THURSDAY, JULY 8, 1993

RUIDOSO, NM 88345

NO. 16 IN OUR 48TH YEAR

50 CENTS

On the side

Artist Tom Darrah's work is featured on page 10A.

Twin tri total climbs

The Twin Trifecta jackpot was not won for the 13th consecutive race day and the carryover now stands at $162,801 for Thursday's 14-race program.

The exotic wager challenges the handicapper to choose the correct trifecta combination in both the third and fourth races.

The carryover is the largest since June 28, 1990, when one lucky handicapper won $294,041.

Council will meet

The Ruidoso Village Council will meet at 9 a.m. Friday, July 9, in council chambers at Ruidoso Municipal Administrative Center.

The special meeting will include a closed session to:

- discuss and possibly take action concerning the full time village attorney position.
- discuss and possibly take action to advertise requests for proposals for contract village attorney.
- discuss and possibly take action on the Mayor and Council position vacancy.

Any action taken as a result of the closed session will be brought back into open session for consideration.

Hollywood Nights lights up racetrack

The entire ten-race card from Hollywood Park will be simulcast Friday night in the Turf Club.

Admission is free and first post time is 8 p.m.

Trifecta wagering will be offered on every race, excluding the final race which offers Superfecta wagering.

Hollywood's spring and summer meet concludes July 26 and only two night programs remain after this Friday.

Fans flock to the races

Ruidoso Downs Race Track had one of the best Fourth Of July Weekends in history as both handle and attendance showed large increases compared to the same three-day period in 1992.

The most noticeable increase came in total handle which jumped 18.5 percent from last year's holiday weekend. Nearly $2.5 million was wagered on Ruidoso Downs races over the three-day period compared to $2.08 million in 1992.

Total and on-track attendance were up 21.9 percent and 2.1 percent respectively.

More than 22,000 racing fans poured through the turnstiles at the mountaintop oval and satellite wagering facilities compared to 18,251 in 1992.

On-track, 16,644 fans attended the races this year, a slight increase from 16,292 last year.

Sunday, the track had its best Fourth Of July this decade as 8,655 fans wagered $947,831 on the 14-race program.

On-track, 6,849 racing fans wagered $661,357.

Sister act

These singing sisters will be a special attraction during the Christian Festival and God's Portion Auction from 5:30-8:30 p.m. Sunday, July 11, at the church on Hull Road. Sisters include (from left) Carol Bayless, Cindy Trammell, Margaret Reid, Helene Kobelnik, Helen Woodfin, Sharon Kennedy and Magi Finley.

Sick pine trees slated for cutting to make room for office building

Residents near the Sudderth/Fifth Street site are not thrilled with losing all the pines that hide their homes from traffic.

Charles Rennick appealed to the village council saying that Richards and the planning commission had failed to adhere to several zoning codes when approving a site plan at a recent commission meeting.

Complicating the matter, developer Don Elwell said he acted on the commission's recommendation and that the lease was a done deal.

But property owners in the area did not have an opportunity for due process.

Planner Richards was to notify nearby property owners within two days that the commission approved the plan and allow them a chance for an appeal. He took 10 days.

In the meantime, Paula Maglione, a state administrator for human services, told The Ruidoso News the lease for the property only needed one signature to be completed.

Maglione said she would make calls to different state agencies to ward off an ugly situation where Elwell would have a lease on a piece of property that the council might not approve for his building.

During the meeting, Richards took exception to Rennick's questioning his authority when he wrote, "Appellant's (Rennick) objections appear to be an attempt by appellant to substitute his personal judgment for that of the planning commission, but states no specific legal error."

Similar criticism has been leveled at Richards himself in the past. Critics say Richards is selective. Some say good planning and zoning should produce a uniform distribution of dissatisfaction.

In support of the critic's claims, Richard's "snitch program" has provided uneven results.

Snitching is simply a neighbor squealing on a neighbor to Richard's office for action on a perceived violation.

In support of the critic's claims, Richard's "snitch program" has provided uneven results.

Snitching is simply a neighbor squealing on a neighbor to Richard's office for action on a perceived violation.

An example of the snitch program occurred last year with the sign ordinance. A businessman complained to Richards that a competitor's banner didn't meet code Richards had the businessman ticketed.

Because there were banners violating the ordinance throughout Ruidoso, the businessman bucked the ticket, calling it unfair. That led to the current moratorium and consequent proliferation of banners in the village.

Councilors called the sign ordinance too strict for today's standards, but have been unable to downscale the ordinance.

Richards, supported by foresters, said the disease has no cure.

However, in April, the village accepted a park dedication of a 1.8 acre tract owned by White Mountain Development Co. Inc. The village parks department at that time wanted to let White Mountain with a $27,000 improvement bill that included spraying for dwarf mistletoe.

Richards, in this case, said the infested trees are doomed within a few years.

Foresters, including Richards' source, say that the death of the trees is unpredictable. They say 10 to 15 years would be a short life span, and a 40-year life not unreasonable.

Thousands of acres of Ponderosa pines in Lincoln National Forest are now infested with dwarf mistletoe, and millions of trees will eventually die from their weakened condition, but probably not within two years.

Richards has said that new landscaping would take the place of the tall pines. However, Richard's department has a poor (and selective) record for landscape replacement of commercial properties.

The comprehensive plan suggests policy to protect trees that includes:

- to the extent feasible and practical, minimize the destruction of the forested areas.
- revise the zoning and subdivision ordinance to address the preservation of existing trees and replacement of trees that are removed.
- through site development design standards and review and judicious placement of buildings, preserve the forested character of Ruidoso.

The village council will hear Rennick's appeal next Tuesday and take action. The council vote, either way, is sure to evoke dissatisfaction among many people.

Planning and zoning chairman Robert Donaldson asked Richards at last week's commission meeting if the board erred, as Rennick contended in his appeal. Richards said "no."

Beer's OK at Bulls

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

For the next three weekends, the owner of J.C. Bulls can sell beer, wine and liquor under a temporary picnic license.

That should eliminate some of the problems that occurred last weekend with patrons drinking in the parking lot, owner Jerry Cazares told The Ruidoso News Wednesday.

Complaints about unruly customers who brought their own alcohol, because the restaurant didn't have a license, were received by Lincoln County Commission Chairman Monroy Montes and Commissioner Wilton Howell, they said Tuesday.

"Several citizens came to me, Montes said during the commission meeting. "It seems a new business in the Old Barn building (on U.S. 70) is running steers inside."

Apparently, someone misrepresented to (Commissioner L. Ray) Nunley that it was going to operate only over the Fourth of July weekend and a picnic (sale of alcohol at special events) license was needed.

"There was a lot of drinking and the Sheriff's Department received a lot of calls. I think we have a responsibility to our citizens to make sure it is not going to continue."

Howell said that because the state did not grant a temporary license to the business, customers were carrying in booze with them.

Local lawyer Don Dutton said several parents had complained to him because of the drinking in the parking lot.

The Ruidoso News received calls, one from a mother who said when she moved into the trailer home park next door, she didn't realize a business was being run and would be her neighbor.

For the safety and well-being of residents, I want something done, Montes said.

Let's turn it over to the District Attorney to investigate, said Commissioner William Schweitzer.

Ruidoso Police Chief Richard Swenor said the commissioners and residents are over-reacting. The business is aimed at family entertainment using rodeo activities, he said.

"The biggest problem we had (that weekend) was from people in the trailer park having a party and it was blamed on J.C. Bulls," Swenor said. "I was over there (at the restaurant) every night and there was no problem."

"This whole thing is to have a family thing. It's typical. Someone tries to do something different and the critics will come out. I've been spending weekend evenings helping out. You know, rodeo is the biggest spectator sport in the nation."

"They want to keep it family oriented. The parking lot is not well lit and that will have to be corrected as time goes by."

"Nobody is trying to make another night spot. That's not the intent of it."

Whatever the intent, someone needs to clean up the trash and other debris that has been pushed up against the fence and left to sit, one trailer park resident observed.

Cazares told The Ruidoso News he doesn't know how Nunley

Commission debates weapons ban in county courthouse

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A weapon by any other name is a weapon, or maybe not.

Whether a pocket knife is a weapon, or merely a tool, was one of the questions raised by Lincoln County Commissioners Tuesday. They were discussing a request by Twelfth Judicial District Judge Richard A. Parsons to ban weapons in the courthouse.

Parsons previously had notified the commission that he was considering issuing a court order prohibiting weapons in the courthouse and parking lot.

Persons anywhere in the courthouse would be subject to search.

County manager Andy Wynham said the commission never responded to the information provided by Parsons.

"He's ready to take action and he said we better order some signs," Wynham said.

The commission cannot pass an ordinance restricting guns. It has to be done by court order, he said.

By posting signs, anyone who enters the building would be consenting to a search.

"Who pays for the search?" asked Commissioner Bill Schwettmann.

"It's always been a western custom that everyone leaves their firearms before entering a school or church.... It's customary for people around here to carry rifles and pistols in their pickups."

Commissioner Stirling Spencer

"I don't know," Wynham said. "Who is responsible if someone complains that their civil rights have been violated?"

"The sheriff is sworn to uphold the law," Commissioner Wilton Howell said. "The judge has the right to do it, but I don't want to go so far as having metal detectors."

