

"(We) hope we can count on this quality of service to be maintained and improved for many years to come," they said.

"It was kind of nice of them to take the time to put this together and send this down here," Cupit said. "I have received many letters of thanks from people, but to get something like this from a community really is gratifying."

The Silver Lining

September moon looks down on the Vale

September Full Moon

On the evening of the tenth, the moon came up over the east hill, all round and light silver, two days before the full, while the sunset colors to the west had the mountain outlined in blazing orange and crimson.

It was still late daylight — twilight had not yet moved into the vale, though the evening haze had formed a light purple contain at the top end of the vale just in front of the house.

The rounded and cone-shaped forms of the cedars and piñons on the hillside were still plain to see, their soft evergreen color touched with the mingled light of both the golden orange sunset blaze and the mingled light of both the early moon.

Twilight now moved down from the mountain into the Vale, and the piñons and cedars appeared more clearly in the light of the round moon — which now began to turn from silver to very light gold. On the western horizon the flaming sunset colors faded into silvery light gold matching the soft light of the moon now shining down on a moon rain land shrouded in the purple dusk. In the tall grass the crickets struck up their band and the choirs, a tiny serenade welcoming the approach of early night.

And so you were cheered and uplifted by the sight that comes once during the month when the round moon rises while it is still day.

The Sun Watches The Moon Retire

And then on the morning of the twelfth, the completely full moon was going west just as the rose and golden colors in the east were announcing that the sun was on its way up.

Then just as the first rays of the sun sent their golden shafts into the morning sky, the light silvery moon was on its way down, near the horizon of the September full moon met, saying "good morning" and "good bye for this time."

We will be cheered and uplifted now for many evenings and nights by the September full moon.

Lighting And Thunder Bring in the Rain

This is being sent to you a little after high noon and a few clouds are gathering all to the south and west, brought in by yesterday's

by Dan Storm
The Ridge Runner

Weatherman Bill Hostetter says this has been up to now one of the driest Septembers on the record for this area. Here in the Vale the river had been holding up very well, drawing on the many springs along the way all the way down from the mountain.

Yet, although the mountain meadows have remained emerald green, the Piñon Jays have been singing their songs of: "Dry, Dry, Dry, Dry day. Dry night."

About noon these same birds were silent, as the world basked into a warm and quiet lull, as if waiting. The temperature was up to ninety, and not a breath of air was stirring.

Then boom! Bam! The loud voice of the thunder echoed over the mountain just to the south. Clouds gathered as if in a hurry, after being late; and the thunder moved all along the southern mountain, and on up to the west. The thunder rumbled back and forth, like asking and answering, all along the horizon from south to west. And the lightning sent down spars and arrow and wide sheets of gold and silver light through the clouds.

While you watched the clouds move in just over the hill to the south; you felt a cool breath from the West, and sure enough here came, hurrying down the valley, a gray and purple shower of rain, riding on the wind.

After the hot wave moments before, it was strange to feel the charging storm of small drops, close together almost like a thin sheet of water on the wing, suddenly so cold.

Here came the wind-born sky water riding on the driving wind, in waves and steady gusts, its small close flying drops finding their way through leaf and evergreen branch, rough tall grass and herbs — quickly soaking the mountain land all in its sudden rush.

And the land was ready. Where were the streams running down the road? Where were the miniature lakes out in the middle of the fields? The flying rain storm; passed down the Vale, and just the late laggards of the blast dripped here and there from the soaked trees.

After the last drop had fallen, there was mud in the road. The ground has soaked up every drop. This rain storm almost made up a bit of a poem all by itself:

"It left no mud or slop
The Earth drank every drop"

New again today the clouds are gathering here an hour after high noon.

Happy Birthday to Odie and Sid Courville

Later on I would like to bring you a little something about Odie Courville and his brother, Sid, two of Ruidoso's favorite people. Sid had a birthday September 5, and Odie September 16. We wish Odie and Sid many happy returns of the Day and all God's blessings.

The King Bird Trapeze Actor

Out in the yard is a clump of tall grass with stems about six feet high, waving in the eastern breeze.

A little king bird — with his red crown — flies from the cedar tree and lands on one of the stems, about midway, bearing it halfway to the ground.

While riding on this, then swaying in the wind, he walks up to the head of the stem and begins nibbling on the seeds at the head of the grass stalk, all the while winging in the breeze.

After eating some of the grass seeds, he then jumps to another grass stalk and rides it part way to the ground, here he rides, as the grass stem sways up and down in the wind.

Now he flits to yet another stem and continues his rock-a-bye rides back and forth, up and down, like a child on a playground swing.

Meanwhile, Oswald, the pet lizard watches from the doorstep, blinking in the sun.

Let us thank God for all the charms of the mountain world and all His other many blessings bestowed upon us.

B.E. "Bud" Combee

Masonic graveside services for B.E. "Bud" Combee, 83, of Capitan were at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Llano Cemetery in Amarillo, Texas.

Combee died Sunday at the Lincoln County Medical Center in Ruidoso. He was born August 26, 1909, at McKinney, Texas, to Mary and William B. Combee who both precede him in death.

He served in the Army during World War II. He was a charter member of the Tascosa Masonic Lodge and was a Shriner. He was also a charter member of the Will Rogers Range Riders in Amarillo. He served as a deputy sheriff for Potter County in Texas.

Combee had lived in Amarillo for 33 years before moving to Capitan 15 years ago. In Capitan he was associate magistrate judge and a member of the Capitan Methodist Church.

He married Dorothy Cohlmeier on August 31, 1946, at Clovis.

Survivors include his wife, Dorothy of Capitan; sister, Clara E. Reecer of Lockney, Texas, and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by a son, Richard Combee, in 1973.

The family suggests memorials to the Capitan Methodist Church.

Arrangements are under the direction of LaGrone Funeral Chapel in Ruidoso.

HAMBURGER KING
 Dear Ruidoso,
 OK, I will admit it! I am diabetic, and so are four of my best friends. We have to watch what we eat... especially around my hamburger joint. The refined flour in the buns and the fat content of the hamburger meat converts to sugar a little too quickly for some of us. So, we eat the beef stew, or pick our way around the salad bar, or have a little fish. But, still, it's a pain in the neck, particularly when I start craving a burger.
 It has occurred to me that there may be some other folks besides the five of us who have this problem. I am going to find out. Starting today, we are putting a brand new burger on our menu... a special diet burger, if you will. It is made from ground turkey meat; it is midsize and comes on a whole wheat bun. Otherwise, it has all of the trimmings and appearances of our regular hamburger. We will sell it for $2.25. If you wonder why it is a bit more expensive than the regular midsize burger, it is because the special diet burger is more expensive to produce. The turkey and buns have to be special ordered. The patties must be handmade as the turkey is too lean and soft for the patty machine. It just squishes around in there.
 I don't know if there is enough of a market to maintain this kind of thing, but I am going to try it for a while. It should be handy for diabetics, people with cholesterol problems, and people who do not eat red meat. If you are one of these or know someone who is, please keep it in mind. Our special diet burger may not be the all-American burger, but it is very tasty, and some of us can eat it without our doctor getting the fantods.
 Sincerely,

Water meeting brings together Valley friends and neighbors

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The food was fantastic and filling. The stories of battles with the elements and wildlife captivated listeners. The awards drew applause.

