Fans place record bets this weekend

Ruidoso Downs' broke a 10-year-old record for total handle for a Memorial Day Weekend Sunday as fans pushed $892,882 through the windows on the 14-race program.

The previous standard of $864,851 was established in 1982.

Saturday, fans betting on Ruidoso races wagered a total of $769,889 which eclipsed the two-year-old record of $728,480 on a Memorial Day Weekend Saturday.

Grand jury meets

A Lincoln County grand jury is scheduled to convene Tuesday to consider possible public corruption charges against State Representative H. John Underwood.

Members of the grand jury were picked last Friday at the county courthouse in Carrizozo.

State Attorney General Tom Udall is taking allegations against Underwood to the grand jury to determine whether there is enough evidence to indict him.

Although Udall has not discussed the specifics of the case, Underwood said it stems from his work for a client fighting to retain his driving license.

Class of '93 celebrates

by GARY CAMPBELL

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

With an air of honor, respect and fun, the Ruidoso High School Class of 1993 had its final send off Thursday night.

The class said its final goodbye in front of a gymnasium full of family and friends.

RHS principal Don R. Weems hosted the celebration for the graduates, and was also the primary speaker of the evening.

Weems, who had been principal of Nob Hill Elementary School when the graduates began school 12 years ago, thanked the class for letting him be their principal for so many years in an uplifting and emotional message to the graduates.

"It will be hard for me to allow you to walk through the door at Ruidoso High School tonight," said Weems at Thursday's graduation.

School Board President Ronnie Hemphill and Superintendent Mike Gladden also shared wisdom and experience with the graduates.

Hemphill told the students of two major keys to succeeding in life, learning from mistakes and helping others.

"Helping others is an integral part in any successful life," said Hemphill.

The graduates also heard from several members of their own class.

First of all, Stacy Wozny lit up the gym with her rendition of the class song, "Stand by Me."

Later the class heard addresses from the salutatorian, Allison Rhodes, and the valedictorian, Hemanth Pai.

Both told the students to cherish the years that had just passed and to look forward and achieve in the future.

Fort Stanton employees allege abuse, nepotism and favoritism

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

As the staff of Fort Stanton Hospital gears up for the changes that will take place at the institution in the next few years, some wonder if old problems will be resolved with the shift in direction from developmentally disabled residents to long term care patients.

During periods within the last two years, employees who contacted The Ruidoso News contend that staffing levels dipped dangerously low, exposing both patients and employees to possible injury.

One employee complained that after reporting a possible case of abuse, he was ostracized by others at the fort in retaliation.

Inequity in pay, lack of evaluations on which to base raises and existence of family-tie favoritism within the center also were among concerns cited.

Abuse procedures

Fort Stanton's record on abuse reports is good, said Steve Dossey, director of the Developmental Disabilities Division of the State Department of Health.

During the calendar year of 1992, only 13 reports were received through the various channels available. One report was substantiated, he said. The types of alleged abuse ranged from as mild as someone shouting at a client to someone striking a client.

FORT STANTON Anguish & Rebirth

But a former employee of the fort complained that after telling administration officials about a possible minor incident of abuse, he was frozen out by other workers.

"There is a real reluctance to report any abuses," the person said. "I had several come back at me and tell me, 'You just made a mistake and you're out of here now. We're going to make life so rough for you.' That they'll get rid of me for reporting abuse."

"That's what scared me. That's when the light went on and I said man, oh man."

"I may have been over-reacting (about the possible abuse), but it was something that they should have known occurred."

The employee said because of extra meetings scheduled at the fort during that period, people were being pulled away from their regular duties and programs were understaffed.

"With fewer people in different areas, things tend to happen," the employee said. "People get over-worked and are more impatient."

Dossey said retaliation for reporting abuse is absolutely prohibited in state policy.

"If it ever comes to our attention, the employee retaliating would be disciplined," he said.

Fort Stanton administrator Ervin Aldaz said he is very concerned about his staff's reaction to reporting abuse.

"I want people to feel like it is a positive to report abuse. We want them to report it without blinking an eye," he said. "If they do not, they are as guilty as the person performing the abuse and the same disciplinary action can go to them as the person who did it."

"I can't help it if people ostracize a reporting person. What I will do if I know that, I will meet with the shift or the group of people involved and say I get the feeling such and such is occurring and it makes me sick that anyone would hold anything against an individual for reporting what they saw. That leads me to believe that you all may be hiding something and I will not condone that and you will be in as much trouble as the person that we just took action against. I want it to stop and if it continues, you may not be working here."

"But it's a hard nut to crack."

Dossey said abuse investigations normally are handled by Adult Protective Services in the state Children, Youth and Families Department. Because Fort Stanton has federal standing, an internal investigation also must be conducted, he said. Lennie Grieg, with the state social services division said 99 percent of the abuse reports received by the state are unsubstantiated.

A special team is sent out to investigate and recommends action, she said. The department follows up to ensure the recommendations are followed.

"It's not a process that can be gone through in 24 hours," she said. She characterized the number of reports from the fort as "low, very low."

Depending on the severity of the type of abuse reported, the state can send down representatives from the Licensing and Certification Bureau. Law enforcement officials also may be called into a case.

"Every employee at Fort Stanton has been trained on this (abuse reporting procedure) three times this year," Aldaz said, showing the procedure outline.

Quarterly meetings are conducted to look at trends and a human rights committee comprised of people from outside the facility also review the data, he said. A quarterly report is sent to Dossey.

Staffing levels

At times, teaching staff at the fort have to juggle an immense amount of paperwork, as well as supervise clients, sometimes without aides to help, according to employees.

I didn't keep up on my paperwork because I spent time on the classroom work, one teacher told The News. I was told when hired there would be paperwork, but I didn't realize it would be another job.

She often feared for her own safety, as well as the safety of clients when supervision was at a minimum, the teacher said.

On actual sign-in sheets provided by the fort, at times only two employees were present in a cottage with as many as 32 clients.

"That's a very legitimate concern," Aldaz said about the staffing levels.

"Like anyplace else, we do have people call in sick and can't make it for legitimate and non-legitimate reasons. What we do, we substitute somebody in their places. If somebody has a concern that there is an unsafe condition, I wish they would come talk to me. I have never had one person do that."