Commissioner Stirling Spencer said he has a hard time accepting dictates from the judicial branch to the legislative branch of government.

He held up a pocket knife. "I clean my fingernails with this and I consider it an industrial tool," Spencer said. "Who determines whether this is a deadly weapon?"

"There have been cases where lawyers and judges have been shot," Howell said. "I'd gladly give up my pocket knife, if I thought it would keep someone from being injured."

Schwettmann said some people might consider former professional fighter Mike Tyson a deadly weapon.

"Would he have to stay outside?" he asked.

"Lately there's more people being shot in the post office than in the courtroom," said Commissioner Chairman Monroy Montes.

Wynham said Chief Judge Robert M. Doughty of the Twelfth District already has posted signs in his courthouse in Alamogordo.

"Maybe if Parsons is agreeable, it would be less restrictive, just to cover firearms," Wynham said.

"I feel comfortable with that," Spencer said. "It's always been a western custom that everyone leaves their firearms before entering a school or church."

"This is the kind of input the judge wanted," Wynham said.

Neither Howell nor Spencer favored including the parking lot in the restriction.

"We'd have to fence it," Howell said.

"It's customary for people around here to carry rifles and pistols in their pickups," Spencer said.

"Let's look for a middle ground and see if he will agree," Montes said.

In another matter, commissioners decided to try to negotiate a better deal with the State Transportation and Highway Department on roadwork along Airport Road and State Road 214 through Fort Stanton to U.S. 380.

A proposal from the state in which the county would receive $400,000 worth of work, but would have to accept responsibility for maintenance beyond its capabilities, was put on hold.

"It looks like we're taking on a heck of a liability with little funds," Howell said. "It looks like a bad deal to me."

Montes and other commissioners agreed.

He asked to set up a meeting with state highway officials, but Wynham said that would throw all of the discussions into a public forum. He asked commissioners to give him directions and let him negotiate within those parameters.

Originally, commissioners had hoped to have the state finish surfacing the four miles of the airport road needed to connect State Road 48 and U.S. 380.

However, during attempts by State Representative H. John Underwood to gain the most for the county, the highway department also wanted to extract some commitments to help its position.

"We'll take Devil's Canyon (SR214), we maintain it for them anyway. We're a rock and boulder county," Spencer said. "But we don't want an on-going maintenance burden (of the road from U.S. 380 to Fort Stanton Hospital and Training Center)."

"Odd as it seems, I agree with Stirling," Howell said. "We need to try for $2-million if that's what it takes for the state to pave from the airport to 214 at Fort Stanton and turn left (toward U.S. 380)."

"We'll take the turn to the right (SR 214) through Devil's Canyon (to U.S. 70)."

"Let's direct Andy to take that plan where ever he needs," Spencer said.

Ruidoso asks county for donation to struggling meals program

by DIANNE STALLINGS

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Senior citizens in Ruidoso need help to keep a home meals program financially alive.

Village manager Ron Wicker turned Tuesday to the Lincoln County Commission for some of that help.

"Four hundred elderly in Lincoln County fall below the poverty level and 130 of them are in Ruidoso (and Ruidoso Downs)," he told commissioners. "However, we (Ruidoso) never received outside funding. It always was handled by local contributions."

"But contributions have fallen off and we need help to continue. The funding we have received will only cover two days a week."

Wicker, who is a member of Ruidoso Care Inc., a non-profit organization that manages the program, said within two years he believes other funding sources will be found.

Meanwhile, he asked the commissioners to "adopt" three persons for a full year of meals.

Commissioner Wilton Howell said he would like to honor the request, since the commission already subsidized a county senior citizens meals program by $27,000 this year.

But other commissioners said they prefer to wait and consider other options such as joining the Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs meals programs under one roof.

"We fight over $15 with the Zia (Senior Citizens) program," said Commissioner Stirling Spencer.

"Other programs are available in the private sector for those who really need help. The federal funding level is eroding constantly. I feel responsible, but if the money is not there..."

Commission Chairman Monroy Montes said, "I'd like to look at this request over the next two to three months and come up with a long term plan to meet the needs of all our senior citizens."

But Howell continued to push for more immediate help.

"I sure understand the need for a long range plan, but we're paying a $27,000 subsidy already for senior citizens outside the village," he said. "I'm for buying a bandage and looking for a long range solution too."

Wicker said the cost of feeding three people for a year would be $1,296.

"We could find the money if we had to," Commissioner Bill Schwettmann said. "We could take it from the commissioners' salaries."

The average income level of Ruidoso residents is too high for the village to qualify for the financial help other parts of the county receive from state and federal sources, Wicker said. Mixing the two communities of Ruidoso and Ruidoso Downs might lower that figure.

"I personally think it would be a good move," Wicker said. "We're running out of space (in the Ruidoso seniors center)."

"This has nothing to do with the immediate concern, but I think Zia ought to look into this," Schwettmann said.

"I think Commissioners (L. Ray) Nunley and Howell already have spoken to Ruidoso Downs about coming in with Zia," Montes said. "How close are you (to closing down)?" he asked Wicker.

"We probably can last another six months," Wicker said. "It costs $3 per meal. If we shut down, these people would just be out. I feel if we can keep going two years, we will have other sources."

Besides senior citizens, the program feeds shut-ins and handicap clients.

The meals are prepared in a local restaurant, because a request sent to the State Legislature for money to renovate the Ruidoso senior citizens center was rejected.

The Ruidoso Village Council provides drivers, two employees and the facility for the meals program. With existing money, 50 people will be fed two days a week for nine months, Wicker said.

Other information contained in a brochure on "Campaign Ruidoso Cares," aimed at soliciting financial help to operate the program for the next two years, included that the meals program was started in 1983. It served meals three days a week.

The amount clients pay for the meals is based on their monthly income. Those earning less than $500 a month receive free meals.

The Care group is trying to raise $40,000. To adopt one person for one month, with meals three days a week, the cost is $36; three months is $108; six months is $216; and one year is $432.

Wicker said he has come to realize the need for the hot meals.

"At 30, I didn't think much about it, but at 50, I can see there is much more of a real problem," he said.

"Sisters" sing for ice cream social

Ruidoso's own version of the Singing Nuns will get into the act during the first Christian Festival and God's Portion Auction from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday, at the First Christian Church on Hull Road.

This home-grown sister act is directed by Helene Kobelnik, who says, "who needs Whooper, when you've got Carol Bayless, Sharon Kennedy, Helen Woodfin, Magi Finley, Margaret Reed, Cheryl Wozny, Cindy Trammel and Waynta Wirt."

The singing sisters are just part of the fun planned for the big festival under the big top.

The children's choir will perform at 5:45 p.m. - the same time the ice cream booth is set to open.

Randy Jones and Associates will sing at 6 p.m. just before the first of a series of auctions begins at 6:30 p.m.

During the first series of auctions, everything from a carrot cake to a handmade quilt and a six-foot spruce tree will go up for sale.

A trio of fiddlers, featuring six-year-old Wesley Hall, will play at 7 p.m., followed by the chancel choir and the sisters at 7:30 p.m.

The big event of the evening will begin at 8 p.m. with the fine arts and other top value donated items will go on the auction block.

The final auction item of the evening will be a Dave McGary bronze bust, preceded by a Ken Hosmer watercolor, Linda Miller lithographs and a Paula White Hosmer painting.

Paintings by Mary Parsons, D.J. Freiley, Lowell Long and Bettynelle Bolton also are included in the auction, along with a Lincoln Fox sculpture.

The ice cream booth will be open throughout the auction and entertainment, so bring the kids, bring your grandmother and bring a hearty appetite to the first Christian Festival and God's Portion Auction.

The First Christian Church family invites everyone to join them in this special festival.

Family Crisis Center recruits new volunteers

Victims of domestic violence often suffer in silence, and when they do speak out, they sometimes don't know where to turn for help and support.

In Lincoln County, Family Crisis

Center offers counseling, emergency shelter and other services.

More volunteers are needed to answer calls and advocate for victims.

A training session, coordinated by family therapist Birgit LaMothe, begins at 7 p.m. today (Thursday), at Family Practice Associates on Sudderth Drive. Everyone is invited to attend and learn more about domestic violence.

got the impression that the business was only a one weekend event.

The picnic license is only temporary. You can get them three times a year and they're good for 72 hours," he said.

In this case, the picnic license was issued through the name of the Rodeo Bar in Capitan for the next three weekends.

Nunley, who was not able to attend Tuesday's commission meeting, later told The News that when he was asked to sign, he understood it was only for a Fourth of July event where beer was to be sold.

Henry Silva (manager of the Capitan Senior Citizens Center) called and asked me if I would sign a picnic license for over the Fourth of July. When he called, I didn't know exactly what to do, I called Martha Guevara (assistant to county manager Andy Wynham). She said they needed to pay a license fee of $10 a day to the county clerk.

"Someone I didn't know brought (the picnic license) in for me to sign."

Cazares said the intention from the start has been to sell beer and wine at the business.

"There may be some slack period between the time the picnic license expires and when we get our beer and wine license," Cazares said. "We're opened trying to generate income until our regular license comes in. It takes about 90 days."

Cazares said he formerly was manager of the Ruidoso Springs condominiums and has lived in Ruidoso for seven years.