But nature was the real scene stealer of the evening at the annual meeting of the Upper Hondo Soil and Water Conservation District board of supervisors.

To the west, she splashed warm hues of orange, pink and purple against the sky while hunched bushes huddled in shadows.

Down by the stream, the willows and cottonwoods swayed rhythmically in the breeze as host Bob Boebinger related the history of the La Finca ranch he and wife, Jade, operate. Earlier, Crystal Roybal had sung Hispanic songs from the early days of the Hondo Valley.

As darkness settled into place, lanterns illuminated dancers twirling around the floor to the fiddle, drums and guitars of Lone Star Express.

A night of images not to be forgotten.

John Cooper, chairman of the district board, introduced board supervisors Fred "Peg" Pfingsten, Paul Jones, Clem Weindorf (state conservation commissioner), Mary Shanks, Ernest McDaniel and Bob Boebinger.

Other names called were Greg Haussler, Tom Roybal, Hollis Fox and Howard Shanks and past supervisors Sonny Sanchez, Jack Johnson and Lamoyne Peters.

Albert Gonzales was unanimously elected to the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy left by the retirement of Jones, who received a plaque of appreciation.

Awards were presented to Fred Pfingsten for outstanding supervisor, to Johnny Thomas as Outstanding Rancher in part for constructing 21,000 feet of water lines to two storage areas and to Sonny Sanchez as Outstanding Farmer for his fence and orchard work as foreman of the Hurd Ranch.

Lynn Hutchison of the New Mexico State Forestry Division was tapped as Outstanding Public Employee partly for her organization of a fifth grade Conservation Days program.

As Boebinger related the history of La Finca, he noted that while the 1941 flood caused the formation of the district, nothing has been done about flood control.

"Since then, many acres have been paved and created greater problems," Boebinger said. "Our district helps farmers with conservation, but flood control is up to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. We had two floods in the 1970s. River blockages brought the water up around the pasture and back into the river."

He said La Finca shares the 3 1/2 mile long San Patricio Ditch with 15 other users, many old families.

Using his own experiences, Boebinger illustrated the advantages of several programs offered through the district including the stream bank protection program.

He emphasized no matter what the size of a person's property, the district probably could help with some problem the owner now is trying to solve on his own.

Retiring board member Paul Jones and off their plaques to board president John Cooper at the annual meeting. Outstanding Farmer Sonny Sanchez show Grace Weindorf adds a touch of class to the evening under the willows at LaFinca.

Members of the district enjoyed good conversation and even better food at the board's annual meeting to highlight the accomplishments of the past year.

The Jose Brothers

Gilbert Prather and his sidekick Clay Lindley will be performing at Miner's Mountain Castle in two special shows during Aspenfest weekend October 2 and 3. Make reservations now to see these cowboy musicians and comics.

This week Miner's is presenting a series of shows for the motorcycle rally participants, with shows at 7:31 p.m. today and Friday and a show at 8:31 p.m. Saturday. Call Miner's for ticket information.

Murphey brings music to the mountain

Michael Martin Murphey will be the headliner Sunday in the area's first annual Mountain Music Festival.

Sons of San Joaquin, Don Edwards, well-known cowboy poet Waddie Mitchell and El Paso's extraordinary guitar virtuoso duet, La Vienta also will perform in the daylong festival that begins at 10 a.m. and runs until dusk, with musical and theatrical entertainment throughout the day.

Set amphitheater style amidst the peak fall colors at the newly redeveloped Snow Canyon Ski Area (formerly Ski Cloudcroft) two miles east of Cloudcroft, the festival also features newer, regional country and western talents Betty Chilsom, Peta Laumbach, the Nighthawks and western arts and crafts exhibitors from throughout the Southwest.

Producer/singer Murphey and Jerry Sanders, president of both Snow Canyon and the Lodge at Cloudcroft, planned the festival as a precursor to an annual two-day fall festival beginning in 1993.

"My objective is to eventually make this event larger in scope and entertainment than Michael's annual WestFest events in Copper Mountain, Colorado; Park City, Utah and Red River," said Sanders.

"They all attract tens of thousands of festival participants and spectators.

"With the extraordinary beauty and pleasant mountain climate of the area and its proximity to millions country, western and hispanic music fans in West Texas and New Mexico, we believe the festival will become a major regional event," Sanders added.

General admission tickets for lawn seating are $16 per person (Children age 12 and under are free).

Reserved seating, with a backstage pass to meet the entertainers, evening buffet and reserved parking included, is $50 per seat.

Tickets are available in Ruidoso at the Ruidoso Civic Events Center and Chamber of Commerce.

Sanders noted that both general admission and reserved seating are limited this year.

"We want to provide the best possible experience for attendees, so we have arbitrarily set relatively small audience limits for a concert of this type," he said.

Children are "not only welcome, but encouraged to come" said Sanders.

Gunfighter shows, pony rides and other entertainment for the youngsters are planned.

While hot food and beverages will be available, picnic baskets are welcome.

Concert goers are encouraged to bring blankets or beach seats for seating, some warm clothing for the cooler evening temperatures, and umbrellas or raingear in the event of an intermittent afternoon shower.

For more information, call The Lodge at 682-2566

THE ENTERTAINERS

Michael Martin Murphey, while Texas-born, has adopted New Mexico and now calls Taos home.

He is best known for his hits "Carolina In The Pines" and "Wildfire," and was recognized with "Best New Artist" awards by both the Country Music Association and the Academy of Country Music.

Murphey has had numerous Top 10 hits including "What's Forever For," "Don't Count The Rainy Days," "Geronimo's Cadillac," "A Face In The Crowd" (with Holly Dunn) and "I'm Gonna Miss You Girl."

Most recently, Murphey released an extraordinary collection of Western classics in his acclaimed album "Cowboy Songs," which he showcased this June in New York at Rainbow and Stars, Rockefeller Center's elegant cabaret.

"It is most deeply heartfelt work," says Murphey of his new Warner Brothers album. "This is the music of my people, my land, my culture and my own life."

DON EDWARDS

Edwards, America's cowboy troubadour, is a Weatherford, Texas-based singer and guitarist.