"If someone came to me and said I think I am in an unsafe situation, I would immediately call a meeting with the supervisor and department head, and meet with (the client advocacy staff called QMRPs) to decide what needs to be done to make it safe for the residents."

"In some cases, individuals have been hurt. We deal with clients that are very difficult, but also it's the responsibility of this facility

Advisory board stresses using lodgers tax funds to attract tourists

by CHARLES STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

The ability to draw tourists from outside Ruidoso was the emphasis for special events money set aside this year by the Lodgers Tax Advisory Board.

In a meeting last week, the board agreed that other organizations will have to come back for round two. Final approval for all funding will be voted on by the Ruidoso Village Council.

The Golden Aspen Motorcycle Rally, a for-profit event owned by Councilor Ron Andrews was approved for $1,500. The event is in its second year of the new approved funding method and will require a dollar for dollar match.

Hamfest, a not-for-profit venture operated by the Sierra Blanca Ham Radio Club, is also in its second year and asked for $2,300. Chairman Bob Carey said a dollar for dollar match of $1,150 was the most the board could approve.

Rocky Mountain Music, a blue grass festival run by Jerry Perry, asked for $3,635. The second year event will have to match dollar for dollar, the $1,500 maximum the board will allocate.

Not passing on the first go around was the only village board request from the Ruidoso Arts and Film Commission. Paul Westbrook asked for money for an old fashioned Fourth of July concert and picnic.

Commissioner Ed Hyman said he had a problem with events that weren't designed to bring people from out of town.

Other members of the board agreed, saying it was more of a community celebration of Independence Day. Board members said it would be fun, but indicated it didn't meet the spirit of the lodgers tax funding.

"A few years ago, they had the Spring Fling, Wing Ding, Crash Bash Dash Party and they wanted $5,000 to put it on from the lodgers tax," said Hyman. "That wasn't going to bring one person from out of town, purely a local operation. Boy, did we have a squabble over that one. It all boils down very simply. If it's not bringing people to town, why are we doing it?"

Board member Patricia Espinosa told Hyman of huge sums of money spent in the past.

"Just for your information, until last year, lodgers tax gave $10,000, $20,000 for, like, The Museum of the Horse, or the track, All American Festival or whatever, I don't know," Espinosa said.

Hyman agreed that large sums were spent.

"The money was there. There were no limits, and to help them get started, we did these things," said Hyman. "But we can't continue forever."

"Does this meet the criteria for the lodgers tax funds to be spent? According to the budget, they're spending $3,235 for advertising," Carey said.

Tammie Maddox, village clerk, said the purpose of lodgers tax is to encourage marketing and advertising that promotes tourism, travel and development.

Hyman said the town already is full on the Fourth of July.

Espinosa asked that the Fourth of July concert be set aside.

Another request from Paul Westbrook was to promote the Ruidoso Pops Concert No. 6, by Ruidoso Friends of the Arts.

Hyman said he was familiar with the operation of uplinking the Pops Concert (paying a company to feed a program to its affiliates on a non-guaranteed basis).

He said if a program, (from Ruidoso) was uplinked in Philadelphia, it would have no impact for an educational channel in Philadelphia and he said it wouldn't remotely impact Ruidoso.

"It's possible it could be put on," said Hyman. But if I were running the station in Philadelphia and had a hundred different shows I could put on, this would be pretty far down the list. And they get inundated with these things."

Uplinking was compared to vanity publishing, where the author pays the publisher to print his work instead of the publisher paying the author for his work.

Councilors who contacted an uplinking contractor in Denver last year were given a list of towns where the program could be picked up, but the contractor said there were no guarantees.

The commission set that program and a request for $1,500 aside. Another $1,500 lollipop concert was canceled by the Westbrook.

But Westbrook also asked for an allocation for a play, "Citizens Revenge U.S.A.," a musical comedy-farce, to be presented election year, January 22-23, at the Civic Events Center.

The commission questioned the sketchy advertising plan and said the local applications may disqualify it.

Espinosa said she wanted to invite the people back to more clearly explain their program.

Hyman said he didn't believe in financing advertising on a gamble that it may or may not be shown on some educational television station.

Artfest U.S.A. owned by Cindy Breedlove asked for $5,000.

Espinosa said she didn't like the concept of spending lodgers tax for an ongoing promotion. Carey expressed the same reservations.

Hyman said people were coming in from all over the country for exhibits. He said $1,500 to get them started may be a wise decision.

Espinosa said it was like the Museum of the Horse, although she said the Museum was not for profit. She said if anyone was allowed to advertise, other than a special event, everyone would advertise.

Maddox said at this time, the board should be concerned about special events.

Artfest is planned in the Fantasy Mountain area of Ruidoso Downs.

Hyman said Rocky Mountain Music's blue grass festival was being booked into the Artfest area, and would also help that company.

Espinosa said it was an on-going for profit business and questioned the use of lodgers tax funds. She said "if they were talking of advertising a special event within that business, that would be different."

The annual Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium, a multi-day celebration of the old West tradition, passed for $1,500.

Museum of the Horse, a not-for-profit business in its second year, passed for $1,500. The museum holds weekly free events for area citizens.

The All American Festival, a not-for-profit venture profitable for many local charitable organizations, passed for lodgers tax funding. The festival is a weeklong event.

A request from Bonnie Mattox to promote the annual Christmas Jubilee passed.

The Chili Cookoff, a not-for-profit venture staged during Aspenfest by Paul Crown, passed for lodgers tax funding.

Maddox said representatives from the Arts and Film Commission, the Friends of Music and the Arts and Artfest U.S.A., will be invited back to further explain their advertising programs.

Fort

and the Department of Health to make any adjustments we need."

"The fort does not have a high accident rate for either clients or employees, he said.

"We have the lowest workman's comp rate of all the five state hospitals under the Department of Health," Aldaz said. "If I did not have good workman's comp rates, I would have to reconsider and say you know they're right."

"The last thing I want is for somebody to be hurt. The last thing I would tell you, too, is that I didn't want more staff, that would be crazy, as long as it is legitimate, because I also have a responsibility to the taxpayers."

"The reason I know we are covering some of that is that my overtime has doubled and tripled. So that shows me when I have someone call in, I'm literally calling others in to take their place."

"That does not mean that I am not willing to continue to look at different areas to see where people are calling in when they shouldn't and where we can improve."