The group running the restaurant portion of the operation is associated with Smokey Bear Restaurant in Capitan, he said.

The unique feature of the large structure is that an arena has been built inside for people to ride steers. "It's open to anyone as long as they are not intoxicated and have their own equipment," he said.

Cazares contends part of the problem is his competitors selling beer and wine.

"Our parking lot is no worse than anyone else's," he said. "We did have a few problems, a few drunks, and they were thrown out."

"Tell the commissioners to come out and see for themselves," Cazares said. "It's not wild. It's family oriented. We want kids to be able to come with their parents."

Business prospect gets the cold shoulder

by GARY CAMPBELL

Ruidoso News Staff Writer

A company interested in moving its headquarters and manufacturing plant to Ruidoso isn't getting the red carpet treatment from the EDCLC and can't understand why.

First Texas Manufacturing, an El Paso, Texas, company since 1967, is considering a move to Ruidoso. First Texas, a manufacturer and distributor of metal detectors, currently employs 75 people. Officials expect to increase that number to 100 after moving to Ruidoso.

Working with the Economic Development Corporation of Lincoln County (EDCLC) hasn't been very productive, say officials of First Texas, who have visited Ruidoso several times.

Karen Kopp, executive director of the EDCLC, said during the group's last board meeting on June 29, that a company manufacturing metal detectors is the group's only remaining active prospect. Apparently, she was speaking of First Texas.

Kopp, contacted by The Ruidoso News Wednesday, indicated the potential move should remain a secret. She refused to reveal any information because she didn't want it in the paper.

"It completely escapes me why they would want to keep us under a rock," said Mickey Cochran, communications director of First Texas. "It's truly left to our imagination why."

EDCLC is a private corporation, funded mainly with public money, which has a goal of attracting business to the county.

"At times though we didn't really seem like much of a priority," said Cochran. "We are feeling more like we are unimportant."

This prospect's name was so secret that some members of the EDCLC board, including County Commissioner Wilton Howell were not even aware of it.

First Texas officials are waiting for answers from Kopp about the state of the Ruidoso work force and the possibility of any incentives for relocating here. These are just a few of the questions that First Texas is asking.

Kopp said she is looking into the information and will contact the company again with proof of an adequate work force in Lincoln County.

As of Wednesday, Kopp said she had not received the information she needed.

"This is a one-person office," said Kopp. "It takes time to get this information."

Kopp said that she was going to drive down to Department of Labor office on Wednesday to find the statistics on the number of available workers in Lincoln County.

The News, after learning about First Texas' unsuccessful attempts to get help and information from EDCLC, contacted Howell, who went to work.

He called the Department of Labor on Wednesday, and within a matter of hours provided some of the information that First Texas had been waiting for: Howell said a person in the office told him that there are 475 available laborers in the county who had applied for unemployment benefits equaling a rate of around 7.2 percent unemployment.

First Texas president John Turner cautioned that the statistics are just ball park figures.

"You can't really tell until you put an ad in the paper and people come in and apply."

Cochran said they had been waiting for Kopp to contact them for about two weeks, but had received no reply.

According to Cochran, First Texas' top priority is to find a good location in Ruidoso for the business.

He said the company has focused its efforts on obtaining part of the old Ben Franklin building in the Plaza Shopping Center. First Texas is interested in the 13,000 square foot building for offices, assembly line and a possible store front in which to sell metal detectors.

Cochran said the company currently does not sell its own products, but due to the high numbers of visitors to Ruidoso, and the probable appeal of the products to tourists, they want to try and market them direct to customers.

Jerry Gilmer, who owns the building, had not heard of the interest by First Texas, but said he would contact his real estate agent and then contact the company.

"That building is suitable for us," said Turner. "But I don't know if it is suitable with the village for us to be in it."

Once the building is obtained, the only question that remains is whether, or not the building would be properly zoned for the manufacturing company.

Commissioner Howell tackled that question, too. He contacted village manager Ron Wicker and Planning and Zoning director Cleatus Richards to determine if a zoning problem exists.

"If there is not an emission problem, it could very well go under the current zoning," said Howell.

Howell contacted First Texas and determined that no emission problem does exist.

Howell's efforts may change the bad taste First Texas officials now have about Ruidoso.

Turner said he did not believe that the EDCLC was strongly pursuing his company.

"I've never talked to her (Kopp)," Turner said. "From a second hand point of view, I felt that she hadn't been very aggressive in getting us to move ... sort of nonchalant."

Cochran said that he had been to Ruidoso four times representing First Texas, but had not been met by anyone except a real estate agent he had contacted, after being given the Realtor's number by Kopp.

Kopp said the two times First Texas representatives came to Ruidoso, she was out of town.

"I asked them if they wanted to meet with somebody, and they said 'no,' because before they wanted to get to be sure on a building they could use," said Kopp.

Cochran said he has been a long-time visitor to Ruidoso and has talked about Ruidoso enough to encourage the company's president to consider the move.

Turner also told The News that he would want to promote Ruidoso as an area for a national metal detector manufacturers convention. He said those conventions usually draw about 2,000 to 3,000 people.

Cochran said the company's products, Bounty Hunter, Teknetics and Search Master metal detectors are internationally known.

First Texas has been planning a move out of El Paso for the past three years.

Carlsbad made every effort to get First Texas to move to their town, and the town is still making a big play for the company, according to Cochran.

"They went so far as to offer a house for our president," said Cochran.

Turner said a dispute over water is one reason his company is looking for a new home. First Texas, an El Paso business since 1967, had been using a well to provide water. The company only uses water for normal office water usage such as bathrooms and sinks.

First Texas and the city of El Paso disagree over a $12,000 charge to hook up with city water.

Cochran said if First Texas moves to New Mexico, the leadership is willing to change the company's name.

"We are known by our product, so our business would not be hurt by a name change," said Cochran.

Cochran said he would encourage any input into the move to the area.

"We are receptive to any calls or correspondence," said Cochran.

First Texas paid out around $1 million in salaries last year. If the company moves, it will become Ruidoso's largest private year round employer, with 75 to 100 jobs.

"There are a lot of people who want a steady 9-5 job Monday through Friday," said Cochran.

"Our jobs are something that people could make a career of."

Museum of the Horse joins in a special exhibit at Art Fest

Planning is under way for the '93 Old Lincoln Days events

The Lincoln Pageant and Festivals Corporation is seeking entries for the annual parade in conjunction with the celebration of "Old Lincoln Days."

The parade will take place at 11 a.m. Sunday, August 8, in Old Lincoln Town.

This year all entries must register at the staging grounds no later than 9:30 a.m. Old Lincoln Days runs Friday, August 6, through Sunday, August 8.

Interested parties should contact Jon Amastae at (915) 665-2162 or Glenn Dennis at 663-4692.

Lincoln County grand jury will be empaneled today

A second grand jury will be empaneled in Lincoln County today to handle any other cases prosecutors may want to review during the next three months.

In June, a grand jury was seated specifically to hear information about possible public corruption charges against State Representative H. John Underwood. The jury declined to return any indictments against Underwood, but did hand down a misdemeanor charge against Ruidoso Downs police chief Will Hoggard for failure to respond to a subpoena.

Grand jury proceedings are secret, as are the names of the members. Once seated, the new grand jurors, 18 persons including alternates, will determine their own meeting schedule. At his discretion, Twelfth Judicial District Judge Richard A. Parsons could release the jury before the end of the three months.

Hang on

A cowboy hangs on for his life during a rodeo at the Mescalero rodeo grounds. The rodeo was part of the annual four day Mescalero Apache Ceremonial and Rodeo. The rodeo riders bounced around throughout the four-day period. As a part of the ceremonial, a group of six Apache Maidens danced during their traditional rites of passage into womanhood. Also a part of the celebration, which took place over the Fourth of July weekend, was a parade in Mescalero. The four-day event ended July 5.

Silver Lining

Perry family gathers for annual reunion

Family Reunion at Perry Ranch

Sons and daughters of the late and beloved Elzy and Mayme Perry, and their descendants, gathered the third and fourth of July at the Perry Ranch in Glencoe for their annual Fourth of July family reunion.

Eight of the 10 Perry children were present along with children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

All told, there were 114 in attendance including 47 children younger than 15.

Youngest at the gathering was Joshua McWhorter Fleming, age five months, great-grandson of Ruth Perry Rosco.

Leroy Perry and his wife, Lola Mae, and their son, LeRoy Wayne Perry, talked of the early days on the ranch working in the hay and picking apples.

Don Perry and I had a fine visit. He and his wife live in Irving, Texas. They had 19 of their family present.

Charles and his wife, Ann, joined in the celebration; and Charles and I remembered bringing in hay just below the house.

Elzy Perry Jr. and his wife, Sharon, were up from Tularosa; and Junior and I remembered happy days playing in the Coe Ranch Orchestra.

Lloyd Perry and his wife, Dorris, who were called Home by Our Lord a few years ago, were represented by their children, Donnie Ray and Andy, and their sons, Ben and Scott.

It was great to visit with Brian Nosker who arrived from Utah. And Nina Perry Taylor came over from Lincoln, and many of their children were present.

It is always pleasant to visit with Ruth Perry Rosco and her husband, Richard.