He has collaborated with most major country and western performers in his 30-year career, and most recently has been appearing with Michael Martin Murphey in his symphony concert, New York City and WestFest performances.

SONS OF THE SAN JOAQUIN

For those who fondly recall the rich harmony and melodic sounds of the Sons of The Pioneers, Roy Rogers singing sidekicks, this trio of engaging songwriter/singers will bring back wonderful memories.

Drawing on both familiar and seldom heard material written by members of the original 'Sons,' Jack, Lon and Joe Hannah of Visalia, California, are fast becoming one of Western music's most sought-after groups.

WADDIE MITCHELL

Mitchell, a ranch manager in Jiggs, Nevada, in his spare time, is one of America's best known cowboy poets, presenting his full-bodied, narrative verse — full of sweeping pictures and grand phrases — to standing-room audiences around the country.

LA VIENTA

Mario Otero and Stefan Schyga, well-known to El Paso music lovers — are redefining contemporary guitar music, bringing together Brazilian, flamenco and jazz sounds to create a hybrid style called "jazzmenca."

La Vienta (a poetic derivative of the Spanish word for the wind) is quickly becoming one of the Southwest's hottest musical attractions.

Stopping animal cruelty calls for a team approach

Animal cruelty is such a horrible thing that the subject is nearly taboo. And yet, as in other aberrations, the vicious treatment of animals should be faced headon and discussed so that it can be stopped.

In Capitan, incidents of animal cruelty mentioned at a recent meeting resulted in painful, perhaps fatal, injuries to cats. The culprits, when found, should be punished to the full extent of the law. For what is more helpless than a small domestic animal?

In Ruidoso, a big, beautiful German shepherd mix dog was adopted from the animal shelter just this week. This gentle and intelligent animal looks out at the world through pain-filled eyes that tell a tale of some sad history. The dog responds to a gentle touch with a fearful shiver — the direct result of mistreatment by a previous owner. The new owners have taken the challenge of proving to this helpless canine that humans can be kind and loving to their "best friends." And somewhere, there's a person who hurt this dog and walked away without a second glance.

Elsewhere in the county, another incident was reported in which a small dog may have been shot and left to suffer and die.

When charges are brought against abusers and when law enforcement and animal control officers issue citations for such behavior, the courts should send a clear message that such physical cruelty will not be tolerated.

But the answer is in stopping the problem before it gets into the court systems. Families have a grave obligation in teaching young children how to treat animals. Where such home teaching falls short, the educational system comes in to fill the gap offering classes that include units on respect for living things. Schools can take advantage of volunteer help through the Humane Society in providing educational opportunities that will include chances to see and touch domestic animals.

Teachers and parents, too, should be alert to any signs that a youngster has mistreated an animal. Such behavior has been linked to other serious crimes in later life, and early treatment, through therapy and counseling, could improve the quality of life for the child and save much suffering.

Education, intervention, counseling and court action are needed to protect helpless animals from mistreatment at the hands of the cruel and uninformed.

Campaign issues are sexist and out of date

TO THE EDITOR:

I find it very annoying for the Bush campaign to continuously berate Bill Clinton for his role in the military service, considering this issue is both sexist and anachronistic.

The issue is sexist because women are precluded from serving in direct combat, military duty, thereby preventing a woman from ever serving as President of the United States as long as military service is used as a litmus test to serve as President and therefore Commander in Chief. To say no person can serve as Commander in Chief if he/she has never fired a gun in the line of duty is as simplistic as preventing men from taking a stand on abortion since they cannot physically bear children. Believe me, I know plenty of men intervening in the role of abortion or abortion rights, and several women come to my mind when I consider the Presidential qualities required for the Oval Office.

The issue is anachronistic because the nature of war is changing as we enter the 21st century. No longer do we have the John Wayne style of battle lines drawn between friend and foe; hostages have become our prisoners of war, and innocent victims such as airline passengers and news reporters have become our latest casualties. Bush may think he proved his gallantry by fighting in World War II some 50 years ago, but in the '90s all people have to do is walk out their front doors to be in the middle of a war zone.

That's where Bush misses the target. Battles are fought every day in the homes of thousands where children are physically or sexually abused repeatedly, and families try to hold themselves together in the midst of drug-related homicides and chemical dependencies. The sound of "family values" rings empty in the halls of these households, as these troopers are merely fighting to survive. Bush needs to realize that survival is the very base of Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs, and without that value structure in place the rest just sounds like empty rhetoric. These are the kinds of battles Bush has never seen or heard, nor does he seem to care.

Dirty water is direct result of no planning

TO THE EDITOR:

Concerning dirty city water, there is a problem with the water. I had muddy water at home in Upper Canyon.

I went to Mr. Becker's laundry Tuesday morning at 7:30 a.m. There were signs: "Closed due to dirty city water."

I spoke with Mr. Becker about doing my laundry. In the commercial part of the laundry her started the big washers and checked the water coming through the tap. The water was somewhat clear.

He told me to try it. I did my laundry. The water was dark brown.

Mr. Becker had to start all 44 machines and cycle them through hot water washes to get all the mud out of the water heaters. That itself is a big expense (gas, electric, water and sewer) not counting the thousands of dollars worth of tablecloths that were ruined.

There is a solution to future water problems. Twice a year all fire hydrants should be opened up for 15 minutes in different sections of the village. Run an ad in the paper ahead of time to announce the time and day of flushing for each section, so that households won't be doing laundry.

Don't wait till the Village of Ruidoso fills with people and have this same problem again.

Someone is not thinking ahead or not at all.

T.A. Wheeler

Job security is at issue for Mescalero activists

TO THE EDITOR:

At the public meeting in Ruidoso with Attorney General Tom Udall, I mentioned that I had been unfairly terminated because of political pressure from Wendell Chino because I exercised my freedom of speech as Mescalero Apache American.

My termination (from the Bureau of Indian Affairs working on the Mescalero Reservation) occurred before MRS became an issue. This is the hammer Mr. Chino holds over the head of the Mescaleros. He did this to me and continually coerces his employees. It is relevant because this is why the Mescalero people are afraid to express their real opposition to the MRS.

It is very difficult for us to exercise our freedom of assembly and freedom of speech which is guaranteed to us under the United States Constitution.

Each member of the tribal council was sent a written invitation to the MRS meeting with other American Indian leaders, and they chose not to attend.

This is another example of the irresponsible leadership controlling the Mescalero Apache Tribe.

Francine Magoosh

We need a new mayor

TO THE EDITOR:

Congratulations on your excellent editorial (September 10, 1992).

My vote is for Alonso to go now. It would help the village tremendously if he left and persuaded Bill Karn and Ron Andrews to leave with him — perhaps even to leave town.