Dossey said the fort has experienced "a couple of lean years" in staffing, but that the situation has improved recently.

"We don't require staffing ratios, but there must be enough staff to adequately deliver the service," he said. The number of accidents reported at the fort is not at a level of concern, he added.

A staff utilization study is being prepared, which should point out areas that may be short of personnel, Aldaz said. An accident trend analysis is being put together on a cottage by cottage, shift by shift, incident by incident basis on the residents' side.

"If anybody has 10 or more incidents of accidents within the quarter, we do a special analysis by an unusual incidents coordinator central records lady who is trained in investigations to go in and literally diagnose, investigate and analyze those incidents and tell us if they are of a severe nature, medium or minor nature," Aldaz said.

"From here on our staffing ratios just get better. This year alone I've added six positions, a lot are QMRPs to do the advocacy work (and handle most of the paperwork) and a psychiatric technician, whose job mainly is to gauge the benefit of the medication compared to behavioral outbursts."

"On my last audit (by the state) in November, I did not receive any deficiencies. In fact, I did not receive a staffing deficiency until 2 1/2 years ago. I added 20 residential staff in one shot. I was overjoyed."

Aldaz said the state has required one employee to eight clients in the morning and evening, and one to 16 during the graveyard shift.

"That's still acceptable staffing, but they threw in a catch 22 a few years later," Aldaz said. "They now say whatever is needed to carry out each program. So when they audit, they don't look at whether have five staff, three staff or two staff. They look at that program plan for that individual. If you say from eight to ten, you're going to do tooth brushing, face washing, getting dressed and you can't meet it, because you don't have enough staff, you get a deficiency."

"One of the requirements of the Jackson litigation (which resulted in a 1990 court ruling to relocate developmentally disabled clients to community programs and to change the direction of care at the fort), was to have full time QMRPs and a psych tech."

"All the paperwork that took staff away from their client work is how I was able to convince the state to give me the QMRPs in December," Aldaz said. "My staff was crying to me and I have to work with them. I try to be fair."

"I see better patient care and that's what it's all about. The QMRPs are full time here and they are advocates for the patients. Their job is to be coordinators of the individual plan for each resident and to make sure it gets carried out on all levels."

"It's an extremely important position. They have to be either a certified teacher, a social worker, a psychologist, a physical therapist, occupational therapist, anybody in the clinical area that has three to four years in DD."

When aides are not available to help in a school setting, cottage supervisory personnel are assigned to help teachers.

"A lot of people don't want to recognize that, but they are full time employees," Aldaz said. Temporary replacements also often are hired to fill in, he said.

"I have temporary employees in this place all the time just to substitute so these places won't be left void," Aldaz said. "I gain nothing by having vacant positions. I try to keep zero vacancies because they state will take vacant positions away from me."

Jobs and wages

The pay scale at Fort Stanton represents one of the best in Lincoln County.

Certified teachers, supervisory and administration officials top the ladder. In the 1992-93 budget, Administrator Ervin Aldaz' salary was listed as $53,653.

A former four-year employee and union representative said requests for salary schedules often went unanswered and raises frequently appeared to be set more by whim and personal preferences than by documentation.

"I encountered nepotism and favoritism while I worked at the fort," the former employee said. "I personally was selected for a job before it was posted."

"There's preferential treatment. If you're timid, they'll tell you no raise," he said.

One contract employee complained that she received no evaluation for two years. She was disturbed to learn that a colleague received a raise several thousand dollars higher than any other contract staffer.

Instead of offering new employees what they are worth, administrators look at the lowest salary a person will take, she said.

State officials told The News several avenues to address wage gripes are open to both classified and contract employees. They were unsympathetic with the complaints detailed, however.

"There always are going to be disgruntled employees," Dossey said. "Just because there are three or four doesn't mean their perspective is valid."

Unlike classified employees who are fit into a state designed pay scale by job description, teachers negotiate their own contracts, Dossey said.

"They agree to a certain salary," he said. "It's their commitment and frankly, it's none of their business what other teachers are paid. They are not protected under the state system."

If gross inequities appear in certain job groupings of classified employees, the state may come down and take a look at an entire division and revamp it, said Anthony Legits, human resource administrator supervisor for the state.

If an employee believes jobs are not being posted correctly or honestly, they can dispute or challenge anything that appears contrary to regulations, Dossey said.

"There is an internal due process and then, if it is not resolved at the local level, it goes to an independent state board."

A grievance process also is available to employees, although state officials told The News no complaints have been filed in reference to wages.

Aldaz said he is not aware of any job being promised before posting.

"It's illegal in my mind," he said. "If I've found out it's done, I probably would take action against the supervisor and re-post the job. The exception might be if no one else on the list qualifies. A lot of times we get sour grapes, but they didn't react in time or didn't qualify."

Eligibility for hiring also is handled by the state, which compiles the job descriptions and reviews the backgrounds of applicants and determines whether they are qualified for a position, Dossey said.

"If they (applicants) are not on the list of eligibles, we can't hire them," Aldaz said. "We send their job applications up and the state tells us what they are qualified for."

Some of the problems cited by former and current employees may be covered in labor contract negotiations this year, he said.

An advisory committee of non-management people representing the different areas of the fort and Aldaz meet about every quarter, especially since the transition began, he said.

"Under labor management negotiations, we came up with a labor management committee meeting on monthly basis and share information with each other and get it out to all other employees," Aldaz said.

"I try to have at least once or twice a year, a meeting with all of the employees at one time. Usually, we can get 75 percent together to go over what's happening to Fort Stanton, to their jobs."

One or two teachers at the fort complained about the salary schedule and, in response, it was updated in February, Aldaz said.

"We have a totally new updated salary schedule that was finished (in February), because we're going into contract negotiations with our teachers. We try to average it out with some of the local communities. Elliott Topper (who supervises the teachers) worked on that."

Looking over the 1992-93 budget for the fort, wide ranges in pay are evident under similar job titles. Some workers received higher increases from one year to the next along with reclassifications.

Aldaz said evaluations only recently were reintroduced.

"I have 30 evaluations sitting in front of me right now that will be directly associated with raises," he said.

"The reason we stopped giving evaluations in a lot of state facilities, they encouraged us to, but we were not mandated, because the evaluations no longer gave a raise."