Jane Perry Stout and her husband, Raymond, arrived from Arizona. They brought back pleasant memories of the early days.

by Daniel Agnew Storm

Elzy and Mayme Perry were fond friends of the Storm family, as were Mayme's parents, George and Phoebe Coe. The Storm brothers were raised with the Perry children; therefore, it was nice to see that this year's Perry reunion was an event long to be remembered.

Bryce Perry is Acolyte at Saint Anne's Chapel

At the Fourth of July services at Saint Anne's Chapel, Bryce Perry began his service as our new acolyte. Bryce, age 13, is the son of Pam Tully Bernard, and the grandson of Gerald and Wynema Tully. We are all very proud of Bryce Perry.

Among our former acolytes are Cam Misner and Jim Paul Whipple.

The Reverend Anna Gaddy in her sermon reminded us how grateful we should be for our freedoms during this time of turmoil in much of the world — that the Fourth of July awakens in us a thankfulness to God.

Also, in her sermon, the Reverend Anna referred to the Gospel according to Saint Matthew: "Come to me all you that are weary and carrying heavy burdens, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

The Reverend Anna Gaddy explained that it is through following the way of our Lord Christ that we are truly free.

Blessings and Thanksgiving

In prayers of the people, Nellie Ruth Jones asked blessings on the birthdays of Eleanor Shockey, Erica Batton, Jane Livingston, Jaimie Stroud, Jane Deyo, Bobbie Gossett, Page Hubbard and Rosina Locke.

And the wedding anniversaries of Barry and Janice Herd, Sam and Bev Hammond, James and Martha Vaughn and John and Roberta Schuller.

And thanksgiving for the birth of Timothy Curtis Bedeaux, son of Brett and Gretchen Bedeaux and grandson of Ron and Cathy Annala.

We closed the services by singing "America the Beautiful," accompanied at the organ by Debbie Sanchez.

Fourth of July Golden Full Moon

Sunset colors faded from the western sky on the evening of the Fourth of July, and twilight gave way to dusk. The evening breeze gradually quieted its gentle singing among the cedars and piñons, the dove on the hillside sang his last notes of the evening serenade, and the mantle of darkness fell into the peaceful Vale.

Well into the early night the full golden moon shone down from over Sunrise Mountain, encircled by a ring of light green, purple and airy rainbow colors.

The path of golden light shone down over the tips of the evergreens into the valley below and lighted up the hillsides all to the north side of the valley.

Rising higher in the night sky, the moon cast its golden benediction down over all the mountain land in a heavenly tribute to the Fourth of July.

With Attic Ventilation, Saving Energy Is Under Control.

Even with insulation and tightly sealed joints, your home needs attic ventilation to control moisture—and to control attic temperatures. Moisture can build up during the winter and reduce the effectiveness of insulation. In the summer, a lack of ventilation can drive attic temperatures up and put greater strain on your air conditioning system. For more information about saving energy, call or visit your local TNP office and ask for a copy of the "Energy Management Guide."

Racing

Straight forward

Deceptively triumphs in the Grade 1 $233,043 Rainbow Derby July 4 at Ruidoso Downs. Jeff Williams was aboard the muscular three-year-old filly. She sprinted the 440 yards in 32.65 seconds.

The Texas-bred daughter of Runaway Winner is trained by Bruce Bell. Roger Knight Jr. of Madisonville, Texas, is both the owner and breeder of the champion quarter horse.

Amandas Nice Boy looks impressive

Amandas Nice Boy triumphed for the third time in five career starts with an easy 2 1/4-length score in the third division of the Rio Grande Futurity Trials, Monday at Ruidoso Downs.

The win automatically qualified the Fred Danley-trainee to the $69,941 Rio Grande Futurity which will be run Sunday, July 18.

The race is restricted to two-year-old New Mexico-breds and will be run at six furlongs.

Amandas Nice Boy broke on the lead in the six furlong trial heat and had a two-length advantage entering the turn for home. In the stretch, jockey Roger Gomez asked his mount for more and he responded by lengthening his advantage at the wire. The time was 1:12 flat.

Amandas Nice Boy has been a model of consistency in his young career with three wins and two places with earnings of $35,000. The gelding was runner-up in both the Norgor and Rio Grande Kindergarten Futurities against some of the top juveniles in the Southwest.

Amandas Nice Boy is owned by William Stradley and Tom Williams of Hobbs.

The first trial division was captured by William and Martha Galloway's Stryker Ego. The gelded son of top New Mexico sire Bold Ego closed late to post a 2 3/4-length win over 6-5 favorite Tornado Laddy for his first career tally.

Go Together Handicap attracts classy field for Saturday feature

Sue May's Cream To The Top and Betty Spradlin's Willies Lily, both consistent stakes performers this meet against the top male quarter horses in the nation, head a classy field of fillies and mares in the $14,000-added Go Together Handicap, Saturday.

The 350-yard dash is named after the filly Go Together who was honored as Champion 3-Year-Old Filly and Champion Mare in 1970 for winning both the Rainbow Derby and World's Championship Classic.

Cream To The Top comes into the Go Together off an impressive win over Grade 1 stakes winner Choculo in the $41,772 Rainbow Derby Consolation on July 3.

The 3-year-old homebred daughter of Easily Smashed, broke on the lead from the #10 hole in the 440-yard race and led from wire-to-wire for a neck-length score. The win was the first career stakes victory for Cream To The Top who has been a consistent performer throughout her career under the tutelage of trainer Fred Danley.

She has finished in the money in three of four stakes appearances, with her only setback in the Grade I Kansas Derby.

Horses make the best patients, according to this track vet

by MOLLY WEBER
Special to The News

The picture of Dr. Wes Vogt, a Ruidoso Downs racetrack veterinarian, shows a brutal shiner sitting on his right eye — a stark testimony to the fact that "any horse can hurt you."

That picture is on his 1984 veterinary license issued in Salinas, Oklahoma, only 18 days after he chose to go into racetrack medicine. Prior to the decision, he worked on suburban horses, says the graduate of Kansas State University.

"I worked around horses all my life, and I learned some of the subtle things not taught in text," Vogt offers. Spending his spring breaks with Dr. J.D. Hultine at the large Nebraska track, planted a seed that would come to fruition when he became licensed to practice racetrack medicine in five states — California, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Wife Becky keeps the books and goes along with the semi-nomadic lifestyle Vogt describes he has created for the two of them.

"It isn't for everyone," she concedes, and he agrees. "It wouldn't work if there were children."

But there are advantages to his profession. Besides the good feelings of helping a horse, there is little night work.

"Trainers are professionals; and when they recognize a problem, it is prudent to have it treated as soon as possible," Vogt states. "I work seven days a week, but most of the time the nights are mine," he continues.

Vogt is one of a half dozen mobile vets at the Downs and admits that "any time can be dangerous working on horses, but you are especially vulnerable if you get complacent when working on a horse that you know." Vogt may see as many as 30 or more "clients" per day for the two most common problems as well as the more unusual ones.

Musculoskeletal problems usually center around the knee which is analogous to our wrist carpus (wrist bones collectively), Vogt states, adding that "it often just happens with a series of these little bones prone to chip fractures." The trainer will ask him to look at the horse because he thinks the horse is lame, and Vogt's job is to determine which limb and treat it accordingly.

Respiratory disease is the next most common problem possibly because there are many young animals concentrated in a small area, and colds spread in horses just as they do in young children.

His most unusual case was his treatment of a sesmoid (a bone in the ankle) on the rear leg of a horse.

"It is common in the front legs, but in the back leg it is unusual," he says.

For those who ask why two of the Triple Crown contenders were victim to injuries, there isn't any easy answer.

"In racetrack terms, we say that he 'took a bad step' possibly due to too much weight and the speed that the horse travels," Vogt replies. Because certain fractures will not heal properly, humane practices are used, namely euthanasia.

"Any sound horse in the barn can have it happen," he adds. He remembers that one horse, however, wore a prosthesis on his front limb and sired several offspring.

Another theory that often emerges in answer to the "why do race horses have so many problems now" is that "every racetrack needs more horses which means there may be more breakdowns if the trend continues," says Vogt.

Racing as an industry is not in real good shape because of the many alternate forms of gambling.

"It no longer is the only game in town; and even though simulcast adds good revenue, it inflates the figures in those venues which makes it look like the handle is up when in reality sometimes the purse is less. With the price of feed and hay going up, there is a price squeeze," says Vogt. He would like to see everyone promoting the industry because "the climate in Ruidoso can't be bought at any price."

For the man who once was very active in the 4-H and rode in the Little Britches rodeo and in college rodeo in his native state of Kansas, who has a "way" with his clients as he calls his horses and loves what he is doing — life is fulfilling and busy.

When the season here is over, he will go to the State Fair in Albuquerque and then to Sunland Park near El Paso, happy that he is filling a need and doing it well.

Senator Domenici questions the long delay in rebuilding burned out Mescalero school

Senator Pete Domenici (R-NM) met recently with Ada Deer, the nominee to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Indian Affairs, and received assurances that she will carefully review how priorities are determined through the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) school construction program.

Domenici told Deer he is particularly interested in resolving a delay in reconstructing a Mescalero Apache elementary school that burned in 1990.