Ruidoso is a wonderful place to live and deserves dedicated elected officials. Hopefully, voters will look more carefully at who is running for office in the future.

Promote Jerry Shaw to mayor and give her good councilors to work with and Ruidoso will be even greater.

As part-time residents who hope to become full-time, we love it here and decided to leave town prior to the motorcycle event so we will not have to witness Ruidoso's humiliation again.

Couple is married in Lubbock

Julie Reecer of Lubbock, Texas, became the bride of Terry Wayne Graham of Lubbock in a 2 p.m. ceremony August 29, in the Westmont Christian Church in Lubbock.

The Reverend Terry Bell, minister of Broadway Church of Christ in Lubbock, officiated in the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Donald and Mavis Reecer of Alto and the groom is the son of Flora Jones of Brundidge, Alabama.

The church was decorated with brass arches covered with greenery holding lighted votive candles. Ecru satin bows with lighted votive candles marked the bridal path.

A string quartet, Touch of Class, presented musical selections, with Linda Kraus playing the organ for the ceremony. David Gaschen was vocalist.

The bride wore an ivory lace and chiffon gown with a chapel train styled with a high neckline covered in Alencon lace and seed pearls. Her V-shaped illusion yoke and fitted bodice were highlighted with beaded lace. She wore an ivory halo accented with seed pearls, extending to the waist.

The bride wore her grandmother Clara Reecer's wedding ring as a symbol of something old, with her new veil. Her wedding gown was borrowed from her matron of honor and for something blue, the bride wore a garter made by her grandmother.

Her bouquet was of white roses, stephanotis and alstroemerias.

Barbara Wilt of Gaithersburg, Maryland, was her friend's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Joan Wimberly of Lubbock and Jana Parker of Houston, Texas.

The bride's attendants wore matching purple two-piece dresses with gold accents that featured straight skirts and sweetheart necklines, with short horizontal pleated sleeves.

Rick Gilbert of Lubbock, Texas,

Visitors return home to Lincoln

Mr. and Mrs. Bonifacio "Boney" Carajabel of Roswell, recently visited Boney's old home, the Carajabel House, now called La Placita Gallery in Lincoln.

The Carajabel's were married in Lincoln and spent their honeymoon in the small west room of the house.

His brother had what is known as the Huff House.

There have been quite a number of the descendants of Daniel Carajabel who have visited the past two years.

Dan Carajabel was a carpenter in the historic old Lincoln.

Most visitors have not been in the house, owned now by Ralph and Rosalie Dunlap, for up to 40-plus years and had brought their children and grandchildren to show them where they grew up.

Hondo schools open with new classes

Enthusiasm, a positive atmosphere and an expanded program start the year at Hondo, but this small rural school never stopped—not even during the summer!

A reading program staffed by volunteer parents and teachers met throughout the summer to keep students interested in literature. Superintendent Sergio Castañon welcomed all school personnel by presenting awards for this outstanding program.

"It is unusual to do this at the beginning of a school year, however, we really had a successful summer program, and we could not have accomplished this without a dedicated core of teachers and parents," he said.

"And, we haven't stopped yet. A proposal was submitted to incorporate a Business Education and Industrial Technology program. We had our proposal accepted so we can now add several new offerings to our expanded curriculum from last year. It is all very exciting," Castañon said.

The new business program instructor Donna Willard said the school received a Carl Perkins grant to start the program and at this point she offers keyboarding, computers, automated office education and general business. Several students are also taking advantage of the program to learn computerized accounting. One class is also working with Spanish and history instructor Lynda Sanchez to create bi-lingual business cards.

She said she is pleased with the response to the program so far and has about one-third of the high school body taking courses.

"The students learn skills that are important for both those who choose to go to college and those who choose to work after high school," she said.

Castañon said "Another fine addition to our school is the Josten's Learning Corporation Computer Lab. That along with a newly installed Compton's Encyclopedia computer program featured for research in our library are all state of the art, and up-dated software is included."

A new lab has been established for students in the kindergarten through eighth grade to take advantage of the computer system. They have 20 computers, one management system and two printers. Lab assistant Fidela Montoya said one compact disk has 8,000 lessons on it, and the management system has a timer on it for each class so it does a certain lesson for each period. The program helps teach reading, math and writing, and for younger students it allows them to start learning keyboarding.

High school students can use it to type and print out reports, too. The entire school can also use the Compton's Encyclopedia on computer to research subjects for reports. The information can be fairly simple for younger students or more complex for older ones. The program shows pictures of some of the subjects, and it also has audio speeches of at least two of the presidents.

The computer lab was set up in July, and the company gave the lab technicians and teachers an in-service on how to use the system for the students' advantage. Also working as lab assistants are Yvonne Sanchez and Jo Ann Sanchez.

Hondo's Honors Program is in its second year in the high school and the alternative or four-day school schedule is also continuing. The Principles of Technologies honors class will be taught by Gordon Thompson who also directs the science and advanced math classes. The science department has also gotten new computers and equipment to help students keep up with technology in that field.

Both support and certified staff are very enthused, and everything is off to not only a positive, but also to an exciting and fresh start. Cheryl Bowman, who teaches English and science, will also be Hondo's athletic director and head teacher.

New staff include Jess Yaksich, NMSU graduate as the vo-ag and industrial technology instructor. Bernard Roth will take over as special education and gifted teacher.

New at the elementary level are third grade, Yvette Torrez-Troy and fourth grade, Lisa Vasquez. Student teacher Krista Isbell Cooper will assist Porfiria Montoya-Zinn during the first semester.

The elementary school plans several exciting celebrations and activities commemorating the 500th Anniversary of the Spanish arrival in the New World. They will begin with the 16 de September celebrations and continue throughout the year with cultural awareness programs.

Parents and members of the community are invited to the 16 de Septiembre, the Mexican independence day, program starting at 1 p.m. Wednesday at the Hondo cafeteria. The kindergarten class will sing Spanish songs, while the first grade will do Mexican folk dances. Students in the second grade will do a presentation on the Mexican flag, and the third grade will also do poems and songs.

The fourth grade students will present a story, Bella y la Bestia (Beauty and the Beast). The fifth grade will do dichos (proverbs) and juegos (games). The sixth grade will make a presentation on the grito de delores or what the significance of the 16 de Septiembre is. The cafeteria is also getting involved with the program by decorating the dining area and serving the students a Mexican meal on that day.

The programs will provide an innovative way for parents and the community to get involved in a positive and fun aspect of the school, as it starts a new year.

Capitan

Class rankings spell money to some high school seniors

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Students transferring into the Capitan school district their senior year could significantly alter class rankings and hurt long-time residents' chances for scholarships.