"A year ago this July, that would be July 1992, they started in and said you will get a three percent increase if you get a satisfactory or above evaluation. So all of that was reinstituted on a statewide basis July 1992. You always had the evaluation process available to you, if you wanted, for two reasons; one on the negative side so if someone was not performing good to let them know, or in a positive sense to give someone a stroke on the back, but no longer equated to a raise."

"Had they been equated to a raise, there would be no way on earth that we would have allowed anybody to go without one."

During the period without evaluations, there also were no (discretionary) raises, Aldaz said.

"If you look back at state government, they were giving one to two percent across the board. So come July 1, everybody got that," he said.

"But (there were) no merit raises. They went out the window two or three years ago. They do not exist. Even now they do not exist."

When asked about the teacher who received the big jump in salary, Aldaz said he was an exception.

"The exception that somebody can have is a school teacher. They are the exceptions, because we sign a contract with them every July 1, and we do have the flexibility to maybe give them an increment increase," Aldaz said.

He acts on the recommendations of supervisors. In the case of the teacher who received a large increase, the man handled two programs, a by himself, for a long period," Aldaz said.

"He handled two programs, staying late, doing the paperwork and keeping up with the QMRP notes and doing all of this," Aldaz said. "The reason we upped him, he was one of the lowest paid teachers to begin with, but he was not only doing what the other teachers were, but more and for a long period of time."

"If we ever get into a money crunch, he could handle two or three programs. He's already shown that. That's the rationale for it."

With most employees receiving minimal raises of a few percentage points, some questioned why the fort in previous years has budgeted an item called "refund" to the state.

Paul Minogue in the finance division of the health department told The News that for the past two years the hospital has returned "virtually nothing" to the state at the end of each fiscal year.

"In fact, in both years, we added money from other hospitals to its budget. It had to keep fully staffed while undergoing changes," he said.

Minogue said the refund item covers late Medicare payments, Aldaz said it also may include the sale of lunch tickets.

Nepotism

A brief review of a list of Fort Stanton employees shows more than a quarter are related and the breakdown includes many of Aldaz' relatives.

"A lot of people see it as a real problem," he said. "I do not. I have been associated with all five state hospitals in New Mexico for the last 20 years. All five have exactly the same situation I have here, because many times it's a community that feeds into the employment."

He tries to avoid problems by not having relatives work in the same area. If that's not possible, he attempts to transfer them as quickly as possible. If two employees in the same section marry, Aldaz said he encourages one of the duo to try for advancement or a new position.

"If someone comes to me with complaints of nepotism or favoritism, then it's my job to reassign people to ensure that situation does not occur," Aldaz said. "But with as much potential as it has for happening in any of our facilities, I'm surprised how little it occurs."

"If someone gets into trouble, everything under the sun is a problem all of a sudden. It's nepotism, discrimination, harassment. Some are legit. A lot are not."

"The reason I left here in 1976 was because my father and mother were working in the same facility. I did not want any undue pressure on my parents. They were here before I was. When I came back, my dad passed away and my mom stopped working. It's not an easy thing, but if you use common sense and managerial discretion, you can live with it very easily, because it's a hard thing not to have."

Whether Aldaz' explanations are valid or inequities do exist will be up to the state and the employees to hash out, if they decide to file grievances or take other action.

Aldaz said he understands the pressure under which the staff has been required to work the past two years and how that may intensify any already existing feelings of dissatisfaction.

"We've had many meetings dealing with the uncertainties during this transition period, but I will not allow anyone to take it out on the residents," he said. "We try to set up support groups to discuss things. That's why we set up an advisory committee. We have to come to grips with the decision made."

"Of course, the tension is there. I go to court and listen to people say 'Your place is no good, it's isolated. We hate institutions. They are snake pits.'"

"If you saw a snake pit out there today, I'd be shocked. We do the best we can with our environment."

One of the cottages for women at Fort Stanton is scheduled to be revamped inside from the current dorm-like arrangement serving the developmentally disabled to a more private design for each patient to meet their long term care medical needs.

Shelter is crowded with dogs, dogs & more dogs

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Compelling ice blue eyes draw Lincoln County Humane Society shelter workers to Blizzard, but it's his calm temperament and appreciation for affection that keeps bringing them back.

He bears the coat markings and texture of his Malamute ancestors, but at about two years of age, it's evident Blizzard won't attain the full physical size of that breed.

Taken from his previous owner because of abuse (including not feeding him enough), Blizzard needs a home where his beauty and devotion will be appreciated.

He loves to have his stomach rubbed and is a cuddler, according to volunteers who care for him.

"He'd be good with children," said shelter secretary Kathy Tetreault.

A little more lively companion and one who is a lot smaller is Muffy, a terrier release who's about six months old and white.

"She is shy at first, but warms up quickly and loves to show off by dancing in her cage," Tetreault said.

Although small bodied, she has long legs and interacts well with children.

"She's young and trainable," Tetreault said. "She's not a barker and her pen is clean each morning, so if she's not completely housebroken, she's close to it."

Both Blizzard and Muffy would have to be sterilized, a requirement for all adoptions from the shelter as spelled out in the legal contracts each new owner signs. Ruidoso also has a mandatory spay and neuter law, and in July, a similar state law takes effect.

To see why the law is needed, take a look at the 30 puppies now housed at the shelter. Many will have to be destroyed, because there are not enough homes for them, yet irresponsible pet owners continue to allow their animals to breed.

For every human born, 15 dogs and 45 cats are brought into the world. Unfortunately, the same negligent owners who allow this reproduction also often refuse to accept responsibility for their actions and expect the taxpayer and supporters of the society to take care of their mistakes. They don't seem to care about the pain and death they cause the helpless, blameless and loving animals they leave behind.

Stop the ugly legacy caused by ignorance, shelter workers urge pet owners. Help eliminate the need for euthanasia, except in cases of severe injury or illness.

Puppies and more pups

An exceptionally attractive group of puppies in the six to seven-week-old range now are available for adoption from the shelter in a variety of breeds and colors.

When they are six months old, they too must be sterilized.

The selection includes a perfect pair of ivory-colored cocker spaniels, three German shepherds, one female dubbed Zodiac with blue eyes and a most serious expression, several Australian shepherds, a few labradors and many, many combinations of husky, retriever, Rotweiler, soft-coated griffon and unknown, but adorable breeds.