The Senator, who maintains the problem is system-wide, said the Mescalero problem is compounded by the fact that the BIA has not provided five needed portable classrooms for the school.

Deer, who was making a courtesy call to Domenici prior to her confirmation hearing, pledged that, if confirmed, she will review the BIA's Office of School Construction's approach to determining priorities for school construction.

"The Mescalero Elementary School burned in 1990, and it is not yet ranked and cannot even get portable buildings to house its students," Domenici said. "I'm pleased that Ms. Deer has agreed to give this serious attention because the issue of unhoused students and emergency situations desperately needs clarification. Otherwise, confidence in the BIA will erode quickly, and the Congress will have to make these decisions."

Domenici, a member of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, recommended an immediate review of the policy and publication of needed revisions to restore the integrity of a new school construction ranking process.

Domenici, who visited the destroyed site in 1990, said he understands that new construction funds are restricted because of federal budget limitations, but added that this excuse does not explain the delay in reacting to an emergency situation like that of the Mescalero school.

Last year an Inspector General's audit on the priority system recommended that the BIA Office of Construction Management "establish procedures to be used by the ranking committee to ensure that an objective system is in place for specific ranking criteria such as unhoused students."

Deer, former chair of the Menominee Nation of Wisconsin, is currently a senior lecturer at the School of Social Work and American Indian Studies Program at the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

She has worked with such organizations as the Native American Rights Fund, Americans for Indian Opportunity and the American Indian Graduate Program.

If confirmed, she will be the first woman to serve as Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs.

Governors put Indian Gaming Act on the fast track

Governor Bruce King has praised an effort by U.S. senators to consider revisions to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

"We need to get this whole process out of the courthouse, so we can find solutions that will benefit the Native American Indian people and the other citizens," Governor King said.

Governor King and five other governors from western states met Sunday with U.S. Senator Daniel Inouye (D-Hawaii), chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs, at the annual meeting of the Western Governors' Association in Tucson.

After the private meeting with governors, Senator Inouye issued a statement announcing a meeting in Washington July 2 with state, federal and tribal representatives.

"In the past I have had very specific suggestions for changing the national law," Governor King said, "but I have agreed to support this process, and I have told Senator Inouye that I will let him attempt to resolve it."

Tim Wapato, acting director of the National Indian Gaming Association, which represents about 90 tribes and pueblos, said his group had agreed to participate. Wapato said most Indian groups hope to use revenues from gaming to finance other forms of economic development on their lands.

Governor King and Governor Roy Romer (D-Colorado) said they were encouraged by that approach and promised to continue to work with Indian groups to find alternatives to gaming as a source of tribal revenue and jobs.

U.S. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt declined an invitation to attend the meeting of western governors, and the Interior Department was not represented at the meeting between Senator Inouye and the governors. Other Interior officials were expected at the conference Monday, but gaming was not on the agenda for public discussion.

Governor King has declined to sign proposed compacts with New Mexico tribes and pueblos seeking state approval to offer forms of gambling not legal elsewhere in the state. U.S. district courts have upheld the governor, and the cases are on appeal.

In Arizona, by contrast, Governor Fife Symington has said he will sign compacts allowing video gambling and other games on Indian lands, in spite of the Arizona legislature's failure to authorize the compacts in a special session earlier this month.

The Western Governors' Association is an independent, non-partisan organization of governors from 17 western states, two Pacific territories and one commonwealth. The annual meeting in Tucson will conclude Tuesday.

Sometimes the view on the sidelines is even more pleasing than the parade. This grandmother seems to enjoy watching the anticipation of a young child waiting for Smokey Bear in the long line of horses, cars, fire engines, floats and decorated pickup trucks.

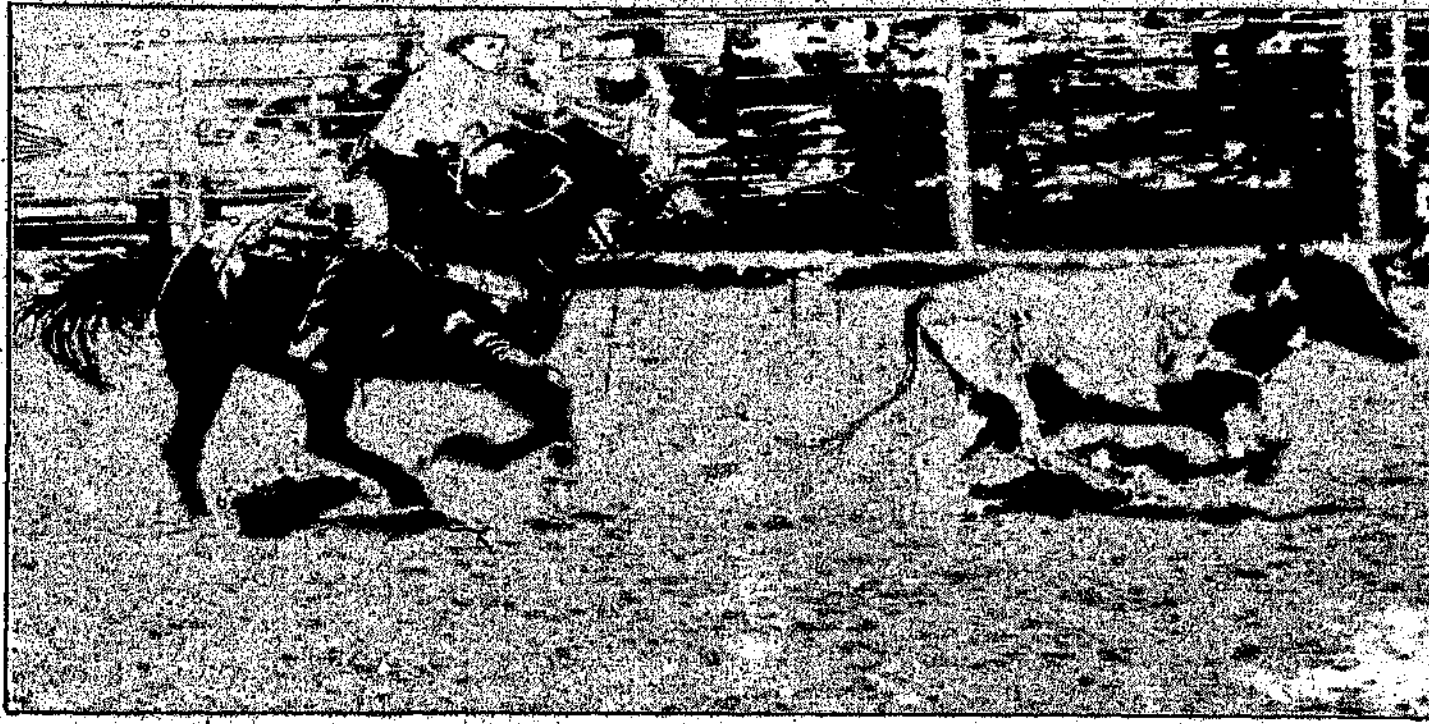

A young rodeo watcher strikes a manly pose and shows off the feather in his cowboy hat during the Capitan celebration.

Mohawk madness hits the Capitan area. The unusual hairdo draws stares from parade-goers and could double as a broom.

Three horses pull a heavy load in Capitan's annual Fourth of July parade, preceding the Smokey Bear Stampede and hours of rodeo fun. The all day event, plus rodeos the day before and after, drew the largest crowd even seen in this small village, officials say.

Tom Darrah

Artist Tom Darrah's creative style is strictly his own

by DIANNE STALLINGS
Ruidoso News Staff Writer

Defining the collective works of Tom Darrah could confuse the best art critic.

Detailed realistic lithographs of the New Mexico countryside sit next to more traditional oil landscapes, western art and more recently, pieces in which abstract patterns are created from recognizable subjects.

"I just don't fit into any group, I'm afraid," Darrah said during a recent interview at his new studio in La Luz, with canine companion Guido at his side.

The variety is not surprising after meeting the artist. Darrah brims with ideas, opinions, interpretations and observations.

It seems impossible that he could stay with one prevailing subject or style. But he knows that's not the approach that sells.

"I've had people tell me I do everything possible not to be successful," he said. But he considers too much of the popular art today "decor, not a personal statement."

Unfortunately, marketing has become the foremost requirement for survival in the world of art.

"There's so much out there. To be competitive, you have to limit subjects so people can recognize you," Darrah said.

"I do an awful lot of different things and I think some of that comes from growing up in the East where the museums carried pieces from different periods and the works of artists who changed styles and evolved. There was a tremendous variety."

"When people buy by subject matter, they aren't looking as much at the creativity, style and technique."

"Change is what artists do. They're pursuing a belief, not necessarily producing product."

"I almost never duplicate anything. I'm always trying to take a different turn, to go someplace else."

His most recent turn focuses on abstract patterns using realistic subjects.

"Now I'm getting closer to the direction I like," Darrah said, motioning to an oil painting covered with a herd of goats.

"I don't really see it as goats, it's more abstract, an overall pattern," Darrah said. He used a similar approach with a field of wild daisies broken only by the head of a purple horse in a 4x6-foot piece.

"Whatever you do, if you work on something long enough, there's a personal intensity and it takes on a certain identity," he said.