But those new students shouldn't be penalized just because their parents moved into a different school district, said high school principal Darrel Stierwalt.

During a workshop last week, the Capitan School Board wrestled with the question of how to reconcile the two sides of the situation confronting the district this year.

Later during their regular meeting, members agreed that there were too many variables to be discussed and a decision should be postponed. The district's advisory committee should study some alternatives and come back with a recommendation.

"Last weekend I had the opportunity to visit with teachers and board members mostly from the eastern side of the state," said Board Member Preston Stone. "They said the policy that worked best was that a youngster needs to be in a school two to three years to be considered for salutorian or valedictorian."

The district has run into criticism before about how the valedictorian and salutorian were selected, board member Ervin Aldaz noted. The existing policy specifies that students coming in from unaccredited schools are not eligible.

"It's not just because we have a problem this year," Aldaz said. "We have to have a policy to follow for the next 10 years so students will know at the beginning."

"Let's do it and stick with it so every time we have a situation, we can't juggle it."

Stierwalt said when a new girl with a high grade point average from another school enrolled this year as a senior, she knew she could not be considered for valedictorian or salutorian because of one year in a non-accredited school as a foreign exchange student. The girl lives in Alto, which falls within Capitan district, but she previously attended in the Ruidoso district, he said.

She still could affect class rankings below those two top positions, Board President Tom Trost pointed out.

What should the district do when colleges ask for class rankings? he asked. Where would the new students with high grade point averages fit into the scale?

Stone said the district could use multiple rankings for students not enrolled for the minimum-required number of years. Under that systems, there might be a number one student (valedictorian), a number two (salutorian), then a number two-A, three, three-A and on down the line.

The ranking becomes extremely important in small classes the size of Capitan, with about 30 graduating seniors, said Beverly Payne, whose daughter, Tammy, is one of the high ranking seniors in Capitan.

Good colleges want to offer scholarships and other financial help to those students in the top 10 percent of their classes, she said.

Fourth place falls out of the top 10 percent ranking in Capitan.

Marie Griego said her daughter is third in her senior class with a 3.75 grade point average on a 4-point scale.

"A new girl comes in and (her daughter) comes home upset that she might be kicked down because the newer girl has a higher grade point average," Mrs. Griego told the board.

"I don't want to penalize the girl, but it's not fair to the ones who have gone here most of their lives."

Mrs. Griego said she could have sent her daughter to another school district this year where she might have been valedictorian.

"My daughter has had to work for her grades. I don't think it would be fair to bump her down."

Mrs. Payne agreed. "If Tammy wasn't happy with her ranking here, we could go to Hondo and bump someone there," she said. "It's not fair to us or the students."

Mrs. Payne said she consulted the superintendent of the Carrizozo school system. That district requires four continuous semesters to be considered for valedictorian or salutorian, she said.

"There's a lot of money at risk with rankings," Stierwalt said.

Those in the top 10 percent could receive a four-year scholarship worth $40,000, Stone said. "That's how we've been explaining grade point average to our kids. Every A is money in the bank."

"If my daughter applies to Eastern New Mexico University (as third in her class), she will get $2,500," Mrs. Griego said. "If she goes to fourth and she is bumped out of the top 10 percent in a class of 30, who knows? I'm really disturbed for my daughter. She's taken seven classes every year and honors courses."

Tammy Payne said she has attended Capitan since kindergarten.

She and several friends started honors courses in ninth grade to reach their goals.

"I don't see how someone can come in and say, nope," she said. "I agree the valedictorian and salutorian should be here four continuous semesters."

"It wasn't just being in the top 10 percent. We were seeing money signs. We need the money because we can't afford to pay for college ourselves."

"What would be the repercussions of changing the existing policy?" Aldaz asked.

"The students that enrolled under this policy would graduate under those terms," school superintendent David Lock said. "But we have to have a policy for the future."

"I like the dual ranking approach," Trost said.

Board member Ron Roybal asked how colleges would view dual ranking.

Stierwalt said most wouldn't be aware the approach was being used. College admission officials would just look at grade point average.

"I don't think anyone will have the exact same grade point average and ACT (college admission test) score," Aldaz said.

Roybal said the real twist that bothers board members is that the policy on the books is not what they recall approving several years ago.

Lock said board meeting minutes reflect that members wanted to require a minimum of two to three years in the district for consideration as valedictorian and salutorian. However, the policy only specifies that students are ineligible if some of their credits came from non-accredited schools.

"It was a failure of the board not to go back and check to ensure changes were included in the new draft," Stone said.

"That's why I'm real careful now to read the minutes," Trost said.

Lock recommended the board hold off taking any action until he checks with other districts.

Stone said good scholarships are locked up by January before final rankings are tabulated.

"We're already working on scholarships," Tammy Payne said. "I need to fill in the forms. If I'm not going to be in the top 10 percent, I need to seek other financial help."

Elementary principal Jerry Newsom said at this point class rankings and grade point averages are only estimates. If a student currently is in top 10 percent, that's what should be listed.

Lock agreed. The current grade point average is the only concrete information. Aldaz cautioned moderation if the board decides to go with a dual ranking approach.

"We must be careful the district doesn't look foolish with a top 10 percent consisting of 17 students out of 30," he said. "Someday someone is going to check."

One of the difficulties when students come into a district their senior year is that it's hard to compare accomplishments, Aldaz and Stone said.

"I'd like to come up with a solution where nobody gets hurt," Aldaz said. "I don't want a new or long term hard worker to suffer."

"We're not the country club of Ruidoso," Stone said. "We're the school for people in this district. When this district gets away from its unique situation we have here, we have lost the values of this area."

Because the district is small, there is more teacher-student contact, he said.

"If I wanted to be like Ruidoso, I would go to Ruidoso. We're in this community because we like it. I don't want to be a 2A school (a larger size designation) because of out of district enrollment, I'll tell you that point blank."

Stone was referring to that fact that several students who previously attended school in Ruidoso switched to Capitan this year.

The advisory board, which will consider the valedictorian selection and class ranking issues, is scheduled to meet at 3:30 p.m. today, September 17. The public and students are invited to attend.

During the regular board meeting following the workshop, members:

—approved a temporary transportation agreement with the Hondo school district to allow Capitan to transport about a half dozen students who live in the Hondo district. The children live in an area the Hondo district cannot service, but if boundaries were redrawn, Hondo would lose the property tax money it collects from that area, Lock explained.

The districts have operated under a per capita arrangement for years, but state officials advised that it should be formalized with an agreement.

—heard that future board meetings will be conducted in the school library because of a space crunch. The room previously used by the board will become the classroom for gifted students.

"I just don't want the class that uses this room to feel segregated," Aldaz said. "I know we have no choice but to use the space."