Shelter workers also want to highlight a seven- to eight-year-old sheltie who was brought to the society as a stray.

"He's in excellent condition with a good coat, but walks slowly, said assistant manager Cindy Propner.

"He can do tricks and obviously was well-cared for at some point in his life. He is housebroken and doesn't have any destructive behavior like chewing.

RHS grad returns as a coach

by KRISTIE SAATMANN
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A Ruidoso High School graduate will return home to take on the challenge of coaching the Warrior boys basketball team next year.

Paul Kirkwood, a 1980 graduate of Ruidoso High School, will be recommended to the Ruidoso School Board for the position at its next meeting. High school principal Don Weems introduced Kirkwood to his future players, assistant coaches and school board members at a meeting at the high school Wednesday.

Kirkwood received his degree from Eastern New Mexico University in 1985 and student taught at Roswell High School, where he got his first coaching experience. He said he was anxious to coach so he volunteered to work with a group of sophomore players.

He has been teaching and coaching at Roswell ever since, but was excited to be coming home.

"Ruidoso is a great place to live. I went to high school here, and I want my children to graduate from here, too," he said.

Kirkwood told the group of players that the year he graduated, 1980, was the first year Ruidoso was in district 3AAA. That year Ruidoso graduated 98 kids, while Deming graduated 250, he said. Being the smallest school in the district many people thought they would never be able to compete, but the next year the team proved them wrong, as the Warriors picked up the district championship.

In the state competition that year, the Warriors knocked off St. Pius in a surprise win and were then defeated in the semi-finals.

"It can be done again. You are the start of it," Kirkwood said. "It's not fun to lose and sports are supposed to be fun."

Kirkwood warned the kids he is very enthusiastic, and he may seem a little wild on the bench, giving the kids bear hugs as they come off the court. He said he hopes that enthusiasm rubs off on the players and through the whole school and community because he wants to fill the stands.

Regardless of whether they win or lose, if fans like what they see they will come back game after game. Kirkwood said the home gym is supposed to give the team a 10-12 point advantage, but that hasn't been happening for Ruidoso.

He told the athletes that they have to get more students involved not just in athletics but in clubs and activities. Involvement should also help the students grades go up, and grades are important to him, Kirkwood said.

"Basketball and athletics mirror life. Sometimes you win, sometimes you lose, and you have to deal with that," he said.

Kirkwood said he wants to make the team into a family, make all one. He said he wants every ethnic group to work together and learn to get along, which will help the players as they go on with life.

Discipline will also be an important part of the program.

"If you can learn self-discipline now it will help later down the road," Kirkwood said.

He said in all of his years coaching he has had only one player get a technical foul. There will be times when players mess up and they will get upset on the court. Kirkwood said he hopes they can learn from these experiences.

Kirkwood and his wife, Brenda, have two children, four-year-old Klayton and two-year-old Kayla.

Ready for next year

The Ruidoso High School football team huddles after the spring Blue and Gold scrimmage. The scrimmage was the culmination of the team's spring practice season. According to head coach Mike Gaston, the practices were a great success and an encouragement for the upcoming fall season.

Golfers join in weekend art festivities

All area golfers are invited to join in the fun when organizers of the Santa Fe Watercolor Society Show host a golf scramble at the Links at Sierra Blanca on Saturday, June 5.

by coffee, juice and rolls with a shotgun start at 8 a.m.

The $50 tournament fee covers green fees, cart and prizes for tournament players.

The tournament is organized by Bill Hirschfeld and Walter Singletary.

Registration is at 7 a.m. followed by a challenging, fun course that will please all golfers, from beginners to professionals, according to organizers.

"This is a great opportunity to enjoy some competitive golf and get to know some out of town players," said Museum of the Horse Development Director, Frank Potter.

"We hope a lot of local golfers will come out and compete in the scramble."

For more information on the upcoming golf tournament, call the Links at Sierra Blanca at 258-5330.

Junior tennis players sign up for league play

It's time to grab your rackets and hit the courts.

Sign-ups for the National Junior Tennis League will begin on Tuesday at the Public Tennis Courts. The sign-up and a brief introduction of the program for kids ages 11 to 17 will begin at 5 p.m.

The summer program also offers individual player scholarships, project grants, college and secondary school educational scholarships.

Memorial Day opens summer boating season

Not only is Memorial Day a time of fun and relaxation, it is also the first day of the boating season at Grindstone Lake.

As of Memorial Day, the lake will be open to non-motorized boats under 14 feet in length.

Boaters also will be required to purchase a Lake Use Permit from the Village of Ruidoso Parks and Recreation Department. The permits will cost $25 per vessel for a season long permit, $10 for a three day permit and $5 for a one day permit.

Each boater will be required to wear a life preserver as well as having the boat equipped according to the New Mexico Boat Act.

Recreational swimming or wading will be prohibited at the lake. Fishing however is allowed all season long from sunrise to sundown. The only requirement for anglers will be a license and compliance with state fishing laws.

Deceptively goes for 6th straight win in Kansas Derby

Roger Knight Jr.'s undefeated filly Deceptively seeks her third career stakes triumph as she goes to post as the overwhelming favorite in the Grade I $122,333 Kansas Derby, Memorial Day at Ruidoso Downs.

The 400-yard Derby features some of the top 8-year-old quarter horses in the nation including stakes winners Choculo and First Down And Ten.

Deceptively captured both the Kansas and Rainbow Futurities last year and could have become only the second horse in history to win the Quarter Horse Triple Crown if not for a leg injury which sidelined her the remainder of the year.

The daughter of Runaway Winner made a triumphant return to the races two weeks ago in the Kansas Derby Trials with an easy 1/2-length victory and posted the fastest qualifying time of :17.765. Deceptively broke sharply from the #10 post in the trials and was never challenged en route to a wire-to-wire win.

The speedy filly has yet to lose in five career outings and has compiled earnings of $186,000 for owner Knight of Madisonville, Texas. The Bruce Bell-trained has beaten her foes by an average margin of 2 1/4-lengths and seems to be in top shape to continue her dominance as a 3-year-old.

The filly drew the #4 post position in the trials and was posted as the 4-5 morning line favorite.

First Down And Ten and Choculo, both stakes winners as 2-year-olds, also seem to have returned in good shape this year. The Jack Brooks-trained duo combined to qualify for eight futurities last year and each won one.