"I have found in the last two to three years that I have done little commercial work, except commissions."

Darrah recently completed an assignment for the National Guard, four pieces depicting scenes from the Mexican incursion using black and white photographs from 1915 as a springboard to create the scenes he saw in his mind. Another month of work went into each of the paintings to produce the finished products.

"I'd done some Western art and thought this would be fun," he said.

Just like his painting versatility, Darrah changes his base of operation periodically. He formerly ran a studio/gallery in Cloudcroft, then worked near Sunspot, painted out of a studio in the settlement of Lincoln and now divides his time between La Luz and Lincoln.

From East to West

Born in Philadelphia, Darrah grew up in a South Philly blue collar neighborhood surrounded by docks, railroad tracks and chemical plants.

"I lived in a neighborhood where it was real easy to stay home and not go out," he said. "But it was beautiful when I was a child. It was a real community then. In the last 20 years, it's become a combat zone. It was not a community conducive to painting."

His father and grandmother sketched, but never professionally.

"I could never spell or pass a job application," he joked. "That's why I'm a painter."

He enjoyed drawing, because of the stories he could tell with images.

"One of the first things I remember drawing as a child was soldiers," Darrah said. "The irony is, here I am 50 years later and right back where I started, doing several pictures of little soldiers."

Not being a devoted scholar in high school, Darrah's grades didn't qualify him for a good four-year college. Instead, he attended a commercial art school. He believes the experience was good for him and his work.

"But I could never be a commercial illustrator, because I'm too messy and slightly dyslexic," he said. "When someone ordered something 8 1/2 by 11, sometimes I would produce work that was 11 by 8 1/2. I still worry about that."

Valuable experience also was gained working for a large daily newspaper, where he was one of 60 artists.

"My family was horrified when I left," he said. "In those days, when you got a job, you stayed the rest of your life. The newspaper eventually went out of business in 1982. If I had stayed, I would have been laid off, but at a stage in my life when it would have been a lot more difficult to recover."

Soon after, Darrah was drafted and went to Vietnam. After returning home and spending three months as an outpatient at the veterans' hospital, he was talked into moving to Albuquerque by a friend.

"It was the only place in 1969 where the G.I. Bill education benefits of $130 a month would stretch a semester," Darrah said. "Albuquerque was beautiful then, coming from Philly with bumper to bumper traffic, and you could find a place to rent for $35 a month."

"I couldn't figure out what people did to make a living. There were no factories. I came to appreciate the importance of defense contracts."

During his four years in school, he married and fathered two children. He graduated with a bachelor's degree in fine arts from the University of New Mexico. At that time, the emphasis at the university was slanted more toward physics than art, but it turned out to be a benefit, Darrah said.

"The art program turned into more of a master's type approach where you worked at home and came into class for the professor to see your work once or twice a week," he said. "I could respond more to that. I was 25 with two small children at home and no great desire to be part of the campus scene."

"Then I simply started painting and going to arts and crafts fairs," Darrah said. He traveled the circuit from 1975 to 1983, garnering the necessary exposure to establish a reputation.

But Darrah said he didn't like the type of work almost required for participation in such fairs.

"They become very flat and simple, something that will catch somebody's eye as they walk pass," he said.

However, attending one of those shows in 1977 introduced him to the Sacramento Mountains.

"I had missed the entire range when I drove to New Mexico," he said. "I thought everything was desert south of Santa Fe. I brought sneakers and shorts and froze for three days."

But he was convinced this was the area where he wanted to live. He sold his property in northern New Mexico and found a place in the Cloudcroft/High Rolls area.

"I was happy to get out of the city," he said. "The fortunate thing about art is that you can always starve to death wherever you are."

Creating a career

While operating an upstairs gallery/studio in Cloudcroft called the Red Oak Gallery, Darrah became fascinated with the huge black ravens that occupied the trees and scavenged food.

In an interesting coincidence, he later learned that the family crest for Darrah contains red oaks and the crest for Rice (his real last name - friends in art school convinced him that Darrah sounded more like an artist) is one of the few with a raven instead of a more majestic eagle.

"I hit Cloudcroft as oil started to take off so the gallery took off," he said. "There was a Western craze, I didn't really consider."

During that period, Darrah would visit a ranch and shoot hundreds of photographs to use for ideas later.

"It was true illustration and very successful," he said. "I was myself a Western artist or a representational artist, but it was fun to do."

"I did landscapes and commissions of ranches, including (marble sculptor and sign carver) the ranch of Candy Garrett's mother," happy for years. It was a blow when (Garrett's mother) finally said all the walls were filled and it was crowded behind the couch, too.

"I did a couple for their friends and one for the Block Ranch north of Captain. It turned out to be part of my repertoire. What's different is that although what I create still is a western painting, it is of someone's particular ranch or their cows or their horses with portraits of the people too."

Shortly after finishing several ranch assignments, Darrah moved into a more whimsical phase, something he still occasionally tries. He arrived there almost by accident.

He started with a 3x4-foot painting of a cattle roundup. The potential buyer rejected it and as a lark, Darrah added rockers to the bottom of the main horse's feet. He advertised it nationally in 1989.

"People really responded," he said. "I did it for fun. I looked at the painting and the horse really reminded me of a rocking horse. It was eerie, because several women and ranchers came and liked it. They said it reminded them of their son daydreaming in the back yard about being a cowboy. I called it "Daydreaming," and did prints. It was the only painting I have ever done that was named by accolade."

"Everyone asked what else I was going to do in this direction."

The next piece in 1990 featured a cowboy riding a carousel horse in the middle of a herd of cattle.

In the third piece, a bull rider is flanked by an audience with everyone dressed as a clown. It was sold to a collector in Boca Raton, Florida.

"But they (whimsical pieces) tend to type you," he said. "Just like when I was starting out and painted a series of about 50 pieces with an old rusty bucket. Then I heard someone referred to me as the artist who paints rusty buckets. I never did one again."

Darrah operated the Cloudcroft Gallery for 12 years.

One of the works he enjoyed the most was a painting of a cowboy dressed in yellow slicker picking up pumpkins in a driving rain.

"I really saw that (in the High Rolls area), but most people think I made it up," he said.

Currently, he is working on a female figure series started in Lincoln, in which he used a live model. Some of the pieces are allegorical, one involving an intriguing use of a quilt and the model's reflection in a mirror.

"I like to paint from life. It gives you a feeling of the paint medium," Darrah said. "If you work primarily from photographs, you need to go back to life again or the paint gets so thin, you're just making photographs."

"I had to stop (the series in Lincoln) about three months ago to finish the soldiers (for the National Guard assignment)," he said.

Darrah closed the Cloudcroft Gallery in 1990, because he felt his painting was suffering and the situation with a gallery and studio combined was a deterrent to the quality of his work. He moved back to Albuquerque, but it was a disaster, he said. The roof of the house he rented leaked and ruined his supplies. He fell down the stairs and bruised five ribs.

"I moved back where it was safer (Cloudcroft)," he said. That lasted 1 1/2 years.

"I felt alone as an artist in Cloudcroft," he said. "I wanted to see what the rest of the artists were doing. In Lincoln, you occasionally can meet Ted Robertson, Michael Hurd, even Henrietta Wyeth. I found it very inspiring. I saw other people doing other things. I began doing bigger and more competitive things."

His relationship with the National Guard representatives has been encouraging and he plans on sending in proposals for other work, including possibly converting one of his sketches into a sculpture.

Locally, Darrah's art can be viewed at the Canyon Art Gallery in Carizzo Lodge, which shows a cross-section of his work, and at Dickinson's Gallery in Lincoln.

Village needs proven leader to serve as its next mayor

Talk around town last week was of bringing in somebody from somewhere to take the helm as Ruidoso's mayor. The key word seemed to be "businessman," but the search was ranging far afield of the current council.

It would be a disservice to the village to reach outside the council for someone to take over as mayor. Yes, we need some new thinking and some new blood, but taking on the office of mayor with no experience as a councilor would be a big mistake.

This village needs a strong leader — one who is well-versed in the current issues and the process of government.