School joins with village

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Capitan village trustees Monday pledged municipal support in developing a community park/playing field.

School Board Chairman Tom Trost and board member Ervin Aldaz asked for use of village equipment to clear a field across the highway from the school complex.

The seven-acre field is owned by the school district.

"The board hopes to come up with ways to use the field and help the young people of the village," Trost told the trustees. Possible development plans include a baseball field/soccer field, a place for the school band to practice and a community park.

"I'm sure you're in the same shape as we are, not much money," Trost said. "We want to make this a cooperative thing and we'll start small by asking for help leveling off the field."

Aldaz said, "We'd like to come up with a project that is community based. We want input and everybody involved."

The school board would like to see the park complex under construction by spring.

"So we are starting now soliciting help," Aldaz said. "We want to make something for the kids to do in the summer since most of our activities are during the school year."

"I'm sure the police would like them all right there in one place," Trost said. "They need some place to go in the evening."

Aldaz said, "We're bound and determined to ask not so much for money as for in-kind services."

That approach was different from previous school board discussions in which members said they would like to see the village help pay for the power to operate night lights on the field.

But it was an effective approach, resulting not only in the vocal support of the trustees, but also an offer from contractor Pat Huey to use his bulldozer.

Several municipal employees led by Terry Cox also volunteered to perform the necessary field preparation work on their off hours, if village equipment was available.

"I'm sure we can cooperate with our blade if we know what's required," Mayor Frank Warth said,

"You guys can guide us, we'll have to schedule it on a time available basis."

Trost said he anticipate school board employees also would volunteer to become involved on their own time.

Warth had only a moment's hesitation when the thought of the state's anti-donation law crossed his mind.

But village attorney J. Robert Beauvais, who was not at the meeting, previously has said equipment and financial help extended from one government entity to another doesn't run afoul of that law. The rule was designed to prevent government entities from giving money to private groups and projects, he has said.

"We'll come up with a plan of action and sign a joint power agreement, if necessary, to make it all legal," Aldaz said. "We plan to go to many other groups and ask them to make it one of their projects. We're going to others for donations of trees."

"We'll cooperate and I'm sure we can work something out," Warth said.

"That's the kind of cooperation we're after," Aldaz said.

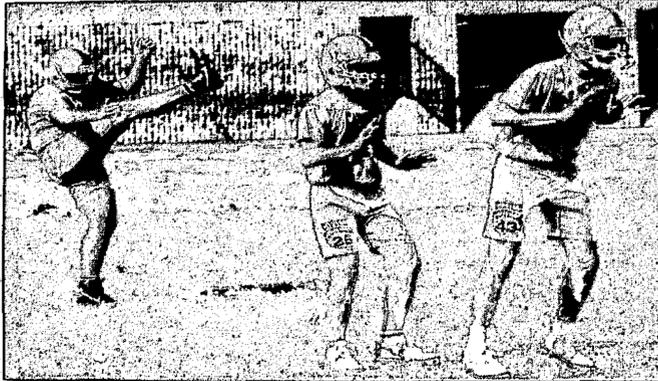

In other business, the trustees: —appointed Joyce Jones and Lynn Stony to the village planning and zoning board.

—approved a certificate of financial hardship for the village, which stated it could not pay matching funds for $75,000 in road work by the state. The village is asking for help on Main and East Granby roads, which are school bus routes and more likely to be approved by the state.

Warth said the State Legislature has $3-million in left-over project money that has been divided into $75,000 lots.

—approved changes in the village budget sent back by the State Department of Finance and Administration. Estimated revenues in the general fund were reduced by another $5,000 for a total of $22,000 in reductions this year, Warth said. Tax revenue estimates by the trustees were higher than the amount of money actually generated by the village's gross receipts tax.

The village doesn't have to reduce expenditures in any category yet, Warth said.

Way to go!

Capitan youngsters get a Headstart in January

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A Headstart program will welcome young Capitan pre-schoolers next January.

Unless there's some unforeseen delay, school superintendent David Lock told school board members last week that Capitan will be able to serve up to 20 children.

An application sent to the federal government in July for Headstart programs in Ruidoso, Capitan and Hondo was approved for half of the original scope, Lock said.

Ruidoso will lose 50 percent of its proposed program and Hondo was eliminated.

The reduced program was resubmitted and approval is anticipated, he said.

The program will be combined with the existing one in Capitan for three and four-year-old children primarily from low-income families.

Breakfast and lunch are part of the project, which emphasized social interaction, physical health screening and parental involvement.

More than 10 percent of the national enrollment are handicapped students. Although millions have been helped by Headstart, nationally less than 20 percent of those eligible have been reached.

In another matter, Stone said he had noticed on a recent activities trip when the district was paying for meals, several students didn't eat the food they ordered.

"If we're going to go in and borrow money (from other portions of the budget) to pay for their meals, the youngsters should understand," Stone said. "They should sit down and eat. If they're not hungry, then don't order."

Until revenues accumulate from gate receipts at football gates, the athletic activities treasury is low. To supplement the fund, the board has borrowed from other categories.

During the meeting, the board approved guidelines for meat processing as part of an agricultural vocational course. Put together with the help of an advisory committee, the guideline allow for five beef, eight hogs and eight lambs to be processed. Freezer space will be limited to those carcasses, plus eight deer, five elf and five other large game.

Sticking to the limit will be difficult with pressure from people who want their meat handled, said teacher Randy Pritchett. No flexibility is allowed if a quota is not fulfilled in any category.

"I don't want to get in the situation of cutting up one type of animal," Pritchett said. "You can only learn so much from that. I realize it may impact fundraising (for the Future Farmers of America chapter, which earns money from processing game meat)."

"I can guarantee it will upset some people if they don't get their meat cut. There is an appeal process, but everybody will have a reason why theirs should be cut. They may come back to the board or the administration trying to persuade."

Stone suggested students might benefit from handling the processing from the beginning, including slaughtering, skinning and quartering.

Pritchett said that could become complicated if he had to drive students from ranch to ranch.

"Some don't have the stomach for it," he said. Board member Ron Roybal said, "I don't think the school is here to slaughter people's game for their benefit. It's here for education."

"I'm glad no cooler rental was included in this plan. We'd have people bring down and leave their game all summer."

High school principal Darrel Stierwalt agreed. "We're not a business, as seemed to be the approach in the past."

Last year, a teacher was dismissed in connection with what administration officials felt was excessive meat cutting to the detriment of other educational aspects of the agricultural program.

Stierwalt said the policy will be reviewed before the next school year.

"This whole agricultural program is geared more toward education," said board member Ervin Aldaz. "I think we're headed in the right direction."