Choculo won the Grade I Sun Country Futurity at Sunland Park and First Down And Ten won the Grade 3 Ruidoso Sale Futurity and also ran third in the All American Futurity. In the trials, First Down And Ten qualified with a time of :19.915 with a place effort behind

Super Duper Couper.

Choculo ran third behind Deceptively with a time of :20.30.

Second fastest qualifier Cream To The Top won the first trial division with a time of :19.785 and could be a sleeper as an 8-1 morning line longshot in the finals. The filly resides in the Fred Danley shedrow and most recently placed in the Southwest Derby in Albuquerque.

The remainder of the ten-horse field is listed by qualifying time: Desert Orchid (:19.840), Specially Fast (:19.875), Super Duper Couper (:19.915), All Americancash (:19.965), Time Bender (:20.025) and Perfect Sign (:20.035).

The Memorial Day co-feature is the $30,000-added Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurity for 2-year-old New Mexico-bred thoroughbreds going five furlongs.

The competitive field of ten is headed by the Simon Buechler-charged Saint Patties Lucy who is undefeated in three career starts. The filly won her Ruidoso debut in style with an impressive 3 3/4-length score in the May 21 trials.

The daughter of Tilt The Odds ran the five furlongs in a quick :58.3 seconds.

The 14-race holiday program also includes a simulcast of the Grade I $500,000 Metropolitan Mile from Belmont Park, New York. The race should attract a quality field of the nation's top older handicap runners including Bertrando, Ibero, Alydeed and Fly So Free.

The live program is concluded with three simulcasts from Hollywood Park. The featured event is the Grade I $500,000 Hollywood Turf Handicap. Expected in the classy field is Best Pal, Val Des Bois, Leger Cat and Bien Bien.

All wagers made on Hollywood Park simulcasts are common-pooled with the Inglewood, California, track.

Horsemen will be welcomed back at annual barbecue

The Sixth Annual Welcome Back Horsemen dance and barbecue is scheduled from 6 to 10 p.m. Tuesday, June 8, at the Sports Theater at Ruidoso Downs Race Track.

Dinner will be served from 6 to 8 p.m., and entertainment will be provided by Riechat, one of the area's most popular country-western dance bands.

A silent auction is planned with proceeds to benefit Horsewomen United, a national group that provides emergency help to horse industry people in times of need.

Tickets for the barbecue are still $5, but for every ticket sold, one complimentary ticket will be provided to a horseman at the track.

Tickets are available at the Ruidoso Valley Chamber of Commerce, customer service booths at Ruidoso Downs Race Track and all area banks.

Democrats get together in Lincoln

Lincoln County Democrats filled the dining room at the Wortley Hotel for the party's monthly business and fellowship meeting. "This diverse mix of age and occupations is indicative of the Democratic Party," said county chairperson Cece Griffin in welcoming the big crowd.

Griffin, who recently was elected vice chairman of the party organization for the Second Congressional District, reported on the state central committee meeting. She and Lincoln County vice chairman Fred Hansen attended that meeting where Ray Powell was re-elected state party chairman.

Griffin said in her new position she serves 17 counties.

Before introducing guest speaker James Sanchez, an appointed member of the State Board of Education, Griffin was asked to comment on the resignation of Magistrate Judge J.R. "Jim" Wheeler.

"I have asked the governor to appoint a good Democrat," said Griffin, who stressed that she won't use her county office to try to influence that choice.

Guest speaker Sanchez, who lives in Lincoln and recently retired from New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell, gave an overview on the State Board of Education — a state board that still has policymaking authority.

Sanchez said his board sets policy and direction for primary and secondary schools in New Mexico, and is responsible for accrediting private schools.

The state board, with some elected members and some appointed ones, is responsible to the people of the state, and also works with local school boards.

Public education in New Mexico works with a budget of more than $1 billion — about 48 percent of the general fund — but there's more to it than money, said Sanchez.

He said his board's major concern is the children of the state, who need an education and don't even have a vote. His board, also is working to get educators' salaries up to keep good teachers in New Mexico.

Sanchez, a Hondo High graduate who has spent years in education, encouraged parents and others to get involved in the schools.

Happy birthday to old friend Troy Parker

Happy Birthday to Troy Parker

This is being sent to you on May 27 and will reach you on May 31, the birthday of Troy Parker, long-time resident of Ruidoso and one of Lincoln County's favorite citizens.

He was born May 31, 1932, in Bogota, Texas, to William Henry Parker and the former Bennie Hill.

On November 25, 1957, in San Antonio, Texas, he was married to the former Phyllis Bullard. They have four children: Patricia Buckley, Pamela Parker, Troy Dale Parker and Rene Parker, and they have seven grandchildren. Rene is attending college in Rhode Island.

Troy and Phyllis arrived in Ruidoso in 1962, and Troy began operating the Chevron station across the highway from the Hollywood Station post office. He ran this station for 25 years during which time he endeared himself to all of us for his cheerful and helpful style of life.

Also Troy's station became a landmark from coast to coast for friendly service and help in time of need for travelers from throughout the nation. For 25 years Troy with his million-dollar smile became a living symbol of true western hospitality and true American friendship.

Last year Troy had a double hip replace-

by Dan Storm
The Ridge
Runner

ment operation, and he has now recovered.

His love of people and his pleasure in meeting the public kept calling to Troy, and now he works at the Gateway Shell station Saturday and Sunday evenings and at other times when he is needed.

Troy and his family love Ruidoso, and we wish our good friend, Troy Parker, all congratulations, many happy returns of the day and all God's blessings.

May Prepares to Welcome June

Today, May 27, just after high noon, is a day of sunshine and shadow, with a gentle breeze out of the northeast rippling the American flag out on the blue bird meadow, whispering messages of approaching rain through the leaves of the small apricot tree just outside the sun room.

The temperature is an even 80 degrees, cool for this time of year, following the pattern of late welcome spring showers which have brought us an unusually green and cool month of May.

The snow birds stayed around the house rather late this year, and finally now they have left the vale and taken the arctic express back to their home in Alaska where we first met more than 80 years ago.

Fragrance of May

There is a May-time fragrance carried on the breeze, the honey-like flavor all through the air around the algerita bushes out in full sunlight-yellow with blooms which cover the bushes. The algerita gets its name from the Spanish, algritas, little slow ones, referring to the berries which mature late in the summer and early fall. The algerita thrives all through the southwest on desert, mesas and hills. It is a distant cousin to the English holly.