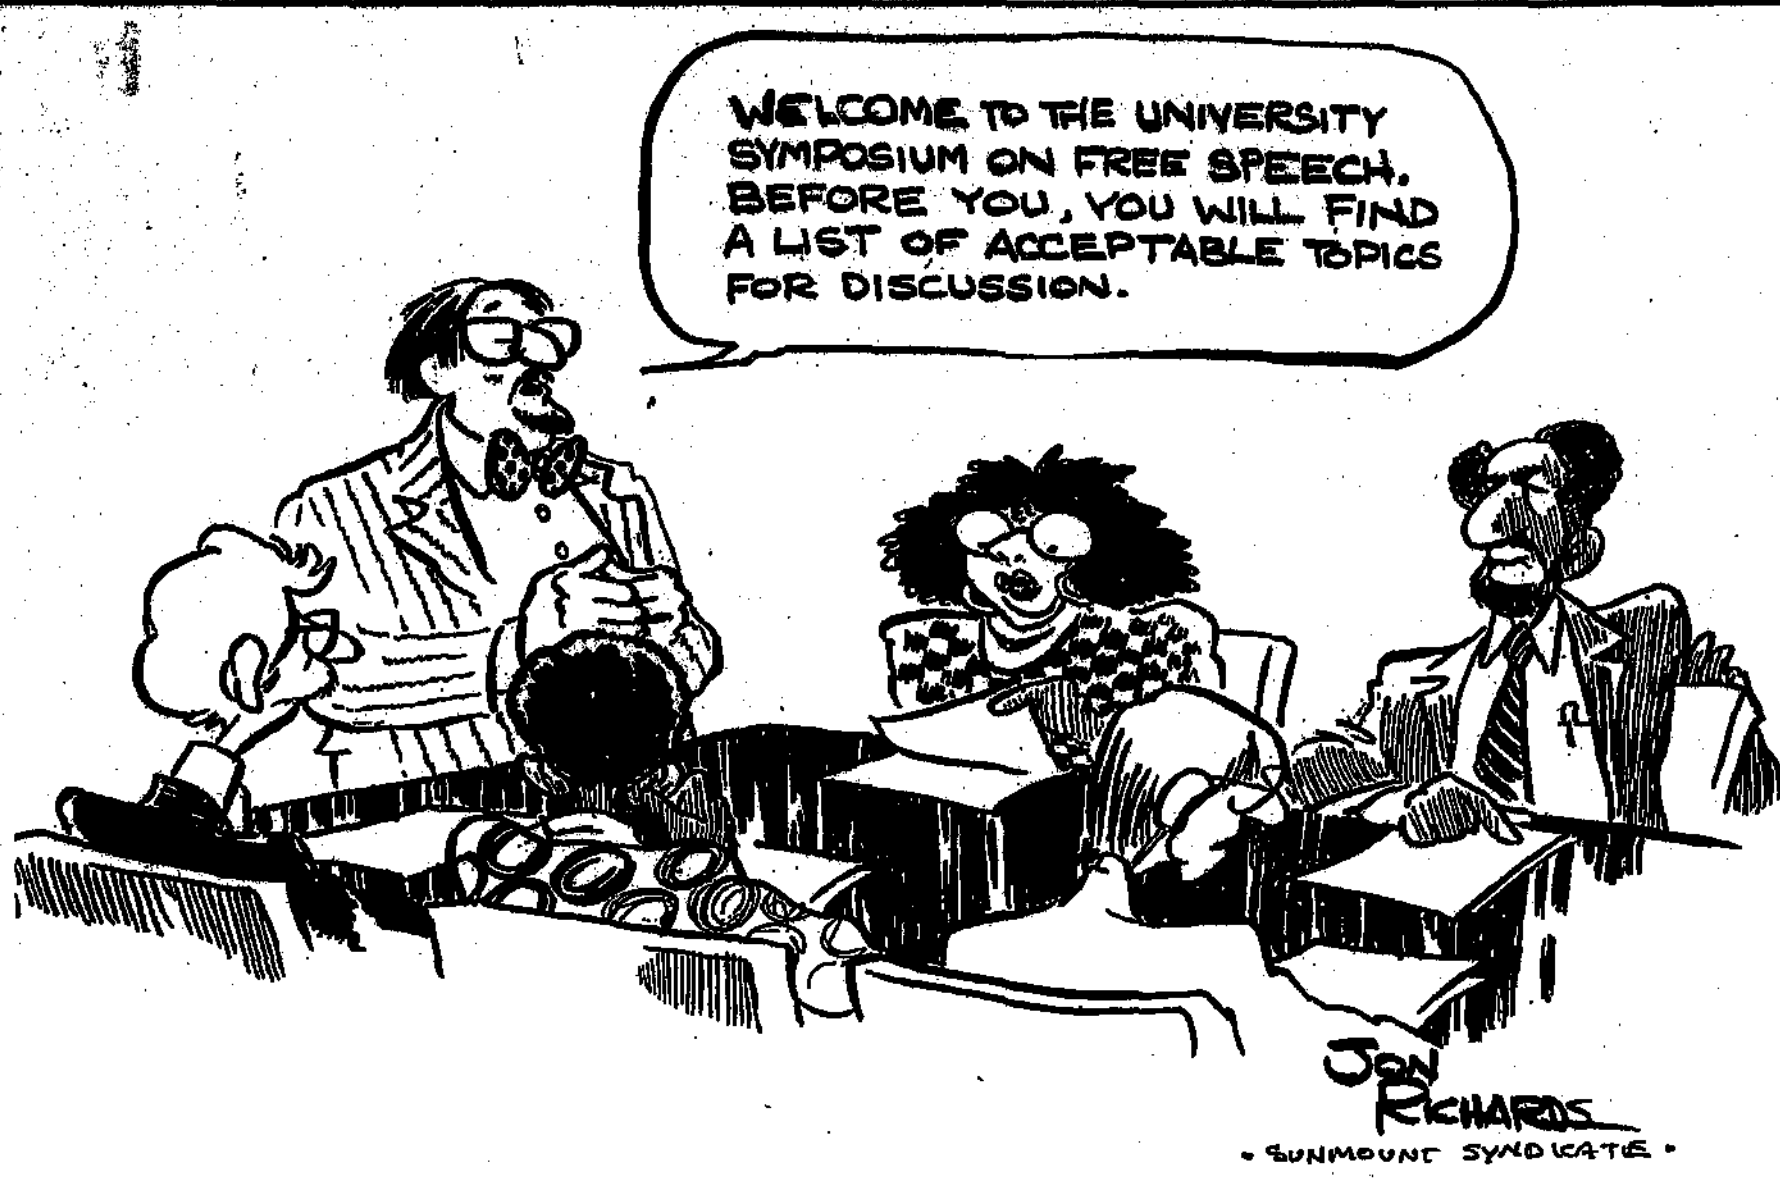

Only three people would be capable of stepping in and serving as mayor — mayor pro tem Barbara Duff, Councilor Jerry Shaw or Councilor J.D. James. Each of those three have served this village and know the ins and outs of the current issues in municipal government. Councilor Bill Karn has been gone far too much to take on a leadership role, and Councilor Frank Cummins is serving his first elected term and simply needs more seasoning.

Mayor pro tem Duff would be much more effective working as a councilor with a strong leader, and we hope she'll get the chance to do that. And that leaves councilors James and Shaw. Both Shaw and James have been elected by the people, and both have taken strong stands on behalf of the village and its people. For the council to anoint a mayor who wasn't even elected to the village board would be a slap in the face to the voters.

On the other hand, it could be the mayor's and council's job to pick two councilors to fill out the board, and it's likely that these two will not have a history of standing for election. That means they will not have undergone the scrutiny and review that is so important to the political process. For that reason, it's important that the council look to people who have paid their dues by serving on village boards and commissions and in various community service roles. A good place to look would be on the Planning and Zoning Commission, where members meet regularly and observe parliamentary procedures to act on requests presented to them by members of the public.

Village boards are good training grounds, and it's in such service that prospective councilors will have shown what kind of public servants they will be.

Just picking a mayor out of a hat would be the worst mistake this village could make. Let's put a proven leader to work and encourage the mayor and council to fill out the board with people who know the ropes and have proven their mettle by serving this community as volunteers.

State needs new laws, not more politics

TO THE EDITOR:

I wholeheartedly agree with the findings of the Grand Jury in its investigation of Representative John Underwood, but strongly disagree with its indictment of Chief Will Hoggard.

It sure appears that Chief Hoggard became a "political bone" thrown to appease the Attorney General. Hopefully, Gary Mitchell can expose this for what it really is — an attempt to politically embarrass John Underwood and, failing that, finding a scapegoat to justify the investigation. The "ethics" issue is really quite simple:

(1) It is not "unethical" for a lawyer to use every loophole in the law to get his client off the hook. That's what he gets paid for.

(2) It is not "unethical" for a state representative to be a lawyer. Most are.

(3) It is not "unethical" for a lawyer to ask a police officer to show his client a little compassion, if possible. It's done all the time.

(4) Police officers and lawyers try to cooperate with each other when they can. To do so is in the public's best interests for any number of reasons.

Let's examine instead, the real problem here — terrible law. We have a court system supposedly empowered with the authority to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused and to mete out any punishment deemed proper. We also have a State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) that is autocratic over its authority to issue and revoke drivers' licenses.

Under our present laws, if a judge finds a defendant guilty of DWI, he can take the person's liberty, money and sometimes his property away from him; but he cannot take away his driver's license. Only the license issuing agency, the Department of Motor Vehicles, can do that and then only after a separate "hearing" in front of one of its own officers — making the DMV a "court" unto itself and doubling or tripling the cost to the taxpayers.

Why bother with one or the other? It seems one judge should be sufficient to handle both functions.

Representative Underwood, you are now uniquely qualified to introduce legislation to prevent another Senator or Representative from inadvertently falling into the same situation you have just undergone and at the same time, make some real impact on the DWI problem here in New Mexico.

First the DWI laws need to have mandatory sentencing provisions that cannot be reduced or mitigated by some of our lenient judges to include the loss of driving privilege for at least a token amount of time.

Secondly, the law should empower the adjudicating court, rather than the arresting officer or a DMV official, to suspend or revoke the offender's driver's license and privileges.

Thirdly, a conviction for driving while one's driver's license is suspended or revoked because of a DWI conviction should be considered ed and handled as a second or a subsequent DWI offense — and that should be a felony. In short, let's empower the courts to use all resources to get the drunks off our streets and eliminate wasteful duplication of effort and cost.