In other action, the school board:

—heard Aldaz say he had received many compliments about the chef salad and breakfasts now being served students by the district.

Because of the added time needed for those two items, the board agreed to increase the hours of two part time cafeteria workers.

—accepted the resignation of Karen Payton as administrative assistant, effective September 30; appointed Terry Cox as junior high coach and Pat Ventura as assistant football coach; and hired Marcia Bady as the teacher for the new fifth grade class formed because of swelling enrollment at that age group.

—heard that enrollment seems to have settled at about 30 students more than last year, resulting in the hiring of a new fifth grade student.

The breakdown is 159 in high school, 86 in the middle school and 299 in the elementary school.

Dual enrollment raises some questions for school board

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A proposal to allow Capitan students to earn college credit while still attending high school hit a few snags last week.

The Capitan school board sent a copy of a proposed policy to cover concurrent enrollment to Jim Miller, administrator of the Ruidoso education center of Eastern New Mexico University.

In a letter back to the board, Miller said the university and school board appear to be in substantial agreement on terms for Capitan students to take courses for dual credit.

"However, there are several points which do not appear in your document that the university needs to have in a signed agreement," Miller wrote.

He noted that House Bill 72 requires local school districts to pay for tuition costs of students concurrently enrolled.

"However, most districts have ignored the law and I only mention it to you so that you and the board will be aware of your liability under the law," Miller wrote.

District superintendent David

Lock said if someone pushed that provision, the school board always has the option of dropping the concurrent program.

"You don't have to enter a concurrent enrollment agreement with each student," he said. "We are just providing an avenue if a student wants to pursue it."

Board president Tom Trost said, "There's nothing to keep students from going to a (college) class in the evening (independently), although they wouldn't receive credit for high school."

In his letter, Miller also noted that a statement needs to be included that students are subject to all university rules while attending class and that the student is responsible for any liability incurred as a result of his/her behavior on campus.

Grades will be provided in writing at mid-term and after finals, Miller wrote.

"We could provide by telephone four-week and 12-week grades at the request of the principal or counselor."

Miller added that classes in history, psychology and business have been included to the college day time curriculum. If Capitan students are interested in enrolling, the board's policy would have to be amended to reflect approval.

Trost said he opposes allowing students to attend college classes for dual credit during the normal high school day.

He envisions the program more for students to take elective-type courses after the regular school day. Travel time from Capitan to Ruidoso also could be a factor.

Under the Ruidoso school district's concurrent program, it doesn't make any difference when a college course is offered, district superintendent Mike Gladden told The Ruidoso News Wednesday.

"It doesn't matter if it's during the day as long as the student goes through the counselor and administration for approval," he said. "And the course must be a credit that can be applied toward both high school graduation and college."

Capitan board members agreed to wait until they receive admission forms from Miller and Lock has a chance to confer with him before taking any action on the concurrent enrollment proposal.

Suspects being sought after separate animal cruelty incidents in Capitan

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A young cat was shot in the eye by a metal dart from a blow gun Monday evening and Capitan police officer Lance Zink wants to catch the person behind the violent act.

Zink told village trustees that about 5:30 p.m., he was summoned to Fourth Street where the cat had been found by the owner.

"The dart went into the eye and brain," Zink said. "The owner tried to pull it out, but the cat went crazy. The animal got it out but obviously was severely injured and probably will die."

The four-inch long metal dart can go through a piece of plywood when propelled by a dart gun, Zink said. The back end of the dart was capped in plastic.

"They were selling them at the recent gun show in Ruidoso," he said. "I'd sure like to find out who did this."

A woman in the audience said this isn't the first act of cruelty against cats in the community recently. She said a stray yellow cat that had been living in a culvert across the street from her home was badly injured by a group of boys.

She saw the boys come out of the culvert. The cat later came out, barely able to navigate. It couldn't eat for a while and she thinks it now is blind in one eye.

Many psychologists contend that cruelty to animals is a sign of a dangerous mind set that later could lead to violent acts against humans.

Zink would welcome any information about the dart incident. He can be contacted at the village police department, 354-2248.

LINCOLN COUNTY SOLID WASTE AUTHORITY

The Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority (LCSWA) is requesting public input for 30 days on the mandatory county garbage collection system which will begin Nov. 1, 1992.

The mandate for LCSWA is to provide a county-wide solid waste management system that includes collection, transportation, recycling, and disposal of solid waste for all Lincoln County residents.

The total collection system will be in place by November 1, 1992.

The recycling program is functioning at this time with recycling igloo locations established in Corona, Carrizozo, Capitan, Alto, Ruidoso Downs, and Ruidoso. Recycling igloos will be placed in Hondo soon.

The objective of the recycling program is recovery of resources of raw materials as well as to reduce the amount of solid waste that has to be taken to a landfill. Recycling materials being accepted at the igloo sites are newspaper, glass, aluminum, and plastics.

LCSWA encourages residents to dispose of their recyclable materials in the blue recycling igloos. This will reduce the amount of solid waste that must be transported to a landfill.

A county map is printed on page " which shows the proposed locations for dumpsters for solid waste collection. LCSWA is asking for public input concerning these selected locations.

LCSWA wants to know if the selected dumpster locations shown on the map will be convenient for residents in their travel patterns from home to schools, shopping, the post office, and other miscellaneous travel.

Residents should contact Gene Green at LCSWA by phone at 505-378-4697, or mail comments to LCSWA, Box 2405, Ruidoso Downs, NM 88346 with suggestions as to how LCSWA can meet their needs.