The house finch decorated in crimson, the dark blue Arizona jay and the Prussian blue piñon jay and the nut hatch are all blending their bird songs with the melodies of the robin.

Memorial Day

This will reach you on Memorial Day. Let us all say a prayer of thanks to Our Lord for our veterans in Heaven and on earth. And let us be grateful for living in our beloved United States of America.

WE HAVE THE RIGHT ANSWER

Advertisers who want to place their print ads in a quality publication ask the question: "Is your circulation audited?"

We're very proud to answer "Yes."

We are a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations because we share ABC's belief that circulation audits are an essential assurance of value.

ABC is the premier circulation auditing organization in the world, and has been since 1914. Each year, ABC auditors test and verify that our circulation figures are facts, not claims. An ABC audit is the sign of a sound investment for advertisers.

Not all publications are audited, but they should be. Because when advertisers ask "Is your circulation audited?" there's only one answer.

"Yes."

Logo contest is a terrific idea

What a great idea for the village to invite the community to participate in its search for a new logo and flag. Community events director Kathleen Michelena is soliciting entries to be used in the design of Village of Ruidoso decals and promotional items.

It's good to see the village do something so positive for the image of the community, and we applaud Kathleen Michelena and her staff. We hope many artists participate, and we hope the village treats their artistic endeavors with respect. For instance, most artists would not want their winning design used on trash cans and dumpsters, but they would be proud to have their work affixed to flags, brochures and informational signs.

The Lincoln County Solid Waste Authority conducted a successful logo contest. Artist Debbie Jones won that contest, and her creative graphic is used wisely on letterhead and in advertising materials. Jones' art, to the authority's credit, has not been placed inappropriately on trash receptacles.

Some people might think twice before entering this contest, especially in light of the last such contest. Just a few years ago the village, under a past administration, asked the community to name its newest park. That park, Wingfield Park, has never been opened to the public, and it is now being offered for sale.

Wingfield Park, purchased through a court settlement, includes a lovely little log cabin at the base of Grindstone Lake. When it became village property it was in good shape, surrounded by beautiful lawns and trees with a creek running right by the house. It could easily have been opened as a party house and park to be used for picnics and family reunions and such. After spending more than $200,000 to acquire this park, the village leadership at the time did nothing. The cost to open this park to the public would have been next to nothing. Revenues for renting the cabin would have quickly covered the cost of any needed remodeling.

But it never happened, and this village — with an economy based on recreation and tourism — is now selling what could be a lovely little park. Selling Wingfield Park is a dreadful and short-sighted mistake.

Dan Swearingin complains about editorial

TO THE EDITOR:

I was pleased to read the editorial of May 20 in The Ruidoso News ("News") that "folks have a right to voice their beliefs." The statement that "... we would defend their right with the same vigor that we protect our own First Amendment rights" is very heartening.

I am proud to say that I played a small part in the petition by signing it and preparing the cover letter....

The petition reads "Raljon, Inc. is respectfully requested to institute changes in the publishing, editorial and reporting policies and practices of The Ruidoso News so as to accentuate the positive attitude in Ruidoso's governance, business community and citizenry." If this is a "big change," so be it.

The contention of The News in the May 24 editorial that the petition "... demands changes ... in PERSONNEL ..." is not what the petition says. How could the unnamed writer of that editorial possibly interpret "is respectfully requested" to mean "demand?"

If The News considers the petitions to be of so little importance, which the editorial writer seems to be indicating, why all the niggling over the verification of signatures, the number of signatures which "count," the length of time the petition were circulated, the diligence used in obtaining signatures, and whether some husbands/wives have signed for the other... ad nauseum.

The only requirement to sign, as the petition states, is that "the undersigned citizens have investments and interests in Ruidoso ... No other requirement is evidenced."

The News has contacted some petition signers in an attempt to obfuscate and eclipse the stated intent of the petitions. The basic fact is very clear. At least 322 people are respectfully requesting "... changes in the publishing, editorial, and reporting policies and practices of The Ruidoso News ..."

We assume that the invitation to come down to The News office and remove your name from the petition also includes the invitation to come down and add your name to the petition.

Dan Swearingin
Ruidoso

EDITOR'S NOTE: Of course we're interested in the petition because we want to know what our readers have to say on specific issues and stories — that's why we want to know how many signers actually read The News and exactly what policies they want changed. We also were interested in how many signers are children and how few are subscribers. We found that many people signed the petition who do not read the paper. For instance, former mayor Victor Alonso circulated and signed the petition, as did his wife and teen-age daughter. Alonso has told us repeatedly that he doesn't read The News. Our audit shows that more than 80 percent of county residents get their news from The News, and those readers, as well as our many out-of-county subscribers, are the ones whose views hold the most interest for us. Petition or no petition, we like to talk to readers about issues.

Couple teams up to lambast The News

TO THE EDITOR:

In your editorial of May 20, you state your interest in hearing the opinions of your readers on a petition and cover letter. Here is mine.

First, I signed the petition. Dan Swearingin's cover letter is excellent!

Second, you insult me by insinuating that I would sign a petition without reading it; or having read it, that I would not have the intelligence to understand it. That "more club news, more feature stories, put the bad news on the back pages" drivel sounds more like something that would come from you than from a signer of the petition.

Rusty Hastings
Ruidoso

TO THE EDITOR:

How cheap can you get? I am sure that all persons who signed the petition knew exactly what they were doing. Therefore, I say that only idiots would let your tactics of harassment, intimidation and coercion influence them to remove their names.

I think your tactics, if not illegal, are very unethical.

Warren O. Hastings
Ruidoso

EDITOR'S NOTE: Signers who asked to have their names removed would disagree: one said a boss put it in front of her and she signed to avoid problems in a new job; one said the petition was passed around at Service Club Council with talk of more club news; one man said he never was even shown the wording on top of the petition; a prominent citizen couldn't even remember signing it and wasn't sure how it was presented but his name was there; another man said it was circulated at a bar and he wasn't sure why he signed it; some of the children who signed the petition didn't know what they were signing and one young person suspects someone else added her name.

Assault on the free press is very dangerous

TO THE EDITOR:

This is a response to a recent letter to the editor which I would like you to consider for publication.