And John, while you're up there in Santa Fe, please try to convert that six-cents per gallon unneeded state gasoline tax into a "pay at the pump motor vehicle insurance" plan such as introduced in California last year.

All of us residents here in a tourist-oriented state would benefit under such a plan and just maybe, the next time my car gets run into, the other vehicle will be insured instead of one of the 45 percent non-insured ones. What a change! With that and a state lottery with proceeds dedicated to health coverage, New Mexico could attract more businesses and residents than it wants to.

I'll be glad to volunteer to help research or draft such legislation if you want.

In defense of the Downs

TO THE EDITOR:

In reference to Chuck Stallings' column of June 24, I resent his statement about us "poor people in the Downs."

After all, the "Downs" does have the Race Track and the Museum of the Horse, thanks to R. D. Hubbard, along with several businesses that Ruidoso does not have!

Most important, there are many fine folks in "The Downs," rich, not only in Dollars, but most important, rich in integrity and manners!

Lynn Cleckler
Ruidoso Downs

EDITOR'S NOTE: The reason the words, "poor people in the Downs" were set off in quotation marks is because that phrase came, not from anyone here at The Ruidoso News, but from some of the people who were pushing for a mass transit system. Not only does the Downs have all the things you mentioned, but it also has a terrific mayor, governing body, chief of police and village staff. The leaders in Ruidoso Downs could teach the Ruidoso Village Council more than a thing or two about open government!

Do we need gun control?

TO THE EDITOR:

I see the village council shot themselves in the foot once again by turning away the only person interested and with the capital to invest in a 150-room hotel/convention center that Ruidoso needs so badly if there is to be any growth in the future.

This proves once again that the council-managing a multi-million dollar facility such as Ruidoso should hire someone with big business management experience as Chief Executive Officer.

Apologize to Hubbard and hire him as CEO. Some of the council people qualify for the U.S. Senate by the decisions they make.

Nogal Mesa Ranchmen's Camp Meeting is scheduled for July 14 through July 18

The 54th Nogal Mesa Ranchmen's Camp Meeting will begin with the evening meal and services Wednesday, July 14, and last through Sunday, July 18.

"In the troubled times today, many are looking back at the old traditions established by our forefathers. Our western pioneers traveled with friends across America with severe physical hardships. But their spirits were uplifted by the simple Christian words of the Bible each evening as they camped on the trail," reads a news release provided by Dorothy Guck.

"That same spiritual strength is imparted each year at the camp meeting," added Guck.

"The beauty of God's land on the Mesa, the clasp of hands and voices raised in song along with the words of the preachers helps us revive our faith and joy in this free land."

This is a unique event in Lincoln County, free of charge, inter-denominational, welcome to all who wish to attend for a four-day campout or for one day.

The camp is supported by free-will donations, not by charges or collection plates.

"All who visit and partake of the meals and camaraderie are requested to attend the tabernacle services."

Preachers for 1993 will be David Burk of San Angelo, Texas, and Bob Appleby, evangelist. Music minister will be Paul Biggs and youth leaders, Charles Hall and Greg Horst.

General Nogal director is LaMoyné Peters, HC 71, Box 1060, Capitan, NM 88316, telephone 354-2302.

Daily services in the tabernacle will be at 11 a.m., 3 and 8 p.m. Meals are served from 6 to 8 a.m. and at 12:30 and 6:30 p.m. Group prayer meetings are at 5 p.m.

The altitude at the campgrounds is 7,000 feet. Bring your own camping equipment: Water, rest rooms and electricity at the buildings are furnished. Jackets and warm bedding is a necessity for comfort as night are cool and days can be rainy. Children must be sponsored by adults. The registration booth will give directions to camping space, list schedules, simple rules and information.

A memorial service for those who passed away during the year will be Saturday afternoon under the direction of Chloé Peters and Glenda Armstrong. A business meeting will be Sunday afternoon.

Direction signs are posted on U.S. 380 west of Capitan and east of Carrizozo and on State Road 37.

All form of volunteer participation is welcome. Games and recreation activities are provided for all ages, even a playpen for toddlers, supervised during services.

The grounds and buildings were given their first cleaning, disinfecting and general annual renovation June 19. The final work day will be Saturday, July 10. Come with a basket lunch.

Retired business manager turns to teaching

by MOLLY WEBER
Special to The News

"Hi, Mr. T," children at local schools shout, "are you going to be our teacher today?" they inquire.

"I am," replies the genial Ralph Tiscareno as he settles in to substitute for their teacher.

Eight years ago they would have addressed him as Assistant Superintendent or Director of Transportation or Business Manager. For 24 years Tiscareno was all of the above when he served the county school district of Socorro located east of El Paso, Texas.

At the time he began his service, it was the smallest district in Texas. When he left, it was the fastest-growing and continues to serve migrant families.

"We started with a $300,000 budget; and when I left in 1985, the budget was $5 million," Tiscareno says. At that time his title was Director of Finance and Business Manager.

He and his wife, Olga, celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary this past year. Both grew up and were educated in El Paso.

After serving in World War II, Ralph graduated from Texas College of Mines, also known as Texas Western University of El Paso, and what is known today as the University of Texas, El Paso (UTEP). His major was business administration. He later acquired a masters in education and an administrative certificate.

"Olga learned as much as I did, even though I got the certificates," Ralph adds. Olga is currently employed by the Cabbage Rose Gift Shop as a bookkeeper.

"She likes working with numbers; but me, I don't do figures any more," he says. "And I don't do clubs either. I sat through enough in-service training to last all my life. The only club I am a member of is the Fishing Club. I'm President, Treasurer and Program Chairman, and sometimes I call a meeting to go fishing. When this happens, I'm out of here!"

Olga is different. Several years ago she joined the Garden Club; eight months later she was president and currently is district treasurer. She also is vice president elect of the club. Add to that her commitment to the St. Eleanor's Guild, an organization that "does anything that is needed at the church," and it's clear why Ralph calls her a joiner.

Before he left the Socorro school, which was growing in conjunction with the El Paso growth, he was instrumental in getting the district a high school.

"After the eighth grade, the kids were sent to Clint or Isleta, and the Socorro district had to pay about $35,000 tuition for these kids. Since most were from migrant families they would stay in school maybe a year, due in part to having to travel out of their district. With that $35K, I knew we could float a bond issue of a million; and we did," Tiscareno says.

Socorro High School was born. Also, he was involved with Project Bravo, a community action program. Not only did he have the know-how with figure, but he had a way with the kids, too.

"There was one bus route that no driver wanted to drive because the kids were so bad. I told them to let me drive. I would get them to school on time," Ralph says. He did.

"If the big kids acted up, I told them to stay on the bus after I arrived at school. Then we had permission to swat them, and those paddles had holes in them. I would tell them to bend over and get their swat. We didn't have any trouble after that."

Obviously, Tiscareno was a busy man. That's how he and Olga discovered Ruidoso.

"We bought up by Monjeau. There were no ringing telephones, no TV, just peace and quiet," Olga says. "There were wild turkey, bear and deer; and that little log cabin became our weekend hide-a-way from all of the big city life pressures," she continues.

But all of this was to change.

In 1984, Tiscareno suffered a mild heart attack, and by 1986 he had suffered 10. Fortunately, none had damaged his heart or complicated his diabetes. The last attack occurred while the Tiscarenos were at the cabin.

"The hospital here stabilized me, and Olga took me back to my doctor in El Paso. It was time for angioplasty, and it made a new man out of me," Ralph says.

He knew it was time to retire, and he eased into it by becoming the school's financial adviser. They had to sell the cabin, too, because the altitude was too high at 9,000 feet; and he wanted the angioplasty to work.

They bought a mobile and put it on some land that they owned in Ruidoso, thinking they would travel when Ralph's contract was up.

"But we loved it here so much that we haven't traveled all that much; and that mobile was too little when our three daughters came with their families to visit. So we bought this place by the golf course, and we love it," Olga says.

Although there is nothing they would change about Ruidoso, and both believe it is the best retirement community in the world, they admit they would hate to see the main streets become four- or five-lane highways.

"We're like so many others who have chosen here to retire; we like the peace and quiet. We would hate to see that spoiled. The Civic Events Center provides cultural type things and good entertainment, but a highway..."

When the Tiscarenos aren't serving the community, they are encouraging their friends to move here. Their latest recruit is a California retiree who bought in Alto.

Museum masters visit Meigs

Pennington is Lion of the Year

Ruidoso Valley Noon Lion's have named Ed Pennington Lion of the Year.

According to information provided by the club, the selection committee arrived at three commendable choices, and the final vote of the membership was a photo finish.

"The other two finalists, Bill Allen and Al Guzelka, have every reason to be proud to have been at the wire; and their club accomplishments are fully acknowledged," reported a club spokesman.

"Lion Ed Pennington has always been a ready volunteer and a responsive and energetic committee man. His friendly and agreeable nature helps make the less interesting tasks more acceptable."

Olga and Ralph Tiscareno are enjoying retirement in the Village of Ruidoso. Olga stays busy in the Garden Club and Ralph is working as a substitute in the Ruidoso Municipal Schools.