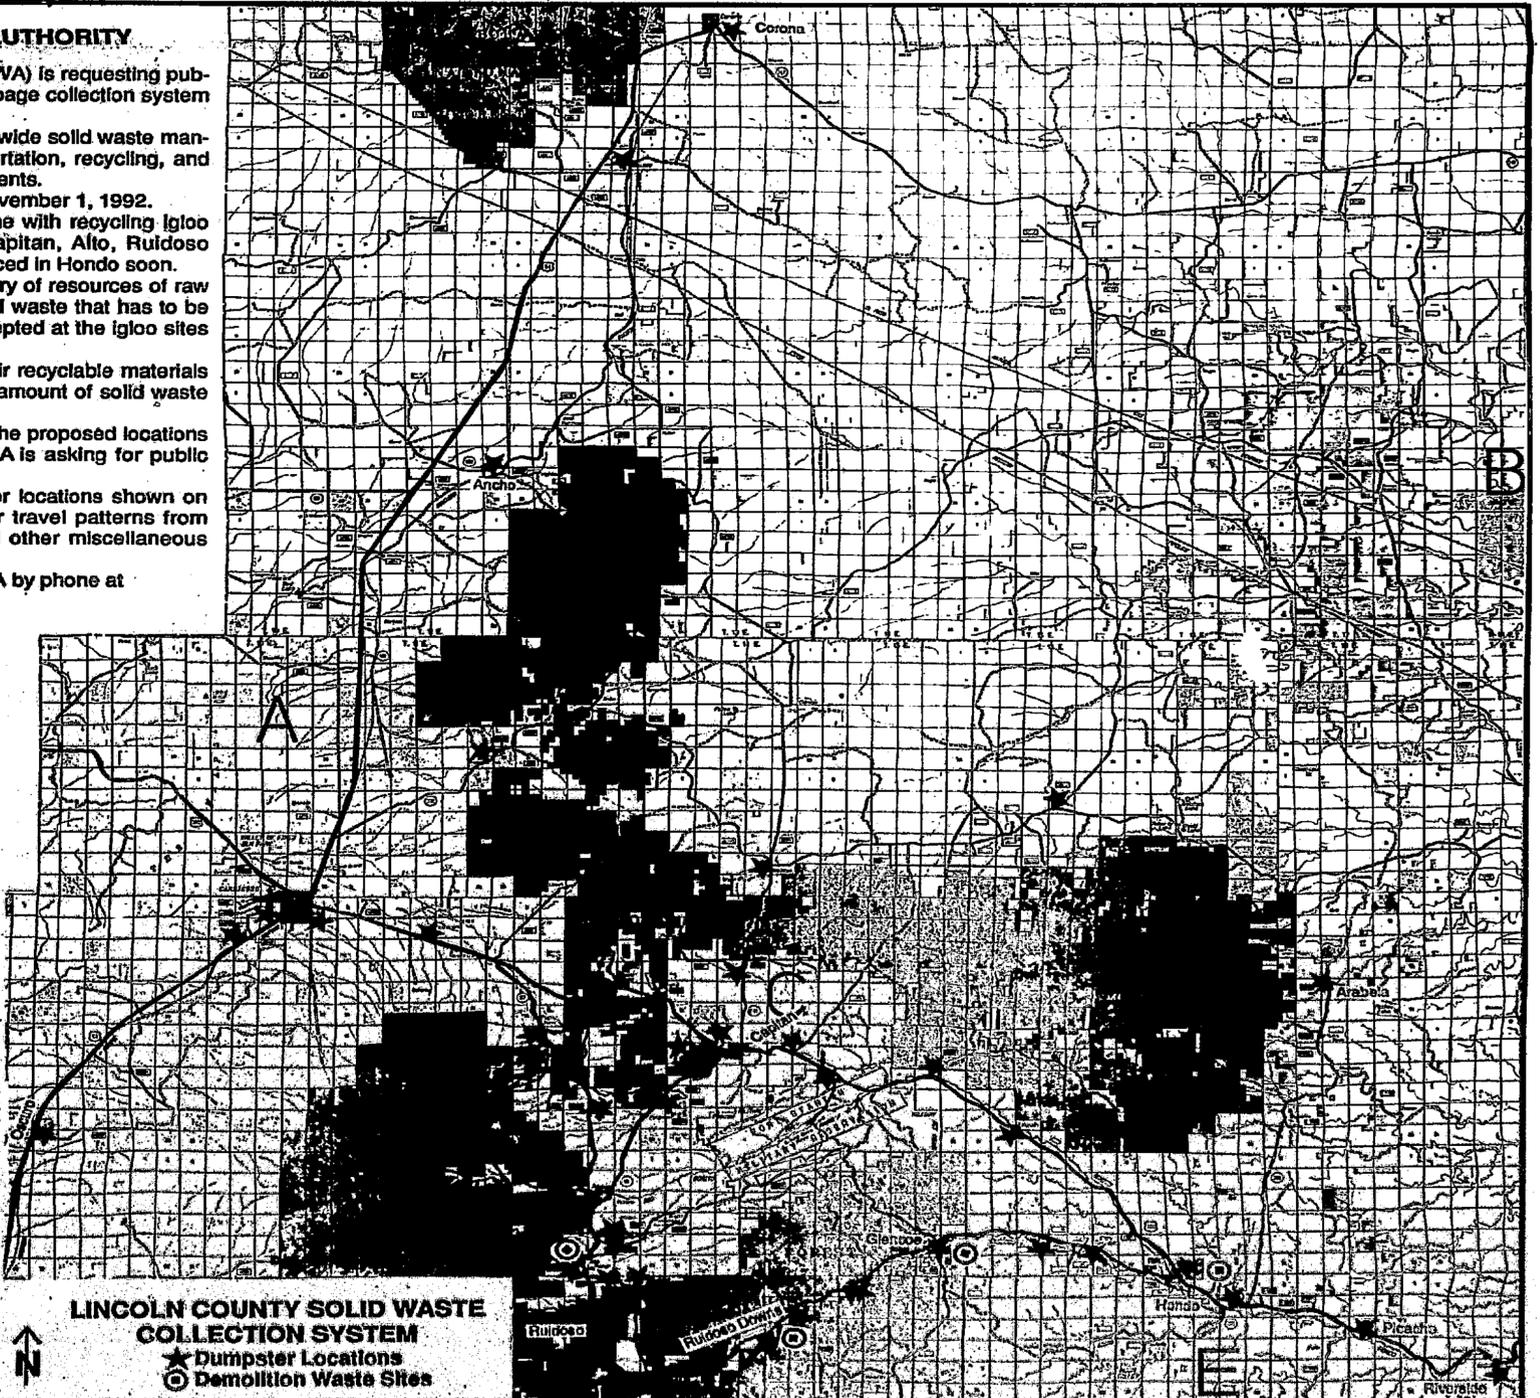

Sites are needed to place dumpsters at some of the locations shown on the map. Anyone who has a suitable site and would be willing to have a dumpster placed on their land should contact LCSWA. The dumpster sites will be monitored and kept clean.

An additional and much needed service will also be provided by LCSWA for residents to dispose of yard waste, old furniture, and building materials. These sites are designated on the map as demolition sites. At least four locations around the county will be designated for demolition sites.

The cost for the total waste collection service in Lincoln County is $5.25 for each home. This fee includes use of the dumpsters as well as use of the demolition sites.

A variance policy has been adopted by LCSWA for those landowners who own 300 or more contiguous acres and who want to dispose of the trash they generate on their own land. A variance application must be completed and filed with LCSWA. A variance application must be completed and filed with LCSWA. Variance applications are available at the LCSWA office in Ruidoso Downs at 222 2nd Street.

LCSWA is working toward an agreement with the Otero County Solid Waste Authority for a regional landfill to serve both Lincoln and Otero Counties. The organizational structure for this joint venture may be completed soon when a joint powers agreement is signed.