I was appalled by the letter of Dan D. Swearingin, The Ruidoso News, Thursday, May 20. I was appalled by its tenor. I was appalled that people which I hold in high esteem had underwritten the so-called "petition."

Allegedly the so-called "petition" contains 322 signatures, not many. That amounts to about 10 percent of the residents in Ruidoso, perhaps less. But already 10 percent are too many!

You have to excuse me: Twice in my life I have experienced similar actions, i.e. the attempt to dominate the press by a political persuasion. The first one I grew into without noticing it. Everything the members of this persuasion did not like was suppressed. It ended in a terrible disaster.

The second time came right after the first. Reporters who reported the truth, uncovering the doings of the red dictators, vanished from the streets. Only a few lucky survived. The newspapers in the area of their jurisdiction were unable to publish what they had observed.

During the past 15 years, six of them living in Capitan, I was subscribed to The Ruidoso News. Together with the "Lincoln County News" these two media give me a fair idea about the occurrences in my environment. Both have on occasion reported on my own, voluntary activities. Mostly I have liked what was said, a few times I didn't. But in every case the facts were true. Not half-true as alleged in Mr. Swearingin's letter.

If our elected officials make a fool of themselves that is good to know. The news media have the right to report that, and The Ruidoso News has done so in verbal quotations.

If Mr. Swearingin does not like The Ruidoso News, why does he read it? He does not have to. Nobody forces him to do so!

But to try to force, with his so-called "petition" of a minority, to change the editorial direction of a newspaper toward his own, narrow, more right-radical points of view is dangerous. It deprives the free press to say what it wants to say and how to say it. This, Mr. Swearingin, is dangerous, very dangerous.

YES is simply advisory group

TO THE EDITOR:

I am concerned about the organization our school district calls Youth Empowered for Success (YES). Doesn't it infringe upon the legitimate powers and responsibilities of the school board?

I hope someone has made it clear to the people who participate that their role is strictly advisory.

If they don't know this, we are going to have some big disappointments and some big fights.

Right now YES is trying to promote an alternative school for kids whose behavior makes it difficult to keep them in the regular school program. It is often said that "these misbehaving students have a property right to an education."

I am not nearly as concerned about the property rights of incorrigible students as I am about the property rights of the other kids in school. Keeping delinquents in a regular program denies educational property rights to students with good behavior.

The News is an asset to village

TO THE EDITOR:

My wife and I have been living in Ruidoso for only nine months (after many years in Illinois), but we thought to put on record how pleasant we have found life in the town.

Probably the most important attribute is the general friendliness. From small stores and some bigger, from gas stations, state officers and police, from neighbors and more casual acquaintances and countless others, we have received nothing but help and kindness.

One of the assets of the town is your paper — particularly its vigorous reporting. What Mr. Swearingin seems to be advocating might be called, in other countries or regimes, "muzzling the press."

Reader says keep up the good work!

TO THE EDITOR:

Having lived in Ruidoso for the last 30 summers, we feel like we are a part of Ruidoso. Thanks to The Ruidoso News, we have been able to know what is really happening in our second home that we love dearly.

Thanks to all the issues being reported by The Ruidoso News, we feel that Frankie Jarrell and Chuck Stallings give us the honest facts.

Please keep on reporting the news that we would and should like to know about.

We always look forward each Monday and Thursday to see what it has to report, especially about the elected officials and the MRS. The past coverage in The Ruidoso News has been the best of most papers we read.

Keep up the good job of reporting.

Thanks for serving the community

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to take this opportunity to say thank you to Mayor Victor Alonso for all his efforts as mayor of Ruidoso. He took on a very tough assignment of trying to work through problems handed to him when he took office, plus deal with new situations as they arose.

As we all know, there is absolutely no way any one human being can please everyone, every time, on every thing. Mayor Alonso dealt with situations as best as he could with whatever support he could get. He stood up for the individual citizen, no matter how "small," instead of just hearing the "well known" voices in the community.

We hope the next person to assume the position as mayor of Ruidoso is even half the honest and sincere human being that Mayor Alonso is. We also hope that this person can overcome the negative attitude that exists so strongly in our community.

Good luck, and may God bless you, Mayor Alonso, Virginia and family.

Mental Health Resources

Underwriters of a Variety of Programs on Substance Abuse Issues

For over twenty years, Mental Health Resources (MHR) has served a seven-county area of Northeastern New Mexico in the mental health field. Problems in substance abuse, personal counseling, and services to the mentally ill are all addressed by competent, well-trained therapists. With clinics located in Portales, Clovis, Tucumcari and Santa Rosa, MHR provides outreach services throughout the seven-county area.

MHR is proud to announce that they are underwriters of 40 weeks of various programs addressing substance abuse issues. The programs are scheduled to air Sundays at 4:00 p.m. beginning June 6th. Many of the episodes are award-winning features dealing with real-life situations. Parents and their children are encouraged to watch the episodes geared especially to pre-teen and teen issues.

Programs this month will include the following:

Brainstorm: The Truth About Your Brain on Drugs, a 3-2-1 Contact Special will present a complex subject like the effects of drugs on the brain and nervous system in a way that eight- to twelve-year-olds can understand. The program is presented by the Children's Television Workshop, producers of Sesame Street.

Victims at Birth reveals the reasons that the number of babies born with very low birth-weights and other serious life-threatening health problems are on the rise, while Drug Babies addresses the problem of children who are born addicted to heroin or crack cocaine. The half-hour documentary, narrated by a teenager, features interviews with mothers who have taken drugs or alcohol while pregnant and medical professionals who work with the babies and their mothers.

We Never Talked About My Drinking examines the national crises of alcohol-related deaths, and the increasingly apparent relationship between alcohol and hospital-admitted illness and injury.

Next month, two more outstanding series will begin. In Wasted, some answers are provided for parents who want to know what causes a young person to begin experimenting with drugs, and what the chances are for rehabilitation. Wasted tells the stories of three teenagers—Mike, Mai-Lin, and Kim—in their own words, without narration or adult intervention.

Bradshaw On: The Family, a ten-part series starring lecturer and Family Systems Counselor John Bradshaw, focuses on the dynamics of the family. According to Bradshaw, research shows that 96 percent of all families are to some degree emotionally impaired. He defines it as one of the most serious problems of our day, one deserving national attention.
